PROPERTY OF THE Public Library of the City of Boston

Shelf No.
3W20.a.53
Vol. 8
Pt. 1-2

BOSTONIA
CONDITA A.D.
1630.

From the Bates Fund.

Added

Boston Public Library

pencil. Penalties for so doing are imposed by the Revised Laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

This book was issued to the borrower on the date last stamped below.

FORM NO. 609; 12,3,37: 500M.

Holy Bible

THE

NEW TESTAMENT

OF OUR LORD AND SAVIOUR

JESUS CHRIST,

In the Original Greek:

WITH

INTRODUCTIONS AND NOTES,

BY

CHR. WORDSWORTH, D.D.

CANON OF WESTMINSTER;

AND VICAR OF STANFORD IN THE VALE, BERKS.

PUBLIC LIBRARY OF THE CITY OF BOSTON

3420a.53

2.8 pt 1-2

VOL. II.

ST. PAUL'S EPISTLES; THE GENERAL EPISTLES; THE BOOK OF REVELATION; AND INDEXES.

NEW EDITION.

8711

LONDON;
RIVINGTONS, WATERLOO PLACE: AND HIGH STREET, OXFORD.
1864.

C

Bts.
81,498
July 26. 1867

PHILLIPS LIBRARY OF THE CITY OF BOSTON

THE

NEW TESTAMENT

OF OUR LORD AND SAVIOUR

JESUS CHRIST,

In the Original Greek:

WITH

INTRODUCTIONS AND NOTES,

BY

CHR. WORDSWORTH, D.D.
ARCHDEACON OF WESTMINSTER.

ST. PAUL'S EPISTLES.

FOURTH EDITION.

London,
RIVINGTONS, WATERLOO PLACE;
HIGH STREET, Oxford. | TRINITY STREET, Cambridge.
1866.

PUBLIC LIBRARY
OF THE
CITY OF BOSTON

LONDON:
GILBERT AND RIVINGTON, PRINTERS, ST. JOHN'S SQUARE.

81498

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
ORDER of the EPISTLES of ST. PAUL, as arranged in this Edition	iv
COMPARATIVE TABLE of Order of the Epistles in this Edition and in other Editions	ib.
PREFACE	v
CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE of the Life and Epistles of St. Paul	xv
ANCIENT UNCIAL GREEK MANUSCRIPTS of St. Paul's Epistles	xix
Introduction to St. Paul's First Epistle to the Thessalonians	1
FIRST EPISTLE to the THESSALONIANS	6
Introduction to the Second Epistle to the Thessalonians	25
SECOND EPISTLE to the THESSALONIANS	27
Introduction to the Epistle to the Galatians	36
EPISTLE to the GALATIANS	43
Introduction to the Two Epistles to the Corinthians	73
FIRST EPISTLE to the CORINTHIANS	79
Introduction to the Second Epistle to the Corinthians	145
SECOND EPISTLE to the CORINTHIANS	147
Introduction to the Epistle to the Romans	185
EPISTLE to the ROMANS	207
Introduction to the Epistle to the Ephesians	274
EPISTLE to the EPHESIANS	284
Introduction to the Epistle to the Colossians	309
EPISTLE to the COLOSSIANS	316
Introduction to the Epistle to Philemon	333
EPISTLE to PHILEMON	337
Introduction to the Epistle to the Philippians	340
EPISTLE to the PHILIPPIANS	343
Introduction to the Epistle to the Hebrews	361
EPISTLE to the HEBREWS	379
Introduction to the Two Epistles to Timothy, and to the Epistle to Titus	427
FIRST EPISTLE to TIMOTHY	436
EPISTLE to TITUS	461
SECOND EPISTLE to TIMOTHY	470

ORDER OF THE EPISTLES OF ST. PAUL AS ARRANGED IN THIS EDITION[1].

1 Thessalonians.
2 Thessalonians.
Galatians.
1 Corinthians.
2 Corinthians.
Romans.
Ephesians.
Colossians.
Philemon.
Philippians.
Hebrews.
1 Timothy.
Titus.
2 Timothy.

COMPARATIVE TABLE
OF THE
ORDER OF THE EPISTLES OF ST. PAUL IN THIS EDITION AND IN OTHER EDITIONS.

Order in this Edition.	PAGE	Common Order.	PAGE
1 Thessalonians	6	Romans	207
2 Thessalonians	27	1 Corinthians	79
Galatians	43	2 Corinthians	147
1 Corinthians	79	Galatians	43
2 Corinthians	147	Ephesians	284
Romans	207	Philippians	343
Ephesians	284	Colossians	316
Colossians	316	1 Thessalonians	6
Philemon	337	2 Thessalonians	27
Philippians	343	1 Timothy	436
Hebrews	379	2 Timothy	470
1 Timothy	436	Titus	461
Titus	461	Philemon	337
2 Timothy	470	Hebrews	379

[1] The Text of these Epistles, arranged in chronological order, and printed in the same large type and size as the present Volume, may be had separately.

PREFACE.

Some explanation may be required of the reasons which have led to the adoption of the order in which the Epistles of St. Paul are arranged in the present Edition.

That order is designed to be chronological; in other words, the Epistles are placed according to the time in which they appear to have been written.

Let it be premised, however, that this arrangement does not imply any disparagement of the order in which they are usually disposed in other editions of the Original, and in the English Authorized Version of the Holy Bible.

That order has its appropriate uses. It has been received for many centuries in our own and other countries. The Calendar of our Liturgy is conformed to it. It could not therefore be disturbed without much consequent embarrassment.

But the question may properly be entertained,—whether, in addition to that common order, another arrangement may not also be provided for private use?

The order commonly received, it is well known, is not chronological.

The Epistle to the Romans, which there stands first, was written after the Epistles to the Galatians and to the Corinthians; and it is generally acknowledged, that the two Epistles to the Thessalonians, which are placed in the common order among the last, were the first Epistles written by St. Paul.

Various opinions have been given concerning the reasons which produced the common arrangement.

Some ancient writers supposed, that it was caused by considerations of the comparative proficiency of those persons to whom the Epistles were addressed[1]. Others conjectured that it arose from regard to the importance of the Cities to which the Epistles were respectively sent, or to the length and copiousness of the Epistles themselves[2].

The last opinion seems to be most probable[3].

The order commonly received is not, however, precisely that in which the Epistles are found in the most ancient Manuscripts. In very early copies of collections of St. Paul's Epistles, the Epistle to the Hebrews was placed between the Epistles to the

[1] So Primasius, Præfat. in Epistolas Pauli (p. 416 of vol. 68 of Migne's Patrologia), "Movet quosdam, quare Romanorum Epistola in primo sit posita, cùm eam posteà scriptam ratio manifestet. Unde intelligendum est, ita omnes Epistolas ordinatas, ut prima poneretur, quæ ad inferiores (qu. infirmiores?) fuerat destinata, et per singulas Epistolas gradatim ad perfectiores veniretur."

[2] See Theodoret, Præfat. in Epist. S. Paul., p. 8, vol. iii. ed. Hal. 1771.

[3] And has been adopted by Dr. Mill, Prolog. N. T. num. 287; and by Dr. Lardner, History, vol. iii. p. 457, ed. Lond. 1815.

Galatians and the Ephesians[1]. And in most ancient Manuscripts now extant[2], the Epistle to the Hebrews is placed before the Epistles to Timothy and Titus[3], and not after them, as in the majority of modern Editions.

It is also worthy of remark, that in some of the earliest Manuscripts which have been preserved to us, the Epistles of St. Paul are placed after[4] the General Epistles of St. James, St. Peter, St. John, and St. Jude, and not before them, as in the common order.

In addition to such considerations as these, the following reflections presented themselves to the Editor of this volume.

The present Edition of the Greek Testament is designed mainly for the use of younger students of Theology.

What therefore is the order, in which the Epistles of St. Paul may be read most profitably by them?

There seemed to be only one answer to this inquiry,—The order of time.

In confirmation of this opinion, the following reasons may be adduced;

It has pleased Almighty God to bestow upon His Church an Apostolic History, as well as Apostolic Epistles. The Apostolic History, written by St. Paul's faithful companion the Evangelist St. Luke, illustrates the Apostolic Epistles, and is illustrated by them.

But the benefit of this mutual illustration is much impaired, if the Apostolic Epistles are not studied in connexion with, and in the order of, the Apostolic History.

On the other hand, if the Epistles of St. Paul are read according to the sequence of time, the student has at hand an inspired running comment upon them, in the Acts of the Apostles.

Again; if the theological student does not read St. Paul's Epistles in chronological order, but approaches them in that order in which they are commonly presented to his view, he will commence his task with the most difficult of all the Epistles of St. Paul,—the Epistle to the Romans.

He will enter upon his arduous undertaking without due previous preparation, and will find himself perplexed, and perhaps discouraged; and he may even be betrayed into distressing doubts, or dangerous errors, from which he would have been preserved, if he had come to the study of that Epistle in the natural order of time, when he would have been familiarized with the thoughts, the diction, and the teaching of the great Apostle; and would thus have been prepared and qualified for the study of the Epistle to the Romans by the previous discipline and training, which would have been afforded him by a careful perusal of those other Epistles which were written by St. Paul before the date of that Epistle.

Another reflection suggests itself here. All who believe the Gospel, regard the Apostle St. Paul with religious reverence, as a chosen vessel of God to bear His Name before the Gentiles[5], and acknowledge him to have been a wise master-builder of the [1] See Cardinal Mai's note in his edition of the Codex Vaticanus, vol. v. p. 429, Rom. 1858.

[2] In the Alexandrine MS., the Codex Sinaiticus (ℵ), the Vatican MS., the Codex Ephrem, and the Coislinian MS.

[3] As it is in Lachmann's Edition, Berolini, 1850.

[4] As they are in the editions of Lachmann, Berolini, 1850, and Tischendorf, Lipsiæ, 1859.

[5] Acts ix. 15.

Church[1]; and they are persuaded, that the Epistles written by his instrumentality were given by inspiration of God, and are no other than words which the Holy Ghost teacheth[2]; and that though addressed in the first instance to particular Cities and Churches, they were designed for the perpetual edification of the Universal Church of Christ in every age and place[3]. They also know, that the Divine Being Who inspired the Apostle, is a God of Order, and that He does every thing by counsel, measure, number, and weight[4], especially in the building up of His Church; and they will therefore feel a strong persuasion, that St. Paul's Epistles are not to be viewed as mere disjointed and fugitive essays, thrown out extemporaneously on the spur of the moment; but that they have a mutual connexion and coherence, and that they were designed by the Holy Spirit of God to bear a reciprocal relation to one another, and to lend mutual help and support to each other, like joints and members of a well-organized body; and to instruct the World in the religion of Jesus Christ, by a well-ordered system of doctrine and discipline; and that therefore, if the Epistles of St. Paul were arranged in chronological order, they would be found to form a consistent and harmonious whole.

This anticipation is fully realized by the result.

Let the reader commence the study of the writings of the divine Apostle with that Epistle which was first produced, the First Epistle to the Thessalonians; and let him pursue that study in regular order of time, with the Acts of the Apostles at his side, till he reaches the limits of that Apostolic History, and till he arrives in due time at the conclusion and consummation of all the Epistles, in the Second Epistle to Timothy; and he will thankfully acknowledge, that such an order of study is the most agreeable to reason, most gratifying to the intellect, most productive of spiritual benefit to his own soul, and will be most salutary to the souls of others also, whom he may be called upon to teach, if he is ordained to the Pastoral Office. He will recognize the blessed truth, that in reading St. Paul's Epistles, he has not only been following the Apostle in his travels, and labours, and sufferings for Christ, but that he has also been learning a lesson of Christian edification; that he has been there trained in the best method of building up himself and others, by God's grace, in the Christian Faith; and that he has been admitted to behold the great Apostolic Architect in his spiritual workshop, and has seen him, as it were, with rule and compass in hand, drawing the plan of his Apostolic work, and then laying its foundations deep and strong, and placing the first stone of the sacred edifice, and gradually rearing the fabric, which rises silently and securely, without noise of axe or hammer, like the Temple of Solomon[5], till it stands in stately grandeur before the delighted eye, a glorious building, complete in all its parts and proportions, and perfectly compacted, harmonized, and adorned, in solidity, symmetry, and beauty.

The proofs of this statement will be submitted to the reader's consideration in the Introductions prefixed to the several Epistles.

In the mean time it may be observed, that St. Paul, in his earliest Epistles, particularly those to the Thessalonians, begins with laying down those sacred elementary

[1] 1 Cor. iii. 10.

[2] 1 Cor. ii. 13. Cp. St. Peter's testimony, 2 Pet. iii. 15, 16.

[3] As is excellently expressed by Tertullian (c. Marcion. v. 17), "Ad omnes Apostolus scribit, dum ad quosdam."

[4] Wisd. xi. 20.

[5] 1 Kings vi. 7.

truths, which are enumerated in the Epistle to the Hebrews as among the first principles of the doctrine of Christ[1],—namely, the doctrine of Repentance, and of Faith, and of the Resurrection of the Dead, and of Eternal Judgment[2]; that in the next Epistle, that to the Galatians, he vindicates his own Apostolic Commission; and in that Epistle, and in the Epistle to the Romans, he proclaims the Universality of the Redemption provided by God in Christ for all of every nation under heaven who accept the Gospel by Faith, as the only means of Justification, and as distinguished from the Ceremonial and Moral Law, which was preparatory to the Gospel[3]. He thus fortifies the citadel of Christian doctrine with strong buttresses and bulwarks against the assaults of false Teachers, who undermined its foundations.

In the two Epistles to the Corinthians[4] he provides for its internal safety, by cementing it strongly with Christian Charity, and makes it to be like a City at unity with itself[5].

It was not till he had trained the Church by this preparatory discipline, that the holy Apostle ventured to speak fully of the great mystery of Godliness, the Incarnation of the Son of God, and of the means by which its blessings are dispensed to all the faithful members of the Mystical Body of Christ; and to dilate on the practical duties which result from the doctrine of the Incarnation, and of their incorporation in Him.

He has accomplished this blessed work in the two Epistles to the Ephesians and Colossians; in the former of which[6] he displays the doctrine of the Incarnation in its divine splendour; in the other he defends it from those who would mar and obscure it.

The Epistle to Philemon, written at the same time, is a practical application of the same doctrine of the Incarnation to the solution of a great social question, that of Slavery[7].

The Epistle to the Philippians completes St. Paul's labour of love to the Gentile Churches[8].

In the Epistle to the Hebrews he performs a similar office to his own kindred[9]. Both of these Epistles are built as a superstructure on the doctrine of the Divinity of Christ, and of His Incarnation.

The Epistles to Timothy and Titus naturally fall into the last place. When he wrote those Epistles, the Apostle was like the great Lawgiver of the Hebrew nation when about to leave the world. St. Paul would therefore provide for the government of the Church after his decease in all future ages. Moses appointed a Joshua, one person only, because the people was one, and was destined to dwell in one country, and gave him a solemn charge[10]. St. Paul appoints several persons, such as a Timothy at Ephesus, and a Titus at Crete, and others in other great Cities of the world, to be his successors, and to execute Apostolic functions in various places, because the Church of Christ is universal. And in writing to two of that Apostolic family, Timothy and Titus,

[1] Heb. vi. 1, 2.
[2] See below, Introduction to the Epistle to the Thessalonians, p. 4.
[3] See Introduction to the Epistle to the Galatians, p. 41, and to the Romans, pp. 189—201.
[4] See Introduction to those Epistles, pp. 73—76.
[5] Ps. cxxii. 3.
[6] See below, Introductions, pp. 275—278. 309—312.
[7] See the Introduction to that Epistle, pp. 333—336.
[8] See below, pp. 340—342. [9] See below, pp. 369—374. [10] Deut. xxxi. 14. 23.

he has bequeathed a spiritual legacy to all Christian Bishops, and has left a pattern of Church-regimen and polity, even to the end of time [1].

Thus, then, in contemplating St. Paul's Epistles arranged in chronological order, we behold an uniform system of Christian Doctrine and Discipline.

The reader, therefore, it may be hoped, will not require an apology for the adoption of that order in the present edition. He will not be unwilling to concede, that if the writings of Heathen Authors, which have any historical value and connexion, have been thus dealt with by recent Editors, and if a chronological arrangement has been adopted by them, in lieu of, or in addition to, the order which existed in former editions, a like principle may be reasonably accepted in an edition of the Epistles of St. Paul [2]. The readers of Æschylus, it may be presumed, have now concurred in the reasons, which induced some recent Editors [3] to place the Supplices first, and the Orestean Trilogy last, in their recensions of his writings. All academical students, who desire to read intelligently the writings of Aristophanes, will thank those Editors [4] who have removed the Plutus from the place which it occupied in the older editions, and have put the Acharnians in its room, and have arranged the other Comedies in their proper historical series. All will acknowledge the wisdom which dictated Bentley's remarks on the importance of studying the writings of Horace in chronological order [5]. And although, from the miscellaneous character of the Roman Poet's compositions, such a chronological arrangement of his works was not easy of adoption, yet all will be disposed to commend the labours of a late learned Canon of St. Paul's, in giving practical effect to Bentley's remarks, and in publishing the works of Horace arranged in order of time [6].

[1] See below, Introduction to the Epistles to Timothy and Titus, p. 432, and cp. pp. 444, 445.

[2] A principle already adopted in the valuable volumes of Conybeare and Howson, "The Life and Epistles of St. Paul," 2nd ed. Lond. 1856, 2 vols.

[3] e. g. Hermann, in his edition of Æschylus, 1852; and before him, Professor Scholefield, Cambridge, 1828.

[4] e. g. William Dindorf, London, 1825; Immanuel Bekker, Lond. 1829.

[5] Which deserve to be placed before the student's eye, especially on account of the important moral lesson with which they conclude. "His jam positis, primum Horatii opus statuo Sermonum librum primum, quem triennio perfecit intra annos ætatis xxvi. xxvii. xxviii.; postea Secundum triennio itidem, annis xxxi. xxxii. xxxiii.; deinde Epodos biennio, xxxiv. et xxxv.; tum Carminum librum primum triennio, xxxvi. xxxvii. xxxviii.; Secundum biennio, xl. xli.; Tertiumque pariter biennio, xlii. xliii.; inde Epistolarum primum biennio, xlvi. xlvii.; tum Carminum lib. quartum et Sæculare triennio, xlix. l. li. Postremò Artem Poëticam et Epistolarum librum alterum, annis incertis. Intra hos cancellos omnium poëmatiωn natales esse ponendos, et ex argumentis singulorum et ex Annalium fide constabit. Inde est, quod in Sermonibus, et Epodis, et Carminum primo, Cæsar semper, nunquam Augustus dicitur; quippe qui id nomen consecutus est, anno demum Flacci xxxix.; in sequentibus verò passim Augustus appellatur. Inde est, quod in Sermonibus et Epodis Juvenem se ubique indicat; et quod sola Satirarum laude inclaruisse se dicit, ut Bucolicorum tum Virgilium (Serm. i. 10; v. 46), nulla Lyricorum mentione facta. In cæteris autem singulis procedentis ætatis gradus planissimis signis indicat: idque tibi ex hâc serie jam à me demonstratâ jucundum erit animadvertere, cùm operibus juvenilibus multa obscœna et flagitiosa insint, quantò annis provectior erat, tantò eum et poëticâ virtute et argumentorum dignitate gravitateque meliorem castioremque semper evasisse." Bentleii Præfatio ad Horatium, ed. Amst. 1728.

[6] Horatius Restitutus, ed. Iac. Tate. Cantabr. 1832.

On the benefits to be derived from a chronological arrangement of the Books of Holy Scripture, the reader may consult the Introduction of the Rev. Canon Townsend in his edition of the Old Testament, 4th ed. Lond. 1836.

Perhaps, however, it may here be said, that these considerations would confessedly be of much weight, if the chronology of St. Paul's Epistles could be accurately determined. But it may be alleged by some, that differences of opinion exist with regard to the order of time in which they were written, and that attempts to arrange them in that order are precarious.

If such an objection should be raised, it may not be irrelevant to observe,—

1. That all persons are agreed, that the commonly received order is not chronological.

2. That no doubt can reasonably be entertained as to the dates of the two Epistles to the Thessalonians, the two Epistles to the Corinthians, and the Epistle to the Romans.

3. That it is also certain, that the Epistles to the Ephesians, to the Colossians, to Philemon, and to the Philippians, and the Second to Timothy, were written by St. Paul when he was in prison [1], and that therefore they are subsequent in time to the Epistles to the Thessalonians, Corinthians, and Romans.

4. That it is generally acknowledged, that the Epistles to the Ephesians, Colossians, and Philippians, were written about the same time, and that they were composed during the imprisonment of the Apostle, described by St. Luke at the conclusion of the Acts of the Apostles, and are therefore subsequent in time to the events recorded in the far greater part of that history.

5. These propositions appear to be almost universally admitted [2]; and therefore, even though the precise years of the several Epistles may not be determined, yet their relative order may be ascertained, at least within certain narrow limits. Accordingly, they may be arranged chronologically, although differences of opinion may exist as to the length of the intervals of time which separate them respectively from each other.

6. But further. Important results have been obtained by the recent historical and critical researches into the Life and Writings of St. Paul. One of the most valuable of these results is, that, at least in our own country, a general consent with regard to the order of Time in which the Epistles of St. Paul were written, and also, with slight exceptions, as to the date of each several Epistle, now prevails.

The time therefore seems to have arrived, when an Editor of St. Paul's Epistles, aided by the labours of others [3] who have gone before him in the same field, may,

[1] As is clear from internal evidence, Eph. iii. 1; iv. 1. Col. iv. 3. 10. Philem. 1. 9. Phil. i. 13. 2 Tim. i. 8. Cp. Winer, R. W. B. ii. p. 764.

[2] The following is the language of a writer on this subject who will not be charged with any disposition to dogmatize. Credner (Einleitung in das N. T., Halle, 1836, p. 338), "Concerning the time of the composition of the Epistles to the Thessalonians, Corinthians, and Romans, no doubt can exist, except where an hypercritical spirit of scepticism seduces the inquirer into error. The Epistles to the Ephesians, Colossians, Philemon, and Philippians, and the Second to Timothy, proclaim themselves to have been written from prison. Only the place of the Epistle to Titus, to the Galatians, and the First of Timothy, remains undefined."

[3] Particularly in this country, Abp. Ussher, Bp. Pearson, Dr. Wells, Dr. Lardner, Dr. Paley, Canons Townsend and Tate, Mr. Fynes Clinton, Greswell, Biley, Lewin, J. B. Lightfoot, Dr. Bloomfield, Dr. Peile, Dean Alford, also Conybeare and Howson, F. C. Cook, and Mr. Birks. In the results attained by many of these writers, the Editor concurs in all respects; and the particular points in which there is not a concurrence are comparatively so few, trivial, and insignificant (e. g. whether the Epistle to the Galatians was written before or after the Epistles to the Corinthians), that they only serve to bring out more clearly the points of agreement, and to confirm them by the suffrages of independent judgments.

without being chargeable with rashness and presumptuous confidence in his own conclusions, proceed to endeavour to arrange the Epistles of St. Paul in the order of time; and he will feel confirmed in the soundness of his opinions, by the fact that he finds them in unison with those of many others whose critical judgment is entitled to respect.

The historical and chronological grounds, on which that arrangement rests, will be stated hereafter in the Introductions prefixed in this volume to the several Epistles.

Although the chronological arrangement adopted in this edition may perhaps cause some little embarrassment at first, on account of its variance from the order with which the reader is familiar, yet it will soon be found to commend itself by its clearness and simplicity, as well as by its reasonableness and truth.

The student will easily remember, that the Apostle of the Gentiles, when he first preached in Greece, came into Macedonia, and from Macedonia into Achaia. He will recollect that the capital of Macedonia was Thessalonica, and that the capital of Achaia was Corinth; and that it was St. Paul's custom to begin his missionary operations with great centres of population; and that accordingly, soon after he had arrived in the capital city of Achaia, Corinth, he began his work of writing Epistles, by addressing two Epistles to the Christians in the capital city of Macedonia, where he had recently preached orally, Thessalonica.

He will also bear in mind, that St. Paul had next to encounter enemies who were excited to jealousy by his preaching and by his writing; and that he refuted their objections, and established his own Apostolic authority in his Epistle to the Galatians.

He will also readily remember, that St. Paul passed from Corinth, the capital of Achaia, to Ephesus, the capital of Asia, and addressed an Epistle to the Corinthians from Ephesus; as he had addressed Epistles to the Thessalonians from Corinth.

He will not find it difficult to recollect, that the Second Epistle to the Corinthians has a close connexion, in matter and in time, with the First Epistle to that Church; in the same manner as the Second Epistle to the Thessalonians is a natural sequel to the First Epistle to the same city.

He will not forget, that St. Paul's affecting and solemn appeal in his two Epistles to Corinth was followed up, as it was intended to be, by a personal visit to that city; and that the Apostle of the Gentiles, having written Epistles to Thessalonica and Corinth, the great capital Cities of the two Roman Provinces of Macedonia and Achaia, next looked further westward, and wrote an Epistle to the Capital of the world, which he had long desired to visit and to evangelize, Rome.

Among foreign writers, the authority of the following eminent critics may be cited as harmonizing almost entirely with the opinions formed by the Editor of the present volume, concerning the chronological arrangement of St. Paul's Epistles; Tillemont, Basnage, Hottinger, Eichhorn, and De Wette (the last with reservation as to the Pastoral Epistles), Kirchofer, Feilmoser, Schott, Wurm, Neander; and especially Guerike, to whose observations he would refer, as very full and satisfactory. They may be seen in his Einleitung in d. N. T., Leipzig, 1843, pp. 342—409.

Since the publication of the first edition of the present Volume, the writer of this Preface has been favoured with a private communication from the learned American Editor of the Acts of the Apostles, Professor Hackett, with the gratifying intelligence, that the order, in which St. Paul's Epistles are arranged in the present Volume, coincides exactly in all respects with the order in which he himself had been led to place them by his own independent researches.

It will also readily be remembered, that his fervent wish of seeing Rome was soon afterwards accomplished. When he wrote his Epistle to the Romans, he was going with alms and offerings to the poor saints of Jerusalem[1]. He was arrested at Jerusalem; and was brought a prisoner first to Cæsarea and then to Rome.

Here another group of the Epistles rises up before the mind. These are the Epistles in which St. Paul speaks of himself as "a prisoner of Jesus Christ." He wrote these Epistles from Rome to those faithful friends and Churches which he had left behind him in the East: the Epistle to the Christians of the great capital of Asia, the Ephesians; the Epistle to Colossæ in Phrygia; and that short letter, which accompanied it, to his Colossian friend Philemon; and that loving Epistle to the first city in which he had preached in Greece, the Roman Colony of Philippi.

In these Epistles he describes himself as a prisoner, but he expresses an expectation of being liberated[2]. He was released; but only for a short time, for he is now Paul the aged, and his course is nearly run[3].

As a last labour of love, an Epistle is written by him to his kinsmen according to the flesh—the Hebrews at Jerusalem; and he then prepares for his departure by leaving his farewell instructions to his dear children in the faith, Timothy and Titus, in the Epistles addressed to them.

Thus, while reading the Epistles of St. Paul in chronological order, the Christian student will accompany the great Apostle in his missionary career, from its commencement in Greece to its glorious consummation at Rome. He will trace his progress with ever-growing delight, like that which is felt in following the stream of some noble river from its fountain-head to the sea. He will walk with joy along the side of this holy Apostolic river, this spiritual river of Paradise, fertilizing the soil with living waters, diffusing purity and health, and making the fair flowers and fruitful trees of Christian Graces and Virtues to blossom and ripen on its banks, and bearing on its stream a rich freight of Evangelical merchandise, and flowing onward in a majestic flood, becoming wider as it flows, till at length when its course is run, it is received into the depths of God's Love, in the boundless ocean of Eternity.

The design of the Apostle in writing the several Epistles will be considered in the Introductions prefixed to them respectively; and therefore nothing is added in this place on that subject.

For a revision of a portion of the Text of the Epistles, the Editor has had, in addition to other resources, the benefit of Cardinal Mai's publication of the Vatican Manuscript, and of Tischendorf's seventh edition, which appeared while the present volume was passing through the press; and also of the impression of the Codex Augiensis communicated by its learned and accurate Editor Mr. Scrivener.

With regard to the Notes that accompany the present volume, they are formed, for the most part, on the same plan as those that have already been published, in the former parts of this work, the Gospels, and the Acts of the Apostles. The Editor's endeavour has been to combine what is most valuable in the expositions of ancient Interpreters, and in the rich treasures of English Theology, with what has been contributed by modern Philology[1], and the historical, chronological, and geographical researches of recent times.

[1] Rom. xv. 25, 26. [2] See Philem. 22. Philip. ii. 24. [3] Philem. 9.

With feelings of devout thankfulness he would now offer a tribute of praise to the Great Giver of all Good, Who guided His Apostles into all truth, and speaks in their writings, for that gracious assistance by which the present Work has been brought nearly to a close; and with this ascription of praise he would join a fervent prayer for a continuance of the same aid, in order that he may be enabled to accomplish an undertaking begun in dependence on His blessing; and that it may be mercifully accepted by Him, as an offering to Himself, and may be serviceable for the maintenance of His truth, and the advancement of His glory through JESUS CHRIST our LORD.

[1] In this department he has the agreeable duty of acknowledging his obligations to the critical labours of Bishop Ellicott in his editions of the Epistles to the Thessalonians, Galatians, Ephesians, Colossians, Philemon, Timothy, and Titus. The edition, by Prof. Lightfoot, of the Epistle to the Galatians (1865) is entitled to special notice.

It may be proper to add here, that to indulge in personal animadversions, particularly of a polemical or censorious character, on the labours of other English Editors or Biblical Critics, was altogether foreign to the plan of the Editor of this Volume; for the reasons stated above, Vol. I. p. vi. His desire has not been to criticize the works of men, but to elucidate the Word of God.

PREFATORY NOTE TO THE THIRD EDITION.

A collation of the CODEX SINAITICUS, as published by TISCHENDORF in 1863, has been added to this edition. As a guarantee for the accuracy of this collation, it may suffice to mention, that it has been made by the Rev. F. H. SCRIVENER, M.A., of Trinity College, Cambridge, Rector of Gerrans, Cornwall, Editor of Codex Augiensis, 1859, and Author of a Plain Introduction to the Criticism of the New Testament, Cambridge, 1861.

The order of the Epistles in this collation is that of other editions.

The pages of this collation will be supplied gratuitously to purchasers of former impressions of the present edition of St. Paul's Epistles, on application at the Publishers'.

Cloisters, Westminster, July 1, 1863.

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE

OF THE

LIFE AND EPISTLES OF ST. PAUL.

A. D.

30 The Crucifixion of Christ, at the Passover[1].
His Ascension into heaven.

31, 32 The descent of the Holy Spirit, at the Feast of Pentecost, fifty days after the Passover.
The events described in chapters iii.—vi. of the Acts of the Apostles.

33 St. Stephen's Martyrdom (Acts vii.); Saul was then a young man, νεανίας (vii. 58).
St. Philip's Missionary Journey (Acts viii. 5—40).
St. Peter and St. John at Samaria. Simon Magus (Acts viii. 14—24).

34 Saul's Conversion. Cp. Euseb. H. E. ii. 1; and see note below on 1 Tim. i. 13.
Saul retires to Arabia (Gal. i. 17).

36 Pontius Pilate is recalled from his procuratorship in Judæa (Joseph. Ant. xviii. 4. 2).

37 After many days (Acts ix. 23) Saul escapes from Damascus. Goes up to Jerusalem, where he remains fifteen days, and sees Peter and James (Gal. i. 18, 19. Acts ix. 26, 27), and disputes with the Grecians.
Saul is sent to Tarsus (Acts ix. 30).

— The Emperor Tiberius dies 16th March, and Caligula succeeds.

38—41 "Rest of the Churches" (Acts ix. 31).
St. Peter's Missionary Journey (ix. 32—43).
St. Peter tarries at Joppa many days (ix. 43).
Conversion and Baptism of Cornelius and other Gentiles at Cæsarea (Acts x. 1—48).

41 The Emperor Caligula dies 24th January, and is succeeded by Claudius.
St. Matthew's Gospel probably written about this time. Cp. Introduction to it, pp. xlix—lii, and note on Acts i. 4.

43 Euodius, first Bishop of Antioch (Euseb. Chron. ii. 269. Clinton, Fasti Romani, App. ii. p. 548).
The disciples first called CHRISTIANS at Antioch (Acts xi. 26).

44 The Apostle St. James, the brother of John, is killed with the sword (Acts xii. 2), and St. Peter is imprisoned, by Herod Agrippa, before Easter (Acts xii. 4).
St. Peter is delivered, and Herod is smitten by an Angel, and dies at Cæsarea (Acts xii. 23).

[1] For the grounds on which these dates rest, see above on Matt. ii. 20, and the Chronological Synopsis prefixed to the ACTS of the APOSTLES.

A.D.

44 St. Peter retires from Jerusalem "to another place" (xii. 17).

Saul and Barnabas, having been deputed by the Christians at Antioch (xi. 27—30) to bring supplies to the brethren in Judæa, on account of the anticipation of the famine foretold by Agabus, which "came to pass in the reign of Claudius" (xi. 28), i. e. after January, A.D. 41, return from Jerusalem to Antioch, with John Mark, who was connected with Peter (xii. 12), and with Barnabas (see on xv. 39).

45 The Ordination of Saul and Barnabas, at Antioch, to the Apostleship of the Gentiles (see on Acts xiii. 1). Saul henceforth is called Paul (see on Acts xiii. 9).

St. Paul's "Visions and Revelations of the Lord" seem to have been vouchsafed to him at this time (see on 2 Cor. xii. 2, 3).

Their first Missionary Journey to Cyprus (Paphos) and Pisidia, and Perga in Pamphylia (xiii. 4—13), whence Mark returns to Jerusalem. St. Paul and Barnabas visit Antioch of Pisidia, Iconium, Lystra, return to Perga and Pamphylia, and thence come back again to the place of their Ordination, Antioch, where they remain a considerable time with the disciples (Acts xiv. 26—28).

49 A controversy arises at Antioch concerning the obligation of the Ceremonial Law on the Gentile Converts (Acts xv. 1, 2).

St. Paul and St. Barnabas, and some others, are deputed to go from Antioch to Jerusalem, "to the Apostles and Elders," concerning this question (xv. 2, 3).

50 51 Council of Jerusalem, at which Peter, James, Paul, and Barnabas are present (xv. 6—29).

St. Paul and St. Barnabas return to Antioch, where they remain some time (xv. 35, 36).

St. Peter is rebuked by St. Paul (Gal. ii. 11—13).

The altercation, παροξυσμὸς (Acts xv. 39), and separation of Paul and Barnabas.

St. Paul takes Silas (xv. 40) on his second Missionary Journey, and afterwards associates Timothy also with him at Lystra (xvi. 1).

52—54 St. Paul passes through Phrygia and Galatia to Troas (xvi. 6. 8). Thence crosses over to Macedonia to Philippi (xvi. 12), and Thessalonica (xvii. 1), and Berœa (xvii. 10); thence to Athens (xvii. 15).

St. Luke's Gospel written probably about this time. See Introduction to it, p. 168, and notes below on 1 Thess. v. 2. 27. 2 Cor. viii. 18. Cp. Clem. Alex. in Euseb. vi. 14.

St. Paul comes into Corinth, where he spends a year and six months (xviii. 1. 11).

Aquila and Priscilla come to Corinth.

54 St. Paul's Two Epistles to the Thessalonians, written from Corinth. See below, the Introductions to those Epistles, p. 1.

St. Paul sets sail from Cenchreæ in the Spring for Ephesus, on his way to Jerusalem, for the feast, probably Pentecost (xviii. 18, 19).

Epistle to the Galatia[illegible] about this time. See below, the Introduction t[illegible], p. 6.

After a short vi[illegible] Jerusale[illegible] (xviii. 22), St. Paul returns by way of Antioch [illegible] he spen[illegible] some time (xviii. 23), and Galatia, and Phrygia, where he confi[illegible] all he [illegible], and by the upper regions of Asia (xix. 1) to Ephesus [illegible] where he [illegible] three years (xx. 31) and three months in the Synagogue, and two years in the [illegible] of Tyrannus (xix. 8—10).

[illegible] Epistle to the Corinthians, written at Ephesus. See below, Introduc[illegible] to it, p. 76.

The Emperor Claudius dies (13th October, A.D. 57), and Nero succeeds.

St. Paul, after three years' stay at Ephesus, quits it for Macedonia (xx. 1).

A.D.

57 SECOND EPISTLE to the CORINTHIANS, written in Macedonia. See below, the Introduction to it, p. 145.

Comes into Hellas, and spends three months there (xx. 3).

58 EPISTLE to the ROMANS, written at Corinth or Cenchreæ. See below, the Introduction to it, p. 206.

St. Paul sets out from Corinth with alms and offerings, collected in Asia and Greece, for the poor saints at Jerusalem (Rom. xv. 25, 26. Acts xix. 21; xx. 4), returns to Macedonia in the Spring, and arrives at Philippi for Easter (xx. 6). Passes over to Troas (xx. 6), touches at Miletus, where he bids farewell to the Presbyters of Ephesus, and gives them an Apostolic Charge (xx. 17); comes to Tyre (xxi. 3), and lands at Cæsarea (xxi. 8); arrives at JERUSALEM, after several years (xxiv. 17), for the Feast of Pentecost (xx. 16; xxi. 17), and brings with him the alms (Acts xxiv. 17), which he had been collecting for the poor Christians at Jerusalem (Rom. xv. 25, 26. 1 Cor. xvi. 1). See on 2 Cor. viii. 18; ix. 1—12.

He is accompanied by St. Luke now, and until his arrival at Rome A.D. 61.

St. Paul is arrested at Jerusalem in the Temple (xxi. 28).

Is conveyed to CÆSAREA (xxiii. 23—33).

58—60 Remains two years in detention at Cæsarea (xxiv. 27).

Is sent by Festus, in the Autumn of A.D. 60, by sea toward Rome (xxvii. 1).

Winters at Malta (xxviii. 11).

61 Spring; arrives at ROME.

62 Martyrdom of St. James, the Bishop of Jerusalem, at the Passover. Euseb. ii. 23. See Introduction to his Epistle.

62, 63 St. Paul is at Rome, where he writes the EPISTLES to the EPHESIANS, COLOSSIANS, and to PHILEMON, in which he calls himself "Paul the aged" (Philem. 9; see above on A.D. 33). See the Introductions to those Epistles, p. 278.

Writes the EPISTLE to the PHILIPPIANS at the close of his imprisonment, A.D. 63. See the Introduction to it, p. 340.

Has been detained at Rome for "two whole years" till the Spring of A.D. 63 (xxviii. 30), where the History of the ACTS of the APOSTLES concludes. Cp. Euseb. ii. 22.

64 St. Paul, after his liberation from his first imprisonment at Rome, goes probably to Spain, and perhaps even to Britain. See on Rom. xv. 24. 28, and below, the Introduction to the Pastoral Epistles, pp. 427—432.

Writes the EPISTLE to the HEBREWS. See the Introduction to it, pp. 374, 375.

In the Summer of A.D. 64 the first Persecution of the Christians at Rome begins under Nero. See Introduction to the Epistles to Timothy, p. 427.

65—67 St. Paul returns from the West in his way to JERUSALEM, probably with Timothy (Heb. xiii. 23). Perhaps leaves Titus at Crete in his way to Jerusalem; and after his visit to Jerusalem performs his promise of visiting Colossæ in Phrygia (Philem. 22).

On his way to Macedonia, to visit Philippi, according to his promise (Phil. ii. 24), he commands Timothy to "abide at Ephesus" as Chief Pastor there (1 Tim. i. 3).

FIRST EPISTLE to TIMOTHY, Bishop of Ephesus. See the Introduction to that Epistle, pp. 427—432.

EPISTLE to TITUS, Bishop of Crete. See p. 432.

St. Paul passes a winter at Nicopolis, probably in Epirus (Tit. iii. 12).

Probably visits Corinth, where Erastus was left in charge (2 Tim. iv. 20).

A.D.

65—67 Comes to Asia, where he left Trophimus at Miletus (2 Tim. iv. 20)

Perhaps saw Timothy at Miletus. Cp. 2 Tim. i. 3.

St. Paul is arrested, probably near Miletus, and is sent a prisoner to Rome. See the Introduction to the Pastoral Epistles, p. 435, and notes on 2 Tim. i. 4. 13; iv. 13—17.

Touches at Troas (2 Tim. iv. 13) in his way to Rome.

Is brought, probably by the Egnatian way, to Rome, where he is in close custody.

At Rome, writes the SECOND EPISTLE to TIMOTHY. St. Luke is with him, and he sends for St. Mark (2 Tim. iv. 11).

68 St. Paul's MARTYRDOM at Rome. See the Introduction to the Epistles to Timothy, p. 435.

For a continuation of the Chronology, after this date to the end of the first century, see below, the Table prefixed to the GENERAL EPISTLES, pp. xi, xii.

ANCIENT UNCIAL GREEK MANUSCRIPTS

CONTAINING

ST. PAUL'S EPISTLES.

See above, the Introduction to the Gospels, p. xxxiv, and on the Acts of the Apostles, p. xlii, or p. xxx (new edit.), for a fuller description of them.

A Alexandrine. It does not contain 2 Cor. iv. 13—xii. 6.

ℵ Codex Sinaiticus; of the fourth century, discovered by Professor Tischendorf in 1844 in the Monastery of St. Catharine on Mount Sinai; and presented, at his instance, in 1859, to the Emperor of Russia, Alexander II., by the Monks of that convent. This Manuscript contains the Old Testament in the Septuagint Version, and the whole of the New Testament; also the Epistle of Barnabas, and some portions of the Pastor of Hermas. It consists of 345 leaves, each page having four parallel columns in it. The Epistles of St. Paul are placed in it immediately after the Gospels, before the Acts of the Apostles.

B Vatican; printed by Cardinal Mai, Rome, 1858. It fails at Hebrews ix. 14 to the end, and does not contain the two Epistles to Timothy, or the Epistles to Titus and Philemon.

C Codex Ephrem rescriptus; with some omissions. See Tischendorf, p. clxxxi.

D Codex Claromontanus, Greek and Latin.

E Codex Sangermanensis, now Petropolitanus.

F Codex Augiensis, Greek and Latin, now published, with a valuable Introduction and other additions, especially collations of more than Fifty Manuscripts, by the Rev. F. H. Scrivener, M.A., Cambridge, 1859.

G Codex Boernerianus, Greek and Latin.

H Codex Coislinianus.

I Codex Angelicus Romanus, called L by Tischendorf, ed. 1859.

K Codex Mosquensis; with some omissions. See Tischendorf, p. cxc.

M Certain fragmentary portions of St. Paul's Epistles, in ancient MSS., at Hamburgh and at London, and published by Tischendorf in his Anecdota Sacra, p. 174, ed. 1855. See Tischendorf, Apparatus Criticus, p. cxc, ed. 7th, 1859.

INTRODUCTION

TO

ST. PAUL'S FIRST EPISTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS.

I. 1. St. Paul had visited Thessalonica on his first missionary journey into Greece (Acts xvii. 1—9). He had spent there but a short time, being driven from the city by the Jews not long after his arrival (v. 5—10).

From Thessalonica he went to Berœa, accompanied by Silas, as he is called by St. Luke, in the Acts of the Apostles, or, as St. Paul always calls him, Silvanus. (Cp. 1 Pet. v. 12.)

Being pursued by the rancour of the Jews, coming from Thessalonica, St. Paul quitted Berœa, leaving Silas and Timotheus there, and took ship for Athens (Acts xvii. 14, 15).

To Athens he was followed by Timotheus (1 Thess. iii. 1), and from Athens he despatched Timotheus back to Thessalonica, in order to confirm the faith of the Christians there, and to ascertain, and to report to the Apostle, what was their spiritual condition (1 Thess. iii. 2—5).

2. After a short stay at Athens, St. Paul came to Corinth (Acts xviii. 1).

At Corinth he formed a connexion with Aquila and Priscilla, and abode with them, and laboured with his own hands as a tent-maker, and preached "every Sabbath-day in the Synagogue, and endeavoured to persuade both Jews and Greeks" (Acts xviii. 2—4).

3. When he had been thus engaged at Corinth for some time, Silas and Timotheus came to him from Macedonia (Acts xviii. 5), bringing with them pecuniary supplies for the Apostle (2 Cor. xi. 9).

It would seem that only Timotheus came directly from Thessalonica, to which he had been sent by St. Paul from Athens, as above stated. (See 1 Thess. iii. 6.)

But Silas also came with Timotheus to Corinth, and he also came from Macedonia (Acts xviii. 5), though probably from some other city, perhaps Philippi, the Christians of which are commended for their liberality by the Apostle on the occasion of his first visit to Greece (Phil. iv. 15), and through Berœa (Acts xvii. 13).

On the arrival of Timotheus at Corinth, St. Paul wrote this Epistle to the Thessalonians from that city (1 Thess. iii. 6. Acts xviii. 5).

4. It will be seen from the statements contained in the Chronological Table prefixed to the Acts of the Apostles (pp. xxxv—xxxix) and to this volume, that this Epistle was probably written in A.D. 53[1].

5. It was the first written of all St. Paul's Epistles. As to this point there is almost an universal consent of critics, e. g. Chrysostom, Theodoret, Theophylact, Baronius, Ussher, Petavius, Lightfoot, Pearson, Hammond, Mill, Lardner, Eichhorn, Hug, De Wette, Hemsen, Wurm, Anger, Credner, Neander, Wieseler, Bloomfield, Davidson, Alford, and others. See the Table in Credner, p. 336, Wieseler, p. 606.

II. This circumstance imparts to it a special interest and importance.

In reference to this particular characteristic of this the first Epistle of St. Paul, it may be observed, [1] Cp. Wieseler, Chronologie der apostolischen Zeitalters, pp. 40—44, p. 595. Lünemann, Einleitung, p. 6. Alford, Prolegom. p. 46. De Wette, p. 91. Davidson, ii. p. 434.

1. That, at the time in which it was written, Greece was under Roman sway, and was divided into two Provinces, Macedonia and Achaia.

The capital city of the former Province was Thessalonica; the capital of the latter Province was Corinth.

The first Epistle of St. Paul was written in the one of these two capital cities, Corinth ; and it was addressed to the other of them, Thessalonica.

This circumstance illustrates the history of St. Paul, and of the Apostolic Church.

It is a specimen of his practice. It displays the principle of action by which he was guided and governed. He chose the greatest Cities as the fields of his missionary labour.

Here is a proof of his courage and zeal, and also of his confidence in the truth of his cause, and in the aid of the Holy Ghost. St. Paul encountered Satan in his strongest holds, and there he planted the Cross.

2. Besides, the wisdom of the Apostle is evident from this choice, as follows :

Thessalonica was a large Metropolis, communicating by a great Roman military road—the Via Egnatia—with the shores of the Adriatic and Italy on the West, and with Asia on the East. It was also situated on the coast, and had an excellent harbour. Consequently it was a commercial emporium, and had intercourse by sea with all parts of the civilized world. No wonder then, that, as St. Paul himself affirms in this Epistle (1 Thess. i. 8), the success of the Gospel at Thessalonica was soon known far and wide, and, in his own expressive phrase, the Word of God sounded forth from Thessalonica, as by a trumpet, throughout the world.

3. It may be remarked also, that in addressing an Epistle to the Church of Thessalonica, the Holy Spirit, writing by St. Paul, was addressing the Church at large, of every age and country in the world.

This Epistle was to be publicly read in the Church there (1 Thess. v. 27, where see note). The Apostle gives a solemn charge to that effect. It was to be read there, not as a private letter, but as the Epistle of a person inspired by the Holy Ghost; as a missive from God. All Christian Antiquity testifies that this injunction was obeyed, and that it was so read (see on 1 Thess. v. 27).

4. At Thessalonica, a busy city of trade and commerce, there were many hands of copyists ready to make transcripts of the Epistle. And, from the local advantages, and commercial intercourse of Thessalonica, by sea and by land, with the principal cities of the world, copies of the Epistle addressed to it would be rapidly circulated. What the Holy Spirit wrote to Thessalonica by the hand of St. Paul, was written to all; and would soon be diffused every where. What the Apostle says of the word preached by him at Thessalonica, that it sounded forth thence every where, would be no less true of the word of God written by him in this Epistle. It would be like a Trumpet of the Gospel, which, being filled by the breath of the Holy Ghost, would sound in the ears of the World.

5. The shortness of this Epistle is not without its purpose and significance. Being short it would be more speedily transcribed and circulated. This remark applies also to the second Epistle to the Thessalonians, the next in chronological order of St. Paul's Epistles. That contains a refutation of an error, and an exposure of a fraud, and is a depository of a solemn prophetical warning. It was requisite that it should be easily circulated. Hence, probably, its brevity. A similar remark applies to the second Epistle of St. John ; see the Introduction to that Epistle.

6. Since, also, these two Epistles were the first written by the Apostle, they would not have the advantage of any reputation derivable from previous writings from the same hand.

But being easily transcribed, and readily circulated, and publicly read in Churches, they would promulgate the name and acts of the great Apostle of the Gentiles, and would prepare the way for the general and ready reception of the subsequent, longer and more elaborate, Epistles from the same pen.

III. The success which attended St. Paul's Apostolic labours at Thessalonica is very remarkable.

It would seem from the Acts of the Apostles (xvii. 1—9), that he had spent only a few weeks at Thessalonica ; and while he was there, as he himself relates, he "laboured night and day, working with his own hands" (1 Thess. ii. 9. 2 Thess. iii. 8). He was also the first person who preached the Gospel there (1 Thess. i. 9. 2 Cor. x. 15. Rom. xv. 20).

And yet the harvest which he there reaped was abundant; as is evident from this Epistle (1 Thess. i. 3—10. Cp. Acts xvii. 4).

Nor were the results of his preaching temporary, superficial, and stationary, but permanent, substantial, and progressive. They were fruitful of practical results, in the daily growth of the graces and virtues of a religious life, both in action and in suffering for the Gospel (1 Thess. iii. 1—9; iv. 9, 10. 2 Thess. i. 3).

By what means were these results produced? This is an important and interesting subject of inquiry.

1. Doubtless, in a great measure, they were effected by the mighty working of the Divine Head of the Church, sending down the miraculous gifts of the Holy Ghost on those who received the faith of Christ, and were baptized into Him; exciting the attention of others by the spiritual graces vouchsafed to them, and making themselves visible by external manifestations, particularly by the Gift of Tongues; and accrediting the ministry of St. Paul by these and other supernatural effects. The Miracle recently wrought by him in the neighbouring city of Philippi, and the Divine interposition there vouchsafed in his behalf, for his deliverance from prison, by an earthquake (Acts xvi. 16—30), would also have made themselves heard and felt at Thessalonica, to which the intelligence of his sufferings at Philippi was brought (1 Thess. ii. 2), and would have predisposed many there to pay attention to his preaching.

2. Many of his converts at Thessalonica were proselytes of the Gate (Acts xvii. 4). The providential pre-arrangement for the reception of the Gospel through the medium of this important and numerous class of persons has been already described, and was one of the most effective agencies for the diffusion of Christianity in all the great cities of the heathen world[2]. There is good reason for believing that it was very serviceable at Thessalonica.

But these auxiliaries would have produced little permanent result, unless a settled provision had been made by the Holy Spirit, animating and directing the Apostle, for the subsequent regular and continuous watering of the seed of the Word which had been sown by his ministry when he was in that city.

3. One of the most interesting and instructive characteristics of this Epistle—the first written by St. Paul—is therefore to be found in the evidence it affords of the provision made by him for this purpose. This evidence is more valuable because it is so unobtrusive that it would hardly attract the attention of a cursory reader.

For example, we do not find in this Epistle any direct commands given to the Thessalonians to constitute a Church; but they are addressed as already incorporated in a Church. Both the Epistles bear this address in their commencement,—"to the Church of the Thessalonians."

Nor do we find any injunction in the Epistle that they are to constitute a body of Clergy to preach the Word and administer the Sacraments of Christ. But injunctions are given to them how they are to treat their Ministers, already constituted. "We beseech you, brethren, to know (i. e. to discern, to acknowledge, and revere) them that are over you in the Lord, and admonish you, and to esteem them very highly in love for their work's sake." (1 Thess. v. 12, 13.)

Again, there is no explicit precept in the Epistle for the assembling of the Christians at Thessalonica together at a set time and place for the reading of the Holy Scriptures, and for public worship, and for the reception of the Holy Communion.

But the injunctions at the close of the Epistle will sufficiently show to an intelligent and thoughtful reader, that provision for those things had been already made.

In fact, they are, as it were, taken for granted by St. Paul in writing this Epistle.

Such usages as these are probably among the παραδόσεις, or traditions, which he had taught them, and for keeping which they are commended by him. (2 Thess. ii. 15. Cp. 1 Cor. xi. 2.)

The brief directions given at the close of his Epistle—brief, because easily understood by them to whom it was sent—with regard to the holy kiss (1 Thess. v. 26), and also as to the public reading of his own Epistle (v. 27), are of this character.

This will be readily acknowledged by those who will take the pains to compare these with other similar injunctions and directions in St. Paul's other Epistles, and with statements occurring incidentally in the History of the Acts of the Apostles[3], and will also read them with the help of the light shed upon them by the writings of Primitive Christian Antiquity, particularly those of the [3] See particularly Acts xiv. 23; xx. 7. 28.

[2] See the Introduction to the Acts of the Apostles, p. xvii, or p. 9, new edit.

Apostolic Fathers, and of Justin Martyr, Tertullian, and Irenæus—without which the work of expounding the Epistles of St. Paul cannot be effectually performed[4].

IV. Hence an important inference may be drawn. If such was the provision for the regular organization of the order, ministry, and offices of the Church at Thessalonica, which St. Paul had only visited once, and where he had stayed but for a short interval, and where the Gospel had been planted merely for a few months when this Epistle was written, assuredly this organization was regarded by the Apostle as of primary importance, and doubtless he took care to provide a similar organization for other Churches, which he afterwards planted, and where he remained in person for a longer time.

This reasonable deduction will have its due weight with those who investigate the primitive history of the Church Polity. It will also have its practical bearings on the conduct of Christian Missions.

The extraordinary success of St. Paul's ministry at Thessalonica is to be attributed to the means which, under the Divine guidance of the Holy Spirit, and with His blessing, were used by the Apostle, not only for the first planting, but also for the continuous healthful growth, of the Gospel.

It will show what the Divine plan of propagating the Gospel is, and how the Divine blessing is to be obtained, for winning Heathen Populations, and in recovering semi-pagan Cities to Christ.

It will prove that this is to be achieved, not merely by preaching, even with the eloquence of a St. Paul, if it were now to be had, but also by the regular ministries of religion, in a systematic organization of Church regimen, and in the peaceful dispensation of the ordinary means of grace, to every member of the body of Christ.

Acting on these principles, the Church of the present day, in her own Missionary Labours, may look, with the Divine blessing, for similar success to that which attended those of St. Paul.

V. Lastly, another inference of a doctrinal kind suggests its proper instruction here.

On examining this Epistle, and the Second to the Thessalonians—the earliest Epistles of St. Paul, we find, that as far as they are of a dogmatical character, they are mainly taken up with asserting, enforcing, and explaining, certain specific Articles of Christian Faith and Practice, to those who have turned from Idols to the Living God by Repentance (i. 9), and have received the Gospel of Christ, and have been led into the path of Christian Life for "the work of Faith, the labour of Love, and the patience of Hope" (i. 3). These great Articles of Faith are[5]—

1. The Death and Resurrection of Christ.
2. The General Resurrection.
3. The Second Advent of Christ in Glory, to judge the Quick and the Dead. See 1 Thess. v. 23, 24. 2 Thess. ii. 1—8; iii. 5.
4. The Eternity of future Rewards and future Punishments. See 1 Thess. iv. 13—18; v. 1—10. 2 Thess. i. 7—10.

In perfect harmony with this his own practice in preaching, St. Paul calls these things the "first principles of the doctrine of Christ." (Heb. vi. 1, 2.)

5. The personal existence and active working of Satan, whom his hearers had renounced in their Baptism. (See 1 Thess. ii. 18; iii. 5. 2 Thess. ii. 9; iii. 3.)
6. The practical application of these doctrines.

Thus these two earliest Epistles teach where the foundations are to be laid in preaching to the Heathen, and to those who are almost Heathens. And this inference is confirmed by St. Paul's own practice at Athens, where he preached "Jesus and the Resurrection" (Acts xvii. 18), and a future Day of Retribution to all men both in body and soul. (Acts xvii. 31.)

Thus these two Epistles standing at the beginning of the course of teaching of the Great Apostle of the Gentiles, in his inspired writings addressed to single cities, and through them to the whole World even to the end of time, have their appropriate place and office. They lay the foundation

[4] See note below on 1 Thess. v. 26, 27. 2 Thess. iii. 10.

[5] If, as some have ventured to allege (e. g. Bauer, Paulus der Apostel, pp. 480, &c.), these Epistles were not genuine works of St. Paul, but only centos made up of other Epistles, they would have been of a much more comprehensive character, and their contents would have been much more miscellaneous than they are. Among many internal proofs of genuineness (which might be multiplied easily) one may be adduced from the first line of both these Epistles, viz. that a forger, writing in St. Paul's name, would certainly have called himself an Apostle. See note there.

in asserting the personal existence and in revealing the energetic working of the Evil One, the Tempter, Satan; and in inculcating the great doctrines of Death and Judgment, Heaven, and Hell, and Eternity.

They were the First of St. Paul's Epistles; and were to be followed from time to time by other Epistles from him, which suppose this foundation to be already laid, and are built upon it.

It is a very erroneous notion,—consequent perhaps on a disregard of the chronological order of St. Paul's Epistles,—that those Epistles were put forth incoherently, accidentally, and at random, without mutual connexion and dependence. The Epistles of St. Paul are not disjointed fragments, but they form a harmonious whole.

The goodly structure of the great Apostle's Teaching arose gradually, quietly, and securely, ever growing in height, beauty, and dignity, with each successive Epistle, till the whole fabric was completed. And then the holy Apostle, having at length fulfilled his task as a wise master builder in Christ (1 Cor. iii. 10), passed from the City of this World to the Everlasting City, whose Builder and Maker is God (Heb. xi. 10); and from the labours and conflicts of the Church militant, to the rest and triumph of the Church glorified.

ΠΡΟΣ ΘΕΣΣΑΛΟΝΙΚΕΙΣ Α'.

a 2 Cor. 1. 19. Eph. 1. 2. 2 Thess. 1. 1. 1 Pet. 5. 12.

I. [1] [a] ΠΑΥΛΟΣ καὶ Σιλουανὸς καὶ Τιμόθεος τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ Θεσσαλονικέων ἐν Θεῷ Πατρὶ καὶ Κυρίῳ Ἰησοῦ Χριστῷ, χάρις ὑμῖν καὶ εἰρήνη ἀπὸ Θεοῦ Πατρὸς ἡμῶν, καὶ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.

THE title of the Epistle, πρὸς Θεσσαλονικεῖς α', is that which is given in A, B, D, E.

CH. I. 1. Παῦλος] Paul. On the name Paul, see note, Acts xiii. 9.

In neither of the Epistles to the Thessalonians does St. Paul annex to his own name the title of Apostle.

But he does adopt this designation at the commencement of all his other Epistles, with three exceptions—for special reasons—the Epistles to Philemon, the Philippians, and Hebrews.

The reason seems to be, that these two Epistles to the Thessalonians are the earliest that St. Paul wrote; and that when he wrote them (viz. soon after his arrival at Corinth, A.D. 52) he had only just commenced his Apostolic labours in Greece, and he would not put forward the Apostolic title before he had amply made good his claim to it by Apostolic acts.

Here, then, is an example of difference of address in St. Paul's Epistles, which is in harmony with the facts of the case, as related in the History of the Acts; and it shows in an unobtrusive way, that St. Paul does not overrate the results of his own ministerial labours.

— Σιλουανός] Silvanus, always so called by St. Paul (2 Thess. i. 1. 2 Cor. i. 19), and by St. Peter (1 Pet. v. 12), and always called Silas by St. Luke (Acts xv. 22. 27. 32. 34. 40), where he is first associated as a fellow-missionary with St. Paul (xvi. 19. 25. 29; xvii. 4. 10. 14, 15; xviii. 5); and always placed before Timothy by St. Luke (Acts xvii. 14, 15; xviii. 5), and by St. Paul (2 Thess. i. 1. 2 Cor. i. 19). He is first heard of in connexion with the Church at Jerusalem (Acts xv. 22), and his Aramaic name Silas was probably modified into Silvanus for readier acceptance with the Greek and Roman Christians, see on Acts xiii. 9. The same individuals were often characterized by a longer and a shorter name, see on Acts xv. 22. On his subsequent history, see on Phil. i. 1, and on 1 Pet. v. 12.

— Τιμόθεος] Timotheus, first associated with St. Paul at Lystra (Acts xvi. 1) in the Apostle's second missionary tour. On his personal history, see on 1 Tim. i. 2.

St. Paul associates Silvanus and Timotheus with himself in writing these two Epistles to the Thessalonians, because they had been with him at Thessalonica, and were left by him in Macedonia to continue his missionary work (see on Acts xx. 5) when he quitted it for Athens, at which place they were desired to rejoin him (Acts xvii. 13—15), and from which Timothy was despatched back to Thessalonica (1 Thess. iii. 2), whence he came to St. Paul at Corinth. (Acts xviii. 5.)

St. Paul's practice in associating others with himself in writing his Epistles, e. g. Sosthenes in his first Epistle to the Corinthians, and Timothy in his Epistles to the Philippians, and to the Colossians, and to Philemon, and Silvanus and Timotheus in both his Epistles to the Thessalonians, deserves consideration:—

(1) As an example of humility, modesty, and charity.

(2) As a guarantee of the genuineness, and authenticity, and integrity of his Epistles.

For example, Silvanus and Timotheus, being present with St. Paul when he wrote these two Epistles to the Thessalonians, and being associated with St. Paul in writing them, would naturally be appealed to, if any doubt arose as to the genuineness, &c. of any part of them.

In this respect there was a peculiar fitness in the choice of Timothy. He is associated with St. Paul in these his first Epistles to a Christian Church, and also in the last, to the Philippians.

He was young when these Epistles were written (Acts xvi. 1 Tim. iv. 12), and survived long, in an exalted station in the Church as Bishop of Ephesus, to be a public witness of the genuineness of the Epistles of St. Paul. Euseb. iii. 4; cf. on Rev. ii. 2. Tillemont, Mém. ii. 67.

At the same time, the authorship of the Epistles is solely from St. Paul. They are not in any sense the Epistles of Timothy, but entirely of St. Paul. See below, iii. 1, where he says, "We thought it good to be left at Athens alone, and sent Timothy, our brother and fellow-labourer, to you;" and (ver. 6) "when Timothy came to us from you." Here, in using the pronoun we, he means himself only, for Silvanus as well as Timothy came to him from Macedonia to Corinth. (Acts xviii. 5.) And indeed Timothy only seems to have come to St. Paul at Athens, and Silvanus remained in Macedonia. (Cp. below, iii. 2.) See also the Epistle to the Philippians (ii. 19), where he mentions Timothy, although Timothy's name is associated with his own at the beginning of the Epistle.

— τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ Θεσσαλονικέων] to the Church of the Thessalonians. And so again in the second Epistle, i. 1. A Church is here recognized as already constituted at Thessalonica. See above, Introduction, p. 3.

He does not speak of the Church in the city, but of the Church of inhabitants in it. It is observable that these two Epistles, the earliest in date, are the only Epistles of St. Paul where he writes thus.

In other cases he addresses the Church as the Church of God planted and settled in the city. See, for instance, 1 Cor. i. 2, τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ τοῦ Θεοῦ τῇ οὔσῃ ἐν Κορίνθῳ. Similarly St. John in the Apocalypse addresses each of the Churches of Asia, as settled in their respective cities, e. g. ἐν Ἐφέσῳ (Rev. ii. 1), ἐν Σμύρνῃ (ii. 8), ἐν Περγάμῳ (ii. 12). Cf. ii. 18; iii. 1. 7. 14.

What is the reason of this difference?

Perhaps the Christians of Thessalonica, who had only been visited once by St. Paul, and among whom he had only been able to remain for about three weeks (Acts xvii. 2), could hardly have been yet so organized as that a Church might be said to be planted in their city. A Church there was, but it was rather made up of Thessalonians than established in Thessalonica. The same remark may, perhaps, apply to Laodicea. (Col. iv. 16.)

But at Corinth he remained a year and six months. (Acts xviii. 11.) Therefore, in writing his Epistles to the Corinthians, he might well inscribe them "to the Church that is existing (τῇ οὔσῃ) in Corinth." (1 Cor. i. 2. 2 Cor. i. 1.)

Observe also that in his first five Epistles, and in them only (viz. the two to the Thessalonians, the Epistle to the Galatians, and the two to the Corinthians), does he address himself τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ to the Church of, or in, the city or country.

In all the later Epistles to other Churches he expands the word to τοῖς ἁγίοις, "the Saints," or τοῖς ἁγίοις πᾶσι, "all the Saints."

The only exception, which confirms the rule, is Philemon 2, τῇ κατ' οἶκόν σου ἐκκλησίᾳ. Thus he teaches that all the mem-

2 [b] Εὐχαριστοῦμεν τῷ Θεῷ πάντοτε περὶ πάντων ὑμῶν, μνείαν ὑμῶν ποιούμενοι ἐπὶ τῶν προσευχῶν ἡμῶν ἀδιαλείπτως 3 [c] μνημονεύοντες ὑμῶν τοῦ ἔργου τῆς πίστεως, καὶ τοῦ κόπου τῆς ἀγάπης, καὶ τῆς ὑπομονῆς τῆς ἐλπίδος τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ἔμπροσθεν τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ Πατρὸς ἡμῶν, 4 [d] εἰδότες, ἀδελφοὶ ἠγαπημένοι ὑπὸ Θεοῦ, τὴν ἐκλογὴν ὑμῶν, 5 [e] ὅτι τὸ εὐαγγέλιον ἡμῶν οὐκ ἐγενήθη εἰς ὑμᾶς ἐν λόγῳ μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐν δυνάμει καὶ ἐν Πνεύματι ἁγίῳ, καὶ ἐν πληροφορίᾳ πολλῇ, καθὼς οἴδατε οἷοι ἐγενήθημεν ἐν ὑμῖν δι' ὑμᾶς. 6 [f] Καὶ ὑμεῖς μιμηταὶ ἡμῶν ἐγενήθητε καὶ τοῦ Κυρίου, δεξάμενοι τὸν λόγον ἐν

b Eph. 1. 16. 2 Thess. 1. 3. Phil. 1. 3. Rom. 1. 8, 9.
c John 6. 29. 2 Thess. 1. 11. Gal. 5. 6. James 2. 17.
d Col. 3. 12. 2 Thess. 2. 13. ch. 2. 12. 2 Tim. 1. 9, 10. Tit. 3. 4, 5.
e 1 Cor. 2. 4. & 4. 20. 2 Cor. 6. 6. ch. 2. 10.
f 1 Cor. 11. 1. Acts 5. 41. Heb. 10. 34. Acts 13. 52.

bers of the visible Church are to be accounted to be, and are obliged to be, ἅγιοι, saints.

On the geography and history of Thessalonica, see the authorities in Wetstein, p. 297; Winer, R. W. B. ii. p. 608; Leake, Northern Greece, iii. 235; Howson, i. 379; Lünemann, p. 1; Alford, Proleg. p. 44. It was anciently called Therme, and gave its name to the bay (sinus Thermaicus) on which it was built, and was enlarged and beautified by Cassander, and called Thessalonica from his wife, sister of Alexander the Great. After the Roman conquest of Macedonia by Paulus Æmilius, it became the capital of Macedonia Secunda, and afterwards the capital of the whole Province; and was the most populous and wealthy city of Macedonia in the Apostolic age. (Strabo, vii. 7. Plin. H. N. iv. 10. Theodoret, H. E. v. 17.) It is now called Saloniki.

On the contrast of character between Thessalonica, a Greek free city, and Philippi, a Roman colony in Greece, see above, note on Acts xvii. 6.

— χάρις ὑμῖν καὶ εἰρήνη] Grace to you and Peace. Observe that at the commencement of this, the first of St. Paul's Epistles, and of every one of his Epistles, the Apostle adopts this double salutation—ΧΑΡΙΣ, Grace, referring to the Greek greeting χαίρειν.

ΕΙΡΗΝΗ, Peace, referring to the Hebrew שָׁלוֹם (Shalom).

But he elevates and spiritualizes, consecrates and Christianizes the Greek and Hebrew forms of social salutation; he gives an Apostolic greeting to the World. So also St. Peter, "Grace and Peace." (1 Pet. i. 2. 2 Pet. i. 2.) In the Pastoral Epistles of St. Paul ἔλεος is inserted between χάρις and εἰρήνη, and so 2 John 3, and Jude 2.

Our blessed Saviour, the Prince of Peace, had said to His assembled Apostles on the Sunday of, and next after, His Resurrection from the Dead, "PEACE be unto you" (John xx. 19. 26), but He had not yet said, "GRACE be upon you," for He had not yet been glorified by His Ascension, and had not yet sent down from heaven the Holy Spirit of Grace.

— ἀπὸ Θεοῦ—Χριστοῦ] Not found in B, F, G, and omitted by Tisch., Lünem., Alf., but the words are in A, D, E, J, K.

2. εὐχαριστοῦμεν] We render thanks. One of the characteristics of the two Epistles to the Thessalonians, which bespeaks their early date, and distinguishes them from the later Epistles, is the use throughout of the first person plural, we and our, and not I and mine. Cf. 2 Thess. i. 3. And contrast this with Philippians i. 3, and that Epistle throughout, in which Timothy is also associated with St. Paul. (Phil. i. 1.)

When St. Paul wrote to the Thessalonians, the dignity of his Apostolic character, and the weight of his authority, had not as yet been fully shown and acknowledged.

The following recapitulatory summary of the introductory characteristics of St. Paul's Epistles may serve to illustrate their claims to order and design.

(1) He begins all his Epistles with his own name "Paul," except the Epistle to the Hebrews. See Heb. i. 1.

(2) He adds to his own name the official title of Apostle in all his Epistles, except in the two earliest, and in the Epistles to Philemon, the Philippians, and the Hebrews, where it is omitted for special reasons.

(3) In his earliest five Epistles he addresses himself τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ κ.τ.λ., but in no others.

(4) In his earliest two Epistles he addresses himself τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ of persons in the city, and not τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ in the City, and in no others.

(5) In all the other Epistles he addresses himself τοῖς ἁγίοις.

(6) In all his Epistles he commences with the salutation χάρις καὶ εἰρήνη, "Grace and Peace." In all his Pastoral Epistles, "Grace, Mercy, and Peace."

(7) In his earliest Epistles he uses the first person plural 'we:' in his later Epistles the first person singular 'I.'

(8) As to his usage at the close of his Epistles, see on 1 Thess. v. 28.

(9) All these minute incidents indicate a well-prepared and well-digested plan in the composition of his Epistles, even in details of diction, and much more in the delivery of doctrine. See Introduction above, § v.

3. ὑμῶν τοῦ ἔργου τῆς πίστεως] your work of faith: the fruit of the tree planted by us. Cp. Titus iii. 8. James ii. 22, and Winer, p. 541. St. Paul commends here a Faith which works, a Love which labours, and a Hope which endures; and teaches that Faith is not to be approved without Works, nor Love without Labour, nor Hope without Patience. Cp. Chrys. here.

— κόπου] labour. See ii. 9.

— τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν] of our Lord. Christ, the Author and also the object of Faith, Charity, and Hope. They proceed from Him as their Origin, and tend towards Him, and terminate in Him as their End.

— ἔμπροσθεν τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ Πατρὸς ἡμῶν] in the sight of God, Who is also our Father. Although men may not see your good works, and although if they see them they may revile them, you are not moved thereby, for your eye is upon God, and the Eye of your Heavenly Father, who seeth in secret, is upon you; and He will hereafter reward you openly for your Faith, Hope, and Charity, when this world has passed away. (Matt. vi. 4. 18.) Cp. Chrys., Theoph.

4. εἰδότες τὴν ἐκλογὴν ὑμῶν] knowing your election. This is said to all the members of the Thessalonian Church (cp. 2 Thess. ii. 13), and does not predicate any thing of the final condition of any one among them. St. Paul did not even know whether he himself would be saved. (1 Cor. ix. 27, and Philipp. iii. 11—13.)

Compare 1 Pet. i. 2, where St. Peter addresses all to whom he is writing as ἐκλεκτοί, elect, and 2 Pet. i. 10, where he exhorts them to make their election sure.

All the members of the Visible Church are ἐκλεκτοί, elect, in the eye of man: the members of the Invisible Church alone, whom God, and God only, knows, and of whom He knows that they will persevere unto the end, are elect in the eyes of God. See below on Romans viii. 30. Hooker, III. ii. 4—8.

Observe that St. Paul infers their election from their good fruits.

He says we "know your election, because (ὅτι) our Gospel was made (by God's grace) to you to be effectual (ἐγενήθη, factum est), not in words only, but in power and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance, just as you on your side know what sort of persons we were made (by God's grace) to be in you for your sakes. From the fruits of the Gospel among you we derive proofs of your election, and reasons for gratitude to God; as you on your side may derive reasons also for faith, and hope, and joy, from considering the effects wrought in us by God's grace among you."

5. ἐγενήθη] was made (i.e. by God's grace). On the aorist passive, see Winer, § 15, p. 77.

It is observable that this form is repeated very often in this, the first, and in the second chapter of St. Paul's first Epistle (see v. 5, bis, v. 6, and ii. 5. 7, 8. 10. 14), as if he would thus declare at the outset that whatever he or his converts did that was good, was made and done in them by the free grace of God. The Vulgate rightly renders ἐγενήθητε, v. 6, by 'facti estis:' and so the old Latin Version in Cod. Augiensis, and Cod. Boernerianus, and Primasius.

— εἰς ὑμᾶς] unto you. So B, I, K, most cursive MSS., Lachmann, Alf., Ellicott. Elz. has πρός: but εἰς is better adapted to express the effectual reception of the Gospel in the heart. Cp. Heb. ii. 3.

— ἐν Πνεύματι ἁγίῳ] by the Holy Ghost, and His gifts; such as the gift of Tongues shed on those who were admitted into the Church by Baptism. See Acts x. 44. (Theodoret.)

— ἐν πληροφορίᾳ] in full assurance. The metaphor is from a ship. As a vessel with its sails spread and filled with a prosperous gale is wafted on steadily and swiftly, so you went on in your Christian voyage, with your hearts filled and impelled by the heavenly breeze of the Spirit. See above on Luke i. 1. Cp. Heb. x. 22.

6. μιμηταὶ ἡμῶν ἐγενήθητε] ye were made (by God's grace) θλίψει πολλῇ, μετὰ χαρᾶς Πνεύματος ἁγίου, [7] ὥστε γενέσθαι ὑμᾶς τύπον πᾶσι τοῖς πιστεύουσιν ἐν τῇ Μακεδονίᾳ καὶ ἐν τῇ Ἀχαΐᾳ. [8] [g] Ἀφ' ὑμῶν γὰρ ἐξήχηται ὁ λόγος τοῦ Κυρίου οὐ μόνον ἐν τῇ Μακεδονίᾳ καὶ Ἀχαΐᾳ, ἀλλὰ ἐν παντὶ τόπῳ ἡ πίστις ὑμῶν ἡ πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν ἐξελήλυθεν, ὥστε μὴ χρείαν ἔχειν ἡμᾶς λαλεῖν τι. [9] [h] Αὐτοὶ γὰρ περὶ ἡμῶν ἀπαγγέλλουσιν ὁποίαν εἴσοδον ἔσχομεν πρὸς ὑμᾶς, καὶ πῶς ἐπεστρέψατε πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν ἀπὸ τῶν εἰδώλων δουλεύειν Θεῷ ζῶντι καὶ ἀληθινῷ, [10] [i] καὶ ἀναμένειν τὸν Υἱὸν αὐτοῦ ἐκ τῶν οὐρανῶν, ὃν ἤγειρεν ἐκ νεκρῶν Ἰησοῦν, τὸν ῥυόμενον ἡμᾶς ἀπὸ τῆς ὀργῆς τῆς ἐρχομένης.

II. [1] [a] Αὐτοὶ γὰρ οἴδατε, ἀδελφοί, τὴν εἴσοδον ἡμῶν τὴν πρὸς ὑμᾶς, ὅτι οὐ κενὴ γέγονεν, [2] [b] ἀλλὰ προπαθόντες καὶ ὑβρισθέντες, καθὼς οἴδατε, ἐν Φιλίπg Rom. 10. 18. & 1. 8. 2 Thess. 1. 4. 3 John 12.

h ch. 2. 1. 1 Cor. 12. 2. Gal. 4. 8, 9.
i Phil. 3. 20. 2 Thess. 1. 10. Rev. 1. 7. Matt. 3. 7. Luke 3. 7. Heb. 10. 27.
a ch. 1. 5, 9.
b Acts 5. 41. & 16. 22, &c. & 17. 2. Phil. 1. 30. 2 Tim. 1. 12. Heb. 11. 36, 37.

---

to be followers of us and of the Lord. See on 1 Cor. xi. 1, μιμηταί μου γίνεσθε, καθὼς κἀγὼ Χριστοῦ.

7. τύπον] a pattern. Cp. 2 Thess. iii. 9. So B, D; and this reading has been adopted by Lachm., Tisch., Alf., Ellicott, and is preferred by Lünemann and Winer, p. 157, and so Vulg., and Syriac, and Æthiopic Versions, and Primasius, "ut facti sitis forma." Elz. has τύπους.

— ἐν τῇ Μακεδονίᾳ καὶ ἐν τῇ Ἀχαΐᾳ] in Macedonia and Achaia, the two Roman provinces of Greece. See note on Acts xvi. 10. Cp. Rom. xv. 26. 2 Cor. ix. 2, and above, Introduction to this Epistle, § ii.—Elz. omits the second ἐν.

8. ἐξήχηται] hath sounded forth, as the clear voice of a Trumpet (Chrys., Theodoret). ἐκηρύχθη (Hesych.). The neuter form is used by the Septuagint in Joel iv. 14, ἦχοι ἐξήχησαν. Sirach xl. 13, βροντὴ ἐξήχησεν. This diffusion of the Gospel from Thessalonica was a happy result of its geographical position and commercial advantages;

St. Paul, in his missionary course, selected great centres of population as the fields of his apostolic labours,—such as Thessalonica, Corinth, Ephesus, Rome. In them he planted the Cross. To them specially he addressed Epistles. He chose those places where he had most enemies. (Cp. 1 Cor. xvi. 9.) He encountered Satan in his strongholds,—a proof of his courage, and of confidence in his cause, and an evidence of the truth of Christianity. And those great Cities became, as Thessalonica is here described, like Trumpets of the Gospel to the World. (Cp. Rom. i. 8.) See above, Introduction, p. 2.

9. αὐτοί] they themselves, ipsi, of their own accord, without any word on our part, report concerning us, what sort of entrance, —how effectual and successful an entrance—we had to you.

— ἔσχομεν] we had. So the best authorities.—Elz. ἔχομεν.

— ἀπὸ τῶν εἰδώλων] from the idols which you had heretofore worshipped. Therefore the Church of the Thessalonians consisted mainly of Gentile converts; and this is what appears from the History of the Acts, xvii. 5. 11. 13. It must be remembered, however, that St. Paul, on his arrival at Thessalonica, had offered the Gospel in the first instance (as was his invariable practice) to the Jews. He passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, and went on to Thessalonica, because the Synagogue of that District was there. (Acts xvii. 1.) And when there, he went, according to his custom, into the Synagogue, and reasoned with them for three Sabbath-days from their Scriptures. (Acts xvii. 2.)

But the Jews of Thessalonica did not "search the Scriptures, whether these things were so." (Acts xvii. 11.) The fruits of his preaching were, for the most part, seen by its effects upon the Gentiles. This is evident from the exasperation of the Jews, which was produced by those effects. See below, ii. 16, and Acts xvii. 4, where the reading of A, D, and the Vulgate, καὶ Ἑλλήνων πλῆθος πολὺ, approved by Dr. Paley, and received by Lachmann, has much to recommend it.

This was a remarkable result. The Jews, who possessed the advantage of the preparations made for the Gospel by the Scriptures of the Old Testament, which they had in their hands and heard in their Synagogues, rejected the Gospel; the Gentiles, who did not enjoy this benefit, received it.

In accordance with these historical facts, we may observe as a remarkable internal coincidence, that in both the Epistles to the Thessalonians, and also to their neighbours the Philippians (whose circumstances were similar), St. Paul never quotes directly from the Scriptures of the Old Testament. (Cp. below, 1 Cor. i. 19.)

The Holy Spirit addressed the first two Epistles of the New Testament to those who had not enjoyed the light of the Old Testament, but profited by the Light of Conscience and of Reason, and gladly received the Gospel. Thus he shows God's love to all, who, in a teachable spirit, use the advantages, whatever they may be, that they possess.

These considerations suggest the following inquiry:—Whether other spiritual provision was not then made for the edification of these and other Gentile Churches of Macedonia and Achaia?

St. Paul deemed it requisite that they should now possess Epistles written by himself..... Was it not equally necessary that they should possess a written Historical Record of the words, works, and sufferings of Christ? The Holy Spirit dictated Epistles to them. Is it not probable that they were then supplied by Him also with a written Gospel?

Is it not also probable that this Gospel was the Gospel of St. Luke?

It appears that St. Paul was accompanied from Troas into Macedonia by St. Luke.

St. Luke describes St. Paul's vision at Troas in Acts xvi. 10; and after that description, he adds, "we immediately sought means to go forth into Macedonia, assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us to preach the Gospel to them."

St. Luke therefore had a mission in Macedonia as well as St. Paul.

St. Luke appears to have been left by St. Paul at Philippi (see on Acts xvi. 40). For what purpose?

For an answer to this question let the reader be requested to consider the statements and reasonings in the notes below on 1 Thess. v. 2, and on 2 Cor. viii. 18.

In the Collect for St. Luke's Day, the Church of England, with many ancient Christian Authorities, has expressed an opinion that the words of St. Paul, "the brother whose praise is in the Gospel in all the Churches" (which words were written in Macedonia), refer to St. Luke.

The Gospel of St. Luke was generally supposed by Christian Antiquity to have been written under the eye of St. Paul, and to have been specially designed for the Churches of Macedonia and Achaia. See above, the Introduction to St. Luke's Gospel.

No place would be better adapted for the circulation of a written Gospel than Thessalonica, on account of its situation and its commerce, by means of which (as the Apostle here says) "the Gospel sounded from it through the world." On this point see further below, ii. 18; v. 2. 27.

— Θεῷ ζῶντι καὶ ἀληθινῷ] The Living and True God, as distinguished from dead images and dead men who are objects of worship to the heathen. Cp. Wisdom xiv. 15 concerning the origin of idolatry, εἰκόνα ποιήσας τὸν νεκρὸν ἄνθρωπον, ὡς Θεὸν ἐτίμησε.

On the proper sense of ἀληθινὸς (the sense of which is very different from that of ἀληθὴς) as applied to the One true God in order to distinguish Him from the many Idols of Paganism, see note on John xvii. 3, and cp. 1 John v. 20, 21, οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ ἀληθινὸς Θεὸς καὶ ἡ ζωὴ αἰώνιος· τεκνία, φυλάξατε ἑαυτοὺς ἀπὸ τῶν εἰδώλων.

10. καὶ ἀναμένειν] and to wait for—. The Doctrines of the future Resurrection and Universal Judgment to come, and the Supreme Royalty of Jesus, were the Doctrines which the Apostle made the primary subject of his preaching to the Gentiles. See above, Introduction to this Epistle, § v., and below, 1 Thess. iii. 13; iv. 16; v. 2. 2 Thess. i. 7, and St. Paul's Sermon at Athens, Acts xvii. 31; and cp. Tertullian de Resurrectione, c. 24. Hence the charge against him at Thessalonica, as if he preached against Cæsar, "saying, that there is a different King (ἕτερον βασιλέα) Jesus" (Acts xvii. 7).

— τὸν ῥυόμενον] Him who delivereth us.—His work of deliverance is ever going on.

Ch. II. 2. προπαθόντες] having suffered before, and not being deterred by previous sufferings.

— ὑβρισθέντες, καθὼς οἴδατε] contumeliously and injuriously handled, as ye know, at Philippi,—a statement explained by the ποις, ἐπαῤῥησιασάμεθα ἐν τῷ Θεῷ ἡμῶν λαλῆσαι πρὸς ὑμᾶς τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν πολλῷ ἀγῶνι.

[c] 2 Cor. 2. 17. & 4. 2.

[3] [c] Ἡ γὰρ παράκλησις ἡμῶν οὐκ ἐκ πλάνης, οὐδὲ ἐξ ἀκαθαρσίας, οὐδὲ ἐν δόλῳ, [4] [d] ἀλλὰ, καθὼς δεδοκιμάσμεθα ὑπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ πιστευθῆναι τὸ εὐαγγέλιον, οὕτω λαλοῦμεν, οὐχ ὡς ἀνθρώποις ἀρέσκοντι, ἀλλὰ τῷ Θεῷ τῷ δοκιμάζοντι τὰς καρδίας ὑμῶν.

[d] 1 Tim. 1. 11, 12. Tit. 1. 3. Gal. 2. 7. & 1. 10. [e] Acts 20. 33. 2 Cor. 1. 23. & 2. 17. & 4. 2. & 7. 2. & 11. 31. & 12. 17. Gal. 1. 10. [f] John 5. 41, 44. & 12. 43. 2 Thess. 3. 8, 9. [g] 1 Cor. 2. 3. & 9. 1, &c. 2 Cor. 10. 1, 2, 10, 11. & 13. 4.

[5] [e] Οὔτε γάρ ποτε ἐν λόγῳ κολακείας ἐγενήθημεν, καθὼς οἴδατε, οὔτε ἐν προφάσει πλεονεξίας, Θεὸς μάρτυς, [6] [f] οὔτε ζητοῦντες ἐξ ἀνθρώπων δόξαν, οὔτε ἀφ' ὑμῶν, οὔτε ἀπ' ἄλλων, δυνάμενοι ἐν βάρει εἶναι, ὡς Χριστοῦ ἀπόστολοι· [7] [g] ἀλλ'

History, Acts xvi. 22, describing the shameful usage received by Paul and Silas at Philippi.

It has been asked by some in modern times—

Is it probable, that St. Paul, who had pleaded his Roman citizenship at Jerusalem, in order to escape scourging, should not have also pleaded it in Philippi, in order to escape a similar outrage? And some have been led to question the veracity of the sacred history of the Acts on the ground of this alleged improbability.

This question has been already considered in the note on Acts xvi. 22, to which it may be added here that doubtless together with the tidings of his shameful usage, which, he here says, were brought from Philippi to Thessalonica, were brought also the tidings of the miraculous ejection of the Evil Spirit which gave occasion to that shameful usage (Acts xvi. 18), and of his own miraculous deliverance from the prison, which followed it, and of his honourable departure from Philippi (Acts xvi. 25—40).

May we not therefore believe that he was withheld from pleading his Roman citizenship at Philippi by the same Holy Spirit Who enabled him to suffer with joy, and to sing praise to God in the prison at midnight? and that the knowledge of what the Apostle had nobly done and patiently suffered at Philippi, opened the way for the joyful acceptance of the Gospel at Thessalonica?

3. οὐκ ἐκ πλάνης—ἀκαθαρσίας] not proceeding from deception, nor yet from uncleanness; 'non ex seductione nec ex immunditiâ' (Tertullian de Pudic. c. 17), and so the Syriac and Arabic versions, 'neither from deception nor uncleanness'—the means with which the Evil Spirit deluded the heathen; in the former case, by sorcery, oracles, and divinations; in the latter, by impurity, consecrated as a part of Religion. See note below, on iv. 4. On the word πλάνος, see 2 John 7; and on the use of ἐκ here, cp. Rom. ii. 8, τοῖς ἐξ ἐριθείας.

St. Paul had encountered the Evil One in the former character, that of a πλάνος or seducer, in the Pythoness at Philippi, in Macedonia (see on Acts xvi. 16). He was now encountering him in the latter shape, that of uncleanness, in Achaia, at Corinth, where πορνεία was identified with the worship of Aphrodité, and where he writes the present Epistle.

— οὐδὲ ἐν δόλῳ] nor yet by guile. So A, B, C, D, F, G, and Lachmann, Alford, Ellicott. Elz. has οὔτε.

St. Paul here passes to another phase of delusion, one practised by Satan under the guise of Christianity. Hence οὐδὲ, nor yet, is preferable to οὔτε. Δόλος is here predicated of Christian Teachers who adulterate the truth with false admixtures, δολοῦντες τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ (see 2 Cor. iv. 2; cp. 2 Cor. ii. 17), and the word is connected with δέλω, δέλεαρ, esca, a lure with which they hunt souls (Theodoret). But the notion of πλάνη is seduction from the truth into error. A person who uses δόλος is also a πλάνος, but a man may be πλάνος without resorting to δόλος.

St. Paul had experience of the evil effects of δόλος in religion, among the ἐργάται δόλιοι of Corinth (2 Cor. xi. 13).

Observe also that he uses two different prepositions here. He says ἐκ πλάνης, ἐξ ἀκαθαρσίας, but ἐν δόλῳ. The former intimates the origin and the main spring of action, the other the habit of mind and temper in which the agent acts, and the instruments by which he acts.

4. πιστευθῆναι τὸ εὐαγγέλιον] to be entrusted with the Gospel. As to the construction, see 1 Tim. i. 11, εὐαγγέλιον ὃ ἐπιστεύθην ἐγώ, and Gal. ii. 7, and note on Acts xxi. 3.

5. ἐν λόγῳ κολακείας] in the speech of flattery; i. e. in the speech which is characterized by flattery. In this and like examples, the preposition ἐν denotes that in which, with which, and by which the agent works: as, for example, the armour of a soldier, with which, and in which, he is clad, and by which he fights. As in Virg. Æn. v. 37, "Horridus in jaculis et pelle Libystidis ursæ." Cp. Eph. vi. 16, τὸν θυρεὸν τῆς πίστεως ἐν ᾧ κ.τ.λ., and see Winer, p. 343.

Λόγος κολακείας is the language of flattery, and the genitive indicates the quality of what is said; it signifies such a speech as Flattery personified would utter. So Acts xiii. 15 λόγος παρακλήσεως, 1 Cor. ii. 4 λόγος σοφίας: and it is contrasted with the λόγος ἀληθείας of 2 Cor. vi. 7, which describes such language as Truth speaks, and which is characterized by truth as its essence.

— ἐγενήθημεν] we were made, 'versati sumus,' we behaved ourselves, we used. Cp. v. 7. This passage is quoted by Clemens Alex. Pædag. i. § 19, p. 109, Potter, with the singular variety of νήπιοι for ἤπιοι, and so B, C*, D*, F, G, Lachm.

— προφάσει πλεονεξίας] a mask for covetousness. We were not clad in any fair disguise of covetousness. Πρόφασις is not from πρόφημι, but from προφαίνω, and means a mask, or cloke, or any specious disguise, which is used by a person who is "Introrsus turpis, speciosus pelle decorâ" (Horat. 1 Epist. xvi. 45. 1 Sat. i. 65).

Our Saviour says of the obstinate Jews that had heard His doctrine and seen His miracles, that they had no cloke (πρόφασιν) for their sins. (John xv. 22.) He means that they had not even any colour or fair show to pretend by way of excuse for their sins. And St. Paul professes not to have used at any time a cloke of covetousness; that is, he did not, under colour of preaching the Gospel, endeavour to make a prey of those to whom he preached, or gain to himself by preaching. Hence we may learn what a base thing it is to be covetously minded. Would the Apostle be so careful to quit himself of the suspicion if the crime were any whit tolerable? To the Ephesians he says, I have coveted no man's silver or gold or apparel. (Acts xx. 33.) To the Corinthians, I have not written these things, that it should be so done to me. (1 Cor. ix. 15.) I was not, neither will I be, burdensome to you; for I seek not yours, but you. (2 Cor. xii. 14.) To the Thessalonians, Neither at any time used we a cloke of covetousness, God is witness. (1 Thess. ii. 5.) He called God in to be his compurgator, which sure he would not do, nisi dignus vindice nodus, if it did not much concern him to stand clear in the eye of the world in that behalf. And he speaketh there of a cloke of covetousness too; for who indeed shameth not to wear it (covetousness) outwardly? No man will profess himself covetous, be he never so wretchedly sordid within; but he will for very shame cast as handsome a cloke as he can over it,—frugality, good husbandry, providence,—some cloke or other, to hide the filthiness of it from the sight of others. But filthy it is still, be it cloked never so honestly. God abhorreth it as a filthy thing: He speaketh well of the covetous, whom God abhorreth. (Ps. x. 3.) Our Apostle hath set a brand of filthiness upon it more than once, calling it filthy lucre, μὴ αἰσχροκερδῆ. (1 Tim. iii. 3. 8. Tit. i. 7.) Yea, so unfit he holdeth it to be found in the priests, that he would not have it, if it were possible, so much as once named, at least not without some stigma upon it, among the saints, Eph. v. 3. Bp. Sanderson, iii. p. 290, cp. i. 115.

6. ἐν βάρει] has a double meaning, as explained by the ancient expositors:—

(1) weighty, in authority. (Chrys.)

(2) burdensome, as requiring pecuniary support from you. (Theodoret.)

Both meanings are well comprised by Theophylact, who says, "We had power to be ἐν βάρει, weighty and burdensome to you, by virtue of our dignity and office as Apostles of Christ; as such we had a right to be honoured, ἐν τιμῇ, ἐν δόξῃ, and also to be maintained by you, and so to be a burden to you. For our dignity claims this at your hands." See also Bengel here.

St. Paul himself combines the two notions of βάρος:—

(1) That of weight in 2 Cor. x. 10, "His letters, they say, are weighty" (βαρεῖαι).

(2) That of a burden, below v. 9, πρὸς τὸ μὴ ἐπιβαρῆσαί τινα, so as not to be burdensome to any, by demanding maintenance; and 2 Thess. iii. 8, where he uses the same words. Compare the similar words of S. Ignatius, Phil. 6, οὐκ ἔχει τις καυχήσασθαι ὅτι ἐβάρησά τινα ἐν μικρῷ ἢ ἐν μεγάλῳ. The Hebrew h 2 Cor. 12. 15. Phil. 2. 17. 1 John 3. 16.

ἐγενήθημεν ἤπιοι ἐν μέσῳ ὑμῶν, ὡς ἂν τροφὸς θάλπῃ τὰ ἑαυτῆς τέκνα, [8] h οὕτως ὁμειρόμενοι ὑμῶν εὐδοκοῦμεν μεταδοῦναι ὑμῖν οὐ μόνον τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὰς ἑαυτῶν ψυχάς, διότι ἀγαπητοὶ ἡμῖν ἐγενήθητε.

i Acts 18. 3. & 20. 34. 1 Cor. 4. 12. 2 Cor. 11. 9. & 12. 13. 2 Thess. 3. 7—9. 1 Tim. 4. 10.

[9] i Μνημονεύετε γὰρ, ἀδελφοὶ, τὸν κόπον ἡμῶν καὶ τὸν μόχθον· νυκτὸς καὶ ἡμέρας ἐργαζόμενοι, πρὸς τὸ μὴ ἐπιβαρῆσαί τινα ὑμῶν, ἐκηρύξαμεν εἰς ὑμᾶς τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τοῦ Θεοῦ.

and Latin languages suggest such a double meaning in reference to the person who is honoured, and to those who honour him.

Thus βαρεῖσθαι, to be burdened, is used for the Hebrew כָּבֵד (cabad, to be heavy) in Exod. vii. 14; and the same Hebrew word is rendered δοξάζεσθαι, to be honoured as grave, Levit. x. 3, and passim. And the Latin proverb "Honos propter onus" is equivalent to "beneficium propter officium."

7. ὡς ἄν] Cp. Luke ix. 57. 1 Cor. xvi. 2. Col. iii. 23. Winer, § 42, p. 275.

— τροφός] a nursing mother, τὴν αὐτὴν τροφὸν καλεῖ καὶ μητέρα. (Theodoret.) Cp. below, v. 11, πατὴρ τέκνα ἑαυτοῦ. As to θάλπῃ, applied to a mother, see Deut. xxii. 6, ἡ μήτηρ θάλπῃ ἐπὶ τῶν νεοσσῶν.

This bold figure may have been suggested by Isaiah, lx. 16, speaking to the Church, "Thou shalt suck the breast of kings."

Behold the love of the Apostle, he does not disdain to call himself a mother. (Cp. Gal. iv. 19.) He is both a nurse and a mother. He unites both persons in one. For there are some nurses who cherish, but not their own children; and there are some mothers who put out their children to nurse, and do not cherish their offspring. Augustine (Serm. 23). The Apostle, inspired by the Holy Spirit of love, when he would give the most affecting proof of tenderness, compares himself to a mother nursing her children. A practical lesson to all Christian mothers. Would any of them willingly forfeit the privilege of being like the divine Apostle? Let them imitate the love of him, who resorts to their presumed practice for the most affecting expression of his own ardent love to his spiritual children.

The duty of nursing children lies at the root of all household charities; and the neglect of it has led to great evils. There may be cases where this duty cannot be performed; but sometimes it is omitted for the pleasures of society. And yet what society ought to be preferred by a mother to that of her child? St. Paul exhorts married women to love their children, and to be keepers at home, οἰκουρούς (Titus ii. 5), and, among qualifications for a Widow, to be enrolled on the list and maintained by the alms of the Church, he mentions that she shall have nursed her children (εἰ ἐτεκνοτρόφησεν, 1 Tim. v. 10).

In Holy Scripture the blessings of the breast are joined with the blessings of the womb. (Gen. xlix. 25.) So are the curses: "Give them a miscarrying womb and dry breasts." (Hos. ix. 14.) The Holy Spirit does not disdain to mention, concerning some of the greatest Saints, that they were nursed by their own mothers: "Who would have said unto Abraham that Sarah should have given children suck?" (Gen. xxi. 7, 8.) God mercifully interfered to procure this blessing to Moses (Exod. ii. 9); so it was with Samuel (1 Sam. i. 22, 23), and with David (Ps. xxii. 9); and the Infant Jesus hung upon His mother's breasts in the Stable at Bethlehem, and in the journey into Egypt.

Cp. Bp. Taylor, vol. iv. p. 157, ed. Heber, and his Discourse in his Life of Christ, "On the duty of nursing children," vol. ii. p. 30.

8. ὁμειρόμενοι] So A, B, C, D, E, F, G, and many Cursives, Griesb., Scholz, Lach., Tisch., Lünemann, Alf., Ellicott. Elz. has ἱμειρόμενοι.

Some Editors suppose with Winer (§ 16, p. 92) that ὁμειρόμενοι is only another form of μειρόμενοι from μείρομαι, used by Nicander (Theriac. 402) for ἱμείρομαι, to desire, as ὀδύρομαι for δύρομαι, ὀκέλλω for κέλλω. But these are not cases in point. Nor has any instance been cited of such a modification with the ὁ aspirated as in ὁμείρομαι.

The evidence of the MSS. in favour of ὁμειρόμενοι is irresistible.

After all that has been said on the subject in modern times, it appears probable that the true account of the word has been given by Theophylact, who says, "Some here read ἱμειρόμενοι, and explain the word by ἐπιθυμοῦντες, desiring, but this is erroneous. Ὁμειρόμενοι signifies προσδεδεμένοι, bound to, twined together with you, and clinging to you, from ὁμοῦ and εἴρω, συμπλέκω."

It is true that the exposition of ὁμειρόμενοι, as equivalent to desiring, rests on high authority, that of the Vulg., Syriac, and Æthiopic Versions, and of Hesych., Phavorin., Winer, Lünemann, Alford. But Theophylact's knowledge of the dialects of Northern Greece entitles his testimony to consideration, and his explanation is confirmed by that of Œcumenius, ἀντεχόμενοι ὑμῶν, and Photius.

Besides, the Apostle is describing his affection towards them when he was present with them, and not when absent from them; and ἱμείρομαι, like the Latin word desidero, signifies a craving for something absent.

The Apostle is comparing himself to a nursing mother in a special act, that of θάλπειν, cherishing her own children. This is not an act of desire, but of love.

His words may be thus paraphrased: "We were made (by God's grace) to be gentle among you, as a nursing mother cherisheth her own children, so clinging to you, and interwoven, as it were, with you, and hanging over you in the yearnings of our love, we were well pleased to give you the milk of the Gospel, as to new-born babes in Christ (cp. 1 Pet. ii. 2, τὸ λογικὸν ἄδολον γάλα, provided for ἀρτιγέννητα βρέφη), and our own lives also."

It has indeed been said, that if ὁμειρόμενοι has this sense, it ought to be followed by a dative, and not by a genitive, as here.

But ὁμείρομαι, in the sense of ἅπτομαι and ἔχομαι, to communicate with, so as to hang on an object, may rightly take a genitive. See Matth. G. G. § 359, where συλλαμβάνεσθαι, συνάρασθαι, and ἅπτεσθαι, and ἔχεσθαι are illustrated as having this regimen; and § 359, where words signifying communion with have a genitive after them. Cp. Kühner, § 519, 520.

— ἐγενήθητε] ye were made. (See i. 5.) So the best MSS. and Editions. Elz. has γεγένησθε.

9. κόπον καὶ μόχθον] Not synonyms. Cp. 2 Thess. iii. 8. 2 Cor. xi. 27, where they are similarly joined together; κόπος being always put first, as representing the act of hewing (κόπτω) wood, whereas μόχθος (ὄχθος, ἄχθος, ἔχω) is that of carrying the logs after they have been hewn. The former word expresses energy of action, the other indicates patience in bearing.

— νυκτὸς καὶ ἡμέρας] night and day. So iii. 10, and 2 Thess. iii. 8, and 1 Tim. v. 5. 2 Tim. i. 3. In all these cases St. Paul puts the night before the day.

St. Luke puts day before night in Acts ix. 24; but not where he relates two speeches of St. Paul, there the night is put before the day, as in St. Paul's Epistles. (See Acts xx. 31; xxvi. 7.)

St. Luke in his Gospel once uses the Jewish mode of speaking in this respect, which was that adopted by St. Paul. See Luke ii. 37, where he is writing of what took place at Jerusalem. But compare Luke xviii. 7.

St. Mark puts the night first, iv. 27; v. 5.

It is observable that St. John, in the Apocalypse, uses the expression ἡμέρας καὶ νυκτὸς five times (iv. 8; vii. 15; xii. 10; xiv. 11; xx. 10), and never puts the night first.

This remark may serve to confirm what has been said above concerning St. John's mode of reckoning the hours of the day, as distinguished from that usual in Palestine, where time was calculated from sunset; and may serve to illustrate the important questions in his Gospel which turn on this point. See on John xix. 14.

— ἐργαζόμενοι] working, with manual labour, probably in tent-making. See on Acts xviii. 3, εἰργάζετο: 1 Cor. iv. 12, and ix. 6, where ἐργάζεσθαι stands absolutely as here.

St. Paul worked in the night (νυκτὸς genitive) as well as day; he worked for part of the night, in order that he might preach during the day.

It may perhaps be inquired,

How was he able to defray the expenses of his voyage from Macedonia to Athens? and at Athens, where he does not appear to have worked, it is said he spent the whole day in the Agora. (Acts xvii. 17.)

The answer is,—he received pecuniary supplies from Philippi. See the remarkable testimony Phil. iv. 15, 16: "At the beginning of my preaching the Gospel (in Greece), when I set forth from Macedonia, no Church communicated with me in respect of giving and receiving, but ye only. For when I was at Thessalonica, ye sent to me once and again for my necessities."

It appears that St. Paul worked for his daily maintenance at Thessalonica, and that the Thessalonians, with whom St. Paul was present, and to whom he preached, did not maintain him, 10 j Ὑμεῖς μάρτυρες καὶ ὁ Θεὸς, ὡς ὁσίως καὶ δικαίως καὶ ἀμέμπτως ὑμῖν τοῖς πιστεύουσιν ἐγενήθημεν, 11 καθάπερ οἴδατε, ὡς ἕνα ἕκαστον ὑμῶν, ὡς πατὴρ τέκνα ἑαυτοῦ, παρακαλοῦντες ὑμᾶς καὶ παραμυθούμενοι, k καὶ μαρτυρόμενοι 12 εἰς τὸ περιπατεῖν ὑμᾶς ἀξίως τοῦ Θεοῦ, τοῦ καλοῦντος ὑμᾶς εἰς τὴν ἑαυτοῦ βασιλείαν καὶ δόξαν.

13 l Διὰ τοῦτο καὶ ἡμεῖς εὐχαριστοῦμεν τῷ Θεῷ ἀδιαλείπτως, ὅτι παραλαβόντες λόγον ἀκοῆς παρ' ἡμῶν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐδέξασθε, οὐ λόγον ἀνθρώπων, ἀλλὰ, καθώς ἐστιν ἀληθῶς, λόγον Θεοῦ, ὃς καὶ ἐνεργεῖται ἐν ὑμῖν τοῖς πιστεύουσιν.

14 m Ὑμεῖς γὰρ μιμηταὶ ἐγενήθητε, ἀδελφοὶ, τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν τοῦ Θεοῦ τῶν οὐσῶν ἐν τῇ Ἰουδαίᾳ ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ, ὅτι τὰ αὐτὰ ἐπάθετε καὶ ὑμεῖς ὑπὸ τῶν ἰδίων συμφυλετῶν, καθὼς καὶ αὐτοὶ ὑπὸ τῶν Ἰουδαίων, 15 n τῶν καὶ τὸν Κύριον ἀποj Acts 20. 18, 26, 33, 34. 2 Cor. 4. 2. & 5. 11. & 11. 11, 31. 2 Thess. 3. 7. 1 Tim. 4. 10. 2 Tim. 3. 10. Tit. 2. 7, 8.

k Eph. 4. 1. Phil. 1. 27. Col. 1. 10. 1 Matt. 10. 40. Gal. 4. 14.
m Acts 13. 45. & 17. 5, 13. Heb. 10. 34. n Matt. 23. 34, 37. Luke 13. 33. Acts 7. 52.

---

and the Philippians sent him supplies to Thessalonica, and the Macedonians sent him supplies to Corinth.

The reason of this seems to be, that while he was present, St. Paul waived his own claim to receive pecuniary aid from those to whom he preached, lest he should seem to preach the Gospel for lucre (see v. 5), and so impede its progress.

But he did not forbid those whom he left in charge behind him,—for instance, St. Luke at Philippi, and Silas and Timothy in other cities of Macedonia (Acts xviii. 5. 2 Cor. viii. 1—5),—to stir up the Christian charity of their flocks, and to excite them to exercise their gratitude and love to Christ by sending supplies to the Apostle.

10. ὁσίως καὶ δικαίως] holily and justly. On the difference of these words see on Luke i. 75, and Bengel here: "Sanctè in rebus divinis, justè erga homines."

— ἀμέμπτως] unblameably. See on Phil. iv. 8, ὅσα εὔφημα.

— ὑμῖν τοῖς πιστεύουσιν] in regard to you who are believers, whatsoever we may have seemed to be to the unbelieving, by whom we were evil spoken of.

11. ὡς ἕνα ἕκαστον ὑμῶν . . . παραμυθούμενοι] After these words the verb ἐγενήθημεν is to be supplied from the previous clause, "As ye know how we were made, i. e. behaved ourselves, exhorting you, and comforting you one by one, as a father does his children."

— μαρτυρόμενοι] protesting, charging, conjuring, 'quasi testibus adhibitis,' 'testificati' (Vulg.). So D, E, I, K, Chrys., Œc., Damasc.; and so Matthæi, Fritz., Bloomf., Lünem., Alf.—Elz. has μαρτυρούμενοι. There is a similar confusion in the MSS. in Acts xxvi. 22, where the sense is the same as here. Cp. Acts xx. 26. Gal. v. 3, μαρτύρομαι παντὶ κ.τ.λ.

12. περιπατεῖν] to walk. So A, B, D, F, G, and Lach., Tisch., Alf., Ellicott.—Elz. περιπατῆσαι, which is not so forcible, as not expressing a settled purpose and constant practice. On εἰς τὸ cp. ii. 2.

13. παραλαβόντες—ἐδέξασθε κ.τ.λ.] Mark the difference between παραλαμβάνω and δέχομαι. We thank God that, having received the word of hearing (or the Gospel) of God from us, ye accepted it (ἐδέξασθε), not the word of men (do not suppose that), but, as it is in truth, the Word of God, which (is not only heard, but also) worketh in you that believe. Ye accepted it, as one accepts and grasps with the right hand (δεξιὰ) what is most welcome: so ye clasped it with the hand of Faith.

Do not imagine that we thank God that you received our word as such; no, what we thank God for, is, that you accepted His Word from us.

— λόγον ἀκοῆς] the word of hearing, the word of which the essential characteristic and quality is, that it should not only be preached, but heard and obeyed; it is "verbum audientiæ et obedientiæ."

The Genitive ἀκοῆς may be called the characterizing Genitive; and this use of the Genitive—a use derived from the Hebrew (see examples on Matt. xxi. 11), is far more convenient and expressive than that of an Adjective, because it brings out the single point to which the speaker's or writer's mind is specially directed, and to which he desires to direct the minds of his hearers or readers.

The Gospel preached, τὸ κήρυγμα (Theophyl.), is called the word of hearing, in order to bring out more clearly the duty of all men to hearken to it; and in order to show that the Gospel is eminently that Word which is worthy and necessary to be heard by all who desire to be saved. "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear." (Matt. xiii. 9.) See below, on Heb. iv. 2, ὁ λόγος τῆς ἀκοῆς.

The Apostle thus guards the Church against the dangerous error—too prevalent in later times—which treats the Gospel merely as the Word of Preaching, when it is more especially the Word of Hearing; and though the duties of Preachers are important, yet those of the Hearers are not less so.

— καὶ ἐνεργεῖται] and is also internally and effectually energetic, and produces good fruit; it is to be construed with λόγος. See 2 Thess. ii. 7. Rom. vii. 5. Col. i. 29. Winer, § 38, p. 231.

On a review of what St. Paul says in these two chapters (i. 2—ii. 14) concerning the rapid reception of the Gospel at Thessalonica, and comparing this record with the account of St. Paul's visit to that city in Acts xvii. 1—9, it will appear surprising that so much was effected there as he here relates.

The explanation seems to be offered by a consideration,

(1) of the miraculous gifts possessed by the Apostle and his companions in speaking with tongues, and in healing; and the spiritual gifts bestowed by them on those who were baptized; and the outpouring of the Holy Spirit on the Gentiles, as on the Jews at Pentecost, when so many thousands were converted at once. (Acts ii. 41.)

(2) The intelligence of what had been done for the Gospel at Philippi.

(3) The labours of Silas and Timotheus, and of St. Luke, who were left behind by St. Paul in Macedonia.

(4) The organization of a standing Ministry by St. Paul. See above, Introduction, § iii. and § iv.

14. συμφυλετῶν] fellow-countrymen. ὁμοεθνῶν (Hesych.).

You Gentile Christians in Greece suffered the same afflictions from your fellow-countrymen the Gentiles as the Jewish Christians in Judæa did from theirs the Jews. Cp. Heb. x. 34.

Yet St. Paul, in the following verse, has evidently his mind fixed on the Jews, as the most inveterate enemies of the Gospel.

This seeming difficulty is cleared up by the History of the Acts of the Apostles;

In Judæa the Jews were the main authors of all the early persecutions of the Church.

The Roman Power there abstained from persecution. See note on Acts iv. 6.

Beyond the limits of Palestine, the Jews had little political power, and were in many places objects of antipathy to the Greek and Roman people, and suffered oppression from the secular authority. They had been lately expelled from Rome by the Emperor Claudius, when St. Paul wrote this Epistle. (Acts xviii. 2.)

The Jews also appear to have been regarded with special detestation at Philippi, a Roman colony, where the Apostle and Silas were not persecuted as Christians, but as Jews. (Acts xvi. 20.)

We find, however, that the Jews, wherever they were not able in their own persons to persecute the Christians, were every where active and indefatigable in endeavouring to stir up the Heathen to persecute them. See, for example, what St. Paul suffered by means of the Jews at Antioch in Pisidia (Acts xiii. 50), at Iconium (xiv 2), at Lystra (xiv. 19), at Thessalonica (xvii. 5), at Berœa (xvii. 13), at Ephesus (xix. 33).

The Heathen fellow-countrymen of the Thessalonian Gentile Christians persecuted them; but they had been set in motion against them by the Jews, on the plea that the Gospel taught that there was some "other king than Cæsar" (Acts xvii. 7).

The Jews had brought about the Crucifixion of Christ by representing Him to be a rival of Cæsar (John xix. 12. 15). They employed the same policy against the first preachers of the Gospel. They alarmed the suspicions, and exasperated the passions of the Roman Magistrates against them, on the ground that they were disloyal to the Roman Government, and looked for the dissolution of that Imperial Sovereignty which Rome believed to be eternal. See on 2 Thess. ii. 5—7.

Hence it is, that, though St. Paul speaks here of the suffer-κτεινάντων Ἰησοῦν, καὶ τοὺς προφήτας, καὶ ἡμᾶς ἐκδιωξάντων, καὶ Θεῷ μὴ

o Luke 11. 52. Acts 13. 50. & 14. 5, 19. & 17. 5, 13. & 18. 12. & 19. 9. & 22. 21, 22. Matt. 23. 32. ἀρεσκόντων, καὶ πᾶσιν ἀνθρώποις ἐναντίων, 16 o κωλυόντων ἡμᾶς τοῖς ἔθνεσι λαλῆσαι ἵνα σωθῶσιν, εἰς τὸ ἀναπληρῶσαι αὐτῶν τὰς ἁμαρτίας πάντοτε· ἔφθα-σε δὲ ἐπ' αὐτοὺς ἡ ὀργὴ εἰς τέλος.

17 Ἡμεῖς δέ, ἀδελφοί, ἀπορφανισθέντες ἀφ' ὑμῶν πρὸς καιρὸν ὥρας προσώπῳ οὐ καρδίᾳ περισσοτέρως ἐσπουδάσαμεν τὸ πρόσωπον ὑμῶν ἰδεῖν ἐν πολλῇ ἐπιp Rom. 1. 13. & 15. 22.
θυμίᾳ. 18 p Διότι ἠθελήσαμεν ἐλθεῖν πρὸς ὑμᾶς, ἐγὼ μὲν Παῦλος καὶ ἅπαξ καὶ δίς, καὶ ἐνέκοψεν ἡμᾶς ὁ Σατανᾶς.

---

ings endured by the Gentile Christians at Thessalonica from their own fellow-countrymen, he passes on from them to speak of the Jews as the authors of the evil.

15. τοὺς προφήτας] the Prophets. Elz. inserts ἰδίους after τούς. But the reading in the text is in A, B, D*, E, F, G, and is preferable also on this account, because ἰδίους might seem to involve a concession that (as was afterwards alleged by the Marcionites) the Prophets belonged to the Jews, and not also to the Church of Christ. It is affirmed by Tertullian (c. Marcion. v. 15) that the word ἰδίους is a Marcionite interpretation: 'suos adjectio est hæretici.'

— ἡμᾶς ἐκδιωξάντων] having persecuted us out of Thessalonica (Acts xvii. 5—10, and elsewhere; see on v. 14).

— πᾶσιν ἀνθρώποις ἐναντίων] contrary to all men. The Jews are opposed to all men, in that they hinder the progress of the Gospel which is designed for the salvation of all men.

16. ἔφθασε δὲ ἐπ' αὐτοὺς ἡ ὀργὴ εἰς τέλος] but the wrath (of God) came upon them to the uttermost.

They vented their wrath against Christ and His Church, and their own Prophets, but (δὲ) when they most indulged their own rage, then the wrath of God came upon them to the uttermost; ἡ ὀργὴ, 'the wrath,' i. e. of God. In using the definite article ἡ, he means that dreadful wrath which the Jews merited, and which was foretold by the Prophets (Theophyl.), and which they brought down on themselves.

ἔφθασε, came upon them and overtook them with a sudden surprise when they did not expect it. See on Matt. xii. 28. Dan. vii. 22, ὁ καιρὸς ἔφθασε.

The aorist ἔφθασε points to the time of the act mentioned in the previous verse. Then, when they wreaked their own wrath on the Just One, and killed the Lord Jesus, they filled up the measure of their fathers' iniquities (see Matt. xxiii. 32—38. Luke xi. 51; xiii. 35), and then God gave them the cup of his wrath to drink to the dregs, εἰς τέλος, on which expression see note on Luke xviii. 5, and compare the use of it by the LXX in Ps. xii. 1; xv. 11; xliii. 23; lxxiii. 4, ἔπαρον τὰς χεῖράς σου ἐπὶ τὰς ὑπερηφανίας αὐτῶν εἰς τέλος, and cii. 9.

Then when they crucified the Son of God they brought bloodguiltiness not only upon themselves, but upon their children; The Wrath of God therefore coming upon them to the utmost, and the curse of God abiding upon their posterity even unto this day. Bp. Sanderson (iii. p. 67).

The 69th Psalm, which contains the declarations of Messiah the King speaking from the Cross as from a Judgment Seat, and pronouncing sentence on the Jews for their sin in rejecting and crucifying Him, affords the best comment on St. Paul's words. See particularly Ps. lxix. 21—29. Be it remembered also the Jews imprecated God's wrath upon themselves when they said, "His blood be upon us, and on our children" (Matt. xxvii. 25).

17. ἀπορφανισθέντες] bereaved, as a parent of his children, by separation from you. He preserves the comparison of himself to a nursing mother (v. 7) in tender affection and fostering care, and to a father in discipline and guidance (v. 11).

Our Lord had applied the word ὀρφανοὺς to His disciples bereft of his presence (John xiv. 18). St. Paul, in his humility, speaks of their loss as his own; He their spiritual parent is the ὀρφανός.

The word is used of parents by Pindar (Olymp. ix. 92), ὀρφανὸς γενεᾶς, so ἀπωρφανισμένοι Æschyl. (Choeph. 247). Hesych. ἐστερημένος τέκνων (Wetstein, Lünem.). So Latin 'orbi.'

Some ancient expositors (Chrys. and Theodoret) suppose that St. Paul here, in his longing to return to the Thessalonians as soon as he was bereaved of their presence, has changed his metaphor, and compares himself to a child suddenly made an orphan, and longing to see his parents again; and perhaps, in impatience of absence, and eagerness of desire for return, the character and position of the orphan child seems to afford more tender and endearing features for the comparison than that of the childless parent.

But the word ἀδελφοί, 'brethren,' prefixed to ἀπορφανισθέντες may be intended to indicate that neither meaning of ἀπορφανισθέντες is to be pressed too closely.

— πρὸς καιρὸν ὥρας] for the season of an hour; a brief season, "horæ momentum" (Horat. 1 Serm. i. 7), as πρὸς ὥραν 2 Cor. vii. 8. Gal. ii. 5. Philem. 15, ἐχωρίσθη πρὸς ὥραν, and πρὸς καιρὸν Luke viii. 13. Cp. Rev. xvii. 12.

The Septuagint unite καιρὸς and ὥραι in Gen. xviii. 10, κατὰ τὸν καιρὸν τοῦτον, εἰς ὥρας, and v. 14, εἰς τὸν καιρὸν τοῦτον, εἰς ὥρας, where ὥρα marks more precisely what is meant by καιρός.

The sense is:

As soon as we were separated from you, although only for a short season, and though we were severed from you in person, and not in spirit, we immediately began to long vehemently to return to you (Theodoret, Chrys., Theophyl.).

On περισσοτέρως, more earnestly than if we had not been separated, see Winer, p. 217.

18. Διότι] on which account. So A, B, D*, F, G, Lachm., Alf., Ellicott.—Elz. has διό.

— ἠθελήσαμεν] we willed to come. A stronger word than ἐβουλόμην, which signifies 'I was wishing' (see 2 Cor. i. 17). It was my θέλημα to come. The difference of the words βούλομαι and θέλω is clearly marked by St. Paul (Philem. 13), ὃν ἐγὼ ἐβουλόμην κατέχειν, it was my wish to keep him; χωρὶς δὲ τῆς σῆς γνώμης οὐδὲν ἠθέλησα ποιῆσαι, but it was my will to do nothing without thy judgment. Cp. below on 1 Pet. iv. 3.

— ἐγὼ μὲν Παῦλος καὶ ἅπαξ καὶ δίς] I, indeed, Paul, both once and twice. If these words had not been inserted, limiting what he has just written to Paul himself, it might perhaps have been alleged that there is a discrepancy between his words and the History of the Acts. For Silas and Timotheus (who are associated with him in writing the Epistle) remained in Macedonia, (and one of them, Timotheus, came to Paul from Thessalonica,) after he had quitted it. See Acts xviii. 5, and below, iii. 2—6.

— ἐνέκοψεν ἡμᾶς ὁ Σατανᾶς] Satan hindered us. On the meaning of ἐγκόπτω see Gal. v. 7. He here says that he was hindered from coming to Thessalonica, and by Satan. And yet his prevention from going to preach in Asia and Bithynia is ascribed to the Holy Ghost (Acts xvi. 6, 7). See also what he says to the Romans (Rom. xv. 22), ἐνεκοπτόμην τοῦ ἐλθεῖν πρὸς ὑμᾶς, and i. 13, ἐκωλύθην ἄχρι τοῦ δεῦρο, where he uses the word προεθέμην, 'I purposed to come to you.'

How is this to be explained?

The answer seems to be;

St. Paul prayed for divine direction in his ministerial labours; and he received it. He prayed that the thorn in his flesh might be removed from him (2 Cor. xii. 7), and God revealed to him that it would not be removed, and declared to him the reason of this dispensation.

St. Paul's will was conformed to the will of God. And wherever he declares that he had a deliberate will and settled purpose to do any thing, it may be concluded that he had God's permission and direction to do it.

This was the case with regard to his return to Thessalonica, and also to his visit to Rome. He declares that after unceasing prayer (iii. 10) he willed to do the one (v. 18), and purposed to do the other.

This will and purpose of the holy Apostle, praying for God's guidance, and filled with the Holy Ghost, may be regarded as no other than the will and purpose of God.

Therefore all obstructions to the execution of that will and that purpose might justly be regarded and described as impediments and interruptions (ἐγκοπαί) of Satan.

They were (as S. Basil observes, Reg. brevior 275) trials (allowed by God) of his patience and perseverance, for the quickening of his zeal, and for the exercise of prayer and his growth in grace. Accordingly we find that he never renounced his will to return to Thessalonica, and never abandoned his purpose of visiting Rome. He persevered in both designs, and after much endeavour and conflict, he overcame the obstructions of q 2 Cor. 1. 14. Phil. 2. 16. & 4. 1.

19 [q] Τίς γὰρ ἡμῶν ἐλπὶς ἢ χαρὰ ἢ στέφανος καυχήσεως; ἢ οὐχὶ καὶ ὑμεῖς ἔμπροσθεν τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐν τῇ αὐτοῦ παρουσίᾳ; 20 Ὑμεῖς γάρ ἐστε ἡ δόξα ἡμῶν καὶ ἡ χαρά.

III. 1 [a] Διὸ μηκέτι στέγοντες εὐδοκήσαμεν καταλειφθῆναι ἐν Ἀθήναις μόνοι, 2 [b] καὶ ἐπέμψαμεν Τιμόθεον τὸν ἀδελφὸν ἡμῶν καὶ συνεργὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν τῷ εὐαγγελίῳ τοῦ Χριστοῦ, εἰς τὸ στηρίξαι ὑμᾶς καὶ παρακαλέσαι ὑπὲρ τῆς πίστεως ὑμῶν, 3 [c] τὸ μηδένα σαίνεσθαι ἐν ταῖς θλίψεσι ταύταις· αὐτοὶ γὰρ οἴδατε ὅτι εἰς τοῦτο κείμεθα. 4 Καὶ γὰρ ὅτε πρὸς ὑμᾶς ἦμεν, προελέγομεν ὑμῖν ὅτι μέλλομεν θλίβεσθαι, καθὼς καὶ ἐγένετο, καὶ οἴδατε.

a ver. 5. Acts 17. 15. 2 Cor. 2. 13. & 11. 29, 30. b Acts 16. 1. Rom. 16. 21. Phil. 2. 19. c Acts 14. 22. Eph. 3. 13. 2 Tim. 3. 11, 12. 1 Pet. 2. 21. & 4. 12.

5 [d] Διὰ τοῦτο κἀγὼ μηκέτι στέγων ἔπεμψα εἰς τὸ γνῶναι τὴν πίστιν ὑμῶν, μή πως ἐπείρασεν ὑμᾶς ὁ πειράζων, καὶ εἰς κενὸν γένηται ὁ κόπος ἡμῶν.

d Phil. 2. 16. Gal. 2. 2. & 4. 11.

Satan, and accomplished both purposes. Cp. Acts xix. 21; xx. 1; xxiii. 11; xxviii. 14. 16.

But this was not the case with regard to going to Bithynia. See Acts xvi. 7.

There it is said that he was assaying to go into Bithynia, and the Spirit of Jesus interfered to restrain him.

But there was no such interference to control his will and purpose to return to Thessalonica and to visit Rome.

On the contrary, it is expressly recorded that he had special directions for the latter (Acts xxiii. 11), and doubtless also for the former.

This subject is fraught with instruction, as revealing to us views of the unseen working of the spiritual powers of Good and Evil in the affairs of the Church, and also of the holy Apostle's insight into that mysterious working, and of his continual communion with the Holy Spirit in all his plans and purposes for preaching of the Gospel of Christ.

— ὁ Σατανᾶς] Satan. This mention of Satan, the Hebrew name of the Tempter, the Devil (see Matt. iv. 10), in this St. Paul's first Epistle, and this to a Gentile Church (cp. 2 Thess. ii. 9), deserves notice, especially when considered together with the fact above mentioned (i. 9), that he never quotes directly from the Old Testament in these two Epistles to the Thessalonians.

How then had the Thessalonians been made acquainted with the name and character of the Evil Spirit? Probably by St. Paul's oral teaching; and probably also by a written Gospel. And of all the Gospels there is none which speaks so clearly concerning the personality and operations of the Tempter, under the name of Satan, as the Gospel written for the special use of the Greeks by St. Paul's fellow-traveller St. Luke. See Luke x. 18; xi. 18; xiii. 16; xxii. 3. 31. See above, on i. 9.

To the Gentile Christians the Gospel was made known before the Law; and they were familiar with the New Testament before the Old. Indeed, they read the Law through the Gospel, and not the Gospel through the Law. They heard of Satan first, as they heard of God and Christ, from the Apostles and Evangelists; and therefore it may well be said that the Universal Church is built first on Apostles and then on Prophets. (Eph. ii. 20.)

19. τίς ἐλπὶς—στέφανος καυχήσεως;] what hope—and crown of rejoicing? The words of the parent concerning his offspring. (Chrys.) "These are my jewels," as the Roman mother, Cornelia, said of her offspring. Cp. Prov. xvii. 6, στέφανος γερόντων τέκνα τέκνων, καύχημα δὲ τέκνων πατέρες αὐτῶν.

— καὶ ὑμεῖς] you also, as well as others; he thus shows that he does not forget others in writing so affectionately to them. (Chrys., Theophyl.) Cp. Col. ii. 1.

Ch. III. 1. μηκέτι στέγοντες] no longer able to forbear, 'non amplius sustinentes.' (Vulg.) On the sense of στέγω, said properly of a vessel which neither lets in a leak nor allows water to ooze out, see 1 Cor. ix. 12, πάντα στέγομεν, and xiii. 7, ἀγάπη πάντα στέγει.

2. ἐπέμψαμεν Τιμόθεον] we sent Timothy from Athens, to which place St. Paul had desired Silas and Timothy to come to him from Macedonia as speedily as they could (Acts xvii. 15), and to which place Timothy came.

After St. Paul had quitted Athens and had come to Corinth, he was rejoined by Silas and Timothy there (Acts xviii. 5), and this Epistle was written from that city; and Silas and Timothy are associated with him in writing it, and also in writing the second Epistle to the Thessalonians. See 1 Thess. i. 1, and 2 Thess. i. 1 and note there.

— καὶ συνεργόν] and fellow-worker. Elz. inserts διάκονον τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ between καὶ and συνεργόν, and reads ἡμῶν for τοῦ Θεοῦ after συνεργόν. The reading in the text is authorized by D. Clar., Germ., and Vulg., and is received by Griesb., Lach., Tisch., Lünem., Alf., Ellicott. The reading συνεργὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν τῷ εὐαγγελίῳ is also confirmed by St. Paul himself, 1 Cor. iii. 9, Θεοῦ γάρ ἐσμεν συνεργοί. St. Paul commends Timothy as being a brother to himself (cp. Heb. xiii. 23), and a fellow-worker with God in the Gospel.

He shows his love to the Thessalonians by resolving to deprive himself of so efficient a fellow-labourer as Timothy for their benefit, and to be left alone (καταλειφθῆναι, de-relinqui, a stronger word than λειφθῆναι) in Athens, where he had no one to assist and comfort him in his work.

This spirit of disinterestedness and self-sacrifice was characteristic of the Apostle; and he was consistent in this respect even to the end. See the similar trait in one of his latest Epistles also in reference to Timothy. Phil. ii. 19—23, and 2 Tim. iv. 12.

— στηρίξαι] to confirm: this was very soon after Timothy's first association with St. Paul, and may serve to refute the assertion of some modern Expositors, imputing timidity to Timothy.

— ὑπέρ] in behalf of. See 2 Cor. xii. 19, λαλοῦμεν ὑπὲρ τῆς ὑμῶν οἰκοδομῆς, and below, 2 Thess. ii. 1, ὑπὲρ τῆς παρουσίας. Cp. Winer, p. 342, 3. Elz. has περί, but ὑπὲρ is found in A, B, D*, E*, F, G, K.

3. τὸ μηδένα σαίνεσθαι] This was to be the purport and subject of Timothy's παράκλησις or exhortation, and depends on παρακαλέσαι. And so Theodoret, who says, παρακαλέσαι φέρειν γενναίως τὰς τῶν ἐναντίων ἐπιβουλὰς, καὶ μὴ κλονεῖσθαι. Cp. iv. 1, παρελάβετε τὸ πῶς δεῖ ὑμᾶς περιπατεῖν. Τὸ is the reading of A, B, D, E, I, K.—Elz. has τῷ.

On the use of the definite article τὸ prefixed to the infinitive so as to introduce and bring out more forcibly a proposition which is the subject of the writer's thoughts, compare 1 Cor. iv. 6. 2 Cor. x. 2, δέομαι τὸ μὴ παρὼν θαρρῆσαι. Phil. ii. 6. 13; iv. 10, and note on Mark ix. 23. Winer, § 44, p. 288.

— σαίνεσθαι] to be shaken, to waver. From root σείω. The word σαίνειν is usually applied to an animal gently wagging the tail; "leniter atterens caudam," Horat. Homer, Odyss. κ. 216. Aristoph. Equit. 1028, κέρκῳ σαίνων. Lucian, Dial. xii. 2, οἱ λέοντες σαίνουσί με. Wetstein. Blomfield, Æsch. S. c. Theb. 379.

It is also explained by σαλεύεσθαι and ταράττεσθαι in Hesych., and by Theophylact on this passage, who says, "the Evil One, when he finds an opportunity of temptation, endeavours to shake the unstable by suggestions of ease, in order that they may fly from trial." Perhaps, as he suggests, the metaphor of an animal wagging his tail and fawning, in order that he may bite (as a λαιβαργὸς κύων), is not to be lost sight of here.

The sense would then be, "I sent Timothy to you in order to confirm and exhort you in behalf of your faith, that none of you should be beguiled in your sufferings by the blandishments of the Tempter, the Lion who goes about seeking whom he may devour (1 Pet. v. 8, cp. v. 5), and sometimes alarms by roaring, and sometimes allures by fawning."

An example of the need of such a warning was seen in the case of Demas, who was allured by the love of this world, and forsook Paul in his sufferings at Rome, and departed to Thessalonica. (2 Tim. iv. 10.) The Devil is often more to be feared when he fawns (σαίνει τῇ οὐρᾷ) than when he roars (ὠρύεται τῷ στόματι). The man of God from Judah overcame Satan at Bethel, but he was ensnared by him under the oak-tree. (1 Kings xiii. 14.) David vanquished Satan in the battle-field (1 Sam. xvii. 49), but was vanquished by him in the cool of the evening on the house-top. (2 Sam. xi. 2.)

5. ἔπεμψα εἰς τὸ γνῶναι] I sent him in order that I might know. The Apostle does not profess to know all things, even those things that he most wished to know. But he does profess

[d] Ἄρτι δὲ ἐλθόντος Τιμοθέου πρὸς ἡμᾶς ἀφ' ὑμῶν, καὶ εὐαγγελισαμένου ἡμῖν
e 1 Cor. 11. 2. Col. 4. 18. 2 Tim. 1. 3. Heb. 13. 3, 7.
τὴν πίστιν καὶ τὴν ἀγάπην ὑμῶν, [e] καὶ ὅτι ἔχετε μνείαν ἡμῶν ἀγαθὴν πάντοτε ἐπιποθοῦντες ἡμᾶς ἰδεῖν, καθάπερ καὶ ἡμεῖς ὑμᾶς, [7] διὰ τοῦτο παρεκλήθημεν, ἀδελφοί, ἐφ' ὑμῖν, ἐπὶ πάσῃ τῇ ἀνάγκῃ καὶ θλίψει ἡμῶν, διὰ τῆς ὑμῶν πίστεως·
[8] ὅτι νῦν ζῶμεν ἐὰν ὑμεῖς στήκητε ἐν Κυρίῳ.

[9] Τίνα γὰρ εὐχαριστίαν δυνάμεθα τῷ Θεῷ ἀνταποδοῦναι περὶ ὑμῶν, ἐπὶ πάσῃ
f Rom. 1. 10—12. & 15. 23. 2 Cor. 1. 15, 24. & 13. 9, 11. Phil. 1. 25.
τῇ χαρᾷ ᾗ χαίρομεν δι' ὑμᾶς ἔμπροσθεν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἡμῶν, [10] [f] νυκτὸς καὶ ἡμέρας ὑπερεκπερισσοῦ δεόμενοι εἰς τὸ ἰδεῖν ὑμῶν τὸ πρόσωπον, καὶ καταρτίσαι τὰ ὑστερήματα τῆς πίστεως ὑμῶν; [11] Αὐτὸς δὲ ὁ Θεὸς καὶ Πατὴρ ἡμῶν, καὶ ὁ g ch. 5. 15. 2 Pet. 1. 7.
Κύριος ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς κατευθύναι τὴν ὁδὸν ἡμῶν πρὸς ὑμᾶς· [12] [g] ὑμᾶς δὲ ὁ Κύριος πλεονάσαι καὶ περισσεύσαι τῇ ἀγάπῃ εἰς ἀλλήλους καὶ εἰς πάντας, h 1 Cor. 1. 8. Phil. 1. 10. ch. 5. 23. 2 Thess. 2. 17. Zech. 14. 5. καθάπερ καὶ ἡμεῖς εἰς ὑμᾶς· [13] [h] εἰς τὸ στηρίξαι ὑμῶν τὰς καρδίας ἀμέμπτους ἐν ἁγιωσύνῃ, ἔμπροσθεν τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ Πατρὸς ἡμῶν, ἐν τῇ παρουσίᾳ τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ μετὰ πάντων τῶν ἁγίων αὐτοῦ.

---

to be inspired (ii. 13). Inspiration is not Omniscience. He lays claim to the one, but not to the other. And his frankness in disclaiming the latter confirms his claim to the former. Cp. Theophyl. here.

— μή πως ἐπείρασεν—καὶ εἰς κ. γένηται ὁ κ. ἡ.] lest haply the Tempter may have tempted you, and our labour may become in vain, 'ne forte tentaverit is qui tentat, et inanis fiat labor noster' (Vulg.). Cp. Winer, p. 448, Scholefield, Peile, and Bloomfield; also Eurip. Phœn. 91, 92.

— ὁ πειράζων] the Tempter, Satan. This appellation "the Tempter," thus introduced, shows that the Thessalonians had been already instructed in the doctrine of the Personality and Operations of the Evil One. It suggests the probability that they had a written Gospel in which Satan is thus described. Satan is only described by this name in one other passage of the New Testament, viz. in the Gospel of St. Matthew, iv. 3. Cp. above, ii. 18.

6. Ἄρτι ἐλθόντος Τιμοθέου] but just now when Timothy came from you to us, and told the good tidings of your faith and love. Silas and Timothy came together from Macedonia to St. Paul at Corinth, and brought with them pecuniary supplies for the Apostle. See on Acts xviii. 5. 2 Cor. xi. 9, and above, ii. 9. And this Epistle was written soon after their arrival, ἄρτι ἐλθόντος Τιμοθέου.

As Timothy only, and not Silas, is mentioned here as having come to Athens from Thessalonica, Silas, who afterwards came with Timothy to Corinth from Macedonia, and had been left at Berœa (Acts xvii. 14), may have been joined by Timothy there.

On their first visit to Macedonia, Paul and Silas were sent away by the brethren by night from Thessalonica, on account of the rage of the Jews of that city against them. (Acts xvii. 10.)

But Timothy is not mentioned as being sent away with them. He seems to have remained behind at Thessalonica, and afterwards to have joined St. Paul and Silas at Berœa. (Acts xvii. 14.)

On the whole, it is probable that St. Paul provided for the spiritual welfare of the three principal Macedonian Churches by appointing three of his companions and fellow-labourers to watch with special care over each of them respectively,—

(1) St. Luke at Philippi. (Acts xvi. 40.) Cp. Phil. iv. 3.
(2) Timothy at Thessalonica.
(3) Silas at Berœa. (Acts xvii. 10.)

At the same time they would doubtless have frequent opportunities of intercourse with each other.

— ἐπιποθοῦντες ἡμᾶς ἰδεῖν] longing to see us. A proof of their obedience as well as love. They would not have been eager to see the Apostle again if they had disobeyed his commands.

7. τῇ ἀνάγκῃ καὶ θλίψει] necessity and affliction. So the best MSS. Elz. has ἐν τ. θλίψει καὶ ἀ., and this is the order in 2 Cor. vi. 4.

10. καταρτίσαι τὰ ὑστερήματα] to supply your deficiencies. He does not flatter, because he loves them; he tells them that their faith is not perfect, and he desires to supply its shortcomings.

He charges them to take care that this Epistle, in which he thus speaks, should be publicly read in the Church (v. 27),—a proof of his courage and veracity.

11. ὁ Θεὸς—κατευθύναι πρὸς ὑμᾶς] Now may God Himself and our Father direct our way to you. St. Paul visited Macedonia several times after the date of this Epistle (see Chronological Table), and doubtless in one or more visits this desire was fulfilled.

12. καθάπερ καὶ ἡμεῖς] even as we also abound in love toward you.

13. παρουσίᾳ] The Coming, the second Advent of Christ. A word occurring often in this sense, in these two the earliest, and among the shortest, Epistles of St. Paul. See ii. 19; iii. 13; iv. 15; v. 23. 2 Thess. ii. 1. 8.

There is only one other place in all St. Paul's Epistles where the word occurs with this meaning, 1 Cor. xv. 23. The reading in 1 Cor. i. 8 is not certain.

The word is found in one only of the Evangelists, St. Matthew, in one chapter, xxiv. 3. 27. 37. 39. But it is found in St. James, v. 7, 8, and 2 Peter i. 16; iii. 4. 12, and in 1 John ii. 28.

It has been alleged, unhappily, by some in modern times (e. g. in Olshausen's Introduction to these Epistles), that St. Paul, having described the Second Advent of Christ in this his earliest Epistle, and having observed that his language on this subject was misunderstood (see 2 Thess. ii. 1), was made wiser by experience, and therefore abstained from adverting to this subject in his later Epistles.

But this allegation is erroneous;

St. Paul does refer to the subject again, and very fully, in a later Epistle,—his First Epistle to the Corinthians. (1 Cor. xv. 23. 51.)

And, as we have seen, the other Apostles speak of it, though briefly.

The fact is, St. Paul gave a solemn charge to the Thessalonians that this present Epistle should be read publicly to all the brethren (v. 27).

It is also a well-known fact, that this Epistle, in which the circumstances of Christ's Second Advent are so fully described (iv. 14—17), was circulated throughout Christendom in the Apostle's age, and was read publicly in Churches, and sounded in the ears of all Christians. See the authorities in Kirchofer, Quellensammlung, pp. 179—181, and note below on v. 27.

Having once here, and once again in his Epistle to the Corinthians, which was also publicly read and circulated throughout Christendom, described the circumstances of the Second Advent, he had no need to dwell further on that subject.

The other Apostles, who had these two Epistles of St. Paul before their eyes, needed not do more than refer to the doctrine briefly, as generally received and understood by Christians. Such is their mode of handling it in the passages of their Epistles cited above.

The subject could not be passed over in the Apocalypse, where it is fully displayed. (Rev. xx. 11—15.)

— μετὰ πάντων τῶν ἁγίων αὐτοῦ] with all His Saints. See Tertullian, De Resurr. 24, who is one of the first writers that use the word Adventus in the now received ecclesiastical sense for the Second Advent. His translation of St. Paul's words, dating as it does from about the end of the second century, deserves insertion:—"Quæ enim spes nostra vel gaudium, vel exultationis corona, quàm et vos coram Domino nostro Jesu Christo in Adventu Ejus? (above, ii. 19.) Item coram Deo et Patre nostro, in Adventu Domini nostri Jesu Christi, cum omnibus sanctis Ejus."

It will be observed on comparison of this Version with the Vulgate, that it differs from, and is more literal than, it.

It also contains the readings Χριστῷ (ii. 19) and Χριστοῦ

IV. 1 [a] Λοιπὸν οὖν, ἀδελφοί, ἐρωτῶμεν ὑμᾶς καὶ παρακαλοῦμεν ἐν Κυρίῳ Ἰησοῦ, καθὼς παρελάβετε παρ' ἡμῶν τὸ πῶς δεῖ ὑμᾶς περιπατεῖν καὶ ἀρέσκειν Θεῷ, καθὼς καὶ περιπατεῖτε, ἵνα περισσεύητε μᾶλλον· 2 οἴδατε γὰρ τίνας παραγγελίας ἐδώκαμεν ὑμῖν διὰ τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ. 3 [b] Τοῦτο γάρ ἐστι θέλημα τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὁ ἁγιασμὸς ὑμῶν, ἀπέχεσθαι ὑμᾶς ἀπὸ τῆς πορνείας, 4 [c] εἰδέναι ἕκαστον ὑμῶν τὸ ἑαυτοῦ σκεῦος κτᾶσθαι ἐν ἁγιασμῷ καὶ τιμῇ, 5 [d] μὴ ἐν πάθει ἐπιθυμίας, καθάπερ καὶ τὰ ἔθνη τὰ μὴ εἰδότα τὸν Θεόν· 6 [e] τὸ μὴ ὑπερβαίνειν καὶ πλεονεκτεῖν ἐν τῷ πράγματι τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ· διότι ἔκδικος ὁ Κύριος περὶ πάντων a Phil. 1. 27. ch. 2. 12. Col. 2. 6. 2 Thess. 3. 10—12.

b Rom. 12. 2. Eph. 5. 17, 27.
c 1 Cor. 6. 15, 18. Rom. 6. 19.
d 1 Cor. 15. 34. Eph. 4. 17, 18.
e Lev. 19. 11, 13. & 25. 14. Jer. 22. 13. 1 Cor. 6. 8.

here,—which have been expunged by some recent Editors. Tertullian quotes this Epistle more than twenty times in his extant works (cp. Kirchofer, p. 180), and it is also quoted by S. Irenæus, the scholar of S. Polycarp, the disciple of St. John (v. 6. 1. 30. 2) as the work of St. Paul.

It may be remarked here, that the writings of a very early Latin Father like Tertullian are sometimes of more value as critical helps in regard to the text of the New Testament, than even those of a contemporaneous Greek Father; because the text of the latter would not improbably be tampered with by copyists to suit their own Greek recensions of the New Testament, but the text of a Latin Father would escape such a treatment. Hence the frequent citations of Tertullian in the present edition will, it may be presumed, be thought not irrelevant. It is to be regretted that they have not been noted by Lachmann.

Ch. IV. 1. Λοιπόν] Furthermore. 'Quod super est,' marking a transition from the narrative portion of the Epistle to the hortatory. Cp. 2 Thess. iii. 1. 2 Cor. xiii. 11. Eph. vi. 10. Phil. iii. 1; iv. 8.

— καθὼς καὶ περιπατεῖτε] as ye also are walking. Omitted by Elz. and D, E, I, K, but found in A, B, D, E, F, G, and received by Lachm., Lünem., Alf., Ellicott, not Tisch. Cp. iv. 10.

2. διὰ τοῦ Κυρίου] by the Lord. Not in my own name, but through the Lord dictating and strengthening my commands; so that they are not mine, but His. (Cp. Winer, § 47, p. 339, note.) Christ is "the Way" by which the Apostle walks, when he commands others to walk aright.

3. ἀπὸ τῆς πορνείας] from fornication. On the necessity of this injunction to the Gentiles see note on Acts xv. 20.

4. τὸ ἑαυτοῦ σκεῦος κτᾶσθαι] A much controverted passage. The sense appears to be—

To acquire and hold his own vessel (or body) in sanctification and honour; to keep his body "in temperance, soberness, and chastity."

With regard to the sense of κτᾶσθαι, even if it be allowed that it must mean to acquire, yet it includes the meaning of keeping, as is evident from the boast of the Pharisee (Luke xviii. 12), ἀποδεκατῶ πάντα ὅσα κτῶμαι. Cp. Luke xi. 42. Matt. xxiii. 23.

Let it also be considered that the deadly sin here reprobated by the Apostle was—as the Christian Fathers have shown, e. g. Ambrose de Abraham, ii. p. 348; Jerome, Ep. 77; Augustine, de Civ. Dei, xiv. 18, and as Bp. Sanderson, who quotes them, truly observes (iii. 220), accounted by the Gentiles a thing "as indifferent as what was most indifferent," and was excused by parents (Terent. Adelph. I. ii. 21), commended by moralists (Horat. 1 Sat. ii. 32; cp. Cicero, pro Cœlio 48), and consecrated by the Religion of Heathenism, especially in Greece, and particularly at Corinth, where St. Paul now was; and we need not hesitate to say, that every one at Thessalonica who complied with the precepts of Christianity, commanding personal holiness, might be truly said to acquire, to purchase, to recover his own body, to redeem it from a debasing and galling slavery, and to become a free man, the master and lord of his own body, which had before been alienated by sin, and enthralled by Satan.

There is therefore much truth in the remark of S. Chrysostom here, that abstinence from the sin of which St. Paul here speaks, was μαθήσεως πρᾶγμα, a thing to be learnt by the Gentiles "who knew not God."

It is also well said by Theophylact, that "the Apostle here calls a man's body his vessel which, when it is tainted by uncleanness, sin takes possession of, and enslaves it; but when it is purified, we ourselves make it our own."

So likewise Theodoret and Primasius, who mention the other interpretation which has been adopted by some learned Expositors, after Augustine (Serm. 278, and De Nuptiis and Concup. i. 9, vol. x. p. 613, and contra Julian. iv. 56, and v. 38, p. 1073 and 1125), viz. that by the σκεῦος ἑαυτοῦ the Apostle means a man's own wife

But, as Theodoret says justly, St. Paul is speaking here to all, to unmarried as well as to married persons, and to women as well as men. The use of the word σκεῦος, vessel (as Heb. כְּלִי c'li), for body, has been well illustrated by Vorstius in his excellent work "De Hebraismis N. T." p. 31, and he (as A Lapide had already done) aptly refers to the use of the word vessel, in St. Paul's sense, in 1 Sam. xxi. 5, "the vessels of the young men are holy," i. e. their bodies. He also well illustrates the present text by St. Paul's words to the Romans (i. 24), "God gave them (the Gentiles) over to uncleanness in the lusts of their hearts, to dishonour their own bodies," ἐν ταῖς ἐπιθυμίαις, εἰς ἀκαθαρσίαν εἰς πάθη ἀτιμίας (v. 26), τοῦ ἀτιμάζεσθαι τὰ σώματα αὐτῶν ἐν ἑαυτοῖς. Compare the very similar words of the Apostle here, τὸ ἑαυτοῦ σκεῦος κτᾶσθαι ἐν ἁ. κ. τιμῇ, μὴ ἐν πάθει ἐπιθυμίας . . . οὐ γὰρ ἐκάλεσεν ἡμᾶς ὁ Θεὸς ἐπὶ ἀκαθαρσίᾳ.

This Exposition of the word σκεῦος here is very ancient. It is found in writers of the second century, e. g. Tertullian, who says (de Resurr. Carnis, 16), "Caro vas vocatur apud Apostolum, quam jubet in honore tractare," and again c. Marcion. v. 16. And Barnabas (c. 17) calls the body τὸ σκεῦος τοῦ πνεύματος, and St. Paul himself confirms this exposition by his use of σκεῦος (2 Cor. iv. 7), ἐν σκεύεσιν ὀστρακίνοις, and the phrase was familiar even to the heathen, whence Cicero calls "Corpus quasi vas animi" (Tusc. D. i. 22), and Lucret. iii. 441, "Corpus quod vas quasi constitit ejus" (sc. animae. See Lünemann, p. 103). And the Alexandrine writers (e. g. Philo, p. 136) call the body τὸ τῆς ψυχῆς ἀγγεῖον.

It may be suggested also for consideration, whether in using here the words σκεῦος κτᾶσθαι (to gain and keep possession of a vessel) in the sense thus explained, the Holy Spirit may not have referred to the words of our Blessed Lord Himself, describing the Work He has done for us in rescuing Mankind from the grasp of the Devil (Matt. xii. 29).

The Heathens were bound by Satan, by the lusts of the Flesh, especially by the prevalence and even consecration of that deadly sin which the Apostle is here describing. Their bodies had become Satan's furniture, his vessels "filled with all uncleanness."

And, let us observe, Christ calls them by that name σκεύη, vessels (Matt. xii. 29. Mark iii. 27). S. Irenæus therefore says well (iii. 8. 1), expounding our Lord's words, "Vasa Ejus (Satanæ) nos eramus; utebatur enim nobis quemadmodum volebat; et spiritus immundus habitabat in nobis." We were once vessels in the strong man's house, but a Stronger than he came, and delivered the vessels (σκεύη) out of the strong man's hand, and has given to each of us power to acquire, and to keep possession of, his own vessel, in sanctification and honour, which was before kept by the Evil One in unholiness and shame.

Thus, in fine, the Gentile, who was transferred from the house of Satan to the House of Christ, in which are many vessels, some of gold and some of silver, became, by a glorious and blessed transmutation, a vessel unto honour, sanctified, and meet for the Master's use, and prepared unto every good work (2 Tim. ii. 20).

The words ἐν τιμῇ, in honour, as here used, serve to illustrate the difficult passage Col. ii. 23, where see note.

6. ἐν τῷ πράγματι] in the matter, or in the deed. An example of the modest reserve, and refined delicacy, which characterize the holy Apostle's language, in speaking of things which the Gentiles did without shame (Eph. v. 3. 12), and thus, by a chaste bashfulness of words, commending the duty of unblemished purity in deeds. Compare similar instances of Apostolic gravity and decency of diction 1 Cor. vii. 1—7, and especially 1 Cor. v. 1, 2, where the guilty person is merely said γυναῖκα τοῦ πατρὸς ἔχειν, and is described as ὁ ἔργον τοῦτο ποιήσας, which phrases are the best comment on πλεονεκτεῖν and τὸ πρᾶγμα here. Cp. also 2 Cor. vii. 11, ἐν τῷ πράγματι, said of the sin of the incestuous person.

St. Peter uses the word πρᾶγμα (facinus) with the same τούτων, καθὼς καὶ προείπαμεν ὑμῖν καὶ διεμαρτυράμεθα· 7 [f] οὐ γὰρ ἐκάλεσεν ἡμᾶς ὁ Θεὸς ἐπὶ ἀκαθαρσίᾳ ἀλλ' ἐν ἁγιασμῷ. 8 [g] Τοιγαροῦν ὁ ἀθετῶν οὐκ ἄνθρωπον ἀθετεῖ, ἀλλὰ τὸν Θεὸν, τὸν καὶ δόντα τὸ Πνεῦμα αὐτοῦ τὸ ἅγιον εἰς ὑμᾶς. 9 [h] Περὶ δὲ τῆς φιλαδελφίας οὐ χρείαν ἔχετε γράφειν ὑμῖν· αὐτοὶ γὰρ ὑμεῖς θεοδίδακτοί ἐστε εἰς τὸ ἀγαπᾶν ἀλλήλους· 10 καὶ γὰρ ποιεῖτε αὐτὸ εἰς πάντας τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς τοὺς ἐν ὅλῃ τῇ Μακεδονίᾳ. Παρακαλοῦμεν δὲ ὑμᾶς, ἀδελφοὶ, περισσεύειν μᾶλλον, 11 [i] καὶ φιλοτιμεῖσθαι ἡσυχάζειν, καὶ πράσσειν τὰ ἴδια, καὶ ἐργάζεσθαι ταῖς χερσὶν ὑμῶν, καθὼς ὑμῖν παρηγγείλαμεν, 12 ἵνα περιπατῆτε εὐσχημόνως πρὸς τοὺς ἔξω, καὶ μηδενὸς χρείαν ἔχητε.

f Lev. 11. 44. & 19. 2. John 17. 9. 1 Cor. 1. 2. Heb. 12. 14. 1 Pet. 1 14, 15. g Luke 10. 16. 1 Cor. 7. 40. h Lev. 19. 18. Matt. 22. 39. John 6. 45. & 13. 34. Eph. 5. 2. 1 Pet. 4. 8. 1 John 3. 11, 23. & 4. 21. i Acts 20. 34. Eph. 4. 28. 2 Thess. 3. 7, 12.

---

severe δεινότης of indignation in his denunciations of judgment on Ananias, τί ὅτι ἔθου ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ τὸ πρᾶγμα τοῦτο; See also James iii. 16, πᾶν φαῦλον πρᾶγμα. Cp. the remarks of Bengel and Bp. Middleton here, who rightly interprets the words, and refers to 2 Cor. vii. 11.

It is therefore well said by Damascene here (quoted by Wetstein) that St. Paul here speaks εὐφήμως καὶ ἐπικεκαλυμμένως with a holy euphemism, and casting a veil over the deadly sin which he is here describing, that of μοιχεία.

St. Paul, in the two former verses, having spoken of πορνεία, proceeds now to refer to a still more heinous sin, that of μοιχεία. As Theodoret remarks, "Here he calls Adultery by the name of πλεονεξία, because he who is guilty of it usurps and embezzles what is not his own; and he is guilty of wrong against one who is his own brother."

The πόρνος sins against his own σκεῦος, he sins against his own body (see 1 Cor. vi. 18); the μοιχὸς sins against his brother also, and in that which is one with him.

The words are thus commented on by Theophylact:—

"St. Paul is here speaking of μοιχεία, which is justly called by him πλεονεξία and παράβασις. For it is God Himself who gives to man his own wife, and who sets up the landmarks of nature in the conjunction of that one man with her alone. So that in case of μοιχεία there is πλεονεξία ἐν τῷ πράγματι, τουτέστι, τῇ μίξει, and this too against a brother."

With regard to ancient Latin Expositors, it may suffice to add the name of S. Jerome, who authorizes the same exposition of this text (in Ephes. iv. 19), "Ne quis supergrediatur et circumscribat, neu avarus fraudet in negotio fratrem suum, id est, ne suam conjugem derelinquens alterius polluere quærat uxorem." And to justify this exposition S. Jerome refers to the Greek Original, which he quotes, and compares the use of the word πλεονεκτεῖν here with πλεονεξία in the text of Eph. iv. 19.

So in his Commentary on Eph. v. he says, "Avaritiam (πλεονεξίαν) pro adulterio positam."

The etymology of the Latin adulter (i. e. qui a suâ ad alteram transgreditur, ὑπερβαίνει), illustrates this exposition.

The "honesta aposiopesis" (as A Lapide calls it) in the words τῷ πράγματι perhaps served as an example to some in the Early Church speaking of the same sin (in Constit. Apostol. iii. 2).

The English translation of τῷ πράγματι, as equivalent to "any matter," i. e. any transaction of traffic (a rendering rightly questioned by Bp. Sanderson, ii. 349), is at variance with the context, and is probably due to the influence of the Latin Vulgate, which has "in negotio," and to the defect of the Latin language in not having a definite article, a reason sufficient in itself to disqualify the Vulgate from being regarded as an "authentic standard," and much more as "the authentic standard," of Holy Writ. See Bentley's Sermon on 2 Cor. ii. 17; Works, iii. pp. 243—248, ed. Dyce.

— διεμαρτυράμεθα] we earnestly protested.

8. τὸν καὶ δόντα] Who also gave. So A, I, K, and Elz., Tisch, Bloomf., Lünem., Alf., Ellicott. B, D, E, F, G have the present tense διδόντα, which is received by Lachmann.

— ὑμᾶς] you. So B, D, E, F, G, I, K; and so the Syriac and Arabic Versions, and Scholz, Lach., Tisch., Lünem., Alf.—Elz. has ἡμᾶς, and this reading adds to the force of the argument. You received the Holy Spirit when you were admitted into the Church by Baptism. God shed forth the Holy Spirit even unto (εἰς) you, Gentiles. Your bodies then became Temples of the Holy Ghost; therefore defile them not.

The Apostle afterwards dilated on this great doctrine more at large in the two Epistles to the Corinthians, and showed its practical bearings on society. (1 Cor. vi. 19. 2 Cor. vi. 16.)

These enlargements on the same doctrine are not to be ascribed to any "fuller developments in the Apostle's own views," but to the better preparation of those whom he addressed to receive them.

For example, in the present case, he had been at Thessalonica only for a short time when he wrote this Epistle, but at Corinth he had resided eighteen months when he wrote his first Epistle to that Church.

It must be remembered also, that St. Paul's Epistles were circulated from one Church to another, so that the earlier Epistles, addressed to a particular Church or Churches, prepared all the Churches to receive the later Epistles.

10. ἐν ὅλῃ τῇ Μακεδονίᾳ] in all Macedonia; the whole of Northern Greece. An important testimony, as showing the intercommunion of Christian Churches, and the consequent facilities for the circulation of the Books of the New Testament in the Apostolic age. See below, v. 27.

11. φιλοτιμεῖσθαι ἡσυχάζειν] to aspire to be quiet; to be ambitious to be still. A happy oxymoron. Compare the similar oxymoron, which has not been generally understood, in Rom. xii. 11, τῇ σπουδῇ μὴ ὀκνηροὶ, "in your busy-ness not idle;" and on the sentiment see also 2 Thess. iii. 11.

Φιλοτιμία, love of glory, the moving passion of the Greeks, which haunted them, like the trophies of Miltiades at Marathon which would not suffer Themistocles to sleep. The Apostle turns the eager stream of their vainglorious activity, loving ever to be seen, and exulting in the foam and spray of its own restlessness, into a quiet lake of religious life, clear and deep, reflecting in its peaceful mirror the calmness of heaven.

The Prophet Isaiah had used a similar figure of speech to quiet the restlessness of the people, distrusting the providence of God, and ever looking to human aids, "Their strength is to sit still" (Isa. xxx. 7).

This and the following precept are not without their special uses in these latter days, when "many run to and fro; and knowledge is increased" (Dan. xii. 4).

— πράσσειν τὰ ἴδια] to do your own business; to attend to your own affairs, and not to meddle with those of others; to do your duty in that state of life to which God has called you. See Dr. Barrow's Sermon on "Quietness, and doing our own business," i. pp. 457—489.

It has been supposed by some modern Expositors that the unquiet spirit and repugnance to labour, which are noted for censure here, had been produced at Thessalonica by an expectation of a speedy end of the World, an expectation derived (they allege) from St. Paul's teaching. (2 Thess. ii. 1.) But the spirit of περιεργία, πολυπραγμοσύνη, and ἀλλοτριοεπισκοπία was characteristic of the Greek population long before the Gospel appeared. Cp. Acts xvii. 21; 1 Tim. v. 13; 1 Pet. iv. 15; and the commentators on Juvenal, iii. 61—70.

Besides, the vice of theft was very prevalent (see Eph. iv. 28; 1 Cor. vi. 10); and see the character of the Gentile world in Rom. i. 29—31. It is also probable that the liberality of some among the Thessalonians, to which St. Paul here bears testimony, was abused by others into an occasion of indolence, in the expectation that they would be supported by the alms of the wealthier members of the Church. Cp. 2 Thess. iii. 10—12.

— ἐργάζεσθαι] to labour. Hence it may be inferred that a large portion of the primitive Thessalonian Church consisted of poor. Cp. 1 Cor. i. 26. (Lünemann.) But "of the chief women not a few" received the Gospel from St. Paul. (See Acts xvii. 4.) However, it appears that on the whole the Churches of Macedonia were poor, compared with that of Corinth. See 2 Cor. viii. 1, 2.

ταῖς] Some add ἰδίαις, which is not in B, D*, F, G, but found in A, D, I, K. It does not seem to have been read by Tertullian, de Idol. c. 4, who quotes the words thus, "manibus unusquisque operetur."

12. τοὺς ἔξω] those who are without, the Heathen. So οἱ ἔξω, 1 Cor. v. 12, 13. Col. iv. 5. οἱ ἔξωθεν, 1 Tim. iii. 7.

The Christians were not to abuse their Christian liberty, and not to use it as a plea for disloyalty, and so make it a cloke of licentiousness (1 Pet. ii. 16); but to walk with an orderly and 13 j Οὐ θέλομεν δὲ ὑμᾶς ἀγνοεῖν, ἀδελφοί, περὶ τῶν κεκοιμημένων, ἵνα μὴ λυπῆσθε καθὼς καὶ οἱ λοιποὶ οἱ μὴ ἔχοντες ἐλπίδα. 14 k Εἰ γὰρ πιστεύομεν ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ἀπέθανε καὶ ἀνέστη, οὕτω καὶ ὁ Θεὸς τοὺς κοιμηθέντας διὰ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ ἄξει σὺν αὐτῷ. 15 l Τοῦτο γὰρ ὑμῖν λέγομεν ἐν λόγῳ Κυρίου, ὅτι ἡμεῖς οἱ ζῶντες οἱ περιλειπόμενοι εἰς τὴν παρουσίαν τοῦ Κυρίου οὐ μὴ φθάσωμεν τοὺς κοιμηθένj Rom. 1. 13. 1 Cor. 10. 1. & 12. 1. 2 Cor. 1. 8. 2 Pet. 3. 8.

k 1 Cor. 15. 12—23. 2 Cor. 4. 13, 14. Rev. 1. 18.
l 1 Cor. 15. 22, 51.

respectful deportment (εὐσχημόνως) towards Heathen Magistrates, and to render honour and obedience to them as "unto the Lord," in all things not contrary to His will. See on Matt. xxii. 21. Rom. xiii. 1—4. Tit. iii. 1. 1 Pet. ii. 13.

And what was true as to the duty of Subjects toward Rulers was true of the duty also of Slaves to Masters.

The necessity of this precept had appeared on the occasion of St. Paul's visit to Thessalonica, when he was charged by the Jews with being a preacher of sedition; and the Heathen populace was stirred up by them against him and Silas, as acting "contrary to the laws of Cæsar, in saying that there is a different King, Jesus" (Acts xvii. 7).

The World had yet to learn, from the loyalty of Christians, even when persecuted by it, that Christianity is the best safeguard of States.

Christians were also taught by the Apostle to behave εὐσχημόνως towards them that were without, by industry, lest the Heathen should be able to say that Christianity was a religion of indolence. (Bengel.) — μηδενός] of nothing: some render it of no man; but the former translation seems preferable.

13. θέλομεν] So the best MSS. Elz. θέλω. Cp. 2 Cor. i. 8.

— κεκοιμημένων] So Elz., with D, E, F, G, I, K. A, B have κοιμωμένων, which is received by Lach., Tisch., Alford, Ellicott.

There is a difference in meaning between κοιμώμενοι and κεκοιμημένοι, on which account the latter reading seems preferable; οἱ κοιμώμενοι means properly those who are falling asleep, and sometimes, those who are sleeping: but κεκοιμημένοι signifies those who have been laid asleep, and are still asleep; that is, here, those who, as to their bodies (for of their souls he is not here speaking), have, as it were, been 'somno compositi,' lulled into the sweet slumber of a Christian death, in which they still repose, till they will be awakened by the last trump. Cp. John xi. 11, Λάζαρος κεκοίμηται, and 1 Cor. xv. 20, Χριστὸς ἀπαρχὴ τῶν κεκοιμημένων. See note below on 1 Cor. xi. 30.

The word κοιμᾶσθαι, and κεκοιμῆσθαι, is never applied in the New Testament to the soul (for there is no sleep of the soul after death), but always to the body; and by the use of the word in that sense, it is intimated that the body will be awakened; that is, that the body will rise again. See Aug. (Serm. 172): "Dormientes eos appellat Scripturæ veracissima consuetudo, ut, cùm dormientes audimus, evigilaturos minimè desperemus;" and Serm. 93: "Quare dormientes vocantur? nisi quia suo die resuscitabuntur." So also Chrys. and Theophyl. Cp. note below, on 1 Cor. xv. 6.

— ἵνα μὴ λυπῆσθε] that ye be not grieved; 'ne contristemini' (Vulg.); but be comforted. Some MSS. have λυπεῖσθε here. See on 1 Cor. iv. 6.

He does not mean that they are not to sorrow for the departed, but that they are not so to sorrow, as men who have no hope.

As it is beautifully expressed by Augustine (Serm. 172): "Non admonuit Apostolus ut non contristemur, sed (ut non contristemur) sicut cæteri qui spem non habent." For we have hope. "Contristamur ergo nos in nostrorum mortibus necessitate amittendi, sed cum spe recipiendi. Inde angimur, hinc consolamur; inde infirmitas afficit, hinc fides reficit; inde dolet humana conditio, hinc sanat divina promissio." See also his touching address to Christian mourners: "You may, indeed you must, sorrow, but not as the Heathen do, who have no hope. You must sorrow. But remember, where you have sorrow you have also comfort. How can you but sorrow when that body, which lives by the soul, becomes lifeless by the flight of the soul? and when that which used to walk lies; when that which used to talk is dumb; when the closed eyes admit no light; when the ears are open to no sound; when all the functions of the limbs cease? Is not this dead body a house in which an unseen spirit once dwelt, and which it once beautified? That which was unseen is gone; that which we see with pain, remains. Here surely is a cause of sorrow. But let it have its comfort. What comfort? The Lord Himself will descend with a shout, and with the voice of the Archangel and the trump of God, and the dead in Christ will rise first; and then we who remain alive shall be caught up in the clouds to meet Christ, into the air. 'Pereat contristatio ubi tanta est consolatio.' Let grief be wiped away from the soul, and let faith banish grief. Why should we grieve for the dead? because death is bitter? But Christ has passed by that way." Augustine (Serm. 173).

So another African Father writes: "Remember the words of the Apostle; and be not grieved by your friend's departure, as the Heathen who have no hope. For if we believe in the Resurrection of Christ, we believe in the resurrection of those for whom Christ died and rose again. Therefore sorrow for death has been done away. Why should you weep for one who is not lost? Why should you mourn for him who will return? He whom you lament is not dead; he is only gone on a journey. Do not weep for him who has set out a little before you, and whom you will soon follow. 'Profectio est quam credis mortem. Non est lugendus qui antecedit, et quem tu mox subsequeris.'" Tertullian (de Patientiâ, 9); see also S. Cyprian, de Mortalitate, capp. 14, 15.

— οἱ λοιποί] the rest, the others, the heathen. On this use of οἱ λοιποί see ch. v. 6; 1 Cor. vii. 12. The feelings of the Heathen on the subject of death were expressed as follows: Theocr. (Id. iv. 42), ἐλπίδες ἐν ζωοῖσιν, ἀνέλπιστοι δὲ θανόντες. Æschyl. (Eum. 638), ἅπαξ θανόντος οὔτις ἐστ' ἀνάστασις. Catull. (v. 4), "Soles occidere et redire possunt: | Nobis, cum semel occidit brevis lux, | Nox est perpetua una dormienda." How different from the language of the Apostle! (See on 1 Cor. xv. 37.) But these words οἱ λοιποί, are not to be limited to the Heathen, but are applicable to the ungodly, and generally to all who are not true believers. See Proverbs xi. 23, ἐλπὶς ἀσεβῶν ἀπολεῖται, but v. 7, δικαίου οὐκ ὄλλυται ἐλπίς.

14. εἰ γάρ] for if we believe; the εἰ does not imply any doubt, but assumes that there is no doubt. Cp. Col. iii. 1. Phil. i. 22.

— Ἰησοῦς ἀπέθανε] Jesus died. But they of whom he is speaking are not said by him to be dead, but asleep. The death of Jesus has made death to be not death, but sleep.

— τοὺς κοιμηθέντας διὰ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ] those who have been laid asleep through the power and death of Jesus, and through faith in Him, Who Himself (as the Apostle says here) died and rose again.

The bias of some Expositors to separate the words διὰ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ from κοιμηθέντας, and to join them in a less easy combination with ἄξει, seems to have arisen from neglect of the proper meaning of κοιμηθέντας, 'somno compositos,' laid asleep.

The best illustration of the sense of the word is found in the first passage in which it occurs in the New Testament, viz. in the history of the martyrdom of St. Stephen. He looked up to heaven and saw Jesus, once dead, but now risen and standing at God's right hand to help him. He prayed to Jesus to receive his spirit, and through the love and power of Jesus, Who had died, and had been buried, and had risen and ascended into heaven, and through faith in Him, the first Martyr ἐκοιμήθη, fell asleep.

On this use of διὰ, through a person as a mediator, and especially as applied to Christ, the Mediator (1 Tim. ii. 5), and the Door (John x. 7), and the Way (John xiv. 6), through Whom alone all blessings, both in life and death, come to us from God, see John x. 9; xiv. 6. Acts iii. 16; x. 36. 43. Rom. i. 5; v. 11. 17. 21. 1 Cor. viii. 6; xv. 21. 2 Cor. i. 5; v. 18. Gal. vi. 14, δι' οὗ ἐμοὶ κόσμος ἐσταύρωται. Col. i. 16. 20. 2 Thess. iii. 12. Tit. iii. 5, 6. Heb. xiii. 15. 21. 1 Pet. ii. 5, and Dean Alford's excellent note here, and so Ellicott.

Indeed, Chrysostom had rightly expounded the words thus, τῇ πίστει τοῦ Ἰησοῦ κοιμηθέντας: and Theodoret says, "Jesus is the Mediator of the Resurrection; and the faithful who have Christ dwelling in themselves κοιμῶνται διὰ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ."

15. ἐν λόγῳ Κυρίου] in the Word of the Lord; not on my own authority, but the Lord's Who speaks in me, and by me.

This expression, 'the Word of the Lord,' is a link which connects the writings of the Apostle with those of Moses and the Prophets of old, to whom 'the Word of the Lord came,' and who are said to speak in 'the Word of the Lord.' See 1 Kings xiii. 1, 2. Jer. i. 4, LXX. Hos. i. 2.

In this and numerous other respects, the New Testament came before the Old Testament to the Gentile world, and the New Testament prepared the Gentile world for the profitable study of the Old. See above on ii. 18.

— ἡμεῖς οἱ ζῶντες οἱ περιλειπόμενοι κ.τ.λ.] We the living (as m Matt. 24. 31. 1 Cor. 15. 51. 2 Thess. 1. 7.

τας· 16 m ὅτι αὐτὸς ὁ Κύριος ἐν κελεύσματι, ἐν φωνῇ ἀρχαγγέλου, καὶ ἐν σάλ-distinguished from the dead) who are being left behind (present participle) by the departure of others who die from time to time, shall not anticipate those who have fallen asleep; or, as Tertullian says (de Resurrect. 24), "nos qui remanemus in adventum Domini non præveniemus eos qui dormierunt."

This passage has given rise to three questions:

1. What is the meaning of the words οἱ ζῶντες, the living, here?

2. Whether, inasmuch as all men are from Adam, and since it is said in Holy Scripture that by Adam death passed upon all, and that in Adam all die (Rom. v. 12. 14. 1 Cor. xv. 22), and it is appointed unto men to die, and after that the Judgment (Heb. ix. 27), they who are alive on the earth when Christ comes will first die, and so pass through Death to Resurrection and Judgment?

These two questions were discussed in ancient times;

Another has arisen in modern days, viz.;

3. Whether St. Paul believed and taught in this Epistle that he himself would be alive at Christ's coming, and therefore supposed that the Second Advent was near at hand when he wrote these words?

As to questions 1 and 2,

The difference of opinion as to the meaning of the word living here, arose in great measure from the difference of reading in the MSS. in the parallel passage of St. Paul's Epistle to the Corinthians (1 Cor. xv. 51), where some MSS. read πάντες κοιμηθησόμεθα, 'we shall all sleep.'

On this point the reader may see the note there.

Consequently, some Expositors were led to interpret ζῶντες as equivalent to spiritually alive, and quickened by a lively faith; and others supposed that all would first die, and then revive and be raised for Judgment.

These differences of opinion are recapitulated by S. Jerome, Epist. ad Minervium, iv. p. 216; S. Augustine, de octo Dulcitii quæstionibus, vol. vi. p. 223; and Epist. ad Mercator. 193; and de Civ. Dei, xx. 20; and in Enchirid. c. 54; de Fide et Symb. c. 8; S. Chrys. and Theophyl. in 2 Tim. iv. 1; and by Isidorus Pelusiot. Epist. 222; and, in later times, by Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. vii. pp. 561—563.

S. Augustine, although not enabled to ascertain the true reading in 1 Cor. xv. 51 as fully as it has since been determined, declared the true meaning of the passage in the following language:—

If no other meaning can be attached to the words of the Apostle, and if it be evident, that he designed that the meaning which they manifestly proclaim, should be assigned to them, namely, that at the end of the World, and at the Lord's Second Coming, there will be some who will not be unclothed of their bodies, but be clothed upon with immortality, and this mortal will be swallowed up by life (2 Cor. v. 4), doubtless with this meaning will accord that which we profess in the Rule of Faith, namely, that 'He will come again to Judge the Quick and Dead;' so that we are not here to understand by the word quick, the just, and by the word dead, the unjust, although it be true that the Just and the Unjust will be judged; but by the word quick in the Creed we are to understand those whom Christ's second Coming will find not yet departed from the body; and by dead, those who have departed from it. And those other texts (1 Cor. xv. 36. 51) must be so expounded as to agree with this interpretation. (Augustine.)

However, even till the sixteenth century, many Expositors were of the opinion that all who were alive at Christ's coming would first die, and then revive and be judged. So Aquinas, Anselm, and A Lapide here.

But now that the reading of 1 Cor. xv. 51 has been established, by the collation of MSS. and Versions derived from all parts of Christendom, there can be no longer any doubt that the interpretation propounded by S. Augustine is the true one; and it may suffice to remind the reader of the words of the learned English Expositor of the Creed on this subject; He shall judge the quick, that is, those which shall be then alive when He cometh; and He shall judge the dead, that is, those which at the same time shall be raised from the dead;

The only doubt in this interpretation is, whether those that shall be found alive when our Saviour cometh shall still so continue till they come to judgment, or upon His first appearance they shall die, and after their death revive; and so together with all those which rise out of their graves appear before the judgment seat. The consideration of our mortality, and the cause thereof (that it is appointed unto all men once to die, in that death hath passed upon all, Heb. ix. 27. Rom. v. 12), might persuade us that the last generation of mankind should taste of death, as well as all the rest that went before it; and therefore it hath been thought, especially of late, that those, whom Christ at His coming finds alive, shall immediately die; and after a sudden and universal expiration shall be restored to life again, and joined with the rest whom the graves shall render, that all may be partakers of the resurrection;

But the Apostle's description of the last Day mentioneth no such kind of death, yea, rather excludeth it: For we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we be ever with the Lord. (1 Thess. iv. 15—17.)

In which words, they which remain unto the coming of the Lord, are not said to die or to rise from the dead, but are distinguished from those which are asleep and rise first: yea, being alive, are caught up together with them, having not tasted death;

The same is further confirmed by the Apostle, saying, Behold, I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed (1 Cor. xv. 51), which, being added to the former, putteth this doctrine out of question; for the living, which remain at the coming of Christ, are opposed to them which are asleep; and the opposition consists in this, that they shall not sleep, which sleep is not opposed to a long death, but to death itself, as it followeth, the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we (which shall not sleep) shall be changed; so that their mutation shall be unto them as a Resurrection. And collation of these two Scriptures maketh up this conclusion so manifestly, that I conceive no man had ever doubted or questioned the truth of it, had they not first differed in the reading of the text. (Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. vii. p. 563.)

3. As to the third question, we may say—

It was not revealed by Almighty God to St. Paul, nor has it ever been revealed to any man, whether he himself should remain alive till Christ's second coming. Our Lord said to his Apostles, "It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father has put in His own power." (Acts i. 7.)

But it would be very erroneous to say (as has been recently affirmed by some), that St. Paul expected that he himself, and the majority of those whom he was addressing, would be alive at Christ's Second Coming; and that he taught in this Epistle, as an article of Christian Doctrine, that Christ would come in his own age and lifetime; and that he was deceived in this expectation, and afterwards "modified this opinion," particularly when "he saw the evil effects of this doctrine on the practice of the Thessalonians," who (it is alleged) were induced by the expectation of an immediate reappearance of Christ to relinquish their worldly callings, and to live in idleness.

This allegation is disproved by the fact that St. Paul used the same language five years after the composition of his two Epistles to the Thessalonians, viz. in his first Epistle to the Corinthians, where, using the first person plural in the same way as here, he says, "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed" (1 Cor. xv. 51).

And, be it observed, he used that language at a time when he himself personally was in daily danger of death. (1 Cor. xv. 31. Cp. 2 Cor. i. 8, 9.)

If the personal pronoun we in the present passage means St. Paul himself and his own contemporaries, it must also have the same meaning in the latter passage.

There was no alteration whatever in his teaching, such as is supposed;

Before he wrote to the Corinthians he himself warned the Thessalonians in his second Epistle, which, be it remembered, was written very shortly after the first, against being "soon shaken or troubled as if the day of the Lord was at hand" (2 Thess. ii. 2).

And he teaches them that the Day of the Lord would not come until after the manifestation of some Power, which was not then visible, and which he describes.

St. Paul, also, in his Epistle to the Romans, written in the next year after the first Epistle to the Corinthians, speaks of the Conversion of the Jews as an event still to be looked for after the "fulness of the Gentiles had come in" (Rom. xi. 24—27).

This was a preliminary prophecy, which he, the Apostle of the Gentiles, well knew was not yet accomplished; and therefore he was a debtor to the Gentiles (Rom. i. 14, 15; xi. 13), and bound to promote its fulfilment. Cp. Tertullian, de Resurrectione, c. 23.

As to the use of the pronoun we in this passage and that to the Corinthians (1 Cor. xv. 51), if it be pressed rigidly, it would follow that all the Thessalonians to whom he writes, who would πιγγι Θεοῦ καταβήσεται ἀπ᾽ οὐρανοῦ, καὶ οἱ νεκροὶ ἐν Χριστῷ ἀναστήσονται πρῶτον, 17 [n] ἔπειτα ἡμεῖς οἱ ζῶντες οἱ περιλειπόμενοι ἅμα σὺν αὐτοῖς ἁρπαγησόμεθα ἐν νεφέλαις εἰς ἀπάντησιν τοῦ Κυρίου εἰς ἀέρα· καὶ οὕτω πάντοτε σὺν Κυρίῳ ἐσόμεθα. 18 [v] Ὥστε παρακαλεῖτε ἀλλήλους ἐν τοῖς λόγοις τούτοις.

n John 12. 26. & 14. 3. & 17. 24. Acts 1. 9. Rev. 11. 12.

live till Christ's Second Coming, would be for ever with the Lord; which could not have been his meaning.

But no one who has considered the characteristics of St. Paul's style, will be perplexed by the use of the pronoun here.

St. Paul frequently even speaks of himself individually as a representative of a class with which he has no sympathy, and with which he himself, therefore, is by no means to be identified. See on 1 Cor. iv. 6, and the quotation from Bp. Sanderson in the note on 1 Cor. vi. 12, and cp. xiv. 14.

Thus in Rom. iii. 7: "If the truth of God hath more abounded through my lie unto his glory, why yet am I also judged as a sinner?"

See also the seventh Chapter of the Epistle to the Romans, vv. 7—25.

Accordingly, it is well said by Theodoret here, "St. Paul is not speaking here of his own person, but of those who will be alive at that time. He is speaking of the faithful who will then be alive, and who will be caught up into the air." So also Chrysostom and Theophylact. The Apostle "transfers by a figure unto himself and his contemporaries the persons of those who would be alive at Christ's Second Coming." Augustine, de Civ. Dei, xx. 20.

Although St. Paul nowhere teaches that the Lord would not come again while he himself was alive, yet he did not teach in this Epistle, or in any other, that Christ would come in his own age. He knew that the time of Christ's coming could not be known by men, and had not been revealed by God. He teaches in this Epistle that it would come as a thief in the night (v. 2), and that the certainty of its coming, and the uncertainty of the time of its coming, are reasons for perpetual preparation for it.

Let it be remembered that it is the Holy Ghost who speaks by the Apostle. And let it not be forgotten that He designed this Epistle not only for the edification of the Thessalonians and of other Churches in the Apostolic Age, but of all Christians in every Country and Age, even to the Coming of Christ, and that He knew that it would be read in every country and age till the Day of Doom.

Hence we may recognize the divine wisdom of the Apostle in using that pronoun which would best admonish all who read the Epistle, in his own and every successive generation, to be on their guard, as not knowing when their Lord would come; whereas, if he had used the pronoun they, it might have been thought that as long as the Apostle was alive, men need not expect the Coming of Christ.

St. Paul's we is an universal we, which every age may apply, and ought to apply, to itself. Cp. Bengel.

St. Paul's office was to teach that the Great Day would surely come, and would come suddenly. But it was no part of his Mission to declare when it would, or would not, come.

That Day is hidden, in order that every day may be well spent. "Ergo latet Ille Dies, ut observentur omnes dies." Augustine. See his three Letters, "De fine Sæculi," Ep. 197—199.

16. αὐτὸς ὁ Κύριος καταβήσεται] The Lord Himself will descend in His human body (for descent is proper to body), and in the same human body and in the same manner as He ascended into heaven (Acts i. 11). "In quâ carne ascendit in cœlum, et in quâ sedet ad dexteram Patris, descensurus est ad Judicium." Augustine (Serm. contra Arian. c. 12, vol. viii. p. 972).

— ἐν κελεύσματι] with a sound of command. κέλευσμα (from κελεύω) is the music played to set an Army or a Fleet in motion (Thucyd. ii. 92), or the cheer of the κελευστὴς to the crew of rowers. The word is used in the former sense by the Septuagint, Prov. xxx. 27, στρατεύει ἀφ᾽ ἑνὸς κελεύσματος, and cp. Philo (de Præm. § 19), who says that God can easily bring together all men, wherever dispersed, into one place, from the ends of the earth, ἑνὶ κελεύσματι.

This appears to be the sense here. The Angelic Host is compared to a vast Army, which is set in motion by the Divine command, and accompanies Christ to Judgment. See Zech. xiv. 5. Dan. vii. 10. 13.

The Son of Man shall come in His glory, and all the holy Angels with Him, and He shall sit on the throne of His glory (Matt. xxv. 31. 2 Thess. i. 7). He shall be revealed with His mighty Angels, and so Enoch prophesied, 'The Lord cometh with ten thousands of His Saints to execute judgment' (Jude 14, and cp. Rev. xix. 14).

— ἐν φωνῇ ἀρχαγγέλου—ἐν σάλπιγγι Θεοῦ] with the voice of the Archangel and with the trump of God. See Zech. ix. 14, ὁ Κύριος ἐν σάλπιγγι σαλπιεῖ, and 1 Cor. xv. 52. The circumstances of the Second Advent, and of the Last Judgment, appear to have been prefigured by those of the Giving of the Law on Mount Sinai; Men will be judged according to their works, of which the Law of God is the Rule: and therefore the future Great Assize, in which men will be rewarded or punished according to their Deeds, to be then judged by the standard of the Divine Law, was fitly typified by the promulgation of that Law. Compare the words of Moses describing the delivery of the Law (Exod. xix. 16) with the language used by the Apostle here describing the last Judgment: Ἐγένοντο φωναὶ καὶ ἀστραπαί, φωνὴ τῆς σάλπιγγος ἠχεῖ μέγα, καὶ ἐπτοήθη πᾶς ὁ λαὸς, καὶ ἐξήγαγε Μωϋσῆς τὸν λαὸν εἰς συνάντησιν τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ παρέστησαν ἐπὶ τὸ ὄρος· τὸ ὄρος ἐκαπνίζετο ὅλον, διὰ τὸ καταβεβηκέναι ἐπ᾽ αὐτὸ τὸν Θεὸν ἐν πυρί (cp. 2 Thess, i. 8)· ἐγίνοντο δὲ αἱ φωναὶ τῆς σάλπιγγος ἰσχυρότεραι σφόδρα παραβαίνουσαι.

There is also mention made by Moses of the cloud, v. 16. Cp. here v. 17.

Also the Law was given with the ministry of Angels (Acts vii. 53. Gal. iii. 19), and Angels will come with the Lord to Judgment. See above, note on κελεύσματι.

The Trumpet here and in 1 Cor. xv. 52 seems to be no other than that of the Seventh Angel in the Apocalypse (xi. 15—18).

Whether you eat or drink, or wake or sleep, let that Trumpet be ever sounding in your ears with this call, "Arise, ye dead; come ye to the Judgment" (S. Jerome ap. A Lapide).

— οἱ νεκροὶ ἐν Χριστῷ] the dead in Christ shall first rise. He says πρῶτον, not πρῶτοι. The words have been supposed by some interpreters to signify that the dead generally shall rise first, and some take the words 'in Christ' as following 'they shall rise;' but this does not appear to be a correct exposition.

The dead in Christ are they, who having been incorporated into the body of Christ, remain living members of Christ, and die in Christ, and though asleep in peace (κεκοιμημένοι) as to their bodies, yet remain members of the Communion of Saints in Him Who lives for ever, and is the source of undying life to those who are in Him.

Thus they who live in Christ communicate with the dead in Christ: "Communionem cum illis sanctis, qui in hâc quam suscepimus fide defuncti sunt, societate et spei communione tenemur." Augustine (Serm. 181). See below, Heb. xii. 23.

The Saints of God living in the Church of Christ are in communion with all the Saints departed out of this life, and admitted to the presence of God. The mystical union between Christ and His Church, the spiritual conjunction of the members to the Head, is the true foundation of that communion which one member had with another, all the members living and increasing by the same influence which they receive from Him. But Death, which is nothing else but the separation of the soul from the body, maketh no separation in the mystical union, no breach of the spiritual conjunction, and consequently there must continue the same communion, because there remaineth the same foundation. And since the true and unfeigned holiness of man wrought by the powerful influence of the Spirit of God, not only remaineth, but also is improved after death, and since the correspondence of the internal holiness was the Communion between their persons in their life, they cannot be said to be divided by death, which had no power over that sanctity by which they were first conjoined. Bp. Pearson (on the Creed), Art. ix. pp. 664, 665.

17. ἁρπαγησόμεθα] we shall be caught up in the clouds to meet the Lord, into the air. "Nos qui vivimus, qui residui erimus, rapiemur cum nubibus obviam Domino in aëra.—Domino obviam Sancti rapientur in nubibus, ipso illo nube in resurrectionis corpore elati." Hilary (in Ps. li. and in Ps. lvi.) And Tertullian (adv. Marcion. iii. ad fin.), "Auferemur in nubibus obviam Domino secundum Apostolum, Illo scilicet Filio hominis veniente in nubibus secundum Danielem (Dan. vii. 13), et ita semper cum Domino erimus."

Observe, he does not say αἰθέρα, but ἀέρα, intimating that Christ will descend to this lower Atmosphere which surrounds the Earth. Cp. the use of ἀὴρ Acts xxii. 23. Eph. ii. 2.

— οὕτω—ἐσόμεθα] and so shall we be ever with the Lord. We shall be caught up into the air, and so be ever with Christ. There is no indication of any intervening Millennium on earth between Resurrection and heavenly Glory. See below, on Rev. xx. 6.

18. Ὥστε] Therefore; so then; 'itaque' (Vulg.). Cp. Phil. ii. 12; iv. 1.

a Matt. 24. 3, 36.
b Matt. 24. 42, 43. Mark 13. 34. Luke 21. 34. 2 Pet. 3. 10. Rev. 3. 3. & 16. 15. c Luke 21. 34, 35. Isa. 13. 6—9. Jer. 13. 21. d Eph. 5. 8.
e Luke 16. 8. Rom. 13. 12. Eph. 5. 8.
f Matt. 24. 42. & 25. 13. Luke 21. 34, 36. Rom. 13. 11, 12. 1 Cor. 15. 34. Eph. 5. 14. 1 Pet. 5. 8.
g Rom. 13. 13.
h Isa. 59. 17. Rom. 13. 12. Eph. 6. 14, &c. i Rom. 9. 22. 1 Pet. 2. 8.
k Rom. 14. 8, 9. 1 Cor. 5. 15. 1 Rom. 15. 27. 1 Cor. 9. 11. & 16. 18.. Gal. 6. 6. Phil. 2. 29. 1 Tim. 5. 17. Heb. 13. 7, 17.

V. [1] [a] Περὶ δὲ τῶν χρόνων καὶ τῶν καιρῶν, ἀδελφοί, οὐ χρείαν ἔχετε ὑμῖν γράφεσθαι· [2] [b] αὐτοὶ γὰρ ἀκριβῶς οἴδατε, ὅτι ἡμέρα Κυρίου ὡς κλέπτης ἐν νυκτὶ οὕτως ἔρχεται· [3] [c] ὅταν γὰρ λέγωσιν, Εἰρήνη καὶ ἀσφάλεια, τότε αἰφνίδιος αὐτοῖς ἐφίσταται ὄλεθρος, ὥσπερ ἡ ὠδὶν τῇ ἐν γαστρὶ ἐχούσῃ, καὶ οὐ μὴ ἐκφύγωσιν.

[4] [d] Ὑμεῖς δέ, ἀδελφοί, οὐκ ἐστὲ ἐν σκότει, ἵνα ὑμᾶς ἡ ἡμέρα ὡς κλέπτης καταλάβῃ· [5] [e] πάντες γὰρ ὑμεῖς υἱοὶ φωτός ἐστε καὶ υἱοὶ ἡμέρας, οὐκ ἐσμὲν νυκτὸς οὐδὲ σκότους.

[6] [f] Ἄρα οὖν μὴ καθεύδωμεν ὡς καὶ οἱ λοιποί, ἀλλὰ γρηγορῶμεν καὶ νήφωμεν· [7] [g] οἱ γὰρ καθεύδοντες νυκτὸς καθεύδουσι, καὶ οἱ μεθυσκόμενοι νυκτὸς μεθύουσιν· [8] [h] ἡμεῖς δὲ ἡμέρας ὄντες νήφωμεν, ἐνδυσάμενοι θώρακα πίστεως καὶ ἀγάπης, καὶ περικεφαλαίαν ἐλπίδα σωτηρίας· [9] [i] ὅτι οὐκ ἔθετο ἡμᾶς ὁ Θεὸς εἰς ὀργὴν, ἀλλ' εἰς περιποίησιν σωτηρίας διὰ τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, [10] [k] τοῦ ἀποθανόντος ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν, ἵνα, εἴτε γρηγορῶμεν εἴτε καθεύδωμεν, ἅμα σὺν αὐτῷ ζήσωμεν.

[11] Διὸ παρακαλεῖτε ἀλλήλους, καὶ οἰκοδομεῖτε εἷς τὸν ἕνα, καθὼς καὶ ποιεῖτε.

[12] [l] Ἐρωτῶμεν δὲ ὑμᾶς, ἀδελφοί, εἰδέναι τοὺς κοπιῶντας ἐν ὑμῖν, καὶ προϊστα-

---

Ch. V. 1. τῶν χρόνων καὶ τ. καιρῶν] the times and seasons; 'de temporibus et momentis' (Vulg.). Χρόνος signifies duration or length of time; καιρὸς, point of time: so that καιρὸς is ἀκμὴ χρόνου, 'punctum temporis.' See on Acts i. 7, and the remarks of Augustine, Epist. 197, noting the inadequacy of the Latin language to mark this difference, "Ibi Græcè legitur (Act. i. 7) χρόνους ἢ καιρούς. Nostri utrumque hoc verbum tempora appellant sive χρόνους sive καιροὺς, cùm habeant hæc duo inter se non negligendam differentiam;" which he explains.

2. ἀκριβῶς οἴδατε] ye know well. How did the Thessalonians know certainly that the Day of the Lord would come "as a thief in the night?"

The expression is a remarkable one. No one but Christ Himself would have ventured to compare His Second Advent to judge the World to the coming of a Thief. Probably the Thessalonians derived that knowledge from a written Gospel.

If so, it must have been either from the Gospel of St. Matthew (xxiv. 43), or of St. Luke (xii. 39), or from both. See above, on ii. 18 and iii. 5.

The present comparison is not found in either of the two other Gospels. The expression, the Day shall come, is not found in St. Matthew (cp. Matt. xxiv. 50), but it is found in St. Luke (xxi. 34, 35).

Also, the word αἰφνίδιος, here used by St. Paul to describe the sudden coming of that day, occurs only once in the New Testament, viz. in the Gospel of St. Luke describing the coming of that Day.

Compare also St. Paul's words here, τότε αἰφνίδιος αὐτοῖς ἐφίσταται ὄλεθρος, καὶ οὐ μὴ ἐκφύγωσιν, with the very similar language in St. Luke (xxi. 34), προσέχετε ἑαυτοῖς .... μὴ αἰφνίδιος ἐφ' ὑμᾶς ἐπιστῇ ἡ ἡμέρα ἐκείνη· ὡς παγὶς γὰρ ἐπελεύσεται κ.τ.λ. ἀγρυπνεῖτε οὖν ἵνα καταξιωθῆτε ἐκφυγεῖν ταῦτα πάντα.

Whether the Thessalonians were now in possession of the Gospel of St. Luke, is a question which has been touched upon elsewhere. See on 1 Thess. i. 9; ii. 18. 2 Cor. viii. 18.

It may be observed here, in addition to what is there said, that, at the beginning of both these Epistles to the Thessalonians, the Apostle addresses them to the Church (Ἐκκλησίᾳ), as a Society already existing at Thessalonica (1 Thess. i. 1. 2 Thess. i. 1), and that in this chapter we have evidence of the existence of a body of Clergy (v. 12) already organized there.

We find also a solemn charge from St. Paul, that this Epistle should be publicly read in the presence of the Faithful (v. 27), doubtless in the assembly of the Church.

We know also that the reading of the Gospels as well as of the Old Testament was a part of the Ritual of the Primitive Church. (See Justin M. Apol. ii. p. 98; c. Tryph. p. 331. Kirchofer, pp. 35, 36.)

It is probable, that the Holy Spirit who gave so solemn a charge that this Epistle should be read in the Church, would have been equally earnest in providing that some authentic account of the words, works, and sufferings of Him on Whom all the teaching of the Apostle in this and all his Epistles is built, should be extant for the use of the faithful; and that one of the duties of the Clergy who are mentioned here, was to read such an Evangelic History in the public religious assemblies at Thessalonica. See further on v. 21. 27.

— ἡμέρα Κυρίου] the day of the Lord. The Article ἡ is prefixed by A, I, K, but not by B, D, E, F, G. Cp. 2 Pet. iii. 10, ἥξει ἡμέρα Κυρίου ὡς κλέπτης.

— οὕτως ἔρχεται] so it cometh: the present tense, it cometh, marks its certainty. Cp. ἐφίσταται v. 3, and Rev. i. 7, and cp. Winer, § 40, p. 237.

3. ἡ ὠδίν] the birth-pang. See Ps. xlviii. 6, ὠδῖνες ὡς τικτούσης. Jer. vi. 24; xiii. 21.

6. οἱ λοιποί] the others—the heathen. See above, iv. 13.

8. θώρακα πίστεως] the breastplate of faith. In carnal weapons, a shield is always a shield, and nothing more; but not so in spiritual. For we find that the Apostle sometimes specifies the 'loricam fidei,' the breastplate of faith; and in another place, 'scutum fidei,' the shield of faith. (Eph. vi. 14. 16.) Faith is both a breastplate and a shield; it is a shield because it receives and wards off the darts of the enemy, and it is a breastplate because it defends the heart from being pierced through. Augustine (in Ps. 34).

9. εἰς περιποίησιν] for the purchase of salvation through our Lord Jesus Christ. 'Ad acquisitionem salutis per Dominum' (Vulg.); and so the Gothic Version of Ulphilas.

περιποίησις, from περιποιοῦμαι, sibi vendico, redimo, is said properly of Christ purchasing salvation for us, and redeeming us by the sacrifice of Himself.

This signification of the word had already been prepared for Evangelical use by the Septuagint Version of the Old Testament, which uses the word in the sense of recovering, rescuing, purchasing, and making alive and keeping alive. See Isa. xxxi. 5, περιποιήσεται καὶ σώσει, and xliii. 21, λαόν μου ὃν περιεποιησάμην, and see Gen. xxxi. 18; xxxvi. 6, and Mal. iii. 17. 1 Pet. ii. 9.

But by virtue of their incorporation in Christ their Head, the acquisition made by Christ is here predicated of Believers, who by means of His death and passion acquire salvation and glory; and so the Apostle speaks in 2 Thess. ii. 14, εἰς ὃ ἐκάλεσεν ὑμᾶς εἰς περιποίησιν δόξης τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ. Cp. Heb. x. 39.

10. εἴτε γρηγορῶμεν] whether we be awake or asleep: whether we be dead or alive. Cp. Rom. xiv. 8.

11. εἷς τὸν ἕνα] one the other. See 1 Cor. iv. 6, εἷς ὑπὲρ τοῦ ἑνός. So Herod. iv. 50, ἓν πρὸς ἓν συμβάλλειν. Winer, § 26, p. 156.

12. εἰδέναι] to know and discern, to distinguish from false teachers, and to acknowledge, to revere and love them as teachers of the truth. See on Acts xv. 18. Compare 1 Cor. xvi. 16. 18, ἐπιγινώσκετε τοὺς τοιούτους, and Phil. ii. 29.

This word εἰδέναι is specially used to express the duty owed by the Laity to their Ministers. Thus Ignatius (Smyrn. 9), καλῶς ἔχει— ἐπίσκοπον εἰδέναι.

On the duty here inculcated of "obedience to Spiritual Guides and Governors," see Dr. Barrow's Three Sermons, vol. iii. pp. 106—167, in which the author, with his usual clearness and learning, shows first who they are that are entitled to be owned μένους ὑμῶν ἐν Κυρίῳ, καὶ νουθετοῦντας ὑμᾶς, 13 καὶ ἡγεῖσθαι αὐτοὺς ὑπερεκπερισσοῦ ἐν ἀγάπῃ διὰ τὸ ἔργον αὐτῶν.

Εἰρηνεύετε ἐν ἑαυτοῖς.

14 [m] Παρακαλοῦμεν δὲ ὑμᾶς, ἀδελφοί, νουθετεῖτε τοὺς ἀτάκτους, παραμυθεῖσθε τοὺς ὀλιγοψύχους, ἀντέχεσθε τῶν ἀσθενῶν, μακροθυμεῖτε πρὸς πάντας.

15 [n] Ὁρᾶτε μή τις κακὸν ἀντὶ κακοῦ τινὶ ἀποδῷ, ἀλλὰ πάντοτε τὸ ἀγαθὸν διώκετε, καὶ εἰς ἀλλήλους καὶ εἰς πάντας.

16 [o] Πάντοτε χαίρετε· 17 [p] ἀδιαλείπτως προσεύχεσθε· 18 [q] ἐν παντὶ εὐχαριστεῖτε, τοῦτο γὰρ θέλημα Θεοῦ ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ εἰς ὑμᾶς.

19 [r] Τὸ Πνεῦμα μὴ σβέννυτε, 20 προφητείας μὴ ἐξουθενεῖτε. 21 [s] Πάντα δὲ δοκιμάζετε· τὸ καλὸν κατέχετε, 22 [t] ἀπὸ παντὸς εἴδους πονηροῦ ἀπέχεσθε.

m Rom. 14. 1. Gal. 6. 1, 2. 2 Thess. 3. 6, 11, 12. n Lev. 19. 18. Prov. 17. 13. & 20. 22. & 24. 29. Matt. 5. 39. Rom. 12. 17. 1 Cor. 6. 7. Gal. 6. 10. 1 Pet. 3. 9.
o Rom. 12. 12. Phil. 4. 4. p Luke 18. 1. Rom. 12. 12. Eph. 6. 18. Col. 4. 2.
q Eph. 5. 20.
r Eph. 4. 30. 2 Tim. 1. 6.
s 1 Cor. 14. 1, 39. ‖ 1 Cor. 2. 11, 15. 1 John 4. 1.
t Phil. 4. 8.

and acknowledged, loved and revered, as Spiritual Guides; and next, the grounds on which this duty is to be paid to them.

— τοὺς κοπιῶντας ἐν ὑμῖν, καὶ προϊσταμένους κ.τ.λ.] those who are labouring among you, and presiding over you in the Lord. An important passage in this the earliest Epistle of St. Paul, as showing that even at Thessalonica, where St. Paul had been only on a brief visit, in his first journey to Greece, a short time before this Epistle was written, and where the Gospel had only been recently planted, provision had already been made for the organization of a Christian Ministry.

We find here a body of men labouring (κοπιῶντας), and presiding (προϊσταμένους, cp. Rom. xii. 8. 1 Tim. v. 17), and admonishing (νουθετοῦντας) the rest,—in a word, a body of Clergy already settled and established: and to be known, reverenced, and esteemed very highly in love for their work's sake as such. Here is a specimen of what was done by the Apostle in that and other Churches. Cp. Acts xiv. 23; xx. 17.

13. Εἰρηνεύετε ἐν ἑαυτοῖς] Be at peace among yourselves. These short sentences,—short, in order that they might be easily remembered, and pass readily from mouth to mouth,—are like what the wise man calls 'goads' to stimulate moral practice, and 'as nails fastened by the Masters of Assemblies' (Eccl. xii. 11), —nails fastened by Chief Pastors of Churches in the memory of Christendom. Each of them deserves special attention; and some of them, it will be seen, are delivered in pairs, and they are therefore here printed accordingly. See v. 19. 21, and compare the note below on 1 Cor. vi. 20, and Heb. xiii. 5.

— ἀντέχεσθε] support: take hold of them, in order to help and preserve them from falling; cp. ἀντιλαμβάνομαι Acts xx. 35, and ἐπιλαμβάνομαι Heb. ii. 16.

17. ἀδιαλείπτως προσεύχεσθε] pray ye without ceasing. We cannot be always on our knees, and stretching forth our hands, yet we are to pray without ceasing (ἀδιαλείπτως).

How can this be done? By continuity of desire. If, whatever you are doing, you are longing for the everlasting Rest, the heavenly Sabbath, you never cease praying; your desire is prayer. Continuous desire is continuous prayer. If you would never cease from prayer, never cease from desire. Your desires speak. If you cease to desire, you are dumb, you have ceased to pray. S. Augustine (in Ps. 37). See also Dr. Barrow's exposition of this text in his Sermons on the Duty of Prayer (i. p. 107—140), where he shows that the precept is to be obeyed,—

(1) by cherishing habitually and constantly the spirit of supplication;

(2) by vigilant attendance on devotion, as the main business of the Christian life;

(3) by never failing to engage in public acts of devotion, on the recurrence of set times for it, and on all fitting occasions;

(4) especially when prescribed by authority;

(5) by lifting up our hearts to God from time to time in fervent ejaculations in private, in the midst of our business, and by being in "the fear of the Lord all the day long" (Prov. xxiii. 17).

19. τὸ Πνεῦμα μὴ σβέννυτε] quench not the Spirit, whether in yourselves or others. Compare the case of the foolish Virgins saying αἱ λαμπάδες ἡμῶν σβέννυνται (Matt. xxv. 8).

The flame of the Holy Spirit is kindled from heaven in the lamp of man's nature, but requires to be fed with continual supplies of oil from the same Spirit, given in the means of Grace, Prayer, Confirmation, the Holy Eucharist, hearing and reading the Word of God, and in the exercise of works of piety, holiness, and charity. Otherwise the light will go out, that is, will be no light to us, and the door will be shut, and we excluded from the wedding (Matt. xxv. 10—13). This Scripture is not to be so pressed as to be made a plea for re-baptization or re-ordination, as it was by some schismatics in ancient times, as if the Spirit once given in Baptism or Holy Orders could be so utterly quenched that it required to be lighted again by a Second or Third Baptism, and by a Second or Third Ordination. See S. Jerome's Dialogue against the Luciferians, and Augustine's remarks on this point, c. Epist. Parmenian. ii. c. 13, vol. ix. p. 108, where he says: "The Sacraments of Christ are holy and pure, and cannot be violated; and yet they are said to be polluted by evil men, because they do what in them lies to defile them. So the Spirit is said to be quenched by sin, because the sinner does his part to quench it; but he cannot so violate the purity of the Holy Ghost; and the Grace of the Spirit remains 'bonis ad præmium, malis ad judicium.'"

Besides; this text is to be taken together with what follows, where see note.

20. προφητείας μὴ ἐξουθενεῖτε] despise not prophesyings, or preachings; declarations of God's will, and expositions of His Word. On this use of προφητεία, frequent in St. Paul's Epistles, see 1 Cor. xi. 4; xii. 10, and on Rom. xii. 6.

But it may be asked, how was there any danger that prophesyings should be despised?

This question may best be answered by reference to the precept which immediately precedes, and to the circumstances of the early Church.

They who were admitted into the Church by Baptism received on their admission supernatural spiritual gifts (χαρίσματα), particularly the gift of Tongues.

Some among them were vain of their gifts, and made an ambitious display of them, as was the case at Corinth, where St. Paul was now writing. See 1 Cor. xii. 28; xiii. 1; xiv. 2—39.

And in comparison with those extraordinary gifts of the Spirit, some despised the less ostentatious but more edifying work of Prophesying; see 1 Cor. xiv. 1—5.

St. Paul had a difficult task to perform, in order to assign to each gift its proper place; and so to commend the ordinary work of Prophesying as not to depreciate the supernatural gifts of the Spirit, which had produced such glorious effects on the day of Pentecost.

The balance was to be held in equipoise between the two; and he has done it on these two precepts, which are like the two scales of the Balance.

He gives due honour to both in these two consecutive sentences. To one side he says, "Quench not the Spirit;" to the other, "Despise not Prophesyings."

These precepts may be best illustrated by the words with which he afterwards summed up his more elaborate reasonings on this subject in his first Epistle to that city from which he is writing, Corinth—ζηλοῦτε τὸ προφητεύειν,—καὶ τὸ λαλεῖν γλώσσαις μὴ κωλύετε, "Earnestly desire Prophesying; and do not forbid speaking with Tongues" (1 Cor. xiv. 39). There the balance is perfectly adjusted, for he inverts the prohibition, and converts it into an exhortation. Here he says, Despise not Prophesying; there he says, Earnestly desire it.

21. Πάντα δὲ δοκιμάζετε] But, while ye hearken to prophesyings, take heed that ye believe not every spirit (1 John iv. 1), nor receive every doctrine that ye hear (see Matt. xvi. 6), but (δὲ, found in B, D, Ē, F, G, I, K, and received by Scholz, Lach., Alf., Ellicott)—prove all things. "Omnia examinate; quod bonum est, tenete" (Tertullian, de Præs. Hæret.). A precept probably derived from one of our Blessed Lord, which is often cited as such by ancient writers, γίνεσθε δόκιμοι τραπεζῖται, 'Estote probi examinatores sive nummularii,' 'Be ye skilful tryers (properly assayers) of coin, whether it be spurious or genuine;' which precept is ascribed to St. Paul by Dionysius of Alexandria (cp. Euseb.

u Rom. 15. 33. ch. 3. 13. 1 Cor. 1. 8. & 6. 20.
x 1 Cor. 1. 9. & 10. 13. 2 Cor. 1. 18. Heb. 10. 23.
y Rom. 16. 16. 1 Cor. 16. 20. 2 Cor. 13. 12. 1 Tim. 1. 3, 18. & 5. 7, 21. & 6. 13, 17. 1 Pet. 5. 14.

23 u Αὐτὸς δὲ ὁ Θεὸς τῆς εἰρήνης ἁγιάσαι ὑμᾶς ὁλοτελεῖς, καὶ ὁλόκληρον ὑμῶν τὸ πνεῦμα, καὶ ἡ ψυχὴ, καὶ τὸ σῶμα ἀμέμπτως ἐν τῇ παρουσίᾳ τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τηρηθείη. 24 x Πιστὸς ὁ καλῶν ὑμᾶς, ὃς καὶ ποιήσει.
25 Ἀδελφοὶ, προσεύχεσθε περὶ ἡμῶν.
26 y Ἀσπάσασθε τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς πάντας ἐν φιλήματι ἁγίῳ.

vi. 7), probably referring to the present text. See the note of Valesius on Euseb. l. c., and note above on Matt. xxv. 27, and the present Editor's note on Theocritus xii. 23.

On the duty of examining the evidence of Religion, see on 1 Cor. x. 15.

This precept, "Try all things, hold fast the good, and abstain from all evil," evidently implies that they to whom it is addressed had some standard by which all things were to be tried.

They are required to prove the various doctrines presented to them; they must therefore have had some touchstone by which those doctrines were to be tested. What could that be? Some authentic document doubtless. How otherwise could these Thessalonians, who were only neophytes in Christianity, recently converted from idolatry (1 Thess. i. 9), have been proof against the arts of false teachers? how would they be enabled to prove all things, and to hold fast the truth? This consideration confirms the opinion stated above (v. 2), viz. that they had a written Gospel already provided for them.

On this text see Dr. Waterland, Serm. xxiii. vol. ix. p. 287.

22. ἀπὸ παντὸς εἴδους πονηροῦ ἀπέχεσθε] This precept, like that in v. 20 (see note), is to be coupled with the preceding one. Hence S. Basil says (cited by Grinfield here), "The wise examiner of spiritual coinage (i. e. of doctrine) will hold fast what is genuine, but will hold himself off ἀπὸ παντὸς εἴδους πονηροῦ."

Try all things, put them to the test, do not hastily receive any doctrine that is presented to you, nor believe every spirit, but prove them by the Rule of Faith which ye have received, and hold fast that which is good, Τὸ καλὸν κατέχετε, but ἀπέχεσθε ἀπὸ παντὸς εἴδους πονηροῦ, 'hold yourselves off from its opposite evil.'

Observe the contrast between κατέχετε and ἀπέχεσθε, and between τὸ καλὸν, 'the one good and true,' as opposed to ἀπὸ παντὸς εἴδους πονηροῦ.

But what is εἴδους πονηροῦ?

Some learned expositors interpret it, 'every form, sort, or kind of evil.'

But this interpretation seems liable to two objections;

1. The word εἶδος (from εἴδω, video) which often occurs in the LXX, means form, outward appearance, which is seen; but it does not signify kind, except perhaps in Jer. xv. 3. And it never signifies kind or sort in the New Testament. Indeed that is a philosophical sense of εἶδος which is not quite in harmony with the style of the sacred text. The nearest approach to that meaning is in Ecclus. xxiii. 16; xxv. 2. In the New Testament εἶδος signifies visible form, shape (Luke iii. 22; ix. 29. John v. 37) or outward appearance (2 Cor. v. 7) as distinguished from what is an object of faith and is unseen.

2. εἴδους seems more naturally construed as agreeing with πονηροῦ. And it is doubtful whether πονηροῦ would have been used for τοῦ πονηροῦ. The passage cited in defence of this construction, Heb. v. 14, πρὸς διάκρισιν καλοῦ τε καὶ κακοῦ, is hardly parallel.

Accordingly we find that in the Vulgate, Syriac, Æthiopic, and Arabic Versions, εἴδους is construed as agreeing with πονηροῦ, and so the Old Latin Version in the Codex Augiensis (now first published by Mr. Scrivener), and Cod. Boërnerianus. On the whole, the meaning of the two precepts seems to be:

Hold fast the good, and Hold yourselves off, refrain, not merely from πᾶν ἔργον πονηρὸν, every evil work, (cp. 2 Tim. iv. 18, where the structure is the same as here, ἀπὸ παντὸς ἔργου πονηροῦ, and confirms this exposition, and Job i. 1, ἀπεχόμενος ἀπὸ παντὸς πονηροῦ πράγματος, LXX, and Exod. xxiii. 7,) but hold yourselves also off from every appearance that is evil; from every thing that has an evil look.

Provide things honest, not only in the sight of the Lord, but also in the sight of men (2 Cor. viii. 21); or as the heathen poet expresses it, keep yourselves off

"—— ab omni
Non solum facto, verum opprobrio quoque turpi."
(Horat. 1 Sat. vi. 83.)

23. Αὐτὸς ὁ Θεὸς κ.τ.λ., πνεῦμα . . . ψυχὴ . . . σῶμα] May the God of Peace Himself sanctify you wholly, and may your spirit and soul and body be preserved entirely without blame in the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. The words ὁλοτελὴς and ὁλόκληροι (James i. 4) signify perfected in your Christian stature and maturity, and in full participation of the Christian inheritance. An ancient version of an early Father thus renders the words: "Deus pacis sanctificet vos perfectos, et integer vester spiritus et anima et corpus sine querelâ in Adventum Domini Nostri Jesu Christi servetur," Irenæus (v. 6. 1), who comments on this triple division of the human constitution, and on the graces which men receive from God, and the duties which they owe to Him, for the perfect preservation of each of these elements (spirit, soul, and body) to the coming of Christ.

What reason (says Irenæus) had the Apostle to pray for a perfect preservation of those elements (soul, body, and spirit), unless he foreknew the reunion of all three, and that there is one salvation for them all? They who present all three blameless to God will be perfect. They will be perfect, who have the Spirit of God dwelling in them, and keep their souls and bodies blameless before Him, by holding the true faith, and doing their duty to their neighbour. (S. Irenæus, and see S. Gregory Nyssen ap. Theophyl. here.)

It is not to be supposed that the ψυχὴ and πνεῦμα are different parts of the human constitution; for the sentient faculty is indiscerptible (Bp. Butler, Anal. i.), and cannot be anatomized, like the body; but they are different faculties of the invisible part of man; so that ψυχὴ refers to that lower faculty of life which man has in common with other animals, and πνεῦμα represents the higher attribute which they do not possess, and which makes him nearest to God. (See Grotius here.)

This distinction of σῶμα, ψυχὴ, and πνεῦμα is best illustrated by the adjectives thence derived, and as used by St. Paul; σωματικὸς belonging to the body (1 Tim. iv. 8), ψυχικὸς, animal, distinguished from πνευματικὸς, spiritual, 1 Cor. ii. 14; xv. 44. 46 cp. Jude 19, ψυχικοὶ, πνεῦμα μὴ ἔχοντες. Observe also their order, as here marked by St. Paul,—πνεῦμα, the spirit, or highest faculty, the proper recipient of the Holy Spirit; then, secondly, ψυχὴ, or living principle, as that which animates the σῶμα, or corporeal frame. Cp. 1 Tim. iii. 16.

26. ἀσπάσασθε—φιλήματι ἁγίῳ] Greet all the brethren with a holy kiss. This precept also is to be coupled with that which is placed next to it, viz. 'I conjure you that this Epistle be read to all the brethren.'

Let the reader compare this precept as it stands here with the other places where the same precept occurs in St. Paul's Epistles (1 Cor. xvi. 20. 2 Cor. xiii. 12. Rom. xvi. 16. Cp. 1 Pet. v. 14), and let him also bear in mind the practice of the primitive Church in this respect, especially as stated by Justin Martyr (Apol. ii. p. 97), "After the Prayers (in the Church) are ended, we greet one another with a kiss."

S. Cyril of Jerusalem (Catech. 5, n. 2) says that, before the 'sursum corda' a deacon said to the communicants (in the words of St. Paul), "Salute one another with a holy kiss."

This was called φίλημα εἰρήνης, 'Osculum Pacis,' the 'Kiss of Peace,' and a seal of peace, 'Signaculum Pacis' (Tertullian de Orat. 14), and sometimes simply 'Pax.' In the Eastern Churches it was given before the oblation in the Eucharist, as a sign of reconciliation and love; in the Western, after the consecration of the elements, and before the distribution. See Concil. Laodic. c. 19; August. c. literas Petil. ii. c. 23 (quoted by Bingham, xv. 3. 3); and Constitut. Apost. ii. 57, ἀσπαζέσθωσαν ἀλλήλους οἱ ἄνδρες καὶ ἀλλήλας αἱ γυναῖκες τὸ ἐν Κυρίῳ φίλημα.

Further, we know from the Acts of the Apostles that the Churches planted by St. Paul came together on a stated day, the Lord's Day, to break bread, i. e. to receive the Holy Communion. See on Acts xx. 7.

On considering these evidences we may conclude that the kiss of which the Apostle speaks, was not one given in private; it was a holy kiss, the kiss of peace, the kiss to be given in a holy place on a holy solemnity, the kiss to be given in the assemblies of the Church at the Holy Communion. In a word, this kiss which passed from mouth to mouth was a holy symbol of Unity. The mouth which gave it was about to receive Christ in the Holy Eucharist, and the kiss was a seal of that love which knits together the faithful with one another and with Him in the Holy Communion of His Body and Blood. Here, then, we have another glimpse of the system of spiritual order and discipline organized by the Apostle in the Churches planted by him.

Concerning this Apostolic precept, "Salute one another with a holy kiss," and whether it is still obligatory, see Hooker, Pref. iv. 4, &c.

27 z Ἐνορκίζω ὑμᾶς τὸν Κύριον ἀναγνωσθῆναι τὴν ἐπιστολὴν πᾶσι τοῖς ἁγίοις z Col. 4. 16.
ἀδελφοῖς.

28 Ἡ χάρις τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ μεθ' ὑμῶν.

---

27. Ἐνορκίζω (so A, B, D*, E.—Elz. ὁρκίζω) ὑ. τ. Κ. ἀναγνωσθῆναι τὴν ἐπιστολὴν πᾶσι τοῖς ἁγίοις ἀδελφοῖς] I adjure you by the Lord that this Epistle be read to all the holy brethren. A solemn adjuration by the Lord, Christ; and a testimony to His Godhead. For He Whom the Apostle invokes, as knowing all things, cannot be other than God. Cp. Ps. lxiii. 12.

This solemn adjuration shows also the great importance of the matter here enjoined, viz. that the Epistle now sent should be read to all the brethren, doubtless, not only at Thessalonica, the capital of Macedonia, but in all the Macedonian Churches. Compare 1 Cor. i. 1, 2. 2 Cor. i. 1.

Taken together also with other similar denunciations in Holy Writ, it seems to imply a condemnation of every Church which is untrue to this charge, and does not read the Holy Scriptures in the vernacular tongue to the people. "Quod Paulus cum adjuratione jubet, id Roma sub anathemate prohibet" (Bengel). There is something therefore like a prophetic protest in this solemn adjuration.

The Apostle had given a precept in the foregoing verse concerning an order to be observed in their public assemblies at the administration of the Holy Communion. He now gives direction as to another point in their public Ritual, viz. the Reading of Holy Scripture.

He uses the same language in both precepts, with a slight change in the position of the words.

He had said, Salute all the brethren, τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς πάντας, greet every one, with a holy kiss; he now says, I adjure you, by the Lord, that this Epistle be read to all the holy brethren.—ἁγίοις is not in B, D, E, F, G, and is omitted by Lach., Tisch., Alf.; but it is in A, I, K and many Versions and Fathers, and is retained by Ellicott. On the use of the aorist here, see his note, p. 87.

This Epistle was the first Epistle written by St. Paul; and the precept he gives here, that this Epistle should be read in the public assemblies of the Church, is a specimen and pattern of what was to be done with all his Epistles. They were addressed (for the most part) not to private or particular persons, but to large public Societies, to Churches. See particularly Gal. i. 2, the Churches of Galatia; 1 Cor. i. 2. 2 Cor. i. 1, to the Church at Corinth with all the Saints that are in all Achaia.

They were to be passed on and circulated from one Church to another. See Colossians iv. 15, 16, "When this Epistle is read among you (he takes it for granted that it will be read), cause that it be read also in the Church of the Laodiceans, and that ye read the Epistle from Laodicea,"—probably another Epistle of the Apostle. See the note there.

His Epistles, which were to be thus read, were to be read, not as the word of man, but of God. They were to be read in the same manner as, and of equal authority with, the Books of Moses and the Prophets, which were read as Holy Scripture in the Synagogues, and had been recognized as the Word of God by Jesus Christ Himself.

See his assertion of his own inspiration in this Epistle (1 Thess. ii. 13, and 1 Cor. ii. 13). See also the terms in which he refers to his Epistle in 2 Thess. ii. 15; iii. 6. 14. That St. Paul's injunctions to read this Epistle in this manner were complied with, we may infer from the second Epistle, where he commends the Thessalonians for their faith (2 Thess. i. 3), which he would not have done if they had disobeyed the precept laid upon them here with a solemn adjuration.

It is also to be remembered, that the Apostle St. Peter, at the close of his life, when all, or nearly all, St. Paul's Epistles had been written, speaks of all St. Paul's Epistles as Holy Scripture (see on 2 Pet. iii. 16), i. e. as of equal authority with those writings which, and which alone, were called Scripture by the Ancient Church and People of God, and had been received as divinely Inspired by them, and by Jesus Christ Himself. Besides, it is manifest from early Christian testimony that St. Paul's Epistles were read in all Churches of Christendom in primitive times, and were read as Scripture. See, for instance, Tertullian, Præs. Hæret. c. 36; adv. Marcion. iv. 5. Canon. Muratorian. Origen ap. Euseb. vi. 24. Cyril Hierosol. cat. 4. Clemens Rom. i. 47.

Here then we have a further insight into the order and discipline of Christian Churches as founded by the Apostles.

We have seen that the Society of Christians at Thessalonica is called a Church (i. 1; cp. ii. 1), that it had a body of Clergy known as such (v. 12, 13). We have seen reason to believe that they had public assemblies on a stated day for the administration of the Holy Communion; and we now perceive ground for the persuasion that a part of the public service on those occasions consisted in the reading of St. Paul's Epistles as Holy Scripture. Three inferences may be drawn from the above:—

(1) If such an organization as this was settled in the Gentile City of Thessalonica, one of the first cities of Europe which received the Gospel, and where he was enabled to remain only for a short time, and to which this Epistle (the earliest written by him) is addressed, much more may we believe that a regular system of Church Order and Ritual, as well as of Christian Teaching, was settled in the other Churches to which the Apostle came afterwards in succession, such as Corinth and Ephesus, and which had the benefit of his presence for a longer time, and which received and read the Epistles which he had already written to other Churches.

This conclusion is confirmed by what we know of those other Churches from the Acts of the Apostles and the other Epistles of St. Paul. See, for instance, Acts xx. 17. 1 Cor. xiv. 26.

(2) If St. Paul thus solemnly adjures the Thessalonians that this Epistle, written by himself, should be read in the public assemblies of the Church, and if all his Epistles were thus read, and if they were read as Holy Scripture by the Churches, it is reasonable to suppose (as has been already suggested, see on i. 9, and on ii. 13, and v. 2) that the Apostle had provided for those Churches some written document, containing a record of the words, works, and sufferings of Him on Whom all St. Paul's teaching in all his Epistles is grounded.

Would the Apostle, who so earnestly conjures them to read his own words, not take good care that they should be able to read the words of his Divine Master Jesus Christ?

Is it not therefore probable that they to whom he sent this Epistle possessed already a written Gospel?

(3) This earnest adjuration in the name of the Divine Head of the Church, that this Epistle should be publicly read, and the fact that this precept was complied with, and that all St. Paul's Epistles were publicly read as Holy Scripture in the Churches of all parts of Christendom in the age in which they were written, and have continued to be read in all parts of the World even to this day, will suffice to convince all reasonable persons that the Epistles which we have in our hands, bearing the Apostle's name, cannot have been tampered with; and that these Epistles, as a whole and in every part of them, are, what they profess to be, the writings of the blessed Apostle St. Paul.

In a word, this public reading of the Epistles was a divine provision made by the Holy Spirit Himself, not only for the public promulgation of His own Will and Word, but for the perfect assurance and unswerving belief of all reasonable men in the Genuineness, Authenticity, Integrity, and Inspiration of that Word.

It is the best safeguard against all allegations on the contrary side. And they who duly consider the nature of this evidence will not much need to occupy their time and distract their thoughts with the theories of those who, forgetting or suppressing this evidence, which dates from the age of St. Paul himself, and declares itself in the consentient voice and concurrent practice of eighteen centuries, set up their own surmises against its authority, and deny the genuineness and inspiration of Epistles of St. Paul.

28. ἡ χάρις τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ] The Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. After the solemn adjuration to read his Epistle in the Church, he adds the token by which it was to be known as his Epistle. St. Paul did not write his Epistles with his own hand, except in one instance, as far as we know for certain (though other exceptions have been made by some), viz. the Epistle to the Galatians, in which he expressly mentions the fact (Gal. vi. 11) in order to obviate any doubts as to the genuineness of the other Epistles not so written;

But his usual habit was to employ an amanuensis. I, Tertius, who wrote this Epistle, salute you in the Lord (Rom. xvi. 22). And this was a happy circumstance, because the persons whom he employed as his amanuenses were witnesses to the genuineness of the Epistles penned by them. But though (as was usual for authors in those days) St. Paul dictated his Epistles to secretaries, yet he invariably subscribed them with his own hand. "The salutation of Paul with mine own hand, which is the token in every Epistle, so I write. The salutation of me Paul with mine own hand" (2 Thess. iii. 17. Col. iv. 18. 1 Cor. xvi. 21.)

In what did this salutation consist?

If we examine the thirteen Epistles to which the name of St. Paul is prefixed, we find that near their conclusion they all contain (with some verbal variations) the phrase, "The Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you." And St. Paul himself indicates that this Apostolic Benediction is what he means by the salutation of me Paul; for in the passage just quoted he says, "The salutation of Paul with mine own hand, which is the token in every Epistle: so I write," and then he adds immediately, "The Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all." These words, then, the Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, were St. Paul's salutation written by his own hand. This was the token by which all his Epistles were to be known. And a beautiful and interesting token it is.

The following is the form in which this salutation appears in the several Epistles, arranged in chronological order :—

St. Paul's Benediction.

1 Thess. v. 28. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you.
2 Thess. iii. 18. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all.
Gal. vi. 18. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit, brethren.
1 Cor. xvi. 23. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you.
2 Cor. xiii. 14. The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all.
Rom. xvi. 24. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all.
Col. iv. 18. Grace be with you.
Philem. 25. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit.
Eph. vi. 24. Grace be with all them that love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity.
Phil. iv. 23. The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit.
Heb. xiii. 25. Grace be with you all.
1 Tim. vi. 21. Grace be with thee.
Tit. iii. 15. Grace be with you all.
2 Tim. iv. 22. Grace be with you.

The choice of this γνώρισμα, or badge of cognizance, is characteristic. The Apostle, who was the most signal monument of Divine Grace, fitly chooses Grace for his motto and sign manual.

This salutation, found at the close of every one of St. Paul's thirteen Epistles, is not found in any one of the Epistles of any other Apostle, written in St. Paul's lifetime. It is employed by others after his death. It is used in the Apocalypse (written after St. Paul's death), and also by S. Clement of Rome at the close of his Epistle to the Corinthians.

It was adopted by St. Paul as his own badge, and, being known by others to be so, it seems to have been appropriated and reserved to him by his brethren during his life. Soon after his death it was used by others, and it has now become the ordinary conclusion of liturgies and sermons in all parts of Christendom.

This salutation, employed by St. Paul as his own criterion in each of his Thirteen Epistles, and not used by any other Apostle in St. Paul's life, is found in the Epistle to the Hebrews, to which St. Paul's name is not prefixed, but which ends thus, "They of Italy salute you: Grace be with you all. Amen." (Heb. xiii. 24, 25.)

This circumstance confirms the evidence that the Epistle to the Hebrews was written by St. Paul. See below, the Introduction to that Epistle.

The subscription to the Epistle in Elz., purporting that it was written from Athens, found in A, B, I, K, and other MSS., and in the Syriac, Arabic, and Coptic Versions, is inconsistent with the History of the Acts (xviii. 5) and the beginning of the Epistle itself. See Introduction above, p. 1, and Lünemann, p. 7.

INTRODUCTION

TO THE

SECOND EPISTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS.

St. Paul had expressed his desire, in his former Epistle to the Thessalonians, to revisit them speedily (1 Thess. ii. 17). But he was hindered by Satan (1 Thess. ii. 18). And he was also detained at Corinth by his apostolic labours in that city, where he remained for a year and six months (Acts xviii. 9—11).

Not being able to revisit Thessalonica in person, as he had wished to do, he addresses this Second Epistle to the Church of the Thessalonians, in order, in some degree, to satisfy their eager desire for intercourse with him who had first planted the Gospel there (1 Thess. iii. 6); and to allay the disappointment occasioned by his protracted absence. He was also constrained by other motives to write this Epistle, which was the second in time of all St. Paul's Epistles, as is almost universally allowed [1].

A communication, purporting to come from St. Paul, had been brought to Thessalonica, in which it was affirmed, that the Day of the Lord was immediate (2 Thess. ii. 2).

The consequence of such a persuasion would, he knew, be very injurious. It would not be verified by the event. The Day of the Lord was not close at hand; it would not come soon. And when a little time had elapsed, and that Day had not arrived, then a twofold evil would ensue;

Enemies of the Gospel would say that the Resurrection was only spiritual, and was past already, and would overthrow the faith of some (2 Tim. ii. 18).

Others would thence take occasion to insinuate, that, inasmuch as the promise of Christ's second coming—a promise announced in the name of St. Paul, the Apostle of Christ—had not been fulfilled, it was vain to ground any hopes on the declarations of the Apostle, and of Christ Himself in the Gospel, that a Day of Universal Retribution would come, in which every man would be judged according to his works [2].

Thus the foundations of Christian faith and Christian practice would be undermined.

The Holy Spirit, guiding the Apostle, converted these devices of the Evil One into occasions of permanent and universal good to the Church of Christ.

(1) He overruled for good the impediments with which Satan had obstructed St. Paul in his desire to return in person to Thessalonica, and confirm the Thessalonians in the faith, by writing this Epistle to them, and through them to all Churches of every age and place.

If St. Paul had been enabled to return to them in person, he would indeed have disabused the Thessalonian Church of their error, by his oral communications. But the Universal Church of Christ would not have possessed that salutary instruction and solemn warning which has been treasured up for every age in this Second Epistle to the Thessalonians.

(2) In this Epistle he confutes the Tempter, who had sent forth the false Teachers personating the Apostle, and asserting in his name that the Second Advent of Christ was immediate. He thence takes occasion to vindicate the Doctrine of the Second Advent—taught by him in his former Epistle (iv. 13—v. 2. 10. 23)—from such delusive and dangerous misrepresentations.

[1] See the authorities in the Chronological Table in Wieseler's Chronologie, p. 607.

[2] See S. Chrysostom and Theophylact, Prolog. to the Epistle.

(3) He also turns the weapons of Satan against Satan himself. The Father of Lies had said in St. Paul's name, that the Day of the Lord was immediate. He had assumed the name of the Apostle, and had professed reverence for Christ. He had thus endeavoured to prepare the way for weakening the belief of Christians in the word of the Apostle, and in the Doctrine of the Second Advent, and of a General Resurrection, and of a Judgment to come.

The Holy Spirit, speaking by St. Paul, strips off the disguise from the Tempter, and reveals him in his true form. He unfolds the future, and announces to the Church of Thessalonica in this Epistle, and by it to all Churches of Christendom—in which the Epistle is, and ever has been, read as Holy Scripture,—that the Day of Christ will not come, till a very different manifestation has previously been made to the world. The Coming of Christ (παρουσία) is not to be looked for, he says, till after the appearance of a Power, whose coming (also called παρουσία) is according to the working of Satan (2 Thess. ii. 9). He delivers a Divine Prophecy, in which he describes the Mystery of Iniquity, characterized by dark features of spiritual delusion and wickedness. He pourtrays that Power. He warns the Churches against it.

Thus from the working of Satan at that time he took occasion to guard the world against his future working, and he turned the arms of the Enemy against the Enemy himself.

(4) The Adversary of the Truth had fabricated an Epistle in St. Paul's name; and by this forgery he had attempted to undermine St. Paul's authority, and to subvert the Gospel which he preached.

The Apostle avails himself of this counterfeit as an occasion for guarding the Thessalonians, and the Church generally, against all such fabrications of Epistles in his name.

He is thus led to furnish a criterion by which all his Epistles are to be discerned. He exposes the deception, and puts the Church on her guard against such frauds for the future. And he provides her with a guarantee against the impositions of forgery, and a test by which the genuineness of his Epistles is to be ascertained[3].

(5) Thus then the subtlety of the Tempter, envying the Church the spiritual blessings she was about to receive from the Holy Ghost speaking in the Epistles of St. Paul, and attempting to mar those benefits by a fabrication issued in St. Paul's name soon after the publication of his earliest Epistle, has been made, under God's gracious providence frustrating that artifice, to be one of the means for establishing the Genuineness and Integrity of those portions of Holy Writ which were dictated by the Holy Spirit, for the building up of the Church Universal in the saving faith of Christ, through the instrumentality of St. Paul.

[3] See 2 Thess. iii. 17, and note on 1 Thess. v. 28, and S. Chrysostom's procemium here.

ΠΡΟΣ ΘΕΣΣΑΛΟΝΙΚΕΙΣ Β'.

I. [1] [a] ΠΑΥΛΟΣ καὶ Σιλουανὸς καὶ Τιμόθεος τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ Θεσσαλονικέων ἐν Θεῷ Πατρὶ ἡμῶν καὶ Κυρίῳ Ἰησοῦ Χριστῷ, [2] [b] χάρις ὑμῖν καὶ εἰρήνη ἀπὸ Θεοῦ Πατρὸς ἡμῶν καὶ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.

[3] [c] Εὐχαριστεῖν ὀφείλομεν τῷ Θεῷ πάντοτε περὶ ὑμῶν, ἀδελφοί, καθὼς ἄξιόν ἐστιν, ὅτι ὑπεραυξάνει ἡ πίστις ὑμῶν, καὶ πλεονάζει ἡ ἀγάπη ἑνὸς ἑκάστου πάντων ὑμῶν εἰς ἀλλήλους· [4] [d] ὥστε ἡμᾶς αὐτοὺς ἐν ὑμῖν καυχᾶσθαι ἐν ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις τοῦ Θεοῦ ὑπὲρ τῆς ὑπομονῆς ὑμῶν καὶ πίστεως ἐν πᾶσι τοῖς διωγμοῖς ὑμῶν καὶ ταῖς θλίψεσιν αἷς ἀνέχεσθε, [5] [e] ἔνδειγμα τῆς δικαίας κρίσεως τοῦ Θεοῦ, εἰς τὸ καταξιωθῆναι ὑμᾶς τῆς βασιλείας τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὑπὲρ ἧς καὶ πάσχετε, [6] [f] εἴπερ δίκαιον παρὰ Θεῷ ἀνταποδοῦναι τοῖς θλίβουσιν ὑμᾶς θλῖψιν, [7] καὶ ὑμῖν τοῖς θλιβομένοις ἄνεσιν μεθ' ἡμῶν, ἐν τῇ ἀποκαλύψει τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ ἀπ' οὐρανοῦ μετ' ἀγγέλων δυνάμεως αὐτοῦ [8] [g] ἐν φλογὶ πυρὸς, διδόντος ἐκδίκησιν τοῖς μὴ εἰδόσι Θεὸν, καὶ τοῖς μὴ ὑπακούουσι τῷ εὐαγγελίῳ τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, [9] [h] οἵτινες δίκην τίσουσιν ὄλεθρον αἰώνιον ἀπὸ προσώπου τοῦ Κυρίου a 1 Thess. 1. 1.

b Rom. 1. 7. 1 Cor. 1. 3, 8. 1 Pet. 1. 2. c Eph. 1. 15. Phil. 1. 3. Col. 1. 3. 1 Thess. 1. 2. d 2 Cor. 7. 14. & 9. 2. 1 Thess. 2. 19.
e Phil. 1. 28. 1 Thess. 2. 14. 1 Pet. 4. 14—18. f Rev. 6. 10. & 11. 18. & 15. 4. & 16. 5, 6. & 18. 20, 24. & 19. 2.
g Ps. 79. 6. Rom. 2. 8. 2 Pet. 3. 7.
h Isa. 2. 10, 19, 21. Matt. 16. 27. & 24. 30.

πρὸς Θεσσαλονικεῖς Β'.] So A, B, D, E, F, G.

Ch. I. 1. Παῦλος καὶ Σιλ. καὶ Τιμ.] Paul and Silvanus and Timotheus. See above, on 1 Thess. i. 1.

— τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ Θεσσαλονικέων] to the Church of the Thessalonians. See above, on 1 Thess. i. 1.

3. ὑπεραυξάνει] superabounds. Your afflictions come upon you like a flood, and endeavour to overwhelm you, but your faith rises over them (ὑπεραυξάνει), and buoys you up above them. (Theophyl.)

4. ὥστε ἡμᾶς αὐτοὺς ἐν ὑμῖν καυχᾶσθαι ἐν ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις τοῦ Θεοῦ] so that we ourselves (as well as others) glory on your account in the Churches of God. We ourselves, who might otherwise be deterred from glorying on account of your virtues, which are in part the fruit of our labours, cannot refrain from magnifying God's grace shown forth in you. This passage deserves consideration in reference to the words of S. Polycarp to the Philippians, c. 11: "Ego nil tale sensi in vobis vel audivi, in quibus laboravit beatus Paulus, qui estis in principio Epistolæ ejus. De vobis enim gloriatur in omnibus Ecclesiis, quæ Deum tunc solæ cognoverant."

Did S. Polycarp regard the Epistles to Thessalonica, the capital of Macedonia, as addressed to all the Macedonian Churches and therefore to Philippi? This is not improbable. Cp. Kirchofer, p. 181.

And what does he mean by "qui estis in principio Epistoiæ ejus?" Some have interpreted the words, "Ye are in the beginning of his Epistle;" but it is not easy to see what this means. Does he not rather mean, "Ye are his Epistles" (cp. 2 Cor. iii. 2), in the beginning of his Ministry? See below on Phil. iv. 15.

5. ἔνδειγμα] a token, and specimen. "Exemplum justi judicii Dei." (Iren. iv. 36.) So the Gothic Version. "Ostentamen justi judicii." Tertullian (Scorpiace, c. 13). Ἔνδειγμα is a nominative in apposition with the preceding clause. See Winer, p. 472, who compares Eurip. Orest. 1105. Herc. Fur. 59. Elect. 231. Horat. 1 Sat. iv. 110.

S. Augustine inquires how the sufferings of the Thessalonians could be an evidence of God's justice (in Rom. 10, vol. iii. p. 2641), and thinks that the sufferings of the good are a proof that much greater afflictions are reserved for the wicked. Cp. 1 Pet. iv. 15—18.

But another consideration may be added here;

The sufferings to which the good are subject in this world, and which they often endure at the hands of the wicked, who are in prosperity here, are a proof that this world is not a final, but only a transitory, state of human existence; and that there is a future world, in which whatever is now wrong will be set right, and all things will be fully and finally adjudged by the righteous Governor of all, according to an exact scale of retributive Justice.

Besides, it is not only the suffering, but the courage and patience, with which the Thessalonians were enabled by God's grace to suffer, that is appealed to by the Apostle as a proof of the Divine Judgment. The same God Who enabled them to suffer gladly persecutions for His sake at the hand of their enemies, thus showed that He would one day judge their enemies. See Phil. i. 28.

6. εἴπερ] if—as doubtless it is. See 1 Pet. ii. 3, and Theoph. here.

8. ἐν φλογὶ πυρός] in a flame of fire. So B, D, E, F, G, and so Tertullian (c. Marcion. v. 16), who cites this passage thus: "Cum angelis virtutis suæ, et in flammâ ignis;" and the ancient interpreter of Irenæus (iv. 27 and v. 33), "Cum angelis virtutis ejus, et in flammâ ignis;" and Scholz, and Lachmann, Lünemann, and Ellicott. Elz. has ἐν πυρὶ φλογὸς, and so Tisch., Alf.

— τοῖς μὴ εἰδόσι—μὴ ὑπακούουσι] to those who do not know— and who do not obey. The μὴ implies that their ignorance and disobedience is the cause of their punishment. Cp. Winer, § 55, p. 422.

9. αἰώνιον] everlasting. Chrys. and Theophyl. ask here, "Can any one venture to say that future punishments are only for a time?" See on Matt. xxv. 46. Mark ix. 44—48.

— ἀπὸ προσώπου κ.τ.λ.] from the face of the Lord. "Ipsum quod ait (Apostolus) 'à facie Domini et à gloriâ valentiæ Ejus' verbis usus Esaiæ" (ii. 19). Tertullian (c. Marcion. v. 16).

St. Paul adopts here the words of the LXX (in Isa. ii. 19), καὶ ἀπὸ τῆς δόξης τῆς ἰσχύος αὐτοῦ, [10] [i] ὅταν ἔλθῃ ἐνδοξασθῆναι ἐν τοῖς ἁγίοις αὐτοῦ, καὶ θαυμασθῆναι ἐν πᾶσι τοῖς πιστεύσασιν, ὅτι ἐπιστεύθη τὸ μαρτύριον ἡμῶν ἐφ' ὑμᾶς, ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐκείνῃ· [11] [k] εἰς ὃ καὶ προσευχόμεθα πάντοτε περὶ ὑμῶν, ἵνα ὑμᾶς ἀξιώσῃ τῆς κλήσεως ὁ Θεὸς ἡμῶν, καὶ πληρώσῃ πᾶσαν εὐδοκίαν ἀγαθωσύνης καὶ ἔργον πίστεως ἐν δυνάμει, [12] [l] ὅπως ἐνδοξασθῇ τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ ἐν ὑμῖν, καὶ ὑμεῖς ἐν αὐτῷ, κατὰ τὴν χάριν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἡμῶν καὶ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.

II. [1] [a] Ἐρωτῶμεν δὲ ὑμᾶς, ἀδελφοί, ὑπὲρ τῆς παρουσίας τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, καὶ ἡμῶν ἐπισυναγωγῆς ἐπ' αὐτὸν, [2] [b] εἰς τὸ μὴ ταχέως σαλευθῆναι ὑμᾶς ἀπὸ τοῦ νοὸς, μηδὲ θροεῖσθαι, μήτε διὰ πνεύματος, μήτε διὰ λόγου μήτε δι' ἐπιστολῆς ὡς δι' ἡμῶν, ὡς ὅτι ἐνέστηκεν ἡ ἡμέρα τοῦ Κυρίου.

[3] [c] Μήτις ὑμᾶς ἐξαπατήσῃ κατὰ μηδένα τρόπον· ὅτι, ἐὰν μὴ ἔλθῃ ἡ ἀποστασία πρῶτον, καὶ ἀποκαλυφθῇ ὁ ἄνθρωπος τῆς ἁμαρτίας, ὁ υἱὸς τῆς ἀπωλείας, [4] [d] ὁ

i Acts 1. 11. 1 Thess. 1. 10. Rev. 1. 7.
k 1 Thess. 1. 3. & 2. 13. Heb. 12. 2.
l 1 Pet. 1. 7. & 4. 14.
a Rom. 12. 1. 1 Thess. 4. 14—16. 2 Tim. 4. 1. b Jer. 29. 8. Matt. 24. 4. Eph. 5. 6. Col. 2. 18. 1 John 4. 1. c Matt. 24. 23. Eph. 5. 6. 1 Tim. 4. 1. 1 John 2. 18. Rev. 13. 11.
d Dan. 7. 8, 25. & 8. 9, 11. & 11. 36. Rev. 13. 6.

ἀπὸ προσώπου τοῦ φόβου Κυρίου καὶ ἀπὸ τῆς δόξης τῆς ἰσχύος αὐτοῦ, ὅταν ἀναστῇ θραῦσαι τὴν γῆν, and teaches us to connect that prophecy with the Second Advent; as is done by the Church appointing that Chapter for a Proper Lesson on the First Sunday in Advent.

10. ὅταν ἔλθῃ] when He shall have come.

— ἐνδοξασθῆναι ἐν τοῖς ἁγίοις] to be glorified in the saints, whose glorified bodies will shine in and by the glory of Christ's Body, to which they will be made like. See Phil. iii. 21.

— πιστεύσασιν] who believed. So A, B, D, E, F, and Iren. So Griesb., Lach., Tisch., Alford. Elz. has πιστεύουσιν, which is less appropriate than the aorist here. The work of Faith will then be past, and will have been followed by, and absorbed in, Sight. Hence the Apostle says, v. 11, ἵνα πληρώσῃ ἔργον πίστεως ἐν δυνάμει. Christ will be wondered at in all them that believed in Him, for His glory will shine in them.

— ὅτι ἐπιστεύθη τὸ μαρτύριον ἡμῶν ἐφ' ὑμᾶς] because our testimony (i. e. the testimony concerning the Truth in Christ) brought to you, was believed,—not only by you, but by many others after you, even to the Day of Doom; in all of whom Christ and His Power and Love will shine forth and be admired at that Day; Christ will be admired in all who have believed in Him. (Cp. 1 Tim. iii. 16, ἐπιστεύθη ἐν κόσμῳ.) The emphatic word is ἐπιστεύθη. He uses the past tense, because he is carried forward by the Spirit to the Day of the Lord, and speaks from it as already present, and looks backward on all past ages of the world.

11. εἰς ὅ] whereunto—in regard to which, or with our eyes fixed on which, we also pray. On this use of εἰς, signifying the direction and aim, see Acts xxv. 20. Rom. iv. 20; xv. 2. 2 Pet. i. 8. Winer, p. 354.

— εὐδοκίαν] good-pleasure. The εὐδοκία, or 'bene-placitum,' announced at the Nativity, will then be consummated. Cp. Luke ii. 14. Eph. i. 5. 9. Phil. ii. 13.

CH. II. 1. ὑπὲρ τῆς παρουσίας] ὑπὲρ = 'super Adventu,' not only in regard to the Coming, but also on behalf of the Coming. Ὑπὲρ is more expressive than περὶ, and intimates that in what he is about to say he is like an advocate pleading on behalf of what had been misrepresented by others; and that his discourse is a refutation of error, and an ἀπολογία or vindication of the truth. So ὑπὲρ in Rom. xv. 8, and particularly the difficult passage in 1 Cor. xv. 29, where ὑπὲρ is used in the same apologetic sense, 'in behalf of' what had been misrepresented (3 John 7), and cp. Winer, § 48, p. 343, and Alford here.

— ἡμῶν ἐπισυναγωγῆς ἐπ' αὐτόν] our future gathering together to Him in the clouds of Heaven at His second Advent. Cp. 1 Thess. iv. 17.

The word ἐπισυναγωγὴ used here is very expressive. Our Blessed Lord had applied the term ἐπισυναγωγεῖν (ad-congregare) to Himself, in order to describe His own earnest desire to gather together in one (cp. John xi. 52) the children of Jerusalem to Himself, as a hen gathers together (ἐπισυνάγει) her chickens under her wings. (Matt. xxiii. 37. Luke xiii. 34.)

Our Lord had also applied this word to describe what St. Paul is about to pourtray here, viz. the gathering together of the elect from the four winds (Matt. xxiv. 31. Mark xiii. 27). See Theodoret here.

Christ had also said in the Gospel, that wherever the Body is (i. e. wherever His own Body is), there the Eagles of the Gospel will be gathered together. See on Luke xvii. 36. Matt. xxiv. 28.

The comparison of Himself to the hen was adapted to the time of His first Advent in Humility; this latter reference to the Eagle has relation to the time of His second Advent in Glory.

It is that Advent of which the Apostle now speaks.

According to the language of the ancient Expositors, the Saints of God at the Resurrection will have cast off the old age and weakness of earth, and will have renewed their strength as eagles (Isa. xl. 31. Ps. ciii. 5); and with the glorious plumage of their risen bodies will mount up with wings as eagles (Isa. xl. 31), and will be gathered together to the glorious body of Him who is both their Food and Parent Bird, for He feeds His young with His own flesh and blood; and He is called in Scripture the Great Eagle (Rev. xii. 14), the King of Birds, the Royal Eagle of the Gospel; and Who will, as it were, spread abroad His Wings, and gather His Saints unto Him, and bear them on Eagles' Wings (Deut. xxxii. 11, see LXX), and carry them aloft above the Clouds, and above the Sun, into the regions of heavenly glory. See the passages quoted above from Origen, Jerome, Augustine, Theophylact, and others, in the note on Matt. xxiv. 28.

2. εἰς τὸ μὴ τ. σαλευθῆναι ὑ. ἀπὸ τοῦ νόος] so that you may not soon be drifted off from your mind. 'Ut non cito moveamini à vestro sensu' (Vulg.). A maritime metaphor. Cp. note on iii. 6.

In order that you may not be soon shaken off from the anchorage of your firmly settled mind, and be drifted about by winds of false doctrine (Eph. iv. 14), as a ship in your harbour at Thessalonica is shaken off its moorings by the surge of the sea (σάλον). So Arrian (Epictet. iii. 26; cp. Wetstein), μὴ ἀποσαλευθῆναι διὰ σοφισμάτων.

— μηδὲ θροεῖσθαι] nor yet be agitated by fear (Vulg.). The best MSS. have μηδέ. Cp. Winer, § 55, p. 437. Elz. has μήτε.

— μήτε διὰ πνεύματος] neither by a false spirit, as that πνεῦμα Πύθωνος which flattered St. Paul at Philippi, Acts xvi. 16—18, where see the notes.

— μήτε διὰ λόγου] nor by word of mouth as from us. (Theodoret.) Cp. v. 15, εἴτε διὰ λόγου, εἴτε δι' ἐπιστολῆς ἡμῶν, where λόγου is to be connected with ἡμῶν as here.

— μήτε δι' ἐπιστολῆς] nor by an Epistle forged in our name. Tertullian, de Res. c. 24. Chrys., Theoph.

— ὡς ὅτι] as if the Day of the Lord were now instant; "tanquam instet" (Vulg.). The force of the ὡς here is to qualify that which is recited by the ὅτι, and to cast a shade of discredit upon it. So Isocr. Busir. org. p. 420, κατηγόρουν αὐτοῦ ὡς ὅτι καινὰ δαιμόνια εἰσφέρει, where the Latin would be "tanquam inferat." Cp. 2 Cor. xi. 11, and Winer, § 65, p. 544.

— ἐνέστηκεν] is instantaneously imminent. He does not reveal to them when the Resurrection will be, but he tells them that it will not be now. S. Chrys.

— Κυρίου] So the majority of the best MSS. and Editions.—Elz. Χριστοῦ.

3—12. ὅτι, ἐὰν μὴ ἔλθῃ ἡ ἀποστασία πρῶτον—ἀδικίᾳ] These Ten Verses contain one of the most solemn Prophecies ever delivered by the Holy Spirit to the world; a Prophecy, upon the right understanding of which the everlasting happiness of thousands of immortal beings depends. They demand therefore a full and minute examination. They will be best understood by being considered collectively:

i. As to the Text.
ii. As to their literal Translation.
iii. As to their Exposition.

I. As to the Text.

In v. 4, Elz. inserts ὡς Θεὸν between τοῦ Θεοῦ and καθίσαι: but these two words are not found in A, B, D*, and in many Cursives, nor in the oldest Greek and Latin Fathers—Iren., Origen, Tertullian, Cyprian, nor in many ancient Versions, and are cancelled by Gb., Sch., Ln., Tf., Lün., Alford, Ellicott.

ἀντικείμενος, καὶ ὑπεραιρόμενος ἐπὶ πάντα λεγόμενον Θεὸν ἢ σέβασμα, ὥστε αὐτὸν εἰς τὸν ναὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ καθίσαι, ἀποδεικνύντα ἑαυτὸν ὅτι ἐστὶ Θεός.

5 [e] Οὐ μνημονεύετε, ὅτι ἔτι ὢν πρὸς ὑμᾶς ταῦτα ἔλεγον ὑμῖν;

6 Καὶ νῦν τὸ κατέχον οἴδατε, εἰς τὸ ἀποκαλυφθῆναι αὐτὸν ἐν τῷ ἑαυτοῦ καιρῷ.

7 [f] Τὸ γὰρ μυστήριον ἤδη ἐνεργεῖται τῆς ἀνομίας μόνον ὁ κατέχων ἄρτι ἕως ἐκ e Matt. 16. 9. Mark 8. 18. Luke 24. 6, 7 Acts 20. 31.

f Acts 20. 29. Col. 2. 18—23. 2 Tim. 2. 17, 18 1 John 2. 18. & 4. 3.

In v. 8, Ἰησοῦς is omitted by Elz., but is found in A, D*, E*, F, G, I, and most of the earliest Fathers who quote the verse, and is received by Gb., Sch., Ln., Lün., Alford, Ellicott.

In v. 10, Elz. inserts τῆς before ἀδικίας, but this is not found in A, B, F, G, and is cancelled by Ln., Tf., Lün., Alford, Ellicott.

Also in v. 10, Elz. inserts ἐν before τοῖς, but this is not found in A, B, D*, F, G, and is cancelled by Sch., Lach., Tisch., Lün., Alford, Ellicott.

In v. 11, Elz. has πέμψει. But A, B*, D, F, G have πέμπει, the prophetic present (Glasse, Phil. Sacr. p. 144), which is received by Sch., Ln., Tf., Lün., Alford, Ellicott.

II. As to their literal Translation.

The following is the most ancient form in which the passage occurs in the language of the Western Church:

"Ne quis vos seducat ullo modo, quoniam, nisi veniat abscessio primò, et reveletur delinquentiæ homo, filius perditionis, qui adversatur et superextollitur in omne quod Deus dicitur vel religio, uti sedeat in templo Dei affirmans se Deum esse.

"Nonne meministis quòd cum apud vos essem, hæc dicebam vobis?

"Et nunc quid detineat scitis, ad revelandum eum in suo tempore.

"Jam enim arcanum iniquitatis agitatur tantum qui nunc tenet [teneat] donec de medio fiat. Et tunc revelabitur iniquus, quem Jesus interficiet Spiritu oris sui, et evacuabit apparentiâ sui; cujus est adventus secundum operationem Satanæ in omni virtute et signis atque portentis mendacii, et in omni seductione injustitiæ eis qui pereunt." Tertullian (de Res. Carnis, c. 25). See also Tertullian (c. Marcion. v. 16). See also the ancient Latin version of Irenæus (iii. 6), "Qui adversatur et extollit se super omne quod dicitur Deus vel colitur. . . ."

"Et tunc revelabitur iniquus quem Dominus Jesus Christus interficiet spiritu oris sui, et destruet præsentiâ adventus sui, illum cujus est adventus secundum operationem Satanæ in omni virtute et signis et portentis mendacii."

See also Irenæus, v. 25, where we read,

"Et omni seductione malitiæ pereuntibus, pro eo quod dilectionem veritatis non receperunt ut salvi fierent. Et ideo mittit eis Deus operationem erroris, ut credant mendacio, ut judicentur omnes qui non crediderunt veritati sed consenserunt iniquitati." (See also ibid. iv. 28.)

In English, the Apostle's words, literally rendered, may be represented as follows:—

"Now we beseech you, brethren, on behalf of the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and our gathering together unto Him, in order that ye be not soon drifted off from your mind, nor be disturbed either by means of a spirit, or of word or of letter as from us, as if the Day of the Lord were immediate.

"Let no one deceive you by any means. For [that Day shall not come] except the falling away shall have first come, and the Man of Sin shall have been revealed, the Son of perdition, he who opposeth and exalteth himself exceedingly against every one that is called God, or is an object of reverence; so that he goeth and taketh his seat in the temple of God, showing himself forth that he is God.

"Do ye not remember, that when I was yet with you, I was wont to tell you of these things?

"And now ye know that which restraineth, in order that he may be revealed in his own season.

"For the Mystery of the Lawlessness (of which I am speaking) is now working inwardly only until he that now restraineth shall have been removed out of the way; and then the Lawless one shall be revealed, whom the Lord Jesus will consume with the breath of His mouth, and destroy with the manifestation of His Coming; him, of whom the Coming is according to the inner-working of Satan, in all power, and signs, and wonders of lying, and in all deceit of iniquity to them that are perishing, because they accepted not the love of the truth in order to their being saved; and therefore God sendeth to them an inner working of error in order that they should believe the lie; that all may be judged who believed not the truth, but took pleasure in iniquity."

On the language of this Translation a few short notes may be inserted here. The Exposition will follow after.

v. 3. Observe ἀποστασία with the definite article signifying 'the falling-away;' 'that notable falling-away.'

v. 4. 'who exalteth himself exceedingly against.' It is to be observed here, that the Apostle does not say that the Man of Sin will exalt himself ὑπὲρ, above, every one that is called God, but ἐπὶ, against.

The word ὑπεραιρόμενος, 'exceedingly exalting himself,' or 'exalted exceedingly,' is used by the Septuagint concerning Hezekiah in 2 Chron. xxxii. 23, where it means much magnified; and it is used by St. Paul in another place when speaking of himself (2 Cor. xii. 7), ἵνα μὴ ὑπεραίρωμαι, 'that I may not be exalted above measure by my revelations.'

This is a common use of ὑπὲρ in composition in St. Paul's writings, as ὑπερλίαν 2 Cor. xi. 5, xii. 11; ὑπερβάλλω 2 Cor. ix. 14; ὑπερβολὴ i. 8, xii. 7, Gal. i. 13; ὑπερεκπερισσοῦ 1 Thess. iii. 10, v. 13; ὑπεροχὴ 1 Cor. ii. 1; ὑπερφρονεῖν Rom. xii. 3.

v. 4. 'every one that is called God or object of worship,' σέβασμα. Observe the original here.

v. 4. 'goeth and taketh his seat in the temple of God.' The preposition εἰς connected with καθίσαι, and followed by an accusative, shows that the Apostle has in his mind the entrance of the power here described into God's House, and his session there.

Observe also that he does not say ἱερὸν Θεοῦ, but ναὸν,—not therefore any outer court, but the inner part of God's house; that part where He is specially to be supposed ναίειν, to dwell, and where worship is offered to Him, as in the Holy Place of the Temple at Jerusalem, into which the Priests alone were allowed to enter. Cp. Luke i. 9. 21, 22; xxiii. 45. On ναὸς as distinguished from ἱερὸν, cp. Matt. xxi. 15. Mark xi. 15. Acts iii. 2, and Dean Trench, Syn. N. T. § iii.

v. 4. Object of reverence. The original is σέβασμα. The only other passage where it occurs in the New Testament is Acts xvii. 23, where the Altar to the Unknown God is mentioned among the σεβάσματα of Athens.

v. 5. When I was yet with you (at Thessalonica), I was telling you (ἔλεγον, imperfect), or used to tell you, these things.

v. 6. 'that which restraineth;' τὸ κατέχον, neuter gender, called also ὁ κατέχων, 'he that restraineth,' in the next verse. The word κατέχειν, literally to 'hold down,' is explained in Hesychius by κρατεῖν, κωλύειν, συνέχειν.

This verb is not followed here, in either verse, by an accusative case. This is observable. St. Paul therefore does not say that this restraining power would check the Lawless One by any direct action upon him, but would occupy a place, so that he should not be manifested before his season, but be manifested in that season.

'In order that he may be revealed;' i. e. God permits the present restraint, in order that he who is now restrained (κατέχεται) may not be revealed before his due season, but in it.

v. 7. Mystery of Lawlessness. Observe both these words.

Mystery (μυστήριον, from μύω, μύστης, μυστικός), something secret, and professing to be sacred (cp. Rev. xvii. 5. 7), fitly therefore coupled with ἐνεργεῖται, 'works inwardly.'

Lawlessness (ἀνομία), what sets law (νόμον) at defiance. Cp. ὁ ἄνομος, 'the lawless one,' v. 8.

The mystery of the Lawlessness, i. e. which I am now about to describe. Observe the Article repeated with each substantive.

The sense of this otherwise difficult verse, v. 7, is to be cleared up, by observing that there should be no comma after ἀνομίας, and that ἤδη, 'now,' is opposed to καὶ τότε, 'and then;' and that the phrase 'the Mystery of the Lawlessness' (which he is describing), is to be illustrated by the words, 'the Lawless One' in the next verse, and that μόνον is to be connected with ἐνεργεῖται, 'worketh inwardly,' which is contrasted with ἀποκαλυφθήσεται, 'will hereafter be revealed outwardly.' On the transposition of ἕως cp. that of ἵνα in Gal. ii. 10, μόνον τῶν πτωχῶν ἵνα μνημονεύωμεν.

The Apostle therefore means that the Mystery now works inwardly, and will continue to work so, till the restraint which prevents its manifestation shall have been removed; and then it will no longer only work inwardly, but the Lawless One himself will be displayed openly to the world.

μέσου γένηται. 8 g Καὶ τότε ἀποκαλυφθήσεται ὁ ἄνομος, ὃν ὁ Κύριος Ἰησοῦς ἀναλώσει τῷ πνεύματι τοῦ στόματος αὐτοῦ, καὶ καταργήσει τῇ ἐπιφανείᾳ τῆς παρουσίας αὐτοῦ, 9 h οὗ ἐστιν ἡ παρουσία κατ' ἐνέργειαν τοῦ Σατανᾶ ἐν πάσῃ δυνάμει καὶ σημείοις καὶ τέρασι ψεύδους, 10 i καὶ ἐν πάσῃ ἀπάτῃ ἀδικίας τοῖς ἀπολλυμένοις, ἀνθ' ὧν τὴν ἀγάπην τῆς ἀληθείας οὐκ ἐδέξαντο εἰς τὸ σωθῆναι αὐτούς. 11 j Καὶ διὰ τοῦτο πέμπει αὐτοῖς ὁ Θεὸς ἐνέργειαν πλάνης, εἰς τὸ πι-

g John 4. 9. Isa. 11. 4. Rev. 19. 15, 20, 21
h Deut. 13. 1. Matt. 24. 24. John 8. 44. 2 Cor. 4. 4. Eph. 2. 2. Rev. 13. 13, &c. i 2 Cor. 2. 15. & 4. 3.
j 1 Kings 22. 22. Ezek. 14. 9. Rom. 1. 24, &c. 1 Tim. 4. 1.

v. 8. ὁ ἄνομος, 'the Lawless One' (cp. v. 7), something more than the Mystery (or arcanum) of Lawlessness in v. 7.

8. ἀναλώσει τῷ πνεύματι] will destroy with the breath. See Isa. xi. 4, LXX.

— τῇ ἐπιφανείᾳ] with the manifestation. Cp. Clem. Rom. ii. 12, ἐκδεχώμεθα καθ' ὥραν τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ . . . . ἐπειδὴ οὐκ οἴδαμεν τὴν ἡμέραν τῆς ἐπιφανείας τοῦ Θεοῦ . . ., where our Lord Jesus Christ is expressly called God. Cp. 1 Tim. vi. 14.

9. οὗ ἡ παρουσία] whose Coming or Advent: cp. note on Rev. xvii. 8, and on xviii. 11; and observe the same word παρουσία applied to Christ here, v. 8.

v. 10. τοῖς ἀπολλυμένοις, to them who are in the way of destruction, as opposed to οἱ σωζόμενοι, those who are in the way of salvation. Acts ii. 47. See on 2 Cor. ii. 15; iv. 3. Hence he adds, "because they accepted not (οὐκ ἐδέξαντο)," but rejected the love of the truth, for their own salvation; and says, that because they were not willing to believe the truth, but rejoice in unrighteousness, God punishes them by sending them an inner working of error, that they may believe the lie, i. e. the lie of the Lawless One here described 2 Thess. ii. 2—13.

v. 11. ἐνέργειαν πλάνης is not any thing external to them, but an inner working of error, which they bring upon themselves by not accepting the love of the truth. Compare the remarkable words in Matt. vi. 22, 23. Luke xi. 34, 35, and that admonition repeated fourteen times in the New Testament, "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear." Bp. Butler, Sermon on 1 Pet. ii. 16, note. Cp. below on 2 Cor. iv. 4, and on 2 Pet. ii. 15.

III. Let us now proceed to the Exposition of this Prophecy.

Three questions arise here:

i. What is the restraining Power here mentioned?

ii. Has that restraining Power been removed?

iii. Who is the 'Man of sin' (v. 3), or the 'Lawless One' (v. 8), who the Apostle foretells would be revealed on the removal of that restraining Power?

The answer to the two former of these three questions will suggest a reply to the third.

i. What then was the restraining Power which hindered his manifestation?

In reply to this question, be it observed, that

(1) St. Paul reminds the Thessalonians, that he had often spoken to them on this matter (v. 5) when he was among them, which was a short time before the Epistle was written; and that he had then told them what this restraining Power was; and he recalls the words which he had then used to their recollection: Do ye not remember that when I was with you I used to tell you these things? (v. 5.)

Therefore the restraining Power was some Power which St. Paul had mentioned to them by word of mouth at that time, and it was a Power which he knew they would remember by name, when they reflected on what he had then spoken to them.

(2) He contents himself with referring them to what he had then said; and does not proceed to say more on the subject of this restraining Power in this his Epistle to them. Therefore,

(3) There must then have been something in the character of this restraining Power which made it requisite for St. Paul to practise reserve concerning it in writing, although he had described it clearly to them in speaking.

Otherwise, why did he content himself with referring them to what he had spoken to them on the subject? Why did he not write as plainly concerning it in his Epistle, as he had spoken when he was with them by word of mouth?

(4) Therefore the restraining Power here referred to cannot have been the power of God, or any Christian power, such as that of the Gospel.

There could not have been any reason why St. Paul should not have written as plainly as he had spoken concerning such a power as that.

This has been already remarked by S. Chrysostom here: "If he had meant the Holy Spirit when he speaks of the Power that restrained, he would have spoken clearly, and said so."

What then was the restraining power?

(5) Let us remember, that the passage before us occurs in one of St. Paul's Epistles.

(6) These Epistles (as he himself enjoins) were to be read publicly, and they were so read and circulated throughout the world (see on 1 Thess. v. 27).

This is an important consideration; for,

(7) Hence it is certain, that when this Epistle containing this remarkable prophecy came to be read in Thessalonica, they who heard it publicly read, and who remembered what the Apostle had said to them concerning the restraining Power, would (as he commanded them to do, v. 5) recall to mind his words on this subject; and others also would be sure to inquire of those who knew,—what St. Paul had said on this matter?

Thus, by the public reading of this Epistle in the Church of Thessalonica, and in the other Churches of Macedonia and of Europe and Asia, to which this and the other Epistles of St. Paul were communicated, a continuous tradition would be preserved on this subject.

(8) Hence therefore the question now arises, Was there any primitive tradition as to the Power which St. Paul here describes as the restraining Power (τὸ κατέχον) which was to continue to exist till the manifestation of the Lawless One, and be succeeded by him? (v. 7.)

(9) There are two early Christian writers, already referred to, distinguished by extensive learning and ability, and living in the next century to St. Paul, who have commented on this prophecy, viz. Tertullian and Irenæus.

The former, in his exposition of this passage, puts this question,—

What is that of which the Apostle speaks? What is this restraining Power? And he replies, "Quis, nisi Romanus status?" What is it but the Roman state? (Tertullian, De Resurr. Carnis, 24.)

Accordingly, Tertullian says in his apology for Christianity (c. 32) that the ancient Christians had special need to pray for the continuance of the Roman Empire ("pro omni statu Imperii rebusque Romanis"), "because some terrible violence would ensue on its removal."

Similarly S. Irenæus affirms, that St. Paul, in describing the Revelation of the Lawless One, is describing what would take place on the dismemberment of the Empire which was then in being, viz. the Roman Empire, which he recognizes as the Fourth Empire spoken of by the prophet Daniel, vii. 23. (Compare Irenæus, v. 25 with v. 26.)

This evidence (which might be much enlarged by quotations from Cyril Hierosolym. Catech. 15; Chrysostom here; Theodoret, in Dan. vii. 7; Augustin. De Civ. Dei, xx. 19; Jerome, Qu. xi. ad Algasiam, vol. iv. p. 209, in Hierem. xxv. 26. "Eum 'qui nunc tenet' Romanum Imperium ostendit," Lactant. vii. 15; Primasius here) may be summed up in the words of S. Jerome (in Dan. vii. vol. iii. p. 1101), "Let us therefore say,—what all Ecclesiastical Writers have delivered to us,—that, when the Roman Empire is to be destroyed, Ten Kings will divide the Roman World among themselves, and then will be revealed the Man of Sin, the Son of Perdition, who will venture to take his seat in the Temple of God, making himself as God."

Hence then

(10) It appears that the restraining Power, which was in existence when St. Paul wrote, and would continue to exist till the season had arrived for the manifestation of the Lawless One, and which, on its removal, would be followed by that manifestation (v. 7), was the Heathen Power of Imperial Rome.

(11) This conclusion is confirmed by other considerations.

It enables us to account for the fact, that St. Paul, who had specified this restraining Power by word of mouth when he was at Thessalonica, did not venture to describe that Power explicitly in writing in this Epistle, but contented himself with referring the Thessalonians to what he said to them on that subject.

That reference, he knew, would revive their recollection of what it was requisite for them to know; and therefore what he had said would be preserved to them and to the world.

But, let us remember, this Epistle was to be read publicly, at Thessalonica and throughout Christendom. Copies of it would be circulated in all parts of the Roman Empire.

If, instead of writing as he has done, "Do you not reστεῦσαι αὐτοὺς τῷ ψεύδει, [12] [k] ἵνα κριθῶσι πάντες οἱ μὴ πιστεύσαντες τῇ ἀληθείᾳ, ἀλλ' εὐδοκήσαντες ἐν τῇ ἀδικίᾳ.

k Rom. 1. 32. & 2. 8. & 8. 7, 8. & 12. 9.

member that I said these things to you?" and "ye know what restraineth;" and "when he that restraineth shall have been removed out of the way, then the Lawless One will be revealed," he had written openly, "the Roman Empire is that which restrains;" and if he had proceeded to say, "when the Roman Empire shall have been removed,"—then he would have exasperated the passions of the authorities of the Roman Empire against himself, and against the Christians, and against the Gospel of Christ.

The Romans imagined that the Roman Empire would never be removed. They thought it was imperishable. They engraved on their coins the impress, "Romæ Æternæ." The language which their national poet, Virgil, puts into the mouth of Jupiter, represents their national belief: "Imperium sine fine dedi" (Virg. Æn. i. 278). How then would they have tolerated a doctrine which professed to reveal what would follow after the removal of that National Polity which they fondly believed to be eternal?

St. Paul, as he afterwards proved by his martyrdom at Rome, was ready to shed his blood for the truth. But he had wisdom and charity as well as courage. He would not recklessly expose himself and others to persecution. He would not rashly obstruct the progress of Christianity. He would not tempt any to be guilty of the sin of persecuting it. He remembered what he had said to the Thessalonians on this important and awful subject. He knew that they would recollect his words, and would communicate them to others after them, and so all the purposes of his prophecy would be answered.

(12) This observation is also confirmed by ancient writers, whose testimony shows that they not only recognized the Roman Empire as the restraining Power here adverted to by St. Paul, but also discerned the cause why he practised this wise and charitable reserve in writing about it in this passage.

Thus S. Jerome says (qu. xi. ad Algasiam), "If St. Paul had written openly and boldly 'that the Man of Sin would not come' until the Roman Empire was destroyed, a just cause of persecution would then appear to have been afforded against the Church in her infancy."

S. Chrysostom also here says, "If St. Paul had said that the Roman Empire will soon be dissolved, the heathen would have destroyed him as a rebel, and all the faithful with him, as persons who took up arms against the State.

"But St. Paul means the Roman Empire. And when that shall have been taken away, then the Man of Sin will come. For as the power of Babylon was dissolved by the Persian Dynasty, and the Persian was supplanted by the Greek, and the Greek by the Roman, so the Roman will be dissolved by Antichrist, and Antichrist by Christ."

It is well said also by another ancient Father, "The Apostle writes obscurely, lest some of the Romans should read this Epistle, and excite a persecution against him and the other Christians on the part of those Romans who imagined that they would reign for ever." Remigius, Bibl. Patr. Max. viii. p. 1018.

Hence, we may observe in passing, it is clear that the Ancient Fathers did not suppose that the Gnostic Heresies had fulfilled St. Paul's prophecy concerning the Man of Sin, as some have imagined in recent times; or that it had been fulfilled at all in their days.

(13) Let us remember also that this Epistle, being published to the world, and designed to be generally read, would come into the hands of the Jews, St. Paul's bitter enemies, who were ever on the watch to excite the Romans against the Apostle and the Gospel (see above, on 1 Thess. ii. 14—17). They would not have failed to avail themselves of any declaration on the part of the Apostle, that the Roman Empire would be destroyed, as an occasion for exciting the rage of the Roman Empire against St. Paul and the Gospel.

(14) Here another important confirmation suggests itself of the conclusion above stated, viz. that the Roman Empire was the restraining power alluded to here by St. Paul.

St. Paul here recalls to the recollection of his Thessalonian readers what he had said to them on this subject when he was at Thessalonica. What he had said on such a solemn subject as this would doubtless make a deep impression there. It could hardly fail to be repeated from mouth to mouth; and would in all likelihood be rehearsed to some who were unfriendly to him.

Now, if we turn to the narrative of St. Paul's visit and preaching at Thessalonica (to which he here refers), our attention is drawn to an incident mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles. If we consider the character of St. Luke's narrative, and recognize the work of the Holy Spirit in his writing, we shall feel assured that this incident is very significant;

The incident is as follows:

The Jews (of Thessalonica) being moved with envy (because the Gospel was preached to the Gentiles by St. Paul with success), and having taken to themselves some lewd persons of those who frequented the market, and made a tumult, set the city in an uproar, and having assaulted the house of Jason, sought to bring them forth (i. e. Paul and Silas) to the people . . . and cried, These all do things contrary to the decrees of Cæsar, saying that there is another King, Jesus. (Acts xvii. 5—7.)

This incident fits in very harmoniously with what St. Paul says here concerning his own Teaching at Thessalonica, as now expounded.

He had said to the Thessalonians that Jesus would not come and that His kingdom would not be established before the revelation of the Lawless one, who would appear in the world when the power which restrained his manifestation had been removed. That restraining power was the power of Rome.

What, therefore, was more likely than that these words of his, spoken at Thessalonica, should have been caught up by some, and made the occasion of an imputation against him on the part of the Jews, stirring up the people and the Magistrates against him on the plea that he opposed the authority of Cæsar, and taught that there was another King, who would supplant the Roman Empire, namely, Jesus?

This public accusation of St. Paul would help to keep alive his teaching on this subject in the minds of the Thessalonian Christians.

(15) On the whole it may be concluded, that the restraining Power of which St. Paul speaks in this Prophecy, was the Imperial Power of Heathen Rome.

We may now proceed to the next point;

ii. Has this restraining Power been now removed out of the way?

To this question there can be but one reply, viz. in the affirmative;

All territories which were possessed by the Emperors of Rome, in St. Paul's age, have long since been disparted among other Rulers; there is no "Roman Empire" marked in any Map of the World, there is no army under the command of any Roman Cæsar, there is no coinage which bears his name.

We may therefore pass on to Question

iii. Who is the "Man of Sin," or "the Lawless One," whom the Apostle foretells as to be revealed on the removal of the restraining Power?

1. Since, on the removal of the restraining Power, the Man of Sin was to be revealed (see vv. 6, 7, 8), and since that restraining Power has long since been removed, it follows that the Man of Sin has been long ago revealed to the world.

2. Since, also, the Man of Sin is described here by St. Paul as continuing in the world from the time of the removal of the restraining Power even to the Second Advent of Christ (v. 8), therefore the power here personified in the "Man of Sin" must be one that has continued in the world for many centuries, and continues to the present time.

3. Also, since it has this long continuance assigned to it in the prophecy,—a continuance very far exceeding the life of any one individual, therefore the "Man of Sin" cannot be only one single person.

4. The restraining Power (τὸ κατέχον, in the neuter gender, v. 6) is also called by the Apostle "he who restraineth" (ὁ κατέχων, in the masculine gender, v. 7), because the restraining Power was swayed by a series of single persons, viz. the Roman Emperors, following one another in succession.

So, in like manner, the "Man of Sin" has a corporate existence continued by means of a long succession of Persons bearing the name and exercising the power belonging to his place; or he could not remain, as the Apostle predicts he will, to the Second Advent of Christ.

5. Here we may reply to an objection. Many of the Ancient Fathers of the Church expected that the Man of Sin would be a single person, and therefore it is alleged, he is so.

Doubtless they so thought. And we should probably have done the same if we had lived in their age. They wrote while the Roman Empire was yet standing. And the Fathers were not Prophets, and could not tell how long the Roman Empire might stand. It might stand (for what they knew) till almost the time of Christ's Second Advent.

They therefore might well suppose that the revelation of the Man of Sin, who they knew was to be revealed on the removal of the Roman Empire, might soon be followed by the Second Advent of Christ. Therefore they might well imagine that he would be only a single person.

1 1 Thess. 1. 4. ch. 1. 3. 2 Tim. 1. 9. 1 Pet. 1. 2.

13 1 Ἡμεῖς δὲ ὀφείλομεν εὐχαριστεῖν τῷ Θεῷ πάντοτε περὶ ὑμῶν, ἀδελφοὶ ἠγαπημένοι ὑπὸ Κυρίου, ὅτι εἵλατο ὑμᾶς ὁ Θεὸς ἀπ' ἀρχῆς εἰς σωτηρίαν ἐν

But we have seen the removal of the Roman Empire. We know that it has been removed for many centuries. And we also know that Christ is not yet come.

We do not pretend to be wiser than the ancient Fathers. But Time, the great Interpreter of Prophecy, has made clear to us what could not be clear to them; namely, that the Man of Sin, who, as the Holy Spirit foretold by St. Paul, would be revealed after the removal of the Roman Empire, and continue to the Second Advent, cannot from the nature of the case be a single person. And we are persuaded that the ancient Fathers, who knew and taught that the restraining Power was the Power of Heathen Rome, would, if they were alive now, be also of our mind. Compare below, Introduction to the Apocalypse, p. 149, on the degree of authority to be conceded to the Fathers as interpreters of unfulfilled Prophecy.

6. The time at which the Man of Sin is to be revealed is marked by St. Paul. He was to be revealed to the world, when the restraining power had been removed.

St. Paul also remarks the place at which he is to be revealed.

He says that when the restraining Power has been removed out of the way (ἐκ μέσου, v. 7) the Man of Sin will be revealed. The power that hindered is called τὸ κατέχον, ὁ κατέχων, holding, keeping down, by occupation of a particular place.

This verb is not followed in either verse by an accusative; and therefore does not denote a direct action on the Man of Sin by which he is kept down, but it indicates that the existence of the restraining Power is an impediment to the revelation of the Man of Sin; as the possession of a seat by any one person is an hindrance to its occupation by any other.

And since the removal of the restraining power is specified as a pre-requisite for the revelation of the Man of Sin, it is intimated that the place occupied by the restraining power, will, on the removal of that power, be occupied by the Man of Sin.

7. We are therefore led to believe that the Man of Sin was revealed when the restraining power had been "removed out of the way," and that it came up in the place from which the restraining power was removed.

8. Therefore the following questions arise here:

(1) Did any great, domineering power appear in the world after the dissolution of the Roman Empire?

(2) Did any such power come up in its place?

(3) Has that power continued from that time to this?

(4) Has it been continued by a succession of persons?

The answer to these questions cannot but be in the affirmative. And therefore,

(5) What is that power?

The reply is,—

The Power of the Popes of Rome. See below on Rev. xiii. 3; xvii. 8.

(6) Does the Power of the Popes of Rome correspond in its exercise to the description of St. Paul?

Is not St. Paul's prophecy (it may be said) of too dark a character to be applied to any Christian Church?

To that inquiry it may be answered, that this is a question of which we are not competent judges;

St. Paul was inspired by the Holy Ghost. To the eye of the Holy Spirit evils may appear far more evil than they do appear to us; especially may corruptions of doctrine and worship in a Christian Church have a far more heinous and deadly aspect in His eyes than in ours. He sees all their enormities at one view in their proper light, and in all their bearings and ultimate results—even for eternity.

He not only saw at one glance what the Papacy is, and has been for many centuries, but what it may yet become before it is destroyed by the Second Advent of Christ.

If, therefore, the conclusions above stated are true, then the application of this prophecy to the Papacy cannot be set aside by any subjective notions on our part as to the moral or religious guilt of the Church of Rome.

On the contrary, the strength of the denunciatory language of the Holy Spirit on this subject, must be regarded as a guide to regulate and enlighten our judgment upon it, and as designed by the Holy Spirit to convey a warning proportionate in solemnity and awfulness to the strength of the language employed by Him to describe it.

But further:

iv. As to the correspondence between this Prophecy and its fulfilment in the Papacy, be it observed,—

(1) That the first word used to describe what is here pre-announced, is ἡ ἀποστασία (v. 3), the falling away ('discessio' or declension from the primitive standard of Christian faith). Cp. 1 Tim. iv. 1, where the cognate verb is used with the word faith.

This word indicates a previous profession of the Truth. For none can fall away from ground on which he did not once stand. It is therefore characteristic of a corrupt Church.

(2) The word ἀφίσταμαι is therefore frequently applied to the ancient Church of Judah and Israel sliding back from the Truth (see LXX in Deut. xxxii. 15. Jer. ii. 5. 19; iii. 14. Isa. xxx. 1. Dan. ix. 9.) Compare the words addressed to a Church in Rev. ii. 5, "Remember whence thou art fallen; and repent and do the first works."

The declension of the Papacy from the primitive Faith may well be called the falling away, because no one system of ἀποστασία can be compared with it in long continuity of time, and in wide extent of place.

(3) The person who is its principal agent is called the 'Son of perdition' (v. 3).

These words are used as a name in one other place of the New Testament, and are applied (not to an Infidel Power, but) to a Christian Apostle, Judas (John xvii. 12).

They may therefore be fitly applied to a Christian Bishop, a successor of the Apostles, if he betrays Christ.

And if the Bishop of Rome is unfaithful to the trust he has received from Christ, they may well be applied to him.

(4) The system, described in this prophecy, is called a Mystery.

It is not therefore an Infidel system. That is open, and is no Mystery.

It is also something which purports to be holy. Compare the word (Mystery) as used by St. Paul, 1 Tim. iii. 9. 16. Eph. v. 32.

It is therefore fitly applied to the religious system of a Church.

(5) This Mystery is not a Mystery of Faith and Godliness (1 Tim. iii. 9. 16), but of Lawlessness.

Bp. Butler (Serm. v.) calls Popery, "as it is professed at Rome, a manifest open usurpation of all human and divine authority."

The Mystery of "Lawlessness" has been revealed in the manifestation of "the Lawless one."

(6) But here it may be objected, How could this power be said to be at work in St. Paul's age?

To this it may be replied, that St. Paul was inspired by the Holy Ghost. The Holy Ghost can see what man cannot see. And he says expressly, that what he is describing was then a Mystery, and was not as yet revealed, but was only working inwardly, and would be revealed in its due season, which was not then come, and which did not arrive till some centuries afterwards.

No wonder then if we at this time (in looking back on the Apostolic age) should not be able to discern what was then not openly visible.

Besides, when we consider that the whole system of the Papacy, as such, is grounded on the corruptions of human nature, viz. on pride and lust of power, and on the operations of the Evil One opposing himself to God (as St. Paul declares, v. 9), and doing his work by subtlety and spiritual wickedness, who can decline to accept the assertion of the Holy Spirit Himself, that what was afterwards fully revealed was then secretly at work?

(7) The person in whom this system is embodied is described as ἀντικείμενος (v. 4), i. e. literally one setting himself in opposition, and particularly as a rival foundation, in the place of or against another foundation.

Now, be it remembered that St. Paul says, "Other foundation can no one lay, than that which already lieth (κεῖται, remark the word), which is Jesus Christ" (2 Cor. iii. 11).

May not he, therefore, the Bishop of Rome, who calls himself the Rock of the Church, be rightly called ὁ ἀντι-κείμενος? Cp. note on Matt. xvi. 18.

(8) The same person is said "to exalt himself exceedingly against (ἐπὶ) every one who is called God" (v. 4).

It has been said, indeed, that this description in v. 4 is not fulfilled in the Papacy, and represents a degree of pride and blasphemy far beyond what can be imputed to it.

This objection has arisen in great measure from non-attention to the words of the original. They do not import that the "man ἁγιασμῷ Πνεύματος καὶ πίστει ἀληθείας, 14 εἰς ὃ ἐκάλεσεν ὑμᾶς διὰ τοῦ εὐαγγελίου ἡμῶν, εἰς περιποίησιν δόξης τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.

15 [m] Ἄρα οὖν, ἀδελφοί, στήκετε, καὶ κρατεῖτε τὰς παραδόσεις, ἃς ἐδιδάχθητε εἴτε διὰ λόγου εἴτε δι' ἐπιστολῆς ἡμῶν.

16 [n] Αὐτὸς δὲ ὁ Κύριος ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς, καὶ ὁ Θεὸς καὶ Πατὴρ ἡμῶν, ὁ ἀγαπήσας ἡμᾶς καὶ δοὺς παράκλησιν αἰωνίαν καὶ ἐλπίδα ἀγαθὴν ἐν χάριτι, 17 [o] παρακαλέσαι ὑμῶν τὰς καρδίας, καὶ στηρίξαι ἐν παντὶ ἔργῳ καὶ λόγῳ ἀγαθῷ.

III. 1 [a] Τὸ λοιπὸν προσεύχεσθε, ἀδελφοί, περὶ ἡμῶν, ἵνα ὁ λόγος τοῦ Κυρίου τρέχῃ καὶ δοξάζηται καθὼς καὶ πρὸς ὑμᾶς, 2 [b] καὶ ἵνα ῥυσθῶμεν ἀπὸ τῶν ἀτόπων καὶ πονηρῶν ἀνθρώπων, οὐ γὰρ πάντων ἡ πίστις. 3 [c] Πιστὸς δέ ἐστιν ὁ Κύριος, ὃς στηρίξει ὑμᾶς, καὶ φυλάξει ἀπὸ τοῦ πονηροῦ. 4 [d] Πεποίθαμεν δὲ ἐν Κυρίῳ ἐφ' ὑμᾶς, ὅτι ἃ παραγγέλλομεν ὑμῖν καὶ ποιεῖτε καὶ ποιήσετε. 5 [e] Ὁ δὲ

m 1 Cor. 15. 58. & 16. 13. & 11. 2. Phil. 4. 1. ch. 3. 6.
n 1 Pet. 1. 3—5. 1 John 3. 2, 3.
o 1 Thess. 3. 2, 13. Heb. 13. 9. 1 Pet. 5. 10. Jude 24.
a Eph. 6. 19. Col. 4. 3. b Acts 28. 24. Rom. 10. 16. & 15. 31. c John 17. 15. 1 Cor. 1. 9. & 10. 13. 1 Thess. 5. 24. d 2 Cor. 7. 16.
e 1 Chron. 29. 18.

---

of sin" exalts himself above every one that is called God, but that he exalts himself exceedingly against every one that is so called. See note above on the translation of that verse.

Is this assertion too strong for the Papacy?

In Holy Scripture Civil rulers are called gods, Elohim (Ps. lxxxii. 6). Cp. John x. 34.

It is unnecessary to prove that the Bishop of Rome exalts himself exceedingly against them. Every Pope in succession, when he is crowned with the tiara, is solemnly addressed by the minister who crowns him as "Pater Principum et Regum, RECTOR ORBIS." And it is said on his coins, "Omnes Reges servient ei." See below on Rev. xiii. 5.

(9) It is further said that "he exalteth himself exceedingly against every thing that is an object of reverence (σέβασμα), so that he goes into The Temple and takes his seat there, showing himself that he is God" (v. 4).

The Temple of God here (ναὸς Θεοῦ) is the Church. See Jerome, Chrys., Theodoret, Theophyl., cited by Bp. Andrewes, c. Bellarm. p. 226.

The action which is specified here in evidence of his exaltation against every σέβασμα, is that of his session in the ναός or holy place of the Church of God.

It may be also noted that in the only other place in the New Testament where the word σέβασμα occurs, it is used to introduce the mention of an Altar (Acts xvii. 23).

This prediction is signally fulfilled by the first public official act which is performed by every Pope in succession on his elevation to the Papacy, and by which he takes possession of his place as such.

Every Pope on his election is carried into the principal Church at Rome, his Cathedral, St. Peter's.

He is there lifted up by the Cardinals, and is placed on the high Altar. When there placed, and sitting in the Church of God, on the Altar of God, he is adored by them kneeling before him and kissing his feet.

The word by which this act is described by the Church of Rome herself is no other than "the Adoration" (see Notitia Curiæ Romanæ, p. 125); and the words on the Papal Coin, "Quem creant, adorant" (Numism. Pontif. p. 5); and the description of the ceremony, in the Cæremoniale Romanum, ed. 1572, Lib. iii. sect. 1. See below on Rev. xiii. 14; xvii. 1. 8.

(10) This Prophecy of St. Paul bears a striking resemblance to certain prophecies of St. John in the Book of Revelation, and appears to concern the same subject as those Prophecies. And there is good reason for believing that those Prophecies of St. John describe the workings of the Papal Power. See below on Revelation, xiii. 5; xvii. 8. 11.

(11) Lastly, if the above statements and reasonings are true, they will need no authorities to confirm the conclusion to which they have now led. But it may be satisfactory to the reader to remember that this conclusion is one which is sanctioned by the names of some of the holiest, wisest, most charitable, and judicious persons that have expounded the word of Inspiration, particularly Bp. Jewel, Richard Hooker, Bp. Andrewes, and Bp. Sanderson, and the framers of the Authorized English Version of the Holy Bible. See their Dedication prefixed to the English Bible, where they speak of "the Man of Sin;" and Bp. Jewel's Works, Portion ii. pp. 891—923, ed. Camb. 1847; Hooker, Sermon on Jude 17, pp. 841. 843; Bp. Andrewes, c. Bellarmin. c. ix. and x. p. 220; Bp. Sanderson, i. p. 338, iii. pp. 13. 146. 161. 283; the English Translation, Dedication to King James I., A.D. 1611.

11. πιστεῦσαι τῷ ψεύδει] to believe the lie. Cp. the Prophecy, 1 Tim. iv. 2.

13. ἀπ' ἀρχῆς] from the beginning. So Elz. with A, D, F, I, K.

Some of the best MSS., B, F, G, and several cursives, have ἀπαρχὴν, and Vulg. has 'primitias,' and so the Æthiopic Version and Lachmann; a reading not unworthy of consideration, and not unlikely to be altered by copyists into ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, from non-advertence to the fact that the Thessalonians might be called the first-fruits of the harvest of the Gospel in Europe, having been converted to Christ by the Apostle of the Gentiles on his first missionary visit to Greece; a circumstance which would impart a special significance to the word ἀπαρχήν. Cp. 1 Cor. xvi. 15, ἀπαρχὴ τῆς Ἀχαΐας. Phil. iv. 15, ἐν ἀρχῇ τοῦ εὐαγγελίου.

However, the reading in the text is confirmed by the preponderance of authority, e. g. Eph. i. 4, and appears on the whole to be most in harmony with the context, as declaring the wonderful mystery that the Gentiles, though despised by the Jews, and for a long time aliens from God, were chosen by Him from the beginning. See Eph. ii. 1—19; iii. 1—9.

14. εἰς περιποίησιν] 'in acquisitionem' (Vulg.). See on 1 Thess. v. 9.

16. αὐτὸς ὁ Κύριος ἡ. Ἰ. Χ.] our Lord Jesus Christ Himself. Jesus Christ is here named before the Father—a proof of his co-equality. Chrys. Cp. 2 Cor. xiii. 14.

— αἰωνίαν] This feminine form is found in the New Testament only here and in Heb. ix. 12.

17. ἔργῳ καὶ λόγῳ] So most of the best MSS. and Editions, and Vulg. 'in omni opere et sermone bono.' Elz. has λόγῳ καὶ ἔργῳ, a reading which enfeebles the sense.

CH. III. 2. οὐ γὰρ πάντων ἡ πίστις] for faith is not the property and privilege of all men, but only of those who have special pre-requisites for its reception, namely, who possess the qualities of meekness, and gentleness, docility, and readiness to receive the evidences of the Gospel, and to listen to its precepts.

The construction of the words may be compared (as it is by Wetst.) with the proverb οὐ παντὸς ἀνδρὸς εἰς Κόρινθόν ἐστ' ὁ πλοῦς.

The connexion therefore is, Pray that we the Ministers of the Gospel may be delivered from absurd and evil men; and do not be surprised, perplexed, and staggered because we have enemies, and that the Gospel, although it is the word of God, does not make converts of all men; for absurd and wicked men are by their absurdity and wickedness disqualified from receiving it. Being ἄτοποι καὶ πονηροὶ, they are not εὔθετοι εἰς βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ (Luke ix. 62).

The Gospel hides itself from the proud and ungodly, and reveals itself to those who are humble, and practise what they know. See our Lord's words, Matt. x. 11 and xi. 25, and Dr. Barrow's excellent observations quoted above on Acts x. 5.

3. τοῦ πονηροῦ] the Evil One. See Eph. vi. 16. 1 Thess. ii. 18; iii. 5. 2 Thess. ii. 9, whence it will appear that in these, his two earliest Epistles, St. Paul is careful to remind his hearers of the existence and activity of the Devil, whose works they had renounced in their Baptism.

4. παραγγέλλομεν] we charge you. A strong word used by St. Paul five times in these Epistles to the Thessalonians (1 Thess. iv. 11. 2 Thess. iii. 4. 6. 10. 12), and once to Timothy (1 Tim. vi. 13), and twice to the Corinthians (1 Cor. vii. 10; xi. 17), but not in his other Epistles.

Κύριος κατευθύναι ὑμῶν τὰς καρδίας εἰς τὴν ἀγάπην τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ εἰς τὴν ὑπομονὴν τοῦ Χριστοῦ.

f 1 Thess. 4. 11. & 5. 14. vv. 11, 14, 15. g 1 Cor. 4. 16. & 11. 1. 1 Thess. 1. 6. & 2. 10. & 4. 11.
h Acts 18. 3. & 20. 34. 1 Cor. 4. 12. 2 Cor. 11. 9. & 12. 13. 1 Thess. 2. 9.
i Matt. 10. 10. 1 Cor. 4. 16. & 9. 3, 6. & 11. 1. 1 Thess. 1. 6. & 2. 6. Phil. 3. 17. 1 Tim. 5. 18. k Gen. 3. 19. 1 Thess. 4. 11. 1 Eph. 4. 28. 1 Thess. 4. 11. Ecclus. 3. 23.
m Gal. 6. 9.
n Matt. 18. 17. 1 Cor. 5. 9, 11. ver. 6.

6 f Παραγγέλλομεν δὲ ὑμῖν, ἀδελφοί, ἐν ὀνόματι τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, στέλλεσθαι ὑμᾶς ἀπὸ παντὸς ἀδελφοῦ ἀτάκτως περιπατοῦντος, καὶ μὴ κατὰ τὴν παράδοσιν ἣν παρελάβοσαν παρ' ἡμῶν. 7 g Αὐτοὶ γὰρ οἴδατε πῶς δεῖ μιμεῖσθαι ἡμᾶς, ὅτι οὐκ ἠτακτήσαμεν ἐν ὑμῖν, 8 h οὐδὲ δωρεὰν ἄρτον ἐφάγομεν παρά τινος, ἀλλ' ἐν κόπῳ καὶ μόχθῳ νύκτα καὶ ἡμέραν ἐργαζόμενοι, πρὸς τὸ μὴ ἐπιβαρῆσαί τινα ὑμῶν· 9 i οὐχ ὅτι οὐκ ἔχομεν ἐξουσίαν, ἀλλ' ἵνα ἑαυτοὺς τύπον δῶμεν ὑμῖν εἰς τὸ μιμεῖσθαι ἡμᾶς. 10 k Καὶ γὰρ ὅτε ἦμεν πρὸς ὑμᾶς, τοῦτο παρηγγέλλομεν ὑμῖν, ὅτι εἴ τις οὐ θέλει ἐργάζεσθαι μηδὲ ἐσθιέτω. 11 l Ἀκούομεν γάρ τινας περιπατοῦντας ἐν ὑμῖν ἀτάκτως, μηδὲν ἐργαζομένους ἀλλὰ περιεργαζομένους. 12 l Τοῖς δὲ τοιούτοις παραγγέλλομεν καὶ παρακαλοῦμεν διὰ τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, ἵνα μετὰ ἡσυχίας ἐργαζόμενοι τὸν ἑαυτῶν ἄρτον ἐσθίωσιν.

13 m Ὑμεῖς δέ, ἀδελφοί, μὴ ἐγκακήσητε καλοποιοῦντες. 14 n Εἰ δέ τις οὐχ ὑπακούει τῷ λόγῳ ἡμῶν διὰ τῆς ἐπιστολῆς, τοῦτον σημειοῦσθε· καὶ μὴ συν-

6. στέλλεσθαι ἀπό] to shun. Another nautical word suited to the inhabitants of a maritime and commercial city like Thessalonica. See above, on ii. 2. St. Paul is fond of such metaphors, especially in writing or speaking to such persons; see note on Acts xx. 20, and 2 Cor. viii. 20. The literal meaning is, to take in your sails (στέλλεσθαι τὰ ἱστία, see those passages), so as to be able to steer clear of a rock or reef, or any other danger; hence, in maritime language, to part company, and decline from, any person or thing, as here, that may be injurious in your Christian voyage.

— παρελάβοσαν] So A, D, and so ℵ (Codex Sinaiticus), and Gb., Tisch., Lün., Alf. Cp. Winer, p. 71; Lobeck, Phryn. p. 349; Sturz. de Dial. Maced. p. 58; and the forms εἶχοσαν in some MSS. of John xv. 22. 24, and ἐδίδοσαν xix. 3. Elz. has παρέλαβε. D, E, I, K have παρέλαβον, which confirms παρελάβοσαν. B, F, G have παρελάβετε.

8. κόπῳ καὶ μόχθῳ] See 1 Thess. ii. 9.

— νύκτα καὶ ἡμέραν ἐργαζόμενοι] working night and day. See on 1 Thess. ii. 9. B, F, G have νυκτὸς κ. ἡμέρας, and so ℵ.

Every one is born to labour, though not to labour in the same way. And our Lord showed that the Minister of the Gospel is not to be supposed by himself or others to be not a labourer; for He said specially of His Apostles, "The labourer is worthy of his meat" (Matt. x. 10). They are ἐργάται and ἐργάζονται: and therefore St. Paul does not claim exemption for himself from the duty of labouring, when he says that he had power to abstain from labouring with his hands, and be chargeable to others for his support in preaching the Gospel. "He laboured more abundantly than they all" (1 Cor. xv. 10), because he was most zealous in preaching the Gospel.

S. Augustine (de Opere Monachorum, vi. p. 8. 12) expresses his surprise that St. Paul should have been enabled to labour so much with his hands, and yet preach the Gospel with such energy and success. "Quando autem soleret operari, id est, quibus temporum spatiis, ne ab evangelizando impediretur, quis possit comprehendere? Sanè quia et nocturnis et diurnis horis operabatur, ipse non tacuit." And (p. 819), "Ipsi Apostolo quomodo vacaret operari manibus suis nisi ad erogandum verbum Dei certa tempora constituret? Neque enim et hoc Deus latere nos voluit." And for specimens of St. Paul's unwearied energy in preaching, he points to the narrative in the Acts of the Lord's Day at Troas (Acts xx. 7), and his employment at Athens (Acts xvii. 17—21).

— ἐπιβαρῆσαι—ἔχομεν ἐξουσίαν] See above, 1 Thess. ii. 6—9, and below, 1 Cor. ix. 4.

— οὐχ ὅτι] not that we have not authority: see 1 Cor. ix. 4, and on the use of οὐχ ὅτι cp. 2 Cor. i. 24; iii. 5. Phil. iii. 12. Ellicott.

10. μηδὲ ἐσθιέτω] neither let him eat, i. e. from the offerings of the faithful. An allusion to alms collected in the Church for the poor (cp. 1 Tim. v. 3, 4, and v. 16, μὴ βαρείσθω ἡ Ἐκκλησία), by relieving them from the Church fund. So Bp. Sanderson, iii. p. 112. Cp. Blunt's Lectures, pp. 27—29.

S. Augustine has made this precept the text of his treatise "De Opere Monachorum" (vi. 799—838), in which he declares his disapprobation of those who enter a monastic state without intention to labour in it, but only to live a contemplative life; and he censures them as "in quandam sanctam societatem otiosissimè congregatos."

11. μηδὲν ἐργαζομένους ἀλλὰ περιεργαζομένους] not busy, but busybodies. "Non agentes sed sat-agentes;" a saying ascribed by Quintilian (vi. 3. 54) to Domitius Afer, speaking of Mallius Sura (Lünemann). Cp. 1 Tim. v. 13, ἀργαὶ . . . καὶ περίεργοι.

For similar paronomasias in St. Paul's Epistles, see 1 Cor. vii. 31. 2 Cor. iv. 8; v. 4. Rom. i. 20; v. 19. Phil. iii. 2. Philem. 20. 2 Tim. iii. 4. As to the sentiment, see on 1 Thess. iv. 11, and Rom. xii. 11; and Martial's Epigram, i. 80, "Semper agis causas, et res agis, Attale, semper | Est, non est, quod agas, Attale, semper agis," &c.

12. παραγγέλλομεν] we charge. After this severer word (see v. 4 and 1 Thess. iv. 11) he adds the milder term παρακαλοῦμεν, we exhort, and that in the name of Christ, tempering sternness with love. (Chrys.)

13. μὴ ἐγκακήσητε (so A, B, D*, and so ℵ)] do not faint in well-doing. Καλοποιεῖν is to be distinguished from ἀγαθοποιεῖν, which would mean to do good in the way of bounty, whereas καλοποιεῖν has a more general signification, to do well in the sight of man as well as God (2 Cor. viii. 21. Rom. xii. 17), and not only by beneficence, but by honest industry in our calling. Compare Gal. vi. 9, where the Apostle is speaking of providing maintenance for the Christian Ministry, τὸ δὲ καλὸν ποιοῦντες μὴ ἐγκακῶμεν. This precept is to be connected with what precedes and with what follows. Do not ye faint in doing well, although there may be many among you that presume on your goodness, and make it a plea for indolence. Labour yourselves, that ye may be able to relieve the indigent (Eph. iv. 28). Learn to maintain good works (καλὰ ἔργα, Tit. ii. 7. 14; iii. 8) for necessary uses, to help the needy, that ye be not unfruitful (Tit. iii. 14). But do not relieve those who can work and will not. By relieving such as have no claim to relief, you will encourage them and others in indolence, and disable yourselves for relieving those who have a claim on your bounty. Nor yet allow yourselves to be deterred from doing good by the ill conduct of the indolent, who can work and will not. Let not their improbity harden you against those who would work and cannot. Let not their evil overcome your good. (Theodoret.) Be bountiful to the poor, who are poor indeed; but if any one does not obey our precept in this Epistle (cp. 1 Thess. v. 27), particularly if he will not labour in his calling, but is indolent and a busybody, mark that man, and have no fellowship with him, that he may be ashamed. Cp. Augustine, viii. p. 814. Bp. Sanderson, ii. p. 186. The Macedonians were not disobedient to St. Paul's precept. See his honourable testimony to their beneficence, 2 Cor. viii. 1, 2.

14. διὰ τῆς ἐπιστολῆς] by the Epistle from me. Cp. 1 Thess. v. 27. Rom. xvi. 22. Col. iv. 16, where the phrase ἡ ἐπιστολὴ refers to the then present Epistle; and so the Syriac, Arabic, and Gothic Versions here.

In 1 Cor. v. 9, and 2 Cor. vii. 8, the phrase ἡ ἐπιστολὴ refers to a former Epistle. Probably both senses are combined here; and the Apostle means, that if any one obeys not his word, commanded by the Epistle present or past from him, he is to be noted; and the words τῆς ἐπιστολῆς here will be best rendered my Epistle.

— τοῦτον σημειοῦσθε] set a mark on this man. A proof that St. Paul's Epistle was well known to all at Thessalonica. It was to be a rule of action, and all who swerved from that rule were to be avoided. It was like a law, publicly promulgated to all, because ἀναμίγνυσθε αὐτῷ ἵνα ἐντραπῇ, 15 καὶ μὴ ὡς ἐχθρὸν ἡγεῖσθε, ἀλλὰ νουθετεῖτε ὡς ἀδελφόν. 16 ° Αὐτὸς δὲ ὁ Κύριος τῆς εἰρήνης δῴη ὑμῖν τὴν εἰρήνην διὰ παντὸς ἐν παντὶ τρόπῳ. Ὁ Κύριος μετὰ πάντων ὑμῶν.

17 ᵖ Ὁ ἀσπασμὸς τῇ ἐμῇ χειρὶ Παύλου, ὅ ἐστι σημεῖον ἐν πάσῃ ἐπιστολῇ, οὕτως γράφω· 18 Ἡ χάρις τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ μετὰ πάντων ὑμῶν· ἀμήν.

° Rom. 15. 33. & 16. 20. 1 Cor. 14. 33. 2 Cor. 5. 19—21. & 13. 11. Eph. 2. 14—17. Phil. 4. 9. 1 Thess. 5. 23. Heb. 7. 2.
ᵖ 1 Cor. 16. 21. Col. 4. 18.

to be obeyed by all. This promulgation was effected by its public reading in the Church. Cp. 1 Thess. v. 27.

15. μὴ ὡς ἐχθρὸν ἡγεῖσθε] do not regard him as an enemy. See S. Polycarp's Epistle to the Philippians (c. ii.), where he imitates this language of St. Paul: "Non sicut inimicos tales existimetis," &c.

17. ὁ ἀσπασμός] The Salutation here specified is the Benediction at the close of the Epistle, "The Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all." He made this addition with his own hand, as a safeguard against forgeries disseminated in his name (see above, ii. 2). Instead of writing 'Farewell' (Ἔρρωσθε), the Apostle wrote, The Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ. And let us who receive the Apostolic Benediction in this Epistle bless Christ Who spake by him. (Theodoret.) His salutation is his prayer. He begins his Epistle and ends it with 'Grace.' (Chrys. and Theophyl.)

Accordingly, we find the words, "The Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ," or, "Grace be with you," or some similar salutation containing the word 'Grace,' at the close of all St. Paul's Epistles. See note above, on 1 Thess. v. 27, 28, and Introduction to the present Epistle, § iv., and below, on Heb. xiii. 25.

— ἐν πάσῃ ἐπιστολῇ] in every Epistle. Therefore, even now, when he had written only two short Epistles, he entertained the design of writing other Epistles hereafter, which would come into the hands of the readers of the present Epistle; and this caution shows that he intended that the readers of his earliest Epistles should become acquainted with those other Epistles and be able to recognize them as his.

— ἀμήν] Amen. This word is not in B, nor in ℵ; it is in A, D, E, F, G, I, K.

The subscription to this Epistle in Elz., purporting that it was written from Athens, is found in A, B, I, K, and in the Arabic Version, but not in the Syriac (in Walton, p. 820), which names "Laodicea of Pisidia" as the place of writing. See above, on 1 Thess. v. at the end. The Gothic Version of Ulphilas has no subscription.

INTRODUCTION

TO THE

EPISTLE TO THE GALATIANS.

I. On the Date of the Epistle to the Galatians.

1. This Epistle was written after St. Paul had visited the Galatians, and had preached the Gospel to them as an Apostle; for he speaks of their enthusiastic reception of him in that character. (Gal. iv. 13—15.)

2. St. Paul does not appear to have visited Galatia before the period mentioned in Acts xvi. 6, which was a little prior in time to his first transit from Asia into Macedonia, A.D. 52[1].

3. This result agrees with another note of time specified in this Epistle, as follows:

This Epistle was written after the Council of Jerusalem, and after St. Peter's visit to Antioch, which it describes Gal. ii. 1—11[2]. The Council of Jerusalem was held A.D. 50.

4. The question therefore arises,

How long after St. Paul's first Apostolic visit to Galatia in A.D. 52, was the Epistle to the Galatians written?

5. It has been affirmed by some learned writers[3], that this Epistle was written after the second Apostolic visit which St. Paul made to Galatia, and which is described in Acts xviii. 23, and which did not take place before A.D. 54.

6. This inference has been derived from the expression τὸ πρότερον in chap. iv. 13, which, it is alleged, signifies "the former visit," and therefore shows that the Apostle had visited the Galatians a second time, when he wrote this Epistle.

But this inference cannot rightly be deduced from that expression. See the note on that passage.

7. It has also been said by some persons, that St. Paul must have been twice in Galatia when he wrote this Epistle, because he asks in chap. iv. 16, whether he has "become their enemy," ἀληθεύων αὐτοῖς?

He could not, it is alleged, have become their enemy at his first visit, for they then received him as their friend. (See Gal. iv. 13, 14.) Nor would he have become their enemy by what he writes in this Epistle, for they had not yet received it.

He must therefore, it is said, have become their enemy at some other visit; namely, as is alleged, at his second visit to Galatia described in Acts xviii. 23.

Therefore it has been inferred, that this Epistle was written after the date of that visit, viz. A.D. 54.

8. But this argument has little weight. St. Paul does not affirm that he has become their enemy by speaking the truth; but he says, in the language of surprise and indignation, if he has become their enemy, it is, by being faithful to them.

He had shown this faithfulness to them by preaching the Gospel to them at the first, without imposing upon them the Levitical Law as necessary to salvation. He had continued to show the same faithfulness to them, by resisting all the attempts of the Judaizers to enforce the Ceremonial Law

[1] See Chronological Synopsis prefixed to the Acts, p. xxxix, and the Chronological Table before this volume.

[2] See note there, and on Acts xv. 20. 39, and Chronol. Synops. prefixed to the Acts, p. xxxv, and the Chronological Table prefixed to this volume.

[3] See Meyer, Einleitung, p. 7, and on iv. 13. Cp. Wieseler, Chron. Syn., pp. 30. 277. De Wette, p. 3, and Alford, Prolegomena, p. 4. Davidson's Introduction, ii. p. 295. Conybeare and Howson, ii. ch. xviii. pp. 158—164. Guerike, Einleitung, p. 350 on other Gentile converts, whose cause was the same as that of the Galatians; and he now shows his faithfulness to them by asserting and maintaining their Christian liberty in this Epistle. And if he has now become their enemy, it is not by any change in his own conduct or language to them, for he has ever been the same towards them; but by his stedfast continuance in the same faithfulness towards them which he had shown from the first.

There is a generous irony in the words here used. Have your feelings towards me been changed, because I continue unchanged in my affection towards you? Have I, in a word, become your enemy by remaining true to you? (iv. 16.)

The force of this Apostolic expostulation is almost lost, if it be assumed that the word ἀληθεύων refers to some other visit, in which he is supposed to have used unwonted severity towards them, by which he excited their enmity.

9. It has been also asserted by some learned writers, that the Epistle to the Galatians bears internal evidence of being composed about the same time as the two Epistles to the Corinthians and the Epistle to the Romans.

If so, the Epistle to the Galatians cannot have been written before A.D. 57 or 58[4].

This has been argued,

(1) From the nature of the subject of this Epistle; and

(2) From resemblances of style.

10. As to the nature of its subject—the Doctrine of Justification by Faith—it is true that it bears much similitude to the Epistle to the Romans[5]; but this circumstance, though it may be an evidence of identity of authorship, cannot be received as a proof of synchronism of composition.

An author, like St. Paul, whose works were to be circulated throughout Christendom, and to be read publicly in Churches, would not be inclined to make the same Doctrine the subject of two Epistles written at the same time; although he might find it needful by experience to reinforce or expand the same arguments and admonitions after an interval of some years. It does not therefore seem probable, a priori, that the Epistles to the Galatians and Romans were composed at the same time.

As to resemblance of style between this Epistle and those to the Corinthians and Romans, doubtless it is striking[6]; but this does not prove coincidence of time in their composition. Still less does this resemblance in diction show that the Epistle to the Galatians was written after the second to the Corinthians, as some learned writers assert (see Prof. Lightfoot's edition, pp. 35—55.)

If it be granted that the Epistle to the Galatians was written before the Epistles to the Corinthians, and that no Epistle intervened between it and them, all is conceded which ought to be claimed on the ground of such a resemblance[7].

11. The Epistle to the Galatians deals with the Doctrine of Justification: and it has been said, that the declaration of this Doctrine appertains to an advanced place in the Apostolic teaching; and that, therefore, the Epistle to the Galatians is not one of the earliest Epistles of St. Paul.

But on this statement it may be remarked, that the Doctrine of Justification, handled in this Epistle, is a primary and elementary one. It concerns the first principles of Christianity. Accordingly, we find it in the first Missionary Sermon which the Apostle is recorded to have preached, —that at Antioch in Pisidia. (Acts xiii. 38, 39, and note.) Were the Gentiles to be circumcised or not, at their admission into the Christian Church? Was circumcision to be enforced upon them as necessary to salvation?

This was the question at issue. It met the Apostle, it met every Christian teacher, even at the baptismal font; and he must be able to answer that question before he could proceed to administer the Sacrament of Baptism, and receive a Gentile convert into the Church of Christ.

12. Besides, in another respect, the Epistle to the Galatians claims for itself an early place among St. Paul's Epistles.

[4] See Chronological Synopsis to the Acts, and the Table in this volume, p. xiv.

[5] This has been shown by many, especially Prof. Lightfoot, in his valuable edition of this Epistle. Camb. 1865, pp. 44—47.

[6] As is shown by Prof. Lightfoot, pp. 42—44. 48.

[7] That the Epistle to the Galatians preceded that to the Romans, as Chrysostom supposed, will be allowed by all who carefully consider the contents of these two Epistles. See Chrys. Prolog. ad Ep. ad Rom., and Theophylact. The words of Tertullian are remarkable (Ad Marcion. v. 2): "Principalem adversus Judaismum Epistolam nos quoque confitemur quæ Galatas docet." Tertullian, therefore, believed that the Epistle to the Galatians was written before the Epistles to the Corinthians and the Romans; and accordingly, in his fifth book against Marcion, he makes his extracts from it, and from them, in that order, i. e.

1. Galatians.
2. 1 Corinthians.
3. 2 Corinthians.
4. Romans.

This assertion of principalitas for the Epistle to the Galatians does not seem to touch the question of the order of the Apostle's shorter Epistles, such for instance as the Epistles to the Thessalonians, which he puts in a different class; see c. 15, "brevioribus quoque Epistolis non pigebit intendere." The order specified by Tertullian as that of the four Epistles mentioned above, is that adopted in the present edition; and has been followed by many learned writers.

Was the Author himself to be received as an Apostle of Christ?

In his two first-written Epistles, those to the Thessalonians, St. Paul had not introduced himself as an Apostle; he had not assumed the Apostolic name[8]; he had not written in his own name alone; but at the beginning of both those Epistles he had associated with himself two other persons as colleagues, Silas and Timotheus, who certainly had no claim to the title of Apostles.

It might therefore be alleged that he did not venture to call himself an Apostle. Was he then to be received as such?

He had not written those two Epistles with his own hand. (See 2 Thess. iii. 17.) Was not this also, it might be asked, a sign that he did not venture to put forth his doctrine on his own independent authority?

Was St. Paul to be recognized as holding the same rank in the Church as St. Peter, St. James, and St. John, and the other Apostles who were called by Christ Himself upon earth, and had received the gift of the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost? Was St. Paul to be allowed to go forth and preach to the world as the Apostle of the Gentiles, when, as was alleged by his Judaizing opponents, who tracked his steps in order to disparage his authority, and to seduce his converts, and who succeeded in this attempt among the Galatians, his preaching was not in accordance with that of those other Apostles whom Christ Himself had called, and who had been visibly ordained with supernatural gifts of the Holy Ghost?

These were grave questions, and they were preliminary ones. They required an immediate answer. They must be disposed of, before St. Paul could expect to gain any footing for the Gospel, preached by his ministry, in any part of the world.

They must be answered without delay, in order that those who, like the Galatians, had lost, or were losing, the wholesome soundness of Evangelical Truth, and had been infected by the contagion of Judaism, might be recovered to the Faith in Christ.

13. These circumstances seem to require that a very early place should be assigned to the Epistle to the Galatians, in which these urgent questions are encountered and answered.

Let the reader peruse the first and second chapters of this Epistle with these considerations in his mind; and it is probable that he will be ready to recognize in these two introductory chapters a noble Apostolical Apology addressed by St. Paul to the Churches of Galatia, to which the Epistle was first sent, and to all the Churches of Christendom, to which copies of it would be transmitted, and in which it would be publicly read.

Let it be borne in mind also, that this Epistle was distinguished from his former Epistles, and from most of his later Epistles, by being written by him in his own name alone, and with his own hand (vi. 11).

In those two chapters St. Paul displays his own Apostolic credentials to the world. He comes forth boldly and independently as the Ambassador of Christ, as one fully instructed by Him, and as such he claims to be heard. "Even though an angel from heaven," he says, "preach to you any thing beside what I preached to you, and ye received from me, let him be accursed." (Gal. i. 8, 9.)

These declarations bespeak an early date for this Epistle.

14. Besides, if, as has been alleged, this Epistle to the Galatians had been written so late as the two Epistles to the Corinthians, and as that to the Romans, and at the same time with these Epistles (viz. A.D. 57 or 58), it is probable that this Epistle would have contained some reference to an important matter which at that time occupied much of St. Paul's time and thoughts, and on which he dwells so forcibly in those three Epistles, viz. the collection of alms for the poor Jewish Christians at Jerusalem[9].

St. Paul himself was the main instrument in making that collection; he was appointed to convey it to Jerusalem, and did convey it thither soon after he had written these three Epistles[1].

A reference to that charitable collection would have had a special relevancy in this Epistle to the Galatians. It would have afforded a practical proof that though the author opposed the false doctrines of Judaizers, he was not biassed by any prejudices against the Jewish Christians at Jerusalem, who were zealous in behalf of the Levitical Law (Acts xxi. 20), and that he was actuated by feelings of love towards their persons, although he impugned their principles. He therefore does not omit to mention in this Epistle to the Galatians (chap. ii. 10) that before the Council of [8] See note above, 1 Thess. i. 1.

[9] See 1 Cor. xvi. 1—4. 2 Cor. viii. 4. 2 Cor. ix. 1, 2. 12. Rom. xv. 26.
[1] Rom. xv. 26. Acts xxiv. 17.

Jerusalem he "was forward to remember the poor," i. e. the poor saints at Jerusalem; an assertion confirmed and explained by the Acts of the Apostles (Acts xi. 27—30; xii. 25).

How much force would have accrued to this important affirmation if he could have also said, that at the very time in which he was engaged in writing this Epistle, he was making a charitable collection for the poor saints at Jerusalem!

The estrangement of many of the Galatians from him at the time of writing this Epistle might, and probably would, have deterred him from enjoining such a collection on them by his own authority, but it would have even suggested a reason for a reference to the collection itself in which he was zealously engaged.

This collection would have been a demonstrative argument to the Galatians that his earnest zeal against the errors of the Judaizers was accompanied with fervent charity to the erring, and could not be imputed to any personal animosity on his part, but was prompted by love of the Truth, and even by love for the erring, whom he desired to recover from their error.

He enlarges upon the subject of this collection in those three other Epistles (the two to the Corinthians, and that to the Romans); and he would not have omitted to mention the collection in this Epistle, if it had been written at the same time as those Epistles when he was engaged in making the collection.

15. This consideration derives additional force from the fact, that St. Paul, in his first Epistle to the Corinthians, does not omit to mention that he had then given an order, on the subject of this collection, to the Churches of Galatia (1 Cor. xvi. 1), "Concerning the collection for the saints (the poor Christians of Jerusalem), as I gave charge (διέταξα) to the Churches of Galatia, so do ye."

16. When did he give this charge to the Churches of Galatia?

Not in this Epistle,—there is no reference to it there.

But he might, it is said, have sent an oral message to that effect with the Epistle.

Undoubtedly he might have done so. But why should he not mention in the Epistle to the Galatians what he has mentioned in all those other Epistles? If an oral message would suffice for one, why not for all?

Besides, the charge was given, he says, to the Churches of Galatia. It was not merely sent to one, but to many.

This circumstance bespeaks some general mission, or a visit from the Apostle himself.

17. Had then St. Paul any communication with the Churches of Galatia a short time before he wrote his first Epistle to the Corinthians, in which he speaks of having given a direction "to the Churches of Galatia" (1 Cor. xvi. 1)?

He had. The history of the Acts of the Apostles relates that, after his first visit to Corinth, he went by way of Ephesus up to Jerusalem, and thence returned to Antioch, the centre of his missionary labours, where he remained some time, and thence came back to Ephesus through the country of Galatia and Phrygia, "confirming[2] all the disciples[3]."

After his return to Ephesus he wrote his first Epistle to the Corinthians from that City.

It was probably in that visit to Galatia, where he "confirmed all the disciples," that he gave this charge concerning the collection to "the Churches of Galatia," to which he refers in his first Epistle to the Corinthians.

18. He had "confirmed the disciples" in Galatia. His Apostolic authority was now re-established there; and he was now in a condition to give an injunction, which, at the time when he wrote his Epistle to the Galatians, and their minds had been estranged from him by false teachers, would not have been so readily given, nor cheerfully obeyed.

This consideration, therefore, leads us to place the Epistle before that second visit to Galatia.

19. Besides, let it be remembered that when the affections of a Church had been alienated from him, as was the case with the Churches of Galatia, it was not St. Paul's custom to visit that Church in person at once. As he himself says to a Church thus disaffected, "He would not come to it in sorrow (2 Cor. ii. 1), and with a rod" (1 Cor. iv. 21).

However desirous he might be to see it, yet in order to spare the offending, he would not come to them (2 Cor. i. 23), even at the risk of being taunted (as he was) with timidity and vacillation (2 Cor. i. 17).

His practice was, first, to try the more lenient process of an Epistle, and then, when the [2] ἐπιστηρίζων. [3] Acts xviii. 23.

Epistle had wrought its proper effect upon them, but not till then, he would follow up the Epistle by a visit.

This Apostolic method of retrieving an erring Church is illustrated by the history of his dealings with the Church of Corinth (2 Cor. i. 23; ii. 1).

He would probably have resorted to the same wise and merciful treatment in restoring his spiritual children of Galatia.

Therefore, on this ground also, it seems to be more probable that the Epistle should have preceded the Visit, than that the Visit should have preceded the Epistle.

Accordingly, we find in the Epistle to the Galatians a desire expressed on his part to visit them (iv. 20). But he first writes to them.

20. Again; the terms in which that second visit to Galatia is described in the Acts of the Apostles, deserve careful attention.

We there read, that "he went through in order (καθεξῆς) the region of Galatia and Phrygia, confirming or establishing (ἐπιστηρίζων) all the disciples" (Acts xviii. 23).

Since it is thus affirmed in a Book of Canonical Scripture, written some time after that visit, that St. Paul went through a country settling all the disciples, we may reasonably conclude that they were settled; and we cannot bring ourselves to imagine that soon after a visit, in which the holy Apostle settled all the disciples, the Churches of Galatia generally became so unsettled, as the Galatians evidently were, when they received this Epistle from St. Paul. (See Gal. iii. 1—4; iv. 19; v. 4.)

We cannot, therefore, be induced to concur with those learned persons, who think that the Epistle to the Galatians, representing such a state of spiritual disorganization, was written soon after the visit in which, as Holy Scripture assures us, they were confirmed, or settled, by St. Paul.

21. Reasons have now already been given for assigning an earlier date to this Epistle.

This then being assumed as probable, the word ἐπι-στηρίζων, used by St. Luke in describing St. Paul's second visit to Galatia, may perhaps afford a clue for determining the date of the Epistle.

That word intimates some previous act of corroboration.

The Visit of the Apostle came upon (ἐπὶ) some prior work of spiritual settling in the faith.

The Epistle represents the Galatians in an unsettled state; but the Epistle was designed to settle them.

This work of restoration was, it is probable, commenced by the Holy Ghost inspiring the Apostle to write this Epistle, and blessing His Word written, and granting the Apostle's prayers, and recovering those who had swerved from their Christian stedfastness.

When this previous work of reparation and recovery had been performed by an Epistle, then it was prosecuted (as might have been expected) by a Visit, which the Epistle had pre-announced as probable (iv. 20). The Visit completed the work happily commenced by the Epistle.

St. Paul went through the region of Galatia, ἐπιστηρίζων—giving additional strength and stedfastness—to all the disciples.

22. This conclusion comes in very appropriately to explain what he says to the Corinthians concerning the above-mentioned charge to the Galatian Churches with regard to the collection of alms for the poor saints of Jerusalem (1 Cor. xvi. 1).

St. Paul could hardly have ventured to give such a charge to the Galatians when they were in that condition of spiritual revolt and defection from him, which is described in the Epistle.

But now that they had been brought back to their allegiance by the Epistle and the Visit, he was enabled to issue such a mandate in full confidence that it would be obeyed.

Here, perhaps, we may recognize the reason why he mentions to the Corinthians the fact that he had given such a direction to the Galatians; whose estrangement from St. Paul must have been matter of notoriety, and perhaps of boasting, among the Judaizers of Corinth.

He specifies the fact, that he had given such a direction to the Churches of Galatia, in order that the Corinthians might thus learn by a practical proof, that the Galatians had been recovered from the schismatical and heretical influence of his own Judaizing opponents, and that they had returned to their spiritual obedience and loyalty to him, and recognized him once more as their Apostle, and regarded him with their original feelings of enthusiastic admiration and love (Gal. iv. 15), and were ready to obey his commands, and could now be cited by him as examples of Obedience and Charity, for the edification of other Churches; and that thus the Corinthians themselves, who were exposed to the same evil Judaizing influence as the Galatians were, and had been injured by it, might derive practical benefit from the example of the Churches of Galatia.

23. On the whole then we arrive at the following results :—

(1) That the Epistle to the Galatians was written by St. Paul after A.D. 52, the date of his first visit to Galatia.

(2) That it was written before the date of his second visit to Galatia.

(3) That it was probably written at Corinth on his first visit to Greece, A.D. 53 or A.D. 54[4].

(4) That it was written next after his two Epistles to the Thessalonians[5].

(5) That not long after it had been sent, he heard, probably at Ephesus, a good report of the favourable manner in which it had been received by the Galatians, and consequently resolved to visit Galatia in person on his return to Ephesus from Jerusalem and Antioch.

(6) That accordingly, having gone up from Ephesus to Jerusalem (Acts xviii. 22), and thence to Antioch, where he abode some time, he did not return by a direct course to Ephesus, although the Ephesian disciples were very desirous of his presence (Acts xviii. 20), but came back by a circuitous route through Galatia, where he strengthened all the disciples (Acts xviii. 23).

(7) That St. Paul's authority was re-established in Galatia, and the Galatians themselves were recovered to the faith ; and that this Epistle was a blessed instrument to them, as it has been to every age and country of Christendom, in building up the hope of salvation on the only solid basis upon which it can stand unmoveably,—that of a sound Faith in the meritorious efficacy of the Death of Christ.

II. On the Design of the Epistle to the Galatians.

This subject will be considered in the Review at the close of the Second Chapter of this Epistle, and in the Introduction to the Epistle to the Romans.

The following preliminary remarks upon it are from S. Augustine[6].

The cause for which this Epistle was written to the Galatians was this :—

When St. Paul had preached to them the Grace of God in the Gospel, some persons of the Circumcision arose, bearing the Christian name, who desired to bring the Galatians under the bondage of the Levitical Law.

They alleged that the Gospel would profit them nothing unless they were circumcised, and submitted to the other carnal observances of the Jewish ritual.

Hence the Galatians began to regard St. Paul with suspicion, as if he did not observe the same discipline as that of the other Apostles.

The Apostle Peter had given way to the scruples of these persons, and had been led to a semblance of agreement with them, as if he also was of their mind, that the Gospel was of no avail to the Gentiles unless they submitted to the burden of the Law.

Peter had been reclaimed from this simulation by St. Paul, as is related in this Epistle (ii. 14).

The subject of this Epistle is similar to that of the Epistle to the Romans, with, however, some difference. In the Epistle to the Romans the Apostle determines judicially the questions which were debated between the Jewish and Gentile Christians, the former alleging that the Gospel was awarded to them as a reward due to their own deservings consequent on a performance of the works of the Law, and not allowing this reward to be communicated to the Gentiles, who were not circumcised, and therefore, in the opinion of the Jews, did not merit the same. (Augustine.)

The Gentile Christians, on the other hand, exulted in their own preference to the Jews, who had been guilty of killing Christ.

In the present Epistle the Apostle writes to those who had been swayed by the influence of some false Teachers, exacting from them an observance of the Ceremonial Law, and had begun to listen to their insinuations that because St. Paul was unwilling that they should be circumcised, he had not preached to them the truth.

There is also this difference between the Epistle to the Galatians and that to the Romans, that in this Epistle St. Paul does not address himself to persons who had passed from Judaism to [4] Compare Lardner, vol. iii. p. 289, chap. xii. sect. iii. Birk's Horæ Apostolicæ, p. 207.

[5] This is the opinion of many of the most learned writers on the Chronology of St. Paul's Epistles, e. g. L. Capellus, Heidegger, Hottinger, Benson, Lardner, Schmid, De Wette, Feilmoser, Schott, Anger, Neander, Wieseler, and others. See Wieseler, Chron. Syn. p. 607.

[6] Whose Commentary on this Epistle will be found in vol. iii. pp. 2660—2713 of his works, ed. Bened. 1837.

Christianity, but to such as had been converted to the Gospel from Heathenism, and were lapsing into Judaism under the influence of false Teachers, who affirmed that Peter, and James, and all the Churches of Judæa had joined the Law with the Gospel, and had exacted a like observance of both.

They also alleged that Paul was inconsistent with himself, that he did one thing in Judæa, and preached another to the Heathen; and that it would be vain for them to believe in Christ unless they conformed to those things which were observed by His principal Apostles.

St. Paul, therefore, is obliged to steer a middle course, so as neither on the one hand to betray the Grace of the Gospel, nor yet, on the other, to disparage the authority of his predecessors in the Apostleship. (S. Jerome[1].)

Another difference may be remarked in the character of the two Epistles.

In that to the Romans, the Apostle speaks with more deference and reserve to those whom he addresses, whom he had never seen, and who had been converted by others to Christ.

In the Epistle to the Galatians he speaks with the affectionate sternness of a spiritual Father to his own children in the Faith, who were disparaging his authority, and renouncing his precepts, to the injury of their own souls, and the perversion of the Gospel of Christ. See Gal. iii. 1; iv. 8—20; v. 7.

[1] Procem. in Epist. ad Gal. vol. iv. p. 223, ed. Bened. Paris, 1706.

ΠΡΟΣ ΓΑΛΑΤΑΣ.

I. [1] [a] ΠΑΥΛΟΣ, ἀπόστολος, οὐκ ἀπ' ἀνθρώπων οὐδὲ δι' ἀνθρώπου, ἀλλὰ διὰ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ καὶ Θεοῦ Πατρὸς τοῦ ἐγείραντος αὐτὸν ἐκ νεκρῶν, [2] καὶ οἱ σὺν ἐμοὶ πάντες ἀδελφοί, ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις τῆς Γαλατίας, [3] χάρις ὑμῖν καὶ εἰρήνη ἀπὸ Θεοῦ Πατρὸς, καὶ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, [4] [b] τοῦ δόντος ἑαυτὸν περὶ τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν ἡμῶν, ὅπως ἐξέληται ἡμᾶς ἐκ τοῦ ἐνεστῶτος αἰῶνος πονηροῦ, a ver. 11, 12. Acts 9. 6. Tit. 1. 3. Acts 2. 24, 32. & 3. 15. & 4. 10. & 10. 40. & 13. 30, 34. & 17. 31. Rom. 4. 24. & 8. 11.

1 Cor. 6. 14. & 15. 15. 2 Cor. 4. 14. Eph. 1. 20. Col. 2. 12. 1 Thess. 1. 10. Heb. 13. 20. Eph. 5. 2. 1 Tim. 2. 6. Tit. 2. 14. Heb. 9. 14. & 10. 9, 10. John 15. 19. 1 Pet. 2. 24. & 3. 18. 1 John 5. 19.

b Matt. 20. 28. Rom. 4. 25. ch. 2 20.

Πρὸς Γαλάτας] So A, B, and many Cursives. And so Lach., Tisch., Meyer, Alf.

CH. I. 1. Παῦλος, ἀπόστολος, κ.τ.λ.] Paul, an Apostle. A declaration extorted from St. Paul in self-defence. He thus replies to those who disparage his Apostolic authority, on the plea that he was not one of the original Twelve, and had been a Persecutor of the Church; and who contravened his teaching on the ground that in asserting the abolition of the Ceremonial Law of Moses, he was setting himself up against St. Peter and others who had been ordained to the Apostleship by Christ Himself upon earth. Cp. Jerome.

These introductory words are not found in any other Epistle of St. Paul. By saying that he himself is an Apostle, not of men, or by men, but of God, he intimates that those persons who taught the doctrine which he refutes in this Epistle, were not of God, but of men. (Augustine.) By not associating any other person by name with himself (as Silas or Timotheus, see 1 Thess. i. 1), he declares here his own independent Apostolic authority.

— οὐκ ἀπ' ἀνθρώπων οὐδὲ δι' ἀνθρώπου] not from men—not sent from men—nor by men. My calling to the Apostleship was not from man as a source (ἀπὸ) nor through man as a channel (διὰ), but through Jesus Christ Who called me, speaking to me with His own voice from heaven, without the intervention of man. Cp. Theodoret.

Jesus Christ is here distinctly contrasted with man: an assertion of His Godhead.

— διὰ Ἰησοῦ Χ. καὶ Θεοῦ Πατρός] by Jesus Christ and God the Father. The Son leads to the Father, and the Father reveals the Son. Irenæus (iii. 14). In the Acts of the Apostles it is related that the Holy Ghost commanded the Church at Antioch to ordain St. Paul (Acts xiii. 1—4, where see note). Here his commission is ascribed to God the Father and the Son. The Power of all the three Persons of the Trinity is one. (Chrys. and Theoph.)

— τοῦ ἐγείραντος αὐτόν] who raised Him from the dead. God raised Christ from the dead, and thus showed that the sacrifice offered by Him on the Cross for the sins of the whole world was accepted as a full satisfaction for them (see on Rom. iv. 25). Thus the Apostle prepares the way for his argument in this Epistle, that Christ's death is the true ground of our Justification.

2. οἱ σὺν ἐμοὶ πάντες ἀδελφοί] all the brethren that are with me. An answer to the objection of those who alleged that St. Paul's doctrine was novel and singular, and only his own. Others are with him, and they all agree with him in it. (Chrys.)

— ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις τῆς Γαλατίας] to the Churches of Galatia. This is the only Epistle of St. Paul in which he addresses himself thus to the Churches of a country. See on 1 Thess. i. 1.

A remarkable address in what it does not, as well as in what it does say. He does not speak to them as he does to other Churches, in the beginning of his Epistles, in terms of thankfulness and joy; and he does not address the Church of one city, but all, for it appears that the evil which he deplores had propagated itself to all (Chrys.). See also Prof. Lightfoot, p. 62.

Though they were infected with heresy, yet he still calls them Churches. Such is the character and condition of the Church in this world: the time is not yet come in which the Church will be cleansed from all spot and wrinkle (Eph. v. 27). Jerome. See on 1 Cor. i. 2. A caution to those who look for a perfect Church on earth, and who separate themselves from a Church on the plea of imperfections, real or supposed, in it. See on Matt. xiii. 30.

The address, 'To the Churches of Galatia,' indicates that St. Paul intends, and takes for granted, that this Epistle will be circulated. Hence, also, there are no personal greetings in this Epistle. See below, vi. 18.

— τῆς Γαλατίας] of Galatia or Gallo-Græcia, a central province of Asia Minor, which was occupied about 280 B.C. by a horde of Gauls and Celts, who were invited by Nicomedes, king of Bithynia, to assist him against his brother. About 240 B.C. they were restrained within the limits of the Halys and Sangarius by Attalus, king of Pergamus, and became incorporated with the Greeks, and were thence called 'Gallo-Græci.' Though the Greek Language was adopted by them, yet still the Celtic remained as a vernacular tongue among them. (See S. Jerome, Prolog. ad Epist.) In B.C. 189 they became subject to Rome; and they adopted the religious rites of the Greek and Phrygian mythology, especially the worship of Cybele. See on v. 12. Their principal cities were Ancyra, Pessinus, and Tavium. Cp. Strabo, xii. p. 566. Liv. xxxiv. 12; xxxvii. 8. Florus, ii. 11; Winer, R. W. B. i. p. 384. Prof. Lightfoot, pp. 1—16; and 17—34.

3, 4. χάρις κ.τ.λ.] Grace be to you and—the fruit of Grace—Peace from God the Father and our Lord Jesus Christ. A summary of the argument of the Epistle, which is a pleading for the doctrine of Free Grace in Christ, dying for our sins, as our only ground of Peace.

4. περὶ τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν] for our sins. So A, D, E, F, G, I, K, and several Cursives, and Gb., Sch., Ln., Tf., Mey., Alf., Ellicott. Elz. has ὑπὲρ. But ὑπὲρ is, 'on behalf of,' i. e. with a view, a benefit for. Christ suffered for us and for our salvation, ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν and ὑπὲρ τῆς τοῦ κόσμου ζωῆς (John vi. 51), and περὶ ἁμαρτιῶν, 'for our sins,' or 'on account of our sins,' which made it necessary that He should die for us. Cp. Rom. viii. 3 for περὶ, and see for examples of ὑπὲρ, Luke xxii. 19, 20. Rom. v. 6; xiv. 15. Gal. ii. 20; iii. 13; and Winer, p. 333.

— ἐκ τοῦ ἐνεστῶτος αἰῶνος πονηροῦ] To deliver us from the present evil world in which we were imprisoned as captives and slaves sentenced to death. Aug. His blood was our λύτρον, or ransom, by which we have been redeemed from this bondage. And St. Paul says that this ransom was given freely by Christ, and that it was given according to the Father's will. A declaration of the truth against the Socinian allegation that the Doctrine of κατὰ τὸ θέλημα τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ Πατρὸς ἡμῶν, [5] [c] ᾧ ἡ δόξα εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων, ἀμήν.

[6] [d] Θαυμάζω ὅτι οὕτω ταχέως μετατίθεσθε ἀπὸ τοῦ καλέσαντος ὑμᾶς ἐν χάριτι Χριστοῦ εἰς ἕτερον εὐαγγέλιον, [7] [e] ὃ οὐκ ἔστιν ἄλλο, εἰ μή τινές εἰσιν οἱ ταράσσοντες ὑμᾶς, καὶ θέλοντες μεταστρέψαι τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τοῦ Χριστοῦ· [8] [f] ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐὰν ἡμεῖς ἢ ἄγγελος ἐξ οὐρανοῦ εὐαγγελίζηται ὑμῖν παρ' ὃ εὐηγγελισάμεθα ὑμῖν, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω· [9] [g] ὡς προειρήκαμεν, καὶ ἄρτι πάλιν λέγω, εἴ τις ὑμᾶς

c Rom. 11. 36. & 16. 27. Eph. 1. 12. Phil. 4. 20.
d ch. 5. 8.
e Acts 15. 1. 1 Cor. 11. 4. ch. 5. 15.
f 1 Cor. 16. 22.
g Rev. 22. 18.

---

the Atonement is not reconcileable with Divine Love. See on Matt. xvii. 5; xx. 28; and John x. 17.

Neque Filius se dedit pro peccatis nostris absque voluntate Patris, neque Pater tradidit Filium sine Filii voluntate. Sed hæc est voluntas Filii, voluntatem Patris implere. (Jerome.)

— τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ Πατρός] God who is also our Father (Phil. iv. 20. Eph. v. 20. Bp. Middleton on Eph. v. 5), and is specially our Father by the redemption of us His children by the blood of His Son.

6. θαυμάζω ὅτι οὕτω ταχέως μετατίθεσθε] I marvel, that ye are so quickly shifting off from. "Miror quòd sic tam citò transferimini." Tertull. de Præs. c. 27. Cp. 2 Macc. vii. 24, μεταθέμενος ἀπὸ πατρίων νόμων. And on the sense of ταχέως, easily, at once, see Judges ii. 17, ἐξέκλιναν ταχὺ ἐκ τῆς ὁδοῦ.

The sense is, I marvel that you are shifting yourselves from God to a different Gospel, and that you are doing this so quickly (cp. 2 Thess. ii. 2); that is, (on the first impulse and) without due consideration of what is to be said on the other side.

Instead of making a vigorous defence, or calling on me to protect you, you are capitulating immediately, you are revolting from God Who enlisted you at your Baptism as His soldiers under the banner of the Cross, and after this defection you are joining the ranks of the enemy. So Chrys., who says, "The Apostle brings two charges against them—their change, and its suddenness." Such a change was in character (as Grotius observes) with the desultory fickleness which is attributed by ancient writers as a national trait to the race from which the Galatians sprung. See Cæsar, Bell. Gall. iv. 5, and the characteristic lines describing their conduct in the battle which decided the fortunes of the world,—

> "Ad hoc frementes verterant bis mille equos > Galli canentes Cæsarem."—Horat. Epod. ix. 16.

It must be remembered that the Galatians had been converted from Heathenism (iv. 8), and that the national superstition of Galatia, the worship of Cybele, would predispose them readily to receive Circumcision as a rite of religion. See on v. 12; and on the national character of the Galatians, Prof. Lightfoot, pp. 1—16.

6, 7. εἰς ἕτερον εὐαγγέλιον, ὃ οὐκ ἔστιν ἄλλο, εἰ μή τινές εἰσιν οἱ ταράσσοντες ὑμᾶς] I marvel that you are so soon revolting to a different Gospel which is not another: for there are not two Gospels of Christ; but one and the same Faith for all.

Ἕτερος is diverse in kind, ἄλλος is other in number. Cp. Tittmann, Syn. N. T. p. 155; Quod post primum Evangelium infertur non jam secundum est, sed nullum; and see the similar uses of these words ἕτερος and ἄλλος in 2 Cor. xi. 4, which is the best comment on this verse.

— εἰ μή τινές εἰσιν οἱ ταράσσοντες ὑμᾶς] The meaning of this clause has been much controverted. It has been usually rendered, 'except that there are certain persons who are troubling you.' But this version appears to be incorrect. For

(1) It supposes an awkward ellipse, and does not cohere with the context, and

(2) The definite article οἱ prefixed to ταράσσοντες shows that 'they who were troubling' them, are the subject of the proposition, and not the predicate of it. Cp. below, v. 10, ὁ ταράσσων ὑμᾶς (he that troubleth you) βαστάσει τὸ κρῖμα, ὅστις ἂν ᾖ.

The true rendering seems to be this, 'Unless they, who are troubling you, are somebody,' i. e. are persons of some substantial weight and Apostolic authority, with a commission, such as St. Paul himself had, from God; and are not mere usurpers and intruders.

This version is also confirmed by the Vulgate and old Latin Version in the Codex Augiensis, which have the pronoun aliqui here, not quidam: "Nisi sunt aliqui qui vos conturbant," i. e. unless they who trouble you are aliqui, men of authority, true Apostles; and not (as, in fact, these my opponents and your false teachers are) mere unauthorized persons.

St. Paul says that this different Gospel of these false teachers is no Gospel at all, εἰ μή, unless (forsooth) the false teachers who are troubling you, and whose will it is to pervert the Gospel of Christ, are somebody; which they are not. Indeed, so far from being τινὲς, men of any mark or likelihood, they are worse than nobody; for, by the very fact of their perverting Christ's Gospel, they are Anathema, or accursed; as he proceeds solemnly to declare twice in vv. 8, 9.

Εἰ μή, unless, is used by St. Paul, with a tone of irony, in order to introduce an incredible supposition, which he only puts, in order to explode it. So 2 Cor. iii. 1, εἰ μὴ χρῄζομεν συστατικῶν, unless forsooth we, your Apostles, need letters of commendation from you,—our children!

τινὲς here is emphatic, and is to be illustrated by Acts v. 36, λέγων εἶναι τινὰ ἑαυτὸν, professing himself to be somebody, and Ignatius (Eph. 3), οὐ διατάσσομαι ὡς ὢν τίς, I do not dictate to you, as if I were somebody. The present passage is best explained by what St. Paul says below, vi. 3, "If any one imagine himself to be something (τι) when he is nothing (as these false Teachers, of whom he here speaks, are), he deceives himself as well as others." So τι, 'something of importance,' 1 Cor. iii. 7; x. 19, and Gal. ii. 6; vi. 15. Compare also the similar use of τινὲς in Demosth. c. Mid. p. 582, πλούσιοι πολλοὶ τὸ δοκεῖν τινὲς εἶναι δι' εὐπορίαν προσειληφότες, and the Latin aliquis and aliquid (somebody and something of note), e. g. as in Juvenal, i. 73,—

> "Aude aliquid brevibus Gyaris et carcere dignum, > Si vis esse aliquis;"

and in somewhat a similar sense (ii. 149),— > "Esse aliquos Manes et subterranea regna > Nec pueri credunt."

This interpretation renders the sentence clear and coherent. "I marvel that ye are so soon shifting yourselves to a different Gospel, which is not a second Gospel, unless, forsooth, those persons who are troubling you, and whose will it is to pervert the Gospel of Christ, are somebody. But no: even though we or an Angel from heaven preach to you any other Gospel beside what we preached to you, let him be accursed."

7. θέλοντες μεταστρέψαι] willing to pervert; that is, whose will (θέλημα) it is to pervert. On the sense of θέλω see Philem. 14.

8, 9. ἀλλὰ καί] but even if these persons were τινὲς, aliqui, somebodies, and not nobodies, even if they were men worthy of your attention and confidence, I now add (καί), that if I (an Apostle of Christ, v. 1, which they are not), or if even an Angel from heaven, or if any one in the world, preach to you, not only a different Gospel, but any thing whatsoever beside (παρὰ) or beyond what I preached to you, and ye received from me, when I evangelized you, let him be accursed!

Παρὰ = 'præter,' properly by the side of,—i. e. not in the same line, but by the side of it, or swerving from it; and thus it expresses difference, whether by defect or excess. See Tertullian, de Præsc. Hær. 6 (who interprets παρὰ by aliter), and ibid. 29, by 'aliter citrà quàm,' and c. Marcion. iv. 4, and v. 2; and cp. as to the use of παρὰ Matt. iv. 18; xiii. 4. Rom. i. 25, 26; xiv. 5; and Winer, p. 359.

As Chrys. and Theoph. expound the words, the Apostle does not say, "if they preach things contrary to the Gospel and subvert the whole," but "if they preach any thing divergent from what we preached;" even if they make any alteration whatever in it, "let them be accursed!"

A solemn warning against those who (as the Church of Rome does) venture to make any addition to, or to take any thing from, the Faith once for all delivered to the Saints. See Jude 3.

— ἀνάθεμα] anathema: accursed, a thing devoted, by a solemn malediction, to God's wrath and indignation. See Acts xxiii. 14, and on 1 Cor. xii. 3; xvi. 22. Fritz. on Rom. ix. 3, and Trench, Synonyms, § v. on the distinction between ἀνάθημα, a thing offered for God's honour, and ἀνάθεμα, a thing devoted for destruction. Cp. the Hebrew cherem. See Lev. xxvii. 28. Josh. vi. 17.

9. ὡς προειρήκαμεν] as we have said before. Lest any one should suppose that the awful denunciation which I have just uttered against all who make any alteration in the doctrine preached by me, had escaped me in a momentary excitement εὐαγγελίζεται παρ' ὃ παρελάβετε, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω. 10 [h] [v] Ἄρτι γὰρ ἀνθρώπους πείθω, ἢ τὸν Θεόν; [i] ἢ ζητῶ ἀνθρώποις ἀρέσκειν; εἰ ἔτι ἀνθρώποις ἤρεσκον, Χριστοῦ δοῦλος οὐκ ἂν ἤμην.

11 [j] Γνωρίζω δὲ ὑμῖν, ἀδελφοί, τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τὸ εὐαγγελισθὲν ὑπ' ἐμοῦ, ὅτι οὐκ ἔστι κατὰ ἄνθρωπον· 12 [k] οὐδὲ γὰρ ἐγὼ παρὰ ἀνθρώπου παρέλαβον αὐτό, οὔτε ἐδιδάχθην ἀλλὰ δι' ἀποκαλύψεως Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.

13 [l] Ἠκούσατε γὰρ τὴν ἐμὴν ἀναστροφὴν ποτὲ ἐν τῷ Ἰουδαϊσμῷ, ὅτι καθ' ὑπερβολὴν ἐδίωκον τὴν ἐκκλησίαν τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ ἐπόρθουν αὐτήν, 14 καὶ προέκοπ-h Acts 4. 19, 20. & 5. 29. 1 Thess. 2. 4. James 4. 4.

i 2 Cor. 12. 19. Eph. 6. 6. Col. 3. 22.
j 1 Cor. 15. 1, 3 ver. 1.
k Eph. 3. 3.
l Acts 8. 3. & 9. 1. & 22. 4. & 26. 9. Phil. 3. 6. 1 Tim. 1. 13.

---

of passionate indignation, produced by a sense of personal injury, I solemnly repeat it. (Chrys.)

St. Paul (adds Chrys.) grounds his doctrine on the Holy Scriptures of the Old Testament. In the Gospel, Christ had introduced the Patriarch Abraham saying, that if the Jews heard not Moses and the Prophets, i. e. the Old Testament, neither would they be persuaded though one rose from the dead (Luke xvi. 31).

Thus Christ preferred the witness of the Scriptures to that of one from the grave. So Paul here, or rather Christ Himself—for it was Christ who inspired Paul—prefers the testimony of the Scriptures to that of an Angel from heaven. For Angels, though mighty, are servants; but the Holy Scriptures are not the words of servants, but of the Lord of all. (Chrys.)

10. Ἄρτι γὰρ ἀνθρώπους πείθω] Do I now, when I utter such words as these, endeavour (as my enemies pretend that I do) to gain the favour of men?

On this use of πείθω see Acts xii. 20, πείσαντες Βλάστον, having made Blastus their friend.

This question, and what follows—'Do I seek to please men?'—is doubtless an answer to objections raised against the Apostle by his adversaries alleging that he was inconsistent in his practice, and a time-server, and a men-pleaser (cp. 1 Cor. ix. 22; x. 24. Rom. xv. 1); and that he preached against Circumcision, and yet had circumcised Timothy (Acts xvi. 3; cp. below, on v. 11); that he taught that the Levitical Law was abrogated, and yet observed it in his own person (Acts xviii. 18).

On such pleas as these, grounded on his preaching and his practice, not rightly understood, the false Teachers asserted that the Apostle, with all his professions of independence, was only an ἀνθρωπάρεσκος, a men-pleaser, and was influenced by a love of popularity, and not by a zeal for the truth and for the glory of God.

These and similar objections are tacitly implied in this and other portions of the Epistle, which (it is to be remembered) is of an apologetic character throughout. They account for the mention of many incidents in it, e. g. of the non-circumcision of Titus (ch. ii. 2—11), and the Apostle's opposition to St. Peter at Antioch; and must be carefully borne in mind in its perusal.

How far St. Paul made himself all things to all men, and sought to please all, and how far all ought to imitate him, has been well stated as follows by one of the best expositors of St. Paul's writings,—Bp. Sanderson;

St. Paul professeth that he sought to please all men in all things, not seeking his own profit, but the profit of many (1 Cor. ix. 20—22). And it was no flourish neither. St. Paul was a real man, no bragger; what he said, he did. He became as a Jew to the Jews, as a Gentile to the Gentiles; not to humour either, but to win both. And at Corinth he maintained himself a long while with his own hand-labour, when he might have challenged maintenance from them as the Apostle of Christ. But he would not, only to cut off occasion (2 Cor. xi. 12) from those that slandered him, as if he went about to make a prey of them, and would have been glad to find any occasion against him to give credit to that slander;

But what, is St. Paul now all on a sudden become a man-pleaser? Or how is there not yea and nay (2 Cor. i. 18) with him that he should profess it so largely, and yet elsewhere protest against it so deeply? Do I seek to please men? (Gal. i. 10.) No, saith he, I scorn it; such baseness will better become their own slaves,—I am the servant of Christ. Worthy resolutions both, both savouring of an apostolic spirit, and no contrariety at all between them. Rather that seeming contrariety yieldeth excellent instruction to us, how to behave ourselves in this matter of pleasing. Not to please men, be they never so many or great, out of flatness of spirit, so as, for the pleasing of them, either,

First, to neglect any part of our duty towards God and Christ; or,

Secondly, to go against our own consciences, by doing any dishonest or unlawful thing; or,

Thirdly, to do them harm whom we would please, by confirming them in their errors, flattering them in their sins, humouring them in their peevishness, or but even cherishing their weakness; for weakness, though it may be borne with, yet it must not be cherished;

Thus did not he, thus should not we, seek to please any man;

But then, by yielding to their infirmities for a time (Rom. xv. 1), in hope to win them, by patiently expecting their conversion or strengthening, by restoring them with the spirit of meekness (1 Thess. v. 14. Gal. v. 26; vi. 1) when they had fallen, by forbearing all scornful jeering, provoking, or exasperating language and behaviour towards them, but rather with meekness instructing them that opposed themselves (2 Tim. ii. 25), so did he, so should we, seek to please all men, for their profit and for their good. For that is Charity (1 Cor. x. 33. Rom. xv. 2). Bp. Sanderson (i. p. 316).

— εἰ ἔτι ἀνθρώποις ἤρεσκον] if I were yet pleasing men, as my adversaries allege, I should not have been, as I am, the servant of Christ. The fact is, as I well know, I am encountering their hatred for the sake of Christ, Whom I serve, and Whom I seek to please.

Before ἔτι Elz. inserts γὰρ, which is not in the best MSS., and weakens the sense.

The ἔτι, yet, appears to intimate, that when he was a rigid observer of the Law, and a persecutor of the Church, he did please men; but now he has renounced all human favour and applause for the service of Christ, for which he has sacrificed all earthly advantages and counts them as loss.

11. Γνωρίζω δέ] But I certify you. Having vindicated himself from the charge of pleasing men, by denouncing a solemn imprecation on all persons who tamper with the doctrine delivered by him, he now declares that he was not indebted to men for that doctrine, but had received it immediately by revelation from God.

The MSS. fluctuate between δὲ and γὰρ, and the authorities are almost equally balanced. On internal grounds δὲ seems preferable, as marking a transition.

— οὐκ ἔστι κατὰ ἄνθρωπον] is not according to man, but according to God, κατὰ Θεόν. Cp. 2 Cor. vii. 10.

12. οὐδὲ γὰρ ἐγώ] For neither did I receive it from man, nor was I taught it at all, except &c. See next note.

— οὔτε ἐδιδάχθην ἀλλά] nor was I taught it except by Revelation. He does not mean that he was not taught it, but that he was not taught it by man, but by God. He was θεοδίδακτος. It is therefore better not to put a comma after ἐδιδάχθην.

This use of ἀλλὰ has sometimes been lost sight of. See Matt. xx. 23, where an important article of doctrine is involved in it. Our Lord there says, "It is not Mine to give (ἀλλὰ) save to those for whom it is prepared of My Father." It is Mine to give (for I am Judge of all), but only to those for whom it has been prepared by My Father.

13. τὴν ἐμὴν ἀναστροφὴν ποτέ] my conversation (or manner of life, Eph. iv. 22) in time past; 'conversationem meam aliquando.' Jerome, Aug.

— Ἰουδαϊσμῷ] Judaism, as distinguished from Gentilism Cp. ii. 14. See Dean Trench's Synonyms of N. T. xxxix.

— καθ' ὑπερβολήν] exceedingly,—going beyond other persecutors in my zeal. See 1 Cor. xii. 31.

— ἐδίωκον—ἐπόρθουν—προέκοπτον] Observe the imperfect tenses describing the condition in which he was at that very time when he had his first revelation from Christ; showing that he could not have derived his Gospel from man before that time.

He then proceeds to describe what happened to him after that time.

τον ἐν τῷ Ἰουδαϊσμῷ ὑπὲρ πολλοὺς συνηλικιώτας ἐν τῷ γένει μου, περισσοτέρως ζηλωτὴς ὑπάρχων τῶν πατρικῶν μου παραδόσεων.

15 [m] Ὅτε δὲ εὐδόκησεν ὁ Θεὸς ὁ ἀφορίσας με ἐκ κοιλίας μητρός μου, καὶ καλέσας διὰ τῆς χάριτος αὐτοῦ, 16 [n] ἀποκαλύψαι τὸν Υἱὸν αὐτοῦ ἐν ἐμοί, ἵνα εὐαγγελίζωμαι αὐτὸν ἐν τοῖς ἔθνεσιν, εὐθέως οὐ προσανεθέμην σαρκὶ καὶ αἵματι, 17 οὐδὲ ἀνῆλθον εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα πρὸς τοὺς πρὸ ἐμοῦ ἀποστόλους, ἀλλ' ἀπῆλθον εἰς Ἀραβίαν, καὶ πάλιν ὑπέστρεψα εἰς Δαμασκόν.

18 [o] Ἔπειτα μετὰ ἔτη τρία ἀνῆλθον εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα ἱστορῆσαι Κηφᾶν, καὶ ἐπέμεινα πρὸς αὐτὸν ἡμέρας δεκαπέντε· 19 [p] ἕτερον δὲ τῶν ἀποστόλων οὐκ εἶδον, εἰ μὴ Ἰάκωβον τὸν ἀδελφὸν τοῦ Κυρίου. 20 [q] Ἃ δὲ γράφω ὑμῖν, ἰδοὺ ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ ὅτι οὐ ψεύδομαι.

m Acts 9. 15. & 13. 2. Rom. 1. 1. Jer. 1. 5. n Matt. 16. 17. 1 Cor. 2. 9—13. 2 Cor. 4. 6. ch. 2. 8. Eph. 3. 1, 8.
o Acts 9 26, 29. & 22. 17, 18.
p Mark 6. 3.
q Rom. 1. 9. & 9. 1. 2 Cor. 1. 23. & 11. 31. 1 Thess. 2. 5. 1 Tim. 5. 21. 2 Tim. 4. 1.

---

14. ζηλωτὴς ὑπάρχων] being a zealot; but ὑπάρχων is stronger than ὤν. My previous existence (see ii. 14, and on 1 Cor. xi. 7) was one of zeal. Compare the report of the speech from St. Paul's mouth from the stairs of the castle at Jerusalem, Acts xxii. 3—5, ζηλωτὴς ὑπάρχων τοῦ Θεοῦ κ.τ.λ.

15. ὁ Θεός] God. Omitted by B, F, G, but found in A, D, E, I, K, and ℵ. It marks the contrast between God and man. He had studiously repeated the word ἄνθρωπος no less than six times (v. 1. 10 thrice, 11, 12), now he passes to speak of God. The sense therefore is weakened by the omission.

— ὁ ἀφορίσας] He who set me apart, an important word in the history of St. Paul. See on Acts xiii. 2, and on Rom. i. 1.

16. ἀποκαλύψαι—ἐν ἐμοί] to reveal his Son in me. "Revelare Filium suum in me, ut evangelizarem eum gentibus." Iren. (v. 5), who adds "revelatione ei de cœlo facta, et colloquente cum eo Domino."

A striking contrast. He who had been stricken by blindness as a Persecutor, has now Christ, the Light of the world, revealed in him as a Preacher. He who was himself dark, has become a light to others, a light revealing to them Christ. S. Jerome well compares 2 Cor. xiii. 3, ἐν ἐμοὶ λαλοῦντος Χριστοῦ. Gal. ii. 20, ζῇ ἐν ἐμοὶ Χριστός. So Chrys. He does not say, "God revealed His Son to me," but "in me," showing that he did not learn the Gospel merely by words from God, but that he was filled in his heart with the Holy Spirit, so that the knowledge of the Gospel was, as it were, dyed into his inner man. Chrys., Theophyl.

The Father revealed the Son in me, not in order that the revelation of the light of Christ so kindled in me should be confined to me, but that it should be diffused by my preaching to the world. (Chrys.) He gave me this grace that I should preach not the Law, but the Gospel. (Theodoret.)

— οὐ προσανεθέμην] I did not resort; 'non retuli,' Tertullian (de Resur. 51); 'non acquievi' (Vulg., Cod. Aug., and Boern.). I resorted not, literally referred not myself to them for counsel, guidance, instruction, and assurance. So Diod. Sic. xvii. 116, cited by Mintert, προσανατίθεσθαι τοῖς μάντεσι, and Lucian (Jov. Trag. init.), ἐμοὶ προσανάθου, λάβε μὲ σύμβουλον πόνων. Cp. ii. 6.

— σαρκὶ καὶ αἵματι] flesh and blood, as distinguished from spirit and God. Compare our Lord's words, Matt. xvi. 17, σὰρξ καὶ αἷμα οὐκ ἀπεκάλυψέ σοι (addressed to St. Peter) ἀλλ' ὁ Πατήρ μου.

May not St. Paul be referring here to those remarkable words of our Lord to St. Peter?

It was not flesh and blood, but the Father who revealed His Son to St. Peter, and by him to the world.

So now St. Paul says that God revealed His Son in him, and he did not commune with flesh and blood in order to obtain further knowledge.

Does not therefore St. Paul thus intimate (as he was constrained to do by those who placed St. Peter in opposition to him) that his own Apostolic privileges and revelations were not a whit inferior to those of St. Peter? Cp. 1 Cor. i. 12. 2 Cor. xi. 5; xii. 11.

On the practical duties arising from a consideration of St. Paul's case, as having a special call, see Bp. Sanderson, iii. 114.

17. ἀνῆλθον] I went up. B, D, E, F, G have ἀπῆλθον, I went away, which some Editors have adopted; but A, I, K, and ℵ, and the Greek Fathers, have ἀνῆλθον, which is preferable as to sense; and ἀπῆλθον appears to be only an error introduced from confusion with the word in the following line.

There is a contrast between ἀνῆλθον εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα and ἀπῆλθον εἰς Ἀραβίαν, which adds much force to the argument. Nor did I go up to Jerusalem, the Holy City, as I should have done if I had needed or desired instruction from man, but I went away into Arabia, a heathen wilderness, where I could not expect any such instruction, but where I received revelations from God.

Hence the Latin versions (Vulg., Cod. Aug., Boern.) have 'veni' for the former word, and 'abii' for the latter.

As to the history of this retirement into Arabia, see note on Acts ix. 23. Some have supposed that he went to Sinai (Lightfoot, p. 81). But would he have gone as a pilgrim to a place whose shadows had now passed away into the Gospel? Cp. below, iv. 24.

18. μετὰ ἔτη τρία] after three years. On the chronological arrangement of these dates, see above, Chronological Synopsis prefixed to the Acts of the Apostles.

— ἱστορῆσαι] to visit Cephas (Peter) and make his acquaintance. See the illustrations of ἱστορεῖν, sometimes applied to a place, in Wetstein's note. St. Paul went to visit St. Peter, "ut fraternam charitatem etiam corporali notitiâ cumularet" (Aug.), and not to learn any thing from him (Primasius).

He introduces this incident in order to show that he had never known Peter before, and therefore could not have derived any thing from him. At the same time this circumstance indicates that this visit was a spontaneous overture on St. Paul's part, and that he felt conscious that though he had derived nothing from the other Apostles, yet that the Gospel he had received from heaven was perfectly in harmony with the doctrine taught by those who were called by Christ upon earth, and that he expects them to own him as a brother, as he owns them. In the fulness of this persuasion he voluntarily repaired to Jerusalem in order to visit Peter, for whom the Jewish Christians, and therefore the Galatians, entertained the highest respect.

— Κηφᾶν] Cephas. So A, B, and Lach., Sch., Tisch., Meyer, Alf., Ellicott. Elz. has Πέτρον, which is grounded on good MS. authority, viz. D, E, F, G, H, K, but seems to be a gloss for the less familiar name Cephas, which, being the Hebrew form, was more likely to be used by St. Paul in deference to the feelings and practice of the Jewish Christians. But he afterwards used the name Peter also (ii. 7, 8), for the sake of his Gentile Readers, and to show the identity of the person who bore these two names.

— ἐπέμεινα π. αὐτὸν ἡ. δεκαπέντε] I abode with him fifteen days. He thus shows that Peter cordially received him (Primasius). Fifteen days; ample time for Peter to have seen what I was, and to have proclaimed me to the world as a deceiver, if the Gospel which I preached was not consistent with his own. Therefore they who cavil at me, involve Peter also in the charge of conniving at error and delusion.

19. Ἰάκωβον] James. The mention of Peter, one of the Twelve, is followed by the words, other of the Apostles saw I none save James the Lord's Brother. It seems to be a reasonable conclusion from this passage, that James the brother (i. e. cousin) of our Lord, and Bishop of Jerusalem, was also one of the Twelve Apostles. James was the son of Cleophas, and his Mother was Sister of the Mother of our Lord (Theodoret). Cp. Euseb. H. E. ii. 1; Hooker vii. 4. 2; and Bengel here, and note on Acts i. 13; xii. 17; xxi. 18, and note on Matt. xii. 46, and Ellicott's note here. See further below, the Introduction to his Epistle, p. 6. See also Prof. Lightfoot, pp. 241—275.

St. Paul shows his respect for St. James, by calling him the Lord's Brother, as he had shown his respect for St. Peter by saying that he himself went up to Jerusalem in order to visit him (v. 18).

By these preliminary expressions of reverence for those two Apostles, he wisely guards himself against any imputations on the part of his Judaizing adversaries, that he, a new Apostle, was liable to the charge of disparaging the original Apostles of Christ. And he prepares the way for what he is about to say in the next Chapter concerning his resistance to St. Peter, and to those who professed to come from St. James (ii. 12); and shows that he would not have acted as he did, except under a stern sense of duty.

21 r Ἔπειτα ἦλθον εἰς τὰ κλίματα τῆς Συρίας καὶ τῆς Κιλικίας· 22 ἤμην δὲ ἀγνοούμενος τῷ προσώπῳ ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις τῆς Ἰουδαίας ταῖς ἐν Χριστῷ· 23 μόνον δὲ ἀκούοντες ἦσαν ὅτι ὁ διώκων ἡμᾶς ποτὲ νῦν εὐαγγελίζεται τὴν πίστιν ἣν ποτε ἐπόρθει· 24 καὶ ἐδόξαζον ἐν ἐμοὶ τὸν Θεόν.

r Acts 9. 30. & 11. 25, 26. & 13. 1. & 15. 23, 41. & 18. 18. & 21. 3.

II. 1 a Ἔπειτα διὰ δεκατεσσάρων ἐτῶν πάλιν ἀνέβην εἰς Ἰεροσόλυμα μετὰ Βαρνάβα συμπαραλαβὼν καὶ Τίτον.

a Acts 15. 2.

2 b Ἀνέβην δὲ κατὰ ἀποκάλυψιν, καὶ ἀνεθέμην αὐτοῖς τὸ εὐαγγέλιον ὃ κηρύσσω ἐν τοῖς ἔθνεσι, κατ' ἰδίαν δὲ τοῖς δοκοῦσι, μήπως εἰς κενὸν τρέχω ἢ ἔδραμον.

b Acts 19. 21. Phil. 2. 16.

---

20. ἰδοὺ ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ] behold, in the sight of God I lie not. A solemn adjuration. "Jurat utique; et quid sanctius hâc juratione?" Aug., who has some excellent remarks here on the true character of an Oath, and on the consistency of St. Paul's conduct in this respect with the precept of Christ (Matt. v. 34), as follows: "An Oath which cometh not from the evil (ἀπὸ τοῦ πονηροῦ) of him who swears, but from the unbelief of him to whom he swears, is not against our Lord's precept 'Swear not.' Our Lord commands, that, as far as in us lies, we should not swear; which command is broken by those who have in their mouths an oath as if it were something pleasant in itself. The Apostle Paul knew our Lord's command, and yet he swore. They are not to be listened to, who say that these speeches of his are not oaths. As far as in him lies, the Apostle swears not; he does not catch at an oath with eagerness, but when he swears it is by constraint, through the infirmity or incredulity of those who will not otherwise believe what he says." See note above, on Matt. v. 34.

— ὅτι] 'that,' i. e. I speak in the sight of God, who sees that I do not lie. He is my witness that I speak the truth. A verb of seeing is implied in the word ἐνώπιον. Cp. 2 Cor. i. 23.

21. Ἔπειτα ἦλθον] after that, I came. He recites what he did, and what God did for him, but he modestly omits what he suffered for the Gospel in this period, first at Damascus (Acts ix. 22—25), and afterwards at Jerusalem (Acts ix. 26, where see note).

— Κιλικίας] Cicilia, his own country, thus showing his sincerity, courage, and love in communicating the Gospel to his kindred and friends. See Acts ix. 30.

Ch. II. 1. Ἔπειτα—εἰς Ἰεροσόλυμα] Then, fourteen years after, I went up again to Jerusalem; to the Council at Jerusalem. See notes on Acts xv. 1, 2, and the Chronological Synopsis prefixed to the Acts. And so Irenæus, iii. 13, and Jerome, and Theodoret, and Primasius here, who says that this journey took place "quando de oneribus Legis quæstio mota est:" cp. Lightf. p. 109.

St. Paul omits all reference to the journey mentioned Acts xi. 30, because he was not as yet an Apostle when he made that journey (see on Acts xiii. 1—3), and because his mission on that occasion was only for carrying alms to the poor Christians at Jerusalem, and had no doctrinal character. See Acts xii. 25, and cp. Kitto, Illustrations, pp. 300—314. Cp. Lightfoot, p. 113.

But why, it may be asked, does he not now refer to the Decree of the Council of Jerusalem on the non-obligation of the Gentiles to receive Circumcision (Acts xv. 23—29)?

He himself, in his second Missionary journey, had delivered copies of that Decree to the Churches of Upper Asia (Acts xvi. 4), and these Decrees were relevant to the question treated of in this Epistle; and the concurrence of the Apostles and Elders at Jerusalem in framing that Decree, would appear to have been a conclusive refutation of those who alleged, that St. Paul, in not enforcing Circumcision on his Galatian converts, had contravened the doctrine and discipline of the Apostles.

The reasons for his silence in this particular may be thus stated;

(1) He had already communicated the Decree of that Council to the Churches of Upper Asia, and in all probability to the Galatians themselves. See the narrative in Acts xvi. 4—6, where, after the mention of the delivery of copies of the decree, it is said that they went through the region of Phrygia and Galatia.

(2) But, after the promulgation of the decree, St. Peter had withdrawn himself from the communion of the Gentile Christians at Antioch.

Therefore it might be alleged, that St. Peter had seen reason to renounce the opinion enunciated by that Council.

(3) Hence St. Paul passes over the history of the Council, and proceeds to speak of his own conduct to St. Peter at Antioch (v. 11).

(4) Besides, St. Paul was an Apostle, "not of men nor by men" (i. 1). He had received the Gospel which he preached, by immediate revelation from God. He claimed to be heard on this ground. He showed his own sense of the independence and sufficiency of his own mission from God, by waiving all reference in its support, even to the decree of the Apostolic Council at Jerusalem (Acts xv. 28).

— μετὰ Βαρνάβα] with Barnabas, with whom he had been on his first missionary journey. See Acts xiii. 4 to Acts xiv. 26. Cp. Acts xv. 12.

— συμπαραλαβὼν καὶ Τίτον] having taken with me Titus also, a Gentile Christian (v. 3), to Jerusalem.

This is the earliest mention of Titus; and his connexion with St. Paul (as far as Holy Scripture has recorded it) dates from the Metropolis of Gentile Christianity, Antioch. Cp. note on 2 Cor. viii. 18, and on Titus i. 4.

2. κατὰ ἀποκάλυψιν] by revelation. Not therefore by commission only from the Church at Antioch (Acts xv. 2). Another proof of his independence. He would not have submitted his own revelation to be called into question unless it had been revealed to him that he should go up to Jerusalem to the Council, in which the matter under debate was to be deliberated.

The Holy Spirit revealed to him His Will that he should go to Jerusalem, not in order to learn any thing from the other Apostles, but in order to quell and pacify strife, and to promote the cause of the Gospel, and the success of his own ministry. (Chrys.) — τοῖς δοκοῦσι] to those in repute (τοῖς ἐνδόξοις, Theophyl.), Peter, James, and John. See vv. 6—9.

— μήπως εἰς κενὸν τρέχω] lest perchance I might be running, or have run, to no purpose. Τρέχω is the present indicative. Cp. Green, N. T. p. 81, and Peile here. Κηρύσσω, the present indicative in this verse, confirms this view. Winer (§ 56, p. 448) regards τρέχω as the present conjunctive.

Why did St. Paul make this communication to those in repute among the Apostles?

Not because he had the least doubt or misgiving as to his own doctrine, or in order to receive any greater assurance as to its truth.

If he had felt any hesitation on this point, he would have resorted to the Apostles for such a confirmation before.

Besides, he distinctly says (v. 6), that "those in repute contributed nothing to him."

But he communicated privately with those of reputation, lest perchance by any public altercation between him and them on this fundamental article of the faith (viz. as to the obligation of the Levitical Law) any of his converts might be scandalized, and so his labours on them be in vain. Cp. Phil. ii. 16. See Chrys. and Theophyl. here, who says that he acted thus, ἵνα μὴ στάσις γένηται, καὶ ἵνα ἀρθῇ τὸ σκάνδαλον.

In fact, St. Paul did all that was requisite on his part to obviate that very result which, unhappily, manifested itself among the Galatians, through the evil devices of the Judaizers, who endeavoured to bring his doctrine into public collision with that of the other Apostles, and which he subsequently deplores in this Epistle. See below, iv. 11, "I fear you, lest haply (μήπως) I have laboured on you in vain;" which affords the best philological and dogmatical exposition of the present verse.

By this mention of his private conference at Jerusalem with those of reputation, particularly St. Peter, he prudently prepares the way for his subsequent description of the public dispute at Antioch between himself and St. Peter. He wisely guards himself against the imputation that he had at once, and without previous communication, stood up to give a public rebuke to that great Apostle (v. 11).

St. Paul had abode with St. Peter fifteen days (i. 18). He privately communicated his own Gospel to St. Peter; St. Peter knew therefore what that Gospel was. St. Peter had given him the right hand of fellowship (v. 9), and had agreed that St. Paul should be recognized as the Apostle of the Gentiles, as he

c Acts 16. 3. 1 Cor. 9. 21. d Acts 15. 24.

3 c Ἀλλ' οὐδὲ Τίτος ὁ σὺν ἐμοὶ, Ἕλλην ὤν, ἠναγκάσθη περιτμηθῆναι, 4 d διὰ δὲ τοὺς παρεισάκτους ψευδαδέλφους, οἵτινες παρεισῆλθον κατασκοπῆσαι τὴν ἐλευθερίαν ἡμῶν ἣν ἔχομεν ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ, ἵνα ἡμᾶς καταδουλώσουσιν, himself was to the Jews (v. 9). St. Peter therefore had good reason to expect, that, after this previous intercourse with him, St. Paul's conduct to him at Antioch would be no other than what it was.

3. οὐδὲ Τίτος ὁ σὺν ἐμοὶ, Ἕ. ὤν, ἠ. π.] not even Titus, the person who came with me from Antioch to Jerusalem, was compelled to be circumcised. Compelled: by whom? By the Judaizers. St. Paul explains that this is the meaning, by saying that "he did not give place to them even for an hour." See Augustine here, who says, "The circumcision of Titus could not be extorted from him by these false brethren,—because they enforced it as necessary to salvation, and would have appealed to St. Paul as agreeing with them if he had consented to the circumcision of Titus on their terms." Cp. the use of ἀναγκάζειν also in this sense in v. 14.

The false brethren hoped to be able to place St. Paul in a dilemma, by requiring of him that Titus, his companion, should be circumcised.

If he consented, then they would have had an argument against him, in their appeals to the Gentile converts, whom he had received into the Church without circumcision.

If he refused to circumcise Titus, then they would render him obnoxious to the Jews, by representing him as at variance with the other Apostles at Jerusalem, who were circumcised, and conformed to the ceremonial law in their own persons, and communicated with those who observed it.

St. Paul therefore states here, that he refused to comply with this requisition.

He thus answers those who alleged that he was inconsistent, and practised in Judæa what he did not preach to the Heathen. Cp. v. 11.

He also tacitly justifies himself against the charge of inconsistency in circumcising another person, his other son in the faith, Timothy (Acts xvi. 3).

Timothy had been circumcised by St. Paul after the Council of Jerusalem, and a little before St. Paul's visit to Galatia; and Timothy probably accompanied him as his fellow-labourer in his missionary tour to preach the Gospel to the Galatians (Acts xvi. 6). The circumcision of Timothy was therefore, probably, well known in Galatia;

Hence the question arose,

If Timothy was afterwards circumcised, why not Titus? If not Titus, why Timothy?

St. Paul replies to this question here, "But not even Titus, he who was with me at Jerusalem, being a Gentile, was compelled to be circumcised." I would not consent that he, a Gentile, should be circumcised even at Jerusalem. Much less do I consent that you Gentiles should be circumcised in Galatia. I do not consent to your circumcision,—because you are Gentiles, and because you have embraced the Gospel, and because it would be to force you to go backwards instead of forwards, if I compelled you, or permitted others to compel you, to submit to the Levitical Law.

But Timothy's case was very different from yours;

As has been well said by Augustine (Epist. 82), St. Paul circumcised Timothy in order that Timothy's mother and maternal friends might not imagine that St. Paul detested Circumcision, as if it were an idolatrous thing; for Circumcision was from God, but Idolatry is of the Devil.

But St. Paul did not circumcise Titus, lest he should afford a handle to those who alleged that Gentiles receiving the Gospel could not be saved without Circumcision; and who deceived the Gentile Christians by imputing such an opinion to St. Paul.

4. διὰ δὲ τοὺς παρεισ. ψευδ.] but because of the false brethren privily brought in; on their account, and as a protest against them, Titus was not compelled to be circumcised. I refused to allow that Titus should be circumcised, not because I abhor Circumcision,—for I know it to have been from God, and I afterwards circumcised Timothy; but I refused to allow Titus to be circumcised,—not because Circumcision, regarded as an indifferent thing, is destructive of salvation, but (δὲ) because of the false brethren surreptitiously brought in, who crept in secretly, to be spies on the Liberty which we have in Christ Jesus, and because they desired to rob you Gentiles of that Liberty, and to place your hopes of salvation on obedience to the Levitical Law and not on Christ, that they might reduce us to slavery; to whom we gave place by the subjection (τῇ ὑποταγῇ) which they expected of us,—no, not even for an hour.

By this mention of false brethren surreptitiously brought in, he clears the holy Apostles from the imputation of being supposed to have been parties to such a requisition—after the Council of Jerusalem—as that Titus, a Gentile, should be compelled to be circumcised.

Among those false brethren are supposed to have been Ebion and Cerinthus. See on Acts xv. 1. Cp. 2 Cor. xi. 26.

These false brethren are represented as spies clandestinely introduced into the Christian Church as into a free city, and as desirous of finding out some assailable point, by which it might be attacked and reduced to slavery.

Their point of attack was the Liberty of the Church, and was chosen with great subtlety.

They were at Jerusalem, and had the advantage of all the Jewish zeal in behalf of the Levitical Law in their favour.

They imagined that they had St. Paul in a dilemma (see on v. 3), and the point they chose was one in which they apprehended no resistance from him.

They desired to enforce Circumcision on Titus, who was with St. Paul at Jerusalem under his care. But St. Paul resisted this coercion.

And why? Even because of these false brethren, who would have enforced it. Because they were enforcing it as necessary to salvation. On the force of δὲ here see Winer, § 63, p. 502.

The fundamental principle of the Gospel of Christ (as distinguished from the Law of Moses) was then at stake.

Under other circumstances, for the sake of charity, and to conciliate enemies, St. Paul might have dealt with Titus as he afterwards did with Timothy.

St. Paul might perhaps have allowed even Titus to receive Circumcision, as a thing indifferent, and for the sake of peace and charity. (Augustine.)

But these false brethren did not proffer Circumcision as a thing indifferent, but were enforcing it as a thing necessary to salvation.

If St. Paul had complied with their requisition so enforced, and if he had allowed Titus, who was associated with himself, to receive Circumcision on these terms, he would have fallen into the snare which they laid for him; he would have made himself a partner and a patron of their error, and have disqualified himself for being the Apostle of the Gentiles, and for preaching to them the Gospel of Free Grace and of Justification by Faith in Christ without the deeds of the Law (Rom. iii. 28. Gal. ii. 16. Eph. ii. 8. Acts xiii. 39).

Observe therefore the charity and courage of the Apostle;

(1) His charity, in circumcising Timothy at Lystra, in condescension to the scruples of weak brethren. See on Acts xvi. 3.

(2) His courage, in refusing to circumcise Titus at Jerusalem, in submission to the requisitions of false brethren.

He was not unwilling, in certain cases, and under certain circumstances, even to practise Circumcision, while the Levitical Ritual, which was of God, was still celebrated, and had not been visibly abrogated by its Divine Author, in the sight of the world, as it soon afterwards was, by the destruction of the City and Temple of Jerusalem. See on Heb. xiii. 10.

In such cases St. Paul would not be unwilling to conform to Levitical ceremonies as things indifferent. And in all indifferent things the Law of his teaching, and the Rule of his practice, was Charity.

But in no case would he enforce Circumcision as necessary, nor would he ever yield for a moment to others, however numerous and powerful, who would enforce it on any as such. He would be tender-hearted to the erring, but he would not make the least compromise with error; and he would make no concession to any who would impose their errors on others as terms of communion.

Doubtless the Miracles wrought by St. Paul were seals of his Apostleship (2 Cor. xii. 12). But assuredly the loving Gentleness, and yet unflinching Intrepidity, the condescending Meekness, and yet uncompromising Zeal, and in all things the consummate Wisdom with which the holy Apostle was enabled to act in the midst of his incessant cares, and on the most critical occasions, and when he stood almost alone, as at Antioch, and when he had a Peter and a Barnabas opposed to him, will afford convincing proofs, that St. Paul was under the abiding guidance of the Holy Ghost, to all those who look back from the present time to the Apostolic Age, and trace the influence of St. Paul's teaching and practice, in the history of the Christian Church, especially in this great question of Justification, and in reference to the true character and office of the Levitical Law.

— ἵνα—καταδουλώσουσιν] that they might reduce us to slavery. So A, B, C, D, E; Elz. καταδουλώσωνται. The ἵνα, with the 5 οἷς οὐδὲ πρὸς ὥραν εἴξαμεν τῇ ὑποταγῇ, ἵνα ἡ ἀλήθεια τοῦ εὐαγγελίου διαμείνῃ πρὸς ὑμᾶς.

6 [e] Ἀπὸ δὲ τῶν δοκούντων εἶναί τι ὁποῖοί ποτε ἦσαν οὐδέν μοι διαφέρει, πρόσωπον Θεὸς ἀνθρώπου οὐ λαμβάνει, ἐμοὶ γὰρ οἱ δοκοῦντες οὐδὲν προσανέθεντο· 7 [f] ἀλλὰ τοὐναντίον ἰδόντες ὅτι πεπίστευμαι τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τῆς ἀκροβυστίας, καθὼς Πέτρος τῆς περιτομῆς, 8 [g] ὁ γὰρ ἐνεργήσας Πέτρῳ εἰς ἀποστολὴν τῆς περιτομῆς ἐνήργησε κἀμοὶ εἰς τὰ ἔθνη, 9 καὶ γνόντες τὴν χάριν τὴν δοθεῖσάν μοι Ἰάκωβος καὶ Κηφᾶς καὶ Ἰωάννης, οἱ δοκοῦντες στῦλοι εἶναι, δεξιὰς ἔδωκαν ἐμοὶ καὶ Βαρνάβᾳ κοινωνίας, ἵνα ἡμεῖς εἰς τὰ ἔθνη, αὐτοὶ δὲ εἰς τὴν περιτομήν· 10 [h] μόνον τῶν πτωχῶν ἵνα μνημονεύωμεν, ὃ καὶ ἐσπούδασα αὐτὸ τοῦτο ποιῆσαι.

e Deut. 10. 17. 2 Chron. 19. 7. Job 34. 19. Wisd. 6. 7. Acts 10. 34. Rom. 2. 11. Eph. 6. 9. Col. 3. 25. 1 Pet. 1. 17.
f Acts 13. 46. Rom. 11. 13. 1 Tim. 2. 7. 2 Tim. 1. 11.
g Acts 9. 15. & 13. 2. & 22. 21. ch. 1. 16. Eph. 3. 8.
h Acts 11. 29, 30. & 24. 17. Rom. 15. 25—27. 1 Cor. 16. 1, 2. 2 Cor. 8. 1. & 9. 1. Heb. 13. 16. James 2. 15, 16.

future, seems to denote, not only the purpose of the act, but also that the act then done was the means by which they would then enslave and still desire to enslave. Cp. Eph. vi. 3. Rev. xxii. 14, ἵνα ἔσται. 1 Pet. iii. 1. Winer, p. 258.

5. πρὸς ὥραν] for an hour. See 1 Thess. ii. 17. 2 Cor. vii. 8.

— εἴξαμεν] we yielded. By the change of the number from the singular in v. 2 to the plural here, and the return to the singular in v. 6, he intimates that Titus joined with him in this resistance. On the omission of οὐδὲ in some MSS. see Lightf. 107.

— τῇ ὑποταγῇ] with the subjection which they expected and exacted from us.

S. Irenæus (iii. 13) and other Greek Fathers consider τῇ ὑποταγῇ as a dative, and so Tertullian c. Marcion. v. 3; and S. Jerome, "quibus neque ad horam cessimus subjectioni," and he explains it, "nec se cessisse violentiæ;" and then ὑποταγὴ would mean the subjection which they would have imposed on us.

6. Ἀπὸ δὲ τῶν δοκούντων εἶναί τι] But from those who seemed to be somewhat. This is another passage which has been the subject of much controversy.

(1) On εἶναί τι 'esse aliquid,' to be something, see Wetstein here, and 1 Cor. iii. 7, and note above on i. 7.

(2) But the main difficulty of the paragraph is in the construction of the word ἀπὸ, from.

It has generally been supposed that there is an anacoluthon or ellipsis here, and that some words are to be supplied before ἀπό; and many different methods have been resorted to of supplying the supposed deficiency.

(3) But it is very doubtful whether there is any anacoluthon or ellipsis.

The Apostle's meaning may be explained as follows: he had just spoken of the false brethren who had crept in, as it were, by stealth into the Apostolic company.

He now proceeds to speak of the sounder part of the body, into which these false brethren had insidiously insinuated themselves.

He does this in general terms, so as to spare (as usual, when he can avoid their mention) the names of individuals.

(4) Ἀπὸ is used here paraphrastically, as Acts xii. 1, τινὰς ἀπὸ τῆς ἐκκλησίας. Acts xv. 5, ἀπὸ τῆς αἱρέσεως Φαρισαίων, in the record of this same period to which St. Paul here refers. Compare below, ii. 12, τινὰς ἀπὸ Ἰακώβου. Heb. vii. 13, ἀφ' ἧς οὐδεὶς, and Heb. xiii. 24, οἱ ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰταλίας.

In these combinations the preposition ἀπὸ marks the origin or quarter from which persons come, and sometimes also the side on which they stood, as in Latin 'a parte meâ, tuâ,' &c.

(5) The true meaning of the words therefore seems to be, But it is no matter to me what sort of persons were from those who seemed to be somewhat. And the apodosis of the sentence is at ἦσαν. The sentence is well rendered by Vulg., i. e. "ab his autem qui videbantur esse aliquid quales aliquando fuerint, nihil meâ interest." See also next note.

— οἱ δοκοῦντες] For even they themselves, who appear to be somewhat, communicated nothing to me; 'nihil mihi contulerunt' (Vulg.); much less therefore was it any matter to me what sort of persons they were who came from them. If the principal persons (i. e. the Apostles, such as James) themselves (οἱ δοκοῦντες) could do nothing to inform me, much less could any Subordinates from those Principals (ἀπὸ τῶν δοκούντων) do any thing to enlighten me or to change my resolution. If James himself could add nothing to me in conference, much less could any from James (v. 12).

7. Ἀλλὰ τοὐναντίον] The connexion is this. They who seemed to be, and were somewhat, i. e. the Apostles at Jerusalem, added nothing to me. No, nor did they profess or pretend to do so. Ἀλλὰ τοὐναντίον, But on the contrary, James, and Cephas, and John, who seemed to be pillars, when they saw that I had been entrusted with the charge of preaching the Gospel to the Uncircumcision, &c., they gave me the right hand of fellowship. On the figure of speech in στῦλοι, see Wetstein. Cp. Rev. iii. 12, and Eurip. Iph. T. 571, στῦλοι γὰρ οἴκων εἰσὶ παῖδες ἄρσενες.

He here mentions James, and Cephas, and John by name, because what he says was honourable to them. But when he has to record any thing that is less creditable to any one, he spares the names of individuals even of the false brethren (v. 4); he practises that Charity which casts a veil over faults, and imputeth no evil (1 Cor. xiii. 5). The name of the incestuous Corinthian, who caused so much scandal, and sorrow, and vexation to the Apostle, is not revealed to us.

We may be sure, therefore, from the specification of St. Peter's name in his narrative of the contest at Antioch (v. 11), that there was a necessity for such a personal commemoration; doubtless it was, because St. Peter's name was often cited and appealed to by the Judaizers in behalf of their own doctrine and practice.

Perhaps, also, it was mentioned providentially, because some who claim to be successors of St. Peter profess to be above error and beyond rebuke. See the Review at the end of this Chapter.

— πεπίστευμαι] See 1 Cor. ix. 17. 1 Thess. ii. 4. 1 Tim. i. 11.

8. ὁ γὰρ ἐνεργήσας] for the same God that wrought effectually for Peter toward the Apostleship of the Circumcision (or of the Jews) by miracles, and by giving success to his ministry among them. He gave a similar testimony to me, toward the Gentiles. See the record of this fact publicly announced by St. Paul to the Apostles and to the Council at Jerusalem, where they listened to Barnabas and Paul relating what signs and wonders God wrought among the Gentiles by them (Acts xv. 4. 12).

10. τῶν πτωχῶν] the poor Christians at Jerusalem. See Rom. xv. 26.

It was agreed that we should go to the Gentiles, but not forget the Jewish Christians, who were suffering, and continued to suffer, special hardships on account of their peculiar position, being shunned as renegades by their Jewish friends and relatives. Cp. Chrys. here, who refers to 1 Thess. ii. 14 and Heb. x. 34.

The Hebrew Christians were also in an afflicted condition by reason of the Famines, Seditions, and Pestilences which continually ravaged Judæa in the forty years of trial between the Crucifixion and the Destruction of Jerusalem. Cp. on Acts ii. 44; xi. 28, 29. Euseb. ii. 8. 26; iii. 6. 8.

— ὃ καὶ ἐσπούδασα] which I was eager to do, viz. this very thing. 'Quod etiam solicitus fui hoc ipsum facere' (Vulg.); 'studui' (Augustine).

The addition of αὐτὸ τοῦτο brings out the thing recommended more forcibly and emphatically. Winer, p. 129, § 21, and p. 134, § 22.

Well might St. Paul say that he was eager to do this very thing. For previously to his Ordination to be an Apostle, and when he was only a Prophet, about five years before the Council of Jerusalem, he had come up from Antioch with a collection of alms for the poor saints at Jerusalem from the Gentile City of Antioch (Acts xi. 29; xii. 25).

His subsequent zeal and persevering earnestness in the same labour of love are evident from 1 Cor. xvi. 1—15. 2 Cor. viii. 1—5; ix. 1. Rom. xv. 25, 26. See Introduction to this Epistle, § 14—16.

By mentioning his readiness in this matter he shows here—

(1) His fraternal consent and co-operation with the other Apostles;

(2) His love for the Jewish Christians, many of whom were unfriendly to him;

(3) That his non-compliance with the requirements of the false brethren, who would have enforced the Levitical Law on the Gentiles, was from no lack of charity to them. He would even become a suitor to the Gentiles for alms to the Jews (cp. 1 Cor.

11 Ὅτε δὲ ἦλθε Κηφᾶς εἰς Ἀντιόχειαν, κατὰ πρόσωπον αὐτῷ ἀντέστην, ὅτι κατεγνωσμένος ἦν· 12 πρὸ τοῦ γὰρ ἐλθεῖν τινὰς ἀπὸ Ἰακώβου, μετὰ τῶν ἐθνῶν συνήσθιεν· ὅτε δὲ ἦλθον, ὑπέστελλε καὶ ἀφώριζεν ἑαυτὸν φοβούμενος τοὺς ἐκ περιτομῆς· 13 καὶ συνυπεκρίθησαν αὐτῷ καὶ οἱ λοιποὶ Ἰουδαῖοι, ὥστε καὶ Βαρνάβας συναπήχθη αὐτῶν τῇ ὑποκρίσει.

xvi. 16. 2 Cor. viii. 1; ix. 1); and at length he became a victim to the rancour of the Jews when he was engaged at Jerusalem in the act of promoting this very thing (Acts xxiv. 17).

11. Κηφᾶς] Cephas. So A, B, C, and many cursives.

The antiquity of this reading is proved by the opinion of some of the ancients, that the Cephas here mentioned was not the Apostle Peter, but one of the Seventy disciples. See Clemens Alex. ap. Euseb. i. 12. Cp. S. Jerome here, who says, "Si propter Porphyrii blasphemias alius nobis fingendus est Cephas," &c. But Tertullian, in the second century, who often refers to this contest, has no doubt of the identity, e. g. c. Marcion. v. 3, "reprehendit Petrum, planè reprehendit, &c., Petro ipsi non pepercit."

The reading Cephas is more probable on internal grounds, because St. Paul (in recounting a transaction of St. Peter which was of a Judaistic character, consequent on the human prejudices incidental to his Jewish birth and education, and not in harmony with the office of a Christian Apostle, and which St. Paul would not wish to identify with St. Peter as such) would designate him by his Jewish name Cephas, and so bury that act in oblivion with that Jewish name, rather than associate that transaction with that name by which he lives in the memory and veneration of the Christian Church—the Gentile name of Peter.

In like manner St. Paul's companion, St. Luke, when he has to speak of his brother Evangelist St. Matthew as a Publican, calls him, with reverential delicacy, by the name of Levi (Luke v. 27. 29), and reserves the name of Matthew for the description of his title as an Apostle of Christ (Luke vi. 15. Acts i. 13). It is Matthew alone who speaks of "Matthew the Publican," Matt. x. 3.

"I am of Cephas," said some at Corinth (1 Cor. i. 12)—Judaizers fondly cleaving to his Jewish name—even in a city of Greece, where the Greek name Πέτρος might have been anticipated.

— εἰς Ἀντιόχειαν] to Antioch. On this visit of St. Peter, placed here by St. Paul, in its proper chronological sequence, after the Council of Jerusalem, see note on Acts xv. 39.

The mention of the place Antioch itself is fraught with interesting reflections; For,

(1) Antioch was the Mother City of Gentile Christianity. It was to the Gentile World what Jerusalem was to the Jews. See on Acts xi. 26.

(2) It was the place where St. Paul had been ordained to the Apostleship.

(3) It was the starting-place, and the goal, of his Missionary Journeys;

See Acts xiii. 1—xiv. 26, for his first Missionary Journey.

Acts xv. 35—xviii. 22, for his second Missionary Journey.

(4) In Antioch, the metropolis of Gentile Christianity, and which was the home of his Missionary life, in that city where the disciples were first called Christians (Acts xi. 26), St. Paul, the Apostle of the Gentiles, who had been ordained there to the Apostleship, stood, almost alone, in the gap, in defence of the Liberty of the Gospel, and on behalf of the saving and sufficient efficacy of Christ's Death, and on behalf of the Gentile world.

(5) St. Peter is asserted by ancient authors to have founded the Church at Antioch, and to have had a special connexion with Antioch, as Bishop of that city (Origen in Luc. hom. vi. Euseb. iii. 36. S. Jerome in this chapter and in Catal. Scr. c. 1. Concil., ed. Labbé, ii. p. 1262, 9). If this was the case at the time of this contest, St. Paul's courage on that occasion was still more remarkable.

— κατὰ πρόσωπον] face to face. (Acts xxv. 16.)

The taunts of the infidel Porphyry, in which also Marcion joined (see Tertullian c. Marcion. iv. 3), pointing to this open resistance and public rebuke of one Apostle by another, and the inferences thence deduced by him to the prejudice of the Gospel, unhappily had the effect of inducing some in ancient times to soften down the meaning of κατὰ πρόσωπον, so as to make it signify nothing more than a mere external show of resistance,—in fact, a mere compromise, by which, in order to conciliate the Gentiles, St. Paul rebuked St. Peter; and, in order to conciliate the Jews, St. Peter submitted to be rebuked by St. Paul.

This opinion has been for ever exploded, and the important questions involved in it have been clearly elucidated by S. Augustine, especially in his correspondence with S. Jerome in his 28th and 82nd Epistle, and also in his treatise "De Mendacio ad Consentium," c. 26, vol. vi. p. 778. S. Jerome's replies may be seen ibid. Ep. 40. 75. See also Prof. Lightfoot, p. 125.

S. Jerome himself, after having maintained an opposite opinion, frankly acknowledged the superiority of S. Augustine's arguments, and candidly declared, as his final judgment, that St. Peter was resisted and rebuked face to face by St. Paul. Adv. Pelag. i. c. 8. See also S. Jerome, in Epist. ad Philemon.: "Quondam Petrum Paulus increpaverat;" and in Jovinian. i. vol. iv. p. 160: "Petrum reprehendit quod propter observationes Judaicas a gentibus se separaret."

— ὅτι κατεγνωσμένος ἦν] because he was condemned,—'quoniam reprehensus erat.' So rightly, the old Latin Version in Codex Boernerianus, and not, as the Vulgate has it, reprehensibilis. And the Commentary lately published for the first time by the learned Benedictine J. B. Pitra, in his 'Spicilegium Solesmense,' as the work of S. Hilary, p. 59, has also reprehensus, i. e. 'was condemned;' i. e. condemned by his own practice. See Alp. Whately (Lectures on the Acts, p. 180), Meyer, Alford, and Winer, p. 307. This is explained by St. Paul in v. 14, where he shows that St. Peter was αὐτοκατάκριτος, and why. See on v. 12.

It has been recently alleged by a learned Expositor as a reason for grave censure of the Christian Fathers, that they try to make it appear that the censure of St. Peter by St. Paul was only an apparent one.

But the fact is, that some most eminent of the ancient Christian Fathers, e. g. Cyprian and Ambrose, maintained, even before Augustine, that the censure was real; and since the age of Augustine (one of the greatest of Christian Fathers), scarcely any Father of the Church has held a contrary opinion.

12. ἀπὸ Ἰακώβου] from James, the Bishop of Jerusalem: "a Judæa, nam Ecclesiæ Hierosolymitanæ Jacobus præfuit." (Augustine.) Cp. Acts xxi. 18, εἰσῄει πρὸς Ἰάκωβον. Acts xii. 17, Ἰακώβῳ καὶ τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς.

They came from James, but it does not follow that James sent them with a commission to act as they did. Indeed this is not to be credited, after the speech of St. James at the Council of Jerusalem (Acts xv. 14—21).

James himself observed the ceremonies of the Levitical Law, and recommended them to the Jewish Christians, even to St. Paul himself at Jerusalem, after this time. See on Acts xxi. 23, 24. Cp. Euseb. ii. 23.

These persons sent by James were weak brethren, and not yet sufficiently instructed as to the cessation of the Levitical ceremonies. Cp. Bp. Sanderson (Prælect. de Conscient. iii. vol. iv. p. 45), where the subject is admirably treated.

— συνήσθιεν] was wont to eat with them; he made no difference between meats as distinguished by the Levitical Law into clean and unclean. Cp. Acts xi. 2—13, where St. Peter justifies himself for having so done.

Thus Peter openly declared that the Levitical Law was not to be imposed upon the Gentiles, and had ceased to be binding on himself.

— ὑπέστελλε] he withdrew. A nautical metaphor. St. Peter had been, as it were, sailing in company with Gentile partners (μέτοχοι, cp. Luke v. 7), and every thing seemed to be peaceable; but some false brethren came from Jerusalem, and he then (as it were) shortened sail and parted company from the Gentile Christians, and the rest of the Jews, and even Barnabas, separated themselves and sailed away with him. On this use of ὑποστέλλω and the simple στέλλομαι, see on 2 Thess. iii. 6. 2 Cor. viii. 20. Acts xx. 20. Heb. x. 38, 39.

13. συνυπεκρίθησαν—ὑποκρίσει] the other Jews dissembled together with him, so that even Barnabas was carried away by their dissimulation. This vacillation of St. Peter is called ὑπόκρισις by St. Paul, because St. Peter was not ignorant that these Levitical Ceremonies were not necessary to the Gentiles, and ought not to be enforced upon them; and that it was his duty to communicate with them, without exacting conformity from them to those ceremonies. He had been taught this by the heavenly Vision at Joppa, on which he himself had acted at Cæsarea (Acts x. 13). He had entertained Gentiles at Joppa (Acts x. 23), and had eaten with them at Cæsarea (xi. 3).

Therefore his defection at Antioch was that of hiding the 14 ἀλλ' ὅτε εἶδον ὅτι οὐκ ὀρθοποδοῦσι πρὸς τὴν ἀλήθειαν τοῦ εὐαγγελίου, εἶπον τῷ Κηφᾷ ἔμπροσθεν πάντων, Εἰ σὺ Ἰουδαῖος ὑπάρχων ἐθνικῶς ζῇς καὶ οὐκ Ἰουδαϊκῶς, πῶς τὰ ἔθνη ἀναγκάζεις Ἰουδαΐζειν; 15 ἡμεῖς φύσει Ἰουδαῖοι καὶ οὐκ ἐξ ἐθνῶν ἁμαρτωλοί, 16 k εἰδότες δὲ ὅτι οὐ δικαιοῦται ἄνθρωπος ἐξ ἔργων νόμου ἐὰν μὴ διὰ πίστεως Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, καὶ ἡμεῖς εἰς Χριστὸν Ἰησοῦν ἐπιστεύσαμεν, ἵνα δικαιωθῶμεν ἐκ πίστεως Χριστοῦ καὶ οὐκ ἐξ ἔργων νόμου, διότι ἐξ ἔργων νόμου οὐ δικαιωθήσεται πᾶσα σάρξ. 17 Εἰ δὲ ζητοῦντες δικαιωθῆναι ἐν Χριστῷ εὑρέθημεν καὶ αὐτοὶ ἁμαρτωλοί, ἆρα Χριστὸς ἁμαρτίας

1 Acts 10. 28. & 11. 3—18. & 15. 10, 11, 19—21, 24, 28, 29.

k Ps. 143. 2. Rom. 1. 17. & 3. 20, 28, 30. & 4. 5, 6, 24, 25. & 5. 1, 2, 8, 9. & 8. 3. ch. 3. 11.

---

truth known to be truth, and of conniving at error, known to be error. He was therefore κατεγνωσμένος. And this his fault was ὑπόκρισις in its double character of dissimulatio and simulatio. As Augustine says (Ep. 40), "fallacem simulationem Paulus reprehendit." See also below, on v. 14, ἀναγκάζεις.

— καὶ Βαρνάβας] even Barnabas, my brother Apostle and fellow-labourer in my first mission to the Gentiles. Acts xiii. 2. 4; xiv. 14; xv. 25.

This probably was the first occasion of the difference between St. Paul and Barnabas concerning St. Mark, which occurred soon after this time (Acts xv. 36—40), and which led to St. Paul's association with Silas (v. 40), and also with Timothy. See Acts xvi. 3.

This incident shows the insufficiency of Human Examples to serve as a Rule of Conscience and of Conduct. St. Paul most justly reproved the unseasonable hypocrisy of his fellow-Apostle St. Peter, face to face (as the expression signifies in another place in Scripture, Acts xxv. 16), and he did it boldly and openly, before all that were present, for this reason more especially,—because by his example he had seduced Barnabas and the Jews of Antioch into a mistake, and given a grievous occasion of offence to the Gentile converts, who had so lately received the Christian Faith, to the great hazard and scandal of the Liberty of the Gospel. How insufficient the examples of others are, to be the Rule of our own manners and conduct, and how inconsistent it is with the peace and security of the conscience, to defend our own actions by the deportment of others, how pious soever, that have gone before us, will appear in the clearest light from these words (Gal. ii. 13), especially if we inquire into the history they relate to, and consider the full scope and design of them. St. Paul declares that for this fact he reproved St. Peter, and censured him justly, and with more than ordinary freedom; not only because he himself, to the scandal of so many of the brethren, either from too great a desire of obliging, or a fear of giving offence, expressed more favour for the Jewish ceremonies than became him; but by his example he carried others away into the same hypocrisy, and by the same methods attempted to force the believing Gentiles, against their will and their conscience, into the rites of Judaism. Bp. Sanderson (Lectures on Conscience, vol. ii. pp. 128. 131. 6th ed. Lond. 1722).

14. οὐκ ὀρθοποδοῦσι πρὸς τὴν ἀλήθ. τ. εὐ. κ.τ.λ.] are not walking uprightly according to the truth of the Gospel.

Ὀρθοποδεῖν is best explained by its opposite prævaricari, said properly of those who do not plough in a straight furrow, 'non recto pede, sed varis cruribus;' and thence applied, in a moral sense, to those who do not walk straight in the path of duty, but diverge from the right line, especially by collusion; and so is used of prevarication generally.

On this use of πρὸς see Luke xii. 47, ποιήσας πρὸς τὸ θέλημα. Winer, p. 361. Tertullian c. Marcion. iv. 3, and Ellicott here.

The sense is well given by Vulg.: "Recto pede incedere ad veritatem Evangelii." Cp. Horat. (2 Epist. i. 58): "Plautus ad exemplar Siculi properare Epicharmi."

The Truth (ἡ ἀλήθεια) of the Gospel is an expression very familiar with St. Paul describing specially its character as a dispensation of Grace, and as distinguished from the Judaistic error which he impugns in this Epistle. See Gal. iv. 16. Tit. i. 14.

— Κηφᾷ] Cephas. So A, B, C (v. 11), and so Scholz, Lach., Tisch., Meyer, Alford, Ellicott. Elz. has Πέτρῳ. See above, v. 11.

— Εἰ σὺ—ζῇς] So A, B, C, F, G, and several cursive MSS., and Origen and Vulg., and so Lachm., Meyer, Ellicott. Elz. has ζῇς after ἐθνικῶς, and the contrast is between the personal practice in ζῇς and that required of others in Ἰουδαΐζειν.

St. Peter lived ἐθνικῶς by going in to men uncircumcised at Cæsarea, and eating with them (Acts xi. 3).

— Ἰουδαῖος ὑπάρχων] being by birth a Jew. Observe ὑπάρχων, stronger than ὤν.

— πῶς] how? This is the reading of the best MSS. and Editions. Elz. has τί.

St. Paul did not ask the reason why, for he knew well that no reason could be given for such coercion, but he asks πῶς; how is it that thou (who wast instructed by a heavenly Vision at Joppa, and who wast enabled by God's grace to admit Cornelius into the Church, and to speak as thou didst at the Council of Jerusalem, and who livest as do the Gentiles), how is it that thou constrainest the Gentiles to Judaize? On this use of πῶς, see below, iv. 9.

— ἀναγκάζεις] constrainest them. How?—by withdrawing thyself from them.

In fact, the refusal of St. Peter to communicate with the Gentiles unless they complied with the Levitical Law, was tantamount to an imposition of that Law upon them as a term of communion.

If one part of that Law was obligatory upon them, the whole was. If Peter would not communicate with them because they would not observe the Levitical difference between meats as a matter of obligation, he could not in consistency communicate with them unless they consented to receive Circumcision also as necessary to salvation. He virtually imposed Circumcision on them as a term of communion.

"Paul did not rebuke Peter because Peter observed in his own person the traditions of his fathers, which, though no longer necessary, were not as yet hurtful. But he rebuked him because he compelled the Gentiles to Judaize, which he could not do in any other way than by treating these Levitical rites as if, after the coming of Christ, they were necessary to salvation.

"This is what the Voice of Truth dissuaded, by the Apostleship of St. Paul. Nor was St. Peter ignorant of this verity. But he acted through fear. 'He feared them of the Circumcision.'" (Augustine, Ep. 40, vol. ii. p. 127).

See also above on v. 13, and Augustine says, p. 287, "It was contrary to Evangelical verity to imagine that they who believed in Christ could not be saved without the Levitical ceremonies. This is what they of the Circumcision maintained; against whom the Apostle Paul contended with constancy and valour."

15. ἡμεῖς] we who are Jews by nature, and not proselytes (Chrys.), and so enjoy great spiritual privileges (Rom. iii. 2), and are not sinners of the Gentiles (i. e. sinners in the Jewish sense of the word, see Matt. ix. 10, 11; xi. 19. Mark ii. 16. Luke v. 30. Augustine), but yet, since we know that no man is justified by the works of the Law, (nor in any manner) except through Faith in Jesus Christ; even we believed, ἐπιστεύσαμεν (and professed our faith, see Rom. xiii. 11), in Christ, in order that we may be justified by Faith in Christ, and not by the works of the Law; because by the works of the Law no flesh shall be justified.

He says here, We are not sinners of the Gentiles. But he takes care to state that the Jews are sinners also, as well as the Gentiles, and he calls them such (v. 17).

On the language and doctrine of this passage, especially as to the sense of the word justified, see Rom. iii. 20—28.

17. Εἰ δὲ ζητοῦντες κ.τ.λ.] If we Jews, seeking to be justified by Christ, were also discovered to be sinners as well as the Gentiles (v. 16).

Observe the contrast between ζητοῦντες and εὑρέθημεν. We seek for righteousness, and have been found to be unrighteous. We, in and by our very search for Justification, have been discovered to be sinners. For no one seeks to be justified who does not own himself guilty. And by seeking to be justified by Christ we acknowledge that Christ died for our sins, and thus therefore we are discovered to be sinners.

"Is Christ therefore a minister of sin?" God forbid that we should dare to say this! Our need of Justification did not make us sinners, but declared us to be sinners. But Christ died to take away our sins, and to reconcile us to God, which the Law could not do. "Ecce quales nos invenit gratia Salvatoris, quos nec Lex sanos facere potuit! Quia ergo ex Lege non erat Justitia, ideo mortuus est Christus, ut per fidem justificentur qui ex Lege non justificabantur." S. Augustine, Serm. 26.

διάκονος ; μὴ γένοιτο· 18 εἰ γὰρ ἃ κατέλυσα ταῦτα πάλιν οἰκοδομῶ, παραβάτην ἐμαυτὸν συνιστάνω· 19 [1] ἐγὼ γὰρ διὰ νόμου νόμῳ ἀπέθανον ἵνα Θεῷ ζήσω.
20 [m] Χριστῷ συνεσταύρωμαι, ζῶ δὲ οὐκ ἔτι ἐγώ, ζῇ δὲ ἐν ἐμοὶ Χριστός· ὃ δὲ νῦν ι Rom. 6 11, 14. & 7. 4, 6. & 8. 2. & 14. 7, &c. 2 Cor. 5. 15. 1 Thess. 5. 10.

m Rom. 6. 6. ch. 1. 4. & 5. 24. & 6. 14. Eph. 5. 2. Tit. 2. 14.

— μὴ γένοιτο] On this formula, derived from the LXX, it is to be observed that the Septuagint render—

(1) אָמֵן (Amen) by γένοιτο. See the remarkable instance in Deut. xxvii. 15—18, &c., and passim ; and

(2) They render חָלִילָה (chalilah), i. e. absit, literally profanum sit, by μὴ γένοιτο (Gen. xliv. 7. 17. Josh. xxii. 29).

Μὴ γένοιτο is therefore something much more than a direct negation, such as 'No verily.' It is a vehement expression of indignant aversion, reprobating and abominating such a notion as that by which it is evoked. And therefore the English God forbid! properly understood, i. e. God forbid that any one should so speak, is a fit rendering of it.

The formula μὴ γένοιτο is used (as Conybeare observes) fourteen times by St. Paul (ten times in the Epistle to the Romans, thrice to the Galatians, and once in 1 Corinthians), and is generally employed by him to rebut an objection supposed by him to be made by an opponent,—as here.

18. εἰ γὰρ ἃ κατέλυσα] God forbid! (i. e. that any one should dare to say that Christ is a minister of sin.) For (γὰρ), on the contrary, if I build up again the foundation of the Levitical Law, which I pulled down, I establish myself a transgressor,—I constitute myself a transgressor.

The Apostle St. Paul, in this speech to St. Peter, courteously uses the first person, I, instead of the second, thou: and with that delicate refinement and consummate skill of which he is a master (see on 1 Cor. vi. 12), he leaves St. Peter to adopt his words, and to apply them to himself.

The speech of St. Paul to St. Peter is continued to the end of this chapter, where it is well observed by Primasius (Bp. of Adrumetum in the 6th century), in his commentary, "Hoc totum sub suâ personâ adversus Petrum de Petro disputat."

The metaphor here is an architectural one. St. Paul regards himself and the Apostles generally as builders of the Christian Church, particularly by their decree at the Council of Jerusalem, and especially St. Peter, who was commissioned by a vision from heaven to receive Gentiles into the Church without the imposition of the law.

He and they had pulled down the Judaistic system of Justification, grounded on the works of the Law, and imposing obedience to the Levitical Law as of necessity to salvation, on the Gentiles.

And in the place of that Judaistic system they had built up the structure of Free Grace in Christ, and of universal Justification through Faith in the atoning and cleansing efficacy of His blood shed for the sins of the World.

St. Paul is here replying to those who alleged that he had set aside the Levitical Law, and had made himself a transgressor of that Law; and that by accepting the Gospel, which by its declaration of universal need of justification proclaimed the universality of sin, and of free pardon through Christ, he made Christ to be a minister of sin.

He declares that so far from this being the case, the fact is that they who build up again the Law, do in fact build themselves up to be transgressors. There is a happy oxymoron here, like that of Tertullian, Præscr. c. 3, "ædificari in ruinam."

Observe the word συνιστάνω, 'constituo,' 'colloco.' In this word he follows up the architectural figure. The Architect would constitute, establish, build up, and display himself as a transgressor even of the Law itself properly understood. Remark the word παραβάτην, a transgressor, as distinguished from ἁμαρτωλὸς, a sinner. If I refuse to own myself a sinner (ἁμαρτωλὸς, as the Gentiles are, v. 15), and to have need of that Justification which God has provided for me by the death of Christ and by Faith in Him ; if I pull down the foundation of Faith in Christ, and if I build up again what I had pulled down, viz. the Mosaic Law, as the groundwork of my Justification; then I establish myself a transgressor. And why?

(1) Because it is Christ alone Who has fulfilled the Law; and because it is only by virtue of our being in Christ, Who has taken our Nature, and Who has engrafted us by Baptism into Himself, and Who, as our Second Adam and Head, has perfectly obeyed the Law for us, and made an all-sufficient Expiation for our transgressions of the Law, and has paid its penalty for us by His Death, that we are acceptable to God. But if we place ourselves apart from Christ, if we are regarded by God as otherwise than in Christ, if we rely for our hope of Justification on our own obedience to the Law, then all our sins rise up against us; we constitute ourselves transgressors; we revive all the rigour and all the curses of the written Law against us for disobedience. (See iii. 10.)

(2) Because the Law itself bore witness, in its Scriptures and Sacrifices, to the universal sinfulness of man, both Jew and Gentile (see Rom. iii. 9—31), and to the universal need of a Redeemer, and to the universal provision for Justification by means of the blood of Christ;

(3) Because also the Law, in its own Scriptures and Sacrifices, bore witness to its own manuductory and transitory character, and to its own future fulfilment in the Gospel.

Therefore now that the fabric of the Gospel has been built up by Christ, any one who, in professed zeal for the Law, would impose the Law as obligatory on the Gentiles, would, in fact, pull down the Gospel in order to build up the Law again on its ruins, and would be rejecting the testimony of the Law itself to the Gospel; he would be violating the Law itself, he would be building himself up into a transgressor of the Law. See Theodoret here, who says, "The Apostle wisely retorts the objection of his opponents. According to them, he who did not maintain the Law transgressed it, but he shows them that now (after the Gospel) it was transgression of the Law to maintain the Law." And so Chrysostom, "The Judaizers wished to prove that he who kept not the Law was a transgressor of the Law; but the Apostle shows that he who imposes the Law is not only a transgressor of the Gospel, but of the Law itself, and that he sins against God in endeavouring to reinstate that which has been abolished by Him."

See also the following verse.

19. ἐγὼ γὰρ διὰ νόμου] For I, through the Law, died to the Law, that I might live to God, and, in saying this of myself, I am speaking of thee, Peter, and of the Apostles generally, and of all true children of the Law who have been brought by and through the Law unto Christ, Who is the end of the Law (Rom. x. 4). I died to the Law even through the operation of the Law, which taught me that the Law was designed by God to prepare me for a new birth in Christ. Therefore by going back to the Law I should be doing violence to the Law; I should be returning to a state of death, from that state of Life in Christ to which I have been brought by the Law. Cp. Rom. vii. 4, Ye became dead to the Law by the body of Christ. "Per ipsam Legem veterem ipsi Legi mortuus sum quia ipsa se cessaturam prædixit." (Primasius.)

The Law has led me to Christ; I obey the Law in coming to him. (Theodoret.) The Law was my pædagogus in leading me by the hand, and bringing me, a child, to Christ, in order that I might become a man in Him (see below, iii. 24). But (adds Augustine), "Hoc agitur per pædagogum, ut non sit necessarius pædagogus; sicut per ubera nutritur infans, ut jam non uberibus indigeat, et per navem invehitur ad patriam, ut jam navi non opus sit."

Thus I am brought by the Law to the Gospel, so as no longer to need the Law; and if I remain in the Law I frustrate the Law's own work, which was to bring me to the Gospel.

— νόμῳ ἀπέθανον] I died to the Law. We must be careful not to pervert this and other like speeches of St. Paul into pleas for Antinomianism.

The Law is to be considered both as a Rule and as a Covenant. Christ has freed us from the rigour and curse of the Law, considered as a Covenant, but he has not freed us from obedience to the Law considered as a Rule. The Law, as a covenant, was rigorous, and under that rigour we are not, now that we are in Christ; but the Law, as a Rule, is equitable, and under that equity we are still.

See Bp. Sanderson, iii. p. 295, and cp. below on Rom. vii. 4.

— ἵνα Θεῷ ζήσω] I died to the Law that I should live to God.

A further reply to those who had alleged that by setting aside the Law the preaching of the Gospel became an encouragement to sin. No. I died to the Law that I might live to God: not live to myself and to the world, but live to God and Christ, Who died for my sins, and Who therefore laid me under the strongest constraint to abhor sin, for which He died, lest by sinning I should crucify Him afresh. And therefore he adds as follows :—

20. Χριστῷ συνεσταύρωμαι] with Christ crucified I have been crucified also (cp. below, vi. 14). I have been crucified to Sin, which crucified Him; and in His Burial and Resurrection represented in my Baptism, I was buried, and I rose again from the death of sin. Yea, even Christ rose in me, and liveth in me, and quickens me, who have been born into the body of Christ, in order that I may live the life of Christ. See Chrys. here, and Theodoret, who quotes Col. iii. 5. Rom. vi. 6, and Augustine in Ps. cxviii. and Serm. 25.

ζῶ ἐν σαρκὶ, ἐν πίστει ζῶ τῇ τοῦ Υἱοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ, τοῦ ἀγαπήσαντός με καὶ παραδόντος ἑαυτὸν ὑπὲρ ἐμοῦ. 21 n Οὐκ ἀθετῶ τὴν χάριν τοῦ Θεοῦ· εἰ γὰρ διὰ νόμου δικαιοσύνη, ἄρα Χριστὸς δωρεὰν ἀπέθανεν.

n Heb. 7. 11.

So far is Christ from being a minister of sin (v. 17), that He has crucified in me my sinful affections and lusts (see v. 24). He has abolished sin in me, and in all who, being baptized into His body, live as healthful and sound members of the same. Cum Christo confixus sum cruci. Whoever mortifies his members upon the earth, and is conformed to the death of Christ, he is crucified with Jesus, and has the trophy of his own death affixed to the tree on which his Lord died. (Jerome.)

Cp. Rom. vi. 1—23, the best commentary on this passage, and showing how the sketch drawn by the great Apostle in this Epistle to the Galatians was afterwards filled up by the same hand in that to the Romans.

— ἀγαπήσαντός με] who loved me, i. e. who loves each man individually, and all universally. Chrysostom, who quotes John iii. 16. Rom. viii. 32. Observe the aorist. Christ then especially loved me, when He died for me.

21. Οὐκ ἀθετῶ] A further reply, and something more than a reply, to his opponents; having disposed of their arguments against himself, he now turns the controversy back on them:

I do not frustrate, cancel the grace of God in Christ (as shown in His dear Son, Who loved us and gave Himself for us) as you do, if you rebuild the Law; for if Justification is to be sought through the Law, then (ἄρα) Christ, Who died for our sins, died without cause—died for nought,—"gratis, sine causâ." (Augustine.) Cp. below, v. 4.

The Death of Christ was superfluous, if the Law is sufficient for Justification. (Theodoret.)

REVIEW OF THE SECOND CHAPTER OF THE EPISTLE TO THE GALATIANS.

The important circumstances mentioned by St. Paul in this chapter seem to require a special review.

I. St. Paul is relating the incidents of his own life after his Conversion. He states that he came to Antioch, the principal city of Syria, in which the disciples were first called Christians (Acts xi. 26).

On the occasion to which he is referring, St. Paul met St. Peter. St. Peter had been warned by a Vision and a Voice from Heaven, not to regard any man as unclean (Acts xi. 9): and he had also taken part in the Council of Jerusalem, in which it was decided that no other burden should be laid upon the Gentile converts, than that they should abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication; and that they were not subject to those ordinances of the Levitical Law, which made distinctions between meats, and prohibited the use of some as unclean (Acts xv. 29).

St. Peter, having been thus instructed, came down to Antioch, where he communicated, in the first instance, without scruple, with the Gentile converts. He partook with them of the same meats, at the same tables: and thus gave practical proof of his persuasion, that the kingdom of God standeth not in meats and drinks (Heb. ix. 10); that the Levitical Law was only the shadow of the good things to come (Heb. x. 1); that the substance is Christ (Col. ii. 17); that God is no respecter of persons (Acts x. 34); that in Christ Jesus there is neither Greek nor Jew, Circumcision nor Uncircumcision, Barbarian, Scythian, bond, nor free; but Christ is all and in all (Col. iii. 11).

But St. Peter was not exempt from human infirmities. Certain Jewish Christians came down from Jerusalem to Antioch who were zealous for the Levitical Law, and did not as yet perceive that its office was that of a schoolmaster, to bring men to Christ (Gal. iii. 24); and who, not recognizing this its manuductory and provisional character, were desirous of making it perpetual, and of bringing the Gentiles under its yoke.

Accordingly, they remonstrated with St. Peter for eating with the Gentiles; and their expostulations had too much effect upon him. They induced him to contravene the mandates of the heavenly Vision, and to disobey the edicts of the Council of Jerusalem. He withdrew himself from the Gentiles, fearing them of the Circumcision (Gal. ii. 12), and even became a champion of their principles, and endeavoured to win proselytes to their party. As St. Paul expresses it, the other Jews dissembled with him, insomuch that Barnabas also was carried away by their dissimulation.

But happily for St. Peter, and for St. Barnabas, and for the Gentiles, and for the Jews, and for the Church at large, there was another Apostle at Antioch, and that Apostle was St. Paul.

If any one had a right to be zealous for the Levitical Law, it was he, who was a Hebrew of the Hebrews, brought up at Jerusalem, at the feet of Gamaliel, of the straitest sect, a Pharisee (Phil. iii. 5. 2 Cor. xi. 22. Acts xxii. 3; xxiii. 6; xxvi. 5). The whole bias of his early life had been on the side of the Law. He therefore could not be charged with any prejudice against it. But he had been led by the Holy Spirit to understand its true character. He knew that it was of Divine origin, and that its Divine origin was apparent in its providential arrangements and prospective adaptations and preparatory adjustments to another future dispensation,—to which it was introductory, in which it was to be fulfilled, and by which (as far as its ceremonial ordinances were concerned) it was to be superseded,—the Gospel of Christ.

He knew therefore, that now when the substance had been revealed in the Gospel, of which the Law was the shadow, those persons who would perpetuate the Law, and make it of universal obligation, did not understand the true nature either of the Law or of the Gospel, but were resisting the will of the One Divine Author of both.

St. Paul therefore did not take counsel with flesh and blood (Gal. i. 16). Peter was his friend, Barnabas was his friend, but, still more, Truth was his friend. Christ had said, "He that loveth father or mother more than Me, is not worthy of Me." And, "If any man come unto Me, and hateth not brethren and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be My disciple" (Matt. x. 37. Luke xiv. 26, 27. 33).

St. Paul had been ordained to the Apostleship at Antioch. (See Acts xiii. 1—3.) He could not be unmindful of the solemn trust then committed to him. Filled with the grace of the Holy Ghost then given him, and strong in the cause of God, he did not waver. Though he was deserted by his friend and companion, who had been ordained with him, and though he whom he resisted was one who had received a special blessing from Christ, and though he himself was almost alone, he stood up boldly and publicly in the great city of Antioch, the centre of Gentile Christianity, in the defence of Truth. The false brethren (he says) attempted to bring us into bondage. But to them we gave place by subjection, no, not for an hour (Gal. ii. 4, 5). And he describes his own conduct in these words: I withstood Peter to the face because he was condemned. When I saw that they walked not uprightly, I said to Peter, before them all, Why compellest thou the Gentiles to live as do the Jews? (Gal. ii. 11. 14.)

Thus the courageous Apostle vindicated the cause of Christian Liberty, Christian Truth, and Christian Love. Thus the "Hebrew of the Hebrews," the former Pharisee, stood forth as the advocate of the Gentiles, and rescued them from the bondage which the Jews would have imposed on them.

Thus also he delivered his brother Apostle St. Peter from the sin of making the observance of the ritual Law to be essential to the reception of the Gospel, and of propagating a Judaistic Christianity; or, in other words, he rescued him from the guilt of enforcing unlawful terms of Church Communion.

II. We should have a very imperfect view of this History if we omitted to consider the following question;

How did St. Peter receive the rebuke of St. Paul?

Happily, we are enabled to ascertain this fact, by way of inference, as follows:—

(1) St. Peter, in his first Epistle, written to the Jewish Christians in Pontus, Galatia, and other regions of Asia, adopts the very words, which had been used by St. Paul, in this Epistle to the Gentile Christians of Galatia (see below, v. 13), on that self-same question which had been the occasion of altercation between himself and St. Paul. See below on 1 Pet. ii. 16. Thus St. Peter publicly declared his gratitude to St. Paul for his remonstrance, and his perfect agreement with him. See below, Introduction to the First Epistle of St. Peter, p. 41.

(2) At the close of his second Epistle, written shortly before his death (2 Pet. i. 14), St. Peter speaks of St. Paul; he there calls him his beloved brother, and refers to his Epistles. Even as our beloved brother Paul also, according to the wisdom given unto him, hath written unto you (2 Pet. iii. 15). St. Peter proceeds to speak of those Epistles as Scripture, that is to say, St. Peter declares that St. Paul's Epistles were inspired by the Holy Ghost; and therefore he acknowledges that whatever is affirmed in them is true.

We may observe also that the Epistle of St. Peter, where these words occur, was addressed to Jewish Christians of Pontus and Galatia (see 1 Pet. i. 1 compared with 2 Pet. iii. 1); that is, he was writing to persons of the same class and country as are addressed by St. Paul in his Epistle to the Galatians, to use St. Paul's own words, "to the Churches of Galatia" (Gal. i. 1, 2).

Now, in St. Paul's Epistle to the Galatians, it is asserted that St. Peter was condemned (κατεγνωσμένος, ii. 11) in withdrawing himself from the Gentile converts at Antioch. Hence it follows that St. Peter erred. And St. Peter, in referring to this Epistle as Scripture, i. e. as the word of God, frankly acknowledges himself to have erred. And it reflects no small honour on St. Peter's character that he has referred his readers to the Epistles of his beloved brother Paul, and has lauded the wisdom of him who censured him openly, and in whose Epistles the occasion of this censure, and the error which called it forth, are described without reserve.

III. This history is also fraught with instruction, in the striking proof it affords of the truth of Christianity.

One of the earliest antagonists of Christianity, Porphyry, who was brought up in the school of Origen, but afterwards apostatized to Heathenism, pointed with contumelious scorn to this passage in the Epistle to the Galatians, as exhibiting two leading Apostles publicly contending with each other. "How could Peter and Paul," he exclaimed, "be Ambassadors of God and Heralds of Peace, since they could not refrain, in the sight of Jews and Gentiles, from passionate altercation[1]?"

If the Gospel of Christ had been a cunningly-devised fable, then a public contest between its two main champions would have greatly damaged it. But from that day it proceeded on its course more gloriously. The great principle of the saving efficacy of Christ's death, apart from the deeds of the Levitical Law, was now established for ever by the intrepid eloquence of St. Paul.

Christianity was thus displayed to Jew and Gentile as the mother of moral virtues. It was the spirit of holy courage given by the Divine Comforter which emboldened St. Paul to rebuke St. Peter in the presence of the Jews. And it was the same Author and Giver of all spiritual gifts Who endued St. Peter with patience to hear, with charity not to resent, and with wisdom to profit by the rebuke of St. Paul.

How generous and lovely does his character appear when he speaks of St. Paul as his beloved brother, and bears witness to his wisdom, and refers to the Epistles of St. Paul, in which his own failing is recorded. Here was a magnanimous use of correction, and a noble recovery from error.

IV. This history also displays the true origin, nature, and use of the Ceremonial Law.

It was a question of great importance and difficulty, How that Law was to be treated by the Apostles?

If the Apostles, who were Jews by birth, had on their reception of the Gospel, suddenly snapped asunder all connexion with the Levitical ritual, if they had at once renounced all the ordinances of the Mosaic Law, they would have appeared to treat that Law as no better than a Heathen system. Thus they would have seemed to place Christ in opposition to Moses, instead of displaying Moses in his true character, as the divinely-appointed Forerunner of Christ. The evils of such a course have been well pointed out by Augustine, Ep. lxxxii., who says, "Cùm venisset Fides, quæ prius illis observationibus (Legis Mosaicæ) prænuntiata, post mortem et resurrectionem Domini revelata est, amiserant tanquam vitam officii sui. Verumtamen, sicut defuncta corpora, necessariorum officiis deducenda erant quodammodo ad sepulturam, nec simulatè, sed religiosè; non autem deserenda continuò, vel inimicorum obtrectationibus tanquam canum morsibus projicienda. Proinde nunc, quisquis Christianorum, quamvis sit ex Judæis, similiter ea celebrare voluerit, tanquam sopitos cineres eruens, non erit pius deductor vel bajulus corporis, sed impius sepulturæ violator."

Augustine has thus pointed out the way to the true view of the Legal Ceremonies in their different stages—

1. Before the Gospel, as viva sed non vivifica.

2. After the Gospel, but before the destruction of the Temple, as moribunda, sed non mortifera.

3. After the destruction of the Temple and diffusion of the Gospel, as mortua et mortifera.

But if the Apostles had treated the Levitical ceremonies as deadly, they would have armed the Gentiles with hatred against Judaism, and would have riveted the Jews in their prejudices against Christianity. The Apostles would then have been like Marcionites and Manichæans, instead of being preachers of the Same Everlasting Word Who spake first from Mount Sinai in the Law, and afterwards from Mount Sion in the Gospel.

Here then were dangers on the one side;

There were no less perils on the other;

If, after the consummation of the Law in the Death, Resurrection, and Ascension of Christ, the Apostles had continued constantly and uniformly to observe the Rites of the Levitical Dispensation, and had enjoined them as necessary to be observed by the Gentile converts, they would have laid a heavy burden upon them, and have led those converts to imagine that there was a saving virtue in those Rites; they would have induced them to place confidence in them, and would have impaired the efficacy of the Cross of Christ.

St. Paul was enabled by God to steer, wisely and charitably, a middle course between these two extremes. He gave public practical testimony to the Jews that he did not condemn the Ceremonial Law. He circumcised Timothy, whose mother was a Jewess (Acts xvi. 1). He performed the vow of a Nazarite at Cenchreæ (Acts xviii. 18). He purified himself according to the Law at Jerusalem (Acts xxi. 24; xxiv. 18).

By complying thus far with the ordinances of the Ritual Law he showed his countrymen that he concurred with them in regarding it as of Divine origin.

But he had something else to teach them. They were now to learn that though the Ritual Law was of Divine origin, it was not of perpetual obligation; and that though it was perfect (as every thing from God is) in its tendencies, it was imperfect in itself; and that it had now found its proper end in that to which it tended, and which is perfect in itself. Those Levitical tendencies were now evolving themselves, like swelling germs of spring, into the spiritual fruits of the Gospel; and they were to be treated tenderly, not to be rudely shattered as unripe buds by a boisterous gale, but to be nurtured by the soft and vernal breezes of Christian love, till they should set and ripen in vigorous maturity on the sacred tree of the Church, now about to expand itself in full majesty and beauty.

But St. Paul took good care that no one should mistake the foliage and flowers of the Law for the ripe fruit of the Gospel. He did not censure St. Peter for observing Jewish ceremonies in his own person, but he blamed him for imposing those ceremonies, as terms of communion, on others. He rebuked St. Peter for separating himself from the Gentile converts, who did not observe those ceremonies. For this cause he withstood him to the face; and not only by words, but by deeds he asserted the truth. He did not compel Titus, a Greek, to be circumcised (Gal. ii. 3). He ate and drank with the Gentiles, who made no distinction between meats. He arraigned those who regarded circumcision as necessary. He charged them with vitiating the Gospel. If ye be circumcised, he said, that is, if ye be circumcised in the belief that Circumcision is necessary and efficacious to salvation, then Christ shall profit you nothing (Gal. v. 2). If ye rely on the ritual ceremonies of the Law, then ye deprive the sacrifice of Christ of its due honour; ye virtually deny that His sacrifice is alone meritorious and satisfactory to God, and is a plenary propitiation for the Sins of the whole world. Ye rob yourselves, therefore, of pardon and grace; for if Righteousness come by the Law, then Christ died in vain (Gal. ii. 21).

Thus we may recognize in this history a clear exhibition of the true nature of the Law as preparatory to the Gospel, and of the Gospel as the completion of the Law; and the Cross of Christ as the only cause of our Justification with God.

V. St. Paul's example on this occasion is instructive in another view. He did not at once renounce the Jewish ceremonies. He even on some occasions complied with them. His maxims were, Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ (Gal. vi. 2).

Though I am free from all men (he says), yet made I myself servant unto all, that I might gain the more. Unto the Jews I became as a Jew, that I might gain the Jews; to them that are under the Law, as under the Law, that I might gain them that are under the Law: to them that are without the Law, as without the Law (being not without law to God, but under the Law to Christ), that I might gain them that are without Law. To the weak became I as weak, that I might gain the weak. I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some (1 Cor. ix. 19—22).

[1] S. Augustine, ii. pp. 254. 257. 297, ed. Bened. Paris, 1838.

Thus by complying, under certain circumstances, with the Levitical ceremonies, which had then become matters of indifference, and might be practised as such, while the Temple was yet standing [2], and while the true nature of the Gospel was not yet fully proclaimed, St. Paul set a noble example of Christian condescension, Christian prudence, and Christian love.

But having done this, he would not proceed further. He would not go on with St. Peter to enforce those Levitical ceremonies as terms of communion. When St. Peter withdrew himself from the Gentile converts, St. Paul withdrew himself from St. Peter. He deserted St. Peter when St. Peter deserted the truth. He withstood him to the face because he was condemned. He rebuked him for not walking uprightly; and St. Peter had the wisdom and magnanimity to profit by the rebuke of St. Paul.

St. Paul then here teaches to be tolerant in indifferent things,—that is, things which are neither commanded nor forbidden by lawful authority,—and to condescend with Christian gentleness to the infirmities of the weak, but never to surrender a fundamental principle of Truth.

He teaches that nothing is more cruel, than that self-styled charity which patronizes popular fallacies, and surrenders unpopular truths; that nothing is more intolerant, than that self-styled toleration which caresses falsehood; and that nothing is more illiberal, than that self-vaunting liberality which deals out errors as a boon; and that he only is truly charitable, who speaks the truth in love; and that he is really liberal, who rescues the erring from his error, and saves a soul from death (James v. 20).

VI. This history is also important in another respect.

In the chapter before us it is stated by St. Paul, that St. Peter in withdrawing himself from the Gentiles at Antioch walked not uprightly, and that he was condemned.

This Epistle of St. Paul is part of Canonical Scripture; that is, it was inspired by the Holy Ghost. Whatever therefore is asserted in it is true. It is undeniable, therefore, that St. Peter erred.

This error, be it observed, was in a matter of vital importance; it concerned the essence of Christianity.

It is clear therefore that St. Peter was not infallible.

In making this avowal, we are not to imagine that the Epistles of St. Peter, which are contained in the Scriptures of the New Testament, are in any way blemished with the least flaw of error.

Those Epistles were dictated through St. Peter by the Holy Ghost; and they have been, and are, received as divinely-inspired Scripture by the consentient voice of the Universal Church of Christ, which is His Body, and in which His Spirit dwells. A fallible mortal was their penman, but the Spirit Who guided him was infallible.

The fallibility of the workmen who were employed in writing the Scriptures, and the perfection of the work itself, constitute a proof that the workmen were instruments, and that the work itself is not of man, but of God.

St. Peter then was not infallible, and the Holy Spirit who is infallible, speaking by the mouth of St. Paul in Canonical Scripture, affirms that St. Peter erred in a matter of faith and practice.

The particular form of St. Peter's error was this. In contravention of the true nature of the Gospel, and in opposition to a declaration which he himself had received in a vision from heaven, and in contradiction to the decree of the Council at Jerusalem, a decree which he himself had aided in framing, he withdrew himself from the Gentile converts, and required from them an observance of the ritual Law.

He thus, as far as he was able, imposed upon them unwarrantable terms of Church communion.

It was on this account that his brother Apostle, St. Paul, resisted him openly, and gave him a public rebuke.

The Bishop of Rome professes to be the Successor of St. Peter. In virtue of this alleged succession, he affirms himself to be infallible. On the same ground he claims to be the Supreme Governor of the Church; and he asserts that he is irresponsible, that he can give laws to the world, and may not be resisted by any [3].

Let us grant, for argument's sake, that the Bishop of Rome is successor of St. Peter;

But St. Peter himself was not infallible. The Holy Ghost in Scripture says St. Peter was condemned, that he walked not uprightly.

Next, St. Peter was not irresponsible. He was openly resisted, he was publicly rebuked by St. Paul.

St. Peter did not give laws to the Church. He did not claim dominion over her faith (2 Cor. i. 24). He did not act as a Lord over God's heritage (1 Pet. v. 3). No. Like a wise and charitable man, he listened to the reproof of his brother Apostle; he thanked him for his rebuke, and, almost with his dying breath, he referred to the Epistles of St. Paul, in which that rebuke is contained, and he acknowledged them to be Holy Scripture inspired by the Holy Ghost (2 Pet. iii. 15, 16).

The mode in which St. Peter erred at Antioch was, as has been said above, by imposing unjustifiable terms of communion. Notwithstanding the warning and instruction given by this example of St. Peter, the Bishops of Rome have erred in the same manner, though in a far greater degree. They have invented articles of doctrine contrary to the Word of God; they have framed and promulgated one very recently [4],—that of the sinlessness, original and actual, of the Blessed Virgin,—and they require all men to accept those articles at their bidding, on pain of everlasting damnation.

St. Peter was betrayed into an error, but he speedily recovered from it; and he blessed St. Paul, who rebuked and retrieved him.

But the so-called successors of St. Peter have persisted in imposing unscriptural terms of communion for more than a thousand years.

Nor is this all. Instead of confessing their errors, and instead of thanking and blessing those who have charitably pointed out those errors, and have laboured to bring them back to the Truth and to Christ, they have driven them from them, they have loaded them with contumelies and curses [5], and they have denounced them as heretics, and schismatics, and rebels; and they have declared to them and to us, that if we do not renounce our faith, and embrace their dogmas, we are no better than heathens, and cannot be saved [6].

Thus then the present chapter of this Epistle to the Galatian Churches, is fraught with Divine instruction to all in every age of the Church. St. Paul has solemnly declared with a reiterated warning, in this Epistle, that if any man, or even an angel from heaven, preach any thing besides the Gospel, which he preached and the Church received from him, he is to be accounted as accursed (Gal. i. 8, 9). They who imitate the Apostle in his zeal, his prudence, his wisdom, his courage, his charity, will share with him in his victory, through the power of Christ which strengthened him, and will strengthen them; and they, through Christ's merits, will be joined together hereafter to the company of Apostles, and Evangelists, and Saints, and Martyrs, in which St. Paul and St. Peter are, and to which all will come who tread in their steps. Cp. note below on 2 Pet. iii. 11—16.

---

[2] See below, the quotation from Hooker in note on Heb. xiii. 10.

[3] The following are statements of their own claims, made by Bishops of Rome in their own words:—

Pope Gregory VII.—"Solus Romanus Pontifex jure dicitur Universalis. Unicum est nomen in mundo, Papæ videlicet. Sententia illius a nemine debet retractari; et ipse omnium solus retractare potest. Romana Ecclesia nunquam erravit, et nunquam errare poterit." These and other like assertions of Pope Gregory will be found in the Annals of Cardinal Baronius ad A.D. 1076, vol. xi. p. 634, ed. Colon. 1609.

Pope Innocent III., A.D. 1198 (Decret. Greg. ix. lib. iii. tit. viii. c. 4).—"Secundum plenitudinem potestatis, de jure possumus contra jus dispensare."

Pope Boniface VIII., A.D. 1294.—"Subesse Romano Pontifici omni humanæ creaturæ pronunciamus omnino esse de necessitate salutis." Extrav. Com. i. tit. viii. c. 1, p. 1159, ed. Lips. 1839.

Pope Leo X. says, in his Bull, "Exurge, Domine," A.D. 1520 (in Bullario Romano v. p. 491, ed. Rom. 1743), "Docuissemus eum luce clariùs, Romanos Pontifices in suis canonibus et constitutionibus quas mordere nititur, nunquam errâsse, quia juxta Prophetam nec in Galaad resina nec medicus decst" (Jer. viii. 22). And he declares it heretical to say that the Pope cannot constitute articles of faith—"statuere articulos fidei." Ibid. p. 489.

[4] Dec. 8, 1854.

[5] e. g. in the Bull, "In Cœna Domini," iterated by more than twenty different Popes. It will be found in the Roman Bullarium, iv. p. 118, and Streitwolf, Libri Symbol. Eccl. Cath. ii. p. 355.

[6] In the Creed of Pope Pius IV., imposed on all Roman Ecclesiastics, with an assertion that none can be saved who do not believe it.

a ch. 5. 7.

III. [1] [a] Ὦ ἀνόητοι Γαλάται, τίς ὑμᾶς ἐβάσκανεν, οἷς κατ' ὀφθαλμοὺς Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς προεγράφη ἐν ὑμῖν ἐσταυρωμένος;

b Acts 2. 38. & 8. 15. & 15 8. Eph. 1. 13.

[2] [b] Τοῦτο μόνον θέλω μαθεῖν ἀφ' ὑμῶν, ἐξ ἔργων νόμου τὸ Πνεῦμα ἐλάβετε, ἢ ἐξ ἀκοῆς πίστεως;

Ch. III. 1. Ὦ ἀνοήτοι Γαλάται] O foolish Galatians,—foolish as children. See next note, and v. 3.

This bold language of reproof, in an Epistle sent to be circulated and read in the Churches of Galatia, affords a striking proof of St. Paul's consciousness of his own Divine mission and authority. And the preservation, and general reception, and universal dissemination of this Epistle, as divinely-inspired Scripture, is a strong testimony of, and tantamount to, a public recognition of that authority on the part of the primitive Churches, and of the Universal Church of Christ.

This testimony will appear still stronger, when it is borne in mind that this reproof, though addressed to the Galatians, yet was also no less a rebuke to the large and powerful contemporary party of Judaizers who had beguiled the Galatians and others into this foolishness. Cp. note below on Tit. i. 12, Κρῆτες ἀεὶ ψεῦσται.

— ἐβάσκανεν] bewitched; 'fascinavit.' Βάσκανος is, properly, one who is supposed to bewitch by the influence of an evil eye, particularly of envy and jealousy. Cp. Schol. Theocr. v. 13; vi. 39; and Virgil, Eclog. iii. 103, "Nescio quis teneros oculus mihi fascinat agnos." Ælian, H. A. i. 53, βασκάνων ὀφθαλμοὺς φυλάττεσθαι.

Hence the word βασκαίνω was applied to describe the operations of Envy, which seem to be designated by 'the evil eye' in Matt. vi. 23; xx. 15. Cp. Horat. (1 Ep. xiv. 37),

> "Non isthic obliquo oculo mea commoda quisquam > Limat;"

The Ancient Glossaries interpret βασκαίνειν by φθονεῖν. And this meaning is doubtless intended here.

For it must be remembered, that one of the strongest motives of the Judaizers to enforce the Levitical Law on the Galatians and other Gentile Christians, was Envy.

They were jealous of the communication of the privileges of the Gospel to the Gentiles, without previous conformity to the Levitical Law. Our Lord had prophetically described their feelings and practice, in the character of the Elder Brother in the Parable of the Prodigal Son (see on Luke xv. 28), and the Apostle of the Gentiles often adverts to it. Hence Chrys. interprets τίς ἐβάσκανε here, by τίς ἐφθόνησε; 'who envied you?' And S. Jerome, citing the passage of Virgil above quoted, observes, that the evil eye of Envy was supposed to be particularly injurious to the young; and therefore the word was applicable to the 'teneros agnos' of the Apostle, viz. to the Galatians as newly converted—his lambs in Christ.

The comment of Primasius deserves mention here, as preparing the way for the true exposition. "Quis vos fascinavit? Quis vobis invidit? In Græco significantiùs ponitur βάσκανος, fascinator Dicitur fascinus propriè infantibus nocere, et ætati parvulæ." He then quotes Virgil, as above: "Quomodo ergo tenera ætas noceri dicitur fascino, sic etiam Galatæ in Christi fide nuper nutriti. Quis vos fascinavit, quibus tantum manifesta est passio Christi, me prædicante, ut Eum ante oculos vestros pendere putaretis?"

After ἐβάσκανε Elz. adds, τῇ ἀληθείᾳ μὴ πείθεσθαι, which words are not found in the best MSS. and Editions. S. Jerome testifies that they were in some copies in his days, but not in Origen's MSS., and that he therefore did not insert them in his Latin Version. They are, doubtless, an explanatory gloss, derived from v. 7.

— οἷς κατ' ὀφθαλμοὺς Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς προεγράφη ἐν ὑμῖν ἐσταυρωμένος;] before whose eyes Jesus Christ was plainly written in you,—crucified. προεγράφη may mean, was written beforetime (Rom. xv. 4. Eph. iii. 3), but it seems rather to signify, was openly written, as it were, in large letters, so that "he may run that readeth it," as the prophet Habakkuk says, whose words St. Paul seems to have had in his mind when he wrote this Epistle on the doctrine of Justification by Faith. See below on vi. 11.

Remark the order of the words, which may be an aid in clearing up the sense of this difficult passage.

I. It is to be explained by reference to the words which precede it,—

Who bewitched you with his envious eye,—you, who had Jesus Christ plainly and openly written before your own eyes, in you; and who therefore ought to have been proof against his bewitching influence?

This being borne in mind, we may next observe,

II. That the sentence seems to contain a double allusion;

(1) To a Heathen practice.

(2) To a Jewish one.

(1) To a Heathen practice. In order to guard children and even grown-up persons, against the influence of the evil eye, certain objects were attached to their persons, as amulets (called περίαπτα, περιάμματα), being tied round them. See Ernesti on Xenophon, Mem. Socr. ii. 6. 3, and the Commentators on Virgil, Eclog. vii. 25—27, "Baccare frontem cingite," &c.

This practice is still retained in Greece and Italy: and it is worthy of remark, that certain scrolls of portions of the Scriptures are sometimes used for this purpose, which are visibly forewritten (προγεγραμμένα) to guard the wearer against the evil eye. Cp. Bingham (Antiq. xvi. 5), who says that "many Christians made use of charms and amulets, which they called periammata and phylacteria, pendants and preservatives. These were made of ribands with a text of Scripture." See Conc. Laodic. Can. 36. And Chrys. (Hom. 73 in Matth.) speaks of women who made phylacteries of the Gospels to hang about their necks. And see Basil, in Ps. 45. Epiphan. Hær. 15, de Pharisæis.

(2) To a Jewish practice.

The Jews were commanded to have certain precepts of Scripture, as it were, written before their eyes. See Deut. vi. 8: "Thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes." See also Exod. xiii. 16, and Deut. xi. 18.

Interpreting this precept literally, the more rigid Jews, such as the Judaizers of Galatia, wore, accordingly, certain texts of Scripture upon the forehead, between the eyes. These texts were Exod. xiii. 1. 10, 11—16. Deut. v. 4—9; xi. 13—21. See Jahn, Archæol. Bibl. § 319. And they derived their Hebrew name from this circumstance. These parchment scrolls of Scripture, thus bound between the eyes, were called φυλακτήρια, preservatives, amulets. See on Matt. xxiii. 5.

These considerations may enable us to explain St. Paul's meaning as follows;

O foolish Galatians,—foolish as children,—who was it that bewitched you with his evil eye of jealousy? who envied you the liberty of Christ, and desired to spoil you of it? who beguiled you, my little children (Gal. iv. 19), whom I was rearing up as a father, into men in Christ? who beguiled you back into Judaism, with its rites and ceremonies and external observances? Your false teachers who so deal with you, would have written and bound before your eyes the scrolls of the Law; they would have laid upon you its outward fringes and phylacteries, and thus would have entangled you in bondage. Who envied you the liberty of the Gospel, which I, your Apostle, preached to you? who bewitched you, before whose eyes was written and bound by me, as your true scriptural scroll, your frontlet of Faith, your Spiritual Phylactery, Christ Crucified; and whom I had thus guarded, as I thought, against all the envious fascination of your spiritual enemies?

Let us now consider the remainder of the sentence;

— ἐν ὑμῖν ἐσταυρωμένος] ἐν ὑμῖν is omitted by some MSS., and rejected by Lachm.; but is rightly retained by Tisch., Meyer, Ellicott, Alford.

It is to be explained from the considerations just stated;

The Phylactery, which was written and bound by me before your eyes, was not an outward one, on your forehead,—like that of your Judaizing deceivers,—but it was an internal one, ἐν ὑμῖν, in your hearts,—a frontlet between the inner eyes of your Faith; it was Jesus Christ within you,—and that crucified. He was openly written forth in you, when He was preached to you by me, and you publicly professed your faith in Him at your baptism, and you were made members of Him, and sons of God by adoption in Him. On the words ἐν ὑμῖν, in animis vestris, cp. Winer, § 22, p. 134.

The words ἐν ὑμῖν, in you, are to be joined with προεγράφη, and derive additional light from what he had just said, ζῇ ἐν ἐμοὶ Χριστὸς, Christ liveth in me (ii. 20); ἐσταυρωμένος, crucified, is reserved as the emphatic word for the last place in the sentence. Cp. 1 Cor. ii. 2, and on Acts vii. 43, p. 35.

2. τὸ Πνεῦμα ἐλάβετε] Received ye the Spirit from the works of the Law, or from the hearing of Faith?

Did the spiritual gifts then bestowed upon you in your baptism, in the speaking of tongues, proceed from any words of the Levitical Law, and not from the hearing of Faith? the hearing, not only of the outward ear, but from the inner hearing, the spiritual hearkening, of Faith? Cp. Theodoret and Chrys.

Ἀκοὴ is not passive here; it does not mean the thing heard,

3 Οὕτως ἀνόητοί ἐστε, ἐναρξάμενοι πνεύματι νῦν σαρκὶ ἐπιτελεῖσθε;
4 [c] Τοσαῦτα ἐπάθετε εἰκῇ, εἴ γε καὶ εἰκῇ;
5 [c] Ὁ οὖν ἐπιχορηγῶν ὑμῖν τὸ Πνεῦμα, [d] καὶ ἐνεργῶν δυνάμεις ἐν ὑμῖν, ἐξ ἔργων νόμου ἢ ἐξ ἀκοῆς πίστεως; 6 [e] καθὼς Ἀβραὰμ ἐπίστευσε τῷ Θεῷ, καὶ ἐλογίσθη αὐτῷ εἰς δικαιοσύνην.
7 [f] Γινώσκετε ἄρα ὅτι οἱ ἐκ πίστεως οὗτοί εἰσιν υἱοὶ Ἀβραάμ. 8 [g] Προϊδοῦσα δὲ ἡ γραφὴ ὅτι ἐκ πίστεως δικαιοῖ τὰ ἔθνη ὁ Θεὸς, προευηγγελίσατο τῷ Ἀβραὰμ ὅτι ἐνευλογηθήσονται ἐν σοὶ πάντα τὰ ἔθνη. 9 [c] Ὥστε οἱ ἐκ πίστεως εὐλογοῦνται σὺν τῷ πιστῷ Ἀβραάμ.
10 [h] Ὅσοι γὰρ ἐξ ἔργων νόμου εἰσὶν, ὑπὸ κατάραν εἰσί· γέγραπται γὰρ ὅτι Ἐπικατάρατος πᾶς ὃς οὐκ ἐμμένει ἐν πᾶσι τοῖς γεγραμμένοις ἐν τῷ c Heb. 6. 4—6. & 10. 32—39. 2 Pet. 2. 20—22. 2 John 8.

d Acts 14. 3, 9. 10. & 19. 11, 12. Rom. 15. 19. 1 Cor. 1. 4, 5.
e Gen. 15. 6. Rom. 4. 3. James 2. 23.
f Rom. 4. 11, 12, 16.
g Gen. 12. 3. & 18. 18. & 22. 18. & 26. 4. Acts 3. 25. h Deut. 27. 26. Jer. 11. 3. Ezek. 18. 4. Rom. 3. 19, 20. & 6. 23.

---

the κήρυγμα, or Gospel; but it is the spiritual faculty and function of hearing; and ἀκοὴ πίστεως is the hearing ear of Faith, which listens attentively to the command of Christ, "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear." So ἀκοὴ, ear, Matt. xiii. 14. Mark vii. 35. Luke vii. 1. Acts xvii. 20; xxviii. 26. 1 Cor. xii. 17. Heb. v. 11. Cp. note on 1 Thess. ii. 13.

3. Οὕτως ἀνόητοί ἐστε] So foolish are ye? These sentences are like so many aculei, darted rapidly forth in a volley from the heart of the Apostle, in the vehement emotion of his indignation and love. Each of them contains a separate argument, and affords matter for special consideration. They are therefore printed separately.

4. Τοσαῦτα ἐπάθετε εἰκῇ] suffered ye so many things in vain? Ye suffered afflictions for the Gospel, and not for the Law. If now ye go back to the Law, these sufferings will have been in vain. But if ye go forward in the Gospel they will not be in vain, but will lead you to glory. Will you allow any to take away from you your heavenly crown? Theodoret, Jerome, Chrys.

— εἴ γε καὶ εἰκῇ] if really even in vain. If, which I cannot imagine possible, ye even allow your sufferings to have been wasted on nothing; which will not be the case if you return, as I trust you will, to a better mind. Chrys., Bp. Fell.

5. Ὁ ἐπιχορηγῶν ὑμῖν τὸ Πνεῦμα κ.τ.λ.] A return to the argument in v. 2. He who ministereth to you the Holy Spirit, and worketh wonders within you (viz. Almighty God), doeth He it as a fruit growing out of the Law, or of the hearing of Faith?

On your conversion to Christ, God gave you extraordinary gifts (χαρίσματα), tongues, &c., and He is ever bestowing upon you ordinary graces, love, joy, the fruits of the Holy Ghost, and thus He has sealed your profession of Faith. But He never operates in this marvellous manner on any who rest their hopes of salvation on the Levitical Dispensation, apart from Christ.

Thus, by His own working within you, He testified to you that Justification is to be sought and obtained by Faith in Christ, and not by the deeds of the Law.

6. καθὼς Ἀβραάμ] as Abraham. An answer to a supposed objection, viz.

How can it be said that Justification is never given by God except as a fruit of Faith in Christ?

Was not the Patriarch Abraham justified?

Yes, but it was by Faith, as the Law itself testifies. (Gen. xv. 6.) There is but one way of Justification to any, viz. by Faith in Christ; and all who are justified are justified in this way. See Acts iv. 12. Heb. xiii. 7, 8.

Abraham believed in Christ to come; you believe in Christ having come. The seasons of the Church vary, but not her Faith. See S. Aug. Tract. in Joann. xlv. iii. p. 2131, "Ante adventum Domini Nostri Jesu Christi, quo humilis venit in carne, præcesserunt justi, sic in Eum credentes venturum, quomodo nos credimus in Eum qui venit. Tempora variata sunt, non Fides. Diversis quidem temporibus, sed per unum fidei ostium videmus ingressos." See also S. Aug. ii. pp. 415. 420, and S. Irenæus, iv. 5. 4, who says, "We, having the same faith as Abraham had, and bearing the cross, as Isaac did the wood, follow Abraham." For mankind had already been taught in Abraham to follow the Word of God—Christ. Abraham in his Faith followed the command of the Word of God. He with a willing mind gave up his only-begotten son as a sacrifice to God, that God might be pleased to give up His own Only-begotten as a sacrifice for our redemption. Thus Abraham, who was a Prophet, and who saw in the Spirit the Day of Christ (John viii. 56) and the dispensation of His Passion, by Whom (viz. Christ) he also, and all they who believe as he believed, would begin to be saved, greatly rejoiced.

The Faith of the holy men of the Ancient Church before the coming of Christ, is clearly expressed by the father of the Baptist in Luke i. 68—79, and in the song of Simeon, Luke ii. 25—32. See also below on Heb. xi. 19, and the Essay in Bp. Barlow's Remains, pp. 582—592, "Patres sub antiquo fœdere per Christi mortem salutem sunt consecuti," and the XXXIX Articles, Art. vii., "Both in the Old and New Testament everlasting life is offered to mankind by Christ; wherefore they are not to be heard which feign that the Old Fathers did look only for transitory promises." In the words of Hooker (i. 2. 4—8), "The invisible Church consisteth only of true Israelites, true sons of Abraham, true servants and saints of God."

— ἐλογίσθη—δικαιοσύνην] it was accounted to him for righteousness. See on Rom. iv. 1—11, where the argument is expanded.

7. Γινώσκετε] know ye. 'Cognoscite,' Iren. iv. 21, but he has 'cognoscitis,' v. 32. The former, Know ye, is preferable; and so the Vulgate, and Syriac and English Versions, and Ellicott.

— οἱ ἐκ πίστεως] they who spring (ἐκ) out of Faith, as their root, as opposed to those who are ἐκ νόμου. See on Rom. iii. 26; iv. 14. 16; v. 1; x. 6, and below, vv. 8, 9. 12. 22. 24, and who springing out of it, depend on it (a common sense of ἐκ, see Winer, p. 329), and bring forth fruit from it.

— οὗτοι—υἱοὶ Ἀβραάμ] they and not the literal Israel—are true sons of Abraham. See vi. 16.

8. τὰ ἔθνη] the Gentiles, emphatic: an answer to another objection tacitly supposed; that though Abraham was justified by faith, yet, as he was the Father of the Jews, the Heathen had no right to expect to be justified as he was.

This objection is likewise answered by the Apostle from the Law itself (Gen. xii. 3; xviii. 18; xxii. 18; xxvi. 4), proclaiming that, not the Jews only, but all Nations, would be blessed in him. And therefore all, of whatever nation, who believe as he did, are justified with the believing Abraham (σὺν τῷ πιστῷ Ἀβραάμ). See Irenæus, iv. 21.

10. Ὅσοι γάρ] For as many as are of (i. e. spring out of, as their root) the works of the Law, are under a curse. A new argument.

Not only does justification (i. e. acquittal with God) not come from the Law, but they who spring out of the Law as their root, and grow upon it, as the stem of their inner life, are under a Curse; for the Law requires perfect Obedience, and denounces malediction on those who do not continue in Obedience to all the commandments of the Law (Deut. xxvii. 26. Cp. Surenhus. p. 569), a condition which no one has ever fulfilled, as the Book of the Law itself declares, which pronounces all men to be sinners. See the quotations from the Old Testament cited by the Apostle in Rom. iii. 10—19. And therefore the Old Testament (to which the Judaizers themselves appeal) points not to the Law as affording any hope of Justification to man, but expressly declares that the just shall live by Faith, or, as the Hebrew literally signifies, the just shall live by his faith (Habak. ii. 4. See on Rom. i. 17); whence it is evident that ἐκ πίστεως is to be construed with ζήσεται and not with δίκαιος.

— ὅτι] Not in Elz., but in the best MSS. and Editions.

— Ἐπικατάρατος] The Law itself declares that "Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the Book of the Law to do them."

It may be objected—

Was not the Law therefore an evil, inasmuch as no one could obey it in all things, and inasmuch as it declares all to be cursed who do not obey it?

No. The Law was holy, just, and good (Rom. vii. 12). It did not make men to be accursed, but it showed all men to be sinners (see on Rom. v. 20; vii. 7—13), and therefore under a curse, and liable to death, the wages of sin.

It proved, therefore, that they must look elsewhere for help, and not to themselves. The Law corrected their pride and selfβιβλίῳ τοῦ νόμου, τοῦ ποιῆσαι αὐτά. 11 [i] Ὅτι δὲ ἐν νόμῳ οὐδεὶς δικαιοῦται παρὰ τῷ Θεῷ δῆλον, ὅτι ὁ δίκαιος ἐκ πίστεως ζήσεται. 12 Ὁ δὲ νόμος οὐκ ἔστιν ἐκ πίστεως, ἀλλ' ὁ ποιήσας αὐτὰ ζήσεται ἐν αὐτοῖς. 13 [j] Χριστὸς ἡμᾶς ἐξηγόρασεν ἐκ τῆς κατάρας τοῦ νόμου γενόμενος ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν κατάρα, ὅτι γέγραπται, Ἐπικατάρατος πᾶς ὁ κρεμάμενος ἐπὶ ξύλου, i Hab. 2. 4. Rom. 1. 17. & 3. 20. ch. 2. 16. Heb. 10. 38.

j Deut. 21. 23. Rom. 8. 3. 2 Cor. 5. 21.

sufficiency, and demonstrated their need of a Redeemer whose sacrifice for sin was pre-announced in the Scriptures of the Old Testament, and was prefigured in all the Ritual of the Law; and thus the Law itself prepared the way for the Gospel.

And all the holy men who lived before the Law (such as Abraham), and under the Law (as David), were candidates for a blessing, and were not subject to a curse, because they did look for justification to Him Who was promised even to Adam after the Fall (Gen. iii. 15). See above on v. 6, below on v. 21.

12. ὁ ποιήσας] he who performed the Law shall live in it. See Levit. xviii. 5, where the original signifies, "which things if a man do, he shall live by them." Whence the Jewish Rabbis argued that the Law offered life. True: but it did not give the grace to do those things which were requisite to attain life; and it pronounced that he who did not do them was under a curse (Deut. xxvii. 26. Cp. Surenhus. p. 572). Ἄνθρωπος is added in Elz. after αὐτὰ, and is in LXX, but not in the original Hebrew, nor in A, B, C, D*, F, G here, and is rejected by Griesbach, Scholz, Lach., Tisch., Meyer, Ellicott, Alf.

13. ἐξηγόρασεν] redeemed us from or out of. The aorist is important to be observed, as intimating that the redemption was effected by one act, i. e. by the shedding of His blood paid as the price (τιμὴ, λύτρον) of our ransom, when He became a curse for us by dying on the cross. See 1 Pet. i. 18, 19. 2 Pet. ii. 1. Rev. v. 9. Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. x. p. 680, note.

— ἡμᾶς] us. Limited to the Jews by some Expositors;

But this seems to be a defective view of the sentence.

It is true that the Moral Law, as promulgated by Moses to the Jews, obliged them in a special manner, even by that peculiar promulgation. But that promulgation was in fact only a republication of the original principles of Morals, and primitive Natural Law, which oblige, and always have obliged, all Mankind. See on Rom. v. 13.

And as Disobedience to God's Law subjects him who disobeys to a curse, and as no man has perfectly fulfilled the moral Law, given before the Sinaitic dispensation, and coeval with man's very existence, therefore all Mankind are by nature, as well as by the express declaration of the Levitical Law, under God's malediction.

Besides, in the ages which intervened between the publication of the Law and the Gospel, the Moral Law of the Decalogue being up to that time the only written Revelation of Moral Law, that Moral Law obliged all to whom it was made known, and all were bound to accept it, with all its commands to obey, and all its denunciations for disobedience.

Consequently St. Paul here, in quoting Deut. xxvii. 26, recites the words thus, "Cursed is every one who continueth not in all that is written in this Book of the Law to do them."

Therefore Christ by His death redeemed all, and not the Jews only, from the curse of the Law.

Therefore, in saying that Christ redeemed us from the curse of the Law, St. Paul means that he redeemed the Gentile Galatians as well as himself; that he redeemed all mankind, even Abraham himself and the Patriarchs, who lived before the Law was given.

This is the language of Christian Antiquity; see Justin Martyr (Dialog. c. Tryph. capp. 94—96), who says that "all mankind was liable to the curse according to the Law of Moses, which says, 'Cursed is whosoever,' &c. (Deut. xxvii. 26.)" The Father of all willed that His own Anointed should take on Himself the Curse due to all Mankind, well knowing that He would raise Him from the Dead.

Why, therefore, do ye Jews speak as if He were cursed, and not rather weep for yourselves who crucified Him?

S. Jerome also says here, "Patriarchas de maledicto legis redemit Christus;" and Theodoret, "When all were under the curse of the Law, Christ redeemed us from it." And so Primasius, "Redemit nos Christus de maledicto legis, quod peccantibus constitutum est."

This is also the language of our own best Divines;

Christ hath redeemed us from that general curse which lay upon all men for the breach of any part of the Law, by taking upon Himself that particular curse which underwent a certain punishment of the Law (Deut. xxi. 23). Bp. Pearson on the Creed, p. 39.

To which may be added the following clear statement:—

The Law of Moses, as a Rule, only showeth us what is good and evil, what we are to do, and not to do. He hath showed thee, O man, what is good, and what doth the Lord require of thee (Micah vi. 8), without any condition annexed either of reward if we observe it, or of punishment if we transgress it;

But the Law, as a Covenant, exacteth punctual and personal performance of every thing that is contained therein, with a condition annexed of God's acceptance, and of blessing if we perform it to the full, but of His wrath and curse upon us if we fail in any thing;

Now, by reason of transgression, we having all broken that Covenant, the Law hath its work upon us, and involveth us all in the curse (Gal. iii. 10); so as by the covenant of the Law no flesh living can be justified (ibid. 11);

Then cometh in Christ, Who, subjecting Himself for our sakes to the Covenant of the Law, first fulfilleth it in His own person, but in our behalf as our Surety, and then disannulleth it, and instead thereof establisheth a better covenant for us (Heb. viii. 6), even the covenant of Grace. So that now as many as believe are free from the Covenant of the Law, and from the curse of the Law, and set under a covenant of Grace, and under promises of Grace.

There is a translation of the Covenant, but what is all this to the Rule? That still is where it was, even as the nature of good and evil is still the same as it was. And the Law, considered as a Rule, can no more be abolished or changed, than can the nature of good and evil be abolished or changed.

It is our singular comfort then, and the happiest fruit of our Christian Liberty, that we are freed by Christ, and, through faith in Him, from the Covenant and Curse of the Law; but we must know that it is our duty, notwithstanding the Liberty that we have in Christ, to frame our lives and conversations according to the Rule of the Law, which if we shall neglect under the pretence of Christian Liberty, we must answer for both, both for neglecting our duty, and for abusing our Liberty. Bp. Sanderson (iii. p. 295). See also below on 2 Cor. v. 21.

— γενόμενος ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν κατάρα] having become a curse for us.

Two Curses pronounced in the Law are here referred to by St. Paul.

1. "Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things written in this book to do them." Deut. xxvii. 26, LXX.

2. "Cursed is he that hangeth on a tree." Deut. xxi. 23, LXX. Cp. Surenhus. p. 572.

All mankind was liable to the former curse.

How was it to be removed?

(1) He who was to remove it must not himself be liable to it. He who was to be a substitute for the guilty must himself be innocent. He who was to suffer in the stead of the disobedient must himself be obedient in all things.

(2) He who was to be the substitute for all must have the common nature of all. He must not take the person of one individual man (such as Abraham, Moses, Elias), but He must take the nature of all, and sum up all mankind in himself.

(3) He who was to do more than counterbalance the weight of the sins of all must have infinite merits of His own, in order that the Scale of Divine Justice may preponderate in their favour. And nothing that is not divine is infinite. In order, therefore, that He may be able to suffer for sin, he must be human; and in order that He may be able to take away the sins of all, and to satisfy God's Justice for them, He must be Divine.

(4) In order that He may remove the curse pronounced in the Law of God for disobedience, He must undergo that punishment which is specially declared in that Law to be the curse of God.

(5) That punishment is "hanging on a tree." That is specially called in the Law "the Curse of God." Deut. xxi. 23.

By undergoing this curse for us, Christ, He Who is God from everlasting, and Who became Emmanuel, God with us, God in our flesh, uniting together the two Natures—the Divine and the Human—in His one Person,—Christ Jesus, redeemed us from the Curse of the Law. As Chrys. says here, οὕτως τὴν κατάραν δεξάμενος τῆς κατάρας ἐξήλλαξεν. Thus, having accepted the Curse, He liberated us from it.

This passage of St. Paul must be read with reverential caution, lest we fall into the Marcionite heresy (revived in part by the Socinians), which imputes vindictive injustice and cruelty to the Divine Author of the Law, in laying a curse on the innocent and holy Jesus dying for us on the Cross, and thus endeavours to bring the Old Testament into antagonism with the New. See S. Jerome here, who says, "Subrepit in hoc loco Marcion de potestate Creatoris, quem sanguinarium infamat, et vindicem, asserens nos redemptos esse per Christum, qui alterius boni Dei filius sit." Cp. Tertullian, c. Marcion. v. 3.

14 ἵνα εἰς τὰ ἔθνη ἡ εὐλογία τοῦ Ἀβραὰμ γένηται ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ, ἵνα τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν τοῦ Πνεύματος λάβωμεν διὰ τῆς πίστεως.

In order to avoid this deadly heresy we must bear in mind what it was in Christ that was the object of God's malediction.

He was made or became a curse for us; But how?

Not in His Divine Nature: for in that He did not suffer. Not in His spotless Holiness and perfect obedience; for in that He was blessed, and most blessed in His death. And therefore at His glorious Transfiguration, Moses and Elias, the Representatives of the Law and the Prophets, spake specially of His Death, and the heavenly Voice came then from God the Father, "This is my beloved Son, in Whom I am well pleased." Luke ix. 35. Matt. xvii. 5.

What then was it in which He became a curse? In that mortal nature in which He died; that is, in our nature. And whence was its mortality? From Sin. It was the penalty of the sin of Adam. The malediction of that penalty it was (says Augustine in his exposition here) which our Lord took on Himself when He bare our sins in His own body on the tree (1 Pet. ii. 24), "Non ergo contumelia in Dominum putanda est, quod maledictus est appellatus qui pendet in ligno." For (as Augustine well adds) no one would be startled by this saying, When Christ died, Death was cursed; and what was it but the Death of Christ which hung on the Tree, in order that by dying He might conquer Death? That was cursed which was also conquered.

See also Primasius here, who well says, "Reum non facit pœna sed causa. Christus, cui non erat causa crucis et maledicti, pro nobis maledictum subiit, quia omnes rei eramus mortis, et debiti ligno, quia maledicti, quippe qui non permansimus in omnibus quæ scripta sunt in libro Legis. Utrumque enim Lex eadem scripserat Maledictum."

So again, if we were to say that, when He was crucified, Sin was cursed, who would be staggered? And what was it that hung on the tree? The Sin of our Old Man, the First Adam. Whence the Apostle did not hesitate to say that God made Him to be sin for us, who knew no sin (2 Cor. v. 21), in order that He might condemn sin (Rom. viii. 3), and so our old man be crucified with Christ, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that we might not serve sin (Rom. vi. 6).

It was therefore Mankind, summed up in Christ, that was under the Curse when He hung upon the Tree, in order that He might redeem Mankind from the Curse.

The Word became Flesh (John i. 14), and by becoming flesh without sin, took on Him the curse due to sinful flesh. He became a curse, in order that in Him, the promised seed of Abraham, all nations might be for ever blessed. See v. 14.

The reasoning of the Apostle in the Gospel had already been visibly represented by Moses under the Law.

Moses was commanded by God to make the serpent of brass, and to set it up on a pole, in order that it might heal those who were bitten by the Serpents of fire. Num. xxi. 9.

The Serpent was the cause of Man's fall and death. Fitly then was the Serpent reared on the pole as an emblem of Death. In that type of the brazen serpent Christ hung on the Cross. Who (says Augustine) would be perplexed by the words, Cursed is the Serpent that hangeth on the Tree? And yet the Serpent on the Tree prefigured Christ on the Cross; as Christ Himself has taught us (John iii. 14), as Moses lifted up the Serpent in the wilderness, so must also the Son of Man be lifted up, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

God forbid that we should imagine that when Moses lifted up the serpent on the pole as a figure of Christ he did this in dishonour to Christ. No; he recognized in Christ on the Cross mankind saved, as he saw in the serpent on the cross mankind healed.

Therefore let us not wonder that by a Curse He overcame the Curse, Who conquered Death by Death, and Sin by Sin, and the Serpent by the Serpent. He triumphed over all these by the Cross.

And may we not say that the Second Adam at His Death made the Curse to recoil on the Serpent who was cursed at the fall of the first Adam (Gen. iii. 14)? For then the Devil was caught in his own snare. Then Satan was crucified. He was put to open shame. He hung nailed to the Cross. Christ spoiled and triumphed over him in it (Col. ii. 15, see note). Then the Serpent of fire was lifted up on the pole; then, in the fullest sense of the words, was fulfilled the Scripture, Cursed is he that hangeth on a Tree.

One of the main practical inferences from these truths may be stated as follows:—How much reason have we to abominate our sins, which were the principal causes of the Crucifixion of Christ! He was delivered for our offences (Rom. iv. 25. 2 Cor. v. 21). They were indeed the traitors which, by the hands of Judas, delivered Him up. He that knew no sin was made sin for us; that is, was accursed, was condemned, was executed as a sinner for us. It was therefore we who by our sins did impeach Him; the Jewish priests were but our advocates; we by them did adjudge and sentence Him. Pilate (against his will and conscience) was but our spokesman; we by him did inflict that punishment on Him, the Roman executioners were but our agents therein. He became a curse for us (Gal. iii. 13); that is, all the mockery, derision, and contumely He endured did proceed from us. The Jewish people were but proxies acting our parts; our sins were they which cried out Crucifige (crucify Him, crucify Him), with clamours more loud, and more effectual, than did all the Jewish rabble. He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities (Isa. liii. 5). It was they, which by the hands of the fierce soldiers, and of the rude populacy, as by senseless engines, did buffet and scourge Him; they, by the nails and thorns, did pierce His flesh and rend His sacred body: upon them, therefore, it is most just and fit that we should turn our hatred, that we should discharge our indignation. Dr. Barrow (Sermon on the Crucifixion, vol. iv. p. 593).

— Ἐπικατάρατος—ξύλου] Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree. From Deut. xxi. 23. See the foregoing note.

(1) Observe the wonderful providence of God, so ordering the circumstances of Christ's Death, that though the power of life and death had been then taken away by the Romans from the Jews, and therefore it was not probable, humanly speaking, that He should suffer any punishment at their hand according to their Law, yet it was so disposed that He suffered precisely that death which was declared in that Law to have in it the particular characteristic to which the Curse belonged, namely, that of hanging on a tree. And the Jews themselves to this day fulfil the prophecy written in their Law concerning Christ, to which St. Paul here refers, even when they think to cast on Christ the greatest ignominy, as they do when they call Christ by the very name used by Moses תָּלוּי (talui) Deut. xxi. 23, and call Christians עובדי התלוי "the servants of the hanged one," as Trypho the Jew objects to Justin Martyr (Dialog. 32), "Your Christ was so disgraced as to be subjected to the lowest curse (τῇ ἐσχάτῃ κατάρᾳ) of the Law of God, for He was crucified." See the answers of Justin Martyr, ibid. c. 94—96, and Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. iv. p. 392, and note.

(2) The Christian rejoices in this reproach as a proof of the truth of the Gospel, and as an assurance of the blessings derived from the death of Christ. "Ille pependit in ligno ut peccatum quod nos commiseramus in ligno scientiæ boni et mali, ligno deleret appensus." The second Adam hung on the tree in Calvary, in order that by hanging on the tree He might abolish the sin committed by us in the first Adam, when he ate of the fruit of the tree of good and evil in Paradise. He was made a curse for us ('factus, non natus') that the blessings promised to Abraham might be poured forth by Him on the nations, and the promise of the Holy Ghost might be fulfilled in us, through faith in Him like the faith of Abraham.

(3) Hence an ancient Father argues the necessity of Christ's Death, and the propriety of the manner of it, i. e. by crucifixion, "For if He came to bear the curse to which we were subject, how could He have become a curse for us unless He had died by that death which is cursed, and so declared to be in Scripture, i. e. by crucifixion? For it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree."

Since also the Lord's death is the ransom for all, and by that death the wall of partition is broken down, and the Gentiles are called to God, how could He so well have called us unless He was crucified? For there on the Cross He extends His hands to all, and calls all; as He Himself says, "When I shall be lifted up, I will draw all men to Myself." John xii. 32. See on Eph. iii. 18. Athanasius (de Incarn. § 24, p. 55).

(4) Another remarkable conformity of the prophetical reference in Deut. xxi. 23 to Christ, may be here noticed.

It is there declared that the person executed by hanging on a tree should not remain all night on the tree.

But, humanly speaking, it was very unlikely that Christ, being crucified, should be taken down at all from the tree, and much more on the day of the crucifixion.

For crucifixion was a Roman punishment, and part of its k Rom. 6 19. 1 Cor. 15. 32. Heb. 9. 17.

15 k Ἀδελφοί, κατὰ ἄνθρωπον λέγω, ὅμως ἀνθρώπου κεκυρωμένην διαθήκην οὐδεὶς ἀθετεῖ ἢ ἐπιδιατάσσεται.

l Gen. 12. 7. & 15. 5. & 17. 7. & 22. 18. ver. 8. m Gen. 15. 13, 16. Exod. 12. 40, 41. Acts 7. 6. n Rom. 4. 13, 14. & 8. 17. Heb. 6. 12—15. o Deut. 5. 5. John 1. 17. Acts 7. 38, 53. Rom. 4. 15. & 5. 20. & 7. 8.

16 l Τῷ δὲ Ἀβραὰμ ἐρρήθησαν αἱ ἐπαγγελίαι, καὶ τῷ σπέρματι αὐτοῦ· οὐ λέγει καὶ τοῖς σπέρμασιν, ὡς ἐπὶ πολλῶν, ἀλλ' ὡς ἐφ' ἑνός, καὶ τῷ σπέρματί σου, ὅς ἐστι Χριστός.

17 m Τοῦτο δὲ λέγω, διαθήκην προκεκυρωμένην ὑπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ εἰς Χριστὸν ὁ μετὰ τετρακόσια καὶ τριάκοντα ἔτη γεγονὼς νόμος οὐκ ἀκυροῖ, εἰς τὸ καταργῆσαι τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν. 18 n Εἰ γὰρ ἐκ νόμου ἡ κληρονομία, οὐκέτι ἐξ ἐπαγγελίας· τῷ δὲ Ἀβραὰμ δι' ἐπαγγελίας κεχάρισται ὁ Θεός.

19 o Τί οὖν ὁ νόμος; Τῶν παραβάσεων χάριν προσετέθη, ἄχρις οὗ ἔλθῃ τὸ enormity and ignominy was that the bodies of those who were crucified remained to be devoured by fowls of the air on the cross. Hence "Non pasces in cruce corvos." Horat. 1 Ep. xvi. 48. Cp. Juvenal xiv. 77.

So it would have been with Christ crucified, if Divine Providence had not intervened to order all things in the Crucifixion, so that all the Prophecies concerning it might be fulfilled, even by the hands of those who crucified Christ.

If He had been crucified on some ordinary day, and not on the day before that great High Day, the Sabbath of the Passover, the Jews would have been as eager that He should remain on the Cross, for the contumelious derision of Him and His Gospel, and for the terror of His disciples and friends, and for their own triumph, as they were earnest with Pilate that He should not remain, but be taken down from the Cross. (John xix. 31.)

Thus, in crucifying Him, and taking Him down from the cross, they proved unconsciously that He whom they crucified is the Messiah, and that it was He Who, bearing the curse of the Law, has taken away that curse from all who believe and obey Him.

15. κατὰ ἄνθρωπον] according to man, i. e. by a familiar illustration taken from human affairs, and not from divine things. Chrys., Theodoret. Cp. Rom. vi. 19.

— ὅμως] even. See 1 Cor. xiv. 7. Winer, p. 489.

— ἀθετεῖ ἢ ἐπιδιατάσσεται] cancels, or adds new codicils to his will, or new conditions to his covenant. Διαθήκη may mean either. See on Matt. xxvi. 28. So the Rabbis acknowledged. See the authorities in Wetstein. Cp. Heb. ix. 16.

Ἐπιδιατάσσεται is rendered by superordinat by Tertullian (c. Marcion. v. 4), where he expounds this passage, and refutes the Antinomian objections of Marcion, who tampered with it.

16. ἐρρήθησαν] were spoken, vivâ voce, by God Himself to Abraham. Here is a proof of the superiority of the Promises over the Law, which was written, and delivered mediately, through Angels and Moses, to the People.

— οὐ λέγει καὶ τοῖς σπέρμασιν, ὡς ἐπὶ πολλῶν, κ.τ.λ.] It has been alleged by some modern Expositors that this is a mere play upon words, and a Rabbinical sophism.

Let us examine the Apostle's argument. God made two promises to Abraham and to his seed.

(1) I will give the land (the promised land, the type of the heavenly inheritance) to thee and to thy seed for ever. Gen. xiii. 15. See also Gen. xii. 7; xv. 18; xvii. 8.

(2) I will establish My covenant between Me and thee, and thy seed after thee, in their generations, for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee (Gen. xvii. 7. 9), and I will be their God.

Now what the Apostle observes here as remarkable is, that Almighty God, in promising these blessings to Abraham's posterity, always uses a singular noun, seed, זֶרַע (zera), semen, and never a plural.

His argument therefore is, that the promise is made to the progeny of Abraham, not scattered in a plurality of families, but collected into one. The promise is made to the seed, not as dispersed and disseminated (which it is the characteristic of seed to be, and which the very name of seed implies), but as united, as one.

If it be objected (as it is by some) that it was not according to the genius of the Hebrew language to use זֶרַע (semen, seed) in the plural number, then it may be replied,

(1) That this is not strictly true. See 1 Sam. viii. 15, where the plural occurs. And the word is sometimes used in the singular for an individual person, Gen. iii. 15, where it is spoken of Christ; and cp. Surenhus. p. 574.

(2) Almighty God in delivering this promise to the Father of the faithful, was not tied to the use of any particular word, and therefore not of the word seed, but might have said to Abraham that He would give the promised blessing to him and to all his descendants.

But He always uses the word seed. He chose to use a word which is almost always singular; and the Apostle thence argues that He marked the oneness of the seed, and infers that there is a Divine meaning in this use.

What, then, is that meaning?

He declares it to be this, that they to whom the promise is made in Abraham were to have a certain unity, although they were to be as numerous as the stars of heaven and as the sand of the sea-shore (Gen. xv. 5; xxii. 17; xxxii. 12), that they could not be counted for multitude, and yet be only as one.

This seemed a paradox, yet this has been punctually fulfilled;

It has not been fulfilled in the literal Israel. The Jews are scattered abroad like seeds in an innumerable plurality in all parts of the world. The very name given in the Apostolic Age (see on John vii. 35, and on Acts ii. 9—11) to the scattered seeds of their Tribes, διασποραί, dispersions, was a national witness to that distracted plurality.

But the Promise was a Divine Promise, and it has therefore a fulfilment.

The fulfilment (says the Apostle) is in Christ. He gathers together in one, all the children of the faithful Abraham, wherever they are. The Holy Spirit Himself declared this, when He said, that the reason of Christ's death was, that He should "gather together into one the children of God that were scattered abroad" (ἵνα τὰ τέκνα τοῦ Θεοῦ τὰ διεσκορπισμένα συναγάγῃ εἰς ἕν. John xi. 52).

Has then Christ gathered together all in one? and if so, how?

He, the Second Adam, the Father of the regenerate race, has incorporated together in one, in His own mystical body, all of every kindred and language, who hold the "one Lord, one Faith, one Baptism." They are all one family—one seed—one new man in Him (Eph. iv. 5).

This is the great truth which the Apostle proceeds to declare in what follows (v. 26—29), "Ye are all children of God, through faith in Christ; for as many of you as were baptized into Christ have put on Christ; ye are all one man (εἷς) in Christ Jesus; and if ye are Christ's, ye are Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." Cp. Irenæus (v. 32. 2).

17. εἰς Χριστόν] in Christum, into Christ; so as to tend toward, and be consummated in, Christ as its End, Who, as Man, sums up all Abraham's seed in Himself. On the accusative cp. 2 Cor. ii. 8. The words εἰς Χριστὸν are not in A, B, C, or Vulg., Coptic, Æth., Armen. Versions; but they are found in D, E, F, G, I, K, and the great majority of Cursives, and in Christo in Syriac and Arabic Versions.

— ὁ μετὰ τετρακόσια καὶ τριάκοντα ἔτη γεγονὼς νόμος] the Law, which first appeared four hundred and thirty years afterwards, does not annul a covenant ratified before by God into Christ, so as to make void the promise.

The promise to which St. Paul here refers is that in Gen. xii. 1—3, thirty years before the birth of Isaac, and four hundred and thirty before the Law. As to the chronology, see on Gen. xii. 40. Observe γεγονὼς, marking the first origin of the Law.

19. τί οὖν ὁ νόμος;] what then is the Law? What is its purpose and use?

The Law had a supplementary, parenthetical, provisional, and manuductory character, and came in, as it were, accidentally. See v. 21, and on Rom. v. 20; viii. 3, 4, and on 1 Cor. xv. 56; and Augustine, Serm. 26. 125. 136. 156. 163, where he treats the question why the Law was given.

The purpose of the Law has been stated in clear language by the author of Paradise Lost, who puts into the mouth of Michael the following words in addressing Adam:—

σπέρμα ᾧ ἐπήγγελται, διαταγεὶς δι' ἀγγέλων ἐν χειρὶ μεσίτου. 20 Ὁ δὲ μεσίτης ἑνὸς οὐκ ἔστιν, ὁ δὲ Θεὸς εἷς ἔστιν.

"To whom thus Michael: Doubt not but that Sin
Will reign among them as of thee begot;
And therefore was Law given them, to evince
Their natural pravity, by stirring up
Sin against Law to fight; that, when they see Law can discover sin, but not remove
Save by those shadowy expiations weak
The blood of bulls and goats, they may conclude
Some blood more precious must be paid for Man;
Just for unjust; that in such Righteousness
To them by Faith imputed, they may find Justification towards God, and peace
Of conscience, which the Law by ceremonies
Cannot appease; nor Man the moral part Perform; and not performing, cannot live.
So Law appears imperfect; and but given
With purpose to resign them, in full time,
Up to a better covenant; disciplined
From shadowy types to truth; from flesh to spirit;
From imposition of strict Laws, to free
Acceptance of large grace; from servile fear
To filial; works of Law to works of Faith.
And therefore shall not Moses, though of God
Highly beloved, being but the minister
Of Law, His people into Canaan lead;
But Joshua, whom the Gentiles Jesus call,
His name and office bearing, Who shall quell
The Adversary-Serpent, and bring back
Through the world's wilderness long-wandered Man Safe to eternal Paradise of rest."

Milton (P. L. xii. 285).

— σπέρμα ᾧ ἐπήγγελται] the seed to which the promise has been made. Observe the perfect tense; showing that the promise made to Abraham still continues effectual in its operation.

In fact, as the Apostle here shows, the promise which was made to Abraham four thousand years ago is actually performed to every Christian in particular, on his baptismal incorporation into the Body of Christ.

— διαταγεὶς δι' ἀγγέλων] ordained through Angels: "disposita per Angelos." Irenæus, iii. 3. "Lex ordinata (sc. à Deo) per Angelos." Vulg. The Law was ordained (by God) through the mediate instrumentality of Angels, and was not delivered directly and immediately, as the Promise was to Abraham and to his seed represented by him; and as the Gospel is, which is spoken by the Lord Himself, Heb. ii. 3.

Thus even the form of its delivery marked the inferiority of the Law to the Promise, and to the Gospel.

The relative inferiority of the Law, on this account, to the Gospel, is noted in Heb. ii. 2: "If the Word (i. e. the Levitical Law) spoken through Angels (δι' ἀγγέλων, as here) was stedfast . . . how shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation, which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord?"

The Apostle applies here a like argument, in comparing the Law with the Promise.

On the intervention of Angels in the promulgation of the Law on Mount Sinai, see note above, Acts vii. 53. There seems to be a reference in Ps. lxviii. 17, to this presence of Angels: "The chariots of God are twenty thousand, even thousands of Angels, and the Lord is among them as in the holy place of Sinai."

— ἐν χειρὶ] בְּיַד (be-yadh). Cp. Exod. ix. 33. 1 Sam. xvi. 20. 1 Kings viii. 53. 2 Kings xvii. 20. Vorst., De Hebraism. p. 362, 3.

— μεσίτου] of a Mediator. Moses (Theodoret). As it is happily paraphrased by Milton, P. L. xii. 235:—

"The voice of God
To mortal ear is dreadful. They beseech
That Moses might report to them his will,
And terror cease. He grants what they besought, Instructed that to God is no access
Without Mediator, whose high office now
Moses in figure bears; to introduce
One greater, of Whose day he shall foretell,
And all the Prophets in their age the times
Of great Messiah sing."

20. Ὁ δὲ μεσίτης ἑνὸς οὐκ ἔστιν, ὁ δὲ Θεὸς εἷς ἔστιν] The variety and uncertainty of the interpretations of this memorable passage (which may be seen in Meyer, Kommentar, pp. 125—138, and in De Wette's Einleitung, p. 48), seem to have arisen from a want of due regard to the order of the Apostle's words.

The order of the words is always of primary importance in the New Testament,—"Ordo verborum mysterium est" (Jerome), —and particularly in so concise a sentence as this, where brevity has a tendency to produce obscurity. And it may fairly be presumed that the writer has arranged his words in such a manner as to give a clue to their sense.

St. Paul does not say ὁ μεσίτης οὐκ ἔστιν ἑνὸς, 'the Mediator is not (a Mediator) of one,' as he probably would have done, if he had meant to say (as he is generally supposed to mean) that a "Mediator is not a Mediator of one" person or party, but of more than one.

But he says ὁ δὲ μεσίτης ἑνὸς οὐκ ἔστιν,—that is, "but the Mediator of one is not," has no existence.

Nor does he say ὁ Θεὸς ἐστιν εἷς, God is one. But what he says is, ὁ Θεὸς εἷς ἔστιν,—that is, "God being one, is," or exists. St. Paul is not only predicating the Unity, but also the Eternal Self-Existence, of God.

The order of the sentence is accurately preserved in the Vulgate: "Mediator autem unius non est, Deus autem unus est."

There are therefore two striking contrasts in this one short sentence;

(1) A contrast between ὁ μεσίτης (Moses), and ὁ Θεός (God).

(2) A contrast between οὐκ ἔστιν, non est, does not exist, and ἔστιν, est, does exist. On this use of ἔστι, and οὐκ ἔστι, see 1 Cor. xv. 12, 13. 44. Heb. xi. 6.

The discrepancies of interpretation seem to have arisen from a want of due attention to the arrangement of these words, and to the contrasts represented by them;

Their true meaning may be paraphrased as follows: The Apostle is showing the superiority of the Evangelical Promise made to Abraham and to his seed, over the Levitical Law;

The Promise was more excellent than the Law by priority of time; and it could not be cancelled or impaired by the Law, which was afterwards added, not on account of any inherent and essential excellence in the Law itself, which came in accidentally and parenthetically, because of transgressions (v. 19).

The Law, he says, was written on Tables of Stone, and was delivered (διαταγεὶς) through the medium of Angels, and by the hand of Moses.

But the Promises to Abraham were spoken immediately (ἐρρήθησαν, v. 16) by the mouth of God Himself.

Hence the superior dignity of the Promise given to Abraham as compared with the Levitical Law, given through the ministry of Angels, and through a human mediator, Moses.

What he says then is this: The Mediator of one Being has no existence (οὐκ ἔστι). Even God Himself, Who is One, cannot constitute a person to be a Mediator without the addition of a third party. The office, therefore, of a Mediator is itself a dependent, relative, and accidental one.

The Mediatorial office even of Christ Himself will one day have an end. See on 1 Cor. xv. 24—28. But Christ, as coequal and coeternal with the Father, and as the Jehovah of the Old Testament, exists and reigns for ever. The Church speaks of Him as God, when she says, "His kingdom shall have no end."

Moses in his office of Mediator, had no independent existence. He required the presence and concurrence of two contracting parties to call him into existence, and into action, as a Mediator.

The function of Moses, the Mediator of the Levitical Law, was merely occasional, and it terminated with the occasion which gave it birth.

Such was the official character of him, from whose hand, and through whose intervention, the Levitical Law was received.

But very different from this is the nature of Him, Who, not mediately, but in His Own Person, gave the promise to Abraham, Ὁ Θεὸς εἷς ἔστιν, 'Deus Unus est.' God Who is One exists, He is independent of all persons, times, and places. He is the self-existing יְהוָה Jehovah ὁ ὤν, the "Being-One," as He Himself declared to Moses, when He sent him,—"I am that I am," "I am hath sent thee" (Exod. iii. 14; vi. 3. Cp. Rev. i. 4). He is the very essence of Unity and Eternity; and in his Unity and Eternity He is the Author of all Being.

In this Unity and Self-Existence He is distinguished by the Apostle from those gods whom the Galatians and other heathens had served. They (says St. Paul in the next chapter, iv. 8) not knowing God, served those gods who are not—τοῖς φύσει μὴ οὖσι θεοῖς—gods, many, and yet non-existent, but the "Lord our God is One God." There "is no God but One." And He it was, Who, in His Divine Majesty and Glory, without any intervention of a Mediator, gave the Promise, talking face to face with

21 [c] Ὁ οὖν νόμος κατὰ τῶν ἐπαγγελιῶν τοῦ Θεοῦ; Μὴ γένοιτο, εἰ γὰρ ἐδόθη
p Rom. 3. 9, 20—23. & 5. 12, 20. & 11. 32. νόμος ὁ δυνάμενος ζωοποιῆσαι, ὄντως ἂν ἐκ νόμου ἦν ἡ δικαιοσύνη. 22 [p] Ἀλλὰ συνέκλεισεν ἡ γραφὴ τὰ πάντα ὑπὸ ἁμαρτίαν, ἵνα ἡ ἐπαγγελία ἐκ πίστεως q Matt. 5. 17. Rom. 10 4. r John 1. 12. Rom. 8. 15. ch. 4. 5. Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ δοθῇ τοῖς πιστεύουσι. 23 Πρὸ τοῦ δὲ ἐλθεῖν τὴν πίστιν, ὑπὸ νόμον ἐφρουρούμεθα συγκεκλεισμένοι εἰς τὴν μέλλουσαν πίστιν ἀποκαλυφθῆναι.
24 [q] Ὥστε ὁ νόμος παιδαγωγὸς ἡμῶν γέγονεν εἰς Χριστόν, ἵνα ἐκ πίστεως s Rom. 6. 3. & 13. 14. δικαιωθῶμεν· 25 ἐλθούσης δὲ τῆς πίστεως, οὐκέτι ὑπὸ παιδαγωγὸν ἐσμέν.
t John 17. 21. Rom. 10. 12. 1 Cor. 12. 13 Eph. 2. 14, 15. Col. 3. 11. 26 [r] Πάντες γὰρ υἱοὶ Θεοῦ ἐστε διὰ τῆς πίστεως ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ· 27 [s] ὅσοι γὰρ εἰς Χριστὸν ἐβαπτίσθητε Χριστὸν ἐνεδύσασθε. 28 [t] Οὐκ ἔνι Ἰουδαῖος

Abraham (Gen. xvii. 3. 22), whom the Holy Ghost in Scripture calls "the friend of God." (2 Chron. xx. 7. Isa. xli. 8. James ii. 21—23.)

Hence, therefore, is evident the superior dignity of the Promise to the Law.

This argument was very relevant to the present question, and it could not be rebutted by the Apostle's adversaries in order to disparage the Gospel. For the Gospel was given by Him Who is "God manifest in the flesh." And it is a confirmation of the present interpretation, that the doctrine of the Godhead of Christ is used by St. Paul to prove the superiority of the Gospel, as well as of the Promise, to the Law. See Heb. ii. 2, 3; iii. 2, 3.

21. εἰ γὰρ ἐδόθη νόμος] for if there had been given a law that was able to give life, then truly righteousness would have come of the law. We must take care not to fall into the Marcionite and Manichæan perversions of this text (as if it involved a censure of the Law), or into those of modern Antinomianism.

On the question hence arising as to the Divine Benevolence, see Augustine in Ps. cxviii., Serm. 27, and contra Faustum Manichæum, xix. 7, where he vindicates the Law as having a salutary effect in humbling man's pride and presumption, and as showing to him by its holy precepts how far he had fallen below the divine standard of Right, and as proving to him his need of a Redeemer and Sanctifier. "Non enim Lex jubebat delictum, sed superbos sibi multum tribuentes, mandati sancti et justi et boni adjectio reos etiam prævaricationis effecerat, ut eo modo humiliati discerent ad Gratiam festinare per Fidem, et jam non essent Legi subditi per reatum, sed Legi sociati per justitiam."

And again he says, in his Treatise de Spiritu et Litera, § 34,

"The Law was first given, in order that Grace might be desired, and Grace was afterwards given, in order that the Law might be obeyed. For it was by no fault of its own that the Law was not obeyed, but by the fault of our corrupt flesh; and this disease of our corrupt flesh was first to be manifested by the Law, and then to be healed by Grace."

On this subject, see also above on v. 19; and below on 1 Cor. xv. 56. Rom. v. 20; vii. 12—25; viii. 3, 4.

22, 23. συνέκλεισεν—ἐφρουρούμεθα] the Scripture shut up all under sin . . . we were shut up in the Law as in a prison, till the Great Deliverer came, Who released us.

The Law was given ex accidenti; it was superinduced on account of mankind's transgressions (v. 19), and it proved man's guilt, but did not remove it.

It was, as the Apostle here shows, like a prison-house into which men were brought, and in which they were placed in ward, because they would not exercise rightly the gifts which God had bestowed on them, of Conscience, Reason, and Free-will, and had allowed the record of primeval Law almost to fade from their minds.

Therefore God bound them with the chains of the Law, under which they were to wait the revelation of the Promise in Christ. Jerome.

But we are not to imagine, that the Law was the author of sin, because it concluded all under sin. No; the Law was no more the Author of sin, than the Judge is the cause of crime because he imprisons the criminal. But it kept them in ward, till God, the Lord of all, declared a general Gaol-Delivery, and gave them free pardon in Christ. Jerome.

23. Πρὸ τοῦ δὲ ἐλθεῖν τὴν πίστιν] See below, v. 25.

24. παιδαγωγός] Another metaphor. He had compared mankind, while under the Law, to prisoners, and the Law to their prison, in which they were kept in ward, till they were liberated by Christ. He now compares them to children, and the Law to a pædagogus, generally a slave, who had under his charge his master's children (παῖδας) from six years of age till fourteen, and conducted them to the gymnasium or school, but was not qualified or allowed to teach them. See on 1 Cor. iv. 15.

So the Law had a preparatory and manuductory office, that of training God's people as children, and bringing them to school in the Gospel, which would qualify them to dwell in their Father's house, no longer as παῖδες, children, but as υἱοὶ, sons, in Christ.

On this preparatory office of the Law, see S. Hilary in Ps. xci., who says, "Quotiescunque aliquid ex Lege relegitur in opere præsentium mandatorum, speculum futurorum est contuendum."

25. ἐλθούσης δὲ τῆς πίστεως,] but when Faith came. The word ἡ πίστις, the Faith, appears to be used here in a large sense, as equivalent to the Christian Faith,—the Gospel,—as distinguished from the Law. Compare above, v. 23; below, vi. 10. Rom. xii. 6. Eph. iv. 5. Jude 3; and Professor Browne, on the XIth Article.

27. ὅσοι εἰς Χριστὸν ἐβαπτίσθητε] as many among you as were baptized into Christ, put on Christ (aorist) at your Baptism. Ye were then clothed in the righteousness of the Son of God, and were made His Members by the sanctification of Baptism, and were made therefore to be Sons of God by adoption. See Primasius here.

To be baptized into Christ (cp. Rom. vi. 3) is to be incorporated by Baptism into the One Body of Christ (1 Cor. xii. 13), and to become a member of the same; and by virtue of such incorporation into Christ, the Son of God, to become a Child of God by adoption, and a joint heir with Christ: and therefore every child of the Church of England is rightly taught in the Catechism, that by Baptism he was made a "member of Christ, a child of God, and an inheritor of the kingdom of heaven."

The Apostle says that all they who are baptized into Christ put on Christ; that is, when they were made members of Him, they were invested with His Righteousness. As the garment of a body clothes the members of the body, so the spotless robe of Him Who is "the Lord our Righteousness" (Jer. xxiii. 6), covers the members of Christ. At their baptism Justification by faith in Him was given them. God looks at them as no longer in the first Adam, but He sees them in Christ, and as clothed with Him.

Therefore St. Paul says to the Galatians, When ye were baptized into Christ, ye were then clothed with the robe of filial adoption; ye became sons of God by the profession of faith in Christ Jesus, and by virtue of your engrafting into the Body of the Son of God. See Gal. iv. 5, and Greg. Nazianz. de Baptismo, Homil. xl. pp. 696—717, and Augustine in Ps. c., who says, "We having put on Christ are all Abraham's seed in Him, and we are Christ's members; we are one man in Him."

Our Lord had suggested this language by His own words in the Parable of the Prodigal Son, where the Almighty Father receives back the Gentile World after its wanderings, and readmits it to Sonship, by commanding the Servants ἐξενέγκατε τὴν στολὴν τὴν πρώτην, καὶ ἐνδύσατε αὐτὸν, ὅτι ὁ υἱός μου νεκρὸς ἦν, καὶ ἀνέζησε, Luke xv. 22—24.

On the doctrine of the conveyance of Justification to Christians at their Baptism, and of their investiture in Christ's righteousness in that Sacrament, see note on 1 Cor. vi. 11.

This doctrine must be guarded against Antinomian misinterpretation.

At Baptism we were clothed in Christ. But it is of no avail for a man to have a white robe given him if he trails it in the dust, or drags it in the mire. The whiter the robe, the fouler will its stains appear. It is not enough to have put on Christ in baptism, he must wear Christ. He must walk in white (Rev. iii. 4). He that saith he abideth in Him, ought also himself to walk even as He walked (1 John ii. 6). And when that holy robe is sullied by sin, it must be washed with tears of Repentance and the blood of the Lamb. Rev. vii. 14.

Therefore the Church of England well says to those who are baptized in riper years, "As for you, who have now by Baptism put on Christ, it is your part and duty, being made the children of God, and of the light, by faith in Jesus Christ to walk answerably to your Christian calling, and as becometh the children of light."

An ancient writer, in a memorable passage, shows from St.

οὐδὲ Ἕλλην· οὐκ ἔνι δοῦλος οὐδὲ ἐλεύθερος· οὐκ ἔνι ἄρσεν καὶ θῆλυ· πάντες γὰρ ὑμεῖς εἷς ἐστε ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ.

29 [u] Εἰ δὲ ὑμεῖς Χριστοῦ, ἄρα τοῦ Ἀβραὰμ σπέρμα ἐστέ, καὶ κατ' ἐπαγγελίαν κληρονόμοι. u Gen. 21. 12. Rom. 9. 7. Heb. 11. 18.

IV. 1 Λέγω δέ, ἐφ' ὅσον χρόνον ὁ κληρονόμος νήπιός ἐστιν, οὐδὲν διαφέρει δούλου, κύριος πάντων ὤν, 2 ἀλλὰ ὑπὸ ἐπιτρόπους ἐστὶ καὶ οἰκονόμους, ἄχρι τῆς προθεσμίας τοῦ πατρός. 3 [a] Οὕτω καὶ ἡμεῖς, ὅτε ἦμεν νήπιοι, ὑπὸ τὰ στοιχεῖα τοῦ κόσμου ἦμεν δεδουλωμένοι. 4 [b] Ὅτε δὲ ἦλθε τὸ πλήρωμα τοῦ χρόνου, ἐξαπέστειλεν ὁ Θεὸς τὸν Υἱὸν αὐτοῦ, γενόμενον ἐκ γυναικὸς, γενόμενον ὑπὸ νόμον, 5 [c] ἵνα τοὺς ὑπὸ νόμον ἐξαγοράσῃ, ἵνα τὴν υἱοθεσίαν ἀπολάβωμεν. a Col. 2. 8, 20. Heb. 7. 16. b Gen. 49. 10. Dan. 9. 24. Eph. 1. 10. c John 1. 12. ch. 3. 26.
6 [d] Ὅτι δέ ἐστε υἱοὶ, ἐξαπέστειλεν ὁ Θεὸς τὸ Πνεῦμα τοῦ Υἱοῦ αὐτοῦ εἰς τὰς καρδίας ἡμῶν κρᾶζον Ἀββᾶ, ὁ πατήρ. 7 [e] Ὥστε οὐκέτι εἶ δοῦλος, ἀλλ' υἱὸς, εἰ δὲ υἱὸς, καὶ κληρονόμος Θεοῦ διὰ Χριστοῦ. d Rom. 8. 15. e Rom. 8. 16, 17.

Paul's words that by Baptism the blessings of the Incarnation are conveyed to us as Christians. "Si Emmanuel nobiscum Deus est, Deus autem nobiscum Christus est, Qui etiam in nobis est, quotquot enim in Christum tincti estis Christum induistis, tam proprius est Christus in significatione nominis, quod est, 'nobiscum Deus,' quam in sono nominis quod est 'Emmanuel.'" Tertullian (c. Marcion. iii. 12).

28. Οὐκ ἔνι Ἰουδαῖος] There is no Jew, as such, in Christ, nor Greek as such. The alterable social distinctions are contrasted by οὐδὲ, the unalterable natural one is expressed by καί. (Ellicott and Alford.) The latter distinction is specially applicable against the Jews, who insisted on their own spiritual privileges, and on the perpetual obligation of circumcision.

It has been doubted whether the old Grammarians are correct in saying that ἔνι is equivalent to ἔνεστι (Winer, § 14, p. 74), but there seems to be little reason for the doubt. Cp. Fritz. on Mark, p. 642. Cp. 1 Cor. vi. 5. Col. iii. 11. James i. 17.

29. τοῦ Ἀβραὰμ σπέρμα ἐστέ] ye are Abraham's seed. Being all united into one Body, the Body of Christ. He returns to the argument in v. 16, and completes it; see note there, and Augustine, Epist. 196, and de Doctr. Christ. iii. 44, where he deduces from this verse, compared with Gal. iii. 16, a memorable argument on the Unity of Christ and His Church. "Scientes aliquando capitis et corporis, id est, Christi et Ecclesiæ unam personam nobis intimari. Neque enim frustra dictum est fidelibus, Ergo Abrahæ semen estis (Gal. iii. 29), cum sit unum semen Abrahæ, quod est Christus (Gal. iii. 16), non hæsitemus quando à capite ad corpus, vel a corpore transitur ad caput, et tamen non receditur ab una eademque persona. Una enim persona loquitur dicens, Sicut sponso imposuit mihi mitram, et sicut sponsam ornavit me ornamento (Isa. lxi. 10), et tamen quid horum duorum capiti, quid corpori, id est, quid Christo, quid Ecclesiæ conveniat, utique intelligendum est."

Ch. IV. 1. ὁ κληρονόμος] the heir; any one who is an heir, and is contemplated in his character as such. See on John iii. 10, ὁ διδάσκαλος Ἰσραήλ.

— νήπιος] the legal infans. See Long, in Dr. Smith's Dict. of Antiqq., p. 516; and also, as to the Greek Law on the subject, ibid., p. 473.

2. ἄχρι τῆς προθεσμίας τοῦ πατρός] till the season predetermined by his father.

Προθεσμία is the legal term for any 'tempus præfinitum' within which any act was to be done. See Kennedy, in Dr. Smith's Dict. of Antiqq., p. 797.

St. Paul does not mean to say that the father fixes the time at which the son is to succeed to the inheritance; that was already defined by law. (See the authorities in the articles Heres, Infans, Impubes, in Dr. Smith's Dictionary.) But he means to say, that the parent assigned to him certain guardians and stewards, named by him, for a definite time.

3. Οὕτω καὶ ἡμεῖς] so we, i. e. Human nature generally. He, the Apostle of the Gentiles, identifies himself with those to whom he was sent, and to whom he is now writing. Augustine.

— ὑπὸ τὰ στοιχεῖα τοῦ κόσμου] the visible elements of the world: the sun, moon, sea, earth, and other creatures, once deified and worshipped by the Galatians (v. 8) and the Heathen world generally, in the place of the Creator. Rom. i. 25. Jerome.

4. γενόμενον ἐκ γυναικὸς—ὑπὸ νόμον] born of a woman, born under the Law.

As born of a Woman, Christ redeemed all. He is the Woman's seed (Gen. iii. 15) promised to Adam, and in him to all his posterity.

St. Paul therefore first declares that Christ was born of a Woman; and thus shows the Galatian Gentiles that He belonged to them even before He belonged to the Jews, as such.

But he adds, that He was born under the Law; and in order to show that the Jews had need of redemption, he adds, that He was so born in order that He might redeem them from the bondage of the Law, by fulfilling the Law (cp. Augustine, Epist. 140, and in Ps. xxxi.), and by becoming subject to the penalty of the Law (iii. 13); and thus he obviates an objection which might have been raised in favour of the Law, on the ground of Christ's having been born under the Law.

Christ redeemed both the Gentiles and the Jews; the one from the bondage of Heathenism, the other from that of the Law.

5. ἵνα τὴν υἱοθεσίαν ἀπολάβωμεν] in order that we may receive the adoption of sons. This clause is not to be connected with ἐξαγοράσῃ, but it is a common summary of the testamentary privileges of all men—whether Gentiles or Jews—by virtue of Christ's Incarnation.

It depends on ἐξαπέστειλεν, and the right rendering is: "When the fulness of the time came, God sent forth His Son, born of a Woman, born under the Law, to redeem those who are under the Law, in order that we (i. e. all men) may receive the adoption of sons."

So Irenæus (iii. 16. 3): "The Son of God became the Son of man, in order that we might receive the adoption of sonship through Him, now that man bears, and receives, and embraces the Son of God." Cp. Irenæus (v. 20, 21).

And therefore St. Paul adds—changing his person from we to ye—because ye, even ye Gentiles, are sons of God, by virtue of the Incarnation of the Son of God, Who is our Emmanuel, God with us, God manifest in our flesh, in the common nature of us all: therefore God sent forth not only His Son (v. 4), but also the Holy Spirit, proceeding from His Son,—the Holy Ghost, given by His Son (see on Acts ii. 33. John xv. 26; xvi. 7), and crying in our hearts, as the Son Himself cried in Gethsemane, "Abba, Father" (see on Mark xiv. 36. Rom. viii. 15); and thus witnessing to our sonship, and making it the ground of a filial appeal to God.

Augustine supposes, that in order to mark this union of all mankind, whether Jew or Gentile, as sons of God in Christ,—born of a Woman, and yet under the Law,—the Apostle uses the one word, Father, in two languages, Ἀββᾶ, πατὴρ,—the first the language of the Jewish world, the second of the Gentiles: "ut Hebræum verbum ad Hebræos, Græcum ad Gentes, utriusque autem verbi eadem significatio ad ejusdem fidei Spiritúsque unitatem pertineret."

It is also observed by Augustine, that St. Paul aptly here proves the adoption and heritorship of the Gentiles, from the presence and gift to them of the Holy Ghost. For it was not till after the Ascension of Christ and the Day of Pentecost, that the Gospel was preached to the Gentiles; and it was by the descent of the Holy Ghost on the uncircumcised Cornelius, that St. Peter himself had been convinced that the Gentiles were to be received into the Church by Baptism, and into a communion of spiritual privileges with the Jews. See Acts x. 47.

6. τὸ Πνεῦμα τοῦ Υἱοῦ] the Spirit of His Son. The Holy Spirit, proceeding from the Son, as well as from the Father, and therefore called the Spirit of the Son, and of Christ. See 1 Pet. i. 11. Rom. viii. 9, and above on John xv. 26.

— τὰς καρδίας ἡμῶν] our hearts. This, which is the reading f 1 Cor. 8. 4. & 12. 2. Eph. 2. 11, 12.

g 1 Cor. 8. 3. & 13. 12. Col. 2. 20. h Rom. 14. 5. Col. 2. 16.
i 2 Cor. 2. 5.
k 1 Cor. 2. 3. 2 Cor. 11. 30. 1 Zech. 12. 8. Mal. 2. 7. Heb. 13. 2.

8 f Ἀλλὰ τότε μὲν οὐκ εἰδότες Θεὸν ἐδουλεύσατε τοῖς φύσει μὴ οὖσι θεοῖς· 9 g νῦν δὲ γνόντες Θεὸν, μᾶλλον δὲ γνωσθέντες ὑπὸ Θεοῦ, πῶς ἐπιστρέφετε πάλιν ἐπὶ τὰ ἀσθενῆ καὶ πτωχὰ στοιχεῖα, οἷς πάλιν ἄνωθεν δουλεύειν θέλετε; 10 h Ἡμέρας παρατηρεῖσθε καὶ μῆνας καὶ καιροὺς καὶ ἐνιαυτούς· 11 φοβοῦμαι ὑμᾶς μήπως εἰκῇ κεκοπίακα εἰς ὑμᾶς. 12 i Γίνεσθε ὡς ἐγὼ, ὅτι κἀγὼ ὡς ὑμεῖς· ἀδελφοὶ, δέομαι ὑμῶν. Οὐδέν με ἠδικήσατε. 13 k Οἴδατε δὲ, ὅτι δι' ἀσθένειαν τῆς σαρκὸς εὐηγγελισάμην ὑμῖν τὸ πρότερον, 14 l καὶ τὸν πειρασμὸν ὑμῶν τὸν of the best MSS.– and not κ. ὑμῶν, the reading of Elz.—declares that the Holy Spirit is now given to all—whether Jews or Gentiles—united in one Body, the Body of Christ.

7. καὶ κληρονόμος Θεοῦ διὰ Χριστοῦ] This reading, or what in sense is tantamount to it, κληρονόμος διὰ Χριστοῦ, seems to be strongly confirmed by external and internal evidence, and therefore is not to be easily set aside for the reading of A, B, C*, κλ. διὰ Θεοῦ.

If however διὰ Θεοῦ, or, as it is in F, G, διὰ Θεὸν, is the true reading, it is to be interpreted, with Aug., "per misericordiam Dei;" i. e. sons by God's grace and favour in Christ, and not by carnal descent, as the literal Israel boast that they are. Cp. John i. 12, 13. Rom. viii. 15.

8. τοῖς φύσει μὴ οὖσι] gods which by nature do not even exist: much less have any power to save. So A, B, C, D, E. Elz. τοῖς μὴ φύσει οὖσι.

The reading in the text declares, that by nature, which is God's work, the gods of the Heathen have no existence. Cp. 1 Cor. viii. 4—6.

Ye once worshipped Cybele, and other Heathen deities, as having dominion over the elements of Nature—air, sea, earth, fire. But so far from having dominion over Nature, I affirm (says the Apostle) that they had no existence in Nature at all. How miserable therefore was your bondage, to worship, and serve, and depend on that which did not exist!

9. πῶς ἐπιστρέφετε] how is it that ye are returning into bondage to the elements? How is it? On this use of πῶς see above, ii. 14.

By falling now into Judaism, ye do in fact relapse into the principles of Heathenism. Ye become again slaves of the physical elements, the sun, moon, earth, &c., according to which the calendar of the Levitical Law is regulated; with its days, and new moons, and festive seasons, and sabbatical years, which were shadows of good things to come (Col. ii. 17); and so had once a beneficent and Divine office, but now that these good things have come, have passed away. And therefore to return to them as things obligatory, and as necessary to salvation, and to observe them with scrupulous veneration as essential parts of religion, is even to go back to that Gentile bondage to the physical elements of the world, in which as Heathens ye were enslaved. See Theodoret. Cp. Col. ii. 20, the best exposition of this passage.

— ἐπὶ τὰ ἀσθενῆ] ἐπὶ τὰ πτωχὰ καὶ ἀσθενῆ στοιχεῖα καταπίπτομεν. Athenagoras, Legat. pro Christianis, p. 15.

— δουλεύειν θέλετε] it is your will to be slaves. Observe the word θέλετε, showing that this submission to bondage is a mere act of their own will, that it is not submission to God's will, but an arbitrary subjection of their own will which they have no right to enslave (see v. 1. 1 Cor. vii. 23) to the will of others, their false teachers, who have no right to command. Cp. the use of the word θέλων in Col. ii. 18, μή τις ὑμᾶς καταβραβευέτω θέλων: and v. 23, ἐθελοθρησκεία.

10. παρατηρεῖσθε] Ye do not observe rightly, but observe perversely (παρὰ), beside the mark, contrary to God's will. The sense of παρατηρέω is to mark with an evil intent in Dan. vi. 11. Ps. xxxvi. 12. Susan. 12. 15, 16.

— ἐνιαυτούς] years; e. g. the seventh year of release, or the year of Jubilee. Primasius.

11. φοβοῦμαι ὑμᾶς] I fear for you. You ought to be objects to me only of love, but you are objects to me of fear, lest I have laboured in vain upon you, and therefore shall fail of having you as my 'crown of rejoicing' at the great day. (1 Thess. ii. 19.) Meyer compares Soph. Œd. R. 760, δέδοικ' ἐμαυτὸν—μὴ πόλλ' ἄγαν εἰρημέν' ᾖ μοι.

12. Γίνεσθε] Become ye as I am, who was once under the Law, and zealous for the Law, but now am free in Christ from the bondage of the Law. (v. 1. Phil. iii 3—7. Acts xxvi. 5.)

Become ye as I am, for I also am what ye are; that is, I am one who claims no pre-eminence above you by virtue of his carnal descent from Abraham, but I am one "qui utique, cùm Judæus natus sim, jam ista carnalia contemno" (Augustine); and though born a "Hebrew of the Hebrews," yet now I regard myself as no better than a "sinner of the Gentiles," one of the universal family of man, who are all one in Christ (iii. 26). "Ego sicut vos; id est, non Judæus sed homo sum." Augustine.

These words of St. Paul appear to be quoted by Justin Martyr, Cohort. ad Græc. p. 40, γίνεσθε ὡς ἐγὼ, ὅτι κἀγὼ ἤμην ὡς ὑμεῖς.

— ἀδελφοὶ, δέομαι ὑμῶν] Brethren, I implore you. He, their spiritual father, now changes his tone, and becomes a suppliant, and calls them no longer little children, but brethren.

These sudden changes of feeling and language, these sobbings of the spirit, bursting forth abruptly from a full heart, appear to be best marked by being broken into separate sentences, and are so represented in the text.

— Οὐδέν με ἠδικήσατε] In no respect did ye injure me,—but ye injured others, especially yourselves and Christ and God. Observe, με thus placed is emphatic (cp. on Matt. xvi. 18). When ye fell back from the Gospel ye wronged not me, but ye wronged yourselves and your heavenly Father, who gave His Son to die for you,—and your Saviour who shed His blood for you. Do not imagine, therefore, that I am pleading my own cause with you; no, I am pleading with you for your own selves and for Him. Compare the similar disavowal of personal feeling in 2 Cor. ii. 5, where the pronoun holds the same place before the verb as here, οὐκ ἐμὲ λελύπηκεν, It is not I whom he has grieved.

13. Οἴδατε—τὸ πρότερον] He is contrasting their former love toward him, with their present estrangement from him.

Διὰ here signifies, by reason of. Cp. Rom. vi. 19, and Winer, § 49, p. 356.

The sense is, Ye know, that on account of weakness of the flesh I preached the Gospel to you at the first, and ye, my spiritual children, did not set at nought, nor show any disdain for that trial of yours which was in the flesh of me your spiritual father, but on the contrary ye accepted me as an angel sent from God, yea, even as Christ Jesus.

(1) As to the reading of this passage, πειρασμὸν ὑμῶν, your trial, is the reading in A, B, C, D*, F, G, and also in many Western Fathers. And after he had used the first person singular in εὐηγγελισάμην he would not have said ἡμῶν (as in Elz.), but μου. And ὑμῶν gives a sense which is not likely to have been intended by copyists. As Hooker says, "The teacher's error is the people's trial," and so is the teacher's infirmity. "Grandis tentatio discipulis, si magister infirmetur." (Primasius.) The infirmity of the Pastor exercises, proves, and elicits the patience and love of the People. St. Paul's bodily infirmity was not only a trial and an exercise of his own Christian virtues and graces in preaching the Gospel, but of theirs also to whom he preached it.

As S. Jerome says, the weakness of St. Paul was a temptation to the Galatians. It tempted them to despise him whom they heard preaching glorious things, and yet saw suffering grievous things; they knew also that he had suffered much persecution and contumely. This was a sore temptation to them. Could St. Paul (they might ask) be the Apostle of Christ, or could Christ be believed to have divine power, if He suffered His own chosen vessel and Apostle to endure so much in His service?

(2) The infirmity in his flesh, here mentioned, was probably the thorn in the flesh which was given him by God, in order that he might not be elated with the abundance of his revelations, and which exposed him to the contempt and derision of the censorious and malignant. See note on 2 Cor. xii. 7.

(3) τὸ πρότερον, at the first. The meaning of this phrase is to be explained by its contrast with the present τὸ νῦν. The affectionate feeling of the Galatians, τὸ πρότερον, in their former mind, is compared with their present altered temper towards the Apostle. Compare the use of τὸ πρότερον in John vi. 62; ix. 8, and Davidson, ii. 295, and Long in Dr. Smith's Dictionary of Ancient Geography, Art. 'Galatia,' p. 931.

It would seem that St. Paul had first been visited with this physical infirmity about the time of his Ordination to the Apostleship of the Gentiles. See 2 Cor. xii. 2—7.

St. Paul, when sent to the Gentiles, after his Ordination, would not therefore be led to seek for intercourse, as a Preacher, in the first instance with such populations as prided themselves on their civilization and refinement, and which are usually more ἐν τῇ σαρκί μου οὐκ ἐξουθενήσατε οὐδὲ ἐξεπτύσατε, ἀλλ' ὡς ἄγγελον Θεοῦ ἐδέξασθέ με, ὡς Χριστὸν Ἰησοῦν.

15 Ποῦ οὖν ὁ μακαρισμὸς ὑμῶν; μαρτυρῶ γὰρ ὑμῖν ὅτι, εἰ δυνατὸν, τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς ὑμῶν ἐξορύξαντες ἐδώκατέ μοι. 16 ὥστε ἐχθρὸς ὑμῶν γέγονα ἀληθεύων ὑμῖν.

17 [m] Ζηλοῦσιν ὑμᾶς οὐ καλῶς, ἀλλὰ ἐκκλεῖσαι ὑμᾶς θέλουσιν, ἵνα αὐτοὺς ζηλοῦτε. 18 Καλὸν δὲ τὸ ζηλοῦσθαι ἐν καλῷ πάντοτε, καὶ μὴ μόνον ἐν τῷ disposed to be supercilious and fastidious, and to be offended and revolted by any eccentricities of manner and physical defects or deformities in their teachers.

[m] 1 Cor. 11. 2. 2 Cor. 11. 3, 13—15. Phil. 2. 21.

---

But he would rather resort in the first instance to ruder and more barbarous tribes, who are not so easily affected by such peculiarities.

Having once established his character there by the supernatural effects of his ministry, he would then proceed, on the strength of his credit so assured, to address himself to politer populations.

Accordingly, on referring to the Acts of the Apostles, we find that when St. Paul set out on his second Missionary tour, without Barnabas, from Antioch, he passed through Syria and Cilicia, where he was well known, to Lycaonia, thence to Phrygia, and thence to Galatia. See Acts xv. 41; xvi. 1—6.

These countries were comparatively rude and uncivilized. Cp. Jerome on cap. iii. 15.

It is also expressly stated that St. Paul was then forbidden by the Spirit to preach the word in Asia, i. e. at Ephesus, the refined capital of Ionia. (Acts xvi. 6.)

It may suffice to offer this suggestion, which might be prosecuted further, that on account of the thorn in his flesh, or, as he calls it here, the infirmity in his flesh, and the consequent temptation to his hearers, he might be naturally led—perhaps he was guided by the Holy Spirit—to shun in the first instance the more civilized populations of Asia and Europe, and to go rather to the despised Galilees of the world, such as Lycaonia, Phrygia, and Galatia, and then, in due course of time, when his reputation was established, to proceed through Macedonia to Athens (where he had little success), and thence to Corinth and to Ephesus, and so finally to Rome.

He might therefore well say to the Galatians that they had done him no wrong personally.

On the contrary, he frankly owns that they were well aware that it was by reason of the infirmity of his flesh (δι' ἀσθένειαν τῆς σαρκὸς) that he had preached to them at the first, rather than to others; and though this was the case, and he came to them therefore, as it were, by necessity rather than by choice, and though he had not then as yet established his reputation as an Apostle by the effects of his miracles and his preaching, yet such was their love for him that they did not despise him, but received him with affectionate enthusiasm as a messenger of God, and would have given their eyes to him.

14. ὡς Χριστὸν Ἰησοῦν] as Christ Jesus. Ye received me, not as an Angel merely, but as the Lord of Angels.

15. Ποῦ οὖν ὁ μακαρισμός] Where then is that your felicitation of me, with which you formerly loved and honoured me, even as an Angel—even as Christ? Elz. has τίς οὖν ἦν ὁ μακαρισμός; But ποῦ is in A, B, C, F, G, and ἦν is omitted by A, B, C.

Some learned Interpreters suppose these words to mean, 'Where is the predication of your own happiness?'

But the sense appears rather to be, according to the context, 'Where now is your felicitation of me?' So μακαρισμὸς, Rom. iv. 9, where see Fritz. i. p. 219, and in Clemens Romanus, c. 50, οὗτος ὁ μακαρισμὸς (this pronunciation of felicity) ἐγένετο ἐπὶ τοὺς ἐκλελεγμένους τοῦ Θεοῦ.

You almost worshipped me, you treated me as one of the μάκαρες, the blessed Angels, even as the Son of the Blessed. Where is now your beatification of me fled?

On the verb μακαρίζω, see Luke i. 48. James v. 11, and its use by LXX, Gen. xxx. 13. Job xxix. 11. Isa. iii. 10. Mal. iii. 15.

— τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς] your eyes, what was dearest to you.

> "Quanti, si tibi vos oculos debere Catullum, > Aut aliud, si quid carius est oculis." (Catullus.)

"Pro Evangelico lumine sua lumina tradidissent." (Primasius.)

Some persons have hence inferred that St. Paul's infirmity was in his eyes. See on this subject below, 2 Cor. xii. 7.

— ἐδώκατε] ye gave. Elz. has ἄν, which is not in the best MSS. See John xv. 22; xix. 11. Not that they actually did give, but the omission of ἄν gives greater certainty to what is put hypothetically; Ye did as much as give them to me. Cp. Ellicott here.

16. Ὥστε ἐχθρὸς ὑμῶν γέγονα ἀληθεύων ὑμῖν] So that the fact is, I have become your enemy by being true to you. This is represented interrogatively in most editions; but it seems best to regard it as an assertory conclusion (such as is usually introduced by ὥστε, consequently), stated with something of irony and surprise and indignation.

Ἀληθεύω is not here to speak the truth, but to act truly (see Prov. xxi. 3, LXX, and Gen. xlii. 16); εἰ ἀληθεύετε ἢ οὔ, whether you be true men or no. The conclusion of the Apostle is, "So that, after all, I have now become an enemy of yours, by being your true friend!"

These words, therefore, do not show (as has been asserted by some learned Expositors) that St. Paul had been again to Galatia, and had preached to the Galatians, after his first visit (Acts xvi. 6), and before he wrote this Epistle.

On this subject, see above in the Introduction to this Epistle, § 3.

17. Ζηλοῦσιν ὑμᾶς οὐ καλῶς, ἀλλὰ ἐκκλεῖσαι ὑμᾶς θέλουσιν] They pay you court, but not honourably, nay, but (ἀλλὰ) their will is to exclude you, in order that ye may pay court to them. The substantive ζῆλος (from ζέω, ferveo) is used by the LXX for the Hebrew קִנְאָה kineah (whence Simon Zelotes = Cananite, see Matt. x. 4. Mark iii. 18. Luke vi. 15), and is sometimes rendered by our Translators Zeal, and sometimes Jealousy, the root of both which words is the same. See Num. xxv. 11 concerning Phinehas, and 1 Kings xix. 10. 14, of Elijah, and Isa. lix. 17. John ii. 17.

The word ζηλοῦν, used with an accusative, as here, of a person who is its object, includes both the idea of zeal for him and jealousy against any rival who would supplant the person who is zealous, in the favour of him who is the object of the zeal. Cp. 2 Cor. xi. 2, ζηλῶ ὑμᾶς Θεοῦ ζήλῳ, and 2 Sam. xxi. 2.

The Apostle's meaning here is, I am true to you, I am zealous for your true interests, I am jealous with a godly jealousy (a holy indignation, cp. 2 Cor. vii. 11) against any who would steal your hearts from me, and from the truth, and from God.

They also, your false Teachers, pay court to you; they solicit your favour; they profess zeal for your interests, and are jealous of my influence over you. But they do this not honourably (οὐ καλῶς); they profess eagerness to promote your spiritual advancement by admitting you into the Jewish covenant, and into the favoured family, by Circumcision. But the fact is, their zeal for you is the zeal of envy (cp. Acts vii. 9, οἱ πατριάρχαι ζηλώσαντες Ἰωσὴφ ἀπέδοντο). Their will is (θέλουσιν, see above, v. 9) to exclude you from that covenant into which you have been already admitted by your baptism into Christ (iii. 26—29), and from which they will exclude you if you comply with their solicitations, and lapse into Judaism. See chap. v. 2, 3. In this metaphor of shutting out, there may be a reference to the incidents and language of Marriage-Ceremonies. I am like the friend of the Divine Bridegroom, and have espoused you to Christ, but your false Teachers would shut the door and exclude you altogether from the Wedding. Cp. our Lord's words in the Parable of the Virgins, Matt. xxv. 6—12.

— ἵνα αὐτοὺς ζηλοῦτε] in order that you may pay zealous court to them; as the Jewish Proselytes were expected to do to those who were Hebrews, and who regarded themselves as a nobler race than the mere Jewish Proselytes and Hellenists, to which class the Galatians would belong on their submission to Circumcision. See on Acts vi. 1.

Hence the zeal of the Pharisees to make proselytes. See Matt. xxiii. 15, a text which explains St. Paul's meaning here. By making proselytes they made clients and courtiers, votaries, partizans, and zealots for themselves.

On the syntax of ἵνα ζηλοῦτε, see on 1 Cor. iv. 6, and Winer, § 41, p. 259.

18. Καλὸν δὲ τὸ ζηλοῦσθαι ἐν καλῷ πάντοτε] But it is a good thing to be an object of zealous and jealous courtship in a good matter at all times; and such you are to me, not only when I n 1 Cor. 4. 15. 1 Tim. 1. 2. Philem. 10. James 1. 18.

παρεῖναί με πρὸς ὑμᾶς, 19 [n] τεκνία μου, οὓς πάλιν ὠδίνω, ἄχρις οὗ μορφωθῇ Χριστὸς ἐν ὑμῖν, 20 ἤθελον δὲ παρεῖναι πρὸς ὑμᾶς ἄρτι, καὶ ἀλλάξαι τὴν φωνήν μου, ὅτι ἀποροῦμαι ἐν ὑμῖν.

o Gen. 16. 15. & 21. 1, 2.

21 Λέγετέ μοι, οἱ ὑπὸ νόμον θέλοντες εἶναι, τὸν νόμον οὐκ ἀκούετε; 22 [o] Γέγραπται γὰρ, ὅτι Ἀβραὰμ δύο υἱοὺς ἔσχεν, ἕνα ἐκ τῆς παιδίσκης, καὶ ἕνα ἐκ τῆς ἐλευθέρας· 23 [p] ἀλλ' ὁ μὲν ἐκ τῆς παιδίσκης κατὰ σάρκα γεγένηται· ὁ δὲ ἐκ τῆς ἐλευθέρας διὰ τῆς ἐπαγγελίας. 24 Ἅτινά ἐστιν ἀλληγορούμενα· αὗται γάρ εἰσιν δύο διαθῆκαι· μία μὲν ἀπὸ ὄρους Σινᾶ, εἰς δουλείαν γεννῶσα, ἥτις ἐστὶν Ἄγαρ· 25 τὸ γὰρ Ἄγαρ Σινᾶ ὄρος ἐστὶν ἐν τῇ Ἀραβίᾳ, συστοιχεῖ δὲ τῇ νῦν p John 8. 39. Rom. 9. 7, 8. Gen. 17. 15—19. & 18. 10—14. & 21. 1, 2. Heb. 11. 11.

---

am present with you, but whether I am present with you or absent from you.

I who am the friend of the Bridegroom (cp. John iii. 29), and who have espoused you as a chaste virgin to Christ, am ever zealous and jealous for you with a godly zeal and jealousy, not for my own sake (for I am not the Bridegroom), but for your eternal welfare and for His honour. Cp. 2 Cor. xi. 2, the best exposition of this text.

Compare the note in Mr. Ellicott's excellent Edition of this Epistle, p. 71.

19. τεκνία μου—ὠδίνω] my little children, of whom I am in travail again, until Christ shall have been formed in you. Your relapse is a relapse also to me. I now must regard you once more as τεκνία, little children; I must even endure once more the throes of spiritual parturition till Christ be formed in you. Cp. 1 Thess. ii. 7, and our Lord's words, Matt. xii. 48. Mark iii. 35. Luke viii. 21.

On the relation of οὓς to τεκνία, see John vi. 9, παιδάριον ὅς. Matt. xviii. 19. Acts xv. 17, ἔθνη—αὐτούς; xxvi. 17. Rom. ii. 14.

On the metaphor here used, compare St. Paul's words concerning Onesimus, whom he calls his σπλάγχνα, Philem. 12.

See also the noble picture in Revelation xii. 6.

This metaphor has been adopted and expounded in the Epistle of the primitive Churches of Gaul, connected by race with Galatia, in Euseb. v. 1, who say that by means of the Martyrs much joy accrued to the holy Virgin Mother, the Church of Christ, receiving back alive those whom she had lost as abortions, οὓς ἐξέτρωσε, and also because, through means of the Martyrs, very many of her children who had fallen away by apostasy, were again conceived in her womb, and were being brought forth again to life (ἀνεμητροῦντο καὶ ἀπεκυΐσκοντο).

"Pariuntur ii, in quibus Christi imago formatur." (Ambrose de Isaac, 8. A Lapide.)

20. ἤθελον δὲ παρεῖναι] but I could wish. See Rom. ix. 3. The question, whether he accomplished this desire, is considered above, in the Introduction to this Epistle, § 16—22.

24. ἀλληγορούμενα] allegorized. See the examples of the use of this word in this sense by the Jewish Hellenists, especially Philo, Allegor. ii. p. 1334, et passim, in Wetstein here.

These things of which the Apostle is speaking are not an allegory (for an allegory has no historical basis), but they are allegorized, or allegorically expounded; "per allegoriam dicta" (Vulg. Tertullian c. Marcion. v. 4), and then St. Paul proceeds to unfold their inner meaning;

They have a second spiritual sense; the holy Apostle does not take away the History, but he teaches us what is spiritually signified by it. Theodoret, Chrys.

The Apostle here instructs us how to allegorize aright,—namely, to preserve the truth of the history, while we elicit from it its spiritual sense. Abraham (he says) had two sons, from two wives; here is the History. He then tells us what was their spiritual meaning; there is the Allegory. Primasius.

Marcion and Manes perverted this passage into an argument that the Law was only an Allegory. Jerome.

On the subject of Allegorical Interpretation, see Waterland's Treatise on Scripture Allegories, vol. vi. p. 13, Preface to Scripture Vindicated. Glasse, Philol. Sacra, pp. 185—200, De Allegoriis. Surenhusius, p. 578. Rosenmüller, Historia Interpretationis Librorum Scripturæ, iii. 41—52, and Bp. Marsh, vi. and ix.—particularly p. 355, Lectures on the Interpretation of the Bible.

— δύο διαθῆκαι] two Covenants. Elz. prefixes αἱ—not in the best MSS.

A full exposition of this allegorical sense may be seen in S. Augustine on Ps. cxix. 7, who applies it to the condition of the Visible Church in this world suffering manifold trials and persecution from the race of Ishmael dwelling in the tents of Kedar, the Hagarenes of the earthly generation; but at length to be freed, at the time of the final severance, when the son of the bond-servant will be cast out, and not be permitted to inherit with the true Israelites, the genuine sons of Abraham, the children of the Promise, in the heavenly Jerusalem, the Church glorified.

25. τὸ γὰρ Ἄγαρ] for Agar is (i. e. symbolizes, or represents) the (τὸ) Mount Sina in Arabia. As to the reading of this passage, it is to be observed that

(1) The word Ἄγαρ is omitted by C, F, G, and by Origen, Vulg., and Jerome, and many of the Latin Fathers, and is cancelled by Lachmann and Lightfoot. It is not in Cod. Sinait.

Bentley, and Kuster in the Preface to his edition of Mill's N. T., supposed Σινᾶ—Ἀραβίᾳ to be a gloss. But the received reading is strongly confirmed by the best Greek MSS., A, B, D, E, J, K, and the Syriac Versions, and the Greek Fathers.

(2) As to the sense, the words are thus rendered by many Interpreters,—"For the name Hagar is Mount Sina in Arabia;" and it is affirmed by Chrysostom, that Mount Sina was called Agar in the vernacular tongue (ἐπιχωρίῳ γλώττῃ). And so Theophylact: "Sina is called Agar in the language of the Arabs."

The evidence of modern topographers and philologers on this subject (which may be seen in Winer's and Meyer's notes, and also in Prof. Lightfoot's edit., p. 186) does not appear to be conclusive. Nor does the meaning of a name (unless imposed by Divine authority) seem to afford any strength to the argument for the analogy: cp. Lightfoot, pp. 185—189.

(3) Besides, if St. Paul had desired to make any thing of the argument from the supposed meaning of Hagar's name, he would also have dwelt on the etymology of Sara, the Princess,—שָׂרָה symbolizing the royal prerogatives of Christians (Rev. i. 6) as contrasted with the servile drudgery of the Jews, and as representing the pre-eminence of the Spiritual Jerusalem over the Literal.

(4) Further, this supposition, which regards Ἄγαρ as simply a word or name, and interprets τὸ γὰρ Ἄγαρ as equivalent to, "for the word or name 'Hagar' is Mount Sina in Arabia," is not consistent with St. Paul's own words which follow. For how can a word or name be said to συστοιχεῖν, how can a mere name range with a thing?

(5) St. Paul compares Hagar, the person, with the Levitical Sina and its dispensation: and he compares Sarah, the person, with the Christian Sion and its dispensation.

(6) How then are the words to be construed?

Not by connecting the article τὸ with the word Ἄγαρ (as is commonly done), but with the words Σινᾶ ὄρος, as follows:

For Hagar is (i. e. represents) the Mount Sina in Arabia (τὸ Σινᾶ ὄρος ἐν τῇ Ἀραβίᾳ), and ranges with the Jerusalem that now is; for she is in bondage with her children. But the Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all.

On the connexion of the article τὸ with Σινᾶ ὄρος it may be observed,

(1) that it was not likely to cause any difficulty, as it was evidently not to be connected with Hagar, a woman.

(2) that any other arrangement of the words, e. g. Ἄγαρ γὰρ τὸ Σινᾶ ὄρος ἐστὶν, would have been very inharmonious.

(3) The translation proposed above is confirmed by the old Latin Version in the Codex Claromontanus and Sangerman,—"Agar enim," &c.—and by Theodor. Mopsuest. in Cramer's Catena, p. 71, who says that ἡ Ἄγαρ ἰσοδυναμεῖ τῇ παρ' ἡμῖν Ἱερουσαλὴμ, and by the ancient Commentary lately published by Card. Pitra as the work of S. Hilary, p. 83; and also by the Vulgate and Cod. Augiensis and Cod. Boernerianus properly understood, and by other respectable authorities, which here omit the word Ἄγαρ, and have "Sina enim mons est in Arabia," i. e. "Hagar is, or represents, Mount Sina in Arabia:" cp. Lightf. p. 184.

On the article used as here, see Matt. xxvi. 28. Mark vi. 3; vii. 15. 1 Cor. x. 4. Cp. Winer, p. 104; and as to the Hyperbata and Trajections in St. Paul's writings, cp. Eph. ii. 3 (τέκνα

Ἰερουσαλὴμ, δουλεύει γὰρ μετὰ τῶν τέκνων αὐτῆς, [26] [q] ἡ δὲ ἄνω Ἰερουσαλὴμ ἐλευθέρα ἐστὶν, ἥτις ἐστὶ μήτηρ πάντων ἡμῶν· [27] [r] γέγραπται γὰρ, Εὐφράνθητι, στεῖρα ἡ οὐ τίκτουσα, ῥῆξον καὶ βόησον, ἡ οὐκ ὠδίνουσα, ὅτι πολλὰ τὰ τέκνα τῆς ἐρήμου μᾶλλον ἢ τῆς ἐχούσης τὸν ἄνδρα. [28] [s] Ἡμεῖς δὲ, ἀδελφοὶ, κατὰ Ἰσαὰκ ἐπαγγελίας τέκνα ἐσμέν. [29] [t] Ἀλλ', ὥσπερ τότε ὁ κατὰ σάρκα γεννηθεὶς ἐδίωκε τὸν κατὰ πνεῦμα, οὕτω καὶ νῦν. [30] [u] Ἀλλὰ τί λέγει ἡ γραφή; Ἔκβαλε τὴν παιδίσκην καὶ τὸν υἱὸν αὐτῆς, οὐ γὰρ μὴ κληρονομήσῃ ὁ υἱὸς τῆς παιδίσκης μετὰ τοῦ υἱοῦ τῆς ἐλευθέρας. [31] Ἄρα, ἀδελφοὶ, οὐκ ἐσμὲν παιδίσκης τέκνα, ἀλλὰ τῆς ἐλευθέρας.

q Heb. 12. 22. Rev. 3. 12. & 21. 2, 10, &c. r Isa. 54. 1, 5. 1 Tim. 5. 5.
s Rom. 9. 7, 8.
t Gen. 21. 9.
u Gen. 21. 10, 12.

V. [1] [a] Τῇ ἐλευθερίᾳ ᾗ ἡμᾶς Χριστὸς ἠλευθέρωσε, στήκετε οὖν, καὶ μὴ πάλιν ζυγῷ δουλείας ἐνέχεσθε. [2] Ἴδε, ἐγὼ Παῦλος λέγω ὑμῖν ὅτι ἐὰν περιτέμνησθε a Acts 15. 10. 1 Pet. 2. 16.

φύσει ὀργῆς), and the examples in Winer, § 61, pp. 488—493; and partic larly as to the separation of the definite article from its substantive, see the instances in Matthiæ, Gr. Gr. § 278. As to the verb ἐστὶ meaning represents, cp. εἰσὶ in v. 24, and in Rev. i. 19, 20; the candlesticks represent (εἰσὶ) Churches; the stars represent (εἰσὶ) the Angels of the Churches; and xvii. 18, the Woman is the great city, &c.

According to this rendering, the sense is plain and easy. Abraham had two sons, Ishmael and Isaac; the one by the bondwoman, Hagar; the other by the freewoman, Sarai. But he who was of the bondwoman was born after the flesh, but he who was of the freewoman was born through the promise. Which things have an allegorical signification. For these women represent two Covenants, the one from Mount Sinai, which beareth children unto bondage, which is Hagar. For Hagar represents Mount Sina in Arabia, and corresponds to the Jerusalem that now is, for she is in bondage with her children. But the Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all.

— δουλεύει γάρ] for she is in bondage. Elz. has δουλεύει δὲ, with D, E, I, K, and Syriac and Vulg. But γὰρ is found in A, B, C, D*, F, G.

26. πάντων] all. Some Editors cancel πάντων here, on the authority of B, C*, D, E, F, G, and some Fathers; but it is found in A, I, K, and the old Latin Version of Irenæus (v. 35) has "mater omnium nostrum;" and it seems to have been in the text as early as the time of S. Polycarp, ad Philipp. 3, where see Dr. Routh's note.

27. μᾶλλον] rather—not more. See Matt. xviii. 13.

29. ἐδίωκε] was persecuting. An assertion much cavilled at by some recent criticisms, which ask, "When did Ishmael ever persecute Isaac?"

This question has been long ago considered and disposed of.

The Book of Genesis only tells us that Sarah saw Ishmael playing with her son Isaac. (Gen. xxi. 9.) The original has מְצַחֵק (metsakhek), and the LXX has παίζοντα. But the temper in which Ishmael played with Isaac, may best be inferred from the comment which Isaac's mother made upon it. Sarah's words interpret Ishmael's act. If his play had been loving play, she would not have been displeased by it. It must have been the spirit of spiteful malice, made more offensive by its pretence to sportiveness and love, which extorted from Sarah the words which the Holy Spirit, speaking by St. Paul, here calls a verdict of Scripture,—a prophetic oracular speech (cp. Gen. ii. 24, with Matt. xix. 5),—Cast out the bondwoman and her son. And Almighty God Himself vouchsafed to confirm Sarah's interpretation of Ishmael's play, by commanding Abraham, although reluctant, to hearken to Sarah's voice in that matter. See Gen. xxi. 12.

Accordingly, it has been well said by one of old (whose words may be commended to the attention of some later Interpreters), "Ludentes eos vidit Sara, et ait 'Ejice ancillam et filium.' Quare? quia vidit eos ludentes? Sed lusum illum Paulus persecutionem vocat, quia lusio illa illusio erat. Major erat Ismael et roboratus in malitia: et fraudes ludendi cum infirmo faciebat; animadvertit mater lusum illum esse persecutionem; sic intelligens Sara lusum illum, dixit Ejice ancillam et filium ejus." Augustine (Serm. 3).

The Holy Spirit, speaking by St. Paul, thus enables us to explain Sarah's words, and justifies them; and so the later portions of the Divine Word will often be found to reflect light upon the earliest records of Inspiration.

St. Paul's comparison here is peculiarly apposite and relevant to the subject before him.

The Judaizers, with whom he is dealing in this Epistle, were like Ishmael, the son of the bondwoman Agar, the representative of the Old Covenant not spiritually understood. They professed friendship for the Galatian Christians, who were the spiritual Isaac. In semblance they were playing with the offspring of the freewoman, but in reality they were persecuting him. The Judaizers were endeavouring to rob the Galatian Christians of their Evangelical inheritance derived from Abraham. Thus Ishmael pretended to be playing with Isaac, but was in fact persecuting him.

The Apostle, therefore, who had just been comparing himself to an affectionate mother, comes forward as a vigilant Sarah, and interferes to part the Jewish Ishmael from the Christian Isaac; and to rescue the children of the promise and of freedom from the treacherous flattery and tyrannical sport of the children of the flesh and of bondage.

The comparison, therefore, is a very happy and beautiful one. And yet it has been contemptuously exploded by some as sophistical and false! And its beauty is much marred by others (as may be seen in Meyer, p. 193, and De Wette, p. 67) who desert the Scriptural narrative of the Book of Genesis (as excellently expounded by Augustine), and resort to a Rabbinical tradition, that Isaac was openly and cruelly persecuted by Ishmael, and suppose that the Apostle here deserted Scripture to follow Tradition.

31. Ἄρα] Therefore. B, D*, E, and a few cursives, have διὸ here, which is received by Lachm., Tisch., Alf., Ellicott; and Tertullian has 'propter quod' (c. Marcion. v. 34); and so Euseb. de Mart. Palæst. c. 11, who compares Heb. xii. 22: "Ye have come unto Mount Sion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem."

CH. V. 1. Τῇ ἐλευθερίᾳ] Elz. inserts οὖν here, but it is placed after στήκετε by A, B, C*, F, G. There are some other variations here: Lach. omits ᾗ, and Tertullian has "Qua libertate Christus nos manumisit" (c. Marcion. v. 4), and Vulg., which adds "state."

On the true character of this Liberty which has been purchased for Christians by Christ's blood, and which is to be maintained by them as His servants, and not to be bartered away on the one hand by an absolute subjection of their Will, Reason, and Conscience to the domination of another, nor yet to be abused into a plea for insubordination and resistance to lawful Authority in any lawful command, see Bp. Sanderson, iii. pp. 276, 277—286, Serm. on 1 Pet. ii. 16.

— μὴ πάλιν ζυγῷ δουλείας ἐνέχεσθε] μὴ ἐνέχεσθε = "ne cervicem jugo subdatis." See the Syriac Version here. Do not put your necks again into a yoke of bondage so as to be held by it. Ἐνέχομαι is the middle voice, as βαπτίζομαι. (1 Cor. x. 2; xv. 29.) St. Peter himself, even at Jerusalem, had called the Levitical Law a yoke. Acts xv. 10.

Ye are not now under the yoke of bondage, but under the easy yoke, the ζυγὸς χρηστὸς, of Christ. Matt. xi. 29, 30.

2. Ἴδε] not ἰδὲ as in Attic Greek. Buttmann, i. 466. Winer, p. 47. De Wette, p. 69.

— Ἴδε, ἐγὼ Παῦλος κ.τ.λ.] Behold, I Paul. Mark this well, I Paul, whom they falsely accuse of preaching circumcision (see v. 11), warn you that if you are circumcised, i. e. if you submit to circumcision (middle voice, see vv. 1. 4, δικαιοῦσθε) with any belief in the necessity and saving efficacy of circumcision, Christ profiteth you nothing.

It is not to be imagined that St. Paul himself, when he circumcised Timothy (Acts xvi. 3), made Christ to be of none effect to him, or that he would have circumcised Timothy in order to conciliate any one, if such would have been the result.

But Christ would have been of none effect to Timothy if he had been circumcised under any persuasion that Circumcision was in itself necessary and profitable for salvation, and if he had relied on it as such, as the Judaizers persuaded the Galatians to Χριστὸς ὑμᾶς οὐδὲν ὠφελήσει. 3 Μαρτύρομαι δὲ πάλιν παντὶ ἀνθρώπῳ περιτεμνομένῳ, ὅτι ὀφειλέτης ἐστὶν ὅλον τὸν νόμον ποιῆσαι. 4 Κατηργήθητε ἀπὸ τοῦ Χριστοῦ οἵτινες ἐν νόμῳ δικαιοῦσθε, τῆς χάριτος ἐξεπέσατε. 5 Ἡμεῖς γὰρ Πνεύματι ἐκ πίστεως ἐλπίδα δικαιοσύνης ἀπεκδεχόμεθα. 6 Ἐν γὰρ Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ οὔτε περιτομή τι ἰσχύει, οὔτε ἀκροβυστία, ἀλλὰ πίστις δι' ἀγάπης ἐνεργουμένη.

7 Ἐτρέχετε καλῶς· τίς ὑμᾶς ἐνέκοψε τῇ ἀληθείᾳ μὴ πείθεσθαι; 8 Ἡ πεισμονὴ οὐκ ἐκ τοῦ καλοῦντος ὑμᾶς· 9 μικρὰ ζύμη ὅλον τὸ φύραμα ζυμοῖ· 10 ἐγὼ πέποιθα εἰς ὑμᾶς ἐν Κυρίῳ ὅτι οὐδὲν ἄλλο φρονήσετε· ὁ δὲ ταράσσων ὑμᾶς βαστάσει τὸ κρῖμα, ὅστις ἂν ᾖ.

11 Ἐγὼ δέ, ἀδελφοί, εἰ περιτομὴν ἔτι κηρύσσω, τί ἔτι διώκομαι; ἄρα κατήργηται τὸ σκάνδαλον τοῦ σταυροῦ. 12 Ὄφελον καὶ ἀποκόψονται οἱ ἀναστατοῦντες ὑμᾶς.

b 2 Tim. 4. 8.
c ch. 6. 15. Matt. 12. 50. 1 Cor. 7. 19. Col. 3. 11.
d 1 Cor. 9. 24. ch. 3. 1.
e ch. 1 6.
f 1 Cor. 5. 6, 7. & 15. 33. 2 Tim. 2. 17.
g 2 Cor. 2. 3. & 8. 22. ch. 1. 7.
h 1 Cor. 1. 23.
i 1 Cor. 5. 13. & 9. 19.

---

do. See S. Augustine's Epistle to S. Jerome on this subject, Epist. lxxxii. 20, vol. ii. p. 295, and note above on Acts xvi. 3, and above, note at end of chap. ii.

3. Μαρτύρομαι] I protest. See Acts xx. 26.

4. Κατηργήθητε ἀπό] " evacuati estis a." (Vulg.) Ye were reduced from a state of ἐνέργεια to one of ἀέργεια and ἀργία. Cp Rom. vii. 2. Ye have been made void from Christ. Ye have disfranchised yourselves. Καταργεῖν, a word peculiar to St. Luke (Luke xiii. 7, where see note) and to St. Paul, who uses it about twenty-seven times.

This state of ἀργία, to which they reduce themselves by seeking for Justification from the Law, is contrasted with the state of inner life and Christian fruitfulness described in v. 6, πίστις δι' ἀγάπης ἐνεργουμένη.

— δικαιοῦσθε] are justifying yourselves, are placing your hopes of Justification, in the Law.

— τῆς χάριτος ἐξεπέσατε] ye fell from grace. Observe the aorist. Ye fell, ipso facto, from grace when ye were seeking for Justification from the Law. εἰ κατὰ νόμον Ἰουδαϊσμοῦ ζῶμεν, ὁμολογοῦμεν χάριν μὴ εἰληφέναι. S. Ignatius (ad Magnes. 8).

5. Πνεύματι] by the Holy Spirit. We, by the operation of the Holy Ghost, wait from Faith for the hope (not of being justified, for we have already been justified by Faith, when we were baptized, see 1 Cor. vi. 11. Rom. v. 1. 9) which Justification holds out to us.

This is to be connected with what precedes, By seeking to be justified by the Law, ye would fall from the state of Grace and Favour in which ye were, and in which we are.

For we, by the Operation of the Holy Ghost, look forth from Faith (ἐκ πίστεως), as our foundation, and wait for the blessed hope (Tit. ii. 13), the hope laid up in heaven (Col. i. 5), as a fruit and reward of the Justification first conveyed to us when we put on Christ in our Baptism (Gal. iii. 27), and which receives fresh occasions of Sanctification by the daily renewing of the Holy Ghost (Tit. iii. 5), and which is consummated in the " new heavens and new earth wherein dwelleth Righteousness." 2 Pet. iii. 13.

Having received the earnest of the Spirit, and having Faith in God's promises, we wait for the life to come, which will be glorified in immortality and freedom from sin. Theodoret. See also Augustine de Spiritu, c. 56. 9, 10, vol. x. p. 354.

6. ἐνεργουμένη] working inwardly and effectually. See 1 Thess. ii. 13. 2 Thess. ii. 7. 2 Cor. i. 6; iv. 12. Rom. vii. 5. Col. i. 29. Eph. iii. 20. It has never a passive sense in the New Testament. See Fritz. on Rom. vii. 5.

7. Ἐτρέχετε καλῶς· τίς ὑμᾶς ἐνέκοψε] Ye were running well. Who drove you athwart from the course? Elz. has ἀνέκοψε, but ἐνέκοψε is the reading of the best authorities.

The metaphor seems to be derived from a Chariot Race, where one Car impinges upon another, and flings it aside from the course. Cp. 1 Thess. ii. 18. 1 Pet. iii. 7. ἐγκόπτω, incido, impedio, Gloss. Vet. ap. Labb. ἐγκόπτει = ἀναχαιτίζει, Suid.

Some suppose that the figure is derived from the act of breaking up a road, to obstruct progress upon it.

8. Ἡ πεισμονή] Your persuasion is not from Him Who called you, i. e. from God. You have been persuaded (you say) by the arguments of your new teachers; but this is a persuasion which has led you to be not persuaded of what is true, τῇ ἀληθείᾳ μὴ πείθεσθαι.

But still I entertain a hope that there is but little leaven among you, though it may (if not cast out) leaven the whole lump; and I am therefore persuaded in the Lord that you will be no otherwise minded than you were at first; and he who troubleth you will bear the condemnation (of having dissuaded you from the truth) whoever he may be.

9. μικρὰ ζύμη—ζυμοῖ] a little leaven leaveneth all the whole lump. St. Paul applies this same proverb to errors both in faith and in practice.

When he speaks of persons leavened, he means not only such as are lewd of life, tainted that way, but even such as are unsound in matters of religion. To the Corinthians he would have the incestuous person cast out with his leavened life (1 Cor. v. 6, 7); to the Galatians he presseth the same point against another kind (Gal. v. 3, 4), such as leavened the Gospel with Moses' ceremonies, and so corrupted the truth in religion (Gal. v. 9. 12); and them he would have cut off, both Corinthian and Galatian leaven; both must out. And mark, upon the same reason both, and in the very same words, that a little leaven doth not a little hurt (Gal. v. 9), but marreth the whole. Evil doctrine is against truth; evil life against walking in the truth; evil company will bring us to both; therefore away with them. Bp. Andrewes, iii. p. 306.

11. εἰ περιτομὴν ἔτι κηρύσσω] if I am preaching Circumcision— as some falsely allege that I am. Here is an answer to the objection that because he had circumcised Timothy (Acts xvi. 3) he must be an advocate for Circumcision.

12. Ὄφελον] See 1 Cor. iv. 8. 2 Cor. xi. 1. Winer, § 41, p. 270.

— καὶ ἀποκόψονται] A difficult passage. The best explanation, indeed the only one which seems to be admissible, is as follows;

These false Teachers accuse me of preaching Circumcision, which, if enforced, as they enforce it, is only a mutilation of the body. And then the Apostle exclaims, " Utinam etiam se ipsos castrarent!"

The sense is well expressed in the ancient commentary lately edited by Père Pitra, p. 88: " Si frivolam corporis excisionem bonum quid esse judicant, etiam integra membra genitalia sibi excidant, ut majora acquirant lucra, si carnis excisione juvari se existimant!"

The true interpretation may be arrived at by the following considerations:—

(1) The sense of the word ἀποκόπτεσθαι here used is 'mutilare seipsum.' See Arrian, Epictet. ii. 20, and Hesych. Γάλλος (Priest of Cybele) ὁ εὐνοῦχος, ὁ ἀπόκοπος, and especially the use of the word in the Septuagint Version of the Jewish Law (Deut. xxiii. 1, ἀποκεκομμένος), which affords a clue to the true sense of this passage.

(2) The almost universal consent of the Greek and Latin Fathers who have expounded this passage. See the Commentaries here of Chrys., Theodoret, Theophyl., Jerome, and Augustine, and a considerable degree of concurrence of modern Expositors. See Meyer, p. 211.

(3) A somewhat similar paronomasia in Phil. iii. 2, where St. Paul uses the word κατα-τομὴ, concision, in order to censure and condemn in strong and stern language the Judaistic enforcement of περι-τομὴ, circumcision.

(4) The insertion of the conjunction καὶ, even, intimating more to be done in the case of false Teachers than in that of the taught.

(5) We must remember also that the act of ἀποκοπὴ, or self-mutilation, abhorred as it is by us (blessed be God, through Christianity), was familiar to the Heathen, especially to the Galatians,—even as an act of Religion.

There was a peculiar propriety in a reference to such an act in this Epistle to the Galatians, acquainted as they were with the fanatical excesses of the Galli, or Priests of Cybele, who were excited by their religious zeal to mutilate themselves, ἀπο-

13 k Ὑμεῖς γὰρ ἐπ' ἐλευθερίᾳ ἐκλήθητε, ἀδελφοί, μόνον μὴ τὴν ἐλευθερίαν εἰς ἀφορμὴν τῇ σαρκὶ, ἀλλὰ διὰ τῆς ἀγάπης δουλεύετε ἀλλήλοις· 14 l ὁ γὰρ πᾶς νόμος ἐν ἑνὶ λόγῳ πεπλήρωται, ἐν τῷ, Ἀγαπήσεις τὸν πλησίον σου ὡς σεαυτόν. 15 Εἰ δὲ ἀλλήλους δάκνετε καὶ κατεσθίετε, βλέπετε μὴ ὑπὸ ἀλλήλων ἀναλωθῆτε.

k ch. 6. 2. 1 Pet. 2. 16. 2 Pet. 2. 19. Jude 4.
l Lev. 19. 18. Matt. 7. 12. & 19. 18, 19. & 22. 39. Rom. 13. 9. James 2. 8—11.

16 m Λέγω δὲ, Πνεύματι περιπατεῖτε, καὶ ἐπιθυμίαν σαρκὸς οὐ μὴ τελέσητε· 17 n ἡ γὰρ σὰρξ ἐπιθυμεῖ κατὰ τοῦ Πνεύματος, τὸ δὲ Πνεῦμα κατὰ τῆς σαρκός· ταῦτα γὰρ ἀλλήλοις ἀντίκειται, ἵνα μὴ ἃ ἂν θέλητε ταῦτα ποιῆτε· 18 o εἰ δὲ Πνεύματι ἄγεσθε, οὐκ ἐστὲ ὑπὸ νόμον.

m Rom. 6. 12. & 8. 1, 4, 12. & 13. 14. 1 Pet. 2. 11. n Rom. 7. 15, &c. o Rom. 6. 14, 15. & 8. 2.
p 1 Cor. 3. 3 & 6. 9. Eph. 5. 3, 5. Col. 3. 5. James 3. 14.

19 p Φανερὰ δέ ἐστι τὰ ἔργα τῆς σαρκὸς, ἅτινά ἐστι πορνεία, ἀκαθαρσία, ἀσέλγεια, 20 εἰδωλολατρεία, φαρμακεία, ἔχθραι, ἔρις, ζῆλος, θυμοὶ, ἐριθεῖαι, διχοστασίαι, αἱρέσεις, 21 q φθόνοι, φόνοι, μέθαι, κῶμοι, καὶ τὰ ὅμοια τούτοις· ἃ προλέγω ὑμῖν, καθὼς καὶ προεῖπον, ὅτι οἱ τὰ τοιαῦτα πράσσοντες βασιλείαν Θεοῦ οὐ κληρονομήσουσιν.

q Rev. 22. 15.

22 r Ὁ δὲ καρπὸς τοῦ Πνεύματός ἐστιν ἀγάπη, χαρὰ, εἰρήνη, μακροθυμία, χρηστότης, ἀγαθωσύνη, πίστις, πραΰτης, ἐγκράτεια· 23 s κατὰ τῶν τοιούτων οὐκ ἔστι νόμος. 24 t Οἱ δὲ τοῦ Χριστοῦ τὴν σάρκα ἐσταύρωσαν σὺν τοῖς παθήμασι καὶ ταῖς ἐπιθυμίαις. 25 u Εἰ ζῶμεν Πνεύματι, Πνεύματι καὶ στοιχῶμεν. 26 x Μὴ γινώμεθα κενόδοξοι, ἀλλήλους προκαλούμενοι, ἀλλήλοις φθονοῦντες.

r Eph. 5. 9. Phil. 1. 11. Col. 3. 12.
s 1 Tim. 1. 9.
t Rom. 6. 6. & 13. 14.
u ch. 2. 20.
x Phil. 2. 3.

VI. 1 Ἀδελφοὶ, ἐὰν καὶ προληφθῇ ἄνθρωπος ἔν τινι παραπτώματι, ὑμεῖς οἱ κόπτεσθαι, particularly in the Galatian city of Pessinus on Mount Dindymus, whence Cybelé was called Dindyméné. See Strabo, xii. p. 567, Ammian. Marcellin. xxii. 9, and particularly the poem of Catullus (lxiii.), almost unrivalled in the awfulness of its grandeur and the tenderness of its pathos, in which one of the votaries of this dreadful superstition pours forth the bitterness of his soul in remorse for his deed.

(6) The Apostle's meaning appears to be, Would that this example of the enthusiastic self-mutilation of your heathen priests the Galli might be imitated by these Judaizing deceivers, who are subverting you on the plea of religious zeal, and who are imposing on you Galatians, as necessary to your salvation, the rite of circumcision, which, when enforced as such, is as vain and injurious as the phrensied self-violation of the votaries of your heathen Goddess.

(7) But was not this a vindictive wish? No.

These Judaizers were enforcing circumcision, which had now become concision. (Phil. iii. 2, see note.) St. Paul desires that they would go further in their own case; that they, who in zeal for the Law are subverting the faith of those who believe the Gospel, would even (καὶ) become ἀποκεκομμένοι. Then what would be the result? A beneficial one for you Galatians, in comparison with their present treatment of you; and a good one also, comparatively, even for themselves. There would be more hope from their ἀποκοπὴ, ex-cision, than from their περι-τομὴ, or circumcision. There would be more hope of them, even if they imitated the Priests of Cybele in one particular characteristic, than if they continue to be votaries of the Law in their sense of it. For then, being ἀποκεκομμένοι, they would be excluded from the Jewish Congregation, according to the enactments of that very Jewish Law which they now desire to impose on you. (Deut. xxiii. 1.) Then they would begin to feel the rigour of that Law; then they would be ashamed of enforcing it on you; then they would be thankful to be freed from it themselves. Then there would be good hope, that they also would joyfully hail and accept the gracious liberty of the Gospel, and would be joined as sound members to the Body of Christ.

(8) There may be also a figurative and spiritual meaning in this word. St. Paul had been describing the Galatian Church as Christ's bride; St. Paul himself had espoused her to Christ, and watched over her with a godly jealousy (iv. 17; cp. 2 Cor. xi. 2). He desired that they who would beguile her from Christ, might be disabled in their attempts, by being, as it were, reduced to the condition of Oriental chamberlains (εὐνοῦχοι), and be incapacitated from doing harm, since they wished to seduce her from her plighted troth to the Divine Bridegroom.

— οἱ ἀναστατοῦντες ὑμᾶς] they who are subverting you. The word ἀναστατοῦν is properly applied to the hostile act of an army, assaulting, taking, and destroying a city, and uprooting its inhabitants and selling them into slavery. And by this word the Apostle intimates that the false teachers are rooting up the Galatians from the soil of their heavenly city, and enslaving them. See Chrys.

13. Ὑμεῖς γὰρ ἐπ' ἐλευθερίᾳ ἐκλήθητε] for ye were called for liberty. On this use of ἐπὶ see 1 Thess. iv. 7. And on the purport of the sentence compare above, v. 1, and below, 1 Cor. iii. 22, 23; vi. 12; vii. 23; ix. 19.

— μόνον μὴ τὴν ἐλευθερίαν] only use not your liberty for an occasion to the flesh, but by love serve one another.

On the ellipse of the verb before ἐλευθερίαν, see Winer, p. 526. Compare the proverb μηδὲν ἄγαν, 'Ne quid nimis.'

It is remarkable, that this precept of St. Paul, in its tripartite form, is adopted by St. Peter in his first Epistle, 1 Pet. ii. 16. See the note there. An honourable proof of that Apostle's generosity, and love of truth, and zeal for the salvation of souls. Cp. note above, at the end of the Second Chapter of this Epistle.

17. Πνεύματος] the supernatural grace of God, as throughout in this passage (see vv. 18. 22. 25), where operations are described which cannot be ascribed to man's spirit, but are due to the agency of God the Holy Ghost. See S. Irenæus, v. 10 and v. 11, and S. Augustine, who says (Serm. 128), "Thou hast the means of fighting against the flesh, for thy God is in thee;" and de Natura et Gratia, c. 67, vol. x. p. 411, where he refers to Rom. v. 5. See also Bp. Sanderson's remarks on the use of the word πνεῦμα here, vol. i. p. 428, who refers to John iii. 6 as the best explanation of it.

— ταῦτα γάρ] for these things. A, C, D, I, K have δὲ, but B, D*, E, F, G have γὰρ, and so Lachmann and Alford.

19. πορνεία] Etz. prefixes μοιχεία, which has not sufficient authority for insertion in the text.

20. φαρμακεία] the use of drugs for poisoning, witchcraft, and other illicit purposes. See Rev. ix. 21.

Cp. 2 Cor. xii. 20; and see Justin Martyr (Exhort. ad Græc. p. 40), who has ἔχθραι, ἔρεις, ζῆλος, ἐριθεῖαι.

The word ἐρίθεια is from ἔριθος, a labourer for hire (from root ἔρδω),

(1) a mercenary; and (2) one who hires himself to a cabal for party purposes: and therefore signifies, (3) a venal partizan; such as the factions of gladiators, and other ruffians hired by rival candidates at elections to intimidate the voters in the Roman forum.

Hence ἐρίθεια signifies venal partizanship. See Fritz., Excurs. ad Rom. ii. 8, and Ellicott here. It occurs 2 Cor. xii. 20. Rom. ii. 8. Phil. i. 16; ii. 3. James iii. 14. 16.

— αἱρέσεις] Observe, that strifes and divisions are here characterized by St. Paul as works of the flesh no less than fornication, uncleanness, and lasciviousness. Cp. 1 Cor. iii. 3.

22, 23.] See Bp. Sanderson's Sermons, i. pp. 424—447.

24. ἐσταύρωσαν] they crucified them (aorist); i. e. they nailed them to Christ's cross at Baptism, and "on this cross the Christian hangs all his life long." Augustine (Serm. 205).

Ch. VI. 1. ἐὰν κ. προληφθῇ ἄ. κ.τ.λ.] if a man be even taken πνευματικοὶ καταρτίζετε τὸν τοιοῦτον ἐν πνεύματι πραΰτητος, σκοπῶν σεαυτὸν, μὴ καὶ σὺ πειρασθῇς. 2 [a] Ἀλλήλων τὰ βάρη βαστάζετε, καὶ οὕτως ἀναπληρώσατε τὸν νόμον τοῦ Χριστοῦ. 3 [b] Εἰ γὰρ δοκεῖ τις εἶναι τι μηδὲν ὤν, ἑαυτὸν φρεναπατᾷ· 4 [c] τὸ δὲ ἔργον ἑαυτοῦ δοκιμαζέτω ἕκαστος, καὶ τότε εἰς ἑαυτὸν μόνον τὸ καύχημα ἕξει, καὶ οὐκ εἰς τὸν ἕτερον· 5 [d] ἕκαστος γὰρ τὸ ἴδιον φορτίον βαστάσει.

6 [e] Κοινωνείτω δὲ ὁ κατηχούμενος τὸν λόγον τῷ κατηχοῦντι ἐν πᾶσιν ἀγαθοῖς. 7 Μὴ πλανᾶσθε, Θεὸς οὐ μυκτηρίζεται· ὃ γὰρ ἐὰν σπείρῃ ἄνθρωπος, τοῦτο καὶ θερίσει· 8 [f] ὅτι ὁ σπείρων εἰς τὴν σάρκα ἑαυτοῦ ἐκ τῆς σαρκὸς θερίσει φθοράν· ὁ δὲ σπείρων εἰς τὸ πνεῦμα ἐκ τοῦ πνεύματος θερίσει ζωὴν αἰώνιον.

9 [g] Τὸ δὲ καλὸν ποιοῦντες μὴ ἐγκακῶμεν· καιρῷ γὰρ ἰδίῳ θερίσομεν, μὴ ἐκλυόμενοι. 10 [h] Ἄρα οὖν, ὡς καιρὸν ἔχομεν, ἐργαζώμεθα τὸ ἀγαθὸν πρὸς πάντας, μάλιστα δὲ πρὸς τοὺς οἰκείους τῆς πίστεως.

11 Ἴδετε πηλίκοις ὑμῖν γράμμασιν ἔγραψα τῇ ἐμῇ χειρί.

a 1 Thess. 5. 14. 1 John 4. 21.
b 1 Cor. 8. 2.
c 1 Cor. 11. 28. 2 Cor. 13. 5.
d Ps. 62. 12. Jer. 17. 10. & 32 19. Matt. 16. 27. Rom. 2. 6. & 14. 12. 1 Cor. 3. 8. 2 Cor. 5. 10. Rev. 2. 23. & 22. 12.
e 1 Cor. 9. 7, 11, 14.
f 2 Cor. 9. 6.
g 2 Thess. 3. 13.
h Eph. 2. 19. & 3. 15. 1 Tim. 5. 8. Heb. 3. 6. & 6. 10. 1 John 3. 13—19. & 5. 1. 3 John 5—8.

---

in any transgression, ye that are spiritual restore such an one This exhortation to others to recover and restore the penitent in a spirit of meekness, has a peculiar propriety at the close of this Epistle, as opening a door to them of return to their spiritual Father, and as assuring them of his parental tenderness and love. Cp. Hilary, in Ps. cxl.

2. Ἀλλήλων τὰ βάρη βαστάζετε] Bear ye one another's burdens. A comfortable assurance this to the Galatians, that he who thus addresses them was ready to bear their burdens. We are to support (βαστάζειν) one another's βάρη, as Christ bare our infirmities, τὰς νόσους ἡμῶν ἐβάστασε (Matt. viii. 17), and as He bare (ἐβάστασε) the cross (John xix. 17), and commands us to bear it (Luke xiv. 27).

3. εἶναι τι μηδὲν ὤν] to be something when he is nothing. ἐὰν δοκῶσι τὶ εἶναι μηδὲν ὄντες, Plato, Apol. p. 41. (Wetstein.) See above, on i. 7.

4. τὸν ἕτερον] the other, with whom he compares himself, as the Pharisee did with the Publican (Luke xviii. 11), in order to elevate himself by depressing him.

5. βαστάσει] shall bear his own burden (φορτίον), load, laid on his back. This word βαστάζειν is used four times in this Epistle; here, v. 10; vi. 2. 17, and only twice in the rest of St. Paul's Epistles, Rom. xi. 18; xv. 1.

But we may not lay on the shoulders of others, as the Pharisee did, φορτίζοντες ἀνθρώπους φορτία δυσβάστακτα (Luke xi. 46); nor can we shift the burden of our own sins on any other person. We cannot make the burden of our own sins lighter by imputing a heavier burden of sin to others. Praise of ourselves, whether it proceeds from our own lips or that of others, cannot lighten our burden; it may aggravate it. (Augustine.) We are not better because others may be worse.

Nor can we divest ourselves of our own personal responsibility by transferring the burden of our sins to a spiritual Guide. Every one must bear his own burden at the Great Day.

This precept in v. 5, ἕκαστος τὸ ἴδιον φορτίον βαστάσει, is to be taken together with that in v. 2, ἀλλήλων τὰ βάρη βαστάζετε, and a distinction is to be made between φορτία and βάρη, as was observed by an ancient Father, who says that every man's sins are his φορτία—laid upon his own back by his own act—and that we are not to bear the (φορτίον) burden of one another's sins by partaking in them, nor to call others to take part in bearing the burden of our sins. But Christ calls us to Himself, because we labour and are heavy laden by them, and exhorts us to take His light burden (φορτίον) upon us. (Matt. xi. 28—30.) Thus He converts our heavy burdens, which depress us to earth, into light wings, which waft us to heaven. The wings of birds are their weights, which they bear, and which bear them. Let thy soul have the weight of Christ's burden; "hæc sarcina non est pondus onerati, sed ala volaturi;" it has the pinions of peace, and the wings of charity, and will bear thee to heaven. Thus bear thy own weight, and it will bear thee.

But we must also bear one another's βάρη. Such a load is Poverty, and such a load also is Wealth. Poverty is the load of some, and Wealth is the load of others, perhaps the greater load of the two. It may weigh thee down to perdition. Bear the load of thy neighbour's poverty, and let him bear with thee the load of thy wealth. Thou lightenest thy load by lightening his. Thus bear one another's loads, and fulfil the law of Christ. Cp. Augustine (Serm. 164).

6. Κοινωνείτω] Let him who is taught in the Gospel communicate in all his worldly substance with his spiritual Pastor.

On the use of κοινωνεῖν (not active, 'contribuere,' but neuter, 'communicare') and κοινωνία, in the sense of communication of our worldly substance with others, see Phil. iv. 15. 2 Cor. viii. 4; ix. 13; and Chrys. and Theophyl. here, and the examples quoted by Wetstein.

A necessary precept for Gentile Christians. See on 1 Cor. ix. 6.

As to the duty of the People to provide adequate maintenance for their Ministers, see on 1 Cor. ix. 4—14.

— ὁ κατηχούμενος] orally instructed, catechized. See Luke i. 4. 1 Cor. xiv. 19. Rom. ii. 18.

7. Θεὸς οὐ μυκτηρίζεται] God is not mocked. Quoted, as a well-known saying, by S. Polycarp ad Phil. 5.

9. Τὸ δὲ καλὸν ποιοῦντες] But let us not faint in well-doing. See 2 Thess. iii. 13.

— ἐγκακῶμεν] So A, B, D*. Elz. has ἐκκακῶμεν. See on 2 Cor. iv. 1. 16.

11. Ἴδετε πηλίκοις ὑμῖν γράμμασιν ἔγραψα τῇ ἐμῇ χειρί] Mark, with what large letters I have written this Epistle to you with my own hand. Ἔγραψα is the epistolary aorist, and means, I write.

A memorable admonition, and doubtless intended to be very significant.

On this sentence it may be observed, that

(1) Ἴδετε is not to be translated ye see, but mark ye; and is an emphatic word, used to call attention to a remarkable fact, or noticeable object, or memorable precept. Compare its use above, v. 2, and particularly in John i. 29. 36. 47; xix. 5. 26; and in the Book of Revelation, vi. 2. 5. 8.

(2) πηλίκος means, 'how great,' 'how large.' See Zech. ii. 2, LXX. Heb. vii. 4. Cp. Theocr. iv. 55, ὁσσίχον ἐστὶ τὸ τύμμα, καὶ ἀλίκον ἄνδρα δαμάσδει.

(3) ὑμῖν, to you, is put in a remarkable place, between πηλίκοις and γράμμασιν, and before its verb ἔγραψα. Mark, with what large letters I have written to you, with my own hand. Thus St. Paul calls attention to the fact that he is now doing something special to them, the Galatians, which he did not do to others.

(4) γράμμασιν means characters traced in writing. Compare Æschyl. S. c. T. 429, χρυσοῖς δὲ φωνεῖ γράμμασιν, ΠΡΗΣΩ ΠΟΛΙΝ. See also ibid. v. 647, ὡς τὰ γράμματα λέγει, ΚΑΤΑΞΩ Δ' ΑΝΔΡΑ ΤΟΝΔΕ κ.τ.λ.

(5) ἔγραψα refers not only to the portion of the Epistle that follows, but to the whole Epistle, which was written by the Apostle with his own hand. Chrys., Jerome, Theodoret.

Indeed there would have been nothing noticeable in the circumstance that only a few lines of the Epistle were written in large letters with St. Paul's own hand.

(6) But the two circumstances to which he calls their attention are, that, contrary to the custom of those times in which authors usually dictated their productions to Secretaries, but did not write them with their own hand (see on Horat. 1 Epist. x. 49, "Hæc tibi dictabam," &c., and 1 Sat. x. 92, "I, puer, atque meo citus hæc subscribe libello"), and contrary to St. Paul's own previous practice and general intention, which was to dictate his Epistles to an amanuensis, and only to authenticate them with his own signature and Benediction at the close of the Epistle

12 ¹⁷Ὅσοι θέλουσιν εὐπροσωπῆσαι ἐν σαρκὶ, οὗτοι ἀναγκάζουσιν ὑμᾶς περι- ¹ Phil. 3. 18.
τέμνεσθαι, μόνον ἵνα μὴ τῷ σταυρῷ τοῦ Χριστοῦ διώκωνται· 13 οὐδὲ γὰρ οἱ

(see on 2 Thess. iii. 17), he took the pains of writing the whole of this present Epistle to the Galatians with his own hand.

(7) This was a circumstance which well deserved their attention.

Even when ordinary persons wrote any of their own productions with their own hands, it was thought worthy of record. Thus it is noted concerning Origen, that certain ἐπισημειώσεις prefixed to his works were ὁλόγραφοι, i. e. written entirely with his own hand. (See Euseb. vi. 24, with the note of Valesius.) The remarkable σημείωσις of S. Irenæus, referred to by Eusebius (v. 20), seems also to have been of this kind.

(8) It was therefore a fact which might well arrest the attention and excite the gratitude of the Galatians, that St. Paul, in the midst of his labours and sufferings for Christ, had found time and inclination to do for them, who had fallen away from their first enthusiasm for him, what he had not done for the Thessalonians, and what, as he had declared to the Thessalonians, he did not intend to do for other Churches, namely, to write to them an entire Epistle, and that not a short one, with his own hand.

He thus marked his solicitude for their spiritual welfare, and his affection for them, and also his sense of the importance of the subject on which he was writing in this Epistle.

(9) He also calls their attention to the fact that he writes this Epistle to them in large letters.

What was there noticeable in this circumstance? Why does he exhort them to observe it? Not, surely, in order that (as has been sometimes said) they might there see a proof of any infirmity or defect in him, such as weakness of eyesight or incompetency to write well.

Such an avowal on his part would not have been likely to give any weight to his exhortations, but might rather have furnished an occasion to the Galatians for treating his person and office with levity and disparagement. If (they might have said) he cannot write well, why does he write with his own hand? Why does he make an exception in our case? and why does he not write, as his custom is, by a secretary who can write well?

(10) But the reference to the largeness of the letters in which this Epistle was written, was doubtless designed to serve the same purpose as the reference to the fact that it was written in his own hand.

It was intended to confirm the inferences thence to be derived, viz. that the writer felt special love and anxiety for the persons to whom he writes, and laid special stress on the subject concerning which he writes.

In explanation then of this expression it is to be observed, that St. Paul's Epistles, which were written at his dictation by Secretaries (notarii, amanuenses), were probably written with rapidity, as was the case with those discourses which were taken down from the mouths of speakers in ancient times, and of which we find mention in Eusebius, vii. 29. Such notaries were in course of time regularly appointed to serve as officers of Christian Churches, and had stated ecclesiastical duties as such. (See the authorities in Bingham, iii. 13.) From the rapidity of their writing they were called ὀξύγραφοι and ταχύγραφοι. To them we owe the Acts of the primitive Martyrs, such as of S. Ignatius and S. Polycarp, still extant. Such notaries would not write in large characters, but in smaller ones to save time.

The Apostle might have spared himself much time and trouble if he had employed one of these amanuenses, or if he had written in such characters as they used.

But he would prove his special affection to the Galatians by writing in his own hand, and also by writing in large letters, which by their very appearance would afford visible demonstration to all who saw this Epistle (which was to be circulated among the Churches of Galatia, see i. 1) that he puts forth boldly and singly, in his own name and in his own hand, a solemn claim to be heard as "an Apostle," not of men, nor by man, but by Jesus Christ and God the Father (Gal. i. 1); and accordingly he does not associate any one's name with his own in the beginning of this Epistle; and that, though he writes this Epistle with vehemence and impetuosity, and with sudden bursts of astonishment and indignation mingled with affectionate appeals of almost maternal tenderness, and with moving exhortations and imperative mandates of paternal authority, yet that nothing that he has there written is to be ascribed to transitory impulse or momentary ebullition of feeling, but that all his words have been well weighed, that every syllable and every letter has been traced with his own hand with calm deliberation; and although he was charged with temporizing and vacillation by some, yet that the Galatians might see, even in the boldness, and firmness, and clearness of the characters with which he wrote, an indication of the vigour of authority and plainness of speech with which he delivers his message, and of his own constancy and courage in delivering it. Cp. Theodor. Mopsuest. (in Cramer, Caten. p. 90), who says that St. Paul, purposing to make an aggression on his adversaries in this Epistle, employed larger characters to show that he is not ashamed of himself, and does not shrink from what is said.

(11) But is there not something even deeper than this in the admonition, "Mark ye with what large letters I have written to you in my own hand?"

Probably there is. What was the message in this Epistle? what is its subject?

It may be summed up in those few words which the Apostle quotes from the prophetic declaration of the Old Testament (Hab. ii. 4) in chap. iii. 11, "The just shall live by Faith."

Justification by Faith in Christ, and not by the works of the Law, is the one doctrine which is the subject of this Epistle.

Now, in proclaiming this doctrine by the Prophet Habakkuk in the Old Testament, the Holy Spirit had used certain memorable words, to which (it is probable) the Apostle here alludes.

The prophet had said, "I will stand upon my Watch, and set me upon the tower (or rock), and will watch to see what He (the Lord) will say to me, and what I shall answer when I am reproved."

This was precisely St. Paul's condition when he wrote this Epistle. He, like the Prophet, had been reproved. His Epistle is apologetic. He had been obliged to mount his watch, to set himself upon his tower, and to deliver a message from God to the Galatians, who had now strayed from him, and who had been arrayed by his enemies against him.

And what was the answer of God to the Prophet?

The Lord answered me and said, "Write the Vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it."

Observe also that the Prophet is informed that the Vision is for an appointed time, which specially denotes the fulness of time (compare Gal. iv. 4), the time of the end, the time of the Gospel; and that its fulfilment is not to be immediate, that it is to be patiently waited for (compare Gal. v. 5), that at the end (or at the last) it shall speak and not lie; though it tarry wait for it, because it will surely come, and it will not tarry. Thus some distant accomplishment of the prophetic Vision was pre-announced to the prophet, and he was warned that his prophecy would not soon be exhausted.

What now was the message to the Prophet Habakkuk?

It was precisely the same message which the Apostle St. Paul afterwards delivered in this Epistle, and which he delivered in the very words of the Prophet Habakkuk (Hab. ii. 4. Cp. Gal. iii. 11), The Just shall live by his Faith.

This was the message which the Prophet was enjoined to write with his own hand; and which he was commanded to write in such large letters, that he might run that reads it.

(12) Therefore, lastly, when we consider that the same Holy Spirit Who had spoken by the Prophet spake by St. Paul, and that the words of the Holy Ghost to the Prophets do not die with them, but have also a meaning for the Apostles (as St. Paul here shows); and that St. Paul was an Apostle "not of men," nor through men, but through Jesus Christ, and God the Father; and that the one doctrine delivered in this Epistle is the same doctrine as that delivered by the Prophet Habakkuk, namely, the doctrine of Justification by Faith in Jesus Christ, Who had been plainly written forth before their eyes, and in them, — and this also as Crucified (see above, iii. 1); and that he quotes the Prophet's language as the exponent of that doctrine; and that this doctrine is described as a Vision that is for an appointed time, and to be tarried for, to be waited for; and that in the end it will speak and not lie; and that this doctrine is the root of the Gospel, as distinguished from the Law, may we not say, with reverence, that there was something of Divine direction even in the very act by which the Apostle made an exception to his usual practice in writing this Epistle; and that by the writing of it in his own hand, and also in the writing of it in large letters, he connected himself with the prophetic watchman when he was reproved; and that he fulfilled in a secondary sense a Divine prophecy, and complied with a Divine command, "Write the Vision and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it?" The Vision is for an appointed time, and in the end it will speak and not lie, "Behold, the Just shall live by Faith;" and that St. Paul calls attention to that identification, when he exhorts the Galatians in this solemn admonition at the close of περιτεμνόμενοι αὐτοὶ νόμον φυλάσσουσιν, ἀλλὰ θέλουσιν ὑμᾶς περιτέμνεσθαι, k Rom. 6. 6 ch. 2. 20. ἵνα ἐν τῇ ὑμετέρᾳ σαρκὶ καυχήσωνται. 14 k Ἐμοὶ δὲ μὴ γένοιτο καυχᾶσθαι, εἰ μὴ ἐν τῷ σταυρῷ τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, δι' οὗ ἐμοὶ κόσμος ἐσταύ-l 1 Cor. 7. 19. ch. 5. 6. Col. 3. 11. ρωται, κἀγὼ τῷ κόσμῳ. 15 l Ἐν γὰρ Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ οὔτε περιτομή τι ἐστὶν, οὔτε ἀκροβυστία, ἀλλὰ καινὴ κτίσις. 16 m Καὶ ὅσοι τῷ κανόνι τούτῳ στοιχή-m Ps. 125. 5. Rom. 2. 29. & 4. 12. ch. 3. 29. σουσιν, εἰρήνη ἐπ' αὐτοὺς καὶ ἔλεος, καὶ ἐπὶ τὸν Ἰσραὴλ τοῦ Θεοῦ.

n 2 Cor. 4. 10. & 11. 23—25. Col. 1. 24. 17 n Τοῦ λοιποῦ κόπους μοι μηδεὶς παρεχέτω· ἐγὼ γὰρ τὰ στίγματα τοῦ Ἰησοῦ ἐν τῷ σώματί μου βαστάζω.
18 Ἡ χάρις τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ μετὰ τοῦ πνεύματος ὑμῶν, ἀδελφοί· ἀμήν.

this Epistle, "Behold, with what large letters I have written to you with mine own hand. He that runs may read it; let all who read it run well" (Gal. v. 7); "let all who run, run by this rule." (See v. 16.)

15. ἐστίν] is. So A, B, C, D*, E, F, G.—Elz. ἰσχύει, which is a gloss.

16. κανόνι] The rule, or line of the course, on which the Christian is to run. See on 2 Cor. x. 13—16. The line or rule of faith here spoken of is that contained in vv. 14, 15, and, in one word, the doctrine of Justification by Faith in Christ.

— εἰρήνη ἐπ' αὐτοὺς καὶ ἔλεος] Peace be upon them and Mercy. This is the only place in the New Testament where εἰρήνη is placed before ἔλεος. See 1 Tim. i. 2. 2 Tim. i. 2. Tit. i. 4. 2 John 3. Jude 2.

— ἐπὶ τὸν Ἰσραὴλ τοῦ Θεοῦ] the Israel of God, which we are, as distinguished from the Judaizers who deceive you. See above, iv. 26.

17. κόπους μοι μ. π.] let no one trouble me, by alleging that I am a mere time-server, and preach Circumcision to some, and Christian Liberty to others (see v. 11); for I bear in my body the proofs of my loyalty to Christ in the scars and wounds I have received through the envy of the Judaizers for His sake, particularly at Lystra (Acts xiv. 19; cp. xv. 26), and from the Heathen at Philippi (xvi. 22, 23).

Let no one disturb me; for I am Christ's servant, soldier, and worshipper (see next note), engaged in Christ's service. He therefore that interrupts and disturbs me in my work, is guilty of an affront not to me only, but to my Master, Christ.

— ἐγὼ γὰρ τὰ στίγματα] for I bear in my body the marks of Jesus. Elz. has Κυρίου before Ἰησοῦ, but it is not in A, B, C*. I bear in my body the brands of Christ. An allusion to three ancient usages;

(1) of slaves, who were branded with the names of their masters.

(2) of soldiers, who wore the marks of the General whom they served.

(3) of votaries of Deities, whose names and emblems they bare on their bodies.

Ancient authorities on this subject may be seen, cited by Wetstein here, and in the present Editor's edition of the Apocalypse, Appendix G. Cp. note on Rev. xiii. 16.

So (says the Apostle here) I, the servant, soldier, and worshipper of Christ, my Master, Captain, and God, bear His marks imprinted on my body. "Christum igitur hic repræsentat ut Deum." Wetstein. Therefore let no one trouble me, for in disturbing me they are offending Him, Whose I am.

These 'stigmata' were the marks of the sufferings endured by St. Paul in Christ's service, and they proved his loyalty to Christ. "Apostolus stigmata voluit appellare quasi notas pœnarum de persecutionibus quas patiebatur." Augustine. This was specially true of the Apostle at this time, for not long before this he had been shamefully treated at Philippi and elsewhere. 1 Thess. ii. 2.

This was what Christ had promised at his Conversion. (Acts ix. 16.) "Sed," adds Aug., "omnes illæ tribulationes ei ad coronam victoriæ proficiebant." These scars on his body are proofs of his courage, and trophies of his victory. Chrysostom.

In a secondary sense, it may also perhaps be worthy of consideration, whether the Apostle, having been sealed by Christ with the sign of the cross at his baptism, does not here say that he bare the στίγματα of Christ; and (as has been remarked by Professor Blunt, Lectures, p. 136) there is something appropriate in this sense here, where the Apostle has been just speaking of Circumcision, and then of the Cross, and of the new creature. And then adds, "as many as walk by this Rule, the Rule of Christian Faith (as distinguished from the Levitical Law), professed by them at their Baptism, peace be on them, and upon the Israel of God;" i. e. on all the company of faithful people who are Israelites indeed, true children of God, by the faith of their Father Abraham.

18. μετὰ τοῦ πνεύματος ὑμῶν] with your spirit; in contradistinction to your flesh. Your false Teachers preach Circumcision in the flesh, and seek to make a fair show in the flesh (v. 12), and recall you back from spiritual life to a carnal state of death (iii. 3); but I exhort you to quicken the life which was begun in you when you received the circumcision of the Spirit, and to walk in the Spirit, and to do the works of the Spirit (v. 16; vi. 8), and to live in the Spirit (v. 25); and I pray that the Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ may be with your spirit.

This Epistle was an encyclic Epistle, addressed to "the Churches of Galatia."

Hence probably it is that there are no salutations to individuals at the close of this Epistle to the Galatians. It would have been invidious to specify only a few names among so many, and it would have been impossible to enumerate all.

The same observation applies to the two Epistles to the Corinthians (see 1 Cor. i. 2, and 2 Cor. i. 1), in which there are no salutations of individuals, and also to the Epistle to the Ephesians (see on Eph. i. 1), and to the General Epistles of St. James, St. Peter, St. John, and St. Jude.

INTRODUCTION

TO

ST. PAUL'S TWO EPISTLES TO THE CORINTHIANS.

I. On the Design, Contents, and Results of the Two Epistles to the Corinthians.

The two Epistles to the Corinthians afford remarkable specimens of the operation of Divine power, and love, working by the ministry of St. Paul, in overruling evil by good; and in making the designs of the Evil One into occasions for declaring the truth, and promoting the glory of Christ; and in converting local and temporary scandals and calamities into means of instruction and edification to the Church of every age.

This appears as follows:

(1) There were schisms at Corinth; religious dissensions and divisions, feuds and factions, under party-leaders (1 Cor. i. 11, 12). The Corinthian Church had written a letter to St. Paul, which he received a little while before he wrote this Epistle (1 Cor. vii. 1). In that letter they had put several questions to him concerning their own spiritual regimen; but it does not appear that they had made any mention in it of their own distracted condition. On the contrary, they seem to have gloried in their religious divisions, and to have been puffed up in behalf of one leader against another (1 Cor. i. 11; iii. 4. 22; iv. 6—8. 18). And he was left to learn the news of their divisions from some private persons—those of Chloe—probably by word of mouth (i. 11).

These divisions furnished the Apostle with an occasion for stating the principles, duty, and privileges of Church-Unity. See 1 Cor. xii. 12—27.

(2) The Greeks generally,—and especially the Corinthians, being exercised in human learning and secular eloquence and philosophy,—were proud of intellectual gifts. The Apostle hence took occasion to assert, by way of contrast, the transcendent excellency of that Divine wisdom in which he himself had been schooled, and the surpassing worth of the Cross of Christ which he had preached at Corinth (1 Cor. ii. 1—9), as the fundamental article of saving truth,—although it was a stumbling-block to the Jews, and to the Greeks foolishness (i. 23).

He was also constrained thereby to assert his own qualifications for revealing hidden mysteries, and for declaring supernatural truths by Divine Inspiration, not only with regard to the substance of what he so declares, but also as to the language in which he utters it (1 Cor. ii. 10—13).

(3) The Corinthians were guilty of sins of Impurity, for which their city was notorious. Hence the Apostle is led to remind them of their Christian obligations to Holiness, grounded

1. on their incorporation by Baptism into the mystical Body of Christ (1 Cor. vi. 15);

2. and on the consecration of their bodies into Temples of the Holy Ghost (1 Cor. iii. 16; vi. 19. 2 Cor. vi. 16);

3. on their redemption by Christ, so that they are not their own, but His (1 Cor. vii. 23); and are bound to glorify Him in their bodies, which are His (1 Cor. vi. 20); and

4. on the doctrine of the Resurrection of the Body, designed for a glorious Immortality (1 Cor. xv. 42—54).

(4) The Corinthians had been induced, in a vain conceit of superior knowledge (γνῶσις, 1 Cor. viii. 1), and in the indulgence of a carnal appetite, to eat meats that had been offered in sacrifice to the Heathen Idols of Corinth, although they knew those meats to have been so offered.

Hence St. Paul was constrained to lay down the principles which ought to regulate human conduct in the use of indifferent things,—i. e. of things neither prescribed nor prohibited by Divine or human authority. And he teaches, that many things not forbidden are to be foregone and forborne by Christians, from a charitable regard to the spiritual benefit of their brethren, even though they be weak (1 Cor. viii. 11—13); and that the edification of others, their fellow-members in Christ's Body, and the good of the whole Body, is to be the end aimed at by the faithful, in the use of things indifferent (1 Cor. x. 23—32).

(5) The Apostle had not claimed ministerial maintenance for himself during the eighteen months in which he had been resident at Corinth, but had worked for his bread with his own hands (Acts xviii. 3. 2 Cor. xi. 9; xii. 13, 14). And this act of forbearance on his part, as contrasted with that of other preachers (1 Cor. ix. 6), had been construed by some into a distrust, on his part, of his own Apostolic mission and authority.

He was thus induced to explain the reasons of his own forbearance in this respect; and he shows that it had been produced by considerations of regard for their edification; and he thence inculcates on them a similar regard for the spiritual welfare of others. And he inculcates with greater force, even because he himself had waived his own claim to sustenance from his flock, the sacred duty of all Christian People to provide adequate maintenance for their Pastors (1 Cor. ix. 7—15).

(6) There were many irregularities in the public assemblies of the Church at Corinth, in regard

1. to the attire of women;
2. to the Administration of the Holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

St. Paul took occasion therefrom to recall the attention of the Corinthians to first principles, as laid down in Holy Scripture and in the Law of Nature and of Reason, and as shown in the universal sense of mankind, and in Christian usage (1 Cor. xi. 16);

1. As to the true relation of woman to man; and the consequent difference to be maintained in regard to their attire; and then he proceeds to apply these principles to the question before him (1 Cor. xi. 3—16).

2. As to the second point, he points out the true principles of Reformation, whether in Doctrine or Discipline. He shows by his reasonings on this question, that when a degeneracy has ensued in either of the two, it is no part of Christian wisdom to destroy what has been abused; but that its proper office is to look back to the original institution and design, and to remove the abuse by restoring the use. This is what was done by St. Paul in his correction of the abuses which had crept into the Church of Corinth in the Administration of the Holy Communion (1 Cor. xi. 17—33). A noble example of genuine Reformation, for every age.

(7) The Corinthians were richly endowed with spiritual gifts (1 Cor. i. 4—7), particularly in speaking with Tongues. But they misused these gifts for occasions of vain-glorious and unprofitable self-display, and of unseemly rivalry and contention.

These abuses furnished St. Paul with an occasion for explaining the true use of supernatural gifts, particularly the gift of Tongues; and for stating what was its proper place in the circle of Christian graces; and also for laying down certain propositions of universal applicability (1 Cor. xii.—xiv.). Particularly, the Divine Apostle was thence led to give a necessary warning to the world, viz. that great spiritual gifts may co-exist with great moral depravity, especially with spiritual pride; and to declare, that no gifts or graces, spiritual or intellectual, are of any avail to those who possess them, unless they use them in a spirit of Charity; that is, of Love to God, and of Love to man in God. He thence proceeds to teach, that the sovereign grace of all Christian graces is Love, which he describes in such language as none could command who was not inspired by the Holy Spirit of Love (1 Cor. xiii.).

(8) A heinous sin had been committed at Corinth by one who appears to have had great influence there (1 Cor. v. 1). This sin had been connived at by the Corinthian Church. And though the Corinthians had written a letter to the Apostle concerning other matters (1 Cor. vii. 1), yet they had made no report to him there concerning this grievous scandal, or concerning the divisions among themselves, which were reported to him by others (1 Cor. i. 11; v. 1; xi. 18).

On the other hand, such was their spiritual blindness, that they were puffed up (1 Cor. v. 2), and imagined themselves to be in a safe and prosperous state; they were elated with a vain-glorious spirit of pride, presumption, and self-sufficiency, and were disposed to manifest an insubordinate and refractory temper of contemptuous disobedience to the Apostle's person and office, rather than to receive seasonable rebuke and salutary correction from him.

That enormous sin, and the indifference and even self-complacency with which it was viewed by the Corinthian Church, afforded St. Paul an opportunity of vindicating his own Apostolic Authority, and of exercising Spiritual Jurisdiction, and of exhibiting to the Corinthians, and to the Church of every age, the importance and necessity of Penitential Discipline, and the manner in which it ought to be exercised (1 Cor. v. 1—13. 2 Cor. ii. 3—8; vii. 8—12).

We have also here a strong proof of the truth of St. Paul's assertion, that he was invested with supernatural and miraculous powers for accrediting and avouching his claims (2 Cor. xii. 12).

If he had not been inspired by God, he would not have ventured to write to the Corinthians in the authoritative tone of stern reproof, censure, and condemnation, which he uses in these Epistles.

He would rather have sought to win their affections, and conciliate their favour, by smooth speeches.

If, also, the Corinthians had not been convinced, on their part, of his Divine mission, they,—being filled with spiritual self-conceit, and beguiled by the flatteries of vain-glorious teachers hostile to the Apostle,—would have scorned to receive, as they did, the first Epistle of St. Paul, in which they are so severely condemned. They would have refused to comply with its injunctions (2 Cor. ii. 3—8; vii. 8—12). They would not have read it publicly as Canonical Scripture, as the inspired Word of God[1].

(9) Again: the Evil Spirit had tempted some persons, and parties of considerable influence at Corinth, to cavil at and censure St. Paul, and to disparage his person and office, and they had excited a turbulent spirit of disaffection and rebellion against him (1 Cor. iv. 3; ix. 3. 2 Cor. iii. 1; v. 12; x. 2—10).

The Apostle is therefore constrained to state his own claims to respectful reverence and obedience. He is forced to record his own sufferings for the Gospel, and to divulge his own revelations from heaven (2 Cor. xi. 16—33; xii. 1—6).

He is also led to explain the reason, why he was buffeted by a visible bodily infirmity, his "thorn in the flesh" (2 Cor. xii. 7), which seems to have been turned by some envious persons into an occasion for censorious reflections upon him (2 Cor. xii. 10. Cp. Gal. iv. 14).

If St. Paul had not been resisted and vilified by those parties, whom the Enemy of Christ and of the Church had stirred up to thwart him at Corinth, and unless the Apostle had been conscious that the cause of the Gospel would be injured and imperilled, if he suffered their aspersions to escape without refutation, he would never have penned that noble Apology of himself, in the Second Epistle to the Corinthians (2 Cor. xi. xii.).

He did not praise himself willingly; but that Vindication of himself was extorted from him. His enemies compelled him to resort to what he called the foolishness of boasting (2 Cor. xi. 17; xii. 11). This is evident from the fact, that though these heavenly Visions to which he there refers had been vouchsafed to him fourteen years before (2 Cor. xii. 2), and though he had been personally resident at Corinth for eighteen months (Acts xviii. 11), yet he had never as yet communicated to the Corinthians any intimation of those his "Visions and Revelations from the Lord." Hitherto he had hid them as a profound secret treasured up in the recesses of his own heart. They were wrung from him by the cavils of others. And he shows, from his own sufferings, inflicted by his enemies, that afflictions are occasions and instruments conducive to the manifestation of God's glory, and to the good of His Church, and to the eternal blessedness of the Saints[2].

If Satan had not stirred up those evil men against the Apostle, the Church would never have had the privilege of knowing how much St. Paul suffered for the Gospel, and how much was revealed to him by Christ.

Thus the censures of his adversaries have been made by God to redound to his praise. Thus the arts of the Enemy endeavouring to undermine his Apostolic authority, and to mar his Apostolic work, have been made instrumental in establishing the credit of this great master-builder in Christ, and of consolidating the fabric which he built.

Thus also the arts of Satan, who had the power of death (Heb. ii. 14), and is the Prince of the power of the air (Eph. ii. 2), and of darkness, and who desires to drown men's souls and bodies in the lake of fire (Rev. xix. 20), have been made, in God's hands, to be instrumental in revealing to the faithful the blessedness of Paradise, to which the souls of those who die in the Lord are conveyed immediately on their dissolution from the body; and also the everlasting glories of the third Heaven, in which the faithful will have their perfect consummation and bliss, both in body and soul, for evermore. (See note on 2 Cor. xii. 2—4.)

[1] Cp. Clemens Romanus, Ep. ad Cor. i. 47.

[2] On this point see further below, the Introduction to the Second Epistle to the Corinthians.

(10) Lastly: the Arch-enemy of God and man laboured to shake the foundation of the faith in the great article of Christianity, the doctrine of Christ's Resurrection from the Dead, and of the universal Resurrection of the Body. He had too much success at Corinth, where indulgence in the lusts of the flesh, and the speculations of a secular philosophy, had conspired to prejudice many against the reception of this doctrine.

Hence St. Paul was prompted and constrained to write in its defence. He has vindicated and enforced it with such divine power, courage, and eloquence, as to silence for ever those who gainsay it. He was enabled by the Holy Spirit not only to declare the truth of a future Resurrection, but also to describe it. Behold I show you a mystery (1 Cor. xv. 51). He enables us to hear the sound of the last trump; and reveals the dead rising from their graves, and the Saints clothed with their glorified bodies, and all earthly powers subjected to Christ, and Satan and Death put under His feet (1 Cor. xv. 26. 55—57).

Thus the devices of the evil One sowing tares in the field of God's husbandry (1 Cor iii. 9), are made to recoil on himself. His dissemination of error in regard to the doctrine of the Resurrection has been made subservient to the declaration of its truth, and to a manifestation of the future discomfiture of Satan himself, and of the full and final triumph of Christ.

Thus Almighty God has taught the Church by signal examples, in these Epistles of St. Paul, to elicit good from evil; to make the prevalence of Schism to be ministerial to her confirmation in Unity, and even the diffusion of Heresy to be subservient to the propagation of the Faith.

Thus also He has comforted and cheered her with the joyful assurance, that all things work together for good to those that love God (Rom. viii. 28); that the worst evils will hereafter be made occasions of the greatest good; and that all the waters of the flood, with which the Enemy now seeks to overwhelm her, will make glad the City of God (Ps. xlvi. 4).

II. On the Date, of Time and Place of the First Epistle to the Corinthians.

The First Epistle was written to the Corinthians at Ephesus in the spring of A.D. 57.

This appears from the following evidence;

I. It was written at Ephesus.

1. St. Paul says (1 Cor. xvi. 19), "The Churches of Asia salute you." Ephesus was the capital of the Asia of the New Testament.

2. "Aquila and Priscilla salute you" (1 Cor. xvi. 19). They were at Ephesus during the time in which the Epistle was written. See Acts xviii. 18. 26; and compare also note on Rom. xvi. 3, 4, where Aquila and Priscilla are said to have laid down their necks for St. Paul's life, i. e. probably in his perils at Ephesus.

3. He says also in this Epistle, "I will tarry at Ephesus until Pentecost" (1 Cor. xvi. 8).

4. Accordingly, we find that in the third century Origen takes it for granted that this Epistle was written from Ephesus. See his περὶ εὐχῆς, c. 31, where, commenting on 1 Cor. v. 4, he says that Paul when writing those words was associated not only with the Ephesians (i. e. those with whom he was present in body), "but also with the Corinthians," with whom he was in spirit.

II. The First Epistle to the Corinthians was written in the spring of A.D. 57.

This may be shown thus:—

1. At the Pentecost of the year A.D. 58, St. Paul was at Jerusalem, and was there arrested and was sent to Cæsarea, and after two years' detention at Cæsarea was sent to Rome.

This appears from what has been already stated in the Chronological Synopsis prefixed to the Acts of the Apostles.

In the beginning of that year and the end of the preceding one, he had been for the second time at Corinth, where he spent three months (Acts xx. 3), and which he quitted early in A.D. 58, and proceeded thence to Macedonia, where he was at Easter in that year (Acts xx. 6), and thence came, by Troas and Miletus, to Cæsarea and to Jerusalem for the Feast of Pentecost (fifty days after Easter) in the same year (Acts xx. 6—12).

2. It is clear from the language of the First Epistle to the Corinthians, that St. Paul had been already once at Corinth. See 1 Cor. ii. 1, 2. "I, brethren, when I came unto you, came not with excellency of speech." Compare also 1 Cor. ix. 2, where he speaks of the Corinthians as the "seal of his Apostleship," and reminds them that he had preached the Gospel to them without charge (1 Cor. ix. 12—15. Cp. 2 Cor. xi. 9).

It is also evident from the First Epistle, that St. Paul intended to visit Corinth again soon after he had written it. See 1 Cor. iv. 19: "I will come to you shortly, if the Lord will;" and 1 Cor. xvi. 5: "I will come to you when I shall have passed through Macedonia, for I am now intending to pass through Macedonia." See also 1 Cor. xi. 34: "The rest will I set in order when I come."

Many circumstances noticed in the Epistle, viz. the growth of feuds and factions at Corinth (1 Cor. i. 12; iii. 4); the occurrence of many grave questions of doctrine and discipline, concerning which the Corinthians had sent a deputation with a letter to St. Paul (vii. 1) to consult him,—questions with which he deals in a considerable portion of this First Epistle (ch. vii.—xii.),—intimate that St. Paul had not been personally present at Corinth for some considerable length of time before it was written.

Thus we are led to the conclusion, that the First Epistle to the Corinthians was written between two visits to Corinth, but probably, after a longer interval from the former than from the latter visit.

3. If we now turn to the Acts of the Apostles, we shall find that St. Paul was at Corinth twice. His former visit is described in Acts xviii. 1—11. It lasted at least a year and six months (xviii. 11—18). Thence, after a short visit to Jerusalem, he came to Ephesus, where he spent three years (Acts xx. 31).

He then left Ephesus and came through Macedonia, and paid another visit to Corinth, where he remained (as already said) three months (Acts xx. 3).

Thence he sailed, at the beginning of A.D. 58, in his way to Jerusalem.

The purpose of his visit to Jerusalem was to carry the alms he had collected for the poor Christians at Jerusalem (Acts xxiv. 17), and which had been contributed by the Churches of Galatia, Macedonia, and Achaia (1 Cor. xvi. 1. Rom. xv. 26).

These circumstances tally exactly with what has been already deduced from the First Epistle.

It was at Ephesus that he wrote that Epistle. See above, I. 1.

In that Epistle he says that he intends to remain at Ephesus till Pentecost (1 Cor. xvi. 8).

He also says in that Epistle that he will shortly come to Corinth through Macedonia (1 Cor. xvi. 5).

He says further, that he hopes to remain at Corinth during the ensuing winter (1 Cor. xvi. 6).

These words, written before a Pentecost (1 Cor. xvi. 8), must have been written after the winter preceding it; i. e. they must have been written in spring.

He also incites the Corinthians to make a collection of alms for the poor Saints at Jerusalem (1 Cor. xvi. 1—3), and intimates his own readiness to go with those alms to Jerusalem (1 Cor. xvi. 3).

Thus the visit of which St. Paul speaks as shortly about to be paid by him to Corinth (1 Cor. xvi. 5), is shown to be the same as that which he did pay at the close of A.D. 57, and which lasted three months (Acts xx. 3), and after which he passed through Macedonia, where he was at Easter, A.D. 58, and went with the collection of alms from Macedonia and Achaia to Jerusalem, where he arrived at the ensuing Pentecost in that year.

The First Epistle to the Corinthians was therefore written after the winter of A.D. 56, and before the Pentecost of A.D. 57; i. e. it was written in the spring of A.D. 57, i. e. about the Passover of that year.

4. This result serves to illustrate the contents of the Epistle, and is also illustrated by them.

The reference in the Epistle to the True Passover,—"Christ our Passover is sacrificed" (1 Cor. v. 7),—the only passage in St. Paul's Epistles, except Heb. xi. 28, where the word πάσχα occurs, gains in force and beauty from the chronological coincidence.

The allusion to leaven (1 Cor. v. 6—8), the exhortation to "keep the feast," and to be spiritually "unleavened" (1 Cor. v. 8), receives additional significance from the same consideration; as is suggested by the adoption of these words of the Apostle into the Ritual of the Church in her Paschal office.

St. Paul's exhortations to consider the true meaning and design of the Holy Eucharist (1 Cor. xi. 18—34) were very appropriate at the Anniversary of its Institution. His allusion to the Exodus of the Israelites from Egypt, and their passage through the Red Sea, "figuring Holy Baptism;" and the exposition of the typical character of that deliverance (1 Cor. x. 1—11), had a happy connexion with the annual commemoration of the sacrifice on the cross, of which these historical Events were figurative adumbrations; and would have been read at that season with especial profit and delight by all at Corinth who had passed, as it were, from the spiritual Ante-chapel of the Law into the inner shrine of the Gospel, and from the oblation of Levitical sacrifices to a participation in Evangelical Sacraments. And of all the Easter Homilies ever delivered on the great Anniversary of Christ's Resurrection, none has been more effectual in confirming the faith, comforting the heart, quickening the hope, and invigorating the life of the Universal Church, than that glorious Sermon on the Resurrection of the Body, which was preached to the Church of Corinth when she first received this Epistle, and has ever since sounded in the ears of Christendom, in the public reading of the New Testament; and which has a deep and solemn tone, bearing with it thoughts of holy sadness, mingled with religious joy, for the English reader, who hears its sublime language in the Office for the Burial of the Dead.

III. The question,—whether St. Paul had been more than once at Corinth, before he wrote the two Epistles to the Corinthians, may be reserved for the Introduction to the Second Epistle.

ΠΡΟΣ ΚΟΡΙΝΘΙΟΥΣ Α΄.

I. [1] ΠΑΥΛΟΣ, [a] κλητὸς ἀπόστολος Χριστοῦ Ἰησοῦ διὰ θελήματος Θεοῦ, καὶ [b] Σωσθένης ὁ ἀδελφὸς, [2] [c] τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ τοῦ Θεοῦ τῇ οὔσῃ ἐν Κορίνθῳ, [d] ἡγιασμένοις ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ, κλητοῖς ἁγίοις, σὺν πᾶσι τοῖς ἐπικαλουμένοις τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐν παντὶ τόπῳ αὐτῶν τε καὶ ἡμῶν· [3] [e] Χάρις ὑμῖν καὶ εἰρήνη ἀπὸ Θεοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῶν, καὶ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.

[4] [f] Εὐχαριστῶ τῷ Θεῷ μου πάντοτε περὶ ὑμῶν, ἐπὶ τῇ χάριτι τοῦ Θεοῦ τῇ a Rom. 1. 1. Gal. 2. 7, 8.

b Acts 14. 17.
c John 17. 19. Acts 9. 14. 21. & 15. 9. & 22. 16. Rom. 1. 7. Eph. 1. 1. 2 Tim. 1. 9. & 2. 22. Jude, ver 1.
d ver. 30. ch. 6. 9, 11.

John 7. 17—19. Acts 15. 9. & 26. 18. Eph. 5. 26. e Rom. 1. 7. Eph. 1. 2. f Rom. 1. 8.

Ch. I. 1. κλητός] called. See Rom. i. 1. His calling by Christ is stated, in order—

1. To establish his authority as equal to that of the other Apostles called by Christ on earth. Therefore his office was not to be disparaged by the Corinthians. He was "called," or had a vocation from Christ to be an Apostle, as they were called or had a vocation as Saints.

2. To show that what he claimed, he claimed not in his own name, but in that of Christ.

— Σωσθένης ὁ ἀδελφός] Sosthenes our brother. If Sosthenes is the same person as he who is mentioned in Acts xviii. 17, as is probable (see note there, and Theodoret), there would be a special reason why he should be associated with St. Paul in addressing this Epistle to the Corinthians. The name of Sosthenes, formerly a chief of the Synagogue at Corinth, would have weight against the Judaizing party who undermined the Apostle's authority in that City. (2 Cor. xi. 22.)

2. τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ—κλητοῖς ἁγίοις] to the Church of God—called, and holy. Ἅγιοι, sancti, the proper idea of which is separation from a common to a holy use. As He Who called you is holy, so be ye, who have been called by Him, holy also. (1 Pet. i. 15.)

Since every one who is called and baptized is thereby separated from the world who are not so, and though the work of grace be not perfectly wrought, yet when means are used, without something appearing to the contrary, we ought to presume the good effect. Therefore all such as have been received into the Church may be in some sense called holy. Bp. Pearson (on the Creed, Art. ix.).

The Corinthians are here called a Church of God, and holy, though they had among them (as this Epistle shows) schisms, and heresies, and grave errors in practice. (See i. 2; iii. 3; v. 1; vi. 6; xv. 12.) The field was still God's field, though overgrown with tares. (See on Matt. xiii. 26—38.) An important caution for those who fondly hope to see a perfect Church on earth, or forsake the communion of the Church because it is not free from imperfection. Cp. S. Jerome adv. Lucifer. ad fin., and Hooker, iii. 1 and v. 68.

— τῇ οὔσῃ] to the Church that exists at Corinth. This designation ἡ οὖσα bespeaks more settled establishment than had been predicated of any religious society, to which the Apostle had as yet written; and it is used in both the Epistles to the Corinthians, to whom he had preached in person a year and a half. See on 1 Thess. i. 1.

— ἐν Κορίνθῳ] in Corinth. For a description of Corinth at this time, see note on Acts xviii. 1. The character of the inhabitants at this time is briefly drawn by Cicero (de leg. Agrar. ii. 32) in terms which illustrate the topics handled in this Epistle by St. Paul: "Corinthii non minùs lasciviâ, quàm opulentiâ et philosophiæ studio insignes." As to the first of these characteristics, it was even made by them a part of their Religion in the worship of Aphrodité, in whose Temple were more than a thousand ἱερόδουλοι, ἑταῖραι, devoted to her impure service. (Strabo, viii. p. 580, A.) See the full historical collections in Wetstein, p. 102, which he sums up thus, "Ex his planiùs intelligimus quæ Apostolus in Sophistas et sophismata contra Resurrectionem mortuorum, in scortationem et incestum, denique in divites avaros Corinthiis scripsit;" and cp. Meyer, p. 1, who recites other more recent authorities; and Howson, i. 489—495; ii. 23. 187; and A. P. Stanley's Introduction to the Epistle, 1—18.

— ἡγιασμένοις] to persons sanctified—an epexegesis or expansion of the word ἐκκλησίᾳ, Church, that goes before. A church in its corporate character is regarded as holy, and its individual members are considered as sanctified, solemnly set apart, and dedicated to God.

The words ἡγιασμένοις ἐ. Χ. Ἰ. are placed before τῇ οὔσῃ ἐν Κορίνθῳ in some MSS.; but after them in A, D, I, and also in ℵ (Cod. Sinait.).

— σὺν πᾶσι] together with all who call on the Name of our Lord Jesus Christ. This Epistle, and the Second to the Corinthians, are addressed not only to the inhabitants of Corinth, but to the Churches of Achaia generally. (See 2 Cor. i. 1.)

Hence there are no salutations of individuals at their close. A similar observation applies to the Epistle to the Galatians, and to the Ephesians. See Gal. vi. 18.

— ἐν παντὶ τόπῳ αὐτῶν τε καὶ ἡμῶν] in every place, theirs and ours. So Vulg., "in omni loco ipsorum et nostro." So Syriac and Arabic. For, though they are separated from us (i. e. from you and me) by the diversity of place, yet, wherever they are, they are united to us by a community of Faith in the One Lord Jesus Christ, whose name we adore with them. An intimation to them that they ought to be at peace and in love, not only among themselves and with the Apostles, but with all Christians throughout the world. Chrysostom.

This expression is also a proof that St. Paul's Epistles were meant for the general use of other Churches besides those to whom they were originally sent and inscribed. See Col. iv. 16. 1 Thess. v. 27.

He also thus shows that all particular Churches make together One Universal Church throughout the World. Origen [1].

Some Expositors connect αὐτῶν and ἡμῶν with Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ; but this seems to be a less natural combination.

4, 5. Εὐχαριστῶ—ἐν παντὶ ἐπλουτίσθητε] He begins with

[1] In the Catena published by Dr. Cramer, Oxon. 1841. This valuable Catena, edited for the first time by Dr. Cramer, from a MS. in the imperial library at Paris (No. 227), supplies many observations from Origen and Cyril, and other ancient Fathers, and will be frequently cited in the following notes.

The initials A. V. R. which will be found in the following notes on these two Epistles to the Corinthians, and on the Epistle to the Romans, designate the "Authorized Version Revised by Five Clergymen. Lond. 1858."

δοθείσῃ ὑμῖν ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ, [5] [g] ὅτι ἐν παντὶ ἐπλουτίσθητε ἐν αὐτῷ, ἐν παντὶ λόγῳ καὶ πάσῃ γνώσει, [6] [h] καθὼς τὸ μαρτύριον τοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐβεβαιώθη ἐν ὑμῖν, [7] [i] ὥστε ὑμᾶς μὴ ὑστερεῖσθαι ἐν μηδενὶ χαρίσματι, ἀπεκδεχομένους τὴν ἀποκάλυψιν τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, [8] [k] ὃς καὶ βεβαιώσει ὑμᾶς ἕως τέλους ἀνεγκλήτους ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ. [9] [l] Πιστὸς ὁ Θεὸς, δι' οὗ ἐκλήθητε εἰς κοινωνίαν τοῦ Υἱοῦ αὐτοῦ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν.

[10] [m] Παρακαλῶ δὲ ὑμᾶς, ἀδελφοὶ, διὰ τοῦ ὀνόματος τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, ἵνα τὸ αὐτὸ λέγητε πάντες, καὶ [n] μὴ ᾖ ἐν ὑμῖν σχίσματα, ἦτε δὲ κατηρτισμένοι ἐν τῷ αὐτῷ νοὶ καὶ ἐν τῇ αὐτῇ γνώμῃ.

[11] Ἐδηλώθη γάρ μοι περὶ ὑμῶν, ἀδελφοί μου, ὑπὸ τῶν Χλόης, ὅτι ἔριδες ἐν ὑμῖν εἰσι. [12] [o] Λέγω δὲ τοῦτο, ὅτι ἕκαστος ὑμῶν λέγει, Ἐγὼ μέν εἰμι Παύλου, ἐγὼ δὲ Ἀπολλῶ, ἐγὼ δὲ Κηφᾶ, ἐγὼ δὲ Χριστοῦ. [13] Μεμέρισται ὁ Χριστός;

g ch. 12. 8. 2 Cor. 8. 7. Col. 1. 9.
h ch. 2. 1. 2 Tim. 1. 8.
i Phil. 3. 20. Tit. 2. 13.
k 1 Thess. 3. 13. & 5. 23. Col. 1. 22. 1 ch. 10. 13. 1 Thess. 5. 24. John 15. 4. 1 John 1. 3. l Rom. 12. 1, 16. & 15. 5. 2 Cor. 5. 20. & 6. 1. & 10. 1. Gal. 4. 12. Eph. 4. 1. Phil. 2. 2. & 3. 15, 16. Philem. 9, 10. 1 Pet. 2. 11. & 3. 8.
n ch. 11. 18. & 12. 25. Matt. 9. 16. Mark 2. 21. John 7. 43. & 9. 16. & 10. 19.
o John 1. 42. Acts 18. 24. ch. 3. 4. & 16. 12.

---

thanksgiving for their rich abundance in spiritual gifts and graces from God, and afterwards proceeds to reprove them for their misuse of those gifts and graces by vain-glorious ostentation and uncharitable rivalry (viii. 1—11; xiv. 26).

— ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ] in Christ Jesus; in whom you were incorporated at your baptism.

— λόγῳ] language,—prophecy and tongues. Cp. 2 Cor. viii. 7.

6. καθὼς τὸ μαρτύριον—ἐν ὑμῖν] according as the testimony concerning Christ, that is, the preaching and profession of the Gospel (see ii. 1), was established in and among you by spiritual gifts and by miracles. Chrys., Theodoret, and Bengel.

7. χαρίσματι] spiritual gift. Χάρισμα is to be distinguished from χάρις,—χάρισμα is a special gift to be used for general edification, χάρις is grace generally for personal sanctification. Tongues, Miracles, Healing are χαρίσματα. Χάρις is given in order that χαρίσματα may be rightly used. On the continuance of charismata in the Christian Church, see Euseb. v. 7.

— τὴν ἀποκάλυψιν] the Revelation. He so calls it, δεικνὺς ὅτι πᾶν (read ἐὰν or κἂν) μὴ ὁρᾶται (Χριστὸς), ἀλλ' ἔστι, καὶ πάρεστι, καὶ μὴν καὶ τότε φανήσεται. Origen.

8. ἀνεγκλήτους ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ] so as to be unblameable in the day. Compare the expressions διδάσκειν σοφόν, αὐξάνειν μέγαν, to teach a man so as to become wise, to increase him so as to be great. Matth. G. G. § 414. 3. Kühner, § 477. 2. Cp. below, 2 Cor. iii. 6, ἱκάνωσεν ἡμᾶς διακόνους, and Rom. viii. 29, προώρισε συμμόρφους, He foreordained us to be conformed. This is called by grammarians a proleptic use of the adjective.

10. ἵνα τὸ αὐτὸ λέγητε—νοὶ—γνώμῃ] that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you, and that ye be perfected in the same mind. These sentiments are expressed almost in the same words by an Apostolic Father, showing his acquaintance with this Epistle: ἵνα ἐν μιᾷ ὑποταγῇ ἦτε κατηρτισμένοι τῷ αὐτῷ νοὶ, καὶ τῇ αὐτῇ γνώμῃ, καὶ τὸ αὐτὸ λέγητε πάντες. Ignatius (ad Ephes. 2).

— νοὶ καὶ γνώμῃ] mind, and judgment; "νοὶ, intus in credendis; γνώμῃ, sententiâ prolatâ, in agendis." Bengel.

On the form of the substantive Genitive νοὸς and Dative νοὶ, used by St. Paul alone in the New Testament, see Winer, § 8, p. 59. The more usual Greek forms are νοῦ and νῷ.

11. ὑπὸ τῶν Χλόης] by those of Chloe.

(1) Why does St. Paul refer to persons as his informants who might be exposed to obloquy from the Corinthians on account of these accusations, and might be disconcerted at finding themselves thus placed publicly in opposition to the powerful members of the communion to which they belonged?

(2) Who were these persons called here οἱ Χλόης?

There was, doubtless, good reason for this mention. St. Paul practises a remarkable reserve and delicacy with regard to names. In this Epistle he never specifies the name of the person who gave him so much grief, nor of any of his own opponents at Corinth. There must, therefore, have been good ground for the mention of the name, that of a woman, here specified.

In order to escape the imputation of giving credence to hearsay reports, and of encouraging anonymous allegations, the Apostle would be desirous to state the authority on which his censure was grounded. But he would hardly have ventured to do so without the consent of the parties themselves who gave him the information.

It seems probable, therefore, that these parties who had brought the information were present with him when he wrote the Epistle, and had consented to this mention of their names,—a mention sufficiently precise to secure credence, and yet sufficiently general to avoid provocation. Observe the Apostle's prudence (says Origen), he does not specify any single person, but an entire household, in order that he might not render them hostile to his informant.

The word ἐδηλώθη seems to intimate oral communication on their part; and this is confirmed by the fact that the information is not represented as coming from Chloe herself, the mistress of the household, but from οἱ Χλόης, members of her family. (Syriac and Arabic Versions.)

From this public mention of Chloe's household in this Epistle, it may be suggested that she may have been at Corinth what Lydia was at Philippi (Acts xvi. 14. 40), and that a Christian Congregation assembled in her house (cp. Rom. xvi. 5), and that she herself may have had an official position in the Church. Cp. note on Acts xviii. 18. Rom. xvi. 1.

It is not unlikely that the persons called οἱ Χλόης had come from Corinth as the bearers of the questions from the Corinthians themselves (vii. 1), and that they were entrusted with the duty of communicating between the Corinthian Church and the Apostle, and that the information which they gave, and to which he here refers, was elicited in reply to his oral inquiries concerning the state of the Corinthian Church, and that they authorized him to refer to them as his authority for the statements in question.

Perhaps they were no other than the Fortunatus and Achaïcus who came to St. Paul with the message from Corinth, and of whom he speaks so highly. (1 Cor. xvi. 17.) If so, no exception could be made by any one to statements by St. Paul on such authority.

12. Λέγω δὲ τοῦτο] Now I mean this. S. Clement, Bishop of Rome, contemporary with the Apostles, refers to this passage in his letter to the Corinthian Church (cap. 47) thus, "Take into your hands the Epistle of the blessed Apostle St. Paul. What did he write to you at the first planting of the Gospel among you? Certainly he, being inspired by the Holy Spirit, admonished you concerning himself, and Cephas, and Apollos, because even then there were parties among you."

— Ἀπολλῶ] Apollos. See on Acts xviii. 24.

— ἐγὼ δὲ Κηφᾶ] but I of Cephas. In all the places where that Apostle is mentioned in this Epistle (here, iii. 22; ix. 5; xv. 5), he is mentioned, not by his Greek name Πέτρος, but by his Jewish name Κηφᾶς. Probably this name was more agreeable to those Judaizers who called themselves his adherents at Corinth. There is also a gentle rebuke in this. Why do you cleave to his Jewish name in a city of Greece, why not call him by his Greek name, Πέτρος? Cp. note above on Gal. ii. 11. 14.

It does not appear that Peter had been at Corinth. Rather, from the total absence of his name from St. Paul's narrative of ministerial labours at Corinth (below, iii. 5—7), it would seem that Peter had not been there. He had not been there before St. Paul's first visit (see Rom. xv. 20); and if Peter had come to Corinth after that visit, and before the date of the present Epistle, St. Paul, in mentioning Apollos, would hardly have failed to mention Peter.

The household of Stephanas is called the first-fruits of Achaia (xvi. 15), ἀπαρχὴ τῆς Ἀχαΐας, and they were baptized by St. Paul, i. 16.

It is probable that some Jewish Christians at Corinth, who had heard Peter at Jerusalem at the Feast of Pentecost, and on μὴ Παῦλος ἐσταυρώθη ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν; ἢ εἰς τὸ ὄνομα Παύλου ἐβαπτίσθητε; 14 [p] Εὐχαριστῶ τῷ Θεῷ ὅτι οὐδένα ὑμῶν ἐβάπτισα, εἰ μὴ Κρίσπον καὶ Γάϊον, [p] Acts 18. 8. Rom. 16. 23.

other occasions, and who were disposed to prefer him as having converted them, and as having been specially honoured and favoured by Christ on earth, whereas Paul was not even one of the Twelve who had been called by Christ,—would be prone to say, I am of Cephas.

It was, however, supposed by S. Dionysius, Bishop of Corinth in the Second Century, that Peter had preached at Corinth. (Euseb. ii. 25.)

On the name Cephas, see John i. 42.

13. Μεμέρισται ὁ Χριστός;] A difficult passage.

St. Paul uses the word μερίζω four times in these two Epistles, i. e. here, and vii. 17. 34, and 2 Cor. x. 13. In both the latter places the word μερίζω signifies to allot, to assign a portion, a share, μερίδα. And so Rom. xii. 3, ἑκάστῳ ὡς ὁ Θεὸς ἐμέρισε μέτρον, and Heb. vii. 2, ᾧ καὶ δεκάτην ἐμέρισεν, to whom he assigned or shared out a tenth. These are all the passages where the word is used by St. Paul.

In all these cases the word has, most probably, one and the same sense, the most obvious and natural one, that which is used in the Septuagint as the rendering of the Hebrew חָלַק (chalak), distribuit. See Exod. xv. 9. Numb. xxvi. 53. 56. Deut. xviii. 8. Prov. xxi. 24; and compare the use of the word by St. Paul's companion St. Luke, xii. 13, μερίσασθαι μετ' ἐμοῦ τὴν κληρονομίαν, to apportion and share with me the inheritance. Since, then, μερίζω signifies to portion off, to assign as a lot, the passive μερίζομαι means to be portioned off as a share. Therefore it would seem the sense here cannot be 'Is Christ divided?' But the meaning is, Has Christ been portioned off as a share to some particular party? Is He not the Head of the Whole Church? Are not all Christians members of Him? Are not all Churches portions of the Universal Church, which is His Body?

This interpretation of the word is confirmed by some ancient Expositors. Thus Theodor. Mops. (in Caten. p. 477) explains the word, κατὰ μερίδα τινὲς μὲν τὸν Χριστὸν ἔλαχον: Have some particular persons received Christ (the Universal Saviour) as their own private share?

This question follows very appropriately by way of reply to what St. Paul had just recited as the language of the different religious factions at Corinth, "I am of Paul; but I of Apollos; but I of Cephas; but I of Christ." What! has Christ become the heritage of a sect? Has He become the leader of a religious party in opposition to one of Paul, Apollos, or of Cephas . . . He Who is Lord of all!

This passage, thus understood, supplies a salutary warning against the erroneous teaching of those, who,

(1) in an eclectic and libertine spirit, regard Christ only as one Teacher among many, instead of being the Teacher of all, or who (2) in a narrow Donatistic temper would limit His gifts and graces to their own party, instead of regarding Christ as the Head of the Church Universal in every age and clime.

— ἐσταυρώθη ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν] was Paul crucified for you? A statement of the doctrine of the meritorious and propitiatory nature of the Atonement made by Christ on the Cross. (See on xv. 3.) If (as Socinianism alleges) the sufferings of Christ were merely exemplary, there would be no such absurdity and impiety, as St. Paul here assumes there to be, in comparing the sufferings of Christ to the sufferings of Paul.

Instead of ὑπὲρ some MSS., B, D*, have περὶ, but ὑπὲρ is in A, C, D, E, F, G, I, and also in ℵ.

— εἰς τὸ ὄνομα] into the name. Cp. Matt. xxviii. 19.

14—17. Εὐχαριστῶ τῷ Θεῷ—οὐ γὰρ ἀπέστειλέ με Χριστὸς βαπτίζειν] I thank God that I baptized none of you save Crispus and Gaius; lest any should say that I baptized into my own name. And I baptized also the household of Stephanas; further, I know not whether I baptized any other, for Christ did not send me to baptize, but to preach the Gospel.

(1) Why does St. Paul thank God that he baptized none but those here mentioned?

(2) And why did Christ send him as an Apostle (ἀπέστειλε) not to baptize, but to preach?

(3) Do not such assertions as these tend to disparage the Sacrament of Baptism as compared with Preaching?

(1) He answers the first of these questions by adding the words, "lest any should say that I had baptized in my own name," and not that of Christ. Therefore it happened providentially that St. Paul had not been led to administer Baptism with his own hands; and he acknowledges that he had been guided in this respect by wisdom from above. For it could not be alleged by his adversaries, that an Apostle, who had refrained from administering Baptism, was desirous of creating a party to be called by his own name. If, therefore, any one ventured to say, "I am of Paul," such a party-shibboleth could not be imputed to any suggestion of Paul himself.

(2) There were very good reasons why St. Paul should not have been sent to baptize, so much as to preach. That he was sent to baptize is clear from the fact here recorded by himself. He did baptize some, which he would not have done without having been sent to do it; and he would not otherwise have been on a par with the other Apostles, who had a commission to go and baptize all Nations. (Matt. xxviii. 19.) On this mode of speaking, see note on Matt. ix. 13. Glass. Phil. Sac. p. 468.

One of the reasons for his backwardness to baptize, was, lest he should thus create a party for himself. If converts were so eager to say, "I am of Paul," though he had not baptized them, much more would this have been the case, if he had personally received them into the Church by the Sacrament of Baptism. He thus teaches the duty of giving no countenance to schism, and of maintaining the unity of the Church.

S. Chrysostom observes, that what St. Paul says here, concerning the administration of Baptism, is directed against those Teachers who, on the plea of having baptized particular persons, claim those persons as their own, instead of remembering that by Baptism men become members, not of a party, but of the Church, and are therefore not to be called by names of men, but only by that of Christ.

St. Paul had a great work to do, and a short time to do it in. He must therefore, like "a wise master-builder," economize his resources, and dispense them in the manner most profitable to the Church. He had special gifts from Christ for preaching; but others could baptize with the same efficacy as the chiefest Apostles. He could preach to many in the same time as that in which he could only baptize a few. Well therefore might he say that Christ sent him not to baptize, but to preach.

Indeed, the same might be said of the other Apostles also, to whom Christ gave the charge to "go and teach all nations, baptizing them" (Matt. xxviii. 19). This command prescribed that they should teach with their own lips, which were to be sanctified by the Holy Ghost; but it did not imply that they were to baptize with their hands those whom they had taught with their mouths. And it is not without reason that the Holy Spirit has noted in the history of the reception of Cornelius, and of the other first Gentile converts into the Church, that St. Peter did not baptize them with his own hands, but commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord. (See Acts x. 48, and note there.)

The Apostles were inspired to write Epistles, and bequeath them to the Church. And so their Teaching remains with all ages of the world, even unto the end. But they are no longer able to baptize. And if they had been forward to baptize with their own hands, it might have been supposed that some special benefit was conferred by Baptism administered by Apostles, as distinguished from other inferior Ministers of the Church, and that when they ceased to live, this special benefit ceased to exist.

Then indeed the divine efficacy of the Holy Sacrament of Baptism would have been disparaged. For its virtue would have been supposed to depend on the personal qualification of special Ministers, instead of being acknowledged to be due to the power of the Holy Spirit operating therein, and to the Divine authority of Christ who instituted it; and to be not less efficacious now than it was in the days of the Apostles; and to be as much the "laver of regeneration" (Titus iii. 5) when bestowed by the ministry of the lowliest deacon of the Church, as if it were conferred by the hands of St. Paul.

(3) Thus, then, it may be seen, that the forbearance of St. Paul—and, we may add, of the other Apostles also—to administer Baptism with their own hands, is very far from being any disparagement to Baptism. It seems rather to bring out in a clearer light the divine origin of Baptism, and consequently its dignity and necessity; and to inspire feelings of gratitude towards God for the privileges and blessings conferred by Him through Baptism in every age of the Church.

(4) We may ascend still higher, and observe (with reverence be it said) that the same Wisdom which restrained Paul from baptizing with his own hands, operated on a greater than St. Paul in a similar manner, and, in some respects, for similar purposes—even our Blessed Lord Himself.

We read that Jesus Himself baptized not, but His disciples did baptize (John iv. 2); and yet He is said in the same Scripture to "have baptized more disciples than John the Baptist." "He baptized," and yet, "He did not baptize, but His disciples." "He baptized," because all who were baptized by His disciples were baptized by Him; and because all the efficacy of the Bap-q ch. 16. 15, 17.

15 ἵνα μή τις εἴπῃ ὅτι εἰς τὸ ἐμὸν ὄνομα ἐβαπτίσθητε· 16 [q] ἐβάπτισα δὲ καὶ τὸν Στεφανᾶ οἶκον, λοιπὸν οὐκ οἶδα εἴ τινα ἄλλον ἐβάπτισα.

r ch. 2. 1, 4, 13. 2 Pet. 1. 16.

s ch. 2. 14. Rom. 1. 16.

17 [r] Οὐ γὰρ ἀπέστειλέ με Χριστὸς βαπτίζειν, ἀλλ' εὐαγγελίζεσθαι· οὐκ ἐν σοφίᾳ λόγου, ἵνα μὴ κενωθῇ ὁ σταυρὸς τοῦ Χριστοῦ. 18 [s] Ὁ λόγος γὰρ ὁ τοῦ σταυροῦ τοῖς μὲν ἀπολλυμένοις μωρία ἐστί, τοῖς δὲ σωζομένοις ἡμῖν δύναμις

t Isa. 29. 14. Jer. 8. 9. & 44. 25.

Θεοῦ ἐστι· 19 [t] γέγραπται γάρ, Ἀπολῶ τὴν σοφίαν τῶν σοφῶν, καὶ τὴν σύνεσιν τῶν συνετῶν ἀθετήσω. 20 [u] Ποῦ σοφός; ποῦ γραμματεύς; ποῦ συζητητὴς τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου; Οὐχὶ ἐμώρανεν ὁ Θεὸς τὴν σοφίαν τοῦ κόσμου; u Isa. 33. 18. Job 12. 7. & 20. 24.

v Matt. 11. 25. Luke 10. 21. Rom. 1. 21, 28.

21 [v] Ἐπειδὴ γὰρ ἐν τῇ σοφίᾳ τοῦ Θεοῦ οὐκ ἔγνω ὁ κόσμος διὰ τῆς σοφίας τὸν Θεὸν, εὐδόκησεν ὁ Θεὸς διὰ τῆς μωρίας τοῦ κηρύγματος σῶσαι τοὺς πιστεύ-

---

tism administered by them, was due solely to Him; and because all, in every age, who are baptized by Christ's ministers, are baptized with the Baptism of Christ, and are received by Him into His mystical body, the Church. But He did not baptize with His own hands, lest it might be imagined by some in after-ages, when His visible presence in the body was withdrawn from the eyes of the world, that the Church had sustained some irreparable loss, and that He no longer baptizes; and in order that the truth might be more sensibly felt and generally acknowledged by all, that Christ in His Divine Power is invisibly present, and effectually works, in every Baptism duly administered by His Disciples, in every age and country of the world. See above on John iv. 1.

From these considerations we see why St. Paul uses the words ἵνα μὴ v. 15, which indicate (as Bengel and Meyer observe) that he was led by Divine direction to abstain from baptizing, in order that no one should say that the Baptism he administered was the Baptism of Paul, and not the Baptism of Christ.

14—16. Κρίσπον . . . Γάϊον . . . Στεφανᾶ οἶκον] Since, as we have seen above in the preceding note, there were good reasons why St. Paul laid down for himself, as a general rule, to abstain from administering Baptism with his own hands, it may be inferred that he had also good reasons for the exceptions which he made to that rule.

Accordingly, such there appear to have been in the cases here specified. Crispus was "the chief ruler of the Synagogue" at Corinth, who believed on the Lord with all his house (Acts xviii. 8). From his position he was entitled to the special regard of St. Paul. And to receive the Ruler of a Synagogue as a convert into the Church of Christ by Baptism, was doubtless an office of no small responsibility and peril on account of the hatred and violence of the Jews, who were very turbulent at Corinth (Acts xviii. 6—12). St. Paul did not delegate this perilous office to another, but took it boldly on himself.

Gaius was "the host of St. Paul, and of the whole Church," as the Apostle says in his Epistle written to the Romans from Achaia (Rom. xvi. 23), and the "house of Stephanas" were "the first-fruits of Achaia" (1 Cor. xvi. 15). These persons therefore appear to have had special claims for personal service from St. Paul.

We may also observe that this mention of these names here, and in the Epistle to the Romans, taken together with the passages just quoted from the Acts, serves to show in a silent, and therefore more forcible manner, the consistency and harmony of these portions of Holy Scripture with each other. Cp. Paley, Horæ Paulinæ, p. 39.

15. ἐβαπτίσθητε] ye were baptized. So A, B, C*, and many Cursives and Versions, and Lach., Tisch. Elz. has ἐβάπτισα. The former reading, grounded on such authority, seems preferable. Besides, it was not so much his own credit that St. Paul would wish to defend and to put forward most prominently, as the dignity of Christ and the unity of the Church.

16. οὐκ οἶδα] I know not. Such sayings as these, in which the Apostles declare their own forgetfulness of some unimportant particulars, imply no disparagement of their claim to Inspiration; but the contrary. The Apostles do not lay claim to Omniscience, but to Inspiration. And this avowal made by writers of Holy Scripture, that there are some things which, through human infirmity, they either do not know or have forgotten, ought to procure greater credit to their assertion, that they have "the Spirit of God" (1 Cor. vii. 40), and that they speak "not in words which man's wisdom teacheth, but in words which the Holy Ghost teacheth" (1 Cor. ii. 13), and that every Scripture, being "divinely inspired," is able to make men wise unto salvation through faith that is in Christ Jesus (2 Tim. iii. 15, 16). See above, note on John vi. 19.

18. ἀπολλυμένοις . . . . σωζομένοις] to them that are perishing —and to them that are in the way of salvation. On the peculiar force of these present participles of the middle voice, which it is not easy to render in English, see on Acts ii. 47, προσετίθει τοὺς σωζομένους τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ.

— δύναμις Θεοῦ] the power of God. The Cross is Christ's Trophy against Satan. (Origen.)

19. γέγραπται] it is written: Isaiah xxix. 14, the Septuagint version, with the exception of ἀθετήσω for κρύψω.

In both his Epistles to the Corinthians St. Paul makes frequent citations from the Old Testament, and follows frequently the words of the LXX introduced by the formula γέγραπται. See i. 31; ii. 9; iii. 19; ix. 9; x. 7; xv. 45. 2 Cor. viii. 15.

The same may be said of the Epistle to the Romans. See the Parallels collected by Mr. Grinfield, pp. 1467—1473, and in the Epistle to the Galatians, see ibid. p. 1477.

But he never uses the formula γέγραπται in writing to the Thessalonians, Ephesians, Colossians, or Philippians, and very rarely quotes the Old Testament in writing to them. See above on 1 Thess. i. 9.

But he generally uses the word εἴρηκε (God hath spoken) in quoting Scripture to the Hebrews. See i. 13; iv. 3, 4. 7; xiii. 5. In that Epistle Scripture is quoted as the word spoken to them.

This circumstance may serve to illustrate the difference of the elements which mainly composed the classes of Churches to which St. Paul's Epistles were addressed.

The first class, consisting of the Churches of Rome, Corinth, and Galatia, contained a large admixture of Jewish Converts, who had been long familiar with the Jewish Scriptures, particularly in the Septuagint Version.

The second may be called the Gentile class, and to them the Ancient Scriptures were as yet very little known, nor would citations from those Scriptures carry with them the same weight as with the converts from Judaism to Christianity.

The only representative of the third class are the Hebrews: not Proselytes, but of regular Hebrew descent. To them the Old Testament was the word spoken. It is quoted as such in the Epistle to the Hebrews, as it is in the Gospel of St. Matthew.

These internal characteristics of St. Paul's Epistles, addressed to various classes of Churches, are in perfect harmony with the facts which the History of the Acts of the Apostles presents to us concerning these Churches respectively, and may be regarded as an evidence and illustration of the veracity and genuineness of the History and of the Epistles.

20. ποῦ συζητητὴς τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου;] where is the disputer of this world? A reference to Isaiah, xxxiii. 18, where the Hebrew signifies "where is he who counteth the towers?" which may either signify, as the Jewish Rabbis explain it (see Surenhus. p. 523), where is he who numbers the towers which pay tribute to the king, and provides for the collection of his revenues? or, where is he who calculates the force of the city? Cp. Ps. xlviii. 12, "Tell her towers," סַפְּרוּ מִגְדָּלֶיהָ (siphru migdaleyah), where the same words occur as in the prophet Isaiah.

The Apostle modifies this expression by a paraphrase, thus,— Where is the disputer of this world? where is he who relies on secular wealth or power?

The application made of this sentence by St. Paul is adopted by one of the Apostolic Fathers, showing that the Apostle's words were in his mind when he was speaking of the doctrine of Christ crucified. "The Cross," he says, "is a stumbling-block to the unbeliever, but to us it is salvation, and life eternal;" and then he exclaims ποῦ σοφός; ποῦ συζητητής; ποῦ καύχησις τῶν λεγομένων συνετῶν; (Ignatius, ad Ephes. 18.)

— Οὐχὶ ἐμώρανεν] Did not God stultify the wisdom of the world by the foolishness of the Cross? See v. 21.

— τοῦ κόσμου] Elz. adds τούτου, which is not in A, B, C, D, and many Fathers.

21. διὰ τῆς σοφιας] by means of its so much vaunted wisdom. Cp. Winer, p. 340.

— τῆς μωρίας τοῦ κηρύγματος] the "foolishness" (so called) οντας· [22] [w] ἐπειδὴ καὶ Ἰουδαῖοι σημεῖα αἰτοῦσι, καὶ Ἕλληνες σοφίαν ζητοῦσιν, [23] [x] ἡμεῖς δὲ κηρύσσομεν Χριστὸν ἐσταυρωμένον, Ἰουδαίοις μὲν σκάνδαλον, ἔθνεσιν δὲ μωρίαν, [24] [y] αὐτοῖς δὲ τοῖς κλητοῖς, Ἰουδαίοις τε καὶ Ἕλλησι, Χριστὸν Θεοῦ δύναμιν καὶ Θεοῦ σοφίαν. [25] [v] Ὅτι τὸ μωρὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ σοφώτερον τῶν ἀνθρώπων ἐστὶ, καὶ τὸ ἀσθενὲς τοῦ Θεοῦ ἰσχυρότερον τῶν ἀνθρώπων ἐστί.

[26] [z] Βλέπετε γὰρ τὴν κλῆσιν ὑμῶν, ἀδελφοὶ, ὅτι οὐ πολλοὶ σοφοὶ κατὰ σάρκα, [*] οὐ πολλοὶ δυνατοὶ, οὐ πολλοὶ εὐγενεῖς· [27] [b] ἀλλὰ τὰ μωρὰ τοῦ κόσμου ἐξελέξατο ὁ Θεὸς, ἵνα τοὺς σοφοὺς καταισχύνῃ· καὶ τὰ ἀσθενῆ τοῦ κόσμου ἐξελέξατο ὁ Θεὸς, ἵνα καταισχύνῃ τὰ ἰσχυρά· [28] [c] καὶ τὰ ἀγενῆ τοῦ κόσμου καὶ τὰ ἐξουθενημένα ἐξελέξατο ὁ Θεὸς, καὶ τὰ μὴ ὄντα, ἵνα τὰ ὄντα καταργήσῃ· [29] [d] ὅπως μὴ καυχήσηται πᾶσα σὰρξ ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ. [30] [e] Ἐξ αὐτοῦ δὲ ὑμεῖς ἐστε ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ, ὃς ἐγενήθη ἡμῖν σοφία ἀπὸ Θεοῦ, δικαιοσύνη τε καὶ ἁγιασμὸς

w Matt. 12. 38. & 16. 1. John 4. 48.
x Isa. 8. 14. Rom. 9. 32, 33.
y ch. 2. 14.
v Rom. 1. 16. Gal. 5. 11. Col. 2. 3. 1 Pet. 2. 8.
z John 7. 47—49. James 2. 5. a Luke 1 3. & 18. 24, 25. John 4. 45—53. & 19. 38, 39.
b 2 Cor. 10. 5. Ps. 8. 2. c Rom. 4. 17. ch. 2. 6. Deut. 28. 63. Job 34. 19, 20, 24. Ps. 32. 10. & 37. 35, 36.
d Rom. 3. 27. Eph. 2. 9.
e John 17. 19. Rom. 4. 25. Eph. 1. 7. Col. 2. 3.

"of what is preached." A common mode of speaking in Holy Scripture, where "opinio hominum sæpe pro re ipsâ ponitur." See Glass. Phil. Sac. p. 699, and above, note on Matt. ix. 13.

This passage has been often misapplied;

By κήρυγμα here, we are not to understand preaching (κήρυξις), but the thing preached (κήρυγμα), i. e. the Gospel, especially the doctrine of Christ crucified.

That which must save believers is the knowledge of the cross of Christ, the only subject of all our preaching. And in their eyes what doth this seem as yet but folly? The words of the Apostle declare the admirable force those mysteries have which the world derideth as follies; they show that the foolishness of the cross of Christ is the wisdom of true believers; they concern the object of our faith, the matter preached of, and believed in, by Christian men. This we know that the Grecians, or Gentiles, did account foolishness; but that they ever did think it a fond or unlikely way to seek men's conversion by sermons, we have not heard. Manifest, therefore, it is that the Apostle, applying the name of foolishness in such sort as they did, must needs by the "foolishness of preaching" mean the doctrine of Christ, by which we learn that we may be saved. (Hooker.)

22. ἐπειδή] seeing that both Jews ask for signs, and Greeks seek after wisdom, but we preach Christ crucified, a stumbling-block unto Jews, and to Gentiles foolishness.

— σημεῖα] So A, B, C, D, E, F, G, I. Elz. σημεῖον.

23. ἔθνεσιν] So A, B, C, D, E, F, G, I. Elz. Ἕλλησιν.

23, 24. σκάνδαλον—μωρίαν—δύναμιν] Perhaps an Oriental paronomasia. The Cross, seccel, is micsol, an offence to the Jew, and it is mashcal (Eccles. x. 6), or folly to the Greek. But to us it is secel or wisdom (Prov. xii. 8; xxiii. 9). Cp. A Lapide, and Winer, p. 561, who doubts the allusion.

The Cross of Christ was a stumbling-block to the Jews, who looked for a temporal and triumphant, and not for a spiritual and suffering Messiah. (See Bp. Pearson, Art. iv. pp. 344. 376.)

Christ conquers, and teaches us to conquer by suffering, and to triumph in and by tribulation. For an illustration of the Apostle's assertion that the doctrine of the cross of Christ was a scandal to the Jews, we may refer to the words of St. Peter even immediately after his good confession that Jesus is the Christ. See Matt. xvi. 22. There the Jewish feeling vented itself even by the mouth of the Christian Apostle, who had been blessed by Christ for his confession. A striking proof of the depth of that feeling in the Jewish mind; and it is remarkable that our Lord there uses the word σκάνδαλον in his reply, σκάνδαλόν μου εἶ. The Cross is a stumbling-block to thee; and thou art a stumbling-block to Me (Matt. xvi. 23). The full exposition of the feeling may be seen in the Jewish arguments which are cited by Justin Martyr, Tertullian, Cyprian, Origen, and other Christian Apologists arguing with the Jews, who affirmed that for the Messiah to have been subjected to death on the Cross, the Malefactor's death, the death of the accursed, was a thing incredible. Cp. Professor Blunt, Lectures on the Early Church, pp. 120, 121.

25. σοφώτερον τῶν ἀνθρώπων] wiser than men are (Winer, § 35, p. 218). "Quid est stultum Dei sapientius hominibus, nisi Crux et Mors Christi? Quid infirmum Dei fortius homine, nisi Nativitas et Caro Dei?" Tertullian (c. Marcion. v. 5).

26. Βλέπετε γάρ] For consider—stronger than ὁρᾶτε, and Imperative. Cp. the passages below, 1 Cor. viii. 9; x. 18; xvi. 10; in all which the word has this sense. And so Vulg. "Videte enim."

He refers them to what their own eyes may see. He proceeds to show that the Divine plan of saving the world, and of overcoming the wisdom of the world by means of the Cross, which was a stumbling-block to the Jews, and foolishness to the Greeks, was in perfect harmony with what God had done among themselves; He had called the weak and the simple among them in order to confound the mighty and the wise, in order that by the very weakness and simplicity of the instruments used, the work effected thereby might not be attributed to the instruments, but to God.

— τὴν κλῆσιν ὑμῶν] He does not say τ. κλῆσιν ὑμετέραν, nor τὴν ὑμῶν κλῆσιν, but τὴν κλῆσιν ὑμῶν, the calling of you; i. e. the method of God's dealings in His calling of you to His kingdom of Grace and Glory. Cp. Eph. iv. 1. 2 Tim. i. 9. Heb. iii. 1, κλήσεως ἐπουρανίου μέτοχοι.

— οὐ πολλοὶ σοφοὶ κ.τ.λ.] not many wise according to the flesh. Some expositors supply here, are the callers. But this does not seem to agree well with what precedes, βλέπετε γ. τ. κλῆσιν ὑμῶν, and it could hardly be said that Apollos, by whom some of the Corinthians were called, was not σοφὸς, or that he and St. Paul belonged to the μωρὰ τοῦ κόσμου. Indeed his assertion that he determined not to speak with human wisdom, implies that he could have so spoken, if he had desired it. Hence it is observable that Irenæus (ii. 34) thus renders St. Paul's words, "Videte vocationem vestram, fratres, quoniam non multi sapientes apud vos."

It may, however, be allowed that St. Paul uses an abstract term, κλῆσιν, in order to include both the callers and the called. Accordingly, some of the Fathers apply it to the former, as Ambrose on Luke vi., "He chose the Twelve. Observe His Divine Wisdom. He chose not the wise, nor rich, nor noble, but fishermen and publicans, lest He might appear to have drawn the world to Himself by wisdom, or to have redeemed it by wealth, or to have allured men by the influence of power and rank; and in order that the power of Divine Truth, not the charms of disputation, might prevail." So Theodoret, "God enclosed the nations in the Evangelical net of Galilæan Fishermen." See also S. Augustine (Serm. 87 and 250), who observes that "Christ caught Orators by Fishermen, not Fishermen by Orators."

But Chrysostom rightly applies the words to the called also, and observes, "Christ not only called unlearned men to be teachers, but the scholars which He chose were of a similar character." And so Origen, Theodor. Mops., and Theodoret.

28. ἐξελέξατο ὁ Θεός] God chose. Observe these words repeated thrice, to show the absolute freedom, deliberate resolve, and solemn import of God's choice; so contrary to all human imaginations and opinions.

— καὶ τὰ μὴ ὄντα] and the things which are not: καὶ is omitted by some uncial MSS., and by some Editors, but on insufficient authority. The καὶ completes the climax, whereas without it the force of the sentence seems to be impaired, which affirms that God not only chose the weak things to confound the strong, but even (καὶ) chose those things which were deemed to be non-existent (τὰ μὴ ὄντα, not τὰ οὐκ ὄντα, τοὺς μηδὲν εἶναι λογιζομένους, Chrys.), and chose them because they were so deemed, in order to nullify the things which were deemed to be all-powerful.

29. ὅπως μὴ—πᾶσα σάρξ] that no flesh should glory before God. Cp. Winer, § 26, p. 155, and see on Matt. xxiv. 22, οὐκ ἂν ἐσώθη πᾶσα σάρξ. Rom. iii. 20, ἐξ ἔργων νόμου οὐ δικαιωθήσεται πᾶσα σάρξ.

It may be resolved literally thus, "That all flesh may not glory," i. e. may have no ground of boasting. (Meyer.) On this passage, see Irenæus iii. 1.

30. δικαιοσύνη] Righteousness: Christ is The Lord (Jehovah) our Righteousness (Jer. xxxiii. 16). He in whom we are justified, or accounted righteous before God, by virtue of His Incar- f Jer. 9. 23, 24. 2 Cor. 10. 17.

καὶ ἀπολύτρωσις, 31 [f] ἵνα, καθὼς γέγραπται, Ὁ καυχώμενος, ἐν Κυρίῳ καυχάσθω.

a ch. 1. 17. Exod. 4. 10. Jer. 1. 6, 7. Rom. 16. 18. 2 Cor. 10. 10. & 11. 6. b Gal. 6. 14. c Acts 18. 1, 3. 2 Cor. 10. 10. & 11. 30. & 12. 5, 9. Gal. 4. 13. d ch. 1. 17. & 2. 13. Rom. 15. 19. 1 Thess. 1. 5. 1 Pet. 1. 12. e ch. 1. 17. & 3. 6. Acts 16. 14. 2 Cor. 4. 7. & 6. 7. f Phil. 3. 15.

II. 1 [a] Κἀγὼ ἐλθὼν πρὸς ὑμᾶς, ἀδελφοί, ἦλθον οὐ καθ' ὑπεροχὴν λόγου ἢ σοφίας καταγγέλλων ὑμῖν τὸ μαρτύριον τοῦ Θεοῦ· 2 [b] οὐ γὰρ ἔκρινα τι εἰδέναι ἐν ὑμῖν, εἰ μὴ Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν, καὶ τοῦτον ἐσταυρωμένον.

3 [c] Καὶ ἐγὼ ἐν ἀσθενείᾳ καὶ ἐν φόβῳ καὶ ἐν τρόμῳ πολλῷ ἐγενόμην πρὸς ὑμᾶς. 4 [d] Καὶ ὁ λόγος μου καὶ τὸ κήρυγμά μου οὐκ ἐν πειθοῖς σοφίας λόγοις, ἀλλ' ἐν ἀποδείξει Πνεύματος καὶ δυνάμεως, 5 [e] ἵνα ἡ πίστις ὑμῶν μὴ ᾖ ἐν σοφίᾳ ἀνθρώπων, ἀλλ' ἐν δυνάμει Θεοῦ.

6 [f] Σοφίαν δὲ λαλοῦμεν ἐν τοῖς τελείοις· σοφίαν δὲ οὐ τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου, οὐδὲ τῶν ἀρχόντων τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου τῶν καταργουμένων· 7 [g] ἀλλὰ λαλοῦμεν Θεοῦ σοφίαν ἐν μυστηρίῳ τὴν ἀποκεκρυμμένην, ἣν προώρισεν ὁ Θεὸς πρὸ τῶν αἰώνων, ch. 1. 20. & 3. 19. g ch. 4. 1. Rom. 16. 25. Eph. 3. 9. Col. 1. 26. 2 Tim. 1. 9.

nation, and of His perfect Obedience, and of His meritorious Sufferings, in our Nature; and by reason of our Incorporation in Him, Who is our Emmanuel. See on Rom. iii. 28, and v. 21.

— ἁγιασμός] Sanctification. He is the origin of our Sanctification by reason of His Divine Nature, and of its union with our Nature in One Person, the Man Christ Jesus; and by reason also of His Unction as Man by the Holy Ghost at His Conception and Baptism, and of the gift of the Holy Ghost procured for us by His Ascension into heaven, and Session at God's Right Hand; and of the communication of that Gift to us in our Baptism, and in the other means of Grace. Cp. Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. ix.

— ἀπολύτρωσις] Christ is our Redemption or Ransom from the captivity of Sin and Death by the payment of the price of His own Blood for us. See 1 Pet. i. 18, οὐ φθαρτοῖς ἀργυρίῳ ἢ χρυσίῳ ἐλυτρώθητε, ἀλλὰ τιμίῳ αἵματι Χριστοῦ, Matt. xx. 28, δοῦναι τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ λύτρον ἀντὶ πολλῶν, where see note.

"Damnatur ergo hìc error Petri Abelardi, quem sequuntur Sociniani, qui docent Christum Doctorem Orbis, non Redemptorem; nimirum Eum fuisse missum à Patre, ut daret exemplum perfectæ virtutis, non autem ut à peccatis nos liberaret et redimeret." (A Lapide.) See further, note on Rom. iii. 21—26, and on 1 John iv. 10.

31. ἵνα] On this use of ἵνα introducing a precept, see iv. 6.

— καθὼς γέγραπται] according as it is written—. The words which follow are nowhere found literatim in Holy Scripture, but are a compendious summary of two texts, Jer. ix. 23, 24, and 1 Sam. ii. 10, LXX. In the condensation of several passages of Scripture St. Paul follows a practice very usual with Jewish Doctors and Expositors of Scripture. See Surenhus. p. 525, and note above on Matt. ii. 23.

It is remarkable that S. Clement, writing also to the Corinthians (i. 13), adopts St. Paul's compendium totidem verbis, ὁ καυχώμενος ἐν Κυρίῳ καυχάσθω, which is repeated by the Apostle in his second Epistle (2 Cor. x. 17), and seems to have been designed by him to be a brief sententious antidote against the vain-glorious spirit of worldly wisdom prevalent in the Christian Communion which he addressed. Compare a similar example below, ii. 9.

CH. II. 2. οὐ γὰρ ἔκρινα] for I determined, not. So οὐ φημὶ = I deny; οὐκ ἐῶ = I forbid. Cp. Matth. Gr. Gr. § 600.

— τι εἰδέναι] Elz. has τοῦ εἰδέναι τι. But τοῦ is not in A, B, C, D, E, F, G.

On the use of τοῦ in such a construction, see Acts iii. 12; xxvii. 1. Τι, which is emphatic, is rightly placed before εἰδέναι by B, C, D, E, and by Griesbach, Scholz, Lach., Alford, Meyer. Indeed, εἰδέναι τί ἐν ὑμῖν would have been liable to an inconvenient misinterpretation, to know what is in you.

— εἰ μὴ Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν, καὶ τοῦτον ἐσταυρωμένον] save Jesus Christ and Him crucified. The knowledge of which St. Paul speaks, namely, the doctrine of Jesus Christ, and Him Crucified, is not distinguished from or contrasted with other articles of Christian Knowledge, but is opposed to the secular knowledge and Human Philosophy of which the Corinthians were proud, and against which he is warning them, as unable to give them any spiritual insight into divine things. See what follows, vv. 6—12.

The sense therefore is, You glory in other knowledge; other Teachers among you boast of other knowledge. But the only knowledge, on which I was resolved to build my preaching among you, was that of Jesus Christ and Him Crucified.

Jesus Christ is the Rock on which the Church is built. (See on Matt. xvi. 18.) And the Apostle says here that other foundation can no man lay save that which already lieth, Jesus Christ. (1 Cor. iii. 11.) And the acknowledgment of this foundation is necessarily followed by the confession of Christ's Passion. See the remarkable words in Matt. xvi. 21, immediately following the confession of Peter that He is the Christ, ἀπὸ τότε ἤρξατο ὁ Ἰησοῦς δεικνύειν τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ, ὅτι δεῖ αὐτὸν ἀπελθεῖν εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα, καὶ πολλὰ παθεῖν . . . καὶ παρρησίᾳ τὸν λόγον ἐλάλει. (Mark viii. 31, 32.)

Thus the doctrine of Jesus Christ and Him crucified is the Foundation of the Christian Church; and this one foundation precludes all other foundations, particularly, as here St. Paul shows, all foundations of Human Reason and Philosophy, such as the Greeks would have desired to lay; and also all foundations of ceremonial and ritual observances, and moral obedience to the Law, such as would be laid by the Jews.

But it does not exclude, but rather it supposes and requires, the superstructure of other articles of saving Faith upon it, which St. Paul calls the "gold, and silver, and precious stones," of sound Christian Teaching. (1 Cor. iii. 12.) And he shows this by his own practice, especially in these two Epistles to the Church of Corinth, in which, on the one foundation soundly laid of "Jesus Christ and Him crucified," he builds up a solid fabric of Christian Faith and Practice, particularly with regard to the duties of Unity in Christ's Mystical Body, and of mutual edification and charity, and of purity and holiness of life.

3. ἐν ἀσθενείᾳ] in infirmity. This was the condition in which I was, among you who glory in your strength—a condition of weakness. The same word was used by him when speaking to the Galatians (iv. 13), and probably referring to the same thing, his thorn in the flesh. See note there and 2 Cor. xii. 7.

4. πειθοῖς] persuasive. On this and similar verbal adjectives, generally oxytone, with the exception of φάγος (Matt. xi. 19. Luke vii. 34), see Meyer, and Lobeck, Phryn. p. 434. Winer, G. G. § 16, p. 88.

After πειθοῖς Elz. adds ἀνθρωπίνης, which is not in B, D, E, F, G, and is cancelled by Griesb., Scholz, Lachm., Tisch., Alf., Meyer.

6. Σοφίαν δὲ λαλοῦμεν] But still,—though our gospel may seem to some to be μωρία, foolishness (i. 23), do not imagine that it is so,—we speak wisdom among the perfect.

— ἐν τοῖς τελείοις] "inter perfectos," Iren. v. 6. This word may have a twofold meaning.

(1) It may signify those who have been initiated into the τέλη or τελεταὶ of the μυστήριον, or Mystery of Godliness, of which the Apostle proceeds to speak in the next verse, and which he describes as revealing joys which eye hath not seen; where, perhaps, there may be an allusion to those Grecian Mysteries (such as at Eleusis), in which they who were admitted to the Visions there revealed were said to be ἐποπται and ἐποπτεύειν. Cp. Valcken. here, and the notes on Eurip. Hippolyt. 25 (the scene of which is laid near Corinth), σεμνῶν ἐς ὄψιν καὶ τέλη μυστηρίων.

(2) The word τέλειος is used for of mature age in spiritual growth and ripeness, as distinguished from νήπιος, a babe. Cp. below, iii. 1; xiv. 20. Eph. iv. 13. Col. i. 28. Phil. iii. 15. Heb. v. 14; and Bingham, Antiquities, i. 4, on the word τέλειοι, as applied to Christians.

This verse was alleged by the Pelagians in behalf of their notion of man's perfectibility by means of his own Reason and Will; for a reply to which see S. Jerome, adv. Pelagian. Dial. i. p. 488.

— τῶν καταργουμένων] that are being brought to nought, by the ἐνέργεια of God in the Gospel. See on xii. 8.

7. Θεοῦ σοφίαν] God's wisdom. So the best MSS. Θεοῦ is emphatic, and rightly placed first and not after σοφίαν, as in Elz.

εἰς δόξαν ἡμῶν· [8] [h] ἣν οὐδεὶς τῶν ἀρχόντων τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου ἔγνωκεν· εἰ γὰρ ἔγνωσαν, οὐκ ἂν τὸν Κύριον τῆς δόξης ἐσταύρωσαν· [9] [i] ἀλλὰ, καθὼς γέγραπται, Ἃ ὀφθαλμὸς οὐκ εἶδε, καὶ οὖς οὐκ ἤκουσε, καὶ ἐπὶ καρδίαν ἀνθρώπου οὐκ ἀνέβη, ἃ ἡτοίμασεν ὁ Θεὸς τοῖς ἀγαπῶσιν αὐτόν· [10] [k] ἡμῖν δὲ ἀπεκάλυψεν ὁ Θεὸς διὰ τοῦ Πνεύματος αὐτοῦ· τὸ γὰρ Πνεῦμα πάντα ἐρευνᾷ, καὶ τὰ βάθη τοῦ Θεοῦ. [11] [l] Τίς γὰρ οἶδεν ἀνθρώπων τὰ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, εἰ μὴ τὸ πνεῦμα τοῦ ἀνθρώπου τὸ ἐν αὐτῷ; οὕτω καὶ τὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ οὐδεὶς ἔγνωκεν, εἰ μὴ τὸ Πνεῦμα τοῦ Θεοῦ. [12] [m] Ἡμεῖς δὲ οὐ τὸ πνεῦμα τοῦ κόσμου ἐλάβομεν, ἀλλὰ τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἵνα εἰδῶμεν τὰ ὑπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ χαρισθέντα ἡμῖν. [13] [n] [a] Ἃ καὶ λαλοῦμεν, οὐκ ἐν διδακτοῖς ἀνθρωπίνης σοφίας λόγοις, ἀλλ' ἐν διδακτοῖς Πνεύματος, πνευματικοῖς πνευματικὰ συγκρίνοντες. [14] [o] Ψυh Matt. 11. 25. John 7. 48. & 16. 3. Acts 3. 17 & 13. 27. 2 Cor. 3. 14. 1 Tim. 1. 13.

i Isa. 64. 4. ver. 14.
k Matt. 13. 11. & 16. 17. Luke 2. 26. & 10. 21. Eph. 3. 3, 5. 1 Pet. 1. 12. 1 John 2. 27.
l Prov. 20. 27. & 27. 19. Jer. 17. 9.
m Rom. 8. 15
n 2 Pet. 1. 16. ch. 1. 17, 24.
o Rom. 5. 7.

— ἐν μυστηρίῳ] in a mystery. God's Wisdom in the Mystery of the Incarnation and Sufferings of the Son of God, pre-ordained by God before the world began (Acts iv. 28. Eph. iii. 11. 1 Pet. i. 20. Rev. xiii. 8; xvii. 8), but hidden even from the Angels themselves, was clearly revealed to all by the preaching of the Gospel in the Church of Christ, and fully expounded in St. Paul's later Epistles to other Churches. See Eph. iii. 9, 10. Col. i. 26, 27; ii. 2. 1 Tim. iii. 15, 16.

8. τῶν ἀρχόντων] of the Rulers: such as Caiaphas, the Chief Priests, Pilate, and other earthly Powers, which are καταργούμενοι, i. e. in course of being brought to nought, and are being done away with, by the power of CHRIST. See Daniel's Prophecy, ii. 34. Cp. Tertullian, c. Marcion. v. 6, and Theodoret here.

S. Cyril here (in Caten. p. 39) supposes St. Paul to mean the Powers of the Air and of Darkness (cp. Eph. ii. 2), who acted by Judas (John xiii. 27) and by the crucifiers of Christ, and who were caught in their own snare; for Christ triumphed over them by the Cross.

9. καθὼς γέγραπται] according as it is written. The text which follows is a paraphrastic adaptation of Isaiah lxiv. 3, 4, where the Prophet expresses a vehement longing for future blessings reserved for all who wait for Him, which the Apostle here represents as realized in the Gospel preached to all nations. Cp. S. Jerome (ad Pammach. ii. 247), who says, "Apostolus non verbum expressit e verbo, sed παραφραστικῶς eundem sensum aliis sermonibus indicavit;" and see Surenhus. p. 527.

It is remarkable that the words καὶ ἐπὶ καρδίαν ἀνθρώπου οὐκ ἀνέβη have no place in this passage of Isaiah in the Hebrew original, nor in the LXX, and yet they are adopted verbatim from this passage of St. Paul by Clement of Rome in his Epistle to the Corinthians i. 34, thus showing his familiarity with St. Paul's Epistles, and his reverence for St. Paul's authority in quoting the Old Testament.

The same words are also found in Clem. Rom. (?) Epist. ii. 11, and in Martyr. Polycarpi, c. 2.

For another example of this adoption, see on 1 Cor. i. 31.

The citations of the Old Testament by the Apostles and Evangelists in the New, have, in fact, become like an Inspired Targum to the Christian Church.

— ἃ ἡτοίμασεν] A, B, C have ὅσα ἡ., and so Lachm., Meyer.

10. ἀπεκάλυψεν ὁ Θεός] This is the order of the words in the best MSS., ἀπεκάλυψεν being the emphatic word.

— τὸ γὰρ Πνεῦμα—Θεοῦ] for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea even the deep things of God. It is clear, that the Spirit which searcheth the deep things of God cannot be a Creature, nor less than God. Athanasius (ad Serapion. i. § 22, p. 535).

See also the excellent summary of an English Theologian: "The Person of the Holy Ghost is described in Scripture as the immediate Author and Worker of miracles (Acts ii. 4; x. 45, 46. Rom. xv. 19. 1 Cor. ii. 4, 5; xii. 4. 8 11; xiv. 2), and even of those done by our Lord Himself (Matt. xii. 18. Acts x. 38); the Conductor of Christ Jesus, in His human capacity, during His state of humiliation here upon earth (Matt. iv. 1; xii. 18. Luke iv. 1. John i. 32; iii. 34. Acts i. 2); the Inspirer of the Prophets and Apostles; the Searcher of all hearts, and the Comforter of good Christians in difficulties. To lie to Him is the same thing as to lie unto God. (Acts v. 3, 4.) Blasphemy against Him is unpardonable. (Matt. xii. 31. 32.) To resist Him is the same thing as to resist God. (Acts vii. 51.) He is in God, and knows the mind of God as perfectly as a man knows his own mind, and that in respect of all things, even the deep things of God. (1 Cor. ii. 10, 11.) Men's bodies are His temple (1 Cor. vi. 19), and by being His temple are the temple of God (1 Cor. iii. 16. Eph. ii. 21, 22.) He is joined with God the Father and the Son in the solemn form of Baptism (Matt. xxviii. 19), in religious oaths, and in invocations for grace and peace (2 Cor. xiii. 14. Rom. ix. 1. Rev. i. 4, 5), in the same common operations (1 Cor. xii. 4 - 7, &c.), in the same authoritative mission and vocation of persons into the ministry (Acts xiii. 2. Compare also Acts ix. 15); and He is joined with the Father in the same common mission even of the Son Himself. (Isa xlviii. 16.) In a word, He is Lord (compare Exod. xxxiv. 34 with 2 Cor. iii. 17), or Jehovah (Acts v. 3, 4), and Lord of Hosts. This is a brief summary of what the Scriptures have taught us of the person, character, and offices of the Holy Ghost." (Waterland's Works, vol. ii. p. 114, Moyer Lecture, Serm. 6.)

11. ἔγνωκεν] So the best MSS. and Editions. Elz. οἶδεν.

There is a difference between the two words: ἔγνωκεν means, "acquired the knowledge of,"—οἶδεν signifies, "knoweth."

On the meaning of this verse, as declaring the Office and Dignity of the Human Conscience, see Bp. Sanderson's First Lecture, de Conscientiâ, vol. iv. p. 153.

13. Ἃ καὶ λαλοῦμεν—διδακτοῖς Πνεύματος] Which things we speak also not in words taught by human Wisdom, but in words taught by the Spirit.

Here is an important assertion, and when combined with what precedes, it shows that the Apostle makes two distinct claims to Inspiration.

(1) As to the substance of what he writes, see vv. 10—12; and

(2) As to the language in which the substance is expressed.

He does not claim to know all things, or even to remember every thing that he himself has done (see on i. 16), but he affirms that he has received the Spirit of God, in order that he may know supernatural truths, which the Intellect of man could never discover (v. 7, 8); and he asserts that he is enabled to utter those supernatural truths in words which the Holy Ghost teacheth.

Here is a sufficient reply to the assertions of those who allege that the Inspiration vouchsafed to St. Paul was limited to a general perception of divine truth, and that he was left to himself without divine guidance as to the form in which that divine truth was to be expressed.

A caution also is thus supplied against the notion that there are verbal inaccuracies, and blemishes, and defects in St. Paul's representation of the supernatural truths which he was commissioned by God to deliver for the salvation of mankind.

Compare the statement of Augustine on this subject, quoted above, Preface to the Gospels, p. xx, and Hooker, II. viii. 6, and his Sermon v. 4, p. 423, and Professor W. Lee, D.D., on Inspiration, Lect. vi. p. 250; and for a valuable Catena of ancient authorities on the Inspiration of St. Paul, see Routh, Reliquiæ Sacræ, vol. v. pp. 336—341.

Elz. has Ἁγίου before Πνεύματος, but that word is not in A, B, C, D*, F, G.

On the genitive after διδακτοῖς, see on John vi. 45, and Winer, p. 175. So Soph. Elect. 336, κείνης διδακτὰ, things taught of, i. e. by her.

— πνευματικοῖς πνευματικὰ συγκρίνοντες] combining spiritual things with spiritual.

These words have a comprehensive signification;

(1) Blending things spiritual with spiritual, in the sense of not adulterating spiritual things with any admixture of worldly wisdom, either in the substance of what we deliver as supernatural truth, or in the language in which we utter it. According to the saying of the ancient Father, "Gypsum Dei lacte misceri non potest."

This sentiment is expressed by the Apostle in his second Epistle (2 Cor. ii. 17), οὐ καπηλεύοντες τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ, not, as the many do, adulterating the Word of God by any earthly admixtures or alloy, but speaking with sincerity in the presence of God, in Christ; and the word of God so communiχικὸς δὲ ἄνθρωπος οὐ δέχεται τὰ τοῦ Πνεύματος τοῦ Θεοῦ· μωρία γὰρ αὐτῷ ἐστι, καὶ οὐ δύναται γνῶναι, ὅτι πνευματικῶς ἀνακρίνεται. 15 ᵖ Ὁ δὲ πνευματικὸς ἀνακρίνει μὲν πάντα, αὐτὸς δὲ ὑπ' οὐδενὸς ἀνακρίνεται· 16 ᵠ τίς γὰρ ἔγνω νοῦν Κυρίου, ὃς συμβιβάσει αὐτόν; ἡμεῖς δὲ νοῦν Χριστοῦ ἔχομεν.

p Prov. 27. 19. & 28. 5. 1 Thess. 5. 21. 1 John 4. 1.
q Job 15. 8. & 22. 2. & 40. 2. Isa. 40. 13, 14. Jer. 23. 18. Wisd. 9. 13. John 15. 15. & 16. 13—16. & 17. 6—8. Rom. 11. 34. Gal. 1. 12.

cated is called by St. Peter τὸ λογικὸν ἄδολον γάλα, i. e. the sincere (i. e. undiluted and unadulterated) spiritual milk of the Word. 1 Pet. ii. 2.

Concerning this use of the word συγκρίνειν, to combine, as the opposite of διακρίνειν, to sever, see Valckenaer here, and Porson, Med. 136, Meyer, p. 56, and the remarkable words quoted by Valck. from Epicharmus, concerning the human soul and body, συνεκρίθη, καὶ διεκρίθη, i. e. it was combined with the body in life, but is now dissolved in death, καὶ ἀπῆνθε ὅνθεν ἦνθεν, γᾶ εἰς γᾶν, τὸ δὲ πνεῦμα ἄνωθι.

(2) But this sense of συγκρίνω is to be extended so as to embrace also that of comparing, and of explaining and interpreting by means of comparison, a sense which is well illustrated by Wetstein, p. 107, and is adopted by Chrys., Theodoret, and the Syriac, Vulgate, and Authorized English Version, and is the same sense in which St. Paul himself uses the word in his second Epistle (2 Cor. x. 12), the only other passage in the New Testament where it occurs.

He gives some noble specimens of this σύγκρισις, or comparison of spiritual things with spiritual, in the present Epistle, especially in the fifth chapter, where he teaches us to recognize Christ as the True Passover; and in the Tenth Chapter, where the Apostle συγκρίνει or combines and compares the spiritual food and drink of the Ancient Church in the Wilderness (vv. 2, 3) with the Sacraments of the Christian Church.

We have the testimony of the Holy Spirit in the Old Testament, and by it we confirm the New. When we desire to display the types of our own Mysteries, we appeal to the Lamb of the Passover and the Blood sprinkled on the Doors, and the Passage of the Red Sea, and the streams gushing from the Rock, and the supply of Manna from heaven; and by this comparison of spiritual things with spiritual we prove their truth. (Theodoret.) By the simultaneous examination of one phrase of Holy Scripture with another, and by the collation of like passages of Holy Writ with like, the Mind of the Holy Ghost is revealed to us. (Origen.)

If we find any difficulty in a spiritual truth, we compare it with some other spiritual truth. Thus in treating of the doctrine of Christ's Resurrection, or Birth from a Virgin, we resort to spiritual examples and types, such as the history of Jonah in the whale's belly, and the birth of Isaac, and the growth of trees in Paradise without any previous seed-time, and the birth of Adam from the ground. Thus I compare spiritual things with spiritual; and (in such supernatural things) I do not need worldly wisdom, which (in such matters as these) rather darkens than illumines the mind. (Chrysostom.) And so Origen (in Caten.).

This sense is confirmed by that in which συγκρίνω and σύγκρισις are used in the Septuagint, where they are commonly employed for to interpret and the interpretation of a Vision or dream. See Gen. xl. 8. 16. 22; xli. 12, 13. 15. Dan. ii. 4. 7. 36. 45; v. 12, and passim.

14. Ψυχικός] the animal man; 'animalis homo' (Irenæus, i. 3), opposed to πνευματικὸς, spiritualis, or as St. Jude expresses it (v. 19), ψυχικοὶ, πνεῦμα μὴ ἔχοντες. Ψυχὴ is equivalent to anima, as the seat of animal life and appetite (τὸ ἐπιθυμητικὸν) common to man with beasts, and in this respect equivalent to the classical word θυμὸς, and distinguished from the nobler faculty of the mind and soul, which the Apostle calls πνεῦμα, or spirit. This distinctive nomenclature appears to be of Hebrew origin. Cp. Valck., and see above, 1 Thess. v. 23.

That man is ψυχικὸς, who lives according to the flesh, and is not illumined by the Spirit. Cyril (in Caten.).

Adopting these terms, Tertullian brands with the epithet of ψυχικοὶ ("homines solius animæ et carnis." De Jejun. c. 17) those who rejected the new revelation (claimed by Montanus), and confers the distinguished appellation of πνευματικοὶ, or spiritual, on his own Montanists. Cp. Bp. Kaye's Tertullian, p. 30.

It must not, however, be imagined that ψυχικὸς is synonymous with σαρκικός. As Grotius observes here, ψυχικὸς is here the natural man, who (as opposed to the πνευματικὸς, or spiritual) is led by natural Reason. Such were the Gentile Philosophers; they were all ψυχικοὶ, and many of them were also σαρκικοί.

— οὐ δέχεται] doth not accept, is not able or willing to receive it.

— πνευματικῶς ἀνακρίνεται] they are spiritually judged; the examination and cognizance of them is spiritual; it is an exercise of the πνεῦμα, spirit, not of the ψυχή: see the next note.

15. ἀνακρίνει] judgeth; has spiritual guidance for the exercise of his judgment. Some Expositors render ἀνακρίνω by discern; but this is not the sense in which ἀνα—κρίνω is used in this Epistle. See iv. 3, 4; ix. 3; x. 25. 27. Cp. Luke xxiii. 14. Acts iv. 9; xii. 19; xxiv. 8. Cp. ἀνά-κρισις, examination, xxv. 26. To discern is δια—κρίνω. μὲν is omitted by A, C, D*, F, G, and by Lachm., Tisch.

— πάντα] A, C, D*, F, G prefix τά. Meyer supposes that the τὰ has been omitted by Copyists in order to make the numeral correspond in gender with οὐδενός. And Irenæus, Didymus, and Theodoret read πάντας. On the use of πάντα, as equivalent to all things necessary or convenient, see on Acts i. 1.

— αὐτὸς δὲ ὑπ' οὐδενὸς ἀνακρίνεται] but, as far as he is really spiritual, he himself is judged by no man; for he has divine guidance. Cp. 1 John iii. 9. And if he is really led by the Spirit, he will listen to the voice of the Spirit speaking in the public consent and practice of the Church Universal, to which the presence of the Spirit is promised by Christ (John xiv. 17. 26; xv. 26; xvi. 13), and will not oppose thereto the notions of his own, or any man's, private spirit in insubordinate acts, which are not fruits of the Holy Spirit, but of the Evil Spirit, and are signs of a carnal mind. See the next chapter, vv. 3, 4.

16. τίς ἔγνω—αὐτόν] A literal quotation from the Septuagint Version of Isa. xl. 13.

No one can judge him who is spiritual, that is, one who is led by the mind of God. For who can instruct God, whose Spirit we have? Cp. Cyril and Severian here (in Cat. p. 50).

— συμβιβάσει] Properly will instruct them by means of proofs deduced and collected from different quarters. See LXX, Exod. iv. 15; xviii. 16. Hence Hesych. συμβιβασθέντες = διδαχθέντες. See Wetstein.

Review of the Two foregoing Chapters.

On reviewing the two preceding chapters it may be requisite to offer a caution against the error which has perverted several statements in them into arguments for the disparagement of Human Reason and Learning in matters of Religion.

The results of this abuse have shown themselves in the history of our Church and Nation in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

A warning against those notions cannot be better conveyed than in the words of Richard Hooker, which have also an appropriate place here, as illustrating the personal history and public ministry of St. Paul, particularly in connexion with his Epistles to the Church of Corinth.

The name of the Light of Nature is made hateful with men; the "star of Reason and Learning," and all other such like helps, beginneth no otherwise to be thought of than if it were an unlucky comet, or as if God had so accursed it, that it should never shine or give light in things concerning our duty any way towards Him, but be esteemed as that Star in the Revelation (Rev. viii. 11) called Wormwood, which being fallen from Heaven maketh rivers and waters in which it falleth so bitter that men tasting them die thereof.

A number there are who think they cannot admire as they ought the power and authority of the Word of God, if in things divine they should attribute any force to man's Reason. For which cause they never use Reason so willingly as to disgrace Reason. Their usual and common discourses are unto this effect,—

First, "the natural man perceiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him, neither can he know them" (1 Cor. ii. 14).

Secondly, it is not for nothing that St. Paul giveth charge to "beware of Philosophy" (Col. ii. 8), that is to say, such knowledge as men by natural reason attain unto.

Thirdly, consider them that have from time to time opposed themselves, and most troubled the Church with heresy. Have they not always been great admirers of human Reason? Hath their deep and profound skill in secular learning made them the more obedient to the truth, and not armed them rather against it?

Fourthly, they that fear God will remember how heavy His sentences are in this case, "I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will cast away the understanding of the prudent. Where is the wise? Where is the scribe? Where is the disputer of this world? Hath not God made the wisdom of this world foolishness? Seeing the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save believers" (1 Cor. i. 19).

Fifthly, the Word of God in itself is absolute, exact, and perfect; the Word of God is a two-edged sword (Heb. iv. 12). As for the weapons of natural Reason they are as the armour of Saul (1 Sam. xvii. 39), rather cumbersome about the soldier of Christ, than needful; they are not of force to do that which the Apostles of Christ did by the power of the Holy Ghost. "My preaching," therefore, saith Paul, "hath not been in the enticing speech of man's wisdom, but in plain evidence of the Spirit, and of power, that your faith might not be in the wisdom of man, but in the power of God" (1 Cor. ii. 4).

Sixthly, if I believe the Gospel, there needeth no Reasoning about it to persuade me; if I do not believe it, it must be the Spirit of God, and not the Reason of man, that shall convert my heart unto Him.

By these and the like disputes an opinion hath spread itself very far in the world, as if the way to be ripe in Faith, were to be raw in Wit and Judgment; as if Reason were an enemy unto Religion, childish Simplicity the mother of ghostly and divine Wisdom.

The cause why such declamations prevail so greatly is, for that men suffer themselves in two respects to be deluded: one is, that the wisdom of man being debased either in comparison with that of God, or in regard of some special thing exceeding the reach and compass thereof, it seemeth to them (not marking so much) as if simply it were condemned; another, that Learning, Knowledge, or Wisdom, falsely so termed, usurping a name whereof they are not worthy, and being under that name controlled, their reproof is by so much the more easily misapplied, and through equivocation wrested against those things whereunto so precious names do properly and of right belong.

This, duly observed, doth to the former allegations itself make sufficient answer.

Howbeit for all men's plainer and fuller satisfaction;

First, concerning the inability of Reason to search out and to judge of things divine, if they be such as those properties of God and those duties of men towards Him, which may be conceived by attentive consideration of heaven and earth; we know that of mere natural men the Apostle testifieth (Rom. i. 21. 32), how they knew both God and the Law of God.

Other things of God there be which are neither so found, nor though they be showed can ever be approved without the special operation of God's good grace and Spirit. Of such things sometime spake the Apostle St. Paul, declaring how Christ had called him to be a witness of His Death and Resurrection from the dead, according to that which the Prophets and Moses had foreshowed. Festus, a mere natural man, an infidel, a Roman, one whose ears were unacquainted with such matter, heard him, but could not reach unto that whereof he spake; the Suffering and the Rising of Christ from the dead he rejecteth, as idle, superstitious fancies, not worth the hearing (Acts xxv. 19). The Apostle that knew them by the Spirit, and spake of them with power of the Holy Ghost, seemed in his eyes but learnedly mad (Acts xxvi. 24).

Which example maketh manifest what elsewhere the same Apostle teacheth, namely, that Nature hath need of Grace (1 Cor. ii. 14), whereunto I hope we are not opposite, by holding that Grace hath use of Nature.

Secondly, Philosophy, we are warned to take heed of not that Philosophy, which is true and sound knowledge, attained by natural discourse of Reason; but that Philosophy, which, to bolster heresy or error, casteth a fraudulent show of Reason upon things which are indeed unreasonable, and by that mean, as by a stratagem, spoileth the simple which are not able to withstand such cunning. "Take heed lest any spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit" (Col. ii. 8). He that exhorteth to beware of an enemy's policy doth not give counsel to be impolitic, but rather to use all provident foresight and circumspection, lest our simplicity be overreached by cunning sleights.

The way not to be inveigled by them that are so guileful through skill, is thoroughly to be instructed in that which maketh skilful against guile, and to be armed with that true and sincere philosophy which doth teach, against that deceitful and vain, which spoileth.

Thirdly, But many great Philosophers have been very unsound in belief. And many sound in belief, have been also great Philosophers. Could secular knowledge bring the one sort unto the love of Christian faith? No, nor Christian faith the other sort out of love with secular knowledge. The harm that Heretics did, they did it unto such as were unable to discern between sound and deceitful Reasoning: and the remedy against it was ever the Skill which the ancient Fathers had, to descry and discover such deceit. Insomuch that Cresconius, the heretic, complained greatly of S. Augustine, as being too full of logical subtleties.

Fourthly, There is in the world no kind of Knowledge, whereby any part of truth is seen, but we justly account it precious; yea, that principal truth, in comparison whereof all other knowledge is vile, may receive from it some kind of light; whether it be that Egyptian and Chaldean wisdom mathematical, wherewith Moses and Daniel were furnished (Acts vii. 22. Dan. i. 17), or that natural, moral, and civil wisdom, wherein Solomon excelled all men (1 Kings iv. 29, 30), or that rational and oratorial wisdom of the Grecians, which the Apostle St. Paul brought from Tarsus; or that Judaical, which he learned in Jerusalem, sitting at the feet of Gamaliel (Acts xxii. 3); to detract from the dignity thereof were to injure even God Himself, Who being that light which none can approach unto, hath sent out these lights whereof we are capable, even as so many sparkles resembling the bright fountain from which they rise.

But there are that bear the title of wise men, and scribes, and great disputers of the world, and are nothing in deed less than what in show they most appear. These, being wholly addicted unto their own wills, use their Wit, their Learning, and all the Wisdom they have, to maintain that which their obstinate hearts are delighted with; esteeming, in the frantic error of their minds, the greatest madness in the world to be wisdom, and the highest wisdom foolishness. Such were both Jews and Grecians, which professed the one sort legal, and the other secular skill, neither of them enduring to be taught the Mystery of Christ; unto the glory of Whose most blessed name, whoso study to use both their Reason and all other gifts, as well which Nature as which Grace hath endued them with, let them never doubt but that the same God, who is to destroy and confound utterly that wisdom, falsely so named in others, doth make reckoning of them as of true Scribes, Scribes by wisdom instructed to the kingdom of heaven (Matt. xiii. 52), not Scribes against that kingdom hardened in a vain opinion of wisdom; which in the end being proved folly must needs perish; true Understanding, Knowledge, Judgment, and Reason continuing for evermore.

Fifthly, Unto the Word of God, being in respect of that end, for which God ordained it, perfect, exact, and absolute in itself, we do not add Reason, as a supplement of any maim or defect therein, but as a necessary instrument, without which we could not reap by the Scripture's perfection that fruit and benefit which it yieldeth.

"The Word of God is a two-edged sword" (Heb. iv. 12), but in the hands of reasonable men; and Reason is as the weapon that slew Goliath, if they be as David was, that use it.

Touching the Apostles, He which gave them from above such power for miraculous confirmation of that which they taught, endued them also with wisdom from above to teach that which they so did confirm. Our Saviour made choice of twelve simple and unlearned men, that the greater their lack of natural wisdom was, the more admirable that might appear which God supernaturally endued them with from heaven. Such, therefore, as knew the poor and silly estate wherein they had lived, could not but wonder to hear the wisdom of their speech, and be so much the more attentive unto their teaching. They studied for no tongue, they spake with all; of themselves they were rude, and knew not so much as how to premeditate; the Spirit gave them speech and eloquent utterance.

But because with St. Paul it was otherwise than with the rest, inasmuch as he never conversed with Christ upon earth as they did; and his education had been scholastical altogether, which theirs was not; hereby occasion was taken by certain malignants secretly to undermine his great authority in the Church of Christ, as though the Gospel had been taught him by others than by Christ Himself; and as if the cause of the Gentiles' conversion and belief through his means had been the Learning and Skill which he had, by being conversant in their books; which thing made them so willing to hear him, and him so able to persuade them; whereas the rest of the Apostles prevailed, because God was with them, and by miracle from heaven confirmed His word in their mouths. They were mighty in deeds; as for him, being absent, his writings had some force; in presence, his power not like unto theirs. In sum, concerning his preaching, their very by-word was λόγος ἐξουθενημένος, addle speech, empty talk (2 Cor. x. 10); his writings full of great words, but in the power of miraculous operations his presence not like the rest of the Apostles.

Hereupon it ariseth, that St. Paul was so often driven to make his apologies. Hereupon it riseth, that whatsoever time he had spent in the study of human learning, he maketh earnest protestation to them of Corinth, that the Gospel which he had preached amongst them did not by other means prevail with them, than with others the same Gospel taught by the rest of the

III. [1] Κἀγὼ, ἀδελφοὶ, οὐκ ἠδυνήθην λαλῆσαι ὑμῖν ὡς πνευματικοῖς, ἀλλ' ὡς σαρκίνοις, ὡς νηπίοις ἐν Χριστῷ. [2] [a] Γάλα ὑμᾶς ἐπότισα, οὐ βρῶμα· οὔπω γὰρ ἠδύνασθε· ἀλλ' οὐδὲ ἔτι νῦν δύνασθε· [3] [b] ἔτι γὰρ σαρκικοί ἐστε· ὅπου γὰρ ἐν ὑμῖν ζῆλος καὶ ἔρις καὶ διχοστασίαι, οὐχὶ σαρκικοί ἐστε, καὶ κατὰ ἄνθρωπον περιπατεῖτε; [4] [c] Ὅταν γὰρ λέγῃ τίς, Ἐγὼ μέν εἰμι Παύλου, ἕτερος δέ, Ἐγὼ Ἀπολλώ, οὐχὶ ἄνθρωποί ἐστε;

a Heb. 5. 12, 13. John 16. 12. 1 Pet. 2. 2. b ch. 1. 11. Gal. 5. 19, 20. James 3. 16.
c ch. 1. 12. & 4. 6.

Apostles of Christ. "My preaching," saith he, "hath not been in the persuasive speeches of human wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power: that your faith may not be in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God" (1 Cor. ii. 4, 5). What is it which the Apostle doth here deny? Is it denied, that his speech amongst them had been persuasive? No; for of him the sacred history plainly testifieth, that for the space of a year and a half he spake in their synagogue every Sabbath, and persuaded both Jews and Grecians. (Acts xviii. 4. 11.) How then is the speech of men made persuasive? Surely there can be but two ways to bring this to pass,—the one human, the other divine. Either St. Paul did only by art and natural industry cause his own speech to be credited; or else God by miracle did authorize it, and so bring credit thereunto, as to the speech of the rest of the Apostles. Of which two,—the former he utterly denieth. For why? If the preaching of the rest had been effectual by miracle, his only by force of his own learning; so great inequality between him and the other Apostles in this thing had been enough to subvert their faith. For might they not with reason have thought, that if he were sent of God as well as they, God would not have furnished them and not him with the power of the Holy Ghost? Might not a great part of them, being simple, haply have feared lest their assent had been cunningly gotten unto his doctrine, rather through the weakness of their own wits than the certainty of that truth which he had taught them? How unequal had it been, that all believers through the preaching of other Apostles should have their faith strongly built upon the evidence of God's own miraculous approbation, and they whom he had converted should have their persuasion built only upon his skill and wisdom who persuaded them!

As, therefore, Calling from men may authorize us to teach, although it could not authorize him to teach as other Apostles did; so although the wisdom of man had not been sufficient to enable him such a teacher as the rest of the Apostles were, unless God's miracles had strengthened both the one and the other's doctrine; yet unto our ability both of teaching and learning the truth of Christ, as we are but mere Christian men, it is not a little which the wisdom of man may add.

Sixthly. Yea, whatsoever our hearts be to God and to His truth, believe we or be we as yet faithless, for our conversion or confirmation the force of natural Reason is great. The force whereof unto those effects is nothing without grace. What then? To our purpose it is sufficient, that whosoever doth serve, honour, and obey God, whosoever believeth in Him, that man would no more do this than innocents and infants do, but for the light of natural reason that shineth in him, and maketh him apt to apprehend those things of God which, being by Grace discovered, are effectual to persuade reasonable minds and none other, that honour, obedience, and credit, belong of right unto God. No man cometh unto God to offer Him sacrifice, to pour out supplications and prayers before Him, or to do Him any service, which doth not first believe Him both to be, and to be a rewarder of them who in such sort seek unto Him. (Heb. xi. 6.) Let men be taught this either by revelation from heaven, or by instruction upon earth; by labour, study, and meditation; or by the only secret inspiration of the Holy Ghost; whatsoever the mean be they know it by, if the knowledge thereof were possible without discourse of natural reason, why should none be found capable thereof but only men? nor men till such time as they come unto ripe and full ability to work by reasonable understanding? The whole drift of the Scripture of God, what is it but only to teach Theology? Theology, what is it but the science of things Divine? What science can be attained unto without the help of natural discourse and reason? "Judge ye of that which I speak" (1 Cor. x. 15), saith the Apostle. In vain it were to speak any thing of God, but that by reason men are able to judge of what they hear, and by discourse to discern how consonant it is to truth.

Scripture indeed teacheth things above Nature, things which our reason by itself could not reach unto. Yet those things also we believe, knowing by Reason that the Scripture is the Word of God. Hooker (III. viii. 4—11).

CHAP. III.] In this chapter St. Paul remonstrates with the Corinthians for dividing themselves into parties, and ranging themselves under human leaders, and calling themselves by their names.

He censures this practice as the fruit of a carnal mind.

He declares that even Apostles themselves are only instruments, by which God works, and derive all their efficiency from Him.

He shows that by calling themselves adherents of human leaders, and by adopting their names, they defraud God, Whose they are.

He intimates that their sin is greater, in that they range themselves under some leaders, who are not Apostles, nor wise builders, but either build on some other than the only true foundation, Jesus Christ, or else build ill upon that one foundation.

He then introduces a solemn warning to those false teachers, of whom he specifies two classes;

i. Those who build ill on the one foundation, which is Christ (v. 15).

ii. Those who utterly corrupt and defile (φθείρουσι) the building of God's spiritual house, the Church (v. 17). See further on vv. 12—15.

He remonstrates with them on surrendering their Christian liberty, and filial inheritance with which God has enriched them in Christ, by making themselves the servile followers of human leaders of religious parties, and by even glorying in their names (vv. 21—23.)

1. Κἀγώ] So A, B, C, D, E, F, G; and this seems preferable to the reading of Elz., καὶ ἐγὼ, which brings out the personal pronoun in a more prominent manner, less suited to the Apostle's humility, especially in this place, where he depresses his own person and office in order to elevate that of Christ. Cp. ii. 1.

— σαρκίνοις] fleshy. So A, B, C*, D*; and this reading has been received by Griesb., Lach., Tisch., Alf., and Meyer; and it is confirmed by the exposition of Origen (in Cramer's Catena, p. 51). The word σάρκινος is stronger than σαρκικός. Elz. has σαρκικοῖς. St. Paul means that at first they were only σάρκινοι, and even now are not better than σαρκικοί, v. 3.

The word σάρκινος signifies carneus, made of flesh. Compare the similar adjectives, ξύλινος, made of wood; πήλινος, of clay; ἀκάνθινος, of thorns; βύσσινος, of fine linen. (Winer, § 16, p. 89.) And see the use of σάρκινοι in 2 Cor. iii. 3.

But the word σαρκικὸς means carnal, as opposed to spiritual. Hence Ignatius (ad Ephes. 8), οἱ σαρκικοὶ τὰ πνευματικὰ πράσσειν οὐ δύνανται οὐδὲ οἱ πνευματικοὶ σαρκικά.

— νηπίοις] babes. The reason is given in the following verses.

On schisms as proofs of spiritual childishness, see Introduction to the Ephesians, § iii., and on Eph. iv. 13, 14. St. Paul censures the "spiritual and learned" Corinthians—for such they deemed themselves—as carnal and as babes. A striking proof, not only of the sinfulness of Schism, but also of the Apostle's courage, and honesty, and confidence in the Divine dignity and power of the Gospel and of his own mission. Cp. below on Titus i. 12.

2. Γάλα—οὐ βρῶμα] milk—not meat. The Author of the Epistle to the Hebrews uses very similar language, v. 12—14.

— οὐ βρῶμα] Elz. prefixes καὶ, not in A, B, C, nor in Irenæus, who quotes this passage and v. 3 in iv. 3. 5.

— οὐδέ] not even. So the best MSS. Elz. οὔτε.

S. Chrysostom examines here the important question, how the Corinthians could be called carnal, when they were "behind in no gift" (i. 7, χαρίσματι)? and shows from the examples of Balaam, Caiaphas, and others, that men may possess extraordinary spiritual gifts (such as prophecy, and miraculous powers, and tongues), and yet abuse them, and so be guilty of greater sin in proportion to their spiritual gifts. And why? because they have not the χάρις or grace of Ἀγάπη, or Love. See xiii. 1—5. A warning to all who are in heresy and schism, and yet imagine themselves to be spiritual, because they may have great spiritual gifts.

4. ἄνθρωποι] men: swayed by human passions, and not guided by the Divine Spirit. This reading, ἄνθρωποι, is in A, B, C, D, E, F, G, and Vulg., Copt., Æthiopic Versions; and so Lach., Tisch., Rückert, Meyer, Alford. And this reading is confirmed

5 [d] Τίς οὖν ἐστιν Ἀπολλὼς, τίς δὲ Παῦλος; διάκονοι δι' ὧν ἐπιστεύσατε, καὶ ἑκάστῳ ὡς ὁ Κύριος ἔδωκεν· 6 [e] ἐγὼ ἐφύτευσα, Ἀπολλὼς ἐπότισεν, ἀλλ' ὁ Θεὸς ηὔξανεν.

7 [f] Ὥστε οὔτε ὁ φυτεύων ἐστί τι, οὔτε ὁ ποτίζων, ἀλλ' ὁ αὐξάνων Θεός.

8 [g] Ὁ φυτεύων δὲ καὶ ὁ ποτίζων ἕν εἰσιν· ἕκαστος δὲ τὸν ἴδιον μισθὸν λήψεται κατὰ τὸν ἴδιον κόπον. 9 [g] Θεοῦ γάρ ἐσμεν συνεργοί· Θεοῦ γεώργιον, Θεοῦ οἰκοδομή ἐστε. 10 [h] Κατὰ τὴν χάριν τοῦ Θεοῦ τὴν δοθεῖσάν μοι, ὡς σοφὸς ἀρχιτέκτων θεμέλιον τέθεικα· ἄλλος δὲ ἐποικοδομεῖ· ἕκαστος δὲ βλεπέτω πῶς ἐποικοδομεῖ· 11 [i] θεμέλιον γὰρ ἄλλον οὐδεὶς δύναται θεῖναι παρὰ τὸν κείμενον, ὅς ἐστιν Ἰησοῦς Χριστός. 12 Εἰ δέ τις ἐποικοδομεῖ ἐπὶ τὸν θεμέλιον τοῦτον,

d ch. 1. 12. & 4. 6.
e Acts 18. 26. & 19. 1.
f Ps. 62. 12. Matt. 16. 27. Rom. 2. 6. Gal. 6. 5. g 2 Cor. 6. 1. Eph. 2. 20. Col. 2. 7. 1 Pet. 2. 5.
h Rom. 1. 5. & 12. 3. & 15. 15, 20. Eph. 3. 2—8. Col. 1. 29. 1 Tim. 1. 11—14. 1 Pet. 4. 11.
i Isa. 28. 16. Matt. 16. 18. Eph. 2. 20.

by Origen (in Caten. p. 53), who says, "There are two paths in this world, the one is according to man, the other is according to God. If we walk as most men do, we walk according to man, but if we separate ourselves from the world we walk according to God. They who form parties in religion, and attach themselves to human leaders,—they who follow men,—they are mere men, and walk according to the flesh."—Elz. has σαρκικοί.

St. Paul blamed the part-takings in the Church of Corinth, whilst one professed himself to be of Paul, another of Apollos, another of Cephas, as fruits of carnality unbecoming Christians. Is it not also blameworthy in us, and a fruit of the same carnality, if any of us shall affect to be counted rigid Lutherans, or perfect Calvinists, or give up our judgments to be wholly guided by the writings of Luther, or Calvin, or any other mortal man whatsoever? Worthy instruments they were, but yet were they not men? had they received the Spirit in the fulness of it, and not by measure? knew they otherwise than in part? might they not in many things, did they not in some things, mistake and err? Howsoever, the Apostle's interrogatories are unanswerable. What saith he, Was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized in the name of Paul? (1 Cor. i. 13.) Even so, Was either Luther or Calvin crucified for you? or were ye baptized into the name either of Luther, or Calvin, or any other man, that any one of you should say, I am of Luther, or any other I am of Calvin? What is Calvin, or Luther, nay, what is Paul or Apollos, but ministers by whom ye believed (1 Cor. iii. 5)? that is to say, instruments, but not lords of your belief. Bp. Sanderson (iv. p. 289).

Observe also, St. Paul represents the Corinthians as carnal, and as vitiated by many sins; and yet he addresses them as having been sanctified, ἡγιασμένους, κλητοὺς ἁγίους (i. 2), and as members of Christ's body, and as Temples of the Holy Ghost. (iii. 16; vi. 19.)

Here is a lesson to all Preachers of the Gospel. They may not allow vicious men to imagine that they have received nothing from God in their Baptism; but they are bound to warn them of the sin whereof they are guilty, and of the danger which they incur, by grieving the Spirit of God, Who made them Members of Christ at their Baptism, and Temples of God the Holy Ghost.

5. Ἀπολλὼς—Παῦλος] This is the order in A, B, C, D, E, F, G. Elz. places Παῦλος first.

— διάκονοι] Elz. prefixes ἀλλ' ἤ, which is not in the best MSS.

— ἐπιστεύσατε] ye believed. Ye became Christians, and made public profession of your faith. See Acts viii. 13; xiii. 48. Rom. xiii. 11.

6. Θεὸς ηὔξανεν] God was giving the increase. Observe the force of the imperfect, intimating a continual bestowal of divine grace, as distinguished from the transitory acts of His Ministers, Paul and Apollos, whose operations are described by the aorists, ἐφύτευσα, ἐπότισεν. Cp. Acts vi. 7, where the word ηὔξανεν marks the continual increase of the Church while under persecution; and see Acts ii. 47. So here the Apostle means to say that while he himself planted, and Apollos watered, God was all the while giving the increase, without which their acts would have been vain.

7. Ὥστε] So then: an illative formula, of very frequent occurrence in this Epistle. See iii. 21; iv. 5; v. 8; vii. 38; x. 12; xi. 27. 33; xiv. 22. 39; xv. 58.

8. ἕν εἰσιν] are one thing: 'unum sunt' (Vulg.). Observe the neuter gender. God is ὁ εἷς, they are ἕν. He is the One Agent, they are an instrument in His hands; and they are one, as united together in Christ. But they are not what you would make them in your party-factions to be, separate persons, and rival heads and leaders of opposite sects.

— ἕκαστος δὲ—κόπον] but each shall receive his own wages according to his own labour. Although your Pastors are one thing, as far as they are only channels and instruments of Divine Grace to you, and not original sources and independent agents; and as far as they are all united, as fellow-members under the One Head, Christ; yet do not suppose that, as far as their own free will and human labour (κόπος) are concerned, they have no distinct personal identity, or will all have one and the same reward for their several work. No, though the workmen are nothing without Divine Grace, yet each will be rewarded according to his own work.

9. Θεοῦ γ. ἐ. συνεργοί, Θεοῦ γεώργιον, Θεοῦ οἰκοδομή] God's fellow-workers are we—God's husbandry—God's building are ye. The house does not belong to the architect, but to its master. Chrys.

He repeats the word Θεοῦ, God's, and places it emphatically at the beginning of the several clauses, in order to remind them that since they are God's property they cannot sell themselves to Man.

Ye are God's Garden, why do you break down the hedge by schism? Chrys.

10. σοφὸς ἀρχιτέκτων] a skilful master-builder. He does not scruple to claim this title. "Talem facit cognitio Christi (Bengel) et gratia Spiritûs ipsi donata, χάρις τοῦ Θεοῦ ἡ δοθεῖσά μοι." St. Paul calls himself wise, not as vaunting himself, but propounding himself as an example, and showing that it is the part of wisdom to lay one foundation, and to build well upon it. Chrys.

— θεμέλιον] a foundation. St. Paul uses the masculine form, see v. 11, and 2 Tim. ii. 19. In the Apocalypse θεμέλιοι signify foundation stones (xxi. 14. 19). St. Luke (Acts xvi. 26) uses the neuter plural θεμέλια. The neuter is the Attic form, the masculine the common one. Thom. Mag. Besides, the masculine is very appropriate here; for the foundation is Christ.

11. παρὰ τὸν κείμενον] beside Him who lieth. He does not say τεθέντα, laid, but κείμενον, lying, of His own accord. Christ, the True Foundation Stone, was not laid by human hands, but κεῖται, lieth, by His own free will and act. Cp. Dan. ii. 34. 45.

This word, κεῖται, descriptive of His character as the one foundation of the Church (see Matt. xvi. 18), is applied to Him in His first Presentation in the material Temple at Jerusalem. Luke ii. 34, οὗτος κεῖται εἰς πτῶσιν καὶ ἀνάστασιν, i. e. He is a Stone of stumbling to some, and a "stone elect, precious," the foundation Stone, to others. (Isa. viii. 14, 15; xxviii. 16. Rom. ix. 32, 33. 1 Pet. ii. 7, 8.)

It is observable also that the Man of Sin, who places himself as a Foundation of the Church in the room of Christ, the one Foundation, is called ὁ Ἀντι-κείμενος. (2 Thess. ii. 4.)

The present is a strong passage against the Roman theory, that Peter, and the Bishop of Rome (on the alleged ground of succession to him), is the Rock of the Church;

The following comment of an ancient Father and Bishop of the Church on the present passage is pertinent to that question;

It is for us to build superstructures, not to lay foundations. For no one can lay any other than that which already exists. That foundation was laid by Peter, or rather by the Lord Himself. For, when Peter had said, "Thou art the Son of the Living God," the Lord replied, "On this Rock I will build My Church." Do not therefore name yourselves from men, for the only foundation is Christ. (Theodoret.) See further on Matt. xvi. 16—18.

There is no other foundation but Christ: none "other name by which we must be saved." (Acts iv. 12.) There is "One Lord Jesus Christ through Whom are all things," and "He is the Head of the Body, the Church." (Col. i. 16. Eph. v. 23.) He who denies this foundation, and rejects Him who is the Rock, builds on the sand. Cyril (in Catenâ, p. 59).

12—15. Εἰ δέ τις ἐποικοδομεῖ] But if any man buildeth upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones—wood, hay, stubble (or straw)—the work of each man shall be made manifest; for the Day shall declare it; because it is revealed in fire, and the fire itself will prove each man's work, of what sort it is.

k ch. 4. 5. 2 Tim. 3. 9. 1 Pet. 1. 7. & 4. 12. l ch. 1. 8. Mal. 3. 17. Rom. 2. 5, 16. 2 Thess. 1. 7—10. 2 Tim. 1. 18. m ch. 6. 19. 2 Cor. 6. 16. Eph. 2. 21, 22. Heb. 3. 6. 1 Pet. 2. 5.

χρυσὸν, ἄργυρον, λίθους τιμίους· ξύλα, χόρτον, καλάμην· 13 [k] ἑκάστου τὸ ἔργον φανερὸν γενήσεται· [l] ἡ γὰρ ἡμέρα δηλώσει, ὅτι ἐν πυρὶ ἀποκαλύπτεται, καὶ ἑκάστου τὸ ἔργον ὁποῖόν ἐστι τὸ πῦρ αὐτὸ δοκιμάσει. 14 Εἴ τινος τὸ ἔργον μενεῖ ὃ ἐπῳκοδόμησε, μισθὸν λήψεται· 15 εἴ τινος τὸ ἔργον κατακαήσεται, ζημιωθήσεται· αὐτὸς δὲ σωθήσεται, οὕτω δὲ ὡς διὰ πυρός.

16 [m] Οὐκ οἴδατε ὅτι ναὸς Θεοῦ ἐστε, καὶ τὸ Πνεῦμα τοῦ Θεοῦ οἰκεῖ ἐν ὑμῖν;

It will be convenient to offer an exposition of these verses collectively in one note;

St. Paul has declared that there is but one Foundation, Christ: see here v. 11, and above on ii. 2.

He now proceeds to state the cautions to be observed by those who build upon that one Foundation.

He describes two kinds of superstructures laid upon it:

(1) The good, and fair, and durable one of sound doctrine, represented by Gold, Silver, Precious Stones.

Compare the description of the fabric of the Church glorified, Rev. xxi. 10—21.

(2) The worthless and perishable superstructure of vain and false teaching, represented by wood, hay, stubble.

He is here speaking of a doctrinal superstructure, growing up into a holy life. See Theodoret, Ambrosius, Anselm, and, before them all, Tertullian (c. Marcion. v. 6), where he speaks of Christ as the one foundation, "unicum fundamentum," of those who believe; and adds, that a man's work will stand, or be destroyed, according as he has built "dignam indignamve doctrinam" upon it. Cp. Hammond here.

St. Paul also affirms here that 'the Day,' namely, the Great Day of the Lord, will try and manifest what is the character and quality of each man's work.

This trial he represents as to be made by fire: "The Day will declare it, for it is revealed by Fire;"

To show the certainty, and perpetual imminence of that fiery trial of the Last Day, he uses the present tense (ἀποκαλύπτεται, is revealed). So Rev. i. 7, "Behold He cometh with clouds." Rev. xxii. 20.

That the fire of which he speaks is the fire of the Great Day, is evident from the context, and from other similar passages (see 2 Thess. i. 7), "The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven in flaming fire." Cp. Heb. x. 27; xii. 29. 2 Pet. iii. 7, and Daniel's Vision of the Great Day (vii. 9, 10). And so the passage is interpreted by Theodoret and others.

St. Paul next asserts, that,

(1) If the superstructure of Faith and Practice which a man has built upon the one foundation shall abide (μενεῖ, see Winer, p. 50), and endure the trial of the Great Day, he shall receive a reward, μισθόν. Cp. Matt. v. 12. John iv. 36.

(2) But, if a man's work, which he has built on the one Foundation, does not stand the trial of that day, but is consumed and destroyed by the fire, then he shall suffer loss: he shall forfeit his reward, ζημιωθήσεται. Cp. Matt. xvi. 26. Phil. iii. 8.

Yet, he adds, that the workman himself will be saved; but with fear, danger, and difficulty; and "as through fire."

As to this meaning of ὡς διὰ πυρὸς, a proverbial saying, aptly introduced after the mention of the fire of the Great Day, see further, Psalm lxvi. 12, "We went through fire," Isa. xliii. 2, and cp. Chrys. here, Hammond, Wetstein, and the interpreters on Theocrit. v. 31, μὴ σπεῦδ', οὐ γάρ τοι πυρὶ θάλπεαι, and on Juvenal iii. 199, and Valck. here, "Proverbium est de iis qui summum evasere discrimen."

"Si primum locum habet Christus, rectè positum est fundamentum. Ergo qui ædificat, securus ædificet, si pro dignitate fundamenti ædificat aurum, argentum, lapides pretiosos. Si autem non pro dignitate fundamenti ædificat lignum, fenum, stipulam, saltem teneat fundamentum, et propter illa quæ extruxit arida et fragilia ad ignem se præparet, is detrimentum patietur; ipse autem salvus erit, sic tamen quasi per ignem." Augustine (Serm. 362). And he explains St. Paul's reference to fire by "ignis in die judicii futurus."

Christ is the only Foundation. They who build sound doctrine on this foundation, build gold and silver; they who build erroneous doctrine, build hay and stubble. Origen (in Caten. p. 57).

The meaning, therefore, of the whole is, that the fire of the Great Day will try every man's work; and that if the work is the mere hay and stubble of unsound doctrine, it will be destroyed; but if the workman has built on the one foundation, he himself will be saved. But because he has built ill upon it, he will lose his reward, and be saved as through fire, with great peril and difficulty.

This passage is, therefore, fraught with important doctrinal and practical instruction;

(1) It does not countenance the Roman doctrine of Purgatory, as has been sometimes alleged. The Fire of which St. Paul speaks, is the Fire of the Great Day; not a Fire of any intermediate state. And the Fire, which he describes, does not cleanse, as that intermediate fire is feigned to do, but tries and destroys. It is not a Purgatorial, but a Probationary Fire.

(2) It shows the necessity of building on the One Foundation, Jesus Christ, and Him crucified.

If a workman—who builds on that one true foundation, that is, grounds his own faith and hope, and leads others to ground theirs, upon it, but builds ill upon that true foundation, that is, erects a superstructure of unsound doctrine upon it,—if even he will suffer loss, and hardly escape perdition, what will be the lot of those who build on some other foundation than Jesus Christ?

(3) It proves that it is not enough to build upon the One Foundation; but that it is also necessary to build upon it well. If a man builds well, if he raises the solid and symmetrical superstructure of the One True Faith upon the One Foundation, Jesus Christ, he will receive a reward at the Great Day.

But if he builds ill—if he erects a crazy superstructure of heterodox notions on the One Foundation, his work will be burnt up (κατακαήσεται), and he himself will suffer loss, loss of the reward reserved for those who build well upon that foundation. And although he will himself be saved, because he has built on the true foundation, yet it will be with difficulty, and, as it were, like a man who has escaped through the fire which has burnt down his house.

This is a truth which has been intimated by Christ Himself (Matt. v. 19), "Whosoever shall break one of these commandments, even the least, and shall teach men so, shall be called least in the kingdom of heaven; but whosoever shall do and teach them, he shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven."

(4) Hence we have a solution of a difficulty which has perplexed many;

Holy Scripture affirms that there is "One Lord, One Faith, One Baptism" (Eph. iv. 5. Phil. iii. 16), and condemns all religious differences, whether in doctrine or discipline, as fruits of a carnal mind (1 Cor. i. 10; iii. 3, 4. Gal. v. 20. James iii. 14).

And yet the Christian Church is blemished by heresies, and rent by schisms Persons eminent for some Christian virtues, and animated by love of Christ, are seen teaching things at variance with the doctrines delivered by Christ and His Apostles, and swerving from the right rule of discipline, and marring the Unity of the Church.

Are we to doubt the truth of Holy Scripture, which affirms that there is "one Lord, one Faith, one Baptism?" May we imagine that conflicting doctrines can be equally pleasing to God, and equally conducive to Salvation? This cannot be.

On the other hand, can it be supposed that the piety of persons who teach some doctrines at variance with "the Faith once delivered to the Saints," or do not teach some articles of that one Faith, is of no avail? This would be a hard saying.

Where, then, is the solution? It is supplied here by the Apostle, who affirms that for the attainment of the heavenly reward of those who "turn many to righteousness," it is requisite to build on the true foundation, and also to build upon it well: and that they who build ill upon that true foundation will only just escape, as through fire, and will forfeit that reward which they might have obtained by building upon it well.

(5) Lastly, this passage confirms the doctrine—deducible from other Scriptures—that there will be different degrees of reward in heaven, according to the different degrees of labour with which men have improved the different degrees of grace vouchsafed to them on earth. See above, notes on Matt. x. 15. Luke xii. 47, and below, 1 Cor. xv. 41, and 2 Cor. ix. 6, and Bp. Bull's Sermon "on different degrees of bliss in heaven" (Serm. vii. vol. i. pp. 168—192).

16. Οὐκ οἴδατε] Know ye not that ye are the temple (ναὸς, sanctuary) of God? He passes to another argument against the sin of ranging themselves in opposite factions under human leaders, particularly such as corrupt the essential purity and fundamental soundness of the spiritual fabric of the Church, which is a Temple holy to the Lord.

— ναὸς Θεοῦ ἐστε, καὶ τὸ Πνεῦμα τ. Θεοῦ οἰκεῖ ἐν ὑμῖν;] ye are the sanctuary of God, and the Spirit of God dwelleth in you.

17 Εἴ τις τὸν ναὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ φθείρει, φθερεῖ τοῦτον ὁ Θεός· ὁ γὰρ ναὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ ἅγιός ἐστιν, οἵτινές ἐστε ὑμεῖς. 18 [n] Μηδεὶς ἑαυτὸν ἐξαπατάτω· εἴ τις δοκεῖ σοφὸς εἶναι ἐν ὑμῖν ἐν τῷ αἰῶνι τούτῳ, μωρὸς γενέσθω, ἵνα γένηται σοφός. 19 [o] Ἡ γὰρ σοφία τοῦ κόσμου τούτου μωρία παρὰ τῷ Θεῷ ἐστι· γέγραπται γάρ, Ὁ δρασσόμενος τοὺς σοφοὺς ἐν τῇ πανουργίᾳ αὐτῶν· 20 [p] καὶ πάλιν, Κύριος γινώσκει τοὺς διαλογισμοὺς τῶν σοφῶν, ὅτι εἰσὶ μάταιοι. 21 [q] Ὥστε μηδεὶς καυχάσθω ἐν ἀνθρώποις· πάντα γὰρ ὑμῶν ἐστιν· 22 εἴτε Παῦλος, εἴτε Ἀπολλῶς, εἴτε Κηφᾶς, εἴτε κόσμος, εἴτε ζωή, εἴτε θάνατος, εἴτε ἐνεστῶτα, εἴτε μέλλοντα, πάντα ὑμῶν ἐστιν, 23 [r] ὑμεῖς δὲ Χριστοῦ, Χριστὸς δὲ Θεοῦ.

n Prov. 5. 7. Isa. 5. 21. & 44. 20. Jer. 37. 9. Luke 21. 8. Gal. 6. 3, 7. Eph. 5. 6.
o Job 5. 13. ch. 1. 20, 26. p Ps. 94. 11.
q 2 Cor. 4. 5, 15. Rev. 21. 7.
r ch. 11. 3. 2 Cor. 10. 7.

Ναὸς is more holy than ἱερόν: it is the very sanctuary, or Holy Place, in which God dwells, valet. See above on 2 Thess. ii. 4.

Christ drave with anger the buyers and sellers from the outer courts of the ἱερὸν, as guilty of sacrilege; how great then is His indignation against those who pollute the ναὸς, the sacrarium, the Holy Place, in which the Godhead dwells? And ye are this ναὸς Θεοῦ. Are ye not jealous for its sanctity? Will ye allow it to be defiled?

An important text as proving the Divinity of the Holy Ghost. See Athanasius de Incarnatione, p. 704.

Every faithful Christian is called a Temple (that is, a place consecrated to God), because the Holy Spirit in a special manner is present in him. "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?" saith St. Paul; "Know ye not that ye are God's temple?" (1 Cor. iii. 16, 17; vi. 19. 2 Cor. vi. 16.) Whence should we know it? From hence, that God's Spirit inhabiteth you (Rom. viii. 9), because the inhabitation of the Spirit is the same with the inhabitation of God. The same Apostle again, In whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit (Eph. ii. 22), for an habitation of God in the Spirit. That is therefore an habitation of God, because the Spirit dwelleth in you. How could the divinity of the Holy Spirit be more expressly declared? Dr. Barrow, Sermon 34, vol. v. p. 161.

17. φθείρει] destroyeth, corrupteth, by false doctrines raised on the false foundation of human pride and worldly wisdom. The words φθείρω, διαφθείρω, are here applied to heretical pravity sullying and vitiating the essential purity and fundamental soundness of the one true faith. Cp. 1 Tim. vi. 5. Ignat. ad Ephes. c. 16: ἐάν τις πίστιν Θεοῦ ἐν κακῇ διδασκαλίᾳ φθείρῃ, ὁ τοιοῦτος, ῥυπαρὸς γενόμενος, εἰς τὸ πῦρ τὸ ἄσβεστον χωρήσει.

— φθερεῖ τοῦτον ὁ Θεός] him will God destroy. St. Paul repeats the word φθείρω. God will destroy him who neither builds well, nor builds on the one foundation, but destroys the Temple of God by subverting the faith of the people of God, His Temple. On the repetition of φθείρω, see on Gen. vi. 12.

19. γέγραπται γάρ] for it is written. From Job v. 13, where the Septuagint Version, less closely following the Hebrew, has ὁ καταλαμβάνων σοφοὺς ἐν τῇ φρονήσει. St. Paul's words are more expressive,—God grasps the wise in and by their own craftiness: He uses it as a hand whereby to clutch them, a net wherein to take them, a pit wherein to catch them.

The following verse is almost verbatim from the Septuagint Version of Ps. xciv. 11.

It appears from these two verses, thus placed in juxtaposition, that St. Paul follows the LXX, but uses his own discretion in doing so, and sometimes substitutes for it a translation approaching more nearly to the Original.

21. Ὥστε] So then. This word is used by St. Paul to introduce the summing up and conclusion of his argument here and elsewhere in this Epistle; iii. 7; iv. 5; vii. 38; xi. 33; xiv. 39; xv. 58. See v. 7.

22. θάνατος] death is yours. The death of Adam to make us mortal, but the death of Christ to make us immortal: the death of Adam ἵνα σωφρονισθῶμεν, the death of Christ, ἵνα σωθῶμεν. (Chrys.) And by that death of Christ we have gained a victory and lordship over the Grave. 1 Cor. xv. 55.

22, 23. πάντα ὑμῶν ἐστιν—Χριστὸς δὲ Θεοῦ] St. Paul here displays a specimen of that spiritual logic and rhetoric in which he is a consummate master;

He is preparing to censure the Corinthians, in a subsequent part of the Epistle, for their uncharitable and licentious abuse of their Christian Liberty, in gratifying their own appetites by indulgence in meats which had been offered in sacrifice to heathen Idols; and in other respects. See chapters vi. 13—18; viii. 1—13, and x. 16—33.

But he will not allow them to imagine that he has any desire to abridge their Christian Liberty.

Therefore, before he proceeds to reprobate their abuse of Christian Liberty, he takes care to state here in clear terms the true doctrine concerning it; and to establish it on its proper foundation, namely, that of the Incarnation, and of our Incorporation into Christ's mystical body, and our adoption by God in Him, by Whom we have become heirs of Creation, and have been reinstated, by a divine and sovereign act of enfranchisement and infeodation, in that plenary right of dominion which we once had in Adam, and from which we lapsed by the Fall, and to which we have been restored in Christ.

He thus shows, that the Corinthians are inconsistent with themselves, and that so far from duly exercising that Christian Liberty with which they have been endowed by God in Christ, they have been foregoing and forfeiting it by surrendering and sacrificing themselves, in a spiritual vassalage, to human leaders of schismatical parties; and have degraded themselves from a condition of spiritual freedom, filial dignity, and royal dominion, to that of slaves.

He thus obviates the objection, that he desired to curtail their Christian Liberty.

He shows that he is desirous to emancipate them from that bondage to which they have reduced themselves, and to restore them to that state of Liberty, Sonship, Lordship, and Royalty, which they themselves have lost.

This he does by displaying the sin and ignominy of blindly following human Guides, instead of remembering that they are fellow-members in the Body of Christ under one Head; and by reminding them that if they themselves are Christ's, and if they know no other foundation than Christ, no other Head, no other Teacher than Christ, and are soundly built up on Him, then they are lords of all creatures through Christ. St. Paul does not claim lordship over them; no, but he says that Paul is theirs and Apollos is theirs. Let them, therefore, not be slaves of men, of false teachers, of blind guides; let them not rob Christ of His own, for they are Christ's, and He is God's.

The Doctrine here stated of Christian Liberty, and Christian Dominion over the creatures, ("All things are yours,") is so important, and the due understanding of it is so requisite to the apprehension of St. Paul's reasoning in this Epistle, and it is a doctrine which has been so often misrepresented, that it may be well to insert here some observations upon it, by one of the best expositors of St. Paul's meaning.

If by Adam's sin we had lost all that first title we had to the creatures, wholly and utterly, yet as God hath been pleased graciously to deal with us, we are now fully as well as before. God the Father hath granted us, and God the Son hath acquired for us, and God the Holy Ghost hath sealed to us, a new Patent. By it whatsoever defect is, or can be supposed to be, in our old evidence, is supplied; and by virtue of it we may make fresh challenge, and renew our claim unto the creatures.

The Blessed Son of God, having made peace through the blood of His cross (Col. i. 20), hath reconciled us to His Father, and therein also reconciled the creatures both to us and Him; reconciling by Him, saith our Apostle, πάντα, all things, not men only, unto Himself. For God hath given us His Son, the heir of all things; hath He not with Him freely given us all things else? (Heb. i. 2.) Hath He not permitted us the free use of His Creatures in as ample right as ever? (Rom. viii. 32.) If the Son have made us free, we are free indeed. (John viii. 36.) And as verily as Christ is God's, so verily if we be Christ's all things are ours.

St. Paul setteth down the whole series and form of this spiritual Hierarchy (if I may so speak), this subjection and subordination of the creatures to man, of man to Christ, of Christ to a Matt 24. 45.. 2 Cor. 4. 5. & 6. 4. Col. 1. 25. Tit. 1. 7. 1 Pet. 4. 10. b Luke 12. 42. & 16. 10—12. 2 Cor. 2. 17. & 4. 2. Col. 1. 26, 27. c ch. 3. 13. d Ps. 143. 2. Job 9. 2. Rom. 3. 20. & 4. 2. 1 John 3. 20, 21. e Matt. 7. 1, 2. Luke 6. 37. Rom. 2. 1, 16. 29. 2 Cor. 5. 10. Rev. 20. 12.

IV. [1] [a] Οὕτως ἡμᾶς λογιζέσθω ἄνθρωπος, ὡς ὑπηρέτας Χριστοῦ καὶ οἰκονόμους μυστηρίων Θεοῦ. [2] [b] [a] Ὁ δὲ λοιπὸν, ζητεῖται ἐν τοῖς οἰκονόμοις, ἵνα πιστός τις εὑρεθῇ· [3] [c] ἐμοὶ δὲ εἰς ἐλάχιστόν ἐστιν, ἵνα ὑφ' ὑμῶν ἀνακριθῶ, ἢ ὑπὸ ἀνθρωπίνης ἡμέρας· ἀλλ' οὐδὲ ἐμαυτὸν ἀνακρίνω· [4] [d] οὐδὲν γὰρ ἐμαυτῷ σύνοιδα, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐν τούτῳ δεδικαίωμαι· ὁ δὲ ἀνακρίνων με Κύριός ἐστιν.

[5] [e] [v] Ὥστε μὴ πρὸ καιροῦ τι κρίνετε, ἕως ἂν ἔλθῃ ὁ Κύριος, ὃς καὶ φωτίσει τὰ κρυπτὰ τοῦ σκότους, καὶ φανερώσει τὰς βουλὰς τῶν καρδιῶν· καὶ τότε ὁ ἔπαινος γενήσεται ἑκάστῳ ἀπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ.

[6] [f] Ταῦτα δὲ, ἀδελφοὶ, μετεσχημάτισα εἰς ἐμαυτὸν καὶ Ἀπολλὼ δι' ὑμᾶς, ἵνα

f ch. 1. 12. & 3. 4—7. 2 Cor. 10. 7, 12, 15. & 11. 4, 12—15.

God,—All are yours, and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's. (1 Cor. iii. 22, 23.) Bp. Sanderson (Sermon on 1 Tim. iv. 4, vol. iii. p. 158).

The holy and comfortable use of the creatures ariseth from the word of God's decree even as the former did, but not from the same decree. The former issued from the decree of common Providence, and so belonged unto all. But this latter decree proceedeth from that special word of God's decree whereby, for the merits of Christ Jesus, the Second Adam (1 Cor. xv. 45), He removeth from the creature that curse wherein it was wrapped through the sin of the first Adam. (Gen. iii. 17.)

And in this the wicked have no portion, as being out of Christ; so as they cannot partake of God's creatures with any solid or sound comfort, and so the creatures remain in this degree unsanctified to them.

This is probably the meaning of Origen's remark here: πάντα τοῦ ἁγίου ἐστὶν· τοῦ πιστοῦ ὅλος ὁ κόσμος· τοῦ δὲ ἀπίστου οὐδὲ βόλος· ὡς γὰρ λῃστὴς ἔχει ἃ ἔχει ὁ ἄπιστος· οὐ γὰρ εἰδὼς αὐτοῖς χρῆσθαι, οὐδὲ τὸν κτίσαντα ταῦτα Θεόν.

For this cause the Scriptures call the faithful, primogenitos, the first-born (Heb. xii. 23), as to whom belongeth a double portion (Deut. xxi. 17); and Hæredes mundi, 'heirs of the world,' as if none but they had any good right thereunto.

And St. Paul deriveth our right unto the creatures from God, but by Christ. All things are yours, and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's; as if these things were none of theirs who are none of Christ's. And in 1 Tim. iv. 3 he saith of meats, that God hath created them to be received with thanksgiving of them (i. e. by them) which believe and know the truth; as if those persons that wanted faith and saving knowledge did but usurp the bread they eat.

And, indeed, it is certain that the wicked have not right to the creatures of God in such ample sort as the godly have. A kind of right they have, and we may not deny it them, given them by God's unchangeable ordinance at the creation, which, being a branch of God's image in man, which was of natural, and not of supernatural grace, might be and was fully defaced by sin, but was not, neither could be, wholly lost. A right then they have, but such a right as, reaching barely to the use, cannot afford unto the user true comfort or sound peace of conscience in such use of the creatures. For though nothing be in and of itself unclean, for every creature of God is good, yet to them they are unclean, ex accidente, every creature is unclean and polluted, because it is not thus sanctified unto them by the Word of God.

And the very true cause of all this is the impurity of their hearts by reason of unbelief. The Holy Ghost expressly assigneth this cause. To the pure all things are pure, but to them that are defiled and unbelieving is nothing pure; but even their mind and conscience is defiled. (Tit. i. 15.) Bp. Sanderson (vol. iii. pp. 182, 183).

With regard to the error (derived from these words of St. Paul, "all things are yours") that none but the godly have a right to any authority over the creatures, see below on 1 Cor. vi. 12.

— Χριστὸς δὲ Θεοῦ] Christ is God's, not as a Creature, but as the Everlasting Son of the Everlasting Father.

He is also God's, as Man; and it is His Humanity which forms the connecting link in St. Paul's argument. It is by His Incarnation that Christ is our second Adam, and reinstates us in our original liberty and dominion over the creatures; and it is through Him, as our Emmanuel, that all things are ours.

On the question how "Christ is God's," see further below on viii. 6 and xi. 3.

Ch. IV. 1, 2. Οὕτως] Let a man so account of us, as ministers of Christ. He deters them from supposing that, because he had said, "all things are yours, whether Paul or Apollos," they have a right to pronounce censure on him their Teacher and Apostle. No, Paul is yours, to hear and to profit by, but not to judge. I am God's Minister, and he that judgeth me is the Lord.

— ὑπηρέτας] 'sub-remiges.' Christ is the Pilot of the Vesse. of the Church; we are rowers under His command. (Valck.) Cp. Luke i. 2.

2. Ὁ δὲ λοιπόν] But what remaineth, i. e. to be done on our side. Your part is to esteem us as Ministers of Christ and Stewards of the Mysteries of God. Our duty is to be faithful. He does not disclaim responsibility; he is accountable to God for fidelity, but not to them.

Some of the oldest MSS., A, B, C, D*, F, G, read ὧδε, which is received by some Editors, who render it, here, in this world. But this is harsh; and nothing is more common, even in the best MSS., than the confusion of o and ω, on account of the identity of sound and similarity of letter in uncial characters. See the remarkable instance of this confusion below, xv. 49, φορέσωμεν for φορέσομεν, and Luke xvi. 25.

St. Paul uses the phrase τὸ λοιπὸν to mark a conclusion—finally, to show that there is no further consideration needed to determine the question in hand. 2 Thess. iii. 1. See 1 Cor. vii. 29. Eph. vi. 10. Phil. iii. 1; iv. 8.

3. εἰς ἐλάχιστον] it amounts to (εἰς) a very small matter. See Acts xix. 27, εἰς οὐδὲν λογισθῆναι, and Winer, § 29, p. 165.

— ἀνθρωπίνης ἡμέρας] A day of man as distinguished from the Day, the Day of the Lord, to which he has just referred as proving every man's work. (1 Cor. iii. 13.) Compare the Latin phrase, "diem alicui dicere," to indict a man for trial.

— ἀλλά] yea. Cp. 2 Cor. vii. 11.

4. οὐδὲν ἐμαυτῷ σύνοιδα] I am not conscious to myself of any sin. Cp. Job xxvii. 6, LXX, οὐδὲν σύνοιδα ἐμαυτῷ ἄτοπα πράξας. (Bengel.) "Nihil mihi conscius sum, inquit Paulus (1 Cor. iv. 4), id est, non scio me aliquâ ex parte defuisse officio meo." Bp. Sanderson (de Conscient. i. 16). The English phrase in the Authorized Version, "I know nothing by myself," had this meaning when that Version was made.

St. Paul speaks hypothetically, and by a common use of the first personal pronoun I (see 1 Cor. vi. 12) makes himself a representative of Christian Ministers and Teachers generally. This is what he calls μετασχηματίζειν εἰς ἑαυτὸν, to transfer to himself, by a figure, a general proposition applicable to a class of persons. (1 Cor. iv. 6.) Although, as a Christian Minister, I may not be sensible to myself of any default in the discharge of my ministerial duties, yet I am not thereby acquitted. I am not my own Judge; I cannot pronounce sentence on myself. He that judgeth me is the Lord. The Day on which my cause will be tried is the great Day of the Lord. That Day will bring to light all hidden things, and manifest the secrets of the hearts.

There are, therefore, sins of ignorance to be repented of. And every one may say with the Psalmist, "Who can tell how oft he offendeth? O cleanse Thou me from my secret faults,"—faults secret even to myself. (Ps. xix. 12.) Origen in Caten. here.

S. Ignatius (ad Rom. 5) referring to St. Paul's words, says, ἐν τοῖς ἀδικήμασιν αὐτῶν μᾶλλον μαθητεύομαι (I am trained in the school of Christ by the malice of my enemies), ἀλλ' οὐ παρὰ τοῦτο δεδικαίωμαι (but I am not thereby justified).

5. πρὸ καιροῦ] before the season, i. e. of Judgment. See Matt. viii. 29, where the same words occur in the same sense.

— ὁ ἔπαινος] the praise, i. e. that is due. The award of praise supposes also its correlative award of blame; but this he leaves to be understood.

6. Ταῦτα δὲ, ἀδελφοὶ, μετεσχημάτισα εἰς ἐμαυτὸν καὶ Ἀπολλῶ] And these things, brethren, I transferred as in a figure to myself and Apollos. See on v. 4. These things I expressed by a schema or figure of transference, applying to myself and to Apollos, as specimens, what is not to be limited by you to us, but to be extended by you, in a process of generalization, to all similar cases. See Origen, in Caten. p. 77.

On this use of μετασχηματίζω, to transfer as by a figure, ἐν ἡμῖν μάθητε τὸ μὴ ὑπὲρ ἃ γέγραπται, ἵνα μὴ εἷς ὑπὲρ τοῦ ἑνὸς φυσιοῦσθε κατὰ τοῦ ἑτέρου. 7 [g] Τίς γὰρ σὲ διακρίνει; τί δὲ ἔχεις ὃ οὐκ ἔλαβες; εἰ δὲ καὶ ἔλαβες, τί καυχᾶσαι ὡς μὴ λαβών;

8 [h] Ἤδη κεκορεσμένοι ἐστέ, ἤδη ἐπλουτήσατε, χωρὶς ἡμῶν ἐβασιλεύσατε· καὶ ὄφελόν γε ἐβασιλεύσατε, ἵνα καὶ ἡμεῖς ὑμῖν συμβασιλεύσωμεν. 9 [h] Δοκῶ γὰρ, [g] John 3. 27 James 1. 17. 1 Pet. 4. 10.

[h] Ps. 44 22. Rom. 8. 36. 2 Cor. 4 11. 1 Thess. 5. 9, 10. Heb. 10. 33. & 11. 36. Rev. 6. 9—11. & 7. 11—14. & 17. 6, 7.

see Wetstein, p. 112, who quotes Martial iii. 69, "Schemate nec dubio sed apertè nominat illam."

St. Paul, in his wisdom and charity, abstains from mentioning the names of the false Teachers by whom the Corinthians were led astray, and in whose names they gloried. He condemns their erroneous principles and practices (iii. 11—22), but he spares their persons. Thus he endeavours to bring them to repentance. He points attention to the hidden persons of false teachers by specifying the true teachers. (Chrys.) He mentions his own name and that of Apollos, in order that, by means of these two personal specimens, and by exposing the sin of making himself and Apollos into leaders of religious parties, he may show, à fortiori, the sin of following other leaders who had not the gifts and qualifications of Paul and Apollos, but were Teachers of error and enemies of the Truth.

— ἵνα ἐν ἡμῖν μάθητε τὸ μὴ ὑπὲρ ἃ γέγραπται] in order that ye may learn by our cases the lesson of not going beyond the things that are written.

Elz. adds φρονεῖν after γέγραπται, but φρονεῖν is not found in the best MSS., A, B, D*, E*, F, G, nor in ℵ, nor in Vulg., and seems to be a gloss, and is omitted by Lachm., Tisch., Meyer, Alf. The article τὸ is thus prefixed to sentences of an emphatic and proverbial kind. See above on Mark ix. 23. Cp. Rom. viii. 26; xiii. 9.

And the ellipsis of the verb is significant, as giving greater largeness and general comprehensiveness to the proverb, which would be limited by the insertion of a particular verb with a special idea, such as φρονεῖν. Compare a similar ellipse in a similar prohibitory proverb in Terence, Andr. i. 1. 61,

——————— ——— "id arbitror Apprimè in vitâ esse utile, ut nequid nimis;"

and Milton (P. L. xi.), ———— ——————— "Observe

The rule of Not too much, by Temperance taught."

But it may be asked, Where are the things written to which the Apostle refers? In the Scriptures generally. Hence ἃ (the reading of A, B, C) seems preferable to ὃ, which would imply rather an allusion to some one particular text; whereas St. Paul's reference is to the general tenour of the Scriptures, which teach that "Cursed is he that putteth his trust in man, and taketh man for his defence" (Jer. xvii. 5), and "Let him that glorieth, glory in the Lord" (Jer. ix. 23, 24). See above, 1 Cor. i. 31.

St. Matthew's Gospel had been written at this time, as Chrys. supposes, and is probable (see Pref. to the Gospels, p. xlix). There the Corinthians would find divine cautions from Christ against the sin of calling, and of being called, Rabbi, Rabbi; "for One is your Master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren" (Matt. xxiii. 8—10).

— ἵνα μὴ—φυσιοῦσθε] The form of the verb φυσιοῦσθε after ἵνα μὴ is remarkable. Origen and Theodoret seem to have read ἕνα for ἵνα, and φυσιοῦσθαι for φυσιοῦσθε, and then the text would stand, ἕνα μὴ ὑπὲρ τοῦ ἑνὸς φυσιοῦσθαι, as it is cited by Origen (p. 78). And this seems to have been the reading of those MSS. followed by Vulg., but not Cod. Augiensis, and Boerner.

But the Greek MSS. represent with an overwhelming consent the reading in the text.

(1) Bengel calls φυσιοῦσθε "an irregular form of the subjunctive," and compares Gal. iv. 17, ζηλοῦσιν ὑμᾶς . . . ἵνα αὐτοὺς ζηλοῦτε.

(2) On the other hand, Winer (Gr. Gr. § 41, p. 259) supposes these forms to be indicatives used irregularly, according to the usage of a declining Græcism, for the conjunctive; and he quotes instances of this usage from a Byzantine Historian, and from Apocryphal writings; and observes that, in modern Greek, νὰ (= ἵνα) is often used with an Indicative.

He observes also, that the only two instances of this usage in the New Testament, are supplied by contracted verbs in -όω, —φυσιόω, ζηλόω.

This, however, is not absolutely certain. In Titus ii. 4, A, F, G, H read σωφρονίζουσι, and this has been received by Lach., Tisch., Alf.

The fact that the indicative of a past tense is used even by the best classical authors, under certain conditions, after ἵνα (see Elmsl., Soph. Œd. Tyr. 1389; Monk, Hippol. 641; Hermann, Viger. § 350), may suggest the probability of a similar use of the present also.

(3) Some other Expositors (Meyer and Fritzsche) suppose ἵνα to be a particle of place. But this is not consistent with the context.

(4) It cannot be denied, that the use of ἵνα μὴ with an indicative is a barbarism, and though it is true that in the structure of sentences St. Paul has usages of his own, which are above the ordinary rules of Grammar, yet it does not therefore follow that he uses words or idioms which are solœcisms.

It may, therefore, be submitted for the reader's consideration, whether we have not here an instance of an idiom which gives liveliness to the style and address, and is often found in the New Testament, especially in the writings of St. Paul's fellow-traveller, St. Luke, viz. a change from the oratio indirecta to the oratio recta; and whether, therefore, φυσιοῦσθε may not be regarded as a regular and legitimate form, viz. an imperative, "be not ye puffed up."

For examples of this sudden transition to the oratio recta, see on Acts i. 4; xvii. 3; xxiii. 22. Luke v. 14. Mark vi. 9.

Accordingly, the rendering of the present sentence would be such as to convert it into a general exhortation from the Apostle, that seems to be very apposite and in harmony with the general tone of the Epistle, which, be it remembered, was publicly read, on its reception, in the Christian Assemblies at Corinth. And thus all direct, personal, imperative addresses and precepts would have a special force.

According to this view, the whole paragraph would read thus: These things I transferred by a figure to myself and Apollos, for your sakes, in order that you may learn in us (i. e. by means of our cases put hypothetically in my argument) the lesson of not (going beyond) what is written (in Holy Scripture) in order that—(you may practise this precept)—Be not ye puffed up, one for the one leader against the other.

There seems to be a similar usage of ἵνα introducing a precept addressed to persons as if actually present with the writer, in 1 Thess. iv. 13, according to the reading of A, D*, F, G, I, οὐ θέλομεν ὑμᾶς ἀγνοεῖν . . . ἵνα . . . μὴ λυπεῖσθε, καθὼς καὶ οἱ λοιποί.

Also it is observable that ἵνα is put thus independently in an anacoluthon, and so as to introduce a precept expressed by an imperative, as here, in another place of the present Epistle, i. 31, ἵνα . . . καθὼς γέγραπται, ὁ καυχώμενος ἐν Κυρίῳ καυχάσθω.

For other instances of conjunctions in anacolutha, see John vi. 22. Rom. ix. 22. Col. i. 21. Winer, G. G. § 63.

— ὑπέρ] in behalf of; the opposite of κατά. See Mark ix. 40. John x. 15; xi. 50. Rom. v. 6; viii. 31; ix. 3; x. 1.

7. διακρίνει] distinguisheth thee from another, and maketh thee to differ from another by special gifts. On this use of διακρίνω, see Acts xv. 9.

An apostrophe to some false Teacher, and carrying with it a κέντρον, or sting, which must have been keenly felt when this Epistle was publicly read in the Church at Corinth.

8. Ἤδη κεκορεσμένοι ἐστέ] Ye are already filled to satiety. He passes to another topic, and with something of rhetorical irony, κωμῳδῶν αὐτοὺς (says Chrys.), remonstrates with them on their presumptuous notions of sudden perfection, and on their spiritual pride, vain-glory, and self-sufficiency, which he reprehends and exposes by means of a reductio ad absurdum. Ye, our children, are already filled to satiety! what then ought we, your spiritual parents, to be? Ye, the taught, exult! how much more ought we, your Teachers, to do so? But what is the fact? I trow (δοκῶ) that God has displayed us as the last, while ye imagine yourselves to be the first in the Christian race; and has destined us to death, like prisoners cast to wild beasts in the arena, while ye sit aloft as spectators, and reign as kings. And yet we are patient, and bless Him. If this is our case, ye may be sure that pride and vain-glory, and self-confidence, such as yours, are no fit badges of Christians.

— ὄφελον] ὄφελες = ὤφειλες, ἐπ' εὐχῆς, Apollon. (Lex.) Cp. 2 Cor. xi. 1. Gal. v. 12. Winer, § 4, p. 270.

— ἐβασιλεύσατε] ye reigned. Ye attained the crown, and are already seated on the throne. Cp. Latin regno. Hor. (1 Epist. x. 8), "Quid quæris? vivo ac regno." Terent. (Phorm. ii. 3. 58.)

9. Δοκῶ] I wot; I trow. 'Puto' (Tertullian). See vii. 40.

ὁ Θεὸς ἡμᾶς τοὺς ἀποστόλους ἐσχάτους ἀπέδειξεν ὡς ἐπιθανατίους· ὅτι θέατρον ἐγενήθημεν τῷ κόσμῳ, καὶ ἀγγέλοις, καὶ ἀνθρώποις. 10 i Ἡμεῖς μωροὶ διὰ Χριστόν, ὑμεῖς δὲ φρόνιμοι ἐν Χριστῷ· ἡμεῖς ἀσθενεῖς, ὑμεῖς δὲ ἰσχυροί· ὑμεῖς ἔνδοξοι, ἡμεῖς δὲ ἄτιμοι. 11 k Ἄχρι τῆς ἄρτι ὥρας καὶ πεινῶμεν καὶ διψῶμεν, καὶ γυμνιτεύομεν, καὶ κολαφιζόμεθα, καὶ ἀστατοῦμεν, 12 l καὶ κοπιῶμεν ἐργαζόμενοι ταῖς ἰδίαις χερσί· λοιδορούμενοι εὐλογοῦμεν· διωκόμενοι ἀνεχόμεθα· 13 m βλασφημούμενοι παρακαλοῦμεν· ὡς περικαθάρματα τοῦ κόσμου ἐγενήθημεν, πάντων περίψημα ἕως ἄρτι.

14 n Οὐκ ἐντρέπων ὑμᾶς γράφω ταῦτα, ἀλλ' ὡς τέκνα μου ἀγαπητὰ νουθετῶ. 15 o Ἐὰν γὰρ μυρίους παιδαγωγοὺς ἔχητε ἐν Χριστῷ ἀλλ' οὐ πολλοὺς πατέρας· ἐν γὰρ Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ διὰ τοῦ εὐαγγελίου ἐγὼ ὑμᾶς ἐγέννησα. 16 p Παρακαλῶ οὖν ὑμᾶς, μιμηταί μου γίνεσθε. 17 q Διὰ τοῦτο ἔπεμψα ὑμῖν Τιμόθεον, ὅς ἐστι τέκνον μου ἀγαπητὸν καὶ πιστὸν ἐν Κυρίῳ, ὃς ὑμᾶς ἀναμνήσει τὰς ὁδούς μου τὰς ἐν Χριστῷ, καθὼς πανταχοῦ ἐν πάσῃ ἐκκλησίᾳ διδάσκω.

18 Ὡς μὴ ἐρχομένου δέ μου πρὸς ὑμᾶς ἐφυσιώθησάν τινες· 19 r ἐλεύσομαι δὲ

i ch. 2. 3. & 3. 18. Acts 17. 18.
k Acts 23. 2. 2 Cor. 4. 8. & 11. 23.
l Matt. 5. 44. Luke 6. 28. & 23. 34. Acts 7. 60. & 18. 3. & 20. 34. Rom. 12. 14. 20. 1 Thess. 2. 9. 2 Thess. 3. 8. 1 Tim. 4. 10. m Lam. 3. 45.
n 1 Thess. 2. 11.
o Acts 18. 11. Gal. 4. 19. Philem. 10. James 1. 18.
p ch. 11. 1. John 10. 4, 5. Phil. 3. 17. 1 Thess. 1. 6. 2 Thess. 3. 9. Heb. 13. 7. 1 Pet. 5. 3.
q 1 Tim. 1. 2. 2 Tim. 1. 2. ver. 2. ch. 7. 25.
Num. 12. 7. Prov. 13. 17. Matt. 24. 45. & 25. 21, 23. Eph. 6. 21. Col. 1. 7. & 4. 9. 2 Tim. 2. 2. Rev. 2. 10, 13. r Rom. 15. 32. James 4. 15. Heb. 6. 3.

It is not an expression of doubt, but a strong asseveration. Photius (in Cat. 86).

— ὡς ἐπιθανατίους] as men appointed to death; rendered "bestiarios" by Tertullian (de Pudicit. 14). "Puto, nos Deus Apostolos novissimos elegit, velut bestiarios." καταδίκους (Chrys.), θηριομάχους (Gloss.), i. e. prisoners or convicts brought out as destined for death, led out into the amphitheatre to be torn in pieces by wild beasts. Cp. Tertullian, Apol. 40, "Si Tiberis ascendit ad mœnia, &c. Christianos ad Leonem;" the hue and cry at Rome, made more vociferous by its rhythmical cadence, ⏑ ‿ — — | — ‿ — — |.

In another, spiritual, sense the Christian is ἐπιθανάτιος, he 'dies daily;' he is dead to the world; he bears in his own body 'the dying of the Lord Jesus;' he is 'conformed to His death.' Origen (in Caten. p. 84).

— θέατρον] a spectacle. Like those ἐπιθανάτιοι brought into the arena, as S. Ignatius was afterwards into that of the Colosseum at Rome. Cp. Ignat. ad Rom. 4. Martyr. Ignat. 6.

— τῷ κόσμῳ] Not to a single city, but to the World. (Chrys.)

10. Ἡμεῖς μωροὶ διὰ Χριστόν] We are fools for Christ's sake. An irony. (Origen.)

We, your teachers, who suffer these things, are counted fools for Christ's sake, and yet ye, the taught, reign like kings, and think yourselves wise in Christ! A reductio ad absurdum. (Chrys.)

11. γυμνιτεύομεν] So ℵ (Cod. Sinait.) and the best MSS. On the form of this verb (like μεσιτεύω), see Winer, § 16, p. 84.

12. καὶ κοπιῶμεν ἐργαζόμενοι τ. ἰ. χ.] Even now at Ephesus we labour, working with our own hands: a statement illustrated by what is said by St. Paul to the Ephesian presbyters at Miletus (Acts xx. 34), αὐτοὶ γινώσκετε ὅτι ταῖς χρείαις μου . . . ὑπηρέτησαν αἱ χεῖρες αὗται.

13. περικαθάρματα] (1) Properly things which are scoured off on all sides from other objects, as their offal and refuse, and are then thrown away. Cp. Isa. xxx. 22; lxiv. 6.

(2) Hence whatever is despised and cast off. Cp. Lament. iii. 45, "Thou hast made us as the offscouring and refuse in the midst of the people."

(3) Persons, reserved in heathen cities for emergencies of public calamity, e. g. Pestilence, Famine, or Invasion, and then devoted as ἀναθέματα, to death, as an expiation of the sins of the People, and to propitiate and appease the wrath of the gods (Schol. Aristoph. Eqq. 1133);—a remarkable witness from heathen tradition and practice, in behalf of the doctrine of Vicarious Atonement for sin.

Hence in Prov. xxi. 18, for כֹּפֶר (copher) the LXX have περικάθαρμα, an expiation.

(4) Since the persons thus destined for these expiatory sacrifices, like scapegoats, were usually strangers, captives, prisoners, and miserable outcasts, therefore καθάρματα and περικαθάρματα came to signify miscreants of the most abject condition, as here. See the commentators on Aristoph. Equit. 1133, Plut. 444, and the story of Sinon, Virg. Æn. ii. 115—129, and the passages quoted here by Wetstein, p. 114.

— περίψημα] "peripsema," Tertullian (de Pudicit. c. 14), and so Vulg., as not having an equivalent in Latin. The meaning of the word is,—

(1) Whatever περιψᾶται, circumraditur, is rubbed round and rubbed off by friction, as the filings or smeltings of metals, the sweepings of a house,—"rasura cujusque rei." (Glossar. Cangii.)

The Metaphor is taken from the scouring of tables after meat. What is used for that purpose, and is afterwards thrown away as refuse, is called περίψημα. Theodor. Mopsuest. (in Cat. 83).

(2) Hence the word is applied to any thing or any person who is an object of scorn, and is thrown aside as such; while that from which it or he is separated, becomes more clean by the separation.

(3) Hence the word signifies a person or thing which is ready to be sacrificed and cast off in contempt for the benefit of some other person or thing. Thus in the book of Tobit (v. 18), Anna, the mother of Tobias, says, ἀργύριον περίψημα τοῦ παιδίου γένοιτο, let the money be sacrificed as nought for the sake of the child. And S. Ignatius applies the word to himself (ad Ephes. c. 8), ἐγὼ περίψημα ὑμῶν, and c. 18, περίψημα τὸ ἐμὸν πνεῦμα τοῦ σταυροῦ, and S. Barnabas (c. 6), ἐγὼ περίψημα τῆς ἀγάπης ὑμῶν. And it was a common expression of love among the early Christians, ἐγὼ περίψημά σου. See the note of Valesius on Eusebius vii. 23.

And this seems to be St. Paul's meaning here. He is himself πάντων περίψημα, i. e. he draws off from others, and absorbs into himself, the shame and misery which would otherwise be theirs.

(4) Hence the word περίψημα was also used in a piacular sense. See Bp. Pearson (Vind. Ignat. ii. c. xv.), for ἀντίλυτρον and ἀντίψυχον.

14. νουθετῶ] I admonish: cp. Trench, Syn. N. T. § xxxii.

15. παιδαγωγούς] Properly persons who were employed to escort children to school, and to watch over them as their attendants and guardians. See the character in Euripides' Medea, the scene of which is Corinth, and the statue in the famous group of Niobe's children, at Florence. Cp. Plaut. (Mercator i. 190), "Servum qui pædagogus fuerat," and see Wetstein and Valck. here. They were called by the Romans literiones, and are not to be confounded with the slaves called capsarii, who carried the books, &c. of the pupil to school. Horat. (Sat. i. 4. 78).

He here contrasts the severe moroseness of the παιδαγωγὸς with the affectionate tenderness of the πατήρ. In Gal. iii. 24, the distinction is between the manuductory office of the former, and the more perfect work of the Teacher.

16. μιμηταί μου γίνεσθε] become imitators of me. See on 1 Cor. xi. 1.

17. Τιμόθεον] Timotheus, who had been with St. Paul on his first visit to Corinth, with Silas (Acts xviii. 5), and who had now been sent by St. Paul from Ephesus (with Erastus of Corinth, Rom. xvi. 23), to go through Macedonia to Corinth, a little before the writing of this Epistle (Acts xix. 22), and was with St. Paul in Macedonia when he wrote his Second Epistle to the Corinthians (2 Cor. i. 1).

18. τινες] certain persons: he does not specify their names, lest he might harden them in sin, and in order that he might ταχέως πρὸς ὑμᾶς, ἐὰν ὁ Κύριος θελήσῃ, καὶ γνώσομαι οὐ τὸν λόγον τῶν πεφυσιωμένων, ἀλλὰ τὴν δύναμιν· 20 [s] οὐ γὰρ ἐν λόγῳ ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἀλλ' ἐν δυνάμει. s ch. 2. 4. 1 Thess. i. 5. 2 Pet. i. 16.

21 [t] Τί θέλετε ; ἐν ῥάβδῳ ἔλθω πρὸς ὑμᾶς, ἢ ἐν ἀγάπῃ πνεύματί τε πραΰτητος ; t 2 Cor. 10. 2. & 13. 10.

V. 1 [a] Ὅλως ἀκούεται ἐν ὑμῖν πορνεία, καὶ τοιαύτη πορνεία, ἥτις οὐδὲ ἐν τοῖς ἔθνεσιν, ὥστε γυναῖκά τινα τοῦ πατρὸς ἔχειν. a Lev. 18. 8. Deut. 27. 20.

2 [b] Καὶ ὑμεῖς πεφυσιωμένοι ἐστὲ, καὶ οὐχὶ μᾶλλον ἐπενθήσατε, ἵνα ἀρθῇ ἐκ μέσου ὑμῶν ὁ τὸ ἔργον τοῦτο ποιήσας ; b ch. 4. 8. 2 Cor. 12. 21.

3 [c] Ἐγὼ μὲν γὰρ ἀπὼν τῷ σώματι, παρὼν δὲ τῷ πνεύματι, ἤδη κέκρικα ὡς c Col. 2. 5.

---

leave the door open for their Repentance, for which he hoped and laboured; and which, under his wise and merciful treatment, was realized. 2 Cor. ii. 3—10. Cp. Origen here.

19. ἐλεύσομαι ταχέως] I will come speedily. Which he did, soon after the writing of the Second Epistle. Compare xvi. 6. Acts xx. 1, 2, and Introduction to this Epistle.

21. ἐν ῥάβδῳ] with a rod. On the use of ἐν, as indicating an accompaniment with which, and an instrument by which a person acts, see Luke xiv. 31, ἐν δέκα χιλιάσιν. Eph. vi. 16, τὸν θυρεὸν τῆς πίστεως ἐν ᾧ κ.τ.λ. Cp. Exod. xxi. 20, πατάξῃ ἐν ῥάβδῳ, and Meyer here.

The ῥάβδος, or Rod, is an emblem of power, and an instrument of executing judgments, as is seen in the History of Moses, Exod. vii. 9, 10. 19; viii. 5, and passim; and in the passages of Holy Scripture describing the Royal and Judicial Office of Christ, Ps. ii. 9. Heb. i. 8. Rev. ii. 27; xix. 15.

Here, then, the words "with a rod," signify punitive power. (Chrys.)

Ch. V. 1. Ὅλως] altogether; 'prorsus, planè, omnino;' παντελῶς (Hesych.); said of what is indubitable. See the use of the word 1 Cor. vi. 7. Hence Tertullian (de Pudic. c. 14) translates the passage thus: "Auditur in vobis in totum fornicatio."

There seems to be a contrast between this sin, and that other sin, of which he had heard from those of Chloe (i. 11). He had mentioned the names of his informants there; but does not specify here those who brought the report of this other sin; for no names were needed,—ὅλως ἀκούεται, the sin is notorious.

Chrys. interprets the word to mean, that the crime was one common to all by their connivance at it, and says, that by using the word ὅλως, κοινοῖ τὸ ὄνειδος τοῦ ἐγκλήματος. Some recent Expositors render the words, "the character of πόρνος is actually borne among you," but this seems to be erroneous.

Observe the contrast. A sin, he says, is commonly heard of, among you Christians, which does not exist even among the Gentiles.

He also mentions the common notoriety of the sin, in order to prepare the way, and to account for the declaration which he is about to make, that although absent from them, he has already pronounced sentence upon it (ἀπὼν ἤδη κέκρικα, v. 3).

The divisions and dissensions of which he had been speaking before, had been reported to him by those of Chloe, i. 11. Cp. xi. 18, ἀκούω σχίσματα ἐν ὑμῖν εἶναι. But the sin of which he is now going to speak was as public as it was heinous; and being so notorious, he needed not to inquire further, nor refer to any special witnesses to avouch the fact.

The connexion of this topic with the preceding, is to be seen in the words ἐν ῥάβδῳ ἔλθω, iv. 21. Shall I come with a rod, the rod of discipline and chastisement? and why? for a great sin has been committed among you; it is a notorious and flagrant sin, one which concerns you all; and yet you connive at it, and are even puffed up with spiritual pride, and imagine yourselves to be in a flourishing state!

— ἔθνεσιν] Elz. adds ὀνομάζεται, which is not found in the best MSS.

The abhorrence felt even by the heathens for the sin in question had been pourtrayed by Euripides in the character of his Hippolytus Coronifer,—the scene of which drama is laid at Trœzen, in the neighbourhood of Corinth. Cp. S. Cyril here (in Cat.). For other proofs of the execration with which such an incestuous connexion was regarded by heathens, see Cicero pro Cluentio, 5, 6, and Wetstein, p. 116.

— ὥστε γυναῖκά τινα τοῦ πατρὸς ἔχειν] so that one hath his father's wife. The verb ἔχειν, to have, modestly expresses a deadly sin: see Matt. xiv. 4. Mark vi. 18. Cp. above on 1 Thess. iv. 6, and below on vii. 1.

This incestuous person is supposed by some of the ancient Expositors to have been a person of wealth and influence, and a leader in a party of the Church at Corinth. See Theodoret and Severian here.

2. ἀρθῇ] So the best MSS. and Editions.—Elz. ἐξαρθῇ.

— τὸ ἔργον τοῦτο] this deed. On the holy reserve, and grave indignation, which characterize this mode of speech, see above on 1 Thess. iv. 6.

3. ἀπών] Elz. prefixes ὡς, which is not in A, B, C, D*. And the sense is more clear without it. For I, though absent in body, &c. There is something in the involved structure of this sentence which gives a strong impression of the emotion, anguish, and indignation with which it was written, and which vented itself in broken and disturbed periods, as it were, "per singultus."

What must have been the effect of such sentences as this—and of others like it in this Epistle—when publicly read for the first time in the Church at Corinth!

3—5. ἤδη κέκρικα] I have already resolved concerning him that hath so done this deed: in the Name of our Lord Jesus Christ, ye being gathered together, and my spirit with you though I am not present in person, with the power of our Lord Jesus Christ, to deliver such an one to Satan for the destruction of his flesh (his carnal lusts and appetites) that his Spirit may be saved in the Day of the Lord.

This is a very important text in relation to the question concerning the independence of spiritual authority in the exercise and administration of Ecclesiastical Discipline.

It appears

(1) That St. Paul, when now at Ephesus (ἀπὼν τῷ σώματι), had already resolved (ἤδη κέκρικα) to excommunicate the incestuous person at Corinth, whose sin was notorious.

(2) That he did this without taking counsel with the Corinthians, and probably against their inclination; for they were conniving at the sin, and were puffed up with spiritual pride (πεφυσιωμένοι), as if nothing was amiss among them.

(3) That the sentence of Excommunication was not private, but to be promulgated in their presence, and when they were gathered together in a religious assembly (συναχθέντων ὑμῶν).

(4) That a salutary fear and alarm was wrought in the minds of the Corinthians by the Apostolic exercise of this spiritual discipline, and that it was effectual in producing repentance (see 2 Cor. vii. 6—16).

(5) That the sentence of Excommunication pronounced by the Apostle was afterwards taken off by him, when absent, on the Repentance of the guilty party. (2 Cor. ii. 5—7.)

Hence conclusive arguments may be derived,

(1) Against the errors of Erastianism, which would unduly limit Ecclesiastical Discipline on the part of the Spiritualty; and would confine the Power of the Keys (see on Matt. xvi. 19) to the mere hortatory efforts of Persuasion; and transfer all its jurisdiction to the Civil Power.

(2) Against the notions of Beza and the Genevan Discipline, which would associate Lay Elders with the Spiritualty in cognizance of purely Spiritual causes, and in the exercise of Spiritual Discipline by Excommunication and Absolution.

(3) Against the Papal theory, which would derive all ecclesiastical authority and spiritual jurisdiction from the Roman Pontiff as the representative of St. Peter. See above on Matt. xvi. 19, and on John xx. 23.

St. Paul in this act of Excommunication makes no reference to St. Peter, but says Ἐγὼ κέκρικα, I have resolved, and in this Epistle he speaks of Cephas in conjunction with himself and Apollos (i. 12) as fellow-workers under Christ.

On these important questions, the younger student may consult the passages from Holy Scripture and the Fathers, and also from Hooker, Bp. Taylor, Sanderson, and others quoted in Theophilus Anglicanus, Part iii. chap. v. Also on the "Power of the Keys," the authorities quoted in Part i. ch. xiii. and xiv.

The power of the Apostle,—pronouncing so awful a sentence as this in his absence, a sentence accompanied, it is probable, with bodily consequences to the guilty party (see next note),—must have been greatly confirmed in the minds of the Corinthians, and have tended to produce in them the salutary effects of reverential deference to St. Paul's authority, which appear from many places of the Second Epistle, e. g. 2 Cor. vii. 11.

παρὼν, τὸν οὕτω τοῦτο κατεργασάμενον, [4] [d] ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν d Matt. 16. 19. & 18. 18. John 20. 23.
Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, συναχθέντων ὑμῶν καὶ τοῦ ἐμοῦ πνεύματος, σὺν τῇ δυνάμει e 1 Tim. 1. 20. ch. 2. 6, 7.
τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, [5] [e] παραδοῦναι τὸν τοιοῦτον τῷ Σατανᾷ εἰς ὄλεθρον τῆς σαρκὸς, ἵνα τὸ πνεῦμα σωθῇ ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ.
f Gal. 5. 9.
[6] [f] Οὐ καλὸν τὸ καύχημα ὑμῶν. Οὐκ οἴδατε ὅτι μικρὰ ζύμη ὅλον τὸ φύραμα g Isa. 53. 7. John 1. 29. ch. 15. 3. 1 Pet. 1. 19.
ζυμοῖ; [7] [g] Ἐκκαθάρατε τὴν παλαιὰν ζύμην, ἵνα ἦτε νέον φύραμα, καθὼς ἐστε ἄζυμοι· καὶ γὰρ τὸ πάσχα ἡμῶν ἐτύθη Χριστός.

5. παραδοῦναι τὸν τοιοῦτον τῷ Σατανᾷ] to deliver such an one to Satan. By ἀφορισμὸς, or Excommunication,—that is, by separation from external communion with the Visible Church in religious offices. See Chrys., Theophyl., and Suicer in v. ἀφορισμός.

"The punishment for extreme contumacy (says Barrow, Serm. lviii. vol. iii. p. 140) is called delivery to Satan, and this power is spiritual." (2 Cor. x. 4.)

(1) The term "deliver to Satan," used by St. Paul here and 1 Tim. i. 20, appears to have had its origin from consideration of the fact, that physical evil is due to the agency of the Evil Spirit. This truth had been revealed in the history of Job (Job ii. 6), and was further illustrated by our Lord's teaching (Luke xiii. 16), in the case of the woman "with a spirit of infirmity," and in the history of the demoniac at Gadara, and the fate of the swine (Matt. viii. 30—32. Mark v. 13. Luke viii. 33); and in the Evangelical history generally of demoniacal possessions accompanied with bodily sufferings. Hence St. Paul's thorn in his flesh is called by him 'a messenger of Satan.' (2 Cor. xii. 7.)

(2) Excommunication is a withdrawal of the ordinary means of grace,—a cutting off from the channels by which the influences of the Holy Ghost are usually bestowed. They who have grieved the Holy Ghost by heinous sin, are deprived, for their sin, of His comfortable presence, and are given over to the power of their own master, Satan, whose service they have preferred to that of God.

(3) The ordinary means of grace being withheld, by which the Presence of the Holy Ghost is usually vouchsafed, Satan makes his own power to be felt by those who lack those means. This he has been permitted to do, particularly in the earlier ages of the Church, by physical distempers and plagues. Hence St. Paul declares that the sicknesses with which the Corinthians were visited, were chastisements for their sins in desecrating the Lord's House and the Lord's Table. (1 Cor. xi. 30—32.) "For this cause many are weak and sickly among you." And corporal pains were the consequences of Excommunication pronounced by the Apostles of Christ. Cp. Augustine, c. Epist. Parmenian. iii. 2. Jerome, ad Heliodor. Epist. i.

(4) But St. Paul adds, that these bodily chastisements were permitted by God, for wise and merciful purposes, even for a spiritual benefit. "When we are (thus) being judged, we are being chastened by the Lord, in order that we should not be punished with the world." (1 Cor. xi. 32.)

This is what St. Paul states to be the aim and end of the sentence of Excommunication, here pronounced by himself against the incestuous Corinthian, who is delivered by him to Satan, in order that by the punishment of the flesh, and by the consequent mortification of the fleshly lusts and appetites, by which he had sinned, "his spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord."

In like manner he elsewhere says, that he delivered Hymenæus and Alexander to Satan, with a salutary intention towards them, i. e. that they might learn not to blaspheme (1 Tim. i. 20); and he says generally that his spiritual weapons are given him "for edification, and not for destruction." (2 Cor. x. 8; xiii. 10.) Cp. Chrys. here, and Theodoret.

The examples of Ananias and Sapphira often cited hereupon, are not relevant, because their punishment was not inflicted on them by St. Peter, but only pre-announced (see on Acts v. 5); nor could death have ministered to that spiritual edification, which is the aim and end of Excommunication and of all Church Discipline.

(5) If it be asked, how excommunicated persons, being cut off from fellowship with the Church, could be moved to Repentance (which is a work of the Holy Ghost) by bodily sufferings, and not rather be hardened by them, as Pharaoh was, it must be remembered, "that the act of excommunication neither shutteth out from the mystical Church, nor clean from the visible, but only from fellowship with the visible in holy duties." Hooker, III. i. 13.

There is still the holy seed of Baptism—which is not to be repeated—in the heart of the person excommunicated; and that seed, though it have been choked by sin, may germinate afresh, when the gracious motions of the Spirit which bloweth where it listeth, are pleased to visit it, and those motions are cherished in the soul, which is humbled by the chastisement of the flesh, and is taught by suffering, how evil and bitter a thing it is to depart from the living God. (Jer. ii. 19.)

There is also that natural residue of Divine goodness which makes itself felt and heard in Human Nature by the Voice of Conscience when awakened by suffering, and which gave vent to the penitential confession of the Prodigal Son: "Father, I have sinned against heaven and before Thee." (Luke xv. 18.)

(6) Thus Excommunication itself, though doubtless it is a cutting off from participation in ordinary means of Grace, yet is to be considered as one of the means of Grace: one which, if rightly used, God Himself, Who appointed it, will bless; and which ought never to be forfeited by a Church. Just as the severe discipline of the bodily Physician is not to be foregone, though it may deprive the patient of food and exercise, which are ordinary means of health, yet is salutary and necessary, in order that he may enjoy them, and is itself one of the appointed means of health.

Compare Chrys., Theophyl., and Œcum. here, and the statements of Hammond, in his note, and in his letter to Bp. Sanderson (Sanderson's Works, v. pp. 344, 345), from which the following words may be cited:

There is the withdrawing all the outward ordinary means of Grace, the preaching of the Word and Sacraments, which if it be done by the censures of the Church, is called the delivering up to Satan. And of those Church censures it is said expressly by the Apostle, that the end of inflicting them is for edification, that men may be disciplined, and taught not to blaspheme. (2 Cor. xiii. 10. 1 Tim. i. 20.)

This supposes continuance of Grace to them that are thus punished, and that sufficient to make use of this punishment to their amendment; nay, the punishment, though it be the withdrawing of one instrument of Grace, is itself another, and therefore purposely chosen and allowed in exchange for the former, because it is looked on as the more probable to produce the effect.

They that see so great a benefit withdrawn from them for their unworthiness, will be thereby excited to reflect on their provocations, and bewail them, and contend by all regular means to regain what they have forfeited, and to repair their neglects some other way. And this being the very end to which this punishment is by God designed, it is not imaginable He doth yet, till this method also be despised, withhold that degree of Grace from such, which is necessary for the producing of the effect.

6. καύχημα] The matter or subject of your glorying is not good; not "your glorying is not good," which would be καύχησις. (Meyer.)

7. Ἐκκαθάρατε] Purge ye out. An allusion to the command of God to the Israelites to remove all leaven from their houses before the Passover or days of unleavened bread. Exod. xii. 15.

The Holy Spirit here teaches the Church by St. Paul what was the moral and spiritual meaning of the ceremonial Law in this respect. Compare his further instruction on this subject, 1 Cor. x. 1—5.

S. Ignatius (ad Magnes. c. 10) seems to have had St. Paul's words in his mind when he wrote ὑπέρθεσθε τὴν κακὴν ζυμὴν τὴν παλαιωθεῖσαν καὶ ἐνοξίσασαν, καὶ μεταβάλεσθε εἰς νέαν ζύμην, ὅ ἐστιν Ἰησοῦς Χριστός.

On this and the following verse, see Bp. Andrewes, Sermons ii. 290.

— καθώς ἐστε ἄζυμοι] according as ye are unleavened, that is, by the very terms of your Christian profession. Photius (in Cat. p. 96).

— καὶ γὰρ τὸ πάσχα ἡμῶν] for our Passover also was sacrificed. Probably these words were written by St. Paul a little before Easter, and were read by the Corinthians for the first time at that season; and they would gain in force by that circumstance. See above, Introduction to this Epistle, ii. § 4, p. 77.

— καὶ γὰρ τὸ πάσχα ἡμῶν ἐτύθη Χριστός] for our Passover also was sacrificed, which is Christ. After ἡμῶν Elz. adds ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν, which is not in A, B, C, D, E, F, G. Nor is it found in 8 [h] Ὥστε ἑορτάζωμεν, μὴ ἐν ζύμῃ παλαιᾷ, μηδὲ ἐν ζύμῃ κακίας καὶ πονηρίας, ἀλλ' ἐν ἀζύμοις εἰλικρινείας καὶ ἀληθείας.

[h] Exod. 12. 3, 15. Deut. 16. 3.

Appendix to Irenæus, p. 932, ed. Stieren, and Tertullian, c. Marcion. v. 7, "Pascha nostrum immolatus est Christus."

Remark the order of the words, and the aorist ἐτύθη. The sense is, For the Passover of us also (καὶ), as well as of the Jews, was sacrificed, at the Passion of Christ. And as the leaven was removed from the houses of the Jews before the sacrifice of the Paschal Lamb, and no leaven might be found in their houses from the first day until the seventh day of the Paschal Week (Exod. xii. 15), and since our Paschal Lamb, which is Christ, has been sacrificed once for all, and the sacrifice is never to be repeated, the whole of the Christian Life is to be, as it were, a perpetual Holy Week. We are by our baptism ἄζυμοι, unleavened (v. 7). Chrys. Therefore, let the leaven which now contaminates you be put away.

It has been recently alleged by some (e. g. Meyer) that St. Paul here regards Christ as the Antitype of the Paschal Lamb in respect of the day of His Passion; and that therefore the account of the first three Evangelists is erroneous, which says that Christ ate the Paschal Lamb with His disciples at the Passover of His own Passion. And it has been also alleged, that St. Paul agrees with St. John in differing from those three Evangelists, and in representing the Paschal Lamb as not sacrificed at Jerusalem till the day of the Passion of Christ.

The allegation of this supposed discrepancy has been already examined in the notes on Luke xxii. 7, and on John xviii. 28. And from the considerations there stated it will be seen, that Christ may well be called our Paschal Lamb, not only as the Lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world (John i. 29. 36), and by whose precious blood-shedding we are delivered from the bondage of our sins, and from the sword of the destroying Angel, and are enabled to escape from the Egyptian captivity of our ghostly Enemy, and to pass through the baptismal sea in the way to our heavenly Canaan (see 1 Cor. x. 1, 2), but also even as to the time of His Passion. For He not only ate the Passover at the right legal time with His disciples, but even then, on that day, His Passion, which was consummated on the Cross on Calvary on the following day, might well be said to have begun, when He uttered those solemn words by which He transfigured the Levitical Passover into the Christian Sacrament, "This is My body which is being broken for you," 1 Cor. xi. 24. Cp. Luke xxii. 20; "This is My Blood which is being shed for you." And His Passion was continued, when He was in His Agony at Gethsemane, and when He said, "Mine hour is come" (Matt. xxvi. 45. John xii. 27; xiii. 1), and was finished (John xix. 30) when He gave up the ghost, on the Cross.

8. ἑορτάζωμεν] let us keep the feast. Christ had called false doctrine by the name of leaven (Matt. xvi. 6), and Paul dwells on the metaphor, reminding them of the ancient history of the Passover, and of the Blessings then received and now, and also of the Judgments then executed. And when he says, "Let us keep the feast," he shows that all time is the season of the Festival to Christians, on account of the immensity of the gifts they have received. For what blessing have they not? The Son of God has become man for thy sake. He has delivered thee from death, He has called thee to His Kingdom. Therefore thou oughtest to keep the Feast all thy life long. (Chrysostom.)

This Text is specially applicable to a consideration of the privileges and duties of Christians as recipients of the Holy Communion; and in this sense it is well expounded, as follows, by one of the most learned and holy Bishops of the Church;

In the Institution of the Holy Eucharist, two things Christ gave us in charge,

1. ἀνάμνησις, 'remembering,' and
2. λῆψις, 'receiving.' (Luke xxii. 17. 19.)

The same two St. Paul, but in other terms,

1. καταγγελία, 'showing forth;'
2. κοινωνία, 'communicating.'

Of which, 'remembering' and 'showing forth' refer to celebremus; 'receiving' and 'communicating' to ἑορτάζωμεν, or epulemur, here.

The first in remembrance of Him, Christ. What, of Him? Mortem Domini, His Death, saith St. Paul; "to show forth the Lord's death." Remember Him? That we will, and stay at home, and think of Him there. Nay, show Him forth ye must. That we will by a sermon of Him. Nay, it must be Hoc facite. It is not mental thinking nor verbal speaking. There must be actually somewhat done to celebrate this memory. That done to the holy symbols, that was done to Him, to His body and His blood in the Passover; break the one, pour out the other, to represent κλώμενον, how His sacred body was "broken," and ἐκχυνόμενον, how His precious blood was "shed." And in corpus fractum and sanguis fusus there is immolatus. This is it in the Eucharist that answereth to the sacrifice in the Passover, the memorial to the figure. To them it was Hoc facite in mei præfigurationem, "Do this in prefiguration of Me:" to us it is "Do this in commemoration of Me." (Luke xxii. 19. 1 Cor. xi. 24. 26.) To them prænuntiare, to us annuntiare; there is the difference.

By the same rules that theirs was, by the same may ours be termed a Sacrifice. In rigour of speech neither of them; for, to speak after the exact manner of Divinity, there is but one only sacrifice, veri nominis, 'properly so called,' that is Christ's death. (Heb. x. 4.) And that sacrifice but once actually performed at His death, but ever before represented in figure from the beginning; and ever since repeated in memory to the world's end. That only absolute, all else relative to it, representative of it, operative by it. The Lamb but once actually slain in the fulness of time, but virtually was from the beginning, is, and shall be to the end of the world. That the centre in which their lines and ours, their types and our antitypes, do meet. While yet this offering was not, the hope of it was kept alive by the prefiguration of it in theirs. And after it is past the memory of it is still kept fresh in mind by the commemoration of it in ours.

So it was the will of God that so there might be with them a continual foreshowing, and with us a continual showing forth "the Lord's death till He come again."

Hence it is that what names theirs carried, ours do the like; and the Fathers make no scruple at it, no more need we. The Apostle, in the tenth chapter, compareth this of ours, to the immolata of the heathen (1 Cor. x. 21, &c.); and to the Hebrews, habemus aram, matcheth it with the sacrifice of the Jews. (Heb. xiii. 10.) And we know the rule of comparisons, they must be ejusdem generis.

Neither do we stay here, but proceed to the other, Epulemur (let us keep the feast). For there is another thing yet to be done, which doth present to us that which celebremus doth represent. For the Sacrament is the applying of the Sacrifice. The Sacrifice in general, pro omnibus. The Sacrament in particular to each several receiver, pro singulis. Wherein that is offered to us that was offered for us; that which is common to all, made proper to each one, while each taketh his part of it; and made proper by a Communion and union, like that of meat and drink, which is most nearly and inwardly made ours, and is inseparable for ever. There celebremus passeth with the representation; but here epulemur, as a nourishment, abideth with us still. In that we "see," and in this we "taste," how gracious the Lord is and hath been to us. (Ps. xxxiv. 8.)

And so much for these two as two means to partake the benefit, and we to use them; and as duties required of us, and we to perform them.

Will ye mark one thing more, that Epulemur doth here refer to immolatus? To Christ, not every way considered, but as He was offered. Christ's body that now is. True; but not Christ's body as it now is, but as then it was when it was offered, rent, and slain, and sacrificed for us. Not as now He is glorified, for so He is not, so He cannot be immolatus, for He is immortal and impassible; but as then He was when He suffered death, that is passible and mortal. Then in His passible estate did He institute this of ours, to be a memorial of His passible and Passio both. And we are in this action not only carried up to Christ (sursum corda), but we are also carried back to Christ as He was at the very instant, and in the very act of His offering.

So and no otherwise doth this text teach; so and no otherwise, do we represent Him. By the incomprehensible power of His eternal Spirit, not He alone, but He, as at the very act of His offering, is made present to us, and we incorporate into His death, and invested in the benefits of it. If an host could be turned into Him, now glorified as He is, it would not serve. Christ offered is it, thither we must look; to the Serpent lift up, thither we must repair, even ad cadaver (see note above on Matt. xxiv. 28); we must, hoc facere, do that is then done. So, and no otherwise, is this epulari to be conceived. Bp. Andrewes (Serm. vii. on the Resurrection).

— εἰλικρινείας] purity. Εἰλι-κρινής is that which being held up to the sunshine (πρὸς εἵλην), and so (κρίνεται) is tested, is found to be transparent, without flaw, speck, or blemish (Etym. M.). Cp. 2 Cor. i. 12; ii. 17. Phil. i. 10. 2 Pet. iii. 1.

This Etymology, confirmed and illustrated with much erudition by Ruhnken and Hemsterhuis (in Timæum, p. 264, v. ὑπ' αὐγὰς), ought not, it would seem, to be abandoned, even after the remarks of a recent learned English Editor of the Epistle to the Philippians, i. 10.

i vv 2, 7. 2 Cor. 6. 14. Eph. 5. 11.

k 2 Thess. 3. 14.

9 i Ἔγραψα ὑμῖν ἐν τῇ ἐπιστολῇ μὴ συναναμίγνυσθαι πόρνοις· 10 οὐ πάντως τοῖς πόρνοις τοῦ κόσμου τούτου, ἢ τοῖς πλεονέκταις, καὶ ἅρπαξιν, ἢ εἰδωλολάτραις, ἐπεὶ ὀφείλετε ἄρα ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου ἐξελθεῖν. 11 k Νυνὶ δὲ ἔγραψα ὑμῖν μὴ συναναμίγνυσθαι, ἐάν τις ἀδελφὸς ὀνομαζόμενος ᾖ πόρνος, ἢ πλεονέκτης, ἢ εἰδωλολάτρης, ἢ λοίδορος, ἢ μέθυσος, ἢ ἅρπαξ· τῷ τοιούτῳ μηδὲ συνεσθίειν.

1 Mark 4. 11. Col. 4. 5. 1 Thess. 4. 12. 1 Tim. 3. 7.

12 l Τί γάρ μοι καὶ τοὺς ἔξω κρίνειν; οὐχὶ τοὺς ἔσω ὑμεῖς κρίνετε; 13 τοὺς δὲ ἔξω ὁ Θεὸς κρίνει.

Ἐξάρατε τὸν πονηρὸν ἐξ ὑμῶν αὐτῶν.

a Matt. 18. 15—17. Acts 18. 14, 15. & 19. 38.

VI. 1 a Τολμᾷ τις ὑμῶν πρᾶγμα ἔχων πρὸς τὸν ἕτερον κρίνεσθαι ἐπὶ τῶν

---

9. Ἔγραψα ὑμῖν ἐν τῇ ἐπιστολῇ] I wrote to you in the Epistle.

(1) St. Paul had now been absent from Corinth for three years. It is probable, therefore, that some communication had been made from him by letter during that time.

(2) He refers here to something as written by him, which is not found in any extant Epistle to the Corinthians. Origen (in Caten. p. 97).

(3) He contrasts his present writing with some former writing, and explains what he wrote then by what he writes now. See v. 11, where νυνὶ δὲ ἔγραψα is contrasted with ἔγραψα ἐν τῇ ἐπιστολῇ.

(4) Therefore the reference here is to some Epistle of St. Paul, which is not now extant.

(5) This conclusion is perfectly consistent with the position that "No Canonical Book of Holy Scripture has been lost."

For what is meant by the word 'Canonical?' That which forms a part of those Writings which constitute the Κανὼν or Rule of Faith of the Church, and has been received as such by the Universal Church, which is the Body of Christ, and to which He promised His presence and that of the Holy Ghost. In a word, whatever Writing has been acknowledged by Christ and by the Holy Ghost, dwelling in the Church, and making their consent heard and seen by the reception and reading of the said Writing as Canonical Scripture in the public assemblies of the Universal Church throughout the World, that must be acknowledged to be Canonical Scripture.

But the Epistle, to which St. Paul refers here, was not so read by the Church Catholic, which never received more than two Epistles of St. Paul to the Corinthians as Canonical Scripture; and these two Epistles are the Epistles which are now received as the First and Second Epistles of St. Paul to the Corinthians.

(6) So far from being perplexed by such a conclusion as this, we may rather derive instruction from it, as bringing out clearly the true grounds on which our belief in the Inspiration of the Canonical Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments rests.

We do not receive these Books merely because they were written by Prophets, Apostles, and Evangelists; for some of the Canonical Books were written by persons who were not Prophets, Apostles, or Evangelists, and whose very names are unknown to us; as the Books of Job and Judges. And no one can imagine that every thing that was ever written by all the Prophets, Apostles, and Evangelists, is contained in the Bible. Nor do we receive them because they were written by men who claim to be inspired by the Holy Ghost; for men may claim to be inspired, who are not so; and in some of those books no such claim is made.

But we receive them because they are sealed by the Seal of Christ. He, during His personal presence upon Earth, received all the Books of the Old Testament as the Inspired Word of God. He by His Spirit enabled the Apostles to avouch by miracles their authority to deliver and to sanction the Books of the New Testament as of equal authority with the Old. (See below on 2 Tim. iii. 15, 16. 2 Pet. iii. 15, 16.) And Christ Himself avouches the Canon of Holy Scripture with His Divine Authority, and delivers it to us as the Rule of Faith, by the consentient voice of the Church Universal, which is His Body, and which receives as Canonical Scripture every Book of the New Testament, and joins both Testaments together, as written by the same Divine Hand, and making together the perfect Written Word of God, to which nothing can be added, and from which nothing can be taken away.

This universal external testimony is, doubtless, confirmed particularly and internally by what we ourselves feel in hearing and reading the Holy Scriptures, and by the witness of the Spirit within us, that what we hear and read, is from God. And it is corroborated by what we know of the beneficial effects produced in the world by the agency and influence of Holy Scripture. It is strengthened by all the researches which we are enabled to make into Evidences of their Truth and Inspiration. And so by the co-operation of our own internal and particular persuasion with the external and universal Testimony of the Church, we are settled and stablished in the belief, that the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament are the complete Word of God.

On this subject the reader may compare the remarks above on Mark xvi. 9, and below, 3 John 9, where St. John refers to an Epistle of his own, which is no longer extant.

10. πόρνοις] fornicators. He dwells on this word here and in vv. 2, 3, putting it in the forefront of his catalogue of sins. A remarkable proof of his courage and freedom. For πορνεία was scarcely accounted a sin by the Gentile World, and at Corinth it was even consecrated as a part of Religion. See the note above on Acts xv. 20.

11. Νυνὶ δὲ ἔγραψα] But now I write. See on v. 9. As to the meaning of νυνὶ, now, see St. Paul's speech, Acts xxii. 1. 2 Cor. viii. 11. 22. Rom. vi. 22; vii. 6; xv. 23. 25. Philem. 9. 11. On this use of ἔγραψα, like the Latin scripsi, see ix. 15. Gal. vi. 11. Philem. 19. 1 Pet. v. 12.

The νυνὶ, now, removes all ambiguity which might otherwise have arisen from the same word ἔγραψα used in v. 9 with reference to the former letter.

There is no retractation here of what had been said in that former letter, but only an explanation. If ἔγραψα here also refers to a former letter (as it does in v. 9), then νυνὶ must be understood as explanatory of what had probably been misunderstood, "But now the fact is, I wrote."

But the other interpretation seems preferable.

— μηδὲ συνεσθίειν] not even to eat together; "nec cibum sumere," Iren. (iv. 4.)

This precept is not to be applied only to the sacred feasts, the agapæ, but is general. Cp. note below on 2 John 10; and see 2 Thess. iii. 6. 14. 2 Tim. iii. 5. Rom. xvi. 17. Matt. xviii. 17, passages which show that great circumspection is to be used by Christians in the intercourse of society, and in the interchanges of hospitality. See the narrative in Eusebius concerning St. John's behaviour to Cerinthus (Euseb. iii. 28), and S. Polycarp's to Marcion (Euseb. iv. 14), and Bp. Fell's note here, who observes from S. Aug. Conf. iii. 11, that "S. Augustine's mother would not diet with him, perverted by the Manichæans."

12. καὶ τοὺς ἔξω] even those that are without the pale of the Church, as well as those that are within.

Christ sent me as an Apostle and Minister of the Churches. And therefore I meddle not with them that are without, i. e. the Heathen. But if any man that is within the Christian Church, if any man that is called a brother, be a fornicator, or drunkard, or railer, or otherwise stain his holy profession with scandalous living, I know how to deal with him: let the censures of the Church be laid upon him, let him be cast out of the assemblies of the brethren, that he may hereby be brought to shame and repentance. Bp. Sanderson (i. p. 70). See also vol. v. 307; vi. 394, on the relations and duties of a Christian State toward οἱ ἔξω in matters of Religion.

13. Ἐξάρατε] Cast ye out. So the best MSS., a reading which, by its abrupt brevity, brings out in a bold, authoritative tone, the judicial sentence of the Apostle. See below on vi. 20. Elz. has καὶ ἐξαρεῖτε, which is literally from LXX, Deut. xvii. 7, but may well have been modified in its application by St. Paul. Cp. Bengel here; and Tertullian, in quoting this passage, has "Auferte malum ex vobis;" and so Vulg., Gothic, Syriac, Æthiopic, and Arabic Versions; and so Theodoret.

CH. VI. 1. Τολμᾷ τις—κρίνεσθαι] Doth any one of you venture to go to law? He passes by a natural transition from the question he has just handled, of spiritual jurisdiction and Church ἀδίκων, καὶ οὐχὶ ἐπὶ τῶν ἁγίων ; [2] [b]*Ἢ οὐκ οἴδατε ὅτι οἱ ἅγιοι τὸν κόσμον κρινοῦσι ; καὶ εἰ ἐν ὑμῖν κρίνεται ὁ κόσμος, ἀνάξιοί ἐστε κριτηρίων ἐλαχίστων ; [3] [c] οὐκ οἴδατε ὅτι ἀγγέλους κρινοῦμεν, μήτι γε βιωτικά ; [4] βιωτικὰ μὲν οὖν κριτήρια ἐὰν ἔχητε, τοὺς ἐξουθενημένους ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ τούτους καθίζετε ; [5] Πρὸς ἐντροπὴν ὑμῖν λέγω· οὕτως οὐκ ἔνι ἐν ὑμῖν σοφὸς οὐδὲ εἷς, ὃς δυνήσεται διακρῖναι ἀνὰ μέσον τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ αὐτοῦ ; [6] ἀλλὰ ἀδελφὸς μετὰ ἀδελφοῦ κρίνεται, καὶ τοῦτο ἐπὶ ἀπίστων.

[b] Dan. 7. 18, 22. Zech. 14. 5. Matt. 19. 28. Luke 22. 30. Rev. 2. 26.
[c] 2 Pet. 2. 4. Jude ver. 6.

censures, to reprehend their practice in carrying their lawsuits before Heathen Tribunals.

Besides the scandal of such a proceeding, as exposing their internal differences to the eyes of the Heathen, there were certain formularies to be gone through in the Heathen Law Courts, such as adjurations by heathen Deities, which would involve them in idolatrous practices. See Blunt's Lectures, pp. 96. 110.

— τὸν ἕτερον] his neighbour, a brother Christian—not a heathen. Cp. x. 24. Rom. xiii. 8.

2. Ἢ] Omitted by Elz., but in the best MSS.

— οὐκ οἴδατε] know ye not?—a question which occurs no less than ten times in this Epistle (iii. 16; v. 6; vi. 2, 3. 9. 15, 16. 19; ix. 13. 24), and only twice (Rom. vi. 16; xi. 2) in the rest of St. Paul's Epistles. The interrogation "Know ye not?" was a very fit form of expostulation and remonstrance with the Corinthians, on their ignorance, who vaunted themselves most on their knowledge.

2, 3. οἱ ἅγιοι τὸν κόσμον κρινοῦσι—ἀγγέλους κρινοῦμεν] the Saints will judge the World—We shall judge Angels. These two statements may be considered together;

(1) These words of St. Paul are referred to by S. Polycarp (ad Philipp. c. 11), "An nescimus quia sancti mundum judicabunt?" where the learned Editor quotes a passage from Dionysius, Bishop of Alexandria (ap. Euseb. vi. 42), in which the Martyrs are described as witnesses assisting and taking part as πάρεδροι, or assessors, in the great judicial transactions of the Last Day. See also Chrys. and Theodoret here, and Bp. Fell's note.

If we examine what Holy Scripture has revealed on this subject, and bear in mind that all Scripture is to be expounded according to the proportion of faith (Rom. xii. 6), and by "comparing spiritual things with spiritual" (1 Cor. ii. 13), we may interpret the Apostle as affirming

(2) That the Saints of God will condemn the world at the Great Day, because they will have proved by their own holiness, the fruit of God's grace, and by their own sufferings, endured patiently and joyfully unto the end, for Christ's sake, at the hands of the world, and by the rewards of infinite bliss and glory which they will then receive, that the World has been guilty of base ingratitude and blind infatuation in rejecting God's gracious offers, and choosing the service of sin, which will then bring with it the wages of eternal Death. See the Wisdom of Solomon v. 1—23. Thus they will judge the World.

The Saints shall also stand up in the Judgment and condemn Satan and his Angels. "Hi sunt Angeli, quos judicaturi sumus," says Tertullian (de Cultû Fœmin. § 11), and so Chrys. and other ancient Expositors here. The Saints will judge them by proving that since they, men on earth, compassed with weakness, stood firm in their allegiance to God, therefore, the fall of celestial Beings, who enjoyed God's presence, was due to their own sin. Thus they will judge Angels.

It must be borne in mind that the evil Angels have not yet been fully and finally judged; but are "reserved for the Judgment of the Great Day," when their sentence will be pronounced. See above on Matt. viii. 29.

Our Lord uses the word condemn in a similar sense concerning the men of Nineveh and the Queen of Sheba, Matt. xii. 41, 42. Luke xi. 31, 32. Cp. Heb. xi. 7, and see further on Rev. xx. 4, and so Chrysostom here, and Photius (in Caten.).

(3) It is, indeed, alleged by some, that since St. Paul is speaking of actual judicial processes in temporal matters, he must also be referring to some judicial functions to be exercised hereafter at the Great Day by the Saints of God; and it has also been said by some recent Expositors, that the word Angels here used without any epithet can only mean Good Angels.

But the testimony of Holy Scripture is clear, that the Father hath committed all Judgment to the Son (John v. 22; cp. Acts xvii. 31), and this, because He is the Son (John v. 27); and the chief Saints of the Church, the Apostles, declare that they themselves will be among those who are to be judged (1 Cor. iv. 4. Rom. xiv. 10. 2 Cor. v. 10).

And the Good Angels who kept their first estate are now elect (1 Tim. v. 21), and are not hereafter to be judged, but they will form a part of Christ's glorious retinue when He comes hereafter to Judgment; and Christ will come with them to Judgment, and they will separate the evil from the good (Matt. xiii. 41; xvi. 27; xxv. 31). And it is not probable that the Angels, who are appointed to gather the Elect to judgment, will be judged by them.

As to the opinion that Angels here can only mean good Angels, it might have some ground if St. Paul had said τοὺς ἀγγέλους, the Angels; but he does not say this, but ἀγγέλους, Angels, i. e. some Angels out of the whole number of beings called Angels. Cp. Winer, § 19, p. 113, note.

(4) The Saints of God, after that they themselves have been judged and admitted to glory, will, it appears from Scripture, be allowed to sit near to Christ, as assessors of His dread Tribunal. See Matt. xix. 28, and Luke xxii. 30, where the sitting on Thrones is mentioned after the sitting at the Table; and they will hear the sentence pronounced by Christ against evil Angels. As Dr. Barrow says, Serm. xxxiii., "The Saints being themselves first approved shall become assessors there." See above (1).

(5) With regard to the assertion that some actual enunciation of a judicial sentence by the Saints is supposed in St. Paul's comparison of what is done by a Judge in a Law Court with what the Saints will hereafter do, it is observable that he does not compare two sets of persons, but he compares the act of judging the world with acts of judging in worldly things (βιωτικά). And his argument is, If by their righteousness, wisdom, and courage the Saints will condemn the world hereafter, surely they have the requisite qualifications for adjudicating between Christians in secular matters here.

— ἐν ὑμῖν] before you—, at your tribunal: 'apud vos judices,' or 'coram vobis judicibus.' See Winer, Gr. Gr. § 48, p. 344.

— κριτηρίων ἐλαχίστων] the most trivial causes. See v. 4.

3. μήτι γε βιωτικά] to say nothing of worldly things; 'ne dicam sæcularia.' See Meyer and Alford.

Cod. Aug. and Boern. have πόσῳ μᾶλλον, and quanto magis, and so Vulg.; and this is the sense given in the Syriac, Arabic, and Æthiopic Versions.

4. βιωτικὰ μὲν οὖν κριτήρια ἐὰν ἔχητε, κ.τ.λ.] If however ye have secular causes to decide, do ye set up as judges in the Church those who have been superseded by it? do ye set up these?

In order to understand this passage, the sense of which has been much controverted, it must be remembered,

(1) That for the settlement of all differences among Christians, our Lord Himself had said, "Tell it to the Church." (Matt. xviii. 17.) He had made her the Arbitress of such disputes. He had placed the Church on the seat of Judgment. And thus He had superseded the use of Heathen Tribunals among Christians.

(2) That St. Paul uses the perfect tense here; he does not say ἐξουθενουμένους, despised persons, but τοὺς ἐξουθενημένους, the persons who have been rejected, and, as it were, reduced to nought (εἰς οὐδὲν), and exploded (ἐξ) by the Church.

(3) The pronoun τούτους, these, as used here, is emphatic, and is uttered with a tone of surprise and indignation (cp. the examples in Winer, § 23, p. 144), "Do ye set up even these?" Thus placed at the end of the sentence it strongly marks the strange absurdity of setting up those very persons who, as far as Christian use of them was concerned, had themselves been brought down, and, as it were, disfranchised, dethroned, and deposed; and whom he himself had just called τοὺς ἔξω (those who are without,—the heathens), and whom he himself did not pretend to judge (v. 12). And shall they, who are within the Church (οἱ ἔσω), and who ought themselves to be qualified to judge those who are within (see v. 12), shall they dare to pull down the Tribunal which Christ has set up for settling disputes among Christians,—namely, the Church herself, to whom, as a final court of appeal, Christ Himself refers them (Matt. xviii. 17) for the settlement of such questions; and shall they introduce the Heathen into the Church, and set up those whom she has superseded, and establish them as Judges in the Church?

5. ἔνι] i. e. ἔνεστι. See Gal. iii. 28. So B, C, I, and many cursive MSS.—Elz. has ἔστιν.

— οὐδὲ εἷς] not even one,—among so many.

6. καὶ τοῦτο] and this too. See v. 8.

d Matt. 5. 39. Rom. 12. 17, 19. 1 Thess. 4. 6. & 5. 15. Prov. 20, 22. e Gal. 5. 19—21. Eph. 5. 4, 5. 1 Tim. 1. 9. Heb. 12. 14, 16. & 13. 4. Rev. 21. 8. & 22. 15. f Eph. 2. 1—3. Tit. 3. 3. Heb. 10. 22.

7 d Ἤδη μὲν οὖν ὅλως ἥττημα ὑμῖν ἐστιν, ὅτι κρίματα ἔχετε μεθ' ἑαυτῶν. Διατί οὐχὶ μᾶλλον ἀδικεῖσθε; διατί οὐχὶ μᾶλλον ἀποστερεῖσθε; 8 Ἀλλὰ ὑμεῖς ἀδικεῖτε καὶ ἀποστερεῖτε, καὶ τοῦτο ἀδελφούς. 9 e Ἢ οὐκ οἴδατε ὅτι ἄδικοι Θεοῦ βασιλείαν οὐ κληρονομήσουσι; Μὴ πλανᾶσθε· οὔτε πόρνοι, οὔτε εἰδωλολάτραι, οὔτε μοιχοὶ, οὔτε μαλακοὶ, οὔτε ἀρσενοκοῖται, 10 οὔτε κλέπται, οὔτε πλεονέκται, οὔτε μέθυσοι, οὐ λοίδοροι, οὐχ ἅρπαγες, βασιλείαν Θεοῦ οὐ κληρονομήσουσι. 11 f Καὶ ταῦτα τινὲς ἦτε· ἀλλὰ ἀπελούσασθε, ἀλλὰ ἡγιάσθητε, ἀλλ'

7. Ἤδη μὲν οὖν ὅ. ἥττημα] However there is altogether already an injury here. Ἤδη denotes that antecedently to the question of the manner and place in which their lawsuits are to be tried, there is another prior consideration, viz. that of the uncharitableness of going to law at all.

— ἥττημα ὑμῖν] So the best MSS. and Editions.—Elz. has ἥττημα ἐν ὑμῖν. But the Apostle means to say, that by doing injustice they inflict injury on themselves as well as on others; and so a loss accrues to themselves as well as a wrong to others. By their πλεονέκτημα, or covetousness, they suffer an ἥττημα, or loss; according to the ancient apophthegm, οἳ αὐτῷ κακὰ τεύχει ἀνὴρ ἄλλῳ κακὰ τεύχων,—a sense which is obscured by the interpolation of ἐν. See Rom. xi. 12, where ἥττημα is opposed to πλοῦτος.

He also corrects their spirit of vain-glory in their spiritual wealth, by thus reminding them that they are spiritually poor.

— μεθ' ἑαυτῶν] one with another. Observe μετὰ, with; participation with; ye ought to have Christian fellowship and love with each other, μεθ' ἑαυτῶν, but ye have litigation!

— Διατί οὐχὶ μᾶλλον ἀδικεῖσθε;—ἀποστερεῖσθε;] Why do ye not rather suffer yourselves to be wronged and defrauded?

8. τοῦτο] So A, B, C, D, E,—a reading which gives force and clearness to the sense. "Ye do wrong; and this ye do to your own brethren." Cp. above v. 6, and see Rom. xiii. 11. 3 John 5. So Cicero (de Offic. i. 1) uses 'idque.'—Elz. has ταῦτα.

9. Μὴ πλανᾶσθε] Be not ye deceived. A formula adopted by S. Ignatius, ad Ephes. c. 16.

— οὔτε πόρνοι] neither fornicators,—a sentence referred to by S. Polycarp, ad Phil. c. 5, and by S. Irenæus, iv. 46; v. 11.

— μαλακοί] On the prevalence of those sins, for which Sodom and the Canaanitish nations were destroyed, even in the most celebrated and so-called civilized cities of Greece and Italy in the age of the Cæsars and the Apostles, see Rom. i. 27, and the passages quoted by Wetstein here.

11. Καὶ ταῦτα] And these things ye sometime were. Observe the neuter ταῦτα: they had degraded themselves by sin below the dignity of man's estate. Cp. the contrast Rev. xii. 5. 13, with Rev. viii. 9.

— ἀλλά] but—. Thrice repeated, in order to exhibit more boldly the moral contrast between their ante-baptismal and post-baptismal state. For similar repetitions, see i. 20; iv. 8; xiv. 24. 2 Cor. vii. 2. Winer, § 65. 5, p. 537.

The force of the contrast is strengthened by the ἀλλὰ non-elided by the vowels following it.

— ἀπελούσασθε] Observe the Aorist tense here and Middle voice. Properly, ye washed yourselves, or procured yourselves to be washed from your sins, at your Baptism. See x. 2. And so Chrys. and Theodoret, who says here, "The Apostle declares here the equality of the Son and the Spirit, and joins the Name of the Father; for by the Invocation of the Holy Trinity the Nature of Water is sanctified, and the Remission of Sins is freely bestowed (χορηγεῖται) thereby. And St. Paul comforts them with the consideration of their Baptism, lest when they recollect the sins they committed before their baptism, they should despair of salvation." And so Augustine, "according to whom there is no Justification ordinarily before or without Baptism. It was a fixed principle with him, that Justification commenced with Baptism, and not otherwise." Dr. Waterland, on Justification, vol. ix. p. 449.

These words of St. Paul, be it remembered, are addressed to the Corinthians generally; among whom, as this Epistle clearly shows, were many persons who were very deficient in the graces and virtues of Christian Faith and Practice;

Thus these words of St. Paul present two important articles of Christian Doctrine;

(1) St. Paul speaks of Justification as an act already done, and connects it with Baptism. In the words of an English Theologian, who has treated this subject with great fulness and precision,—The Justification which St. Paul discourseth of, seemeth, in his meaning, only or specially to be that act of grace which is dispensed to persons at their Baptism, or at their entrance into the Church; when, they openly professing their faith, and undertaking the practice of Christian duty, God most solemnly and formally doth absolve them from all guilt, and accepteth them into a state of favour with Him.

In several places Justification is coupled with Baptismal Regeneration and Absolution: Such were some of you; but ye have been washed, ye have been sanctified, ye have been justified in the name of Christ Jesus. Again, He saved us by the laver of regeneration, that having been justified by His grace, we may be made heirs of everlasting life. (Tit. iii. 5. 7. Heb. x. 22, 23.)

St. Paul, in expressing this act as it respecteth the faithful, commonly doth use a tense referring to the past time. He saith not δικαιούμενοι, being justified (Rom. v. 1. 9. Tit. iii. 7. 1 Cor. vi. 11), but δικαιωθέντες, having been justified; not δικαιοῦσθε, ye are justified, but ἐδικαιώθητε, ye have been justified,—namely, at some remarkable time; that is, at their entrance into Christianity.

St. Paul, in the sixth to the Romans, discourseth thus: "Seeing we in baptism are cleansed and disentangled from sin, are dead to it, and so justified from it" (Rom. vi. 2—7), God forbid that we should return to live in the practice thereof, so abusing and evacuating the grace we have received; which discourse seemeth plainly to signify, that he treateth about the Justification conferred in baptism.

Although Justification chiefly signifieth the first act of grace toward a Christian at his baptism, yet (according to analogy of reason and affinity in nature of things) every dispensation of pardon granted upon repentance may be styled Justification; for as particular acts of repentance upon commission of any particular sins, do not so much differ in nature as in measure or degree, from that general conversion practised in embracing the Gospel so the grace vouchsafed upon these penitential acts is only, in largeness of extent and solemnity of administration, diversified from that; especially considering that Repentance after Baptism is but a reviving of that first great resolution and engagement we made in Baptism; that remission of sin upon it is only the renovation of the grace then exhibited; that the whole transaction in this case is but a reinstating the covenant then made (and afterward by transgression infringed) upon the same terms which were then agreed upon; that consequently, by congruous analogy, this remission of sins, and restoring to favour, granted to a penitent, are only the former Justification reinforced.

Now, according to each of these notions, all good Christians may be said to have been justified; they have been justified by a general abolition of their sins, and reception into God's favour in Baptism; they so far have enjoyed the virtue of that gracious dispensation, and continued in a justified state, as they have persisted in faith and obedience; they have, upon falling into sin, and rising thence by repentance, been justified by particular remissions. So that having been justified by faith, they have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ. (Rom. v. 1.) Dr. Barrow (Serm. v. vol. iv. p. 137.)

(2) St. Paul regards all those whom he addresses, however blameworthy they may be in their present spiritual condition, as having been already washed from their sins by Baptism, as having been already justified by Christ; and consequently, not to be called upon to become regenerate persons, but to remember that they have been regenerated, and to rise from sin by Repentance, and to walk in newness of life.

Here also we cannot do better than cite the words of the judicious author just quoted, Dr. Barrow:

In one of his Sermons on Universal Redemption, arguing against the Calvinistic tenets, he observes (Serm. lxxi. vol. iii. p. 369):

The Apostles at first, and the Church ever since, after them (except some heterodox people of late), have professed readily to confer holy Baptism, and therein to dispense Remission of sins, together with other evangelical graces and privileges, to every man professing his faith in Christ, and resolution to obey Christ's law, upon this supposition, that Christ is the Saviour of all such persons, and by His salutary passion hath purchased that remission for them.

ἐδικαιώθητε, ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ, καὶ ἐν τῷ Πνεύματι τοῦ Θεοῦ ἡμῶν.

12 [g] Πάντα μοι ἔξεστιν, ἀλλ' οὐ πάντα συμφέρει· πάντα μοι ἔξεστιν, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐγὼ ἐξουσιασθήσομαι ὑπό τινος. 13 [h] Τὰ βρώματα τῇ κοιλίᾳ, καὶ ἡ κοιλία τοῖς

g ch. 10. 23.
h Matt. 15. 17. Rom. 14. 17. vv. 15, 19, 20. 1 Thess. 4. 3.

That in thus doing, the Church proceeds upon a persuasion that Christ is truly the Saviour of all its visible members, duly admitted and incorporated thereinto, the thing itself plainly signifies; the tenor of its practice makes palpable; the forms of speech used in its holy administrations, of Prayers, of Sacraments, of Exhortations, do suppose or express.

For how can each member singly be asserted in Holy Baptism, to be washed from his sins and sanctified to God, and made regenerate, or adopted into the family of God's children, and made partaker of Christ's death? How can thanksgiving in the common name, in most general terms, be offered up for Christ's saving performances? or the holy Cup and Bread be imparted to each Communicant as symbols and pledges of Christ's charity and mercy towards him? How can every Christian be instigated to obedience in gratitude to Christ; and those who transgress Christ's laws, upbraided for their ingratitude toward Him; their rejecting, or renouncing, despising, or abusing Him and His salvation? How can such things be said and done with any truth or consistency, yea, without forgery and mockery,—if every baptized Christian have not an interest in our Lord's performances; if Christ be the Saviour only of an uncertain and unknown part of the Church?

(3) And therefore it is rightly said by Dr. Waterland (on Justification, ix. p. 442), commenting on this present text, "Here are three concurrent causes of Justification mentioned together (by St. Paul),—

"The meritorious cause, 'the Lord Jesus.

"The efficient and operating cause, 'the Spirit of our God.'

"The instrumental rite of its conveyance, Baptism;"

To these may be added,—

The receptive condition on our side, Faith working by love. (See ibid. p. 451.) And, above all,

The prime, original and moving cause of all, the infinite love and free grace and favour of God the Father towards us, in bestowing Justification on us, in Christ.

See further below, Introduction to the Epistle to the Romans, "On the Doctrine of Justification."

12. Πάντα μοὶ ἔξεστι] All things are lawful to me. After speaking of the sin of covetousness, which had produced litigiousness, and exposed the Christian character to disgrace in the eyes of the Heathen at Corinth, and having stated the future punishments due to other sins of the flesh (vv. 9, 10), and having reminded the Corinthians what privileges they had received, and what sins they had renounced, and what pledges they had made, at their Baptism, he now proceeds to examine and confute an argument raised by some of the Gentile Christians at Corinth, who, in the presumptuous spirit of Greek Philosophy, pleaded, in behalf of Fornication, and of eating meats offered in sacrifice to idols, that man is the measure of all things (πάντων μέτρον ἄνθρωπος),—a principle in which both the greatest Schools of Greek Philosophy, with which St. Paul had disputed at Athens, agreed, though they applied it in different ways (see on Acts xvii. 18),—and that all the creatures were his, and that all things were lawful to him: a tenet which they imagined had received some countenance from the Gospel itself, which promised to them universal Liberty and even universal Dominion in Christ, a doctrine which, when properly stated and understood with due cautions, is productive of that genuine Independence which is the best security for self-control, and had therefore been placed in its proper light by St. Paul in the earlier part of his Epistle. See above on iii. 21—23, "All things are yours."

With true oratorical skill St. Paul therefore adopts this principle, "All things are lawful to me." He "transfers by a figure" (iv. 6) what the Corinthian Teachers had alleged, and applies it to himself, and examines that proposition, true in itself, but falsely applied by them.

This use of the first person is thus rightly explained by Bp. Sanderson (Serm. xi. vol. i. p. 293).

There is an opinion taken up in this last age, grounded upon one misunderstood passage in this Epistle (1 Cor. iii. 21–23), but is indeed both false in itself and dangerous in the consequents, namely this, that the godly regenerate have a full right to all the creatures, but wicked and unregenerate men have right to none, but are malæ fidei possessores, intruders and usurpers of those things they have, and shall at the Day of Judgment be answerable, not only for their abusing of them, but even for their very possessing of them.

Possibly some may imagine, yet none but they whose judgments are forestalled with that fancy, that these words of our Apostle look that way, and that there lieth an emphasis in the pronoun to this sense, All things are lawful for me, but not so for every man. Being a godly and regenerate man, and engrafted into Christ by faith, I have a right and liberty to all the creatures, which every man hath not.

But to feign such a sense to these words doth indeed quite overthrow the Apostle's main purpose in this part of his discourse, which is to teach the Corinthians and all others to yield something from their lawful Liberty for their brethren's sakes, when they shall see it needful so to do, either for the avoiding of private scandal or for the preservation of the public peace. So that the Apostle certainly here intended to extend our liberty to the creatures, as far and wide in respect of the persons as of the things; as if he had said, All things are lawful for all men. The interlinear Gloss is right here, "Quod sibi dicit licere, innuit de aliis."

We know it is an usual thing, as in our ordinary speech so in the Scriptures too, in framing objections in putting cases and the like, to make the instance personal where the aim is general, as Rom. iii. 7, "If the truth of God have abounded through my lie unto His glory, why am I also judged as a sinner?" that is, through my lie or any man's else: Why either I or any man else? So 1 Cor. x. 29, 30, Why is my liberty judged? and why am I evil spoken of? mine, or any man's else? I, or any man else? And so in a hundred places more. (Bp. Sanderson.)

Bengel well observes on this point, "Sæpe Paulus primâ personâ eloquitur quæ vim habent gnomes, in hâc præsertim Epistolâ." (vi. 15; vii. 7; x. 23. 29, 30; xiv. 11.) Cp. on 1 Thess. iv. 17, Gal. ii. 18, and Rom. vii. 7.

As to the meaning of the word ἔξεστι, two different opinions have been entertained.

It signifies either—

(1) All things are in my power by reason of my free will (and this is the opinion of Theodoret, who says, "All things are in thy power by reason of thy free will, but it is not expedient for thee to use in all things thy free will; for when thou doest what is sinful, thou losest thy freedom, and becomest the slave of sin");

Or it means—

(2) All indifferent things are lawful to me, but all indifferent things are not expedient. This is the interpretation of Ambrosiaster and Theophyl.

But this second explanation seems rather weak and tautologous, and hardly justified by the original.

The first interpretation seems more in harmony with the original, and with what St. Paul has said above, iii. 22, "All things are yours," and with the application of these words to πορνεία, which he could not regard as indifferent.

The sense therefore is, It is true that your body is your own, you are free to use it; but take care lest by your ill use of your freedom you become the slave of your body. And this sense of ἔξεστι is confirmed by the following cognate word, ἐξουσιασθήσομαι.

It is an excellent observation of S. Chrysostom, of frequent application in this Epistle, that St. Paul, with genuine rhetorical dexterity and power, drives back his adversary's arguments upon him (εἰς τὸ ἐναντίον περιτρέπει τὰς ἀντιθέσεις), and that he shows the Corinthians in various places that by abusing their liberty in indifferent things, they, who were lords of all things in Christ (iii. 22, 23), made themselves to be slaves, both in soul and body, of the worst masters, namely, of their own carnal lusts and appetites, and of Satan.

A salutary warning to all who "use their liberty for a cloke of maliciousness!" 1 Pet. ii. 16.

— οὐκ ἐξουσιασθήσομαι] I will not be subjected by —. I will not allow any thing to have ἐξουσίαν or dominion over me, who have dominion over all things.

On the sense of ἐξουσιάζω, see St. Paul's words, vii. 4.

The Christian, by virtue of his Incorporation in Christ, the Creator and King of all the Creatures, may well say πάντα μοι ἔξεστι "I am lord of all things" (see above, note on 1 Cor. iii. 23); but by reason of the universal charity and unspotted purity of Him into Whom he is engrafted, he will add—

(1) οὐ πάντα συμφέρει, all things are not expedient; and I will therefore moderate my use of my liberty by considerations of regard for the salvation of those whom Christ loves, and for whom He died. And βρώμασιν· ὁ δὲ Θεὸς καὶ ταύτην καὶ ταῦτα καταργήσει. Τὸ δὲ σῶμα οὐ τῇ πορνείᾳ, ἀλλὰ τῷ Κυρίῳ, καὶ ὁ Κύριος τῷ σώματι· [14] [i] ὁ δὲ Θεὸς καὶ τὸν Κύριον ἤγειρε, καὶ ἡμᾶς ἐξεγερεῖ διὰ τῆς δυνάμεως αὐτοῦ. [15] [j] Οὐκ οἴδατε ὅτι τὰ σώματα ὑμῶν μέλη Χριστοῦ ἐστιν; Ἄιρας οὖν τὰ μέλη τοῦ Χριστοῦ ποιήσω

i Acts 2. 24. Rom. 6. 5, 8. & 8. 11. 2 Cor. 4. 14.
j Rom. 12. 5. Eph. 1. 22. & 4. 12, 15, 16. & 5. 23, 30. ch. 12. 27.

(2) οὐκ ἐγὼ ἐξουσιασθήσομαι ὑπό τινος, I will not be lorded over by any thing. I have dominion over all, but will not be domineered over by any. I will not be tyrannized over and enslaved by the creature (be it my own body or any other created thing) through my own abuse of my liberty in the use of the creature.

The considerations which ought to regulate our conduct in the exercise of our Christian Liberty, as to the use of God's creatures, cannot be better stated than in the following paragraphs from one of the best Interpreters of St. Paul;

Our Christian Liberty extendeth to all the creatures of God.

This ariseth clearly from the testimonies of Scripture, All things are pure (Rom. xiv. 20); All things are lawful (1 Cor. x. 23); All are yours (1 Cor. iii. 22); and Nothing to be refused (1 Tim. iv. 4).

Our Christian Liberty equally respecteth the using and the not using of any of God's creatures. There is no creature but a Christian man by virtue of his liberty, as he may use it upon just occasion, so he may also upon just cause refuse it. All things are lawful for me, saith St. Paul, but I will not be brought under the power of any thing. (1 Cor. vi. 12.) Where he establisheth this Liberty in both the parts of it. Liberty to use the creatures, or else they had not all been lawful for him; and yet Liberty not to use them, or else he had been under the power of some of them.

Whence it followeth, that all the creatures of God stand in the nature of things indifferent; that is, such as may be indifferently either used or not used, according as the rules of Godly discretion, circumstances duly considered, shall direct.

Our Christian Liberty for the using or not using of the creature may, without prejudice, admit of some restraint in the outward practice of it, "Ab illicitis semper: quandoque et à licitis." I think it is S. Gregory's. A Christian must never do unlawful, nor yet always lawful, things. St. Paul had liberty to eat flesh; and he used that liberty, and ate flesh: yet he knew there might be some cases wherein to abridge himself of the use of that liberty, so far as not to eat flesh while the world standeth. (1 Cor. viii. 13.)

But what are those restraints, and how far may they be admitted without prejudice done to that liberty?

(1) Sobriety may and ought to restrain us in the outward practice of our Christian Liberty,—for our diet, likewise for our apparel.

(2) Charity also may and ought to restrain us in the outward exercise of our Christian Liberty. Charity, I say, both to ourselves and others. First to ourselves, for regular Charity beginneth there. If we are to cut off our right hand, and to pluck out the right eye, and to cast them from us when they offend us (Matt. v. 29, 30), much more then ought we to deny ourselves the use of such outward lawful things as by experience we have found or have otherwise cause to suspect to be, hurtful either to our bodies or souls. So a man may and should refrain from meats which may endanger his bodily health. But how much more then from any thing that may endanger the health of his soul!

But Charity reacheth to our brethren, of whom we are to have a due regard in our use of the creatures; an argument wherein St. Paul often enlargeth, as in Rom. xiv. and 1 Cor. viii. the whole chapters throughout, and in a great part of 1 Cor. x. The resolution every where is, that all things be done to Edification (1 Cor. xiv. 26); that things lawful become inexpedient when they offend, rather than edify (1 Cor. x. 23); that though all things indeed are pure, yet it is evil for that man which useth them with offence (Rom. xiv. 20); that, albeit flesh, and wine, and other things be lawful, yet it is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor to do any thing whereby a man's brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak. (Rom. xiv. 21.)

(3) There is yet one restraint more, which ariseth from the duty we owe to our superiors, and from the bond of civil obedience, which if it had been by all men as freely admitted as there is just cause it should, how happy had it been for the peace of this Church!

The determination of superiors may and ought to refrain us in the outward exercise of our Christian Liberty. We must submit ourselves to every ordinance of man, saith St. Peter (1 Pet. ii. 13. 15, 16); and it is necessary we should do so, for so is the will of God. Neither is it against Christian Liberty if we do so, for we are still as free as before; rather, if we do not so, we abuse our liberty for a cloke of maliciousness, as it followeth there. (1 Pet. ii. 16.) And St. Paul telleth us we must needs be subject, not only for fear, because the magistrate carrieth not the sword in vain, but also for conscience sake, because the powers that are, are ordained of God. (Rom. xiii. 5. 4. 1.) Bp. Sanderson (iii. p. 164).

13. ὁ δὲ Θεὸς—καταργήσει] In the world to come, God καταργήσει, i. e. will reduce to a state of ἀέργεια, ἀργία, or uselessness—or render void the office of—will make as nought, both the one and the other.

The κοιλία, the seat of craving appetite, and of γαστριμαργία (see Luke xv. 16, and Chrys. here), and the βρώματα, or meats which now are used to satisfy it, will then have no more any functions to perform.

Hence our Lord calls the meat of this world, "the meat that perisheth." (John vi. 27.) And of the Saints it is said, they shall "hunger no more, neither thirst any more." (Rev. vii. 16.)

It must be remembered, that our Lord ate in the presence of His Disciples after His Resurrection,—not because He had need of food, but in order to convince them that He had taken again His human body. See on Luke xxiv. 43, and on Acts x. 41.

From the perishable nature of the functions of the κοιλία and of its βρώματα, he shows the debasement of those who suffer themselves to be enslaved by those beggarly elements, and do not consider the dignity of the body, which will, if rightly used, be raised to a glorious immortality, as Christ's Body has been raised.

But it would be a perversion of the Apostle's meaning to use these words as an argument against a bodily Resurrection. See Theodor. Mopsuest., Chrys., and others, in Catenâ, p. 110.

14. ἐξεγερεῖ] will raise up. Lach. reads ἐξεγείρει, from A, D*, but C, D, E, K, L have ἐξεγερεῖ, and so ℵ (Cod. Sinait.). See 2 Cor. iv. 14; and 'suscitabit' is in Tertullian adv. Marcion. v. 7, and De Pudicit. 16; and so Iren. v. 6, and S. Polycarp ad Philipp. 2.

These arguments for temperance and holiness, from the consideration of the future Resurrection of the Flesh, and of the Body being made the Temple of God (v. 19) by Baptism, are stated in the Second Epistle ascribed to S. Clement, c. 9, in similar words, μὴ λεγέτω τὶς ὑμῶν ὅτι αὕτη ἡ σὰρξ οὐ κρίνεται οὐδὲ ἀνίσταται, γνῶτε ἐν τίνι ἐσώθητε, ἐν τίνι ἀνεβλέψατε, εἰ μὴ ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ ταύτῃ ὄντες; δεῖ οὖν ἡμᾶς ὡς ναὸν Θεοῦ φυλάσσειν τὴν σάρκα· ὃν τρόπον γὰρ ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ ἐκλήθητε, καὶ ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ ἐλεύσεσθε.

And Tertullian adv. Marcion. v. 7: "Avertens nos a fornicatione manifestat corporis Resurrectionem. Corpus Domino, ut Templum Deo. Qui Dominum suscitavit et nos suscitabit."

The whole passage of Tertullian is very interesting, as showing the uses to be made of the Doctrines here stated concerning the Body, and the dangerous consequences arising from a denial of them, as seen in the History of the Heresy against which he is writing, that of Marcion.

15. μέλη Χριστοῦ] Ye have all been made members of Christ, who have been knit together with Him by the Regeneration of the Holy Ghost, in the hope of the Resurrection in His likeness. Theodor. Mops.

Have ye not been espoused as a Bride to one Husband, Christ? Theodoret.

Here is the strongest argument for holiness of life. And it shows the practical character of that Teaching, which grounds the duty of holiness on the doctrine of the Incarnation, and on the engrafting of Christians into the Body of Christ by means of the Sacrament of Baptism.

By the operation of the Holy Ghost in the Incarnation of the Son of God, we have become partakers of the Divine Nature. He is our Emmanuel, "God with us," "God manifest in our flesh." Thus we have been brought near to God. Christ has married our Nature, He has espoused Humanity, and reconciled God to Man. Divine Wedlock! profound Mystery! How should we rejoice in this our glorious exaltation in Christ! How should we fear also and tremble at the pure and holy Presence into which we have thus been brought! How earnestly should we watch, how fervently should we pray, that we may be enabled by His grace to purify ourselves, "even as He is pure" (1 John iii.

πόρνης μέλη; Μὴ γένοιτο. 16 k*Ἢ οὐκ οἴδατε ὅτι ὁ κολλώμενος τῇ πόρνῃ ἓν σῶμά ἐστιν; Ἔσονται γάρ, φησιν, οἱ δύο εἰς σάρκα μίαν· 17 l ὁ δὲ κολλώμενος τῷ Κυρίῳ ἓν πνεῦμά ἐστι. 18 Φεύγετε τὴν πορνείαν. Πᾶν ἁμάρτημα, ὃ ἐὰν ποιήσῃ ἄνθρωπος, ἐκτὸς τοῦ σώματός ἐστιν· ὁ δὲ πορνεύων εἰς τὸ ἴδιον σῶμα ἁμαρτάνει. 19 m*Ἢ οὐκ οἴδατε, ὅτι τὸ σῶμα ὑμῶν ναὸς τοῦ ἐν ὑμῖν ἁγίου Πνεύματός ἐστιν, οὗ ἔχετε ἀπὸ Θεοῦ; Καὶ οὐκ ἐστὲ ἑαυτῶν, 20 n ἠγοράσθητε γὰρ τιμῆς.

Δοξάσατε δὴ τὸν Θεὸν ἐν τῷ σώματι ὑμῶν.

VII. 1 Περὶ δὲ ὧν ἐγράψατέ μοι, καλὸν ἀνθρώπῳ γυναικὸς μὴ ἅπτεσθαι· k Gen. 2. 24. Matt. 19. 5. Eph. 5. 31. l John 17. 21 23. Eph. 4. 4. & 5. 30.

m ch. 3. 16 2 Cor. 6. 16 Eph. 2. 21. Heb. 3. 6. 1 Pet. 2. 5.

n ch. 7. 23. Acts 20. 28. Gal. 3. 13. Heb. 9. 12. 1 Pet. 1. 18. 2 Pet. 2. 1. Rev. 5. 9.

3; so that we who have been made "partakers of the Divine Nature" (2 Pet. i. 4) in Him, may also through Him have the fruition of the glorious Godhead hereafter, for evermore!

—Ἅιρας—ποιήσω] Ἅιρας is emphatic, marking the double sin of Fornication, taking away from Christ what is His, purchased by His blood on the Cross, and giving it to a Harlot!

16. εἰς σάρκα μίαν] into one flesh; i. e. joined into: a more forcible expression than in. See on Matt. xix. 5. Hence Tertullian (de Pudicit. 16): "Erunt enim duo in unam carnem."

18. Πᾶν ἁμάρτημα, κ.τ.λ.] Every sin that a man committeth is without the body (cp. 2 Cor. xii. 2, 3, where the same expression occurs), but he who is committing fornication sinneth against his own body.

The distinction here drawn by the Apostle is best illustrated by what he says below, xii. 14—20, where he distinguishes the body in its corporate character as a whole from particular members of it. So here; other sins which men commit may be committed by reason of the pernicious influence of things from without, or by means of particular members of the body; but he who is guilty of fornication, sins with his body, as a whole, and against his body as a whole; for he makes himself one flesh with a harlot.

Hence S. Jerome (ad Amandum, vol. iv. 161) thus expounds the passage: "Other sins are committed externally (forinsecus); but Fornication not only defiles the Conscience, but the Body of him who commits it; for he makes himself one body with a harlot, and sins against his own body in making that which is the temple of Christ to become the body of a harlot." See also S. Augustine, Serm. 161: "Corpus tuum membrum est Christi. Parce in te Christo. Agnosce in te Christum. Hæc corpora nostra, quæ dicit Apostolus membra esse Christi, propter corpus Christi quod ex genere nostri corporis suscepit; hæc ergo corpora nostra dicit Templum esse in nobis Spiritûs Sancti quem habemus à Deo. Quid horum in te contemnis? Christum, Cujus membrum, an Spiritum Sanctum, Cujus Templum es?" And see Serm. 162, where he considers the difference here made by St. Paul between Fornication and all other sins of the flesh; and says that in the former, "totus homo absorbetur ab ipso, et in ipso corpore, ut totus homo dici possit quod caro sit."

See also Origen, Theodor. Mops., Severian, and others, in Catenâ, p. 113, and Primasius; and Bengel says well, "Is qui aliter peccat, quàm per fornicationem, peccat quidem cum corpore et per corpus, sed non in corpus; non terminatur peccatum ejus in corpus; et lædit quidem sed non alienat corpus; magis peccat in κοιλίαν ventrem, quàm in corpus, ut distinguit Apostolus."

19. ναὸς τοῦ—ἁγίου Πν.] a temple of the Holy Ghost, who is in you. On the argument hence derivable for the Divinity of the Holy Spirit, see iii. 16, 17.

20. ἠγοράσθητε γὰρ τιμῆς] for ye were bought with a price,—the blood of Christ, Who redeemed you from the captivity of sin; and therefore ye are not your own, but His. On this use of the word ἀγοράζω in this sense of buying, in order to redeem from captivity by paying a λύτρον, or ransom, see below, vii. 23. 2 Pet. ii. 1, compared with 1 Pet. i. 18, 19; and Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. vi. p. 680, note.

On this argument the following excellent remarks are made by Bp. Sanderson (Serm. vii. vol. i. p. 192): "The consideration of Christ's right over us should bind us to do Him service. We were His before, for He made us; and we owed Him service for that. But now we are His more than before, and by a new title, for He hath bought us and paid for us, and we owe Him more service for that. The Apostle therefore urgeth it as a matter of great equity, you are not your own, but His; therefore you are not to satisfy yourselves by doing your own lusts, but to glorify Him by doing His will. When Christ redeemed us by His blood, His purpose was to redeem us unto God, and not to ourselves, and to redeem us from our vain conversation, and not to it. And He therefore delivered us out of the hands of our enemies, that we might the more freely and securely, and without fear, serve Him in holiness and righteousness all the days of our life." (Luke i. 75.)

Thus our redemption is done effectually. It is also done freely; not for price nor reward, but freely and without money. The meaning is, not that there was no price paid at all, but that there was none paid by us; we laid out nothing toward this great purchase. But otherwise, that there was a price paid, the Scriptures are clear. Ye are bought with a price, saith St. Paul (1 Cor. vi. 20), and he saith it over again (ch. vii. 23). He that paid it calleth it λύτρον, a ransom (Matt. xx. 28); that is as much as to say, a price of redemption; and his Apostle somewhat more, ἀντίλυτρον (1 Tim. ii. 6), which implieth a just and satisfactory price, full as much as the thing can be worth. Yet not paid to Satan, in whose possession we were; for we have found already that he was but an usurper, and his title naught. He had but bought of us; and we by our sale could convey unto him no more right than we had ourselves, which was just none at all. Our Redeemer therefore would not enter into any capitulation with him, or offer to him any terms of composition, but thought good rather in pursuance of His own right to use His power. And so He vindicated us from him by main strength. With His own right hand and with His holy arm He got Himself the victory, and us liberty, without any price or ransom paid him. (Ps. xcviii. 2.) Bp. Sanderson.

Compare Tertullian's remarks on this passage (c. Marcion. v. 7), where he proves the reality of Christ's human body from it against the Marcionites,—"Empti sumus pretio magno. Plane nullo, si Phantasma fuit Christus." An argument not unnecessary in these days, when the doctrine of the Atonement is undermined by Pantheistic theories, and by doubts concerning the historic reality of the Sufferings of Christ.

See also above on Matt. xx. 28, and below on 1 Tim. ii. 6, and on 1 John iv. 10, on the Vicarious Atonement made, and the sufficient Ransom paid, by Christ for all mankind.

— Δοξάσατε δή] Glorify ye therefore now—δή, "age." Cp. Acts xiii. 2.

He sums up his reasonings here, and above, ch. v. 13, with a brief and pointed sentence in the form of a command, which would be easily remembered, and which he designed to leave as a κέντρον ἐν τοῖς ἀκροωμένοις. Here it is "Glorify God in your body;" there it is "Take out the wicked one from among you" (v. 13).

So again vii. 24, ἕκαστος ἐν ᾧ ἐκλήθη μενέτω. Cp. vii. 38; viii. 13; x. 31, 32; xiii. 13; xiv. 40; and the note above on 1 Thess. v. 13, and below, Heb. xiii. 5.

Indeed, it deserves to be remarked, that the various topics of this Epistle are finished off with didactic and dogmatic Apophthegms, which, if collected together, would form a series of Christian Maxims for instruction in faith and practice.

— ὑμῶν] Elz. adds καὶ ἐν τῷ πνεύματι ὑμῶν ἅ τινά ἐστι τοῦ Θεοῦ, words which are not found in the best MSS. and Versions, and many of the Fathers (see for example Tertullian, de Pudic. 16, who recites a great portion of this chapter there, and c. Marcion. v. 7), and which weaken the effect of the argument by drawing off the mind from the main topic which the Apostle is inculcating, viz. the sanctification of the Body.

Ch. VII. 1. Περὶ δὲ ὧν ἐγράψατέ μοι] St. Paul now proceeds to consider the several questions proposed to him in the Letter which he had received from the Corinthians.

It is observable that each of his Replies to these Questions is introduced by the preposition περί. See vii. 1. Concerning Marriage and Divorce.

vii. 25. Concerning Celibacy.
viii. 1. Concerning the eating of Meats that had been offered in sacrifice to Heathen Idols.
xii. 1. Concerning Spiritual Gifts.

Μοι is not in B, C, nor in ℵ; it is in A, D, E, F, G, I, K.

— ἅπτεσθαι] to touch. "Verecunda est Pauli phrasis. Eâdem

2 διὰ δὲ τὰς πορνείας ἕκαστος τὴν ἑαυτοῦ γυναῖκα ἐχέτω, καὶ ἑκάστη τὸν ἴδιον a 1 Pet. 3. 7. ἄνδρα ἐχέτω. 3 a Τῇ γυναικὶ ὁ ἀνὴρ τὴν ὀφειλὴν ἀποδιδότω· ὁμοίως δὲ καὶ ἡ γυνὴ τῷ ἀνδρί. 4 Ἡ γυνὴ τοῦ ἰδίου σώματος οὐκ ἐξουσιάζει, ἀλλ' ὁ ἀνήρ· b Joel 2. 16. Zech. 7. 3. & 12. 12—14. ὁμοίως δὲ καὶ ὁ ἀνὴρ τοῦ ἰδίου σώματος οὐκ ἐξουσιάζει, ἀλλ' ἡ γυνή. 5 b Μὴ ἀποστερεῖτε ἀλλήλους, εἰ μή τι ἂν ἐκ συμφώνου πρὸς καιρὸν, ἵνα σχολάσητε τῇ προσευχῇ, καὶ πάλιν ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ ἦτε, ἵνα μὴ πειράζῃ ὑμᾶς ὁ Σατανᾶς διὰ τὴν c vv. 12, 25. d Matt. 19. 12. ἀκρασίαν ὑμῶν. 6 c Τοῦτο δὲ λέγω κατὰ συγγνώμην, οὐ κατ' ἐπιταγήν· 7 d θέλω δὲ πάντας ἀνθρώπους εἶναι ὡς καὶ ἐμαυτόν· ἀλλ' ἕκαστος ἴδιον ἔχει χάρισμα ἐκ Θεοῦ, ὁ μὲν οὕτως, ὁ δὲ οὕτως.

8 Λέγω δὲ τοῖς ἀγάμοις καὶ ταῖς χήραις, καλὸν αὐτοῖς ἐὰν μείνωσιν ὡς e 1 Tim. 5. 14. f Mal. 2. 14, 16. Matt. 5. 32. & 19. 6, 9. Mark 10. 11, 12. κἀγώ· 9 e εἰ δὲ οὐκ ἐγκρατεύονται, γαμησάτωσαν· κρεῖσσον γὰρ γαμῆσαι ἢ πυροῦσθαι. 10 f Τοῖς δὲ γεγαμηκόσι παραγγέλλω οὐκ ἐγὼ, ἀλλ' ὁ Κύριος, castimoniâ Latini dicunt mulierem tangere." Cp. Gen. xx. 4, LXX, Ἀβιμελὲχ οὐχ ἥψατο αὐτῆς. See above on ἔχειν, v. 1.

---

On St. Paul's doctrine concerning Single Life and Marriage, compare what is said below, 1 Tim. v. 14.

2. διὰ τὰς πορνείας] on account of the fornications; i. e. of the different kinds of illicit intercourse which St. Paul is not willing to specify more particularly, having mentioned them in vi. 9. See also Romans i. 26.

3. ὀφειλήν] So the best MSS. and Editions. And so Origen (in Catenâ), and Tertullian de Pudic. 16. "Vir uxori et uxor viro debitum reddat. Castâ hâc locutione Paulus debitum conjugale exprimere voluit." (Valck.) Elz. has ὀφειλομένην εὔνοιαν, an expository gloss. Compare the readings in v. 5.

4. οὐκ ἐξουσιάζει] hath not dominion, or authority over. See vi. 12.

5. ἵνα σχολάσητε τῇ προσευχῇ] in order that ye may be free for prayer, "ut vacetis orationi" (Vulg.). So the best MSS. and Editions. Elz. has σχολάζητε τῇ νηστείᾳ καὶ τῇ προσευχῇ.

The aorist does not mark any extraordinary seasons of urgent supplication, but ordinarily recurring times of prayer and devotion, such as that of the Lord's Day and Holy Communion. See Winer, § 41, p. 257.

— ἦτε.] So A, B, C, D, E, F, G. Elz. συνέρχησθε.

— ἀκρασίαν] Some Expositors and Lexicographers derive this word from ἀκρατὴς, incontinens, and so Theodor. Mops. (in Catenâ) here: an etymology which suits the meaning very well as to the sense, but not as to the structure of the word, which can hardly have any other derivation than κρᾶσις, κεράννυμι, and answers well enough to the Latin intemperans and Engl. intemperate; properly one who does not dilute his wine with water, as was usual in ancient times (whence the common word now used in Greece for wine, κρασί), but drinks it ἄκρατον; hence the word is applied to whatever is immoderate and excessive in bodily indulgence.

6. κατὰ συγγνώμην] by permission, or indulgence to you. "Secundum indulgentiam, non secundum præceptum," Iren. (iv. 15), who also has, as to the first clause, "secundum ignoscentiam," by way of allowance. A proof of St. Paul's authority. He is empowered to give an ἐπιταγὴ, or precept, and also to bestow a συγγνώμη, or indulgence. Cp. Lee on Inspiration, p. 293, note.

7. θέλω] I will. Compare 1 Tim. v. 14, where he says βούλομαι νεωτέρας γαμεῖν.

— δέ] So A, B, C, D*, F, G. Elz. has γάρ.

8. ὡς κἀγώ] even as I; namely, unmarried. See ix. 5. Whether St. Paul had ever been married, is doubtful; if so, he was now a widower. That he had been married, is asserted by many of the early Fathers. See the testimonies in Origen (in Rom. i.), who leaves the point doubtful, and Methodius (Conviv. p. 45), who speaks of him as a widower. Clem. Alex. Strom. iii. p. 448, ap. Euseb. iii. 30. And, as Tillemont observes (Mémoires i. p. 243), the expressions of St. Paul here addressed to widows, as well as virgins, and coupled with ἐὰν μείνωσιν—if they remain as I do—seem to give some countenance to the opinion.

Some moderns (Selden and others) have argued from the fact of his having been probably a member of the Sanhedrim, that he had been married. See on Acts xxvi. 10, and Howson (Life, &c., of St. Paul, i. p. 87). Tertullian (de Monog. c. 3) and Jerome (Epist. 22) assert that he was never married.

The personal history of the Apostles seems purposely to have been left in obscurity by the Divine Providence of God, Who called them to their sacred office in order that the Church might not contemplate them as men, but as chosen vessels of God. See Introduction to the Acts of the Apostles, p. 6.

9. εἰ δὲ οὐκ ἐγκρατεύονται] but if they have not continency, A. V. R.; not, "if they cannot contain."

10. οὐκ ἐγὼ, ἀλλ' ὁ Κύριος] Not I, but the Lord. That case had been already determined by Christ Himself, as is recorded in Mark x. 12, where He says, "If a woman put away her husband, and marry another, she committeth adultery."

He says, "Not I, but the Lord," because he was about to quote the Law given expressly by Christ Himself, that a man should not put away his wife save for fornication. (Chrysostom.)

And since this case had been so determined by the Lord, it is superfluous (he implies) for him to say any thing upon it.

There is no opposition in this and the following words between I and the Lord, as to degrees of authority; nor do they give any sanction to the notion that St. Paul intimates hereby that the precepts he himself, the inspired Apostle of God (see above, ii. 13), delivers at the dictation of the Holy Ghost (see v. 40), rest on lower authority, or are less binding on the Church than what the Lord Himself had delivered on earth.

Indeed, in order to guard us against this erroneous notion, and that we may not imagine that the precepts which he here delivers are mere human commands, he closes his whole discourse with saying (v. 40), "I wot (δοκῶ) that I also have the Spirit of God." Chrysostom.

But in a spirit of reverence to what Christ had spoken, he refers his hearers to it, and will not weaken it by repeating it.

Thus, also, the Apostle—inspired by the Holy Ghost—is a divinely accredited witness to the sayings of Christ, and sets the seal of the Spirit upon them.

The following remarks on this subject are made in the valuable work of Dr. W. Lee on Inspiration, Lect. vi. pp. 291—298,—

In 1 Cor. vii. 10, St. Paul writes, "Unto the married I command, yet not I, but the Lord," words in which he places his own injunction on a perfect equality with that "of the Lord," and which, therefore, supply another proof of his inspired authority.

So far, it is plain, no objection arises. But the Apostle, continuing his subject, shortly afterwards adds, "To the rest speak I, not the Lord;" observing further, with reference to a third class, "I have no commandment of the Lord, yet I give my judgment;" by which language he is supposed to intimate that in certain parts of Scripture the Author may write according to his own uninspired human judgment, although guided in other portions of his work by the Holy Ghost.

Such an inference, however, is altogether at variance with St. Paul's design, whose words in this place can only be distorted into the form of an argument against his Inspiration, by overlooking his object and his meaning. The first of the three expressions which have been quoted, "I command, yet not I, but the Lord," refers to the reinstitution by Christ (as St. Mark has recorded the circumstance) of the original Law of Marriage, and relates to an ordinance revealed from the very first, and obligatory on every occasion, and in every age; while by the two latter passages St. Paul intends to convey that Christ had not directly provided for those particular cases, in which His Apostle now pronounces his inspired and authoritative opinion.

In the former of these passages, the very nature of the question, respecting which the Apostle issues his directions, namely, "If any brother hath a wife that believeth not"—an exceptional case which arose from the state of society then existing (at Corinth)—explains why our Lord had not Himself promulgated an express Law respecting it. Here, as in other matters of discipline, the Holy Ghost was to guide the Apostles into "all the truth;" and the decisions at which they arrived, are therefore γυναῖκα ἀπὸ ἀνδρὸς μὴ χωρισθῆναι· 11 ἐὰν δὲ καὶ χωρισθῇ, μενέτω ἄγαμος, ἢ τῷ ἀνδρὶ καταλλαγήτω· καὶ ἄνδρα γυναῖκα μὴ ἀφιέναι.

12 Τοῖς δὲ λοιποῖς λέγω ἐγώ, οὐχ ὁ Κύριος, εἴ τις ἀδελφὸς γυναῖκα ἔχει ἄπιστον, καὶ αὕτη συνευδοκεῖ οἰκεῖν μετ' αὐτοῦ, μὴ ἀφιέτω αὐτήν· 13 καὶ γυνὴ ἥτις ἔχει ἄνδρα ἄπιστον, καὶ οὗτος συνευδοκεῖ οἰκεῖν μετ' αὐτῆς, μὴ ἀφιέτω τὸν ἄνδρα· 14 g ἡγίασται γὰρ ὁ ἀνὴρ ὁ ἄπιστος ἐν τῇ γυναικί, καὶ ἡγίασται ἡ γυνὴ g Mal. 2. 15.
ἡ ἄπιστος ἐν τῷ ἀδελφῷ· ἐπεὶ ἄρα τὰ τέκνα ὑμῶν ἀκάθαρτά ἐστι· νῦν δὲ ἅγιά ἐστιν. 15 Εἰ δὲ ὁ ἄπιστος χωρίζεται, χωριζέσθω· οὐ δεδούλωται ὁ ἀδελφὸς ἢ ἡ ἀδελφὴ ἐν τοῖς τοιούτοις. Ἐν δὲ εἰρήνῃ κέκληκεν ὑμᾶς ὁ Θεός· 16 h τί γὰρ h 1 Pet. 3. 1.
οἶδας, γύναι, εἰ τὸν ἄνδρα σώσεις, ἢ τί οἶδας, ἄνερ, εἰ τὴν γυναῖκα σώσεις, 17 εἰ equally binding with those of Christ Himself. This, indeed, is clear from St. Paul's own words, when summing up the question, "So ordain I in all churches." And, accordingly, he is so far from representing his "judgment," delivered in the various aspects of the temporary exigency which he discusses in this chapter, as a mere human and fallible opinion, that he closes his remarks by the assertion, "I think also that I have the Spirit of God." Cp. Chrysostom's remarks below on v. 12.

11. ἄνδρα γυναῖκα μὴ ἀφιέναι] A husband may not put away his wife. Another command given by the Lord when on earth. See on Matt. xix. 9. Luke xvi. 18.

St. Paul states here the general will and desire of Christ that a man should not put away his wife for any reason whatever; and contents himself with doing so—as two of the Evangelists, St. Mark (x. 11) and St. Luke (xvi. 18) do—without reciting the parenthetic qualification which is recorded by St. Matthew (xix. 9), and which declares that whosoever putteth away his wife, save for fornication, and marrieth another, committeth adultery; or, as it is in the same Gospel (v. 32), whosoever putteth away his wife, save for fornication, causeth her to commit adultery. Cp. Origen here, in Catenâ, p. 128.

The reasons which actuated the two Evangelists, St. Mark and St. Luke, in their recital of our Lord's command (and which have been suggested above on Matt. v. 32), probably influenced St. Paul. He refers to what the Lord had said. And the "Sermon on the Mount," in which our Lord had spoken on the subject, and in which the qualification is given, would supply what they needed. And it might truly be said, that the Lord—who has declared that a man who puts away his wife, save for fornication, is guilty of adultery, and makes her to commit adultery; and who says, "What God hath joined together let not man put asunder" (Matt. xix. 6)— gives a solemn charge to a husband not to put away his wife.

12. Τοῖς δὲ λοιποῖς] But to the rest,—of different religions, one party being a Christian, the other being a heathen,—for whom the Lord had not legislated. On οἱ λοιποὶ see 1 Thess. iv. 13.

— λ. ἐγὼ, οὐχ ὁ Κύριος] I an Apostle of Christ, and inspired by the Holy Ghost, supply the answer in this case, which was not determined by the Lord when on earth.

When the Apostle was about to recite the Law enacted by Christ, that a man should not put away his wife save for fornication, then he says not I. The things which he had declared before, although they had not been commanded expressly by Christ, yet they are approved by Christ also; but this command, which he recites, had been expressly promulgated by Christ, so that the words I and not I are thus to be distinguished. For, in order that you may not imagine that the Apostle's own commands are human injunctions, he adds, "I am persuaded that I also have the Spirit of God." Chrysostom.

When he says, "I, and not the Lord," he means that he has not found this Law in the Gospel, but he now lays down the Law; and the Laws which are laid down by the Apostle are Laws of Christ. Theodoret.

— αὕτη] Elz. αὐτὴ, but see v. 13.

— μὴ ἀφιέτω αὐτήν] let him not divorce her. Ἀφιέναι, in Athenian Law, was expressed by ἀποπέμπειν or ἐκβάλλειν, and the woman who deserted her husband was said ἀπολείπειν. Thom. Mag. v. ἀπολείπειν.

The Christian Scriptures have adopted the words ἀπολύειν, and ἀφιέναι, and χωρίζεσθαι for the more classical terms, which did not sufficiently mark the severance of the Marriage bond.

S. Chrysostom says here, "He that putteth away his wife for fornication is not condemned, because he that is one body with her who is a harlot is polluted; and the marriage bond is broken by fornication, but not by unbelief. Therefore it is lawful to put away a wife for the former sin, but not for the latter."

And again, "If he that is joined with a harlot is one body, so he who is joined with an idolatress is one body. True, he is one body with her, but is not polluted by her. The holiness of the faithful husband prevails over the unholiness of the unbelieving wife. They are joined together in that respect in which she is not unholy; and though she be an unbeliever, yet her husband's right in her, and her duty to him, have not been cancelled by her unbelief, and the children of such a wedlock are holy. But this is not so in the case of an adulteress: he who is one flesh with her is joined with her in that respect in which she is unholy; her unholiness prevails over his holiness, and he is polluted by her; the children of such a union are not a holy seed." See also Origen here, in Catenâ, p. 128, and Photius in p. 136, and Hammond on Divorce, i. p. 606, Ep. Cosin on Divorce, Works, iv. p. 496, and the notes above on Matt. v. 32; xix. 9, and the full discussion on this subject in Gerhard, Loci Theologici, vol. vii. pp. 692—743.

13. οὗτος] So A, B, C, D*, F, G. Elz. αὐτός.

— τὸν ἄνδρα] her husband. So the best MSS. And there is a force in the words, asserting that he is still her husband, though she may have been converted and baptized, and he yet remain an unbeliever; and therefore on this account, and from the preponderance of MSS. authority, this reading is preferable to the weaker one of Elz. αὐτόν.

14. ἐν τῇ γυναικί] in his wife: by his union with her as one flesh; vi. 16. Observe ἐν.

— ἀδελφῷ] brother; that is, a Christian. So A, B, C, D, E, F, G. And this word has a special force here; the wife, who is a heathen, is sanctified in and by her union with the Christian. See above, v. 12, εἴ τις ἀδελφὸς γυναῖκα ἔχει ἄπιστον. Elz. has ἀνδρί, which does not bring out this point so clearly.

— νῦν δὲ ἅγιά ἐστι] But now are they holy. This text was perverted by the Pelagians into an argument against the doctrine of Original Sin. See S. Augustine, de Peccatorum Meritis ii. 25; iii. 12.

15. χωρίζεται] depart, namely, is guilty of desertion.

— οὐ δεδούλωται ὁ ἀδελφός] the Christian hath not been made a slave by his Christianity in these respects. Observe the article. St. Paul is careful to maintain the true dignity, and genuine liberty, and spiritual royalty of the Christian character.

Although a Christian may not put away his wife, being an unbeliever, yet if the wife desert her husband (χωρίζεται) he may contract a second marriage.

Hence even Romish Divines declare that in this case Marriage is not indissoluble. Thus A Lapide says here, "Nota, Apostolum permittere hoc casu non tantùm thori divortium sed etiam matrimonii; ita ut possit conjux fidelis aliud matrimonium inire. Alioqui enim servituti subjectus esset frater, aut soror, id est, Christianus aut Christiana. Magna enim servitus est teneri matrimonio et obstrictum esse infideli ut alteri nubere non possis, sed, etiamsi discedat infidelis, continere debeas et vivere cœlebs." And in support of this opinion he refers to S. Augustine, de Adulterinis Conjugiis, c. 13 and c. 19, S. Thomas and Ambrosiast., who says, "Non debetur ei reverentia conjugii, qui horret Auctorem conjugii, sed potest alteri se jungere." And so the Canon Law, Cap. "Quanto," et "Gaudemus" in Tit. "De Divortiis." Decretal. Greg. IX. lib. iv. tit. xix. capp. 7 and 8, and in the Decreti Secunda Pars, causa 28, quæst. 2, "Si Infidelis," vol. i. p. 946, and vol. ii. p. 695, ed. Lips. 1829, where will be found some valuable materials on a question necessary to be considered in the Colonial Dioceses of Great Britain, viz. "What rule is to be followed with regard to Heathen Polygamists after their conversion?" see Colonial Church Chronicle, June, 1865.

16, 17. τί γὰρ οἶδας] After all that has been written on these difficult verses, which have been construed by some into a reason and plea for conjugal separation in the case supposed (see Meyer, Conybeare, and Alford), the true meaning seems to be that which had been suggested by some ancient Interpreters, as Chrys., Theodoret, and Photius (in Cat.), as follows:—

But God has called us in peace. This is our calling, in which μὴ ἑκάστῳ ὡς ἐμέρισεν ὁ Κύριος, ἕκαστον ὡς κέκληκεν ὁ Θεὸς, οὕτω περιπατείτω ; καὶ οὕτως ἐν ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις πάσαις διατάσσομαι.

18 Περιτετμημένος τις ἐκλήθη ; μὴ ἐπισπάσθω· ἐν ἀκροβυστίᾳ κέκληταί τις ; μὴ περιτεμνέσθω. 19 i Ἡ περιτομὴ οὐδέν ἐστι, καὶ ἡ ἀκροβυστία οὐδέν ἐστιν, ἀλλὰ τήρησις ἐντολῶν Θεοῦ. 20 Ἕκαστος ἐν τῇ κλήσει ᾗ ἐκλήθη, ἐν ταύτῃ μενέτω. 21 Δοῦλος ἐκλήθης ; μή σοι μελέτω· ἀλλ' εἰ καὶ δύνασαι ἐλεύθερος γενέσθαι, μᾶλλον χρῆσαι· 22 k ὁ γὰρ ἐν Κυρίῳ κληθεὶς δοῦλος ἀπελεύθερος Κυρίου ἐστίν· ὁμοίως ὁ ἐλεύθερος κληθεὶς δοῦλός ἐστι Χριστοῦ. 23 l Τιμῆς ἠγοράσθητε· μὴ γίνεσθε δοῦλοι ἀνθρώπων. 24 Ἕκαστος ἐν ᾧ ἐκλήθη, ἀδελφοὶ, ἐν τούτῳ μενέτω παρὰ Θεῷ.

25 m Περὶ δὲ τῶν παρθένων, ἐπιταγὴν Κυρίου οὐκ ἔχω, γνώμην δὲ δίδωμι ὡς ἠλεημένος ὑπὸ Κυρίου πιστὸς εἶναι. 26 Νομίζω οὖν τοῦτο καλὸν ὑπάρχειν διὰ τὴν ἐνεστῶσαν ἀνάγκην, ὅτι καλὸν ἀνθρώπῳ τὸ οὕτως εἶναι. 27 Δέδεσαι γυναικί ; μὴ ζήτει λύσιν· λέλυσαι ἀπὸ γυναικός ; μὴ ζήτει γυναῖκα. 28 Ἐὰν δὲ καὶ γήμῃς, οὐχ ἥμαρτες· καὶ ἐὰν γήμῃ ἡ παρθένος, οὐχ ἥμαρτε· θλῖψιν δὲ τῇ σαρκὶ ἕξουσιν οἱ τοιοῦτοι· ἐγὼ δὲ ὑμῶν φείδομαι.

i Gal. 5. 6. & 6. 15. Col. 3. 11.

k John 8. 36. Rom. 6. 18, 22. ch 9. 21. Gal. 5. 13. Eph. 6. 6. 1 Pet. 2. 16.

l ch. 6. 20. Heb. 9. 12. 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19.

m 1 Tim. 1. 12.

---

we ought to abide, a peaceable calling; and therefore, although a Christian partner is not bound in slavery to a heathen, and if that heathen partner departs, let it be so, yet the Christian, whose calling is peace with all, ought not to be hasty to break off any connexion formed by wedlock, or otherwise. For what knowest thou, O wife, whether thou wilt save thy unbelieving husband (i. e. by converting him to the true faith. Cp. σώσεις, 1 Tim. iv. 16)? or, what knowest thou, O Christian husband, whether thou wilt save thy heathen wife? What knowest thou as to any of these things except (εἰ μὴ) only this one thing which thou dost know, that thy calling is peace, and that accordingly, as the Lord allotted to every one his condition in life, and in that state in which God hath called every man, in that let him walk.

Therefore, whatever the heathen partner may do, the Christian husband or wife ought not to depart from his or her partner, though a heathen. (Primasius.)

Other things are uncertain; you cannot tell whether you may save your partner or no. But it is a clear duty for every one to abide in that state of life to which the God of peace has called him. And so I command in all the Churches.

Therefore, here is my answer: Choose what is a clear and certain duty, and leave the rest to God, Who will bless your charitable efforts, if you do your duty to Him. If you do what you know to be your duty, He will order what is best as to that which you cannot know, viz. the result of your efforts for the salvation of the partner who has been assigned to your lot by the providence of God.

— καὶ οὕτως—διατάσσομαι] and thus I order in all the Churches. Cp. 2 Cor. xi. 28. There is no evidence of any supremacy in St. Peter; see above on Matt. xvi. 18.

18. Περιτετμημένος—μὴ ἐπισπάσθω] Was any man called (ἐκλήθη, aorist) being circumcised, let him not become uncircumcised. "Non adducat præputium." (Jerome ad Isa. liii.) "Ne attrahat ferro præputium." See Theophyl., Phot., and the medical writers, e. g. Celsus, vii. 25. And this was done by apostate Jews in the time of the Maccabees in the persecutions under Antiochus Epiphanes. 1 Macc. i. 15. Joseph. Antiqq. xii. 6. Epiphan. de Ponder., who relates that Jews who went over to Samaritanism, or vice versâ, underwent a second circumcision. (See A Lapide and Wetstein here.)

— ἐν ἀκροβυστίᾳ] "ἀκρόβυστος proprie dicitur, cui summitas tecta est, seu obturata. Nam βύει obturare significat. In Exod. vi. 12, ubi vox ἀπερίτμητος legitur, in sua versione posuit vocem ἀκρόβυστος Theodotion, qui nativitate Gentilis se tradiderat circumcidendum, Moysis sacra amplexus." (Valck.)

19. ἀλλὰ τήρησις] but the keeping of God's commandments is every thing. A. V. R.

21. Δοῦλος ἐκλήθης;] Wast thou called (to Christ) being a slave? Probably in answer to a question from the Corinthians, "Whether on the ground of the promises of universal liberty under the Gospel (Luke iv. 18. Isa. lxi. 1), a Greek slave did not become ipso facto free by embracing Christianity?"

— ἀλλ' εἰ καὶ δύνασαι] however, if also thou art able to become free, rather use it, i. e. avail thyself of the means of freedom. Use them; do not abuse them. Use them; for freedom is man's state by nature and grace (v. 22). "Ye were called to freedom" (Gal. v. 13). Therefore thou art not deserting thy calling by becoming free.

Some ancient writers (Chrys., Theodoret), but not all (see Jerome and Severian.), suppose μᾶλλον χρῆσαι to mean, "use slavery rather;" 'remain a slave:' but the former (as A Lapide observes) seems to be the best sense.

It is well said by S. Aug. (ad Galat. ii. 11), that "a man is to abide in his calling, if it be not hurtful to faith or morals" (cp. Bp. Sanderson as there cited): but slavery among the heathen involved many requirements contrary to both.

22. ἀπελεύθερος Κυρίου] a Freeman of the Lord, the King of Kings—Libertus Domini; a nobler title than Libertus Cæsaris, as Aug. says, "Libera semper est servitus apud Deum, cui non necessitas servit, sed Caritas." "Aurea gnome" (A Lapide).

— ὁ ἐλεύθερος κ. δοῦλός ἐ. Χριστοῦ] the freeman, being called, is a slave of Christ. He gives dignity to the slave by calling him the Lord's freedman; and inspires the Master with charity by reminding him that he himself is the slave of Christ. Thus he unites Masters and Slaves as brethren in Christ. The true principle of Slave-Emancipation. See below, Introduction to the Epistle to Philemon.

23. Τιμῆς ἠγοράσθητε] Ye were bought with a price. Whether Masters or Slaves, ye were all purchased by one and the same price, paid for you all—the blood of Christ, Who is your heavenly Master—you are His property. Observe the aorist. The words are reiterated, on account of their solemn importance, from above, vi. 20, where see note.

— μὴ γίνεσθε δ. ἀ.] Do not become slaves of men (observe γίνεσθε), for ye are servants of Christ, Who has made you His own by the price of His blood. See above, Gal. v. 1.

24. Ἕκαστος ἐν ᾧ ἐκλήθη—ἐν τούτῳ μενέτω] In that state wherein each was called, therein let him abide with God. See Bp. Sanderson's Sermon on this Text, and on the doctrinal and practical instruction to be derived from it, vol. iii. p. 91.

25. ἐπιταγὴν Κυρίου οὐκ ἔχω] precept of the Lord I have none on this subject. The Lord gave no express injunction on this matter when He was on earth, nor has He imparted to me any special revelation on this subject; but I declare my judgment as one who has obtained mercy from Christ to be faithful in preaching His Word, and worthy of credit: "misericordiam consecutus a Domino ut fidelis sim" (Iren. iv. 15), i. e. my faithfulness is due to His grace (see 2 Cor. iv. 1), and therefore my judgment is to be received as coming from Christ Himself, Who has given me the Holy Spirit. (v. 40.)

28. γήμῃς] B has γαμήσῃς, which has been received by some Editors. A has γαμήσῃ.

— ἐγὼ ὑμῶν φείδομαι] I spare you by not laying on you the burden of celibacy by way of obligation, even in these times, when, by reason of the perils of persecution to which Christians are and will be exposed, it is unseasonable for them to contract Marriage.

If St. Paul did not venture to impose that burden on any one in those days, it cannot be consistent with the spirit of the Gospel, which St. Paul preached, to impose a vow of celibacy on any order of men or women at this time. And it is no little presumption for uninspired men to venture to do what was not then done by the Apostle of Christ. Let therefore the Church of Rome take warning from these words. See on 1 Tim. iv. 3.

29 n Τοῦτο δέ φημι, ἀδελφοί, ὁ καιρὸς συνεσταλμένος ἐστὶν τὸ λοιπὸν ἵνα καὶ οἱ ἔχοντες γυναῖκας ὡς μὴ ἔχοντες ὦσι, 30 καὶ οἱ κλαίοντες, ὡς μὴ κλαίοντες, καὶ οἱ χαίροντες, ὡς μὴ χαίροντες, καὶ οἱ ἀγοράζοντες, ὡς μὴ κατέχοντες, 31 ο καὶ οἱ χρώμενοι τῷ κόσμῳ τούτῳ, ὡς μὴ καταχρώμενοι· παράγει γὰρ τὸ σχῆμα τοῦ κόσμου τούτου.

n Rom. 13. 11. 1 Pet. 4. 7. 2 Esd. 16. 40—44.

o Ps. 39. 6. James 1. 10. & 4. 14. 1 Pet. 1. 24. 1 John 2. 17.

32 p Θέλω δὲ ὑμᾶς ἀμερίμνους εἶναι. Ὁ ἄγαμος μεριμνᾷ τὰ τοῦ Κυρίου, πῶς ἀρέσει τῷ Κυρίῳ· 33 ὁ δὲ γαμήσας μεριμνᾷ τὰ τοῦ κόσμου, πῶς ἀρέσει τῇ γυναικί. 34 q Μεμέρισται καὶ ἡ γυνὴ καὶ ἡ παρθένος· ἡ ἄγαμος μεριμνᾷ τὰ p 1 Tim. 5. 5.

q Luke 10. 40.

---

29. ὁ καιρός] the season, the opportunity. See 2 Cor. vi. 2, νῦν καιρὸς εὐπρόσδεκτος. See on Eph. v. 16, ἐξαγοραζόμενοι τὸν καιρὸν, retrieving the opportunity. Rev. i. 3, ὁ καιρὸς ἐγγύς.

— συνεσταλμένος] Properly, wrapped up, or folded together (see Acts v. 6), or furled and reefed as a sail. Cp. Valck. here.

Hence the early Latin Fathers translate this Christian maxim thus: "Tempus in collecto est." See Tertullian, c. Marcion. v. 7, de Exhort. Castitat. c. 4, de Pudicit. c. 16.

St. Paul, writing now from Ephesus, where he was in almost daily peril for his life ("I die daily," 1 Cor. xv. 31), might well speak of the present necessity (ἀνάγκης, angustia), and of the contraction of the season for working the work of God, and bringing forth fruit; and he speaks in the language of prophecy concerning coming troubles and calamities; but it would be illogical and irreverent to argue from these words that he supposed that the Last Day was near at hand. Cp. 2 Thess. ii. 1—3.

— ὁ καιρὸς συν. ἐστὶν τὸ λοιπὸν ἵνα] the season, in fine, is made short, in order that—. Elz. has τὸ λοιπόν ἐστιν, but A, B have ἐστὶ τὸ λοιπὸν, and so ℵ (Cod. Sinait.), which is adopted by Scholz, Lachm., Tisch., Alf.

Lachmann points the sentence thus: "Tempus breve est: reliquum est, ut—."

But the reading and punctuation adopted in the text seems preferable. The words ἵνα καὶ οἱ ἔχοντες mark the design of God in shortening the time; and the moral result of such an abbreviation (as ὅπως ἂν in Rom. iii. 4), and the use to be made of it, namely, that men's hearts may be weaned from earthly things, and that they may seek those things which are above. See 2 Cor. iv. 7, and cp. Winer, § 53, p. 408.

And so the earliest Fathers understand it, e. g. Tertullian, de Pudicit. 16, "Cæterum tempus in collecto constituit, ut qui habent uxores sic sint tanquam non habentes," and de Exhort. Castit. 4, "Tempus in collectum esse adjicit, quò oporteat etiam habentes matrimonia pro non habentibus agere;" and so the Syriac and Æthiopic Versions.

Tertullian, in another place, says (Ad uxorem, i. 5), "Tempus in collecto est: Superest ut qui matrimonia habent tanquam non habentes agant." And so Vulg., "Tempus breve est. Reliquum est, ut qui." And so S. Leo, quoted by A Lapide.

In favour of that reading it may be said—

(1) That ὁ καιρὸς συνεσταλμένος stands emphatically as a Christian maxim;

(2) That St. Paul usually places λοιπὸν and τὸ λοιπὸν at the beginning of a paragraph, Eph. vi. 10. Phil. iii. 1; iv. 8. 2 Thess. iii. 1. But we have τὸ λοιπὸν placed as the second word, Matt. xxvi. 45. Mark xiv. 41.

But, on the whole, the other interpretation, as stated above, appears to be the best.

— ἵνα καὶ οἱ ἔχοντες] in order that even they who are married should be as unmarried, and much more, that the unmarried should so abide.

31. χρώμενοι τῷ κόσμῳ τούτῳ] A, B, D*, F, G have τὸν κόσμον, and D*, F, G add τοῦτον, which is not in A, B, nor in ℵ (Cod. Sinait.); and the reading χρώμενοι τὸν κόσμον has been received by Lachm., Tisch., Alf. If the accusative were only rare after χρᾶσθαι, this reading might be preferable; but it seems to be without an example in the LXX, or New Testament. We may not, therefore, venture to adopt it. It is found in C, H, in Acts xxvii. 17, where see Bornemann, p. 22, and in some passages of a later Græcism, cited by Schaefer (ad Gregor. Corinth. p. 691).

It is probable that the accusative ΚΟΣΜΟΝ originated in the common confusion of Ο and Ω (see 1 Cor. xv. 49), and of the Ν and Ι ascript, ΚΟΣΜΩΙ.

— μὴ καταχρώμενοι] not too much using; not cleaving to the use, and doting upon it, not using it to the full, and becoming the slaves of it. Compare the similar expression, 1 Cor. ix. 12, οὐκ ἐχρησάμεθα τῇ ἐξουσίᾳ ταύτῃ (v. 15) οὐδενὶ κέχρημαι τούτων (v. 18) εἰς τὸ μὴ καταχρήσασθαι τῇ ἐξουσίᾳ.

As to the preposition κατὰ in this sense, cp. καταφιλέω, de-osculor, valdè osculor, Matt. xxvi. 49, κατακλαίω, valdè ploro, καταμανθάνω, studiosè perdisco, κατεσθίω de-voro. It denotes a downward affection of the mind, which shows itself by a riveted devotion to its object, and may be illustrated by the attitude and temper of the men of Gideon who fell down on their knees to gulp down the water, in contradistinction to the three hundred who only lapped it, and passed on (Judges vii. 6). This was the trial and test prescribed by God (vii. 4). They who lapped were chosen; the others were rejected. The one were χρώμενοι, the other καταχρώμενοι. And the Apostle advises here, to lap the water of life's flowing stream, but not to kneel down and drink it.

It is well said by an ancient Father of the Western Church, "In æternis bonis inseparabiliter est inhærendum, temporalibus verò transeunter utendum; ut peregrinantibus nobis, et ad patriam redire properantibus, quicquid de prosperitatibus mundi hujus occurrerit, viaticum sit itineris non illecebra mansionis. Ideò Apostolus prædicat, dicens Tempus breve est: Reliquum est, &c. Præterit enim figura hujus mundi. Sed quod de specie blanditur non facile declinatur, nisi in illâ visibilium pulchritudine Creator potiùs quàm creatura diligatur. . . . Beati enim mens quæ peregrinationis suæ tempora castâ sobrietate transcurrit, et in iis per quæ necesse est eam ambulare non remanet, ut hospita magis quàm domina terrenorum, nec affectibus sit innexa humanis, nec promissionibus desit divinis." S. Leo (quoted by A Lapide), and S. Bernard (ibid.), "Noli amare præsentia, quæ possessa onerant, amata inquinant, amissa cruciant."

— παράγει τὸ σχῆμα] the fashion, or form, of this world passeth away, as a pageant in a procession, or on a stage. "Præterit figura hujus mundi," Iren. iv. 3, and v. 35, "præterit habitus hujus mundi," and 36, quoting Ps. cii. 26. Isa. lxvi. 22, and Matt. xxiv. 35, and Rev. xxi. 5, 6.

34. Μεμέρισται καί] So A, B, D, F, G, I, K, and Theodoret. Also, A, B have καὶ before μεμέρισται, and so ℵ, and have ἡ ἄγαμος after γυνὴ and after παρθένος. Elz. has no καὶ before μεμέρισται, or after it.

Lachmann has καὶ μεμέρισται, and joins it with the preceding sentence, and applies it to the man, according to the Latin Vulgate, "et divisus est," he is divided, and so Jerome (adv. Jovinian. lib. i.) and the Æthiopic Version.

The true meaning of this controverted passage appears to be this: Both the wife hath been assigned to her appointed lot or special portion (μερίδα) in life, and the unmarried woman to hers, and God has allotted to each their appointed duties. Hence μεμέρισται in the perfect tense.

St. Paul had been speaking of the different callings which God has allotted or apportioned (ἐμέρισεν, vii. 17; see also 2 Cor. x. 13) to various persons in life. And he had said, "Let every one abide in the state of life to which God has called him" (v. 24). And he here describes the characteristics of the several μερίδες or portions (compare Luke x. 42, τὴν ἀγαθὴν μερίδα) which the married and unmarried women have assigned to them respectively. He does not depreciate the one in comparison with the other; but states the fact that they have special lots or portions in life.

Μεμέρισται may mean either she has been assigned as a lot, or a lot has been assigned to her, and the sense is much the same in both cases. As to the latter construction, compare πτωχοὶ εὐαγγελίζονται, the Poor have the Gospel preached to them, Matt. xi. 5. Luke vii. 22, and δογματίζεσθε, Col. ii. 20, and see Winer, § 39, p. 233, Matth. Gr. Gr. § 421.

The interpretation in the English Version has good authority in its favour, the Syriac and Arabic Versions, and Tertullian de Virg. Vel. c. 4, "Divisa est et mulier et virgo" (the translation in Cod. Augiensis and Boerner.), which Tertullian expounds by "constituere differentiam inter virginem et mulierem." Probably this exposition proceeded from the literal rendering of the original; and may be an inference from St. Paul's words; but it does not seem to be the point which he desires here to bring prominently forward; and the original words, μεμέρισται καὶ ἡ γυνὴ καὶ ἡ παρθένος, can hardly signify "there is a difference τοῦ Κυρίου, ἵνα ᾖ ἁγία καὶ σώματι καὶ πνεύματι· ἡ δὲ γαμήσασα μεριμνᾷ τὰ τοῦ κόσμου, πῶς ἀρέσει τῷ ἀνδρί. 35 Τοῦτο δὲ πρὸς τὸ ὑμῶν αὐτῶν συμφέρον λέγω· οὐχ ἵνα βρόχον ὑμῖν ἐπιβάλω, ἀλλὰ πρὸς τὸ εὔσχημον καὶ εὐπάρεδρον τῷ Κυρίῳ ἀπερισπάστως.

36 Εἰ δέ τις ἀσχημονεῖν ἐπὶ τὴν παρθένον αὐτοῦ νομίζει, ἐὰν ᾖ ὑπέρακμος, καὶ οὕτως ὀφείλει γίνεσθαι, ὃ θέλει ποιείτω, οὐχ ἁμαρτάνει, γαμείτωσαν. 37 Ὃς δὲ ἕστηκεν ἑδραῖος ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ, μὴ ἔχων ἀνάγκην, ἐξουσίαν δὲ ἔχει περὶ τοῦ ἰδίου θελήματος, καὶ τοῦτο κέκρικεν ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ αὐτοῦ τοῦ τηρεῖν τὴν ἑαυτοῦ παρθένον, καλῶς ποιεῖ.

r Ecclus. 7. 25. Heb. 13. 4.

38 r Ὥστε καὶ ὁ ἐκγαμίζων καλῶς ποιεῖ· καὶ ὁ μὴ ἐκγαμίζων κρεῖσσον ποιεῖ.

s Rom. 7. 1, 2.

39 s Γυνὴ δέδεται ἐφ' ὅσον χρόνον ζῇ ὁ ἀνὴρ αὐτῆς· ἐὰν δὲ κοιμηθῇ ὁ ἀνὴρ αὐτῆς, ἐλευθέρα ἐστὶν ᾧ θέλει γαμηθῆναι, μόνον ἐν Κυρίῳ. 40 t Μακαριωτέρα δέ ἐστιν ἐὰν οὕτω μείνῃ, κατὰ τὴν ἐμὴν γνώμην· δοκῶ δὲ κἀγὼ Πνεῦμα Θεοῦ ἔχειν.

t 1 Thess. 4. 8.

a Acts 15. 20, 29. Rom. 14. 3, 10, 14, 22.

VIII. 1 a Περὶ δὲ τῶν εἰδωλοθύτων, οἴδαμεν ὅτι πάντες γνῶσιν ἔχομεν· ἡ between the wife and the virgin;" but their sense is, the married woman has her part assigned to her, and the virgin has hers.

---

On the sense of the words μερίζω and μεμέρισται, as used by St. Paul, see above, note on i. 13, μεμέρισται ὁ Χριστός.

35. εὐπάρεδρον τῷ Κυρίῳ ἀπερισπάστως] assiduously attending—as by sitting near—to the Lord, without distraction. Add to these, the words μεμέρισται, and μεριμνᾷ here, and it might almost be supposed that St. Paul had St. Luke's and our Lord's language concerning Mary of Bethany in his mind when he wrote this, Luke x. 39, ἡ Μαρία παρακαθίσασα παρὰ τοὺς πόδας τοῦ Κυρίου· ἡ Μάρθα περιεσπᾶτο . . . Μάρθα Μάρθα, μεριμνᾷς κ.τ.λ. Μαρία δὲ τὴν ἀγαθὴν μερίδα ἐξελέξατο . . . Elz. has εὐπρόσεδρον here.

36. ἐπὶ τὴν παρθένον αὐτοῦ] his Virgin, that is, his virgin daughter (Severian, Photius, Œcumenius).

It is observable, that throughout this discourse concerning Marriage (vv. 36—40), St. Paul, in that spirit of holy restraint and reverent reserve which mark his treatment of this subject, does not bring forth the Virgin herself from her maiden retirement, and converse with her on the subject; but he addresses his discourse to her Parent—not as if he supposed that the maiden herself was not to have a principal part in determining the matter, but in order to spare her modesty and delicacy, and because he supposes that her wishes and feelings will be confidentially and unreservedly communicated to her Parent, whom she will consider as, under God, her natural guardian and adviser, and whom, therefore, the Apostle identifies with her. He thus teaches Parents and Children their duties to each other and themselves in this solemn matter, the entrance into the Holy Estate of Matrimony.

The beautiful language of an Ancient Father may find a proper place here,—

What human words can suffice to express the felicity of that Marriage which the Church knits together, the Holy Eucharist confirms, and the Benediction seals, which Angels announce in heaven, and the Father of all ratifies? For neither on earth do children rightly and lawfully marry without the consent of Parents. . . . How blessed is the yoke of such a pair, joined together by one hope, by common vows, common discipline, and common service. They are like brother and sister in Christ, fellow-servants of God, joined together in body and mind. Truly they twain are one flesh. They pray together, fast together; they are together in the Church of God, and are together at the Banquet of God. Psalms and Hymns sound between them. Christ hears and sees these things, and rejoices; and sends to them His Peace. Tertullian (ad Uxor. ii. 8).

What would he have said to Marriages at a Registrar's office!

— οὕτως ὀφείλει γίνεσθαι] so it ought to be done. Because his daughter's affections are engaged, and the Marriage will be contracted "reverently, discreetly, advisedly, soberly, and in the fear of God."

— γαμείτωσαν] let them marry: that is, let his daughter, and the person who desires her in marriage, be united together in wedlock. Cp. Winer, § 67, p. 555.

37. Ὃς ἕστηκεν ἑδραῖος] who standeth stedfast. The Virgin daughter's resolves are blended in one with the Parent's; but the Parent gives expression to them. The Parent is regarded throughout by St. Paul as the party who gives effect to the wishes of his child, and through whom the matter is decided, either in the affirmative or negative, and therefore he uses the masculine gender here. See above on v. 36.

38. καὶ ὁ] and he —. So A, B, D, E, F, G. Elz. ὁ δέ, but he —. The reading adopted in the text is preferable, because St. Paul does not so much desire to contrast the one thing with the other, as to state the superiority of the latter.

39. δέδεται] is bound; νόμῳ is added by Elz., but is not in A, B, D*, F, ℵ, and is cancelled by Griesb., Scholz, Lachm., Tisch., Alf.; it may have been imported from Rom. vii. 2.

This sentence appears to be a reply to a question from the Corinthians, "whether a Wife could be severed from her Husband by Divorce?"

Our Lord had said, that whosoever putteth away his wife, except for fornication, committeth adultery (Matt. xix. 9; cp. Matt. v. 32). Hence the question would naturally arise, whether a Wife might put away her Husband for fornication, or adultery?

Our Lord had made no such exception on the side of the Wife. In no case had He permitted her to put away her Husband.

But yet it might be said, that He had not expressly forbidden her to put away her husband, if guilty of that sin. St. Paul here determines that matter, and decides that the wife is bound to her husband as long as he liveth, and therefore cannot contract another marriage in his lifetime. See S. Jerome ad Amandum (tom. iv. p. 162), who, commenting on this text, says, "Quamdiu vivit vir, licèt adulter sit . . . et ab uxore propter hæc scelera derelictus, maritus ejus reputatur, cui alterum virum accipere non licet."

The Gospel has, it is true, placed woman on a par with man as to spiritual privileges (Gal. iii. 28). But it is a great error to imagine that it has disturbed the natural superiority of man over woman. On the contrary, the Gospel teaches, that the husband is the head of the wife, as Christ is of the Church, and as the Church is subject to Christ, so should wives be to their husbands (Eph. v. 23). The Gospel does not give power to a Wife to divorce her Husband, any more than it gives power to Subjects to dethrone their Rulers; to whom they are bound to be subject always; though if a Ruler command what is unlawful, they must "obey God, rather than man." See on Rom. xiii. 1—5.

40. δοκῶ] I suppose; I wot, said with a feeling of conscious dignity, indignant at the very idea of any doubt being felt on the subject: He rebukes all such doubts by the word δοκῶ. I suppose,—whatever any one else may do. See above on iv. 9, and vii. 12, the use of the verb in Æschyl. S. c. T. 611. 647.

As Augustine says on this passage (in Joann. Tract. 37), "Qui dicit puto, dubitare videtur, sed Apostolus increpabat, non dubitabat."

He affirms that he is giving a precept from the Holy Ghost. True it is that all the faithful have the Spirit of God. But all the faithful are not Apostles. The Apostles had the Spirit in prophecy, and miracles, and tongues; and when St. Paul speaks here, he gives not only a counsel of the Spirit, but a command proportioned to His Majesty. Tertullian (de Exhort. Castitatis, c. 4).

CH. VIII. 1. Περὶ δὲ τῶν εἰδωλοθύτων] Now concerning the meats that have been offered in sacrifice to heathen idols, and γνῶσις φυσιοῖ, ἡ δὲ ἀγάπη οἰκοδομεῖ· 2 [b] εἴ τις δοκεῖ ἐγνωκέναι τι, οὐδέπω οὐδὲν ἔγνωκε καθὼς δεῖ γνῶναι· 3 εἰ δέ τις ἀγαπᾷ τὸν Θεόν, οὗτος ἔγνωσται ὑπ' αὐτοῦ· 4 [c] περὶ τῆς βρώσεως οὖν τῶν εἰδωλοθύτων, οἴδαμεν ὅτι οὐδὲν εἴδωλον ἐν κόσμῳ, καὶ ὅτι οὐδεὶς Θεὸς ἕτερος εἰ μὴ εἷς. 5 [d] Καὶ γὰρ εἴπερ εἰσὶ λεγόμενοι θεοὶ, εἴτε ἐν οὐρανῷ εἴτε ἐπὶ γῆς, [e] ὥσπερ εἰσὶ θεοὶ πολλοὶ, καὶ κύριοι πολλοὶ, 6 [f] ἀλλ' ἡμῖν εἷς Θεὸς ὁ πατὴρ, ἐξ οὗ τὰ πάντα, καὶ ἡμεῖς εἰς αὐτὸν, καὶ εἷς Κύριος Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς, δι' οὗ τὰ πάντα, καὶ ἡμεῖς δι' αὐτοῦ.

7 [g] Ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐν πᾶσιν ἡ γνῶσις· τινὲς δὲ τῇ συνειδήσει ἕως ἄρτι τοῦ εἰδώλου ὡς εἰδωλόθυτον ἐσθίουσι, καὶ ἡ συνείδησις αὐτῶν ἀσθενὴς οὖσα μολύνεται. 8 [h] Βρῶμα δὲ ἡμᾶς οὐ παρίστησι τῷ Θεῷ· οὔτε γὰρ ἐὰν φάγωμεν περισσεύομεν, οὔτε ἐὰν μὴ φάγωμεν ὑστερούμεθα.

b Gal. 6. 3. 1 Tim. 6. 4. c Deut. 4. 39. & 6. 4. ch. 10. 19. Eph. 4. 6. Isa. 41. 24.
d Gal. 4. 9. ■ John 10. 34.
f Mal. 2. 10. John 13. 13. Acts 17. 28. Rom. 11. 36. ch. 12. 3. Eph. 4. 5, 6. Phil. 2. 11.
g Rom. 14. 14, 23. ch. 10. 28.
h Rom. 14. 17.

---

whether it is lawful for a Christian to eat them; a question propounded to St. Paul in the Letter from the Corinthians. See vii. 1.

On Christian abstinence from idolothyta, see the Decree of the Council of Jerusalem, Acts xv. 29. Cp. Rev. ii. 14. 20, and Concil. Gangrens. can. 2; and Blunt's Lectures, p. 97.

It is observable, that in dealing with the question of the unlawfulness of eating idolothyta, St. Paul never refers to the Decree of the Council of Jerusalem (Acts xv. 29) in support of his own decisions.

The reason doubtless is, that what is written by him in the Epistles which have been received as Canonical Scripture by the Church of Christ, is written by Inspiration of the Holy Ghost; and what the Holy Ghost commands in them, claims dutiful respect and obedience on His Divine and Independent Authority. See above on vii. 40, and on Gal. ii. 1.

As to the drift of what follows in this chapter, it is well observed by S. Chrysostom, that "many of the Corinthian Christians, having learnt from the Gospel that 'not whatsoever goeth into the mouth of a man defileth a man' (Matt. xv. 11), and that idols are mere wood and stone, abused this knowledge, in a vain conceit of superior intelligence, to the scandal of others, and their own spiritual injury."

2. ἐγνωκέναι] So A, B, D, E, F, G.—Elz. εἰδέναι. τι is emphatic, something.

3. ἔγνωσται ὑπ' αὐτοῦ] he is known by Him. Human knowledge puffeth up: but he who ἀγαπᾷ Θεὸν, loves God, he is the true Gnostic. For only ἀγάπη οἰκοδομεῖ, Love buildeth up. He (viii. 1) who loves God, not only has laid the true foundation of knowledge, but is also himself the object of the highest knowledge, viz. the Divine knowledge. He is known by God, and is loved by Him (Theodoret, who quotes Exod. xxxiii. 12, and see on Acts xv. 18), and is endued with true wisdom by Him.

The Mother of true knowledge is Love. (See on John vii. 17.) In order to know God, we must be known of God. And God knows those who love and obey Him (John x. 27). Therefore all true knowledge is grounded on obedient Love and loving Obedience.

4. οἴδαμεν ὅτι οὐδὲν εἴδωλον] we know that an idol is nothing in the world. There seems to be a contrast between οἴδαμεν and εἴδωλον. An εἴδωλον is a mere εἶδος, ἰδέα, an ideal phantom, or simulacrum: and so distinguished from those things which are proper objects of knowledge; and there is something of alliterative force in the words οἴδαμεν ὅτι οὐδὲν εἴδωλον. This passage is quoted by Iren. iii. 6, who omits ἕτερος and ἐν κόσμῳ.

5. ἐν οὐρανῷ—ἐπὶ γῆς] in heaven—upon earth. The Heathens worship local Deities, not like our God, who is universal.

6. εἷς Θεός] one God. Here we find Father and Son equally opposed to the gods many and lords many. There is but one Lord to us, viz. Jesus Christ. Is then the Father (Who also is the Lord by Whom are all things, Rom. xi. 34. 36) excluded among the lords many? God forbid. But Father and Son are one Lord. So likewise to us there is but one God, viz. the Father. Is then the Son excluded among the gods many?—the Son, who, as the same St. Paul testifies, is over all, God blessed for ever? (Rom. ix. 5.) No, certainly; or otherwise he himself has infallibly shown us, that there are to us two Gods and two Lords, at the same time that he intended to prove (see v. 4) that to us there is but one God and one Lord. The truth is, St. Paul has not only hereby insinuated to us that Father and Son are one God and one Lord, but he has likewise intimated the reason why they are one. It is, because all things whatsoever, arise or flow from both. There is nothing of the Father but by the Son; nor any thing by the Son, but what is also of the Father. Waterland (Works, ii. p. 31).

The Father is here emphatically styled one God; but without design to exclude the Son from being God also: as the Son is emphatically styled one Lord; but without design to exclude the Father from being Lord also. Reasons may be assigned for the emphasis in both cases. The discourse there (vv. 4, 5) is about idols, and nominal gods and lords, which have no claim or title to religious worship. These the Father and Son are both equally distinguished from; which may insinuate at least to us, that the texts of the Old or New Testament, declaring the Unity and excluding others, do not exclude the Son, "by Whom are all things." Another passage is Eph. iv. 6: "One God and Father of all, Who is above all, and through all, and in you all." A famous passage, which has generally been understood by the Ancients of the whole Trinity. Above all, as Father; through all, by the Word; and in all, by the Holy Ghost. Waterland (Defence of Queries, vol. i. qu. 2, p. 7.)

Compare notes on John xvii. 3. 1 Thess. i. 9. 2 Cor. xiii. 13.

— ὁ πατὴρ, ἐξ οὗ τὰ πάντα] God the Father, from Whom (as from, ἐξ, a source) are all things.

This priority doth properly and naturally result from the Divine paternity; so that the Son must necessarily be second unto the Father, from Whom He receiveth His origination. Neither can we be thought to want a sufficient foundation for this priority of the First Person of the Trinity, if we look upon the numerous testimonies of the ancient doctors of the Church, who have not stuck to call the Father the origin, the cause, the author, the root, the fountain, and the head of the Son, or the whole Divinity.

For by these titles it appeareth clearly,—first, that they made a considerable difference between the person of the Father, of Whom (ἐξ οὗ) are all things (1 Cor. viii. 6), and the person of the Son, by Whom (δι' οὗ) are all things. Secondly, that the difference consisteth properly in this,—that as the branch is from the root, and the river from the fountain, and by their origination from them receive that being which they have; whereas the root receiveth nothing from the branch, or fountain from the river; so the Son is from the Father, receiving His subsistence by generation from Him; the Father is not from the Son, as being what He is from none. Bp. Pearson.

On the doctrine of the origination of all things to man from God the Father, see note below on 2 Cor. xiii. 13. Tit. iii. 5.

7. Ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐν πᾶσιν ἡ γνῶσις] But all have not the knowledge which you have. All do not know that there is but one God, and that the gods which the heathen worship are no gods; and when they eat what is offered in sacrifice to them, they eat it τῇ συνειδήσει ἕως ἄρτι τοῦ εἰδώλου, with the yet abiding consciousness of the idol (see Winer, § 54; and Phil. i. 26, τῆς παρουσίας πάλιν); i. e. with the consciousness which the Gentiles have of its existence, and they eat it as meat offered to an idol (ὡς εἰδωλόθυτον); i. e. as offered in worship to it, and with that feeling of reverence towards it which is shown by participation in sacrifices offered in its temple and at its altar.

— μολύνεται] is polluted by participation in meats offered to idols, believed by it to exist and to be divine. Theodoret.

8. Βρῶμα ἡμᾶς οὐ παρίστησι τῷ Θεῷ] Meat doth not commend us to God. You erroneously imagine (says the Apostle to those who boasted of their knowledge) that by eating all meats without scruple or difference, you prove the strength of your faith, and do honour to God the Creator of all things. You know that there is no other God but one, and that an idol is nothing; i. e. the gods to whom these meats are offered have no existence, and by eating freely what has been offered to them you show your belief that they have no existence. But be not deceived, meats do not commend us to God; for neither if we eat freely all things, are we the better, nor yet if we decline to eat any meats, even those offered to the idol, are we the worse. Chrys. Theodoret. Cp. note below, Col. ii. 22.

i Rom. 14. 13, 20. Gal. 5. 13.
9 i Βλέπετε δὲ μήπως ἡ ἐξουσία ὑμῶν αὕτη πρόσκομμα γένηται τοῖς ἀσθενέσιν. 10 Ἐὰν γάρ τις ἴδῃ σὲ τὸν ἔχοντα γνῶσιν ἐν εἰδωλείῳ κατακείμενον, k Rom. 14. 15, 20.
οὐχὶ ἡ συνείδησις αὐτοῦ ἀσθενοῦς ὄντος οἰκοδομηθήσεται εἰς τὸ τὰ εἰδωλόθυτα ἐσθίειν; 11 k καὶ ἀπόλλυται ὁ ἀσθενῶν ἐν τῇ σῇ γνώσει, ὁ ἀδελφὸς δι' ὃν
l Rom. 14. 18.
Χριστὸς ἀπέθανεν. 12 l Οὕτω δὲ ἁμαρτάνοντες εἰς τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς, καὶ τύπτοντες αὐτῶν τὴν συνείδησιν ἀσθενοῦσαν, εἰς Χριστὸν ἁμαρτάνετε.
m Rom. 14. 21. 2 Cor. 11. 29.
13 m Διόπερ, εἰ βρῶμα σκανδαλίζει τὸν ἀδελφόν μου, οὐ μὴ φάγω κρέα εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα, ἵνα μὴ τὸν ἀδελφόν μου σκανδαλίσω.

a Acts 9. 3, 17. & 22. 14, 17, 18. & 23. 11. ch. 4. 15. & 15. 8. 2 Cor. 12. 12.
IX. 1 a Οὐκ εἰμὶ ἐλεύθερος; οὐκ εἰμὶ ἀπόστολος; οὐχὶ Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν τὸν Κύριον ἡμῶν ἑώρακα; οὐ τὸ ἔργον μου ὑμεῖς ἐστε ἐν Κυρίῳ; 2 Εἰ ἄλλοις οὐκ εἰμὶ ἀπόστολος, ἀλλά γε ὑμῖν εἰμι· ἡ γὰρ σφραγὶς τῆς ἐμῆς ἀποστολῆς ὑμεῖς b ver. 14. 1 Thess. 2. 6. 2 Thess. 3. 9. ἐστε ἐν Κυρίῳ. 3 Ἡ ἐμὴ ἀπολογία τοῖς ἐμὲ ἀνακρίνουσιν αὕτη ἐστί· 4 b Μὴ
c Matt. 10. 10.
οὐκ ἔχομεν ἐξουσίαν φαγεῖν καὶ πιεῖν; 5 c μὴ οὐκ ἔχομεν ἐξουσίαν ἀδελφὴν

In fact, the eating or not eating is, in itself, a thing indifferent. And if the question were to be considered in the abstract, you might truly eat or abstain, as you think best. But the question is not to be argued in the abstract. You must consider it also with reference to the effect which your eating will produce upon others, your fellow-men and fellow-members in Christ; and therefore he adds, "Take heed lest this liberty of yours become a stumbling-block to the weak." See above, on 1 Cor. vi. 12.

For παρίστησι here, A B have παραστήσει, which has been adopted by Lachm., Tisch., Meyer, Alford, who have also placed ἐὰν μὴ φάγωμεν as the first clause of the sentence. Lachm. has περισσεύομεν. Tisch. and Alf. have ὑστερούμεθα, and reserve περισσεύομεν for the end of the sentence, after ἐὰν φάγωμεν.

9. ἀσθενέσιν] So A, B, D, E, F, G.—Elz. ἀσθενοῦσιν.

10. Ἐὰν γάρ τις κ.τ.λ.] For if any one see thee, the man who hath knowledge, reclining at meat in the idol's temple (1 Macc. i. 47; x. 83. 3 Esdr. ii. 10; as was usual with the heathen votaries at a sacrifice), will not the conscience of him who is weak be edified to eat the meats that have been offered to idols?

There is a gentle irony in the words, "the man who hath knowledge," and in the word "edified," as in other expressions of St. Paul's argument here (e. g. in δοκῶ, vii. 40); and it has been imitated by Tertullian (de Virg. Vel. c. 3): "Scandalum malæ rei exemplum est, ædificans ad delictum;" and again in his Præscr. Hæret. c. 8: "Solent infirmiores a quibusdam personis ab hæresi captis ædificari ad ruinam."

11. ἀπόλλυται—ἀπέθανεν] he who is weak perisheth, the brother for whom Christ died. A strong passage against the Calvinistic tenet of Reprobation. They for whom Christ died may be lost. They who are lost will not fail of salvation because Christ did not die to save them, and because He rejected them eternally as Reprobates, but because they did not profit by the salvation which He died to procure for them. See on Rom. xiv. 15, where nearly the same words occur; and St. Peter's expression, "denying the Lord that bought them." 2 Pet. ii. 1.

Elz. has ἀπολεῖται, and adds ἀδελφὸς after ἀσθενῶν, but that word is placed as in the text in A, B, D, E, F, G.

— ἐν] So the best MSS.—Elz. ἐπί. Ἐν conveys a stronger and clearer meaning than ἐπί, viz. the perdition of thy brother will be entailed by and involved in thy knowledge.

12. τύπτοντες—ἀσθενοῦσαν] smiting it when sick, instead of endeavouring to heal it.

13. εἰ βρῶμα σκανδαλίζει τὸν ἀδελφόν μου, οὐ μὴ φάγω κρέα εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα] if meat (βρῶμα) make my brother to offend—i. e. is a stumbling-block to him—I will eat no flesh (κρέα) to the world's end.

A text which has been much perverted in modern times.

It has been alleged by some, on the ground of this declaration, that men ought to abstain from wine because some are tempted to abuse it; and that men ought to resolve, and even to make vows, not to drink wine or other fermented drinks, in order that they may not, by their use of them, give occasion to others to abuse them.

St. Paul's assertion is,—that he would abstain entirely from meats, if his eating of them were the cause of sin to any.

He does not say that it is or can be the cause of sin to any; but that if it were the cause of sin, he would even abstain from meat for ever. So, if our drinking of wine be the cause of sin to any, we ought to abstain from it,—but otherwise, we are not obliged so to do. And to bind ourselves or others to abstain from it, is to be guilty of sin.

It is not enough to say that some persons may take occasion from our drinking to abuse wine. There is a great difference between scandal taken and scandal given. Many were offended at Christ Himself. (Matt. xi. 6; xv. 12; xxvi. 31.) Men take occasion from the preaching of the cross to blaspheme the cross. But "the scandal of the cross" is not therefore to cease. (Gal. v. 11.) And St. Paul says, "God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of Christ." (Gal. vi. 14.) It has been well said, that "good things offend none but evil men." If the thing is good, let them acknowledge the evil which they themselves do in being offended by it. Tertullian (de Virg. Vel. 3).

Wine is a creature of God. And every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused (1 Tim. iv. 4, where see note) if it be rightly used. And to condemn its use (as distinguished from its abuse) is to wrong its Creator, and to approach the Manichæan Heresy, which rejected it and other creatures of God, as made by an Evil Principle, and so did dishonour, not only to God our Creator, but to God our Redeemer also. See below on 1 Tim. iv. 3.

And it would not be amiss to consider, that as the element of water has been sanctified by Christ's Baptism in the river Jordan, so the creature of wine has been consecrated by its use in the other Sacrament; and it cannot be right to take or impose a vow to abstain entirely from it, when Christ has given it new dignity by the first miracle that He wrought at Cana, and by saying at the Last Supper, Drink ye all of this. (Matt. xxvi. 27.)

Some interesting particulars concerning the feeling of the Primitive Church on the subject of total abstinence from certain of God's creatures, may be seen in Euseb. iv. 3, and v. 3.

Ch. IX. 1. ἐλεύθερος—ἀπόστολος] Am I not free? am I not an Apostle? This is the order of words in A, B, and in Vulg., Syriac, Armenian, and Æthiopic Versions. And it serves best to mark the connexion between what St. Paul had just said and what he is going to say.

As the ancient Expositors (especially S. Chrysostom) have observed, the Apostle's reasoning is as follows. Do not suppose that by what I have said, enjoining abstinence from idolothyta, known to be such, I have abridged your liberty without being prepared to abate any thing of my own. No. Am I not free? am I not an Apostle? Am I not your Apostle? And yet I have not used my liberty as such to exact wages from you. No; I have forborne to do so. I have waived my claim, in order to your edification. Thus I have set you an example. As I have begun with abating my liberty, that I might edify you, my children, so ought you to curb your appetites, and forbear the use of your liberty, and abstain from meats offered to idols, in order to edify your brethren. See on v. 4.

— οὐχὶ—Κύριον ἑώρακα] Have I not seen the Lord? An answer to those who disparaged St Paul in comparison with the Twelve, who had seen the Lord, and had been sent by Him.

As to the fact, see on Acts ix. 5.

4. ἐξουσίαν] authority. This word is the clue which connects the reasonings of this chapter with the last (see on v. 1), and with this general declaration, πάντα μοι ἔξεστιν, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐγὼ ἐξουσιασθήσομαι ὑπό τινος. The Corinthians were vain of their ἐξουσία, and doubtless often had the word ἐξουσία in their mouths. Accordingly St. Paul reiterates the word frequently in this chapter (vv. 4, 5, 6. 12. 18); and by his own example teaches them how to use that authority and liberty in which they gloried.

— φαγεῖν καὶ πιεῖν] to eat and drink, i. e. at the charge of my Christian flock, παρὰ τῶν μαθητευομένων. Chrys.

γυναῖκα περιάγειν, ὡς καὶ οἱ λοιποὶ ἀπόστολοι, καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ τοῦ Κυρίου, καὶ Κηφᾶς; [6] [d] ἢ μόνος ἐγὼ καὶ Βαρνάβας οὐκ ἔχομεν ἐξουσίαν τοῦ μὴ ἐργάζεσθαι; [d] 2 Thess. 3. 8, 9.

[7] [e] Τίς στρατεύεται ἰδίοις ὀψωνίοις ποτέ; τίς φυτεύει ἀμπελῶνα, καὶ τὸν καρπὸν αὐτοῦ οὐκ ἐσθίει; τίς ποιμαίνει ποίμνην, καὶ ἐκ τοῦ γάλακτος τῆς ποίμνης [e] John 21. 15. 1 Pet. 5. 2. Deut. 20. 6.

---

5. μὴ οὐκ ἔχομεν κ.τ.λ.] Is it so that we have not? "Num non habemus?"

— ἀδελφὴν γυναῖκα] a Christian woman. See ἀδελφὴ used in this sense, vii. 15. Cp. the various reading in Philem. v. 2. If he had used ἀδελφὴ alone here, he would have been understood to mean a sister by blood; and he adds, therefore, γυναῖκα, a general term, including a wife or some other female relative.

That γυναῖκα does not mean only a wife, but is to be extended to other female companions (e. g. sister, sisters-in-law, and other relatives, or matrons of venerable age, or widows), may be inferred from the circumstance that St. Paul speaks of "the rest of the Apostles, and the brethren of the Lord, and Cephas," as having this power.

So Chrysostom interprets the passage.

And though it is true, that St. Paul does not say that they all used their power, yet his argument would have little force, if for the most part this power was not used as well as possessed by them. In distinguishing himself and Barnabas as working with their own hands for their livelihood (v. 6) he leads us to suppose that the other Apostles not only had the power not to work, but that they used the power which they had. So here. But we never hear of the Apostles travelling through the world with wives and children. If it had been so, St. Paul could hardly have said to ordinary Christians, that it was better for them to remain unmarried on account of the present necessity (vii. 26). And it was never supposed by Christian Antiquity that all the Apostles were married. Tertullian (de Monogam. c. 8) says, "Petrum solum invenio maritum, inter Apostolos," which is also S. Jerome's opinion (adv. Jovinian. 1). And though other accounts vary from this (see on Euseb. iii. 30), yet the Ancient Writers, who had this passage of Scripture before their eyes, never imagined St. Paul to suggest here that the Apostles generally were married, and carried their wives with them in their missionary tours; but that he intimates that they had faithful Christian women, whether wives or others, of suitable age and character, as companions in their journeys, as was the case with our Blessed Lord Himself. (Luke viii. 3.) So Tertullian (de Monog. 8), who, referring to this passage, says that St. Paul does not here say that "uxores ab Apostolis circumductas, sed simpliciter mulieres, quæ, illos eodem instituto quo et Dominum comitantes, ministrabant." And so Augustine (de Opere Monach. c. 5) explains the words of St. Paul, "Ostendit sibi Paulus licere quod cæteris Apostolis, id est ut non operatus manibus suis, sed ex Evangelio vivat. Ad hoc enim et fideles mulieres, habentes terrenam substantiam, ibant cum eis, et ministrabant eis de substantiâ suâ."

The example of St. Paul's wise forbearance in not "leading about" a Christian woman with him on his missionary tours, would have special significance at Corinth, where, as this Epistle shows, he had to preach with sternness against the deadly sin which was associated with the name of that city.

— οἱ ἀδελφοὶ τ. Κυρίου] the brethren (i. e. cousins) of our Lord, and sons of Cleophas or Alphæus. He means James, the Bishop of Jerusalem, and Joses, and Simon, and Jude. (Chrys.) See on Matt. xii. 46; xiii. 55. Acts i. 13; and below, the Introduction to the Epistle of St. James.

6. Βαρνάβας] This mention of Barnabas seems to intimate that he was known to the Corinthians. (See Theodoret and others on 2 Cor. viii. 18, 19.) By this reference to the example of Barnabas, St. Paul shows that he harboured no ill-will to him after the differences which he recounts (Gal. ii. 13), and which St. Luke records in Acts xv. 39. Cp. Col. iv. 10.

But there seem to have been other special reasons for the mention of Barnabas in this address to the Corinthians, viz.:

St. Paul might be charged with vain-glory, and with an invidious disparagement of the other Apostles in comparison with himself, and with casting a slur on them, in order to magnify himself, if he had mentioned himself alone as preaching the Gospel freely and without charge. If he did so, why was it that they did not also do the same? If it was right for him to preach without charge, was it not also for them? Was he not thus attempting to gain popularity for himself at the cost of the other Apostles? He therefore does not mention himself alone here, but associates Barnabas with himself in this commemoration of the free preaching of the Gospel.

But why Barnabas?

Because Barnabas was set apart specially by the Holy Ghost together with St. Paul at Antioch, the centre of Gentile Christianity, as the Apostle to preach the Gospel to the Gentiles, of whom the Corinthians were part. See Acts xiii. 4. Gal. ii. 9: "We should go to the heathen, and they unto the Circumcision."

These considerations also prepare us for St. Paul's argument in vv. 16—18, and open out some interesting views of the history of the Missionary progress and settlement of the Church, and of its Temporalities; and of the peculiar difficulties with which St. Paul had to contend in preaching the Gospel.

This may appear as follows:—

The other chief Apostles, who went to the Circumcision (Gal. ii. 9), took wages for their work, from those to whom they preached. And, it is needless to say, that what they did, they did well in doing.

Their case was different from that of the Great Apostle to the Gentiles.

For, be it remembered, that by the good Providence of Almighty God, a system of Ministerial Maintenance by Tithes and Oblations had been established from time immemorial among those of the Circumcision: and in passing by a natural transition from the Law into the Gospel, the Jews would carry with them the habits which they had formed under the teaching of the Old Testament, and be as ready to provide for their Ministers under the Gospel, as they had been under the Law.

Hence the generous fervour of the primitive Christians at Jerusalem, who sold their possessions, and brought their price, and laid it at the Apostles' feet. (Acts iv. 35.)

And it is mentioned, not without special significance, by the Sacred Historian, that Barnabas, a Levite of Cyprus, did this. He, as one of the Circumcision, paid this deferential respect to the Apostles, as the representatives of the Evangelical Hierarchy. But, as St. Paul assures us here, the same Barnabas, who preached as an Apostle to the Gentiles, did not lay claim to ministerial maintenance for himself.

But what was the case with the Jews, was not so with the Gentiles. They had no Tithe-System; no regular code of ministerial maintenance for their Priests. The Priesthood of Heathen cities was annexed to high public offices, and was enjoyed by persons of rank and wealth in the state. Their Priests did, indeed, partake of the sacrifices offered at their altars. But Christianity had no victims to sacrifice; and the Gentiles were not prepared to set apart other oblations for the maintenance of Ministers of Religion. Hence the two Apostles to the Gentiles (Paul and Barnabas) had peculiar difficulties to contend with.

We see from the present chapter with what divine wisdom St. Paul met those difficulties, and converted them into occasions of permanent good to the Church. He asserts in strong terms the claims of Christ's Ministers to receive maintenance from their flock. He proves this by arguments from human Reason, because he is writing to Gentiles, and from divine Inspiration, because he is writing to Christians. He proves it from the Law of Moses; from its ceremonial institutions, and from its humane provisions even for cattle. (vv. 9—14.) He thus justifies the Jewish Christians in supplying maintenance to their Clergy, as has been observed by S. Chrysostom (on v. 12). He is careful not to disparage the other Apostles (μὴ καταισχύνειν τοὺς ἀποστόλους τοὺς λαμβάνοντας), and he justifies them in taking maintenance from their flock. And he teaches the Corinthians and all other Gentile Churches to imitate the Church of the Mosaic Dispensation in this respect, and to regard the commandments of Almighty God, requiring a provision for His Ministers at the hands of the People, as addressed to themselves.

An interesting confirmation of the above remarks will be found in the third Epistle of St. John, where he mentions as a special commendation of certain brethren, that they "went forth for His Name's Sake (Christ's), taking nothing of the Gentiles," μηδὲν λαμβάνοντες (St. Paul's words, 2 Cor. xi. 20) ἀπὸ τῶν ἐθνικῶν.

Lastly, we may say, that in this respect the teaching and practice of the blessed Apostle St. Paul have been the means, under God's Providence, of the establishment of the Tithe-System in Gentile Christendom, and of the spiritual blessings that have been and are derived from it; and that wherever the Gospel is obeyed, there those principles, which the Holy Spirit has taught the world by St. Paul's mouth, will be joyfully accepted and stedfastly maintained, and will bring forth their proper fruits in the growth of the Christian life, and in the extension of the kingdom of God.

οὐκ ἐσθίει ; 8 Μὴ κατὰ ἄνθρωπον ταῦτα λαλῶ ; ἢ καὶ ὁ νόμος ταῦτα οὐ λέγει ;
f Deut. 25. 4. 1 Tim. 5. 18. 9 f ἐν γὰρ τῷ Μωϋσέως νόμῳ γέγραπται, Οὐ φιμώσεις βοῦν ἀλοῶντα. Μὴ
g 2 Tim. 2. 6. τῶν βοῶν μέλει τῷ Θεῷ ; 10 g ἢ δι' ἡμᾶς πάντως λέγει ; δι' ἡμᾶς γὰρ ἐγράφη, ὅτι ἐπ' ἐλπίδι ὀφείλει ὁ ἀροτριῶν ἀροτριᾶν, καὶ ὁ ἀλοῶν ἐπ' ἐλπίδι τοῦ μετέχειν.
h Rom. 15. 27. Gal. 6. 6. 11 h Εἰ ἡμεῖς ὑμῖν τὰ πνευματικὰ ἐσπείραμεν, μέγα εἰ ἡμεῖς ὑμῶν τὰ σαρκικὰ
i Acts 20. 33. 2 Cor 11. 9, 12. & 12. 13. 1 Thess. 2. 7. θερίσομεν ; 12 i Εἰ ἄλλοι τῆς ὑμῶν ἐξουσίας μετέχουσιν, οὐ μᾶλλον ἡμεῖς ;
Ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐχρησάμεθα τῇ ἐξουσίᾳ ταύτῃ· ἀλλὰ πάντα στέγομεν, ἵνα μή τινα k Num. 18. 8—20. Deut. 18. 1. ἐγκοπὴν δῶμεν τῷ εὐαγγελίῳ τοῦ Χριστοῦ. 13 k Οὐκ οἴδατε ὅτι οἱ τὰ ἱερὰ ἐργαζόμενοι ἐκ τοῦ ἱεροῦ ἐσθίουσιν ; οἱ τῷ θυσιαστηρίῳ παρεδρεύοντες τῷ θυσιαστηρίῳ συμμερίζονται ; 14 οὕτω καὶ ὁ Κύριος διέταξε τοῖς τὸ εὐαγγέλιον l Acts 18. 3. & 20. 34. ch. 4. 12. 2 Cor. 11. 10. 1 Thess. 2. 9. 2 Thess. 3. 8. m Rom. 1. 14. Acts 9. 6. n ch. 9. 14. & 4. 1. Col. 1. 25. καταγγέλλουσιν, ἐκ τοῦ εὐαγγελίου ζῆν.
15 l Ἐγὼ δὲ οὐ κέχρημαι οὐδενὶ τούτων. Οὐκ ἔγραψα δὲ ταῦτα, ἵνα οὕτω γένηται ἐν ἐμοί· καλὸν γάρ μοι μᾶλλον ἀποθανεῖν, ἢ τὸ καύχημά μου ἵνα τις κενώσῃ. 16 m Ἐὰν γὰρ εὐαγγελίζωμαι, οὐκ ἔστι μοι καύχημα· ἀνάγκη γάρ μοι ἐπίκειται· οὐαὶ γάρ μοι ἐστὶν ἐὰν μὴ εὐαγγελίσωμαι. 17 n Εἰ γὰρ ἑκὼν τοῦτο

---

8. Μὴ κατὰ ἄνθρωπον—ἢ καὶ ὁ νόμος] Do I say this as a man, that is, on mere human authority; doth not also the Law say these things? A plain assertion that the Pentateuch is of superhuman authority; that it was given by divine inspiration.

9. Οὐ φιμώσεις βοῦν ἀλοῶντα] Thou shalt not muzzle the ox while treading out the corn. (Deut. xxv. 4, LXX.) See on Luke iv. 35.

— Μὴ τῶν βοῶν μέλει τῷ Θεῷ ;] Are oxen the special object of God's care in this precept? This precept is also applied in the same way by St. Paul in 1 Tim. v. 18.

10. δι' ἡμᾶς] for the sake of us Preachers of the Gospel. St. Paul specially aims in this Epistle to show the spiritual, moral, and figurative character of the Mosaic Law. See x. 2, and compare Tertullian (c. Marcion. iii. 16), and compare above on Deut. xxv. 4, on the spiritual character of the civil precepts of Moses.

As Bengel observes, this is an instructive specimen of the true mode of dealing with the Mosaic Law, even as to animals. Compare note above on Acts x. 14.

— ἐπ' ἐλπίδι τοῦ μετέχειν] So A, B, C, and Griesb., Scholz, Lach., Tisch., Alf. Elz. has τῆς ἐλπίδος αὐτοῦ μετέχειν ἐπ' ἐλπίδι with D, E, J, K. And perhaps the true reading may be a combination of the two, viz., ἐπ' ἐλπίδι τοῦ μετέχειν τῆς ἐλπίδος αὐτοῦ. The sense is that he that plougheth ought to plough in hope, and he that thresheth ought to thresh in hope of partaking together with him that ploughed, in that which he who ploughed had hoped for.

12. ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐχρησάμεθα] But we did not use this power; we did not avail ourselves of our right to ministerial maintenance. He recites, and replies to, an objection, urged by some, that he had not dared to claim Apostolic maintenance, because he was conscious that he did not possess Apostolic authority: cp. v. 15, ἐγὼ δὲ οὐ κέχρημαι οὐδενὶ τούτων.

— πάντα στέγομεν] we endure and support all things; properly, like vessels which are water-tight, and do not allow any thing to leak in or out. See above, 1 Thess. iii. 1. Compare 1 Cor. xiii. 7, ἡ ἀγάπη πάντα στέγει, and the passages in Wetstein here.

13. παρεδρεύοντες] assiduously attending on. So the best MSS. Elz. προσεδρεύοντες. As to the fact of this participation, see Lev. vii. 31, 32. Num. xviii. 9.

14. οὕτω καὶ ὁ Κύριος] thus also did the Lord appoint unto them that preach the Gospel, viz. to live of the Gospel. The Levites lived of the holy portion or revenue of the Temple as their ὀψώνιον or wages; even so the Ministers of the Gospel must live by their calling. The Priests were maintained out of the share they had of the offerings of the Altar; even just so the Ministers of the Gospel must live by their function of preaching the Gospel. Joseph Mede, book i. disc. xxi. on this text. See also Barrow, Serm. xii. vol. i. p. 265.

It also hence appears that by God's command (οὕτω καὶ ὁ Κύριος διέταξε) the maintenance to be provided for Ministers under the Gospel must not be less ample and liberal than it was under the Law. And to defraud them of their due is to rob God. (Mal. iii. 8, 9.) What the maintenance of the Levitical Priesthood was, may be seen in Num. xviii. Lev. vi. vii., and other passages quoted in one of the Editor's Occasional Sermons "On Tithes and Offerings," No. xxxviii. p. 118.

In S. Chrysostom's expositions of, and homilies on, this chapter, will be found much interesting material bearing on the question of Ministerial Maintenance, and on the Collections of the Offertory in the Church.

15. Ἐγὼ δὲ οὐ κέχρημαι οὐδενὶ τούτων] But I have used none of these things. I have not availed myself of any of these pleas in my own particular case. St. Paul was content to waive all his claims to ministerial maintenance, and to labour with his own hands, in order to silence all imputation of self-interest, and to set an example of Christian self-control in the exercise of Christian liberty, with a view to the salvation of others, and the edification of the Church; and also in order that—providing for the benefit of the Church in all future ages—he might urge with greater force the claim of the Christian Priesthood to that ministerial Maintenance which he himself waived in his own person, and therefore would not be charged with self-interested designs in stating it, as he does in many of his Epistles. (1 Cor. ix. 4. 6. 12. 1 Thess. ii. 6. 2 Thess. iii. 8, 9. Gal. vi. 6. 1 Tim. v. 17.)

16. καύχημα] matter for glorying. (See 2 Cor. xi. 10.) Observe the emphatic place of the personal pronoun μοὶ in this sentence, and v. 18, I who am a signal monument of God's grace, I who have had a special call from heaven, I who have been sent by Christ, and ordained by the Holy Ghost, have nothing to boast of, if I preach the Gospel, for I am under a strong necessity to do so. And woe is me if I do not preach the Gospel.

— ἀνάγκη μοὶ ἐπίκειται] necessity lieth upon me. The obligation of Conscience is here described by the Apostle, who owns himself a debtor to the Greeks and Barbarians (Rom. i. 14), because he knew himself to be set apart by God to preach the Gospel to the Gentiles. And in 2 Cor. v. 14 he acknowledged himself to be constrained (συνέχεσθαι), as persons are who are bound by chains (see on Acts xviii. 5), to perform this duty. And in 1 Cor. ix. 16 he says that necessity is laid upon him, so that it is not free for him to live at ease; but woe is me (he says) if I preach not the Gospel. The same obligation was felt and expressed by the two Chief Apostles, Peter and John (Acts iv. 20), who said, "we cannot but speak." Bp. Sanderson (de Oblig. Conscient. iv. c. 23).

17. Εἰ γὰρ ἑκὼν κ.τ.λ.] For if of my own accord I do this (i. e. preach the Gospel) I have wages, μισθόν (Matt. xx. 8. Luke x. 7. 1 Cor. iii. 14. 1 Tim. v. 18); I receive wages from God, although I receive none from you. But if, not of my own accord, I do it, then I have been entrusted with a stewardship: that is, in that case I reduce myself to the condition of a domestic servant in a household, who does his duty merely because he is hired and obliged to do so.

In the former case I act with the loving alacrity of a son, in the latter with the faithful obedience of a slave. In the former case I act because I rejoice in my duty, and because it is "my meat and drink" to do it; in the other case I act because I am constrained to do it. And according to the spirit and temper with which I do my duty here, will be my everlasting reward hereafter. Cp. Origen and Chrysostom.

Hence it is evident, that the character of the same act varies much with the dispositions of the doer; and the Apostle teaches the blessedness of a free and cheerful spirit in doing the service of God. Cp. 2 Cor. ix. 7.

As to the accusative after πεπίστευμαι, see above, 1 Thess. ii. 4. Rom. iii. 2, ἐπιστεύθησαν τὰ λόγια, and 1 Tim. i. 11, ὃ ἐπιστεύθην ἐγώ.

πράσσω, μισθὸν ἔχω· εἰ δὲ ἄκων, οἰκονομίαν πεπίστευμαι. 18 ° Τίς οὖν μοί ἐστιν ὁ μισθός; ἵνα εὐαγγελιζόμενος ἀδάπανον θήσω τὸ εὐαγγέλιον, εἰς τὸ μὴ καταχρήσασθαι τῇ ἐξουσίᾳ μου ἐν τῷ εὐαγγελίῳ.

° 2 Cor. 11. 7.

19 ᵖ Ἐλεύθερος γὰρ ὢν ἐκ πάντων πᾶσιν ἐμαυτὸν ἐδούλωσα, ἵνα τοὺς πλείονας κερδήσω. 20 ᵠ Καὶ ἐγενόμην τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις ὡς Ἰουδαῖος, ἵνα Ἰουδαίους κερδήσω· τοῖς ὑπὸ νόμον ὡς ὑπὸ νόμον, μὴ ὢν αὐτὸς ὑπὸ νόμον, ἵνα τοὺς ὑπὸ νόμον κερδήσω· 21 ʳ τοῖς ἀνόμοις ὡς ἄνομος, μὴ ὢν ἄνομος Θεοῦ ἀλλ' ἔννομος Χριστοῦ, ἵνα κερδάνω τοὺς ἀνόμους· 22 ˢ ἐγενόμην τοῖς ἀσθενέσιν ἀσθενής, ἵνα τοὺς ἀσθενεῖς κερδήσω. Τοῖς πᾶσι γέγονα πάντα, ἵνα πάντως τινὰς σώσω. 23 Πάντα δὲ ποιῶ διὰ τὸ εὐαγγέλιον, ἵνα συγκοινωνὸς αὐτοῦ γένωμαι.

p Gal. 5. 13. Matt. 18. 15.
q Acts 16. 3. & 21. 23, &c. r Gal. 2. 3. ch. 7. 22.
s Rom. 15. 1. & 11. 14. ch. 10. 33.

24 ᵗ Οὐκ οἴδατε, ὅτι οἱ ἐν σταδίῳ τρέχοντες πάντες μὲν τρέχουσιν, εἷς δὲ λαμβάνει τὸ βραβεῖον; οὕτω τρέχετε, ἵνα καταλάβητε. 25 ᵘ Πᾶς δὲ ὁ ἀγωνιζόμενος πάντα ἐγκρατεύεται· ἐκεῖνοι μὲν οὖν, ἵνα φθαρτὸν στέφανον λάβωσιν, ἡμεῖς δὲ, ἄφθαρτον. 26 ˣ Ἐγὼ τοίνυν οὕτω τρέχω, ὡς οὐκ ἀδήλως· οὕτω πυκτεύω, ὡς οὐκ t Gal. 5. 7. Phil. 2. 16. & 3. 14. 2 Tim. 4. 7.

u Eph. 6. 12. 1 Tim. 6. 12. 2 Tim. 2. 5. & 4. 7, 8. 1 Pet. 1. 4. & 5. 4. James 1. 12.
x 2 Tim. 2. 5. & 4. 8.

The interpretation of some Expositors (Meyer, De Wette, and others), who suppose the great Apostle to say that he himself did not preach ἑκὼν, voluntarily, but was forced to preach, and was therefore not entitled to ▪ μισθὸς, or ministerial maintenance from man, and could not rightly claim it, seems at variance with his own argument here, that all Ministers, and he himself among them, who preach the Gospel, are entitled to live of the Gospel (ix. 14).

And the assertion which St. Paul makes, that he for special reasons did not use his power in this respect (ix. 12) and enforce his claim, is a sufficient proof that he had the power, and might have enforced the claim; and the strength of his appeal to his own practice in this respect, as exemplary to the Corinthians, lies in the fact that he had the power, but chose voluntarily to waive his claim, for their edification; and that they also ought to act in a similar spirit for the sake of their brethren.

The other interpretation specified above is grounded on a fallacy in Morals, viz., that a person cannot do ἑκὼν, or voluntarily, that which he would be obliged to do under fear of condemnation; whereas it is the high privilege and noble faculty of the human will, when sanctified by grace, to transmute fear into love, and to make duty a delight, and to rejoice in doing freely and joyfully that which, without the aid of the Holy Ghost, it would do only in a servile spirit. Compare our Lord's saying, John iv. 34.

18. Τίς οὖν μοί ἐστιν ὁ μισθός;] What then are my wages? Observe again μοί placed emphatically before its verb, and not enclitically after it. (See v. 16.) What wages then have I, who receive none from you? My wages are, that I will receive no wages, but in preaching the Gospel will make (θήσω) the Gospel without charge to those to whom I preach, so as not to strain my power (καταχρήσασθαι, see vii. 31) in preaching the Gospel, and set them an example, and teach them with what forbearance and love towards others, and with what regard to the general edification of the body of Christ, they also ought to use their liberty. Thus, by receiving no wages from men, I shall receive more abundant wages from God hereafter, at the Great Day of reckoning.

19. τοὺς πλείονας] the most possible. "Articulus habet vim relativi ad omnes; quàm plurimos eorum." Bengel.

20. τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις ὡς Ἰουδαῖος] to the Jews as a Jew. As the Corinthians might well know from the fact of his having shorn his head at their own harbour, Cenchreæ, because he had a vow, when he had last quitted them for Ephesus. See on Acts xviii. 18, also on Acts xvi. 3, concerning what Paul did to Timothy, with whom he had been at Corinth, and whom he had now sent to Corinth. Compare also Acts xxi. 26 as to his assumption afterwards of the Nazarite Vow at Jerusalem.

In all these respects St. Paul displayed an example of that Charity which condescends (συγκαταβαίνει) and accommodates itself to the weaknesses of others, at the same time that it never surrenders any thing that is true, or makes any compromise with, or connivance at, what is false.

Elz. omits μὴ ὢν αὐτὸς ὑπὸ νόμον, which is in A, B, C, D, E, F, G, and has Θεῷ and Χριστῷ in v. 21.

22. ἀσθενὴς] weak. Elz. prefixes ὡς, which is not in A, B, and weakens the sense. And cp. 2 Cor. xi. 29, τίς ἀσθενεῖ, καὶ οὐκ ἀσθενῶ;

The argument is, If, in my regard for the scruples of the weak, I have thus forborne to use my Liberty, not merely by abstaining from what I might otherwise have been glad to do, but also by doing what I otherwise would not have done, ought not you much more to exercise a charitable self-restraint in abstaining from meats offered in sacrifice to idols?

— πάντα] all things. Elz. prefixes τὰ, which is not found in the best MSS., and seems to contravene the sense. St. Paul did not become totally and at once, but severally and singly, not absolutely, but respectively, all things to all men.

23. Πάντα] So A, B, C, D, E, F, G. Elz. τοῦτο.

24. Οὐκ οἴδατε] Know ye not? ye who make such bold professions of knowledge?

He sums up this part of the argument by referring them not only to his own example, but even to that of heathen competitors in the Games celebrated at their own Isthmus and in other places in their neighbourhood, Nemea and Olympia. They, in their preparations for their race, exercise self-denial; they abstain for many months together from luxurious diet; they practise continual continence and temperance. Cp. Horat. A. P. 412, "Qui studet optatam," &c., and the numerous similar illustrations in Wetstein, p. 137.

And yet they contend only for a mere fading chaplet of pine-leaves, parsley, or wild olive, which one only can obtain. How much more ought you to restrain your fleshly appetites (which excite you to indulge in eating sacrificial meats and in fornication), in order that you may be able to run with vigour your Christian race; in which none who runs well can fail of that immortal crown which Christ, the supreme Agonothetes, will give to all who love His appearing? (2 Tim. iv. 8.)

Compare the conclusion of Tertullian's Treatise de Spectaculis, and his eloquent language addressed to the Christian Martyrs, and grounded on this passage of St. Paul (ad Martyres, c. 3): "Proinde vos, benedicti, quodcunque hoc durum est, ad exercitationem virtutum animi et corporis deputate. Bonum agonem subituri estis, in quo Agonothetes Deus vivus est, Xystarches Spiritus Sanctus, Corona æternitatis, bravium angelicæ substantiæ, politia in cœlis, gloria in sæcula sæculorum. Itaque Epistates vester Jesus Christus, qui vos spiritu unxit, et ad hoc scamma produxit.... Nempe enim et athletæ segregantur ad strictiorem disciplinam, ut robori ædificando valeant, continentur a luxuriâ, a cibis lautioribus, a potu jucundiore .·.. et illi, inquit Apostolus, ut coronam corruptibilem consequantur. Nos, æternam consecuturi, carcerem pro palæstrâ interpretemur, ut ad Stadium Tribunalis, bene exercitati incommodis omnibus, producamur." See also Clem. Rom. ii. 7, εἰς φθαρτοὺς ἀγῶνας καταπλέουσι πολλοὶ, ἀλλ' οὐ πάντες στεφανοῦνται· ἡμεῖς οὖν ἀγωνισώμεθα, ἵνα πάντες στεφανωθῶμεν.

As to the diction here, Στάδιον = spatium, the race-course, 600 Greek feet long = 612 English (cp. "Athens and Attica," chap. xx.). The βραβεῖον ("bravium," Iren. iv. 7, whence English bravo), or prize assigned by the βραβεὺς, βραβευτὴς, or Agonotheta. Soph. (Elect. 692. 713). Cp. Philip. iii. 14. 2 Tim. iv. 7, where St. Paul applies the same metaphor to the Christian course. Clem. Rom. 5, Παῦλος ὑπομονῆς βραβεῖον ὑπέσχεν. Tertullian, just quoted, "bravium angelicæ substantiæ." And as to the continence and discipline of ancient foot-racers, &c., see the authorities in Wetst. and Valck.

26. Ἐγὼ τοίνυν] I, therefore—who am convinced of the truth of what I have now said, and do not merely preach it, but practise it in my own person—so run, not as uncertainly, as those heathen racers do; for one only of them receives the prize. I so fight, as a Boxer, not as one who beats the air in a σκιαμαχία, as one who fences with a shadow or imaginary adversary. Eustath.

ἀέρα δέρων· 27 [y] ἀλλ' ὑπωπιάζω μοῦ τὸ σῶμα καὶ δουλαγωγῶ, μήπως ἄλλοις κηρύξας αὐτὸς ἀδόκιμος γένωμαι.

X. 1 [a] Οὐ θέλω γὰρ ὑμᾶς ἀγνοεῖν, ἀδελφοί, ὅτι οἱ πατέρες ἡμῶν πάντες ὑπὸ τὴν νεφέλην ἦσαν, καὶ πάντες διὰ τῆς θαλάσσης διῆλθον, 2 καὶ πάντες εἰς τὸν Μωϋσῆν ἐβαπτίσαντο ἐν τῇ νεφέλῃ, καὶ ἐν τῇ θαλάσσῃ, 3 [b] καὶ πάντες τὸ αὐτὸ y Rom. 8. 15. Col. 3. 5. Rom. 6. 18.

a Exod. 13. 21. & 14. 22. Deut. 1. 33. Ps. 78. 13, 14. & 105. 39.
b Exod. 16. 14, &c. Ps. 105. 40.

(ad Iliad. ή. p. 530), ἐν σκιαμαχίᾳ μαχόμενος, ὅ φασιν ἀέρα δέρων.

27. ὑπωπιάζω μοῦ τὸ σῶμα] I chasten my own body. ὑπωπιάζω is an athletic and pugilistic word; literally, I make black and blue with my fists, as a boxer does his adversary with ὑπώπια, or bruises under the eyes, "lividum facio corpus meum, et in servitutem redigo" (Iren. iv. 7). See on Luke xviii. 5, and cp. Lucian, de Gymnas. 3 (quoted by Wetstein), αἰσχύνοντες τὰ κάλλη τοῖς ὑπωπίοις ὡς κοτίνου ἐγκρατεῖς γένοιντο· νικήσαντες, εἰπέ μοι, πάντες αὐτὸ λαμβάνουσιν; οὐδαμῶς, ἀλλ' εἷς ἐξ ἁπάντων· εἶτ' ἐπὶ τῷ ἀδήλῳ τῆς νίκης τοσαῦτα πονοῦσι, κ.τ.λ.

— δουλαγωγῶ] I reduce my body to slavery. The Corinthians had pleaded their ἐξουσία, or power, to indulge their bodies in gluttony and fornication. St. Paul had said that he would show his own liberty by not allowing his body to have power over himself (1 Cor. vi. 12), and by bringing it into captivity, and by exercising lordship over it. This, he had taught them, is true Liberty; not to be the slave of the body, but to rule it as a slave. And he amplifies this assertion by saying that he reduces his own body to slavery (δουλαγωγῶ), and beats it, as an antagonist in a pugilistic combat (cp. Rom. viii. 13. 1 Pet. ii. 11), in which he bruises it by self-discipline.

— μήπως ἄλλοις κηρύξας—ἀδόκιμος γένωμαι] lest by any means I, having preached to others, should myself become reprobate, be rejected, fail of the prize: ἀδόκιμος, "vocabulum agonisticum" (Bengel), as not having contended lawfully (2 Tim. ii. 5).

God's Predestination is secret to us. He alone knows who are, and will continue to be, His own to the end. St. Paul himself, the most signal example of free grace that ever the world saw, intimates that he might have been disobedient to the heavenly call he had received (Acts xxvi. 19, where see note); and therefore Grace is not irresistible; and he tells us here that he, who had been called in that supernatural manner, and had obeyed the call, was not assured in his own mind of his own salvation, and that he did not know but that he himself might fall away from grace given, and become reprobate. Cp. Phil. iii. 11, where see note.

Consequently, no one can be fully assured of his own final acceptance with God; and it is, therefore, a dangerous and deadly error, to make personal assurance to be the essence of a Justifying Faith. See on Rom. ix. 22, and above on 1 Cor. iv. 4, and Barrow on Justifying Faith, vol. iv. p. 105, Serm. iv.

It is true that we should endeavour so to repent, and to perform whatever God requires of us, that we may thence acquire a good hope concerning our state; we should labour, that our hearts may not condemn us of any presumptuous transgressing our duty (Col. i. 23. Heb. iii. 6. 1 John iii. 21); and, consequently, that we may become, in a manner, confident of God's favour toward us. But, when we have done the best we can, even when we are not conscious of any enormous fault or defect, yet we may consider, with St. Paul, that we are not thereby justified (1 Cor. iv. 4), but abide liable to the more certain cognizance and judgment of God, who seeth not as man seeth (1 Sam. xvi. 7); that we are not capable or competent judges of ourselves; nor are we ever the better for thinking well of ourselves; since, as St. Paul tells us again, he is not approved that commends himself, but whom the Lord commendeth (2 Cor. x. 18): for that, delicta sua quis intelligit (Ps. xix. 12)? who can thoroughly understand and scan his own errors? who can say, I have made my heart clean, I am purged of my sin? (Prov. xx. 9.) Dr. Barrow (iv. p. 105).

Justifying Faith does not consist in our being persuaded that our sins are pardoned, or our persons just in God's esteem, and that we are acceptable to God and possessed of His favour. For Faith is represented in Holy Scripture as antecedent to God's special benevolence, accepting and justifying our persons. It is a previous condition, without which (as the Apostle teaches us) it is impossible to please God (Heb. xi. 6).

Much less is that notion of Faith right, which defines it to be a firm and certain knowledge of God's eternal good-will toward us particularly, and that we shall be saved. Cp. Dr. Barrow (ibid. pp. 107, 108).

Ch. X. 1. Οὐ θέλω γὰρ ὑμᾶς ἀγνοεῖν] For I would not have you ignorant. He continues his argument against indulgence of the bodily appetites in surfeiting and lust, by reference to the warnings supplied by the History of the Israelites in the wilderness, which is figurative of the Christian History, in spiritual Gifts and Privileges, and also in Divine Warnings and Judgments.

The same argument is treated in the Epistle to the Hebrews, iii. 7—19; iv. 1—6. He had referred them to his own example, in keeping his body under by discipline, lest he himself,—notwithstanding his spiritual gifts,—should fail of his heavenly inheritance (ix. 27); and warns them in like manner not to presume on their own gifts and graces, and now proceeds to set before them the doom of the greater part (v. 5) of God's favoured People, who forfeited the promised land, the type of Heaven, by carnal indulgence and recklessness.

2. ἐβαπτίσαντο] Literally, had themselves baptized: "ii se baptizandos præbuerunt" (see Valck. and Winer, p. 228); "baptismum susceperunt" (Bengel), a more appropriate and significant term than the reading of many uncial MSS. ἐβαπτίσθησαν, which was not likely to have been altered by the Copyists, if it had been used by the Apostle, Acts xxii. 16, ἀναστὰς βάπτισαι καὶ ἀπόλουσαι τὰς ἁμαρτίας σου. Compare ἀπελούσασθε, 1 Cor. vi. 11. The middle voice shows here the free-will and act of the recipient of baptism.

The sense is—The Israelites all offered themselves for baptism into Moses, that is, with a pledge of obedience to him and to the Law of which he was the minister (Gennadius, Photius), Exod. xiv. 31. Compare Matt. xxviii. 19, εἰς τὸ ὄνομα. So you Christians have been baptized into Christ. They received manifold special gifts from heaven, as ye have. But yet many of them rebelled, and were destroyed. Be ye, therefore, warned by them.

— ἐν τῇ νεφέλῃ] in the Cloud. Moses baptized in the Cloud and the Sea. But figuratively: the Sea foreshadowed the Water of Baptism; the Cloud, the Spirit; the Manna, the Bread of Life; the Drink, the Cup of Salvation (Greg. Nazian. Orat. 39, p. 688). Cp. S. Basil, de Spir. Sancto, cap. xiv. vol. iii. p. 26, where he says that "the Sea severing the Israelites from their enemies, Pharaoh and his host, figured Baptism delivering us from the tyranny of the Devil." So the Baptismal Office of the Church of England; "Almighty and Everlasting God, Who didst safely lead the Children of Israel, Thy People, through the Red Sea, figuring thereby Thy Holy Baptism."

S. Augustine considers the Red Sea as typical of Baptism in another respect, viz. as introductory to the other Sacrament (in Johann. Tract. xi.), as the passage of the Red Sea led to the feeding on the Manna.

"Mare autem rubrum quid significet, audi Apostolum: Nolo autem vos ignorare, fratres, quia omnes patres nostri sub nube fuerunt, et omnes per mare transierunt. Utquid per mare transierunt? quasi quæreres ab illo, secutus ait, Et omnes per Moysen baptizati sunt in nube et in mari. (1 Cor. x. 1, 2.) Si ergo figura maris tantum valuit, species Baptismi quantum valebit? Si quod gestum est in figurâ, trajectum populum ad manna perduxit; quid exhibebit Christus in veritate baptismi sui, trajecto per eum populo suo? Per baptismum suum trajicit credentes, occisis omnibus peccatis, tanquam hostibus consequentibus, sicut in illo mari omnes Ægyptii perierunt. Quo trajicit, fratres mei? quo trajicit per Baptismum Jesus, cujus figuram tunc gerebat Moyses, qui per mare trajiciebat? quo trajicit? Ad manna. Quod est manna? Ego sum, inquit, panis vivus, qui de cœlo descendi. (Joh. vi. 51.) Manna accipiunt fideles, jam trajecti per mare rubrum. Quare mare rubrum? jam mare, quare et rubrum? Significabat mare illud rubrum Baptismum Christi. Unde rubet baptismus Christi, nisi Christi sanguine consecratus? Quo ergo perducit credentes et baptizatos? Ad manna. Ecce dico manna: notum est quid acceperint Judæi, populus iste Israel, notum est quid illis pluisset Deus de cœlo; et nesciunt catechumeni quid accipiant Christiani. Erubescant ergo, quia nesciant; transeant per mare rubrum, manducent manna: ut quomodo crediderunt in nomine Jesu, sic se ipsis credat Jesus."

See also below on v. 6. Satan is our Pharaoh; Baptism is our Red Sea; the Gift of the Spirit is our living Water: Christ is our smitten Rock; smitten, as Man; but a Rock, as God. Cyril (in Caten.). See also below on v. 6.

3. πάντες τὸ αὐτό] All of them had the same privileges, but did not all make the same use of them. Some Expositors have supplied ἡμῖν after τὸ αὐτό, i. e. the same with us; but this seems to be incorrect.

βρῶμα πνευματικὸν ἔφαγον, [4] [c] καὶ πάντες τὸ αὐτὸ πνευματικὸν ἔπιον πόμα· ἔπινον γὰρ ἐκ πνευματικῆς ἀκολουθούσης πέτρας, ἡ δὲ πέτρα ἦν ὁ Χριστός.

c Exod. 17. 6. Num. 20. 11. & 21. 16. Ps. 78. 15.

— πνευματικόν] spiritual. The food here, and the drink in v. 4, are called spiritual, because they were Christ's body and blood in types. Bp. Fell.

Those things were representations, 'a parte ante,' of Christ's Body and Blood to be given for men; our Sacraments are representations, 'a parte post,' of Christ's Body and Blood actually given for men.

See above on 1 Cor. v. 7, 8.

4. ἔπινον γὰρ ἐκ πνευματικῆς ἀκολουθούσης πέτρας] for they were drinking from a spiritual, following, Rock. They were drinking, i. e. habitually; bibebant, something more than biberunt. "Bibebant de spiritali consequente eos petrâ." Irenæus, iv. 27, and iv. 14. Cp. Winer, § 40, p. 240.

(1) Some Expositors interpret these words by reference to the rabbinical tradition (see the authorities in Wetstein) that the Rock itself, which was smitten by Moses at God's command at Horeb, and from which the water flowed (Exod. xvii. 6), followed the Israelites in their wanderings through the desert, and supplied them with water.

(2) Others suppose that the stream, which gushed from the Rock, followed them in their journeyings; and that St. Paul, in saying that the Rock followed them, means that what issued from it accompanied them in a perennial river, flowing with them in their march. See Dr. Lightfoot here, and Joseph Mede's Essay, Discourse xliv. p. 246.

(3) But there does not seem to be any Scriptural authority for either of these two opinions; nor does either of them appear probable.

The former of them would be disproved at once, if, as some learned men affirm, the Rock of Rephidim smitten by Moses is still standing at Horeb. See the authorities in Kitto's Illustrations, pp. 122—125.

And the second opinion seems to be inconsistent with the sacred narrative, that they murmured for want of water, after the giving of water from Horeb. (Num. xx. 2—4; xxi. 5—17.) If they had a river flowing with them, this could hardly have been the case. Theodoret.

The testimony of Holy Scripture is uniform, to the effect, that in their wanderings through the wilderness, the Israelites were fed with a constant supply of Bread from heaven, and of Water from the Rock. See Exod. xvi. 4; xvii. 1—7. Deut. viii. 15. Ps. lxxviii. 15. 20; cv. 41; cxiv. 8. Nehem. ix. 15.

The impression produced by those passages is,—that as there were clouds wherever they went, from which the manna fell, so likewise there were Rocks from which the waters flowed. There was what Tertullian calls (de Pat. 5), "Mannæ escatilis pluvia, et petræ aquatilis sequela." Hence we find rocks mentioned (in the plural, צרים, tsurim) as giving water to the people. (Ps. lxxviii. 15.) And the word πέτρα is used generically in the New Testament for rocky soil, as in Luke viii. 6. 13, concerning the seed falling on rocky ground.

Wherever the Israelites were, there was a Rock,—not moving from place to place, which is contrary to the nature of a Rock, but one ready to supply them with water, by the Divine inwardly-working power of the ever-present spiritual agency and virtue of Christ which followed them, and made the material rock to gush out with water.

Hence the order of the words in this passage. St. Paul does not say ἐκ τῆς πνευματικῆς πέτρας τῆς ἀκολουθούσης, from the spiritual rock that followed them; but he says ἐκ πνευματικῆς ἀκολουθούσης πέτρας, from a spiritual following rock; and that Rock was Christ.

It was not any natural property of the material rock which sent forth the water to the Israelites. If it had been so, it would have sent forth water before that time. But it was another and spiritual Rock which wrought the whole work, and that was Christ, ever present with them, and working miraculously for them. Chrys. It was indeed a visible Rock which sent forth the water; it did not however do this by its own power, but by the virtue of the spiritual Rock, which was ever present in its energy, and supplied the needs of the thirsting multitude. Photius, in an excellent Scholium in Caten., p. 188, where read ἀνασιμούσης, in l. 12.

It was not the material rock that followed them; but it was the Divine Grace which made the material rock pour forth water wherever they went. Theodoret.

Observe also the preposition used by St. Paul; it is not ἀπὸ, but ἐκ. What they drank, they drank not from the material rock (which was incapable of yielding water), but they drank out of (ἐκ) a spiritual Rock, which was Christ. It was Christ, the spiritual Rock, Who gave them the water from the material rock; as it was Christ in the Brazen Serpent Who healed them when bitten by serpents. As the wise man says, "He that turned himself towards it, was not saved by the thing that he saw, but by Thee that art the Saviour of all." (Wisdom xvi. 7.)

This spiritual Rock might well be said ἀκολουθεῖν, to follow them. For its Virtue, which was Christ, appeared wheresoever they went; just as signs and wonders are said to have followed the first Preachers of the word of God (Mark xvi. 20), because Miracles appeared, in order to confirm it, wherever it was preached.

This Exposition is also illustrated by what St. Paul here declares, viz. that these things were τύποι ἡμῶν, figures of what now takes place in the Journey of the Christian Church through the wilderness of this world to her heavenly Canaan.

"The Rock was Christ." Therefore it was to be smitten only once,—smitten by the Rod of Moses,—smitten by God's command. So Christ was once smitten with the curse of the Law (Gal. iii. 10), of which the Rod was the instrument; and smitten for our sakes (Isa. liii. 4—6),—smitten, in order that all true Israelites, in every age of the Church, may drink the living waters of salvation from His wounded side. See John iv. 14. Mede, p. 248. Mather on the Types, p. 143.

And after that He had been once smitten, He was to be smitten no more. Christ, having died once, dieth no more (Rom. vi. 9), and He was offered once for all (Heb. ix. 28). He offered one sacrifice for sin (Heb. x. 12); and by one offering He hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified (Heb. x. 10), and there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins. (Heb. x. 26.)

Therefore the Rock in the wilderness was smitten but once. We hear of no more smiting of the Rock by God's command after Horeb. But still, wherever the Israelites were, they were to be refreshed by water from the Rock. How then was it to be educed? The Rock was to be spoken to (Num. xx. 8), but not to be smitten. The water was to be brought out by the Word, and not by the Rod, of Moses. And because, when the People murmured at Kadesh for lack of water, Moses "spake unadvisedly with his lips" (Ps. cvi. 33), and said, "Must we fetch you water out of this Rock?" (Num. xx. 10)—arrogating to himself the power of producing the water; whereas he was only an instrument in God's hands for its production; and because he smote the rock twice instead of speaking to it, therefore he was not permitted to enter the promised Land. (Num. xx. 12.)

It is necessary to observe carefully, that all these things were figures of us.

Christ was once smitten. He, Who is the Rock, the Rock of ages, was smitten once, and there came forth from His wounded side blood and water.

Those sacrificial and sacramental streams which were poured forth once for all on Calvary, are ever ready to flow from the Rock in every age of the pilgrimage of the Church to her heavenly Rest.

But how are they to be educed? How are they to be applied?

They are not to be had by smiting the Rock again. This is the error of the Church of Rome, which feigns that Christ is ever being smitten, ever being sacrificed. This is an error like unto that which excluded even Moses from the promised land. Those streams of living water are not to be rightly had by smiting the Rock, but by speaking to the Rock, which has been smitten once for all for our sakes, and which is ever present, ever following us, by virtue of the divine energy of Christ, ever ready to pour forth living streams for the cleansing and refreshing of our souls.

But how are these streams to be had? What is the instrumentality which God has appointed for making them flow? The Ministry of the Word; "accedit Verbum ad Elementum (says Aug.), et fit Sacramentum;" see below, note on Eph. v. 26.

The Christian Minister does not smite the Rock, but speaks to it, when he uses the divinely appointed words, "I baptize thee," and applies the sacramental water, which derives all its virtue from Christ's death, and flows, as it were, from His side, opened once for all, for the mystical washing away of sin.

He does not smite the Rock, but he speaks to it, when he uses the divinely appointed words, "This is My Body, this is My Blood," and exhibits and dispenses that sacramental grace which derives its virtue from Christ's death, and flows from the Rock smitten once for all, for our sakes.

Thus the punishment of Moses affords a double warning to Christ's Ministers;

(1) That they should not imagine that they themselves are sources of divine Grace. They are only channels. Let them not say, "Shall we fetch you water out of the Rock?" The spiritual water which they supply is not the gift of men, but of Christ.

(2) That they should not smite the Rock which has been d Num. 14. 23, 37. & 26. 64, 65. e Num. 11. 4, 33. Ps. 106. 14. f Exod. 32. 6.

g Num. 25. 1, 9. Ps. 106. 28.
h Exod. 17. 2, 7. Num. 21. 6. Ps. 78. 18, 56. & 95. 9. & 106. 14. i Exod. 16. 2. & 17. 2. Num. 14. 2, 29, 36. Ps. 106. 25.
j Rom. 15. 4. ch. 9. 10.
k Rom. 11. 20. ch. 1. 8, 9. 1 Thess. 5. 24. 2 Thess. 3. 3. 2 Tim. 2. 11—13. Heb. 6. 18. 2 Pet. 1. 5. & 2. 9.
l Ps. 125. 3. Dan. 3. 17. Luke 22. 32. John 10. 28—30. Rom. 8. 28, 29. 2 Cor. 1. 10. & 12. 8—10. 2 Tim 4. 18. 1 Pet. 1. 5. 2 Pet. 2. 9.

5 [d] Ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐν τοῖς πλείοσιν αὐτῶν ηὐδόκησεν ὁ Θεός· κατεστρώθησαν γὰρ ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ.

6 [e] Ταῦτα δὲ τύποι ἡμῶν ἐγενήθησαν, εἰς τὸ μὴ εἶναι ἡμᾶς ἐπιθυμητὰς κακῶν, καθὼς κἀκεῖνοι ἐπεθύμησαν. 7 [f] Μηδὲ εἰδωλολάτραι γίνεσθε, καθώς τινες αὐτῶν, ὡς γέγραπται, Ἐκάθισεν ὁ λαὸς φαγεῖν καὶ πιεῖν, καὶ ἀνέστησαν παίζειν· 8 [g] μηδὲ πορνεύωμεν, καθώς τινες αὐτῶν ἐπόρνευσαν, καὶ ἔπεσαν ἐν μιᾷ ἡμέρᾳ εἰκοσιτρεῖς χιλιάδες. 9 [h] Μηδὲ ἐκπειράζωμεν τὸν Χριστὸν, καθώς τινες αὐτῶν ἐπείρασαν, καὶ ὑπὸ τῶν ὄφεων ἀπώλοντο. 10 [i] Μηδὲ γογγύζετε, καθώς τινες αὐτῶν ἐγόγγυσαν, καὶ ἀπώλοντο ὑπὸ τοῦ ὀλοθρευτοῦ. 11 [j] Ταῦτα δὲ πάντα τυπικῶς συνέβαινον ἐκείνοις· ἐγράφη δὲ πρὸς νουθεσίαν ἡμῶν, εἰς οὓς τὰ τέλη τῶν αἰώνων κατήντηκεν.

12 [k] Ὥστε ὁ δοκῶν ἑστάναι βλεπέτω μὴ πέσῃ.

13 [k] Πειρασμὸς ὑμᾶς οὐκ εἴληφεν, εἰ μὴ ἀνθρώπινος· [l] πιστὸς δὲ ὁ Θεὸς, ὃς οὐκ ἐάσει ὑμᾶς πειρασθῆναι ὑπὲρ ὃ δύνασθε, ἀλλὰ ποιήσει σὺν τῷ πειρασμῷ καὶ τὴν ἔκβασιν, τοῦ δύνασθαι ὑπενεγκεῖν.

---

once smitten. They are not to suppose that Christ is to be again slain; or that the ever to be repeated Sacrament of the Altar repeats or continues the One Sacrifice of Calvary. But they must continually speak to the Rock which has been once smitten. Their office is to elicit the streams of living water by the Ministry of the Word, and to dispense them for the cleansing and refreshing of the souls of all true Children of Abraham in every stage of the journey of the Church through the wilderness of the world.

Thus discharging the duties of their Ministry they may escape the Massahs and Meribahs of controversy, and find a place of rest for their own souls in their heavenly inheritance.

See below on Heb. x. 12.

5. ἐν τοῖς πλείοσιν] with the most part. A. V. R.

6. τύποι ἡμῶν] figures of us,—of our privileges, and of our duties, and of our dangers. See above, vv. 2 and 4.

On the figurative character of the pilgrimage of the Israelites in the wilderness, see particularly the interesting Letter of S. Jerome to Fabiola, De xlii. Mansionibus Israëlitarum in Deserto, vol. ii. pp. 586—605. See also S. Macarius (Homil. 47, p. 227, of Greg. Thaumaturg. Opera) for a valuable exposition and application, in a Christian sense, of the deliverance of the Israelites from Egypt by the passage of the Red Sea, the Paschal Lamb, the bitter herbs, the spoiling of the Egyptians, the spring-time of the Passover, the attitude of those who ate it, the darkness of the night in which they escaped from Egypt, the passage of the Sea, the song of deliverance, the change of the bitter waters of Marah into sweet, by the casting in of Wood, and other circumstances of the Exodus, containing materials for Homilies at Easter.

With much propriety, therefore, has the Church appointed the cxivth Psalm—"When Israel came out of Egypt, and the house of Jacob from a people of a strange language, Judah was His (God's) sanctuary, and Israel His dominion. The Sea saw that and fled"—to be sung on Easter Day.

S. Macarius ends with saying, All these things that happened to the Israelites were figures of what is now vouchsafed to us. The ancient Dispensation was a shadow of the Gospel. Their Circumcision, the Tabernacle, the Ark, the Pot of Manna, the Priesthood, the Incense, the Ablutions, and whatever else was done under Moses and the Prophets, was done for the sake of the human soul, which having been created in God's image, fell into bondage and darkness, and has now been espoused to Christ.

The following is from S. Augustine (Serm. iv. 9):—

Persecutores Ægyptii et Pharao persequuntur exeuntes de Ægypto Judæos: persequuntur populum Christianum peccata ipsorum, et Diabolus princeps peccatorum. Sed sicut Judæos usque ad mare persequuntur Ægyptii; sic Christianos usque ad Baptismum persequuntur peccata.

Intendite, fratres, et videte: liberantur per mare Judæi, obruuntur in mari Ægyptii: liberantur Christiani in remissione peccatorum, delentur peccata per Baptismum. Exeunt post mare Rubrum, et ambulant per eremum: sic et Christiani post Baptismum nondum sunt in terra repromissionis, sed sunt in spe.

Sæculum autem hoc eremus est; et verè Christiano est eremus post Baptismum, si intelligat quod accepit. Si non solùm signa corporalia in illo fiant, sed si etiam in corde spiritualis effectus, intelligit sibi eremum esse istum mundum, intelligit in peregrinatione se vivere, patriam desiderare. Quamdiu autem desiderat, in spe est.

Audi Apostolum, quia ista figuræ nostræ fuerunt. Nolo enim, inquit, vos ignorare, fratres, quia omnes patres nostri sub nube fuerunt. Si sub nube fuerunt, sub caligine fuerunt. Quid est, sub caligine fuerunt? Non eis intelligentibus spiritualiter, quæ cum eis corporaliter agebantur. Et omnes per mare transierunt, et omnes in Moyse baptizati sunt, et omnes eumdem cibum spiritualem manducaverunt. Datum est enim illis manna in deserto (Exod. xvi. 15), sicut nobis datur dulcedo Scripturarum, ut duremus in istâ eremo vitæ humanæ. Et norunt quale manna accipiunt Christiani, quibus dixit ipse Psalmus, Gustate et videte, quàm suavis est Dominus (Ps. xxxiv. 8). Et omnes, inquit, eumdem cibum spiritualem manducaverunt. Quid est, eumdem? Idem significantem. Et omnes eumdem potum spiritualem biberunt. Et attende quomodo unam rem exposuit, et cætera tacuit: Bibebant enim de spirituali sequente petrâ: petra autem erat Christus. Hæc autem figuræ nostræ fuerunt. (1 Cor. x. 1—6.) Illis sunt exhibitæ, sed figuræ nostræ fuerunt: quia illis corporaliter exhibebantur, nobis spiritualiter significabantur. Ergo illi qui corporaliter ea tenuerunt, ad vetus Testamentum pertinuerunt. On this important subject see above, the notes on Exodus xii., xiii., xiv., and passim.

7. Ἐκάθισεν—παίζειν] The people sat down to eat and drink and rose up to play. Exod. xxxii. 6, literally from LXX. Παίζειν describes the wanton dancing round the idol. The text is cited to show that Idolatry is often a consequence of Gluttony; and that in eating meats offered to idols the Corinthians might easily be tempted to Idolatry, and also to Fornication, which at Corinth was associated with Idolatry. The word παίζειν, to play, includes both sins. See the authorities in Wetstein here.

8. εἰκοσιτρεῖς χιλιάδες] twenty-three thousand. In Numbers xxv. 9, twenty-four thousand are mentioned as having died in the plague. St. Paul speaks of the mortality of one day only, Moses of the whole. And as both these numbers are round numbers, perhaps the precise sum may be between the two. Bengel. Cp. Heb. iii. 16, 17.

9. Χριστόν] Christ. From this and other passages (e. g. Heb. xi. 26) the Fathers inferred that the Eternal Word of God revealed Himself, before His Incarnation, by Angels to the Patriarchs, and administered the affairs of the Old Dispensation. See S. Cyril, Cat. x. 6, 7. Euseb. E. H. 1—3, and Bp. Fell here.

— τῶν ὄφεων] the serpents of fire. Num. xxi. 6.

10. ἐγόγγυσαν] they murmured. In Egypt, where they had meat enough, they murmured for want of liberty. (Exod. i. 14.) In the wilderness, where they had liberty enough, they murmured for want of meat, and would have exchanged their liberty for the flesh-pots of Egypt. Num. xi. 5. Bp. Sanderson (i. 158).

11. τυπικῶς] figuratively. So A, B, C, K, and many Fathers; a better reading than that of Elz., τύποι. These things did not happen to them as types or examples, but they happened to them τυπικῶς, i. e. typically, so that they might see Christ and Christians in them, by the eye of Faith.

— κατήντηκεν] have come. So B, D*, E*, F, G, and several Fathers; a better reading than that of Elz., κατήντησεν.

13. ὑπὲρ ὃ δύνασθε] above your power; 'suprà quod potestis.' There is no ellipsis here any more than in the Latin 'possunt, quia posse videntur.' Cp. Winer, § 64. p. 520.

— σὺν τῷ πειρασμῷ καὶ τὴν ἔκβασιν] with the trial will give 14 [m] Διόπερ, ἀγαπητοί μου, φεύγετε ἀπὸ τῆς εἰδωλολατρείας. 15 Ὡς φρονί- m 2 Cor. 6. 17. 1 John 5. 12.

μοις λέγω· κρίνατε ὑμεῖς ὃ φημι.
16 [n] Τὸ ποτήριον τῆς εὐλογίας ὃ εὐλογοῦμεν, οὐχὶ κοινωνία τοῦ αἵματος n Matt. 26. 26. ch. 11. 23, 24.

the escape; intimating that God never sends trials which have no egress.

— τοῦ δύνασθαι] that ye may be able to bear it. As to this use of the infinitive after τοῦ, see Matt. iii. 13; xiii. 3; xxiv. 45. Luke ii. 27; v. 7; xxi. 22; xxii. 31. Acts iii. 2. Winer, § 44, p. 290.

14. φεύγετε ἀπό] fly ye from; fly all occasions, such as Feasts and Meetings, which minister to Idolatry. A stronger expression than φεύγετε with an accusative.

15. κρίνατε ὑμεῖς] judge ye. A precept showing that divine Grace does not exclude, but rather presumes, the use of Human Reason. As Hooker observes, against those who would annul the office of Reason in matters of Religion (Pref. E. P. c. 3):—

The first mean whereby Nature teacheth men to judge good from evil, as well in laws as in other things, is the force of their own discretion. Hereunto, therefore, St. Paul referreth oftentimes his own speech, to be considered of by them that heard him. "I speak as to them which have understanding, judge ye what I say" (1 Cor. x. 15). Again, afterward, "Judge in yourselves, is it comely that a woman pray uncovered?" (1 Cor. xi. 13.) The exercise of this kind of judgment our Saviour requireth of the Jews. (Luke xii. 56, 57.) In them of Berea the Scripture commendeth it. (Acts xvii. 11.) Finally, whatsoever we do, if our own secret judgment consent not unto it, as fit and good to be done, the doing of it to us is sin, although the thing itself be allowable. St. Paul's rule, therefore, generally is, "Let every man in his own mind be fully persuaded of that thing which he either alloweth or doth" (Rom. xiv. 5).

16—21.] For an exposition of these verses, with a special reference to the Romish, Lutheran, Calvinistic, and Zwinglian interpretations of them, see Waterland on the Doctrine of the Eucharist, chap. viii. vol. vii. pp. 196—234.

16. Τὸ ποτήριον] The Cup. St. Paul proceeds to confirm his argument against fornication and participation in idolatrous meals, by considerations drawn from the institution, administration, and reception of the Holy Communion; thus showing, by an example, the important bearing of that Holy Sacrament on Christian life and practice.

It is remarkable that here and v. 21 St. Paul introduces the mention of the Eucharistic Cup before that of the Bread.

Why was this?

(1) Perhaps there was more danger of those immoral and lascivious consequences, against which he is writing, from excesses in the Wine at the idolatrous feasts than in the Meats; and therefore even more danger of an unworthy reception of the Holy Communion from participation in the Cup of devils than in the table of devils.

(2) The Apostle has also thus shown the essential independence of the Cup, as a necessary part of the Holy Communion, and supplies a caution against the Romish Error, that as blood is contained in the human body, so Christ's blood, as well as body, is exhibited in one kind in the Holy Eucharist (Concil. Trid. Sess. xiii.), and that consequently the Cup may be withheld from the faithful.

(3) As in the various Scriptural passages which mention the Three Persons of the Ever-blessed Trinity, each is severally put first in order to show their equality (Matt. xxviii. 19. 2 Cor. xiii. 13. Eph. iv. 3—6), so in the Scriptural passages which mention the Eucharistic elements, each is severally put first to show their equal dignity, and the equal necessity of receiving each. On this passage, compare notes below on xiv. 16.

— Τὸ ποτήριον τῆς εὐλογίας] The Cup of the Blessing. The Cup, of which the characteristic is, Blessing. The Genitive is used according to a Hebrew idiom (see Vorst. de Hebraism. N. T. pp. 252. 573, and Note on Matt. xxiv. 15, and Luke xiii. 27; xviii. 6. Acts ix. 15) with a pregnant significance; the Cup which received the blessing from Christ at the institution of the Holy Supper, and which is consecrated with a blessing from us at its administration, and which is one of the appointed means for conveying a blessing to those who receive it worthily.

The following important passage describes the primitive use of the Christian Church in the Administration of the Holy Communion; Justin Martyr (Apol. § 84, 85), προσφέρεται τῷ προεστῶτι τῶν ἀδελφῶν ἄρτος, καὶ ποτήριον ὕδατος καὶ κράματος, καὶ οὗτος λαβὼν αἶνον καὶ δόξαν τῷ Πατρὶ τῶν ὅλων διὰ τοῦ ὀνόματος τοῦ Υἱοῦ καὶ τοῦ Πνεύματος Ἁγίου ἀναπέμπει, καὶ εὐχαριστίαν ὑπὲρ τοῦ κατηξιῶσθαι τούτων παρ' αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ πολὺ ποιεῖται· οὗ συντελέσαντος τὰς εὐχὰς καὶ τὴν εὐχαριστίαν πᾶς ὁ παρὼν λαὸς ἐπευφημεῖ λέγων, Ἀμήν. Εὐχαριστήσαντος δὲ τοῦ προεστῶτος καὶ ἐπευφημήσαντος παντὸς τοῦ λαοῦ, οἱ καλούμενοι παρ' ἡμῖν διάκονοι διδόασιν ἑκάστῳ τῶν παρόντων μεταλαβεῖν ἀπὸ τοῦ εὐχαριστηθέντος οἴνου καὶ ὕδατος, καὶ τοῖς οὐ παροῦσιν ἀποφέρουσι. Καὶ ἡ τροφὴ αὕτη καλεῖται παρ' ἡμῖν Εὐχαριστία. For an English translation of the above extract, see below on xiv. 15.

Having stated that no one is admitted to partake of the Holy Eucharist who does not believe the Articles of the Faith, and has not been baptized in "the laver for the remission of Sins and Regeneration," and who does not live a holy life as Christ has commanded, S. Justin Martyr adds,—We do not receive this bread as common bread, and this drink as common drink; but, as Jesus Christ our Saviour, being Incarnate by the divine Word, had flesh and blood for our salvation, so we are taught that the food which has been blest with thanksgiving (εὐχαριστηθεῖσαν) by means of the Prayer of the Word received from Him, and from which by transmutation our blood and flesh are nourished, is the flesh and blood of that Jesus Who was incarnate. For the Apostles in their Records, which are called Gospels, deliver, that Jesus commanded, and that when He had taken bread and given thanks, He said, "Do this in remembrance of Me. This is My Body."

See also S. Cyril Hierosol. Catech. Myst. v. c. 7, who says, "We beseech the all-merciful God to send the Holy Ghost upon the Elements, that He may make the bread Christ's body, and the wine Christ's blood." As to the sense of these words, see Waterland on the Eucharist, chap. x. vol. vii. p. 294; and on the Prayer of Invocation in the Holy Communion, see Bingham xv. 3. 11, Brett's Collection of the principal Liturgies, A.D. 1720, Daniel's Codex Liturgicus, iv. pp. 69. 411. 572, Lips. 1853, and Neale's Ancient Liturgies, 1858.

It is observable that two of the Evangelists, Matthew (xxvi. 26) and Mark (xiv. 22), use the word εὐλογήσας in their description of Christ's action at the institution of the Lord's Supper, before the consecration of the Bread; and St. Luke (xxii. 19) and St. Paul (1 Cor. xi. 24) use the word εὐχαριστήσας; but in the benediction of the Cup, St. Matthew (xxvi. 27) and St. Mark (xiv. 23) use the word εὐχαριστήσας, whereas St. Paul uses the word εὐλογία here.

This appears to be an example of the agency of Divine Inspiration giving a fuller and clearer view of what was in the Divine Mind of Christ, by means of variety of expression. See Preface to the Gospels, p. xxii.

The action of Christ in the institution of the Lord's Supper was eucharistic and also eulogistic; it was one of Thanksgiving, and one of Benediction; and in the application of each of the terms to each of the elements by the writers of Holy Scripture, we learn more fully and clearly what the true character of the Holy Communion is, and what are our duties in its administration and reception.

On this subject see further on 1 Cor. xi. 24, 25.

— κοινωνία τοῦ αἵματος] the Communion of the Blood. St. Paul supplies by the word κοινωνία, which he uses twice in reference to the Holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, an important article of doctrine as to its true nature and use. It is the Communion of the Body and Blood of Christ, the divinely appointed means for communicating His Body and Blood. And thus he explains our Lord's words as recorded in the sixth chapter of St. John (vi. 51—56).

S. Chrys. asks well, "Why does not St. Paul use the word μετοχή (participation) here? why does he use the word κοινωνία (communion)? In order to show the intimacy of our union herein. For we communicate not only by participation (μετοχή), but by union (τῷ ἑνοῦσθαι); κοινωνία,—connected with σὺν,—marks coherence. We are united to Christ by this Bread, as that Body has been united to Him—and He has given us His Body in order that by communion with it, we may be delivered from the body of death, and be attempered (ἀνακερασθῶμεν) by it to everlasting life." See on v. 17.

S. Chrysostom dwells here, and more at length on v. 24, on the important doctrine that communion with Christ's body in the Holy Eucharist is the appointed means to the faithful for the sanctification, and for the preservation, of their bodies, as well as of their souls, to everlasting life: a doctrine happily embodied by the Church of England in the prayer of her Communicants, that their sinful bodies may be made clean by His body, as well as their souls washed by His most precious blood, and in the words with which she distributes both the elements to her Communicants. "The Body of our Lord Jesus Christ which was given for thee, preserve thy body and soul unto everlasting life." A doctrine too little regarded by many, who neglect the divinely τοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐστι, τὸν ἄρτον, ὃν κλῶμεν, οὐχὶ κοινωνία τοῦ σώματος τοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐστιν; [17] ° ὅτι εἷς ἄρτος, ἓν σῶμα οἱ πολλοί ἐσμεν· οἱ γὰρ πάντες ἐκ τοῦ ἑνὸς ἄρτου μετέχομεν. [18] ᵖ Βλέπετε τὸν Ἰσραὴλ κατὰ σάρκα· οὐχ οἱ ἐσθίοντες τὰς θυσίας κοινωνοὶ τοῦ θυσιαστηρίου εἰσί; [19] ᵠ Τί οὖν φημι; ὅτι εἰδωλόθυτον τί ἐστιν, ἢ ὅτι εἴδωλον τί ἐστιν; [20] ʳ ἀλλ' ὅτι ἃ θύουσι τὰ ἔθνη, δαιμονίοις θύει, καὶ οὐ Θεῷ· οὐ θέλω δὲ ὑμᾶς κοινωνοὺς τῶν δαιμονίων γίνεσθαι.

o Rom. 12. 5. ch. 12. 12, 27. Gal. 3. 26, 28. Eph. 1. 22, 23. & 2. 15, 16. & 3. 6. & 4. 12, 13, 25. Col. 2. 19. & 3. 11, 15. p Lev. 3. 3. & 7. 15.
q ch. 8. 4.
r Lev. 17. 7. Deut. 32. 17. Ps. 106. 37. Rev. 9. 20.

appointed means offered them for the happiness of their bodies in a glorious Resurrection and a blissful Immortality. Cp. Irenæus v. 2, 3.

Some false Teachers, in ancient times, took upon them to reject the doctrine of the Resurrection of the body, conceiving that the disembodied soul only had any concern in a life to come. Here, again, the Sacrament of the Eucharist was a kind of armour of proof against the seducers. For as the consecrated Bread and Wine were the authentic symbols of Christ's Body and Blood, and were, in construction and certain effect (though not in substance), the same with what they stood for, to all worthy receivers; it was manifest, that bodies so incorporated with the body of Christ, must of course be partners with it in a glorious Resurrection. Thus was the Eucharist considered as a sure and certain pledge to all good men of the future Resurrection of their bodies, symbolically fed with the Body of Christ. For like as the branches partake of the vine, and the members of the head, so the bodies of the faithful, being by the Eucharist incorporate with Christ's glorified body, must of consequence appertain to it, and be glorified with it. This is the argument which the Christian Fathers insisted upon, and with this they prevailed (Ignat. Epist. ad Ephes. cap. xx. p. 19. Irenæus, lib. iv. cap. 18, p. 251; lib. v. cap. 2, p. 294. Tertull. de Resurr. Carnis, cap. viii. p. 330, Rigalt. Conf. Athanas. Epist. iv. ad Serap. p. 710, edit. Bened.). Waterland on the doctrinal use of the Sacraments (vol. viii. p. 132).

The reader's attention is invited to the words of Hooker on this important subject, as quoted in the note on John vi. 25, especially the paragraphs beginning, "Thus much they knew."

On the doctrine of the Holy Eucharist, the reader may see what has been already offered to his consideration in the notes on John vi. 52—63, and the "Review" at the end of that chapter. Compare notes above, 1 Cor. v. 7, 8; x. 4. 16—20, and below, notes on Heb. x. 12; xiii. 10.

With regard to the unspeakable mystery of the manner of the communication of the Body and Blood of Christ to us in the Holy Eucharist, the more learned and wise, the more devout and holy a man is, the less will he be disposed to indulge in curious speculations and presumptuous dogmatism, and the more ready he will be to adopt the wise and reverent language of Hooker, as quoted in the note below on Eph. v. 30, to which may be added what the same author writes,—

There are but three Expositions made of "This is My body;"

The first, this is in itself before participation really and truly the natural substance of My body, by reason of the co-existence which my omnipotent body hath with the sanctified element of bread; which is the Lutheran's interpretation;

The second, "This is itself, and before participation, the very true and natural substance of My body, by force of that Deity which, with the words of consecration, abolisheth the substance of bread, and substituteth in the place thereof my Body;" which is the Popish construction.

The last, "This hallowed food, through concurrence of divine power, is in verity and truth unto faithful receivers, instrumentally a cause of that mystical participation, whereby as I made myself wholly theirs, so I give them in hand an actual possession of all such saving grace as My sacrificed body can yield, and as their souls do presently need, this is to them and in them My Body."

Of these three rehearsed interpretations, the last hath in it nothing but what the rest do all approve and acknowledge to be most true, nothing but that which the words of Christ are on all sides confessed to enforce, nothing but that which the Church of God hath always thought necessary, nothing but that which alone is thought necessary for every Christian man to believe concerning the use and force of this Sacrament; finally, nothing but that wherewith the writings of all Antiquity are consonant, and all Christian Confessions agreeable. And as truth in what kind soever is by no kind of truth gainsayed, so the mind which resteth itself on this, is never troubled with those perplexities which the other do both find, by means of so great contradiction between their opinions and true principles of reason grounded upon experience, nature, and sense.

Such as love piety will, as much as in them lieth, know all things that God commandeth, but especially the duties of service which they owe to God. As for His dark and hidden works, they prefer, as becometh them in such cases, simplicity of faith before that knowledge, which, curiously sifting what it should adore, and disputing too boldly of that which the wit of man cannot search, chilleth for the most part all warmth of zeal, and bringeth soundness of belief many times into great hazard.

Let it, therefore, be sufficient for me, presenting myself at the Lord's Table, to know what there I receive from Him, without searching or inquiring of the manner how Christ performeth His promise. Let disputes and questions, enemies to piety, abatements of true devotion, and hitherto in this cause but overpatiently heard, let them take their rest. Let curious and sharp-witted men beat their heads about what questions themselves will. The very letter of the word of Christ giveth plain security that these mysteries do as nails fasten us to His very cross, that by them we draw out, as touching efficacy, force, and virtue, even the blood of His gored side; in the wounds of our Redeemer we there dip our tongues, we are dyed red both within and without, our hunger is satisfied, and our thirst for ever quenched; they are things wonderful which he feeleth, great which he seeth, and unheard of which he uttereth, whose soul is possessed of this Paschal Lamb, and made joyful in the strength of this new wine; this Bread hath in it more than the substance which our eyes behold; this Cup, hallowed with solemn benediction, availeth to the endless life and welfare both of soul and body, in that it serveth as well for a medicine to heal our infirmities, and purge our sins, as for a sacrifice of Thanksgiving; with touching it sanctifieth, it enlighteneth with belief, it truly conformeth us unto the image of Jesus Christ; what these elements are in themselves it skilleth not; it is enough that to me which take them they are the Body and Blood of Christ; His promise in witness hereof sufficeth, His word He knoweth which way to accomplish. Why should any cogitation possess the mind of a faithful communicant but this, O my God, Thou art true, O my soul, thou art happy? Hooker.

— τὸν ἄρτον] the Bread. He still calls it bread, even after consecration. And so 1 Cor. xi. 26. And so the ancient Canon of the Mass,—still retained in the Missal as a witness against Transubstantiation (see on Matt. xxvi. 26). And yet it is the communion of the Body of Christ.

17. εἷς ἄρτος] one Bread—marking Unity among many: wherein many grains are kneaded together. See on Matt. xxvi. 26. As Augustine says, in Johann. Tract. 27, "Dominus noster Jesus Christus corpus et sanguinem suum in eis rebus commendavit, quæ ad unum aliquid rediguntur ex multis. Namque aliud in unum ex multis granis conflt, aliud in unum ex multis acinis confluit." Some translate ἄρτος here loaf: but they could not all partake of one loaf.

— μετέχομεν] we are partakers. We must distinguish between μετέχειν and κοινωνεῖν; μετέχειν is properly to take a part of a thing with others who have also their several shares; but κοινωνεῖν is to partake in common with others in one undivided thing. See Chrys. and Waterland vii. 127. The Holy Eucharist is a Communion to us of the one body and blood of Christ. And we are all joint partakers with each other of that one Body and Blood. See above on v. 16.

18. Βλέπετε τὸν Ἰσραὴλ κατὰ σάρκα] Consider the Israel after the flesh. Consider the example of Jews, who are the mere carnal Israel, for ye who belong to the Christian Church are the spiritual Israel. They who eat of the Levitical Sacrifices, are communicants of the altar in the Temple. So you, if you eat of idolatrous sacrifices, communicate in the worship, and are subject to the influence, of the deity to whom they are offered.

20. ἀλλ'] nay, but.

— δαιμονίοις—οὐ Θεῷ] to Devils—not to God: from LXX of Deut. xxxii. 17, ἔθυσαν δαιμονίοις, καὶ οὐ Θεῷ, said of Israel worshipping idols in the wilderness. Cp. Acts vii. 43.

Nos unum Deum colimus: cæteros ipsi putatis Deos esse quos nos dæmonas scimus. Tertullian (ad Scap. 3).

Worship offered to any but the One True God, is accounted by God to be offered to Devils who do exist, although it be 21 [s] Οὐ δύνασθε ποτήριον Κυρίου πίνειν καὶ ποτήριον δαιμονίων· οὐ δύνασθε τραπέζης Κυρίου μετέχειν, καὶ τραπέζης δαιμονίων. 22 [t*] Ἢ παραζηλοῦμεν τὸν Κύριον; μὴ ἰσχυρότεροι αὐτοῦ ἐσμεν;

23 [u] Πάντα ἔξεστιν, ἀλλ' οὐ πάντα συμφέρει· πάντα ἔξεστιν, ἀλλ' οὐ πάντα οἰκοδομεῖ· 24 [x] μηδεὶς τὸ ἑαυτοῦ ζητείτω, ἀλλὰ τὸ τοῦ ἑτέρου.

25 Πᾶν τὸ ἐν μακέλλῳ πωλούμενον ἐσθίετε, μηδὲν ἀνακρίνοντες διὰ τὴν συνείδησιν· 26 [y] τοῦ Κυρίου γὰρ ἡ γῆ καὶ τὸ πλήρωμα αὐτῆς. 27 Εἴ τις καλεῖ ὑμᾶς τῶν ἀπίστων, καὶ θέλετε πορεύεσθαι, πᾶν τὸ παρατιθέμενον ὑμῖν ἐσθίετε, μηδὲν ἀνακρίνοντες διὰ τὴν συνείδησιν. 28 [z] Ἐὰν δέ τις ὑμῖν εἴπῃ, Τοῦτο εἰδωλόθυτόν ἐστι, μὴ ἐσθίετε, δι' ἐκεῖνον τὸν μηνύσαντα, καὶ τὴν συνείδησιν· 29 [a] συνείδησιν δὲ λέγω, οὐχὶ τὴν ἑαυτοῦ, ἀλλὰ τὴν τοῦ ἑτέρου.—Ἱνατί γὰρ ἡ ἐλευθερία μου κρίνεται ὑπὸ ἄλλης συνειδήσεως; 30 [b] εἰ ἐγὼ χάριτι μετέχω, τί βλασφημοῦμαι ὑπὲρ οὗ ἐγὼ εὐχαριστῶ;—

31 [c] Εἴτε οὖν ἐσθίετε εἴτε πίνετε, εἴτε τὶ ποιεῖτε, πάντα εἰς δόξαν Θεοῦ ποιεῖτε.

s Deut. 32. 38. 2 Cor. 6. 15.
t Exod. 20. 5. & 34. 14. Deut. 4. 24. & 6. 15. & 32. 16, 21. u ch. 6. 12. & 8. 9. Rom. 14. 15, 20.
x Rom. 15. 1, 2. ch. 9. 19, 23. & 13. 5. Phil. 2. 4, 5, 21.
y Exod. 19. 5. Deut. 10. 14. Job 41. 11. Ps. 24. 1 & 50. 12. & ver. 28. z ch. 8. 10, 11. & ver. 26. Exod. 9. 29.
a 1 Cor. 8. 10—12
b Rom. 14. 6. 1 Tim. 4. 4.
c Col. 3. 17.

---

offered by man to idols (e. g. Jupiter, Venus, Bacchus, &c.) which do not exist.

— κοινωνοὺς τῶν δαιμονίων] communicants of devils. He had spoken of the Communion of the Body and Blood of Christ (v. 16); meaning thereby a Communion of His Body broken, and of His Blood shed on the Cross. He now speaks of a Communion of Devils; meaning thereby a Communion of devilish influences infused into those who are guilty of acts of idolatrous worship. See Tertullian, de Spectac. 25, 26, speaking of a woman who became possessed of an Evil Spirit while present at a heathen theatre. Cp. Waterland, vii. p. 218.

21. Οὐ δύνασθε] Ye cannot morally do so. See 1 Cor. iii. 11, "Other foundation can no man lay." And Glass. Phil. Sacr. p. 361; and on Mark vi. 5.

— ποτήριον δαιμονίων] the cup of devils, with libations from which the sacrificial meats were polluted. See on v. 28.

— τραπέζης] table. There were sacred tables in almost all the Heathen Temples of ancient Greece. See Valck. here, who quotes Cic. de Nat. Deor. iii. 34, "Mensas argenteas (Dionysius) de omnibus delubris jussit auferri."

23. Πάντα ἔξεστιν] So the best MSS. Elz. inserts μοι after πάντα.

24. τοῦ ἑτέρου] of his neighbour (vi. 1). Elz. adds ἕκαστος, not in the best MSS.

25. ἐν μακέλλῳ] in the shambles; Lat. in macello. It may be a word of Greek origin from μάκελλα (cp. 'abattoir'), but seems rather to have been introduced by intercourse with Rome. See Valck. In the Greek Glossaries it is explained by κρεοπωλεῖον. Much of the sacrifices offered in the temples was sold by the Priests to those who traded in the shambles.

— διὰ τὴν συνείδησιν] on account of the conscience of the seller, and of others who may be tempted to idolatry, or confirmed in it, by seeing that you eat what has been offered to idols, and is known to you as such.

One of the modes devised by heathen Persecutors (e. g. the Emperor Maximin), in order to tempt the Christians of primitive times, was to slaughter all animals at heathen altars before they were offered for sale in the shambles, and to sprinkle them with libations from the altars. Lactant. (de Mort. Persec. c. 37). Euseb. (de Martyr. Palæst. 9).

26. τοῦ Κυρίου γὰρ—αὐτῆς] for the Earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof. Verbatim from LXX, Ps. xxiii. 1. Every thing is God's and Christ's, and therefore yours. See on iii. 23.

27. πᾶν τὸ παρατιθέμενον ὑμῖν ἐσθίετε] every thing that is set before you eat ye. A quotation, it seems, from St. Luke's Gospel, x. 8. Compare below note on 2 Cor. viii. 18, and above on Luke x. 7.

— διὰ τὴν συνείδησιν] for the conscience sake. See v. 25.

28. Τοῦτο εἰδωλόθυτον] This is idolothytum, as you would call it. Even a Heathen might so speak, adopting, with something of an ironical sneer, the phrase of the Christian. Or the words may be supposed to be from the mouth of a brother Christian guest, warning his friend not to eat of the meat in question. The reading ἱερόθυτον, adopted by some Editors from A, B, H, against the testimony of C, D, E, F, G, I, K, seems to be a correction of the copyists.

— συνείδησιν] Elz. adds τοῦ γὰρ Κυρίου ἡ γῆ καὶ τὸ πλήρωμα αὐτῆς, which is not in the best MSS. and Editions, and disturbs the flow of the sense, and has been probably imported from v. 26.

29. τοῦ ἑτέρου] of the other, the neighbour (vi. 1), of him who had given the information.

29, 30. Ἱνατί γὰρ—εὐχαριστῶ] For, why is my liberty to be judged by another conscience, and not my own? If I partake thankfully, why am I to be evil spoken of for that for which I give thanks? This has been explained thus by some learned Expositors: For why shall I so use my liberty as to be condemned by another man's conscience? And although I give thanks for what I eat, why should I expose myself to be censured as an Idolater for those meats which I receive with thankfulness?

But this exposition of the words does not appear to be satisfactory; and it seems that they ought rather to be regarded as a recital of an objection made by a Corinthian Christian interlocutor, expressing his surprise at the Apostle's restriction of the liberty and power in which he so much gloried. What! Is then my Christian liberty to be condemned under the influence of the weak scruples of another man's conscience? Let him scruple at my eating, if he will; but if I receive with thankfulness God's creatures (which have been offered to mere phantoms that have no existence; see 1 Cor. viii. 4), why then am I to be evil spoken of for that for which I give thanks to God? (cp. Rom. xiv. 6.)

It is very usual with St. Paul to adopt as his own the objections of an adversary, and then to refute them (see on vi. 12).

As to this mode of arguing, and as to the elliptical use of γὰρ in the first clause here, and also the sense of κρίνομαι, compare the parallel passage in Rom. iii. 7, where an objection is suddenly introduced in a similar manner: εἰ γὰρ ἡ ἀλήθεια τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν τῷ ἐμῷ ψεύσματι ἐπερίσσευσεν εἰς τὴν δόξαν αὐτοῦ, τί ἔτι κἀγὼ ὡς ἁμαρτωλὸς κρίνομαι; — χάριτι] with thankfulness.

31. Εἴτε οὖν] Whether then ye eat, or drink, or do any thing whatever, do all things to the glory of God. St. Paul does not vouchsafe to give a direct answer to the objection recited in the previous verse, but contents himself with stating a general maxim which involves a reply. The particle οὖν frequently introduces the summing up of the whole, particularly after a digression. (See xv. 11.) And this is precisely what he does in the parallel passage Rom. iii. 8, where he only says briefly, ὧν τὸ κρῖμα ἔνδικόν ἐστιν. See note there.

If this is your principle of action, as it ought to be, and if you are really zealous for the honour of God, as the Lord of all the creatures, you will not feel any indignation that the exercise of your liberty is to be regulated and controlled by considerations of regard for the conscience of your brother, created by God and redeemed by Christ. You will glorify God by restraining yourself in the exercise of your liberty, for the sake of the everlasting salvation of a fellow-member in Christ; and thus you will enjoy the noble freedom of serving God.

— πάντα εἰς δόξαν Θεοῦ ποιεῖτε] do all things to the glory of God. A text which has been strained too far by some, and has been perverted to dangerous consequences;

That "all things be done to the glory of God," the blessed Apostle exhorteth. The glory of God is the admirable excellency of that virtue divine, which being made manifest causeth men and angels to extol His greatness, and in regard thereof to fear Him. By "being glorified," it is not meant that He doth receive any augmentation of glory at our hands, but His name we glorify when we testify our acknowledgment of His glory. Which albeit we most effectually do by the virtue of obedience, never-

d Rom. 14. 13
e Rom. 15. 2.
ch. 9. 19, 22.
a ch. 4. 16.
1 Thess. 1. 6.
2 Thess. 3. 9.
b vv. 17, 22.
Prov. 31. 28—31.
ch. 4. 17. & 15. 2.
Luke 1. 6.
1 Thess. 4. 1, 2.
2 Thess. 2. 15.
& 3. 6.
c Eph. 1. 22, 23.
& 4. 15. & 5. 23.
ch. 3. 23.
& 15. 27, 28.
Eph. 1. 20, 22.
John 14. 28.
Phil. 2. 7—11.

32 [d] Ἀπρόσκοποι γίνεσθε καὶ Ἰουδαίοις καὶ Ἕλλησι, καὶ τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ τοῦ Θεοῦ· 33 [e] καθὼς κἀγὼ πάντα πᾶσιν ἀρέσκω, μὴ ζητῶν τὸ ἐμαυτοῦ συμφέρον, ἀλλὰ τὸ τῶν πολλῶν, ἵνα σωθῶσι.

XI. 1 [a] Μιμηταί μου γίνεσθε, καθὼς κἀγὼ Χριστοῦ.

2 [b] Ἐπαινῶ δὲ ὑμᾶς, ὅτι πάντα μου μέμνησθε, καὶ, καθὼς παρέδωκα ὑμῖν, τὰς παραδόσεις κατέχετε. 3 [c] Θέλω δὲ ὑμᾶς εἰδέναι, ὅτι παντὸς ἀνδρὸς ἡ κεφαλὴ ὁ Χριστός ἐστι, κεφαλὴ δὲ γυναικὸς ὁ ἀνήρ· κεφαλὴ δὲ Χριστοῦ ὁ Θεός.

4 Πᾶς ἀνὴρ προσευχόμενος ἢ προφητεύων κατὰ κεφαλῆς ἔχων καταισχύνει τὴν κεφαλὴν αὐτοῦ· 5 πᾶσα δὲ γυνὴ προσευχομένη ἢ προφητεύουσα ἀκατακαtheless, it may be perhaps a question, whether St. Paul did mean that we sin as oft as ever we go about any thing without an express intent and purpose to obey God therein. He saith of himself, "I do in all things please all men, seeking not mine own commodity, but rather the good of many, that they may be saved." (1 Cor. x. 33.) Shall it hereupon be thought that St. Paul did not move either hand or foot, but with express intent even thereby to further the common salvation of men? We move, we sleep, a number of things we oftentimes do, only to satisfy some natural desire, without present, express, and actual reference unto any commandment of God. Unto His glory even these things are done which we naturally perform, and not only that which morally and spiritually we do. For by every effect proceeding from the most concealed instincts of nature His power is made manifest. But it doth not therefore follow that of necessity we shall sin, unless we expressly intend this in every such particular. Nor is there any law of God whereunto He doth not account our obedience His glory. "Do therefore all things unto the glory of God," saith the Apostle; "be inoffensive both to Jews and Grecians and the Church of God: even as I please all men in all things, not seeking mine own commodity, but many's, that they may be saved." In the least thing done disobediently toward God, or offensively against the good of men, whose benefit we ought to seek for as for our own, we plainly show that we do not acknowledge God to be such as indeed He is, and consequently that we glorify Him not. This the blessed Apostle teacheth. Hooker (ii. 11. 1).

32. Ἀπρόσκοποι γίνεσθε] Become inoffensive: ἀσκάνδαλοι (Hesych.); i. e. cease to give any occasion of stumbling, as ye now do.

When a man doth something which in itself is not evil, but indifferent, and so according to the rule of Christian liberty lawful for him to do, or not to do, as he shall see cause, yea, and perhaps otherwise commodious and convenient for him to do, yet whereat he probably foreseeth that another will take scandal, and be occasioned thereby to do evil,—in such case, if the thing to be done be not in some degree prudentially necessary for him to do, but that he might without very great inconvenience or prejudice to himself or any third person leave it undone, he is bound, in charity and compassion to his brother's soul, for whom Christ died, and for the avoiding of scandal, to abridge himself in the exercise of his Christian liberty for that time, so far as rather to suffer some inconvenience himself by the not doing it, than by the doing of it to cause his brother to offend. This is what is so often, so largely, and so earnestly insisted upon by St. Paul. See Rom. xiv. 13. 21; xv. 1—3. 1 Cor. viii. 7—13; ix. 12. 15. 19—22; x. 23—33. Here the rule is,—Do nothing that may be reasonably forborne, whereat scandal will be taken. Bp. Sanderson, v. 51. See also ibid. vol. i. p. 347.

33. τῶν πολλῶν] the many—all. Cp. below, Rom. v. 15.

CH. XI. 1. Μιμηταί μου γίνεσθε] Become ye imitators of me, especially in what I have just mentioned, viz., in not pleasing myself, and foregoing personal comfort and convenience for the sake of the salvation of others, as I have done in imitation of Christ, Who pleased not Himself (Rom. xv. 3), but gave Himself for us. (Eph. v. 2.)

On what grounds St. Paul inculcates the duty of imitating himself here and elsewhere (1 Thess. i. 5, 6. 2 Thess. iii. 7—9. 1 Cor. iv. 16. Phil. iii. 17; iv. 9), see Barrow, Serm. xxxiv. vol. ii. p. 269. St. Paul's practice herein teacheth us that we be careful to give, and ready to follow, a good example. And also that we are bound especially to study the examples of the Holy Apostles, who were vouchsafed to the Church by God, and who were filled with supernatural gifts and graces of the Holy Ghost, and whose actions and teaching have been recorded by Him in Holy Scripture for our learning; and it is He Who, by their mouths, commands us to imitate their practice.

It is requisite to note this, in order that we may be fully satisfied of the necessity of following Apostolical precedents in matters of perpetual spiritual import, i. e. Regimen and Polity, as well as in Christian Doctrine. See the Introduction to the Acts of the Apostles, pp. 13—20.

The ground of this imitation is to be found in their authentic representation of the mind of Christ.

St. Paul points to his own example, as showing the thing, which he recommends to others, to be feasible, being done by a man subject to infirmity, like themselves, but assisted by the grace of God; and he refers to Christ's example as giving guidance and authority to human examples, and making them fit for imitation. See Bp. Sanderson, i. p. 223.

3. Θέλω δέ] Having answered their questions, he now proceeds to specify things on which he had not given special injunctions and precepts, viz.,

(1) Veiling of women in Churches, v. 5.
(2) The ordering of the agapæ, v. 17.
(3) Spiritual gifts, chap. xii.
(4) As to objections concerning the Resurrection, chap. xv.
(5) Collections for the poor brethren at Jerusalem, chap. xvi.

— παντὸς ἀνδρὸς ἡ κεφαλὴ κ.τ.λ.] Christ is the Head of every man, as being the Second Adam, the Head of the Church. Man is the head of the woman, formed out of man. God is the Head of Christ, the Eternal Word, the Everlasting Son of the Everlasting Father. Cyril (in Caten.).

4. προφητεύων] preaching (see above on 1 Thess. v. 20. Rom. xii. 6); and sometimes foretelling the future, as below, xiii. 8.

— κατὰ κεφαλῆς ἔχων] having any thing falling down on or over his head. Cp. Mark xiv. 3, κατέχεεν κατὰ τῆς κεφαλῆς.

There were different customs at Corinth in this respect, arising probably from the different usages of the various classes of which the Church was formed;

The Jewish women were veiled in the presence of men. Cp. Gen. xxiv. 65, and the Rabbinical authorities in Wetstein here, pp. 144, 145, and Jahn, Arch. § 27.

The male Jewish Christians would be disposed to cover their heads with a profession of reverential shame, as they had done in the synagogues with the tallith. See Lightfoot, p. 769. Jahn, § 396.

Not so the Greeks, who never wore a covering on the head except on a journey or in sickness. See Eustath. Homer Odyss. α'. p. 30. Valck.

The Roman Colonists of Corinth would be also inclined to veil the head in worship. (See the passages quoted by Grotius here.) Tertullian, in his Apology for the Christians (c. 30), which is addressed to Romans, marks it as a characteristic of the Christians that they prayed "nudo capite, quia non erubescimus."

Hence arose a confusion of dress for men and women, which had been expressly forbidden by Almighty God. (Deut. xxii. 5.)

(1) St. Paul brings back the question to first principles, as grounded on the history of Creation and the Origin of Mankind, and the primeval relation of Man to Woman and Woman to Man; and then

(2) He proceeds to argue the question on the ground of the Second Creation, i. e. the Incarnation of the Son of God. (v. 7.)

He pursues a similar method, 1 Tim. ii. 13—15.

5. προφητεύουσα] prophesying. St. Paul does not here allow women to prophesy or preach. Indeed, he forbids them to do so (xiv. 34, where see note, and 1 Tim. ii. 12).

But this was not the question now before him. He may, indeed, be disposed to include here the case of some women who might have a special gift of prophecy, as Anna (Luke ii. 36) and the daughters of Philip (Acts xxi. 9); and then what Tertullian says of St. Paul here will be true: "Mulieri etiam prophetanti velamen imponit" (c. Marcion. v. 8).

These Corinthian Women gloried in their self-display in preaching; but he tells them that even in their outward demeanour in doing so they disgraced their heads.

λύπτῳ τῇ κεφαλῇ καταισχύνει τὴν κεφαλὴν ἑαυτῆς· ἓν γάρ ἐστι καὶ τὸ αὐτὸ τῇ ἐξυρημένῃ· [6] [d] εἰ γὰρ οὐ κατακαλύπτεται γυνή, καὶ κειράσθω· εἰ δὲ αἰσχρὸν γυναικὶ τὸ κείρασθαι ἢ ξυρᾶσθαι, κατακαλυπτέσθω.

d Num. 5. 18. Deut. 21. 12. & 22. 5.

[7] [e] Ἀνὴρ μὲν γὰρ οὐκ ὀφείλει κατακαλύπτεσθαι τὴν κεφαλήν, εἰκὼν καὶ δόξα Θεοῦ ὑπάρχων· ἡ γυνὴ δὲ δόξα ἀνδρός ἐστιν· [8] [f] οὐ γάρ ἐστιν ἀνὴρ ἐκ γυναικὸς, ἀλλὰ γυνὴ ἐξ ἀνδρός· [9] καὶ γὰρ οὐκ ἐκτίσθη ἀνὴρ διὰ τὴν γυναῖκα, ἀλλὰ γυνὴ διὰ τὸν ἄνδρα.

e Gen. 1. 26, 27. & 5. 1. & 9. 6. Ps. 8. 6. James 3. 9. f Gen. 2. 18, 21, 22.

[10] [g] Διὰ τοῦτο ὀφείλει ἡ γυνὴ ἐξουσίαν ἔχειν ἐπὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς διὰ τοὺς ἀγγέλους.

g Eccles. 5. 6. Matt. 18. 10. Heb. 1. 14.

False Teachers have generally flattered women. (Cp. Hooker, Preface iii. 13.) St. Paul reproves publicly those of Corinth who were vain of their spiritual gifts, and censures them in that respect in which they would feel the censure most keenly—their personal appearance—a remarkable proof of the Apostle's courage and honesty.

— ἀκατακαλύπτῳ τῇ κεφαλῇ] with her head uncovered. On this dative, casus modalis, cp. Winer, § 31, p. 194, and above, x. 30.

— καταισχύνει τὴν κεφαλὴν ἑαυτῆς] dishonoureth her own head by her own act. See on v. 10.

God has prescribed certain laws of dominion and subjection respectively to man and woman. If men or women confound these laws, they sin against God, Who in order that both may be reminded of these laws, has forbidden man to wear the apparel of woman, and woman that of man. (Deut. xxii. 5.) Chrysostom.

— τὸ αὐτὸ τῇ ἐξυρημένῃ] the same thing with her that is shaven. On the Dative, see Winer, § 22, p. 135. Matthiæ, § 386.

6. κείρασθαι ἢ ξυρᾶσθαι] to have her hair cropped, or to be shaven. (Cp. Micah i. 16.) A great ignominy to women, both among Jews and Greeks. See the Rabbis on Num. v. 18, and Aristoph. Thesm. 845.

On the difference of meaning of these verbs, see above on Acts xviii. 18; "κείρειν notat partes capillorum summas demere, ξυρεῖν vel ξυρᾶν ad cutem usque novaculâ detondere, decalvare."

It was not usual for free men or women to cut their hair short except in mourning, but slaves were obliged to wear their hair short. See Valck. here.

7. εἰκὼν] image (Gen. i. 26, 27); not corporeally, but intellectually, and specially by reason of dominion over the creatures. See Dr. Barrow, Sermons on the Creed, Serm. vii. vol. iv. p. 171.

— δόξα] splendor, reflection of brightness. See 2 Cor. iii. 7.

— ὑπάρχων] being such by priority of his creation, and by the manner of his creation, as compared with woman. Ὑπάρχων is more significant than ὤν. See Acts xvii. 24, οὐρανοῦ καὶ γῆς Κύριος ὑπάρχων. Phil. ii. 6, ἐν μορφῇ Θεοῦ ὑπάρχων, and on Gal. i. 14. It is observable that this word is used frequently by St. Paul and by St. Luke, but by no other Evangelist.

8. οὐ γάρ ἐστιν—ἀνδρός] For man is not formed out of woman, but woman is formed out of man. He refers to the formation of Eve from Adam. (Gen. ii. 21—23.)

9. καὶ γάρ] For man (Adam) was not formed for the woman, already existing, but woman (Eve) was formed for the man (Adam), already created; and she was formed out of him. The reference to the history of the Creation removes all the difficulty to which Bp. Middleton adverts, p. 454, as to the article.

10. ἐξουσίαν ἔχειν] to have a badge of her own dignity and power on her head. Compare Ezek. vii. 27, ἄρχων ἐνδύσεται ἀφανισμὸν, 'the ruler will put on the badges of desolation;' and Num. vi. 7, εὐχὴ Θεοῦ ἐπὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς, 'the signs of a vow are on his head.'

Similarly, the Crown worn formerly by the Roman Emperors of the West, and that which is now worn by the Bishop of Rome, is called 'Regnum' in Latin, in Italian 'Trireguo.'

St. Paul, as usual, goes back to first principles, and then applies those principles to the particular question before him. He reverts to the History of the Creation, and applies that history to this question of female attire.

He uses the same method in another passage (1 Tim. ii. 9—13), which happily illustrates the present.

Compare also the mode in which he deals with the subject of the Holy Communion, and its abuses at Corinth. He goes back to the History of its Institution. See vv. 23—27.

The Apostle dwells on the fact that woman was formed out of man. This he had said v. 8, οὐκ ἔστιν ἀνὴρ ἐκ γυναικὸς, ἀλλὰ γυνὴ ἐξ ἀνδρὸς, and he repeats it v. 12, ἡ γυνὴ ἐκ τοῦ ἀνδρός. She is out of man; she exists from him. Her οὐσία, or being, ἐστὶν ἐξ ἀνδρὸς, is out of man.

Grounding his argument on this fact, he takes advantage of the happy coincidence furnished by the Greek word ἐξουσία (cp. ex-istence), and says that woman, ἐξ ἀνδρὸς οὖσα, ought to have ἐξ-ουσίαν on her head.

This is not a mere play upon words, for the word ἐξουσία, or Authority, as distinguished from mere δύναμις, Power, properly represents that moral strength and dignity which grows out of the essence of things. A lawful Ruler has always ἐξουσίαν, or Authority, by reason of his essential nature and constitution as being a Deputy of God (see Rom. xiii. 1—4), and as deriving his authority from God; ἐκ Θεοῦ ὢν ἔχει ἐξουσίαν: but he may not always have δύναμις or physical power to enforce the execution of what his Authority commands. And his dominion over men is grounded on his own subjection to God, from Whom his Authority flows. "Dis te minorem quod geris, imperas."

Woman, being in her origin a natural extract of Man, who is the image of God, and deriving her being from Man, ought to wear the emblem of her derivative authority on her head. That authority and dignity, derived to her through man from God Himself, is her glory; for man is the δόξα, or reflected splendor, of God Himself. The covering of her head is therefore a crown of glory.

Hence the Apostle says that she dishonours her head (v. 5) if she appears in public with her head uncovered. Her Covering is, indeed, a mark of reverence and submission to man, and is therefore called "humilitatis sarcina" and "jugum" by Tertullian (de Coron. c. 14; de Vel. Virg. c. 17), and "insigne subjectionis" by the Council of Gangra (c. 17); but it is also an ἐξουσία, or emblem of authority, which she derives through man from God; and by throwing off her covering she throws away her ἐξουσίαν, or the mark of her own authority, which consists in the essential derivation of her being through man from God. She forfeits her own claim to reverence, by breaking that link of connexion, which binds her through man even to the throne of God.

The notion of the Rabbis, therefore, that a woman who casts off the covering of her head, casts off her dignity, and her safeguard, and exposes herself to the injurious influence of Evil Spirits, is not altogether fanciful, but involves a moral truth. "If a woman's head is bare (they say, Sota 43, Wetstein, p. 147) evil spirits come and sit upon her head, and destroy what is in her home." The evil spirits of vanity and immodesty immediately assail her, and impair that moral power which she possesses in the eyes of men, and destroy that domestic influence which she exercises by her modesty, which is her strength.

In the Apostolic Constitutions (ii. 17) it was expressly commanded that the women should have their heads covered in the Church.

It is St. Paul's manner, in this Epistle, to show that by a licentious abuse of liberty men gain nothing, but rather injure themselves. And he now teaches the Corinthian women, who more than any women in the world needed such instruction, that by obtrusive boldness and wanton effrontery, and by presumptuous shamelessness and flaunting immodesty in public, in the House of God, they gained nothing, but forfeited that dignity, power, and grace, which God had given to Woman, especially under the Gospel.

Thus the divine Apostle has left a lesson to Women in every age, a lesson which in the present age deserves special attention, when the attire of some among them seems to expose them to that reproof, which was spoken through him by the Holy Spirit to the Women of Corinth.

Let them learn from him, that the true power of Woman is in gentle submission; her most attractive grace and genuine beauty is in modest retirement and delicate reserve; her best ornament, "that of a meek and quiet spirit, which in the sight of God is of great price." (1 Pet. iii. 4.)

— διὰ τοὺς ἀγγέλους] on account of the Angels of God. "Nudo capite videri non debet propter Angelos." Tertullian (de Coron. 14). She ought to have dignity and authority on her head because of the Angels;

Because the Angels rejoice in contemplating the order and symmetry of God's creatures; which is disturbed by any thing that breaks the divinely constituted series of dependence which connects Woman through man with God;

Because also the Angels minister to the faithful (Heb. i. 14), 11 Πλὴν οὔτε γυνὴ χωρὶς ἀνδρὸς, οὔτε ἀνὴρ χωρὶς γυναικὸς, ἐν Κυρίῳ·

h Rom. 11. 36. Heb. 1. 2, 3.
12 h ὥσπερ γὰρ ἡ γυνὴ ἐκ τοῦ ἀνδρὸς, οὕτω καὶ ὁ ἀνὴρ διὰ τῆς γυναικός· τὰ δὲ πάντα ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ.
i ch. 10. 15. Luke 12. 57. John 7. 24.
13 i Ἐν ὑμῖν αὐτοῖς κρίνατε· πρέπον ἐστὶ γυναῖκα ἀκατακάλυπτον τῷ Θεῷ προσεύχεσθαι; 14 οὐδὲ ἡ φύσις αὐτὴ διδάσκει ὑμᾶς, ὅτι ἀνὴρ μὲν ἐὰν κομᾷ, ἀτιμία αὐτῷ ἐστι, 15 γυνὴ δὲ ἐὰν κομᾷ, δόξα αὐτῇ ἐστιν; ὅτι ἡ κόμη ἀντὶ περιβολαίου δέδοται αὐτῇ.
j 1 Tim. 6. 3, 4. ch. 14. 33, 34. & 16. 1. 1 Thess. 2. 14. k ch. 1. 10—12. & 3. 3. & 5. 1. & 6. 1. 1 Matt. 18. 7. Luke 17. 1. Acts 20. 30. 2 Cor. 13. 5—7. 1 Tim. 4. 1, 2. 2 Pet. 2. 1, 2.
16 j Εἰ δέ τις δοκεῖ φιλόνεικος εἶναι, ἡμεῖς τοιαύτην συνήθειαν οὐκ ἔχομεν, οὐδὲ αἱ ἐκκλησίαι τοῦ Θεοῦ.
17 Τοῦτο δὲ παραγγέλλω οὐκ ἐπαινῶν, ὅτι οὐκ εἰς τὸ κρεῖττον, ἀλλ' εἰς τὸ ἧττον συνέρχεσθε. 18 k Πρῶτον μὲν γὰρ συνερχομένων ὑμῶν ἐν ἐκκλησίᾳ, ἀκούω σχίσματα ἐν ὑμῖν ὑπάρχειν, καὶ μέρος τι πιστεύω· 19 l δεῖ γὰρ καὶ αἱρέσεις ἐν ὑμῖν εἶναι, ἵνα οἱ δόκιμοι φανεροὶ γένωνται ἐν ὑμῖν. 20 Συνερχομένων and are especially present at the public assemblies of the Church of God (see Isa. vi. 1. Ps. cxxxviii. 1, 2); and because they know the mind of God, and because they love to see that peace and harmony, which they know that God loves, in His Church (1 Tim. v. 21); and consequently are grieved by whatever deranges and disorganizes the framework of God's Creation, in that sacred Society, which ought to be an earthly reflection of the peace and harmony of Heaven. See Cyril in Cat. here.

---

It has been well said by Hooker (V. xxiii. 1) that—

Between the throne of God in heaven and His Church upon earth here militant, if it be so that Angels have their continual intercourse, where should we find the same more verified than in these two ghostly exercises, the one Doctrine, and the other Prayer?

And again (V. xxv. 2):—

Concerning the place of assembly, although it serve for other uses as well as this, yet seeing that our Lord Himself hath to this as to the chiefest of all other plainly sanctified his own temple by entitling it "the House of Prayer" (Matt. xxi. 13), what pre-eminence of dignity soever hath been, either by the ordinance or through the special favour and providence of God, annexed unto His Sanctuary, the principal cause thereof must needs be in regard of Common Prayer. For the honour and furtherance whereof, if it be, as the gravest of the ancient Fathers seriously were persuaded, and do oftentimes plainly teach, affirming that the House of Prayer is a Court beautified with the presence of celestial Powers, that there we stand, we pray, we sound forth hymns unto God, having His Angels intermingled as our associates, and that with reference hereunto the Apostle doth require so great care to be had of decency for the Angels' sake (1 Cor. xi. 10), how can we come to the House of Prayer and not be moved with the very glory of the place itself, so to frame our affections praying, as doth best beseem them, whose suits the Almighty doth there sit to hear, and His Angels attend to further? He quotes Chrysost. Hom. xv. ad Hebr. et xxiv. in Act. t. iv. 516: Ἄκουε δὲ ὅτι ἄγγελοι πάρεισι πανταχοῦ, καὶ μάλιστα ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ τοῦ Θεοῦ παρεστήκασι τῷ βασιλεῖ, καὶ πάντα ἐμπέπληται τῶν ἀσωμάτων ἐκείνων δυνάμεων. And p. 753, l. 40: Ἕστηκας ἀτάκτως, οὐκ οἶδας ὅτι μετ' ἀγγέλων ἕστηκας; μετ' ἐκείνων ᾄδεις, μετ' ἐκείνων ὑμνεῖς· καὶ ἕστηκας γελῶν; And in 1 Cor. xi. 10: Εἰ γὰρ τοῦ ἀνδρὸς καταφρονεῖς, φησι, τοὺς ἀγγέλους αἰδέσθητι.

Again (I. xvi. 4):—

Would the Apostles, speaking of that which belongeth unto saints as they are linked together in the bond of spiritual society (1 Pet. i. 12. Eph. iii. 10. 1 Tim. v. 21), so often make mention how Angels are delighted, if in things publicly done by the Church we are not somewhat to respect what the Angels of heaven do? Yea, so far hath the Apostle Paul proceeded, as to signify that even about the outward orders of the Church, which serve but for comeliness, some regard is to be had of Angels, who best like us when we are most like unto them in all parts of decent demeanour.

See also Tertullian (de Orat. § 13), Chrys. in Ps. iv. and cxxxiv., and on St. Matt. Hom. 19, and the excellent remarks of Joseph Mede on this subject, Disc. xlvii. p. 261, and Valck. p. 276, "Angelos fidelium cœtibus interesse antiquissima fuit Christianorum primo sæculo opinio;" and Hammond here, and Bp. Bull's Sermon xii. "On the office of the holy Angels towards the Faithful," p. 322, where he considers this text of St. Paul.

It may, however, be asked, "Why this reference to the Angels here, as present in Christian Churches, in connexion especially with this topic,—the veiling of the head of women in the public worship of God?"

The reason seems to be,

Because the Angels themselves are described in Scripture as "veiling their faces" in reverence in the Temple of God. (Isa. vi. 2.) What they do, women ought to do from a like feeling.

Also, St. Paul alludes perhaps to the opinion current among the Jews, that women, who uncovered their heads in public worship, exposed themselves to evil suggestions from bad Angels (see preceding note); and so he teaches them that by covering their head with modesty and reverence in the Church of God, they do what is pleasing to good Angels, who are their fellow-worshippers in His House.

11. Πλὴν οὔτε γυνὴ—γυναικός] Such is the order of the words in the best MSS., A, B, C, D*, D, E, F, G, and in many cursives. Elz. inserts the order thus, οὔτε ἀνὴρ χ. γ., οὔτε γυνὴ χ. ἀνδρὸς, which does not so well represent the Apostle's argument, which is, But although Woman is dependent on man, as being formed out of man at the beginning, yet woman is not separate from man, nor man separate from woman, in the Lord.

For as woman (Eve) was made out of the man (Adam), so also the man Christ was born by the woman, being the Woman's Seed; but all things are ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ, i. e. proceed forth from God. All ἐξουσία or authority flows from Him. (See on viii. 6.) Let not Man then lord it proudly over Woman, as if he had an independent ἐξουσία, but let him remember, that though, at the first Creation, Woman was formed out of the First Man, as the Book of Genesis records, yet, as the Gospel declares, at the new Creation, the Second Man, Christ Jesus, came by the Woman.

13, 14. Ἐν ὑμῖν κρίνατε] Judge in your own selves. See on x. 15.

The common sense of Mankind in this matter had shown itself in various usages of Antiquity, e. g. in giving a covering to the head of the slave on his manumission, when he was said, "pileo donari," to be presented with a cap of liberty; and in the bridal "flammeum" or veil: and in the word describing Marriage on the part of woman, "nubo" (to veil the head), said of the νύμφη, or bride, as distinguished from man.

14. οὐδὲ ἡ φύσις αὐτὴ] So A, B, C, D, H. Doth not even Nature of her own accord teach you? A better reading than Elz., ἢ οὐδὲ αὐτὴ ἡ φύσις.

16. δοκεῖ] presumeth. Cp. Matt. iii. 9, and Winer, § 65, p. 540. On this text, see Bp. Andrewes' Sermons, ii. p. 404.

17. Τοῦτο δὲ παραγγέλλω οὐκ ἐπαινῶν] So A, B, C*, F, G, Lachm., Tisch., Alf., Meyer. Elz. has παραγγέλλων—ἐπαινῶ. The sense is, I give you this precept concerning behaviour in public worship, not, however, as if I approved the purpose for which you come to the place appointed for worship. And why do I not approve it? Because (ὅτι) you come together, not for the better, but for the worse.

I do not praise your religious assemblings together (although the assembling together for worship is in itself laudable), because you pervert them into occasions of evil. (Photius.)

18. μέρος τι] in part: excipit innocentes. (Bengel.)

19. δεῖ γάρ] for it is necessary that αἱρέσεις should exist —. For the reason of this, see above on Luke xvii. 1.

— αἱρέσεις εἶναι] Αἵρεσις, properly a choice, hence a private party or opinion chosen, independently of, or in opposition to, God's will or public lawful authority. See Acts v. 17; xv. 5; xxiv. 5. 14; xxvi. 5; xxviii. 22. Gal. v. 20. 2 Pet. ii. 1, αἱρέσεις ἀπωλείας. S. Jerome says (in Epist. ad Titum, c. 3), "Hæresis οὖν ὑμῶν ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ, οὐκ ἔστι Κυριακὸν δεῖπνον φαγεῖν· 21 ἕκαστος γὰρ τὸ ἴδιον δεῖπνον προλαμβάνει ἐν τῷ φαγεῖν· καὶ ὃς μὲν πεινᾷ, ὃς δὲ μεθύει. 22 [m] Μὴ γὰρ οἰκίας οὐκ ἔχετε εἰς τὸ ἐσθίειν καὶ πίνειν; ἢ τῆς ἐκκλησίας τοῦ Θεοῦ καταφρονεῖτε, καὶ καταισχύνετε τοὺς μὴ ἔχοντας; Τί εἴπω ὑμῖν; ἐπαινέσω ὑμᾶς ἐν τούτῳ; οὐκ ἐπαινῶ.

m Prov. 17. 5. James 2. 5, 6.

23 [n] Ἐγὼ γὰρ παρέλαβον ἀπὸ τοῦ Κυρίου ὃ καὶ παρέδωκα ὑμῖν, ὅτι ὁ Κύριος Ἰησοῦς, ἐν τῇ νυκτὶ ᾗ παρεδίδοτο, ἔλαβεν ἄρτον, 24 καὶ εὐχαριστήσας ἔκλασε καὶ εἶπε, Τοῦτό μού ἐστι τὸ σῶμα τὸ ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν κλώμενον· τοῦτο ποιεῖτε εἰς n ch. 15. 3. Gal. 1. 12. Matt. 26. 26—28. Mark 14. 22—24. Luke 22. 19, 20. Acts 20. 7.

Græcè ab electione venit, quòd scilicet unusquisque id sibi eligat, quod ei melius videatur." And a person who makes such a choice is αἱρετικός. Titus iii. 10, where see note.

— ἵνα οἱ δόκιμοι φανεροὶ γένωνται] in order that they who are approved may be made manifest. The conjunction ἵνα, in order that, marks God's design in permitting heresies to exist. Cp. note on 2 Cor. iv. 7. He does not give us licence to do evil, in order that we may educe good from it. And though He never does evil, yet He permits it to be done, in order that He may exercise His own divine attribute of bringing greater good out of it. The δόκιμοι here would only have been δόκιμοι, approved by God, if evil had not existed; but by it they become φανεροὶ, manifest to men. Compare St. John's words, 1 John ii. 19.

The Church has been constrained by the rise of Heresies to search Scripture more carefully; and thus Heresies have served as occasions for bringing forth more clearly and fully the Articles of Faith in her Creeds. In the Apostolic age the Heresies which arose in the primitive Churches supplied the Apostles with reasons for declaring the sound Faith. The Epistles to the Corinthians afford remarkable instances of this power by which they overcame evil with good, and made error to be subservient to Truth. See above, the Introduction to these Epistles, pp. 73—76. And on the moral and spiritual uses educed under God's grace from Heresies and Schisms, see Chrys. vol. v. p. 362, and other authorities quoted in the Editor's Occasional Sermons, No. i., on this text, and cp. Hooker, V. xlii. 6, and V. liii.

20, 21. Σὺνερχομένων οὖν ὑμῶν—φαγεῖν] when you meet together in the church, it is not, as you suppose, to eat the Lord's Supper. For each of you in the eating (ἐν τῷ φαγεῖν) which then ensues, taketh his own private supper before the Lord's Supper; "præsumit ante synaxim." Aug. Epist. 118. Cp. Sozomen, vii. 29, and A Lapide here, and Lightfoot; and one man is hungry and another is surfeited.

The Abuses therefore here reproved were manifold;

The Lord's Supper was made a subordinate thing, instead of being the principal cause of the meeting in the church; and the purpose of church assemblies was frustrated. The Supper, instituted by the Lord for the general spiritual refreshment of all united together in a holy and loving Communion in Him, was supplanted by private and separate repasts, in which the bodily appetites were pampered, and intemperate excesses were committed by the rich, and from which their poorer brethren were excluded, and the sacred place in which they met was profaned. And thus they who had met together in the Lord's house with a professed intention of partaking there in the Lord's Supper, dishonoured the Lord in His house and in His Supper, and disqualified themselves from doing that very act for which they professed to have come together into His presence.

It is not improbable (as Lightfoot suggests) that the Jewish Christians, looking back at their own Passover on which the Holy Communion had been engrafted, regarded the Eucharist as an appendage to a domestic religious meal, such as the Passover was, in which households of about twelve partook together, by families; and that hence arose those separate δεῖπνα which the Apostle condemns, in which it is likely the Gentile Christians would not be disposed, or admitted, to partake, before the Holy Communion.

It is worthy of remark, as an evidence of the Catholicity of the Gospel when contrasted with Judaism, that the Christian Passover combined all men in one Κυριακὸν δεῖπνον, or Lord's Supper, in the One Church of God, whereas the Jewish Passover was only a private repast eaten in separate households.

— Κυριακὸν δεῖπνον] The non-insertion of the definite article τὸ, shows that by habitual use in the Church, Holy Communion had now attained the force of a proper name.

The adjective Κυριακὸς, Dominicus (from Κυριος, Dominus) is connected in Holy Scripture with two substantives,—the Lord's Supper here, and the Lord's Day in Rev. i. 10. And it is observable, that the Syriac Version here renders Κυριακὸν δεῖπνον a "meal proper for the Lord's Day." (See Michaelis, and Middleton, p. 456.) And Christian Antiquity has associated the word Κυριακὸς with another object, viz. the Lord's House; whence we have the word Church. (Casaubon, Exc. Baron. xiii. Hooker, V. xiii. 1. Pearson on the Creed, Art. ix.) Hence we have a memento of the duty and privilege of assembling together, as the ancient Christians did in the Apostolic age (see on Acts xx. 7) on the Lord's Day in the Lord's House, to eat the Lord's Supper.

21. τὸ ἴδιον δεῖπνον] his own private supper, in opposition to the Lord's Supper, and this in the Lord's House, and not in his own private house. A double profanation.

The abuse seems to have grown out of the primitive practice of sometimes annexing the Agapæ, or Love-feasts, to the Holy Communion. Cp. Jude 12. But properly the Agapæ followed, and did not precede the Holy Communion, when they were connected with it, and did not therefore supplant it, as these private feasts in the Church at Corinth did. See Plin. Ep. x. 27. Tertullian, Apol. 39. Chrys., Theodoret, and others here; and particularly Acts xx. 7, where, it is evident, the purpose of assembling was to break bread, i. e. to receive the Communion; and a meal followed, v. 11, and cp. Bingham, XV. vii. 6—9. In course of time the Agapæ were not permitted to be held in the Church. (Concil. Carth. iii. c. 30.) On the question of Evening Communions, as connected with this subject, see an introductory chapter in Bp. Taylor's Worthy Communicant.

— ὃς μὲν—ὃς δέ] See Matt. xxi. 35. Mark xii. 5. Acts xxvii. 44. Rom. ix. 21. Winer, § 17, p. 96.

22. Μὴ γὰρ οἰκίας οὐκ ἔχετε;] Is it that ye have not houses to eat in? On the uses of μὴ see ix. 9; x. 22; xii. 29, 30.

— τῆς ἐκκλησίας τοῦ Θεοῦ καταφρονεῖτε;] Do ye despise the Church of God? A proof of the setting apart of places for God's worship, in primitive times, and of reverence due to them as such. See the evidence collected by Joseph Mede in his Essay on this text, pp. 319—350, and above on Acts ii. 1, 2.

Out of those the Apostle's words, "Have ye not houses to eat and drink in?" (1 Cor. xi. 22)—albeit temples, such as now, were not then erected for the exercise of the Christian religion, it hath been nevertheless not absurdly conceived, that he there teacheth what difference should be made between house and house; that what is fit for the dwelling-place of God, and what for man's habitation, he showeth; he requireth that Christian men at their own home take common food, and in the House of the Lord none but that food which is heavenly; he instructeth them, that as in the one place they use to refresh their bodies, so they may in the other learn to seek nourishment of their souls; and as there they sustain temporal life, so here they would learn to make provision for eternal. Christ could not suffer that the Temple should serve for a place of mart, nor the Apostle of Christ that the Church should be made an inn. Hooker, V. xii. 5.

23. Ἐγὼ παρέλαβον] I received by special revelation. Cp. xv. 3. Gal. i. 12. St. John's Gospel, written after the publication of the other three Gospels, and after the circulation of this Epistle, says nothing concerning the institution of the Holy Eucharist. He had nothing to add to those previous accounts, and he canonizes them as complete, by his silence.

On the Apostle's mode of correcting abuses, as exemplified in this Chapter, and affording an instructive lesson on the true principles of genuine Church-Reform, see above on v. 10.

— ᾗ παρεδίδοτο] in which He was being betrayed. Observe the imperfect tense. Christ did this, while, as He well knew, men, for whom He did it, were conspiring against Him and betraying Him.

24. εὐχαριστήσας] having given thanks. See on 1 Cor. x. 16.

— εἶπε] Elz. adds λάβετε, φάγετε, not in the best MSS.

— Τοῦτό μού] This My Body. On these words see notes, Matt. xxvi. 26—28. Luke xxii. 19.—Μού is emphatic. Cp. Matt. xvi. 18.

— κλώμενον] being broken; present tense. So Elz., with C*, D, E, F, G, I, K. D* has θρυπτόμενον. Some Versions represent διδόμενον, being given, probably from Luke xxii. 19. A, B, C*, and one or two Cursives, omit the participle, and so Lachm., Tisch., Alford, Meyer.

The common reading κλώμενον ought, it would seem, to be retained, for many reasons;

τὴν ἐμὴν ἀνάμνησιν. 25 Ὡσαύτως καὶ τὸ ποτήριον μετὰ τὸ δειπνῆσαι λέγων, Τοῦτο τὸ ποτήριον ἡ καινὴ διαθήκη ἐστὶν ἐν τῷ ἐμῷ αἵματι· τοῦτο ποιεῖτε o John 14. 3. Acts 1. 11. ὁσάκις ἂν πίνητε, εἰς τὴν ἐμὴν ἀνάμνησιν· 26 ο ὁσάκις γὰρ ἂν ἐσθίητε τὸν ἄρτον τοῦτον, καὶ τὸ ποτήριον πίνητε, τὸν θάνατον τοῦ Κυρίου καταγγέλλετε, ἄχρις οὗ ἂν ἔλθῃ.

p Num. 9. 10, 13. John 6. 51, 53, 54. & 13. 27. ch. 10. 21. 27 p Ὥστε ὃς ἂν ἐσθίῃ τὸν ἄρτον ἢ πίνῃ τὸ ποτήριον τοῦ Κυρίου ἀναξίως, ἔνοχος ἔσται τοῦ σώματος καὶ τοῦ αἵματος τοῦ Κυρίου.

(1) The words τὸ ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν without any participle are bald and inexpressive;

(2) κλώμενον has high MS. authority, and cannot have been interpolated from any of the narratives in the Gospels, of the institution of the Holy Eucharist;

(3) It is likely that the Copyists who wrote those MSS., or the original of them, which omit the word κλώμενον, may have scrupled at that word, as not found in any of those narratives, and also as containing a strong, and to them a perplexing assertion of the body being broken, whereas "not a bone of it was broken." (John xix. 36.) And this assertion was made by Christ before His Crucifixion, i. e. before His Body was wounded by suffering. But He breaks the bread, and says, This is My Body which is being broken for you; in order to intimate, that as the bread (ὁ ἄρτος) is being broken, in order to be distributed to all, so in the Holy Eucharist there is a continued communication of His Body sacrificed once for all (cp. 1 Cor. v. 7, and x. 16), and a bestowal of all the benefits, purchased for all by His death on the cross.

The word κλώμενον is important also as a warning against the error which feigns a carnal presence in the Holy Eucharist. At the Institution of the Holy Sacrament of His most blessed Body and Blood, Christ took bread and brake it, and said, "This is My Body which is being broken for you." If the bread being broken is really His flesh, and not the "communion of His Body" (1 Cor. x. 16), His Body ought to have been broken,—which it was not; and it ought to have been broken at that time, whereas it was not crucified till some hours afterwards, on the following day.

The words τοῦτο—κλώμενον, and ὡσαύτως—δειπνῆσαι, and τοῦτο—εἰς ἐμὴν ἀνάμνησιν, and ὁσάκις—καταγγέλλετε, are found, with slight variations, in the Liturgy of St. Mark.

— εἰς τὴν ἐμὴν ἀνάμνησιν] See on Luke xxii. 19. The accounts given of the institution by St. Paul and St. Luke, have a special interest as marking their personal intercommunion, by coincidence in language, as well as in the details of the record.

St. Paul and St. Luke are the only two of the sacred writers who recite the commemorative sentence, "Do this for remembrance of Me;" and St. Paul recites it twice, as being of great importance against all profanation of the Lord's Supper.

The ancient sacrifices were repeated for a continual memorial of sin. (Heb. x. 3.) The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper is repeated for a continual memorial of the Sacrifice once offered for sin. See below on Heb. x. 12.

25. μετὰ τὸ δειπνῆσαι] after having supped. Therefore you ought to separate the Eucharist from your common meals. (Bengel.)

— ἡ καινὴ διαθήκη] the New Covenant.

26. τὸν ἄρτον] the bread. See on x. 16.

— ποτήριον] Elz. adds τοῦτο here, and in v. 27, τοῦτον after ἄρτον: but these pronouns are not in A, B, C, F, G.

— καταγγέλλετε] ye declare. See Acts iii. 24, where the word is applied to the Prophets proclaiming and preparing the way for the First Advent of Christ. He does not say, ye repeat the sacrifice of Christ's Death: nor does he say, ye continue the sacrifice of Christ's Death; but he says, "Ye declare Christ's Death." Ye proclaim and represent a fact, which has taken place, once for all. See on Heb. x. 12. Observe, that it is the Death of Christ—both God and Man—which is represented by St. Paul as the thing specially set forth and represented in the Lord's Supper.

— ἄχρις οὗ ἂν ἔλθῃ] till the Lord Himself shall come—when you will need no memorial or representation of Christ, for He will be with you visibly in Person. Therefore Maranatha (1 Cor. xvi. 22). the Lord will come, is a solemn warning both against the neglect and against the abuse of the Lord's Supper.

27. ἤ] or. A, and some few Cursives and Fathers, have καί: but ἤ is doubtless the true reading. For it is necessary to receive both elements with devotion and reverence.

Further, ἤ, or, has a peculiar significance here, because, as the context shows, St. Paul is censuring the Corinthians for two several sins, opposed respectively to the two several elements of the Lord's Supper. The first sin is that of eating meats offered to idols, and of gluttony generally, and particularly at the meals before the Communion (v. 21), a sin specially opposed to Communion in the Eucharistic Bread (see 1 Cor. x. 21); the second sin, that of drinking the Cup of Devils, or false deities (1 Cor. x. 21), and of intemperance in the meals before the Communion (v. 21), a sin specially opposed to participation in the Eucharistic Cup.

He therefore says, whosoever, by eating idolatrous meats and gluttony, eats this Bread unworthily, or by idolatrous drink and intemperance, drinks this Cup unworthily, is guilty of the Body and Blood of the Lord.

It is hardly necessary, therefore, to notice the allegations grounded on these words by the Church of Rome in defence of her corrupt practice in mutilating the Holy Communion.

It may be added, that even if in some special cases one element might be administered without the other, it would by no means follow that it is allowable to withhold one element altogether; and to anathematize those—as the Church of Rome does—who affirm that both ought to be administered. See above on Luke xxiv. 30, and 1 Cor. x. 16.

— ἀναξίως] in an unworthy manner; as the context shows. "Alia est indignitas edentis, alia esûs." Bengel. St. Paul does not exclude these Corinthians, except the one incestuous person (v. 4, 5), from the Holy Communion, unworthy though they were; but exhorts them to examine themselves, and so come to it worthily (v. 28), "We are not worthy so much as to gather up the crumbs under Thy Table, O Lord;" "We are not worthy to offer Thee any sacrifice;" and because we are not worthy, and Thou art all Worthy, therefore we come to Thee, in order that "our sinful bodies may be made clean by Thy Body, and our souls washed through Thy most precious Blood."

— ἔνοχος ἔσται τοῦ σώματος καὶ τοῦ αἵματος] shall be guilty of the body and of the blood of the Lord. Ἔνοχος is a forensic word, properly said of a person convicted as guilty of a crime, and liable to punishment; and so ἔνοχος, held or bound, in a double sense.

The substantive in the genitive case after ἔνοχος signifies not only,

(1) the crime by which the culprit binds himself, and of which he is convicted, as in 2 Macc. xiii. 6, ἱεροσυλίας ἔνοχον, and James ii. 10, πάντων ἔνοχος.

But it signifies also,

(2) the penalty to which he is obnoxious, or bound, for his sin; so Matt. xxvi. 66, ἔνοχος θανάτου, Mark iii. 29, κρίσεως. See Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. ix. And here St. Paul means, that he who commits the sin here described, incurs the guilt and punishment of one who sins against, and is punished by, the body and blood of Christ.

(3) There seems also to be a special significance in the word ἔνοχος, as used here;

All are invited to the Holy Communion. They come together for that purpose. Christ offers His own Body and Blood to them all. He says, "Take, eat; this is My Body." "This is My Blood, shed for you; Drink ye all of this" (Matt. xxvi. 26, 27. Mark xiv. 22, 23); and all who come with repentance, faith, and love, receive what He gives. They are all μέτοχοι, partakers, of His Body and Blood.

But they who come without these requisites, and do not discern the Lord's body (v. 29), but treat it with profane irreverence, as common food, and disqualify themselves for participation in it, as the Corinthians did, by intemperance and uncharitableness, they are not μέτοχοι—that is, they are not partakers of the Lord's body and blood, but they are ἔνοχοι, they are sinners against it, and punished by it; they are there caught in a sin, and are caught by a punishment; and that very thing against which they sin, becomes, through their sin, the instrument of their punishment.

There is a similar paronomasia in Heb. iii. 14.

These considerations throw light on the question, "What the wicked receive in the Lord's Supper?"

St. Paul here says that they eat the bread and drink the cup (v. 27), but he does not say that they are partakers of the 28 [q] Δοκιμαζέτω δὲ ἑαυτὸν ἄνθρωπος, καὶ οὕτως ἐκ τοῦ ἄρτου ἐσθιέτω καὶ ἐκ τοῦ ποτηρίου πινέτω· 29 ὁ γὰρ ἐσθίων καὶ πίνων ἀναξίως κρῖμα ἑαυτῷ ἐσθίει καὶ πίνει, μὴ διακρίνων τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Κυρίου. 30 Διὰ τοῦτο ἐν ὑμῖν πολλοὶ ἀσθενεῖς καὶ ἄῤῥωστοι, καὶ κοιμῶνται ἱκανοί. 31 [r] Εἰ δὲ ἑαυτοὺς διεκρίνομεν, οὐκ ἂν ἐκρινόμεθα· 32 [s] κρινόμενοι δὲ ὑπὸ τοῦ Κυρίου παιδευόμεθα, ἵνα μὴ σὺν τῷ κόσμῳ κατακριθῶμεν.

q Gal. 6. 4. 2 Cor. 13. 5. 1 John 3. 20, 21.
r Ps. 32. 5. Prov. 18. 17.
s Heb. 12. 5—10.

body and blood; but he says that they are ἔνοχοι of it, i. e. they sin against it, and are punished by it.

Christ Himself distinctly says, "He that eateth My Flesh, and drinketh My Blood, dwelleth in Me, and I in him" (John vi. 56). The wicked therefore do not eat His flesh: they do not partake of His body and blood, because they have not that organ by which alone it can be received, namely, Faith.

But it is not nothing that they receive. No: all God's gifts are something, either for weal or woe, either for blessing or bane. Christ is every where set for the fall of some, and the rising up of others (Luke ii. 34). He is the corner-stone to some, and the stone to grind others to powder (Luke xx. 18); a savour of life to some, and of death to others (2 Cor. ii. 16). The blessings against which the wicked sin, become their curse. Their Gerizims become Ebals. If they do not accept God's grace, it recoils upon them, and binds them fast in their sin, and in punishment for it. If they are not μέτοχοι, they are ἔνοχοι.

The case of the wicked in the Holy Communion appears to be like that of the men of Nazareth, who rejected Jesus, and would have cast Him down headlong from the brow of the hill on which their city was built (Luke iv. 29). He passed through the midst of them, and escaped. Yet they, though they could not hold Him, were held by Him; they were guilty of His Body and Blood; and were punished by Him for their sins. He never visited them more.

The case of the wicked in the Holy Communion is like that of the Jews, who twice took up stones to cast at Him, but He went through the midst of them, and passed by, and escaped out of their hands (John viii. 59; x. 31). They could not touch Him, but they were guilty of His Body and Blood, and were punished by Him for their sins. They were not able to hold Him, but they were caught in their own snare; held as prisoners by their own sin, and imprisoned as captives in order to suffer punishment for it. He never returned to Jerusalem after the second outrage, except to pronounce judgment upon her (Matt. xxiii. 37. Luke xix. 42).

The case of the wicked in the Holy Communion resembles that of the crowd who pressed profanely and irreverently upon Christ, but did not touch Him; whereas, on the other hand, the faithful woman, who came reverently, and humbly, and devoutly, and ventured only to touch the hem of His garment, she only it was who touched Him; because she had the spiritual organ of faith, by which alone He can be touched; and therefore virtue went out of Him to heal her, and He said, "Daughter, be of good comfort, Thy faith hath made thee whole" (Matt. ix. 20—22. Mark v. 27—34. Luke viii. 43—48). She was indeed μέτοχος of Christ's divine virtue, and is a beautiful picture of the faithful soul in the worthy participation of His most blessed Body and Blood.

Therefore the Church of England well teaches in her Catechism that "the Body and Blood of Christ are verily and indeed taken and received by the faithful in the Lord's Supper;" and in her 28th Article that "the means whereby the Body of Christ is received and eaten in the Supper is Faith." And she well says in her Office for the Holy Communion, "The Body of our Lord Jesus Christ which was given for thee, preserve thy body and soul unto everlasting life; take and eat this in remembrance that Christ died for thee, and feed on Him in thy heart by faith with thanksgiving."

The following clear statement of S. Augustine (Tract. in Joann. xxvi.) appears to have been regarded with approval by the Church of England in the construction of her XXXIX Articles;

Exponit Christus quomodo id fiat quod loquitur, et quid sit manducare corpus Ejus, et sanguinem bibere. "Qui manducat carnem meam, et bibit meum sanguinem, in me manet, et ego in illo." Hoc est ergo manducare illam escam, et illum bibere potum, in Christo manere, et illum manentem in se habere. Ac per hoc qui non manet in Christo, et in quo non manet Christus, procul dubio nec manducat carnem Ejus, nec bibit Ejus sanguinem; sed magis tantæ rei Sacramentum ad judicium sibi manducat et bibit. [Some other words are introduced into the earlier editions of S. Augustine in this passage, but they are not inserted here, because they are not found in the great body of MSS. of that Father. See note to p. 987 of the last Benedictine edition, vol. iii. pt. ii. Paris 1837.] Hujus rei Sacramentum, id est, unitatis corporis et sanguinis Christi, alicubi quotidie, alicubi certis intervallis dierum in dominicâ mensâ præparatur, et de mensâ dominicâ sumitur, quibusdam ad vitam, quibusdam ad exitium: res vero ipsa, cujus sacramentum est, omni homini ad vitam, nulli ad exitium quicumque ejus particeps fuerit.

Nos hodie accipimus visibilem cibum: sed aliud est Sacramentum, aliud virtus Sacramenti. Quam multi de altari accipiunt et moriuntur, et accipiendo moriuntur! Unde dicit Apostolus, Judicium sibi manducat et bibit. (1 Cor. xi. 29.) Non enim buccella Dominica venenum fuit Judæ. Et tamen accepit, et cum accepit, in eum Inimicus intravit; non quia malum accepit, sed quia bonum malè malus accepit. Videte ergo, fratres, panem cœlestem, spiritualiter manducate, innocentiam ad altare apportate. Peccata etsi sunt quotidiana, vel non sint mortifera. Antequam ad altare accedatis, attendite quid dicatis: Dimitte nobis debita nostra, sicut et nos dimittimus debitoribus nostris. (Matt. vi. 12.) Dimittis, dimittetur tibi; securus accede; panis est, non venenum.

28. Δοκιμαζέτω δὲ ἑαυτὸν ἄνθρωπος] But let a man examine himself. St. Paul had excommunicated one person for flagrant and notorious sin (v. 1—5), but, in a Church abounding with sundry corruptions in faith and manners, as Corinth did, he sufficeth himself with a general proposal of unworthy communicating, and remitteth every other particular person to a self-examination. Bp. Sanderson (iv. 441).

He does this without exacting, as necessary, previous confession to the Priest, as the Church of Rome does; nor does he authorize any Lay-Elders to examine and exclude, as did the Puritans.

29. ἀναξίως] unworthily. This word is not in A, B, C*, but it is in D, E, F, G, I, K.

— κρῖμα] punishment, judgment, first temporal judgment, by which we are visited, in order that being warned thereby we may escape eternal damnation; see vv. 30—32, where he says, that when we are being judged (κρινόμενοι) we are being chastened by the Lord, in order that we may not be condemned with the world. God in His mercy sends κρῖμα, a judgment, in order that we may escape κατάκριμα, condemnation.

— μὴ διακρίνων] if he do not distinguish it from common food. (Photius.)

30. Διὰ τοῦτο] For this cause. Who but an inspired writer, would have ventured to assert this? Who would have dared to say that an epidemic was sent from heaven for a particular cause, unless he had been himself instructed to this effect by a revelation from God?

— κοιμῶνται] are falling asleep. He does not say κεκοίμηνται, the term which he uses to describe the peace of the Saints who have fallen asleep in Jesus (see xv. 20. 1 Thess. iv. 13), but κοιμῶνται, a tense which (though sometimes used to signify a state of sleep, see Callimachus quoted on Acts vii. 60, and Matt. xxviii. 13. Acts xii. 6, where the present participle is thus used) is less expressive of a permanent condition of rest than κεκοίμηνται. Perhaps κοιμῶνται here may mean simply are dying, obdormiunt (see Bengel and Winer, § 40, p. 239); and this Christian euphemism describes the mortality then prevailing at Corinth, and does not pronounce an opinion as to their state after death.

The present tense is also found in A, B, in 1 Thess. iv. 13.

S. Chrysostom has some excellent remarks here, showing the practical bearing of the reception of the Holy Communion on the daily duties of life, especially as to the right use of those members of the body which are instrumental to its reception. How canst thou defile that hand, and those lips, and that mouth, with which thou hast received the body and blood of Christ? How canst thou pollute them with surfeiting, with foolish talking, and profane jesting, or with words of calumny and slander? Let every one hallow his right hand, his tongue, and his lips, which have been made in the Holy Eucharist to be, as it were, a door for the entrance of Christ.

31. δέ] So A, B, D, E, F, G. Elz. γάρ.

— οὐκ ἂν ἐκρινόμεθα] we should not have been judged.

32. κρινόμενοι κ.τ.λ.] See above on v. 5, and on v. 29 of this chapter.

Observe St. Paul's lenity, and charity, while he is administ vv. 21, 22. ch. 7. 17. Tit. 1. 5.

a vv 4—11. ch. 14. 1—18, 37. Eph. 4. 11. 2 Cor. 1. 8. 1 Thess. 4. 13. 2 Pet. 3. 8.
b ch. 6. 11. Eph. 2. 11, 12. 1 Thess. 1. 9.
c Mark 9. 39. ch. 8. 6. 1 John 4. 2, 3. d Rom. 12. 6. Eph. 4. 4. Heb. 2. 4. 1 Pet. 4. 10.
e Eph. 4. 11.

33 t Ὥστε, ἀδελφοί μου, συνερχόμενοι εἰς τὸ φαγεῖν ἀλλήλους ἐκδέχεσθε· 34 t εἴ τις πεινᾷ, ἐν οἴκῳ ἐσθιέτω, ἵνα μὴ εἰς κρῖμα συνέρχησθε.

Τὰ δὲ λοιπὰ ὡς ἂν ἔλθω διατάξομαι.

XII. 1 a Περὶ δὲ τῶν πνευματικῶν, ἀδελφοί, οὐ θέλω ὑμᾶς ἀγνοεῖν. 2 b Οἴδατε ὅτι ἔθνη ἦτε πρὸς τὰ εἴδωλα τὰ ἄφωνα ὡς ἂν ἤγεσθε ἀπαγόμενοι. 3 c Διὸ γνωρίζω ὑμῖν, ὅτι οὐδεὶς ἐν Πνεύματι Θεοῦ λαλῶν λέγει, Ἀνάθεμα Ἰησοῦς, καὶ οὐδεὶς δύναται εἰπεῖν, Κύριος Ἰησοῦς, εἰ μὴ ἐν Πνεύματι ἁγίῳ.

4 d Διαιρέσεις δὲ χαρισμάτων εἰσὶ, τὸ δὲ αὐτὸ Πνεῦμα· 5 e καὶ διαιρέσεις διαtering rebuke. He speaks of those who are taken away, by death, falling asleep (v. 30), he says that God's judgments, κρίματα, are sent in mercy, in order that men may not incur damnation, κατάκριμα, and he identifies himself with them, and says, when "we are being judged, we are being chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world." On this practice of St. Paul, to identify himself with others, see 1 Thess. iv. 17.

33. ἀλλήλους ἐκδέχεσθε] receive, entertain one another, with your provisions. Do not grudge a share of them to your poorer brethren. This seems to be the meaning of ἐκδέχομαι here. (Cp. ἐκδοχή.) It may, indeed, have also the meaning commonly assigned to it, Wait for one another before you begin to eat of them yourself. But it appears to imply more than this. Wait for one another, and entertain one another in a sacred ἔρανος, or common repast, to which each contributes his σύμβολον according to his means. This is a precept for the rich, that which follows is for the poor.

34. εἴ τις πεινᾷ] if any man be hungry, let him eat at home. Let not the poorer brethren imagine that the Church is a place to which they may resort to satisfy the cravings of bodily hunger, and that the Holy Eucharist was instituted for other causes than for spiritual sustenance and refreshment from communion in the Body and Blood of Christ. If they are hungry, let them eat at home, ἐν οἴκῳ, distinguished here from the Church, as in xiv. 35, that they may not come together unto condemnation.

— ὡς ἂν ἔλθω] when I shall have come. St. Paul, therefore, was meditating a visit to Corinth when he wrote this Epistle. See below, xvi. 2, ὅταν ἔλθω, 3, ὅταν παραγένωμαι, and v. 5, where he says that he will come to them when he shall have passed through Macedonia, which he is intending to visit after the approaching Pentecost (v. 8), and then to spend some time at Corinth, which he accordingly did. See Acts xx. 1, 2, and Introduction to this Epistle, p. 77.

CH. XII. 1. τῶν πνευματικῶν] the spiritual gifts (χαρίσματα) in which you are richly endowed (i. 7), and which some of you are prone to abuse for an occasion of self-display.

2. ὅτι] A, B, C, D, E, I add ὅτε. Probably the true meaning is οἴδατε ὅτε (without ὅτι), Ye remember when ye were Gentiles being led away. Or the construction may be, οἴδατε ἀπαγόμενοι, like the Latin "sensit delapsus in hostes;" and, perhaps, Copyists not understanding that construction inserted ὅτι.

— πρὸς τὰ εἴδωλα τὰ ἄφωνα] to the dumb idols; which, though dumb themselves, yet had their oracles, and prophets, and soothsayers, who professed to have spiritual gifts, such as the Pythia at Delphi; but do not be ye deceived, their gifts may easily be distinguished from ours. Chrys.

— ὡς ἂν ἤγεσθε] as ye might be led. A. V. R.

3. Ἀνάθεμα Ἰησοῦς—Κύριος Ἰησοῦς] This is the reading of A, B, C, and several Cursives, and Fathers, and Versions. Doubtless, the former was a common Jewish heathen exclamation, and the latter a Christian reply, and both were heard often in the streets of Corinth. See Justin M. Tryphon. c. 96, "Ye Jews in your Synagogues curse all who are made Christians by Him, and the Heathen do the same; and thus ye fulfil the prophecy concerning Christ, 'Cursed is he that hangeth on a tree.'" See on Gal. iii. 13. The Jews might pretend Scripture (Deut. xxi. 23) for that exclamation.

Elz. has the accusative, which weakens the sense.

As to the word ἀνάθεμα, "res diris devota," distinguished from ἀνάθημα, "res consecratione dedicata," see Acts xxiii. 14. Gal. i. 8. Rom. ix. 3. Hesych. explains ἀνάθεμα by ἐπάρατον.

It is probable that the former words were uttered by the Jews at Corinth, and also by persons possessed with Evil spirits. When St. Paul was present at Philippi and Ephesus, the Evil Spirit put cozening words into the mouth of the Pythoness there, and attempted to disarm him, and delude others by flattery. See on Acts xvi. 16—18; xix. 15.

But now, in St. Paul's absence, he appears to have shown himself in his true colours at Corinth, and to have instigated his emissaries to utter blasphemous words against Christ, ἀνάθεμα Ἰησοῦς, and to terrify Christians by imprecations.

St. Paul teaches the Corinthians not to be deluded or daunted by these fiendish maledictions; and he teaches also that the true method of encountering those diabolical assaults of the Evil Spirit, is by the power of the Holy Spirit. No one can say, "Jesus is Lord" but by the Holy Ghost. No one can maintain the κυριότης or lordship of JESUS (cp. below, 2 Pet. ii. 10. Jude 8) against the "lords many" (viii. 5) of Polytheism except by supernatural grace given by the Holy Ghost.

This precept would remind the Christians, in the days of persecution and martyrdom, where their true strength lay, when, for a trial of their Christianity, they were commanded by heathen Magistrates "Christo maledicere," as Pliny relates, Ep. x. 27.

4. τὸ δὲ αὐτὸ Πνεῦμα] but the same Spirit. "It is plain (says Bp. Middleton, p. 457) that Πνεῦμα must here be taken in the Personal sense (the Holy Ghost), nor do I see how it is possible to elude the observation of Markland, that in this and the two following verses we have distinct mention of the three Persons of the Trinity," an observation made by many of the Ancient Fathers. See the passages from S. Cyril and others in the Catena here, and Petavius (Dogmat. lib. ii. de Trinitate, c. xiii. and c. xv.), and by Bp. Andrewes in his Sermon on this text (vol. iii. p. 379):—

The text (he says) is truly tripartite, as standing evidently of three parts, every one of the three being a kind of Trinity. A Trinity, 1. personal, 2. real, and 3. actual.

I. Personal, these three: 1. "the same Spirit," 2. "the same Lord," 3. "the same God."

II. Real, these three: 1. "gifts," 2. "administrations" or offices, 3. "operations" or works.

III. Actual, these three: 1. dividing, 2. manifesting, 3. and profiting.

Three divisions from three, for three.

The three real, they be the ground of all; the 1. gifts, 2. offices, and 3. works. The three personal, 1. "the Spirit," 2. "Lord," and 3. "God," are but from whence those come. The three actual are but whither they will: 1. divided; 2. so divided, as made manifest; 3. so made manifest, as not only 1. to make a show, but πρὸς, to some end; 2. that end to be συμφέρον, the good; 3. the good, not private, of ourselves, but common, of all the whole body of the Church.

First, we find here, and finding we adore the holy, blessed, and glorious Trinity; the Spirit in plain terms, the other Two in no less plain, if we look but to the sixth verse of the eighth chapter before, where the Apostle saith, "To us there is but one God, the Father, of Whom are all things, and we of Him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by Whom are all things, and we by Him." So by "God" is intended the Father, the first Person; by "Lord" the Son, the second; by "the Spirit" the third, the usual term or title of the Holy Ghost. These three as in Trinity of Persons here distinct, so in Unity of essence one and the same.

1. Once are these Three known thus solemnly to have met, at the creating of the world. 2. Once again, at the Baptism of Christ, the new creating it. 3. And here now the third time, at the Baptism of the Church with the Holy Ghost. Where, as the manner is at all Baptisms, each bestoweth a several gift or largess on the party baptized, that is, on the Church; for whom and for whose good all this dividing and all this manifesting is. Nay, for whom and for whose good the world itself was created, Christ Himself baptized, and the Holy Ghost visibly sent down.

From this Trinity personal, comes there here another, as I may call it, a Trinity real, of 1. "Gifts," 2. "Administrations," and 3. "Operations."

1. By "Gifts" is meant the inward endowing, enabling, qualifying, whereby one, for his skill, is meet and sufficient for aught. 2. By "Administrations" is meant the outward calling, place, function or office, whereby one is authorized lawfully to deal with aught. 3. By "Operations" is meant the effect of work done, wrought, or executed by the former two, the skill of the gift and the power of the calling. Bp. Andrewes.

κονιῶν εἰσι, καὶ ὁ αὐτὸς Κύριος· [6] [f]καὶ διαιρέσεις ἐνεργημάτων εἰσὶν, ὁ δὲ αὐτὸς Θεὸς ὁ ἐνεργῶν τὰ πάντα ἐν πᾶσιν. [7] [g]Ἑκάστῳ δὲ δίδοται ἡ φανέρωσις τοῦ Πνεύματος πρὸς τὸ συμφέρον· [8] [h]ᾧ μὲν γὰρ διὰ τοῦ Πνεύματος δίδοται f Eph. 1. 23.

g Eph. 4. 7—12. 1 Pet. 4. 10, 11.
h ch. 13. 2, 8. 2 Cor. 8. 7. Eph. 1. 17, 18.

6. ἐνεργημάτων] in-wrought works. Ἐνέργημα is more than ἔργον. For ἐνέργημα is not every work, it is an in-wrought work; a work wrought by us so as in us also. And both it may be. For ἐνέργεια and συνέργεια take not away one the other. So then by ourselves, as by some other beside ourselves; and that is God, Who is said here to "work all in all." Of all our well-wrought works we say not only, "We can do none of them without Him" (John xv. 5), but further, we say with the Prophet, "Thou hast wrought all our works in us" (Isa. xxvi. 12). In them He doth not only co-operate with us from without, but even from within, as I may say, in-operate them in us, "working in you" (Heb. xiii. 21). If our ability be but of gift, if our calling be but a service, if our very work but an ἐνέργημα, "a thing wrought in us," cecidit Babylon, pride falls to the ground; these three have laid it flat. But besides this, there are three more points in ἐνέργημα. 1. "In us" they are said to be "wrought," to show our works should not be wound out of us with some wrench from without, without which nothing could come from us by our will, if we could otherwise choose,—ἐξεργήματα these properly; but ἐνεργήματα, from within, have the principium motûs, there and thence; and so are natural and kindly works. 2. Next, from within, to show they are not works done in hypocrisy; so the outside fair, what is within it skills not. But that there be "truth in the inward parts" (Ps. li. 6), that there it be wrought, and that thence it come. 3. And last, if it be an ἐνέργημα, it hath an energy, that is, a workmanship such as that the gift appears in it. For energy implies it is workman-like done. Bp. Andrewes (iii. p. 392).

7. φανέρωσις τοῦ Πνεύματος] the manifestation of the Spirit. The word Spirit, in this place, I conceive to be understood directly of the Holy Ghost, the third Person in the ever-blessed Trinity. Which yet ought not to be so understood of the Person of the Spirit, as if the Father and the Son had no part or fellowship in this business. For all the actions and operations of the divine Persons (those only excepted which are of intrinsical and mutual relation) are the joint and undivided works of the whole three Persons, according to the common known maxim, constantly and uniformly received in the Catholic Church. Opera Trinitatis ad extra sunt indivisa. And as to this particular concerning gifts, the Scriptures are clear. Wherein, as they are ascribed to God the Holy Ghost in this chapter, so they are elsewhere ascribed to God the Father: "Every good gift and every perfect giving is from above, from the Father of Lights" (St. James i. 17). And elsewhere to God the Son: Unto every one of us is given grace, according to the measure of the gift of Christ (Eph. iv. 7). • Yea, and it may be that for this very reason, in the three verses next before, these three words are used, Spirit in verse 4, Lord in verse 5, and God in verse 6, to give us intimation that these spiritual gifts proceed equally and undividedly from the whole three Persons; from God the Father, and from His Son Jesus Christ our Lord, and from the eternal Spirit of them both, the Holy Ghost, as from one entire, indivisible, and co-essential Agent.

These spiritual gifts are the manifestations of the Spirit actively, because by these the Spirit manifesteth the will of God unto the Church, these being the instruments and means of conveying the knowledge of salvation unto the people of God. And they are the manifestations of the Spirit passively too; because where any of these gifts, especially in any eminent sort, appeared in any person, it was a manifest evidence that the Spirit of God wrought in him. As we read in Acts x. 45, 46, They of the Circumcision were astonished when they saw that on the Gentiles also was poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost. If it be demanded, But how did that appear? it followeth in the next verse, For they heard them speak with tongues, &c. The spiritual gift then is a manifestation of the Spirit, as every other sensible effect is a manifestation of its proper cause. Bp. Sanderson (iii. 77).

— δίδοται] is being given. Whatsoever spiritual abilities we have, we have them of gift, and by grace. The manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man. We may hence take two profitable directions: the one, if we have any useful gifts, whom to thank for them; the other, if we want any needful gifts, where to seek for them. Whatsoever manifestation of the Spirit thou hast, it is given thee; and to whom can thy thanks for it be due but to the Giver? Sacrifice not to thine own nets (Hab. i. 16) either of nature or endeavour, as if these abilities were the manifestations of thine own spirit, but enlarge thine heart to magnify the bounty and goodness of Him who is Pater Spirituum, the Father of the spirits of all flesh (Heb. xii. 9), and hath wrought these graces in thee by communicating His Spirit unto thee. If thou shinest as a star in the firmament of the Church, whether of a greater or lesser magnitude, as one star differeth from another in glory (1 Cor. xv. 41), remember thou shinest but by a borrowed light from Him who is Pater Luminum, the Father and Fountain of all lights (James i. 17), as the Sun in the firmament, from Whom descendeth every good gift, and every perfect giving. Whatsoever grace thou hast, it is given thee: therefore be thankful to the Giver.

But if thou wantest any grace, or measure of grace, which seemeth needful for thee in that station and calling wherein God hath set thee, herein is a second direction for thee where to seek it, even from His hands Who alone can give it. If any man lack wisdom, saith St. James (James i. 5), let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally; and it shall be given him. A large and liberal promise; but yet a promise most certain, and full of comfortable assurance provided it be understood aright, viz., with these two necessary limitations: if God shall see it expedient, and if he pray for it as he ought.

Here, then, is your course. Wrestle with God by your fervent prayers, and wrestle with Him too by your faithful endeavours; and He will not, for His goodness' sake, and for His promise' sake He cannot, dismiss you without a blessing. But omit either, and the other is lost labour. Prayer without study is presumption, and study without prayer Atheism: the one bootless, the other fruitless. You take your books in vain into your hand if you turn them over and never look higher; and you take God's name in vain within your lips if you cry Da, Domine, and never stir further. The ship is then like to be steered with best certainty and success when there is Oculus ad Cœlum, manus ad Clavum: when the pilot is careful of both, to have his eye upon the compass, and his hand at the stern. Remember, these abilities you pray or study for, are the gifts of God, and as not to be had ordinarily without labour (for God is a God of order, and worketh not ordinarily but by ordinary means), so not to be had merely for the labour, for then should it not be so much a gift as a purchase. It was Simon Magus his error to think that the gift of God might be purchased with money (Acts viii. 20); and it hath a spice of his sin, and so may go for a kind of Simony, for a man to think these spiritual gifts of God may be purchased with labour. You may rise up early, and go to bed late, and study hard, and read much, and devour the fat and the marrow of the best authors, and when you have all done, unless God give a blessing unto your endeavours, be as thin and meagre in regard of true and useful learning, as Pharaoh's lean kine were after they had eaten the fat ones. (Gen. xli. 21.) It is God that both ministereth seed to the sower, and multiplieth the seed sown. The principal and the increase are both His. Bp. Sanderson (iii. 91).

— πρὸς τὸ συμφέρον] to the common profit. The word here is τὸ συμφέρον, which importeth such a kind of profit as redoundeth to community, such as before, in the tenth chapter, St. Paul professeth himself to have sought after. Not seeking mine own profit (he meaneth not only his own), but the profit of the many that they may be saved (1 Cor. x. 33). The main and essential difference between the graces of sanctification and these graces of edification is that those, though they would be made profitable unto others also, yet were principally intended for the proper good of the owner; but these, though they would be used for the owner's good also, yet were principally intended for the profit of others. You see, then, what a strong obligation lieth upon every man that hath received the Spirit, conferre aliquid in publicum, to cast his gift into the common treasury of the Church, to employ his good parts and spiritual graces so as they may some way or other be profitable to his brethren and fellow-servants in Church and Commonwealth. It is an old received Canon, "Beneficium propter officium." Bp. Sanderson (iii. p. 100).

Συμφέρον properly is collatitium, where there be a great many; bring every one his stock, and lay them together, and make them a common bank for them all. Just as do the members in the natural body. Every one confers his several gift, office, and work to the general benefit of the whole. Even as they did in the Law. Some offered gold, and others silk, others linen, and some goats' hair; and all to the furniture of the Tabernacle. And semblably we too lay together all the graces, places, works that we have, and employ them to the advancement of the common faith, and to the setting forward of the common salvation. (1 Cor. x. 33.)

And into this, as into the main cistern, do all these "divisions," "manifestations," and all, run and empty themselves. All gifts, offices, works, are for this. Yea, the blessed Trinity λόγος σοφίας, ἄλλῳ δὲ λόγος γνώσεως κατὰ τὸ αὐτὸ Πνεῦμα, [9] [i] ἑτέρῳ δὲ πίστις ἐν τῷ αὐτῷ Πνεύματι, ἄλλῳ δὲ χαρίσματα ἰαμάτων ἐν τῷ αὐτῷ Πνεύματι, [10] [j] ἄλλῳ δὲ ἐνεργήματα δυνάμεων, ἄλλῳ δὲ προφητεία, ἄλλῳ δὲ διακρίσεις πνευμάτων, ἑτέρῳ δὲ γένη γλωσσῶν, ἄλλῳ δὲ ἑρμηνεία γλωσσῶν. [11] [k] Πάντα δὲ ταῦτα ἐνεργεῖ τὸ ἓν καὶ τὸ αὐτὸ Πνεῦμα, διαιροῦν ἰδίᾳ ἑκάστῳ καθὼς βούλεται.

[12] [l] Καθάπερ γὰρ τὸ σῶμα ἕν ἐστι, καὶ μέλη ἔχει πολλά, πάντα δὲ τὰ μέλη τοῦ σώματος πολλὰ ὄντα ἕν ἐστι σῶμα, οὕτω καὶ ὁ Χριστός. [13] [m] Καὶ γὰρ ἐν ἑνὶ Πνεύματι ἡμεῖς πάντες εἰς ἓν σῶμα ἐβαπτίσθημεν, εἴτε Ἰουδαῖοι εἴτε Ἕλληνες, εἴτε δοῦλοι εἴτε ἐλεύθεροι· καὶ πάντες ἓν Πνεῦμα ἐποτίσθημεν. [14] Καὶ γὰρ τὸ σῶμα οὐκ ἔστιν ἓν μέλος, ἀλλὰ πολλά. [15] Ἐὰν εἴπῃ ὁ πούς, Ὅτι οὐκ εἰμὶ χεὶρ, οὐκ εἰμὶ ἐκ τοῦ σώματος, οὐ παρὰ τοῦτο οὐκ ἔστιν ἐκ τοῦ σώματος; [16] καὶ ἐὰν εἴπῃ τὸ οὖς, Ὅτι οὐκ εἰμὶ ὀφθαλμὸς, οὐκ εἰμὶ ἐκ τοῦ σώματος, οὐ παρὰ τοῦτο οὐκ ἔστιν ἐκ τοῦ σώματος; [17] Εἰ ὅλον τὸ σῶμα ὀφθαλμὸς, ποῦ ἡ ἀκοή; εἰ ὅλον ἀκοὴ, ποῦ ἡ ὄσφρησις; [18] Νυνὶ δὲ ὁ Θεὸς ἔθετο τὰ μέλη ἓν ἕκαστον αὐτῶν ἐν τῷ σώματι καθὼς ἠθέλησεν. [19] Εἰ δὲ ἦν τὰ πάντα ἓν μέλος, ποῦ τὸ σῶμα; [20] νῦν δὲ πολλὰ μὲν μέλη, ἓν δὲ σῶμα. [21] Οὐ δύναται δὲ ὁ ὀφθαλμὸς εἰπεῖν τῇ χειρὶ, Χρείαν σου οὐκ ἔχω· ἢ πάλιν ἡ κεφαλὴ τοῖς ποσί, i Matt. 17. 19. Mark 16. 18.

j ch. 14. 29. & vv. 28—30. Acts 2. 4. & 10. 46.

k Rom. 12. 3, 6. John 3. 8.

l Rom. 12. 4, 5. Eph. 4. 4, 16.

m Rom. 6. 5. Gal. 3. 23. 28. Eph. 2. 14—16. & 3. 6. Col. 1. 27. & 3. 11.

---

itself, in their dividing, do all aim at this. And this attained, all will be to Pax in terris, the quiet and peaceable ordering of things here on earth; and to Gloria in excelsis, the high pleasure of Almighty God. Bp. Andrewes (iii. p. 400).

8. σοφίας—γνώσεως] wisdom—knowledge. "Sapientia magis in longum, latum, profundum et altum penetrat, quam cognitio. Cognitio est quasi visûs. Sapientia visûs, cum sapore. Cognitio rerum agendarum, sapientia rerum æternarum." Bengel.

10. διακρίσεις πνευμάτων] discernings of spirits. Cp. 1 John iv. 1—3.

— γένη γλωσσῶν] kinds of foreign tongues. Cp. v. 28, γένη γλωσσῶν, and xiv. 10, γένη φωνῶν,—the only passages where the word γένος occurs in the plural number in the New Testament.

As to the signification of γένος, kind, see Matt. xiii. 47, where it is applied to kinds of fishes; and Matt. xvii. 21. Mark ix. 29, where it is used to describe a particular sort of spiritual possession and agency; and it is used by the LXX frequently for Heb. מִין (min), as Gen. i. 11, 12. 21. 24, 25.

Γλῶσσαι, as used in the New Testament, are foreign tongues as distinguished from the vernacular language of the speaker. This is the uniform exposition of all Christian antiquity, here, and Acts ii. 4, where see note, and the excellent remarks of Valck. here, who observes, that wherever the word γλῶσσαι occurs in this Epistle, it signifies foreign or strange tongues ("linguas peregrinas vel barbaras"); and that all St. Paul's reasoning on the subject in ch. xiv. is grounded on this sense of the word. See also note above on Acts x. 44—46.

In the present passage, the words γένη γλωσσῶν are explained by ἰδιότητες διαλέκτων in Glossar. Albert.; and Eustath. (ad Il. α. p. 72) interprets the word γλῶσσα by ἀπεξενωμένη διάλεκτος, a strange dialect. St. Paul (says Valck.) distinguishes here between γένη γλωσσῶν, kinds of foreign tongues, and ἑρμηνείαν γλωσσῶν, interpretation of foreign tongues.

Many of the Corinthian Christians had the χάρισμα, or gift of speaking in foreign tongues. But they abused this divine gift for vain display. St. Paul corrects this abuse, and severely censures their ostentation, particularly in the thirteenth and fourteenth chapters, where he says, v. 2, "If any man (i. e. in his own city) speaks with a γλῶσσα, or foreign tongue, he speaks to God, for no one hears, i. e. understands him;" and in v. 3, St. Paul contrasts such a man with one who προφητεύει, prophesies or preaches,—that is, who expounds in easy, intelligible language, the oracles of God, or declares His will to the hearers.

S. Jerome (ad Hedibiam, vol. iv. p. 177), commenting on this passage, speaks of the Gift of Tongues here mentioned, as a fulfilment of Christ's promise to His disciples, and as a continuation of the miracle of Pentecost, i. e. of the Gift of Tongues. (See on Acts ii. 4—6.) And he says that the Apostle St. Paul, who preached the Gospel from Jerusalem to Illyricum, and who was eager to travel from Rome to Spain, thanks God that he speaks with tongues more than they all (1 Cor. xiv. 18): "qui enim multis gentibus annunciaturus erat, multarum linguarum acceperat gratiam." See below on Rom. i. 14.

11. ἐνεργεῖ] in-worketh. The Holy Spirit is from the Father and the Son. Christ sent the Holy Spirit, and the Holy Spirit works in every member of Christ's body, and in the whole body itself. Cyril. See above on v. 6.

— τὸ ἓν καὶ τὸ αὐτὸ Πνεῦμα] the one and selfsame Spirit. The Spirit is said to divide gifts according to His pleasure, which surely is an attribute not merely of a Person, but of one who is Omnipotent. Bp. Middleton, p. 456; and so Chrys., quoted by Pearson on the Creed, Art. viii. p. 587. Cp. Heb. ii. 4.

12—22. Καθάπερ τὸ σῶμα] as the body—. A passage imitated by Clement, Bishop of Rome, writing soon after St. Paul to the same Church, that of Corinth, c. 37: λάβωμεν τὸ σῶμα ἡμῶν, ἡ κεφαλὴ δίχα τῶν ποδῶν οὐδέν ἐστιν, οὕτως οὐδὲ οἱ πόδες δίχα τῆς κεφαλῆς (see below, v. 21), τὰ δὲ ἐλάχιστα μέλη τοῦ σώματος ἡμῶν ἀναγκαῖα καὶ εὔχρηστά εἰσιν ὅλῳ τῷ σώματι, ἀλλὰ πάντα συμπνεῖ, καὶ ὑποταγῇ μιᾷ χρῆται εἰς τὸ σώζεσθαι ὅλον τὸ σῶμα· σωζέσθω οὖν ὅλον τὸ σῶμα ἡμῶν ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ, καὶ ὑποτασσέσθω ἕκαστος τῷ πλησίον αὐτοῦ, καθὼς καὶ ἐτέθη ἐν τῇ χαρίσματι αὐτοῦ.

12. τοῦ σώματος] Elz. adds τοῦ ἑνὸς, not found in the best MSS.

13. ἓν Πνεῦμα] Elz. prefixes εἰς, not in B, C, D*, F, G, and ποτίζω in the New Testament takes the accusative of the thing which is given to drink. See 1 Cor. iii. 2. Mark ix. 41.

By one Spirit we were all baptized into one body, and were all made to drink into one Spirit. That is to say, by one and the same Spirit before spoken of (vv. 3, 4. 7—9. 11) we are in Baptism made one mystical body of Christ, and we were all admitted to drink of the sacramental cup in the Eucharist, whereby the same Spirit has united us, yet more perfectly, to Christ our Head in the same mystical body.

St. Paul's design was to set forth the invisible union of Christians, and to represent the several ties by which they were bound together. He knew that the Eucharist was a strong cement of that mystical union, as well as the other Sacrament; for he had himself declared as much, by saying elsewhere, we being many are one body, being all partakers of that one bread (x. 17). It was therefore very natural here again to take notice of the Eucharist, when he was enumerating the bonds of union amongst them, particularly the Sacrament of Baptism, which would obviously lead to the mentioning this other Sacrament. Accordingly, he has briefly and elegantly made mention of this other in the words made to drink into one Spirit. Where made to drink but in the Eucharist? He had formerly signified the mystical union under the emblem of one loaf; and now he chooses to signify the same again under the emblem of one cup—an emblem wherein Ignatius, within fifty years after, seems to have followed him (ἓν ποτήριον εἰς ἕνωσιν τοῦ αἵματος αὐτοῦ. Ignat. ad Philadelph. cap. 4); both belonging to one and the same Eucharist, both referring to one and the same mystical Head. Dr. Waterland (vii. p. 269).

Χρείαν ὑμῶν οὐκ ἔχω. 22 Ἀλλὰ πολλῷ μᾶλλον τὰ δοκοῦντα μέλη τοῦ σώματος ἀσθενέστερα ὑπάρχειν ἀναγκαῖά ἐστι· 23 καὶ ἃ δοκοῦμεν ἀτιμότερα εἶναι τοῦ σώματος, τούτοις τιμὴν περισσοτέραν περιτίθεμεν· καὶ τὰ ἀσχήμονα ἡμῶν εὐσχημοσύνην περισσοτέραν ἔχει· 24 τὰ δὲ εὐσχήμονα ἡμῶν οὐ χρείαν ἔχει· ἀλλ' ὁ Θεὸς συνεκέρασε τὸ σῶμα, τῷ ὑστεροῦντι περισσοτέραν δοὺς τιμήν, 25 ἵνα μὴ ᾖ σχίσμα ἐν τῷ σώματι, ἀλλὰ τὸ αὐτὸ ὑπὲρ ἀλλήλων μεριμνῶσι τὰ μέλη. 26 Καὶ εἴτε πάσχει ἓν μέλος, συμπάσχει πάντα τὰ μέλη· εἴτε δοξάζεται ἓν μέλος, συγχαίρει πάντα τὰ μέλη.

27 [n] Ὑμεῖς δέ ἐστε σῶμα Χριστοῦ καὶ μέλη ἐκ μέρους. n Rom. 12. 6—8. Eph. 1. 23. & 4. 11—13. & 5. 23, 30. Col. 1. 24.

28 [o] Καὶ οὓς μὲν ἔθετο ὁ Θεὸς ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ πρῶτον ἀποστόλους, δεύτερον προφήτας, τρίτον διδασκάλους, ἔπειτα δυνάμεις, εἶτα χαρίσματα ἰαμάτων, ἀντιλήψεις, κυβερνήσεις, γένη γλωσσῶν. 29 Μὴ πάντες ἀπόστολοι; μὴ πάντες προφῆται; μὴ πάντες διδάσκαλοι; Μὴ πάντες δυνάμεις, 30 μὴ πάντες χαρίσματα ἔχουσιν ἰαμάτων; μὴ πάντες γλώσσαις λαλοῦσι; μὴ πάντες διερμηνεύουσι; 31 [p] Ζηλοῦτε δὲ τὰ χαρίσματα τὰ κρείττονα· καὶ ἔτι καθ' ὑπερβολὴν ὁδὸν ὑμῖν δείκνυμι. XIII. 1 [a] Ἐὰν ταῖς γλώσσαις τῶν ἀνθρώπων λαλῶ καὶ τῶν ἀγγέλων, o Eph. 4. 11. & 2. 20. Acts 13. 1. Rom. 12. 8. 1 Tim. 5. 17. Heb. 13. 17, 24. 1 Pet. 5. 1—4.

p ch. 14. 1.

a 1 Pet. 4. 8.

---

23. τούτοις τιμὴν περισσοτέραν περιτίθεμεν] we invest them with more especial honour: particularly in covering and clothing them, as is suggested by the word περιτίθεμεν. Theophyl.

Etiamsi homo cætero corpore nudus sit, hæc membra nudari non patitur. A Lapide.

24. συνεκέρασε] God mixed together —. A beautiful expression, intimating the union of all the members, fused, and, as it were, mingled together, as liquids, in one compound.

26. εἴτε πάσχει ἓν μέλος] if one member suffer. This harmony of the members in the body had been made, even by heathens, an argument against discord. See the noted Apologue of Menenius Agrippa, in Livy, ii. 32.

28. πρῶτον ἀποστόλους, δεύτερον προφήτας] first Apostles, secondly Prophets, thirdly Teachers. See on Acts xiii. 1, and Eph. iv. 11, where the order is, Apostles, Prophets, Evangelists.

For the due understanding of these passages, it must be observed, that St. Paul is speaking of charismata, special endowments or gifts, for the edification of the Church. He is not describing Orders of Ministers, appointed to serve permanently in it;

The neglect of this distinction has caused much confusion in the exposition of these passages, and has occasioned much controversy as to the regimen of the Church;

It may therefore be worth while to remind the reader of what has been well said on this point by Richard Hooker (V. lxxviii. 6, 7).

He shows there and elsewhere that there are but three Orders of Ministers in the Church, duly settled and constituted, viz. Bishops, succeeding the Apostles in their ordinary functions (not in their extraordinary gifts), Priests, and Deacons; and he says,— Touching Prophets, they were such men as having otherwise learned the Gospel, had from above bestowed upon them a special gift of expounding Scriptures, and of foreshowing things to come. Of this sort was Agabus (Acts xxi. 10; xi. 27), and besides him in Jerusalem sundry others, who notwithstanding are not therefore to be reckoned with the Clergy; because no man's gifts or qualities can make him a minister of holy things unless Ordination do give him power. And we nowhere find Prophets to have been made by Ordination, but all whom the Church did ordain were either to serve as Presbyters or as Deacons.

Evangelists were Presbyters of principal sufficiency, whom the Apostles sent abroad, and used as agents in ecclesiastical affairs wheresoever they saw need. They whom we find to have been named in Scripture Evangelists, as Ananias (Acts ix. 17), Apollos (Acts xviii. 24), Timothy (2 Tim. iv. 5. 9. 1 Tim. iii. 15; v. 19. 2 Tim. ii. 7), and others, were thus employed.

And concerning Evangelists afterwards in Trajan's days, the History Ecclesiastical noteth (Euseb. iii. 38), that many of the Apostles' disciples and scholars which were then alive, and did with singular love of wisdom affect the heavenly Word of God, to show their willing minds in executing that which Christ first of all required at the hands of men, they sold their possessions, gave them to the poor, and betaking themselves to travel, undertook the labour of Evangelists, that is, they painfully preached Christ, and delivered the Gospel to them who as yet had never heard the doctrine of faith. Hooker. Cp. note below on Eph. iv. 11.

With regard to διδάσκαλοι, mentioned here and in Eph. iv. 11, the word does not describe any separate order in the Church, but denotes a special gift and quality distinguishing some persons in the Church. Thus the Apostle St. Paul himself was eminently a διδάσκαλος, and he is twice called by that title by himself; διδάσκαλος ἐθνῶν, doctor Gentium, 1 Tim. ii. 7. 2 Tim. i. 11, and in both these passages the word διδάσκαλος, or doctor, is associated with ἀπόστολος and κήρυξ. He was sent to do the work of a preacher (κήρυξ), and was ordained to the degree of an Apostle (ἀπόστολος), and was endowed with supernatural gifts and special revelations to be a διδάσκαλος. Compare Acts xiii. 1, where διδάσκαλοι are joined with προφῆται, and where Paul and Barnabas are already reckoned among Prophets and Teachers, προφῆται καὶ διδάσκαλοι, before they had been set apart and empowered by laying on of hands in Ordination to the degree and office of Apostles.

— δυνάμεις] powers. From persons he passes to things; intimating that Apostles, Prophets, Teachers, are themselves χαρίσματα, free gifts and graces from God. Hence he uses the word ἔδωκεν, 'God gave some Apostles.' Eph. iv. 11. They are not to be regarded as sources of grace, or to be raised up one against the other as heads of parties; and none may boast of themselves, whatever may be their graces; for what are these graces but gifts of God, and what hast thou which thou hast not received? (1 Cor. iv. 7.)

— ἀντιλήψεις] helps, or rather helpings, e. g. of the feeble, sick, and needy. See Acts xx. 35, ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι (to take hold of in order to support) τῶν ἀσθενούντων. He thus prepares the way for his appeal in behalf of the poor saints at Jerusalem; and he teaches, that the ἀντίληψις or helping of such persons is not only a duty, but a grace; and so he calls it 2 Cor. viii. 1. 4. 6, 7. 19. Cp. 1 Cor. xvi. 3.

— κυβερνήσεις] governments, or rather governings, as in pastoral charges of Diocesan Episcopacy (the case of Timothy and Titus), and of Presbyters ordained to settled cures. Acts xiv. 23; xx. 17. Tit. i. 5.

— γένη γλωσσῶν] kinds of tongues. Observe, that gift, in which the Corinthians gloried most, is placed last.

29. δυνάμεις] powers. The accusative case after ἔχουσι. Have all the power of working miracles?

31. Ζηλοῦτε] covet ye earnestly. See on Gal. iv. 17.

— καθ' ὑπερβολὴν ὁδὸν δείκνυμι] I am about to point out to you a loftier way,—a sublimer path, an ὁδὸν ὑπερ-έχουσαν (Theoph.),—a transcendent road; for as S. Clement says, imitating this passage of St. Paul (ad Cor. 49), τὸ ὕψος εἰς ὃ ἀνάγει ἡ ἀγάπη ἀνεκδιήγητόν ἐστιν, 'the height to which Charity leads is ineffable.' On the idiom ἔτι καθ' ὑπερβολήν, see 2 Cor. i. 8; iv. 17. Gal. i. 13. Winer, § 54, p. 413. Cp. 2 Cor. xi. 23.

This word, ὑπὲρ-βολήν, from ὑπερβάλλω, to shoot beyond, indicates the figure of speech which St. Paul uses. The Corinthians imagined that they could ascend to heaven by a manifestation of spiritual gifts, and they despised the way of Charity as too lowly for their aspirations. They had left it for the devious paths of 'divisions' and dissensions (see i. 10, and xi. 8), and deemed themselves to be spiritual (cp. iii. 1) because they were rich in supernatural gifts, which they loved to display in a vainglorious spirit, instead of using that and all other gifts to the one ἀγάπην δὲ μὴ ἔχω, γέγονα χαλκὸς ἠχῶν, ἢ κύμβαλον ἀλαλάζον. [2] [b] Καὶ ἐὰν ἔχω προφητείαν, καὶ εἰδῶ τὰ μυστήρια πάντα, καὶ πᾶσαν τὴν γνῶσιν, καὶ ἐὰν ἔχω πᾶσαν τὴν πίστιν ὥστε ὄρη μεθιστάνειν, ἀγάπην δὲ μὴ ἔχω, οὐδέν εἰμι. [3] Καὶ ἐὰν ψωμίσω πάντα τὰ ὑπάρχοντά μου, καὶ ἐὰν παραδῶ τὸ σῶμά μου ἵνα καυθήσωμαι, ἀγάπην δὲ μὴ ἔχω, οὐδὲν ὠφελοῦμαι.

[4] [c] Ἡ ἀγάπη μακροθυμεῖ, χρηστεύεται· ἡ ἀγάπη οὐ ζηλοῖ· ἡ ἀγάπη οὐ περπερεύεται, οὐ φυσιοῦται, [5] [d] οὐκ ἀσχημονεῖ, οὐ ζητεῖ τὰ ἑαυτῆς, οὐ παροξύνεται, οὐ λογίζεται τὸ κακὸν, [6] [e] οὐ χαίρει ἐπὶ τῇ ἀδικίᾳ, συγχαίρει δὲ τῇ ἀληθείᾳ· [7] πάντα στέγει, πάντα πιστεύει, πάντα ἐλπίζει, πάντα ὑπομένει. [8] [f] Ἡ ἀγάπη οὐδέποτε ἐκπίπτει. Εἴτε δὲ προφητεῖαι, καταργηθήσονται· εἴτε γλῶσσαι, b Matt. 7. 22. & 17. 20. & 21. 21. Mark 11. 23. Luke 17. 6. Rom. 12. 7. ch. 12. 8, 9, 28. & 14. 1, 6—9.

c Prov. 10. 12. 2 Cor. 6. 6. Gal. 5. 22. Eph. 4. 2. Col. 1. 11. & 3. 12. 2 Tim. 2. 25. 1 Pet. 4. 8.
d ch. 10. 24, 33. Phil. 2. 4, 21. 2 Tim. 2. 10. 1 John 3. 16, 17.
e Ps. 10. 3. & 15. 4. Rom. 1. 32. 1 John 5. 2.
f vv. 10, 13. Luke 22. 32. Gal. 5. 6. ch. 12. 10, 28—30. & 14. 39. Acts 2. 4. & 19. 6. Jer. 49. 7. Heb. 8. 13.

end for which they are given by God,—that of edification. St. Paul teaches them, that their estimate of the respective value of spiritual gifts is very erroneous (xiv. 1—3); that it is a childish vanity to prefer the empty ostentation of speaking foreign tongues in their own domestic assemblies (when no foreigners were present) to the more useful gift of exposition of Scripture; and he therefore exhorts them to covet earnestly the better gifts. (ζηλοῦτε τὰ χαρίσματα τὰ κρείττονα.) He tells them also that he is going to point out to them a loftier Way, a Way which transcends all other ways; a Way which they thought to be lowly, but which he shows them to be lofty; a Way which will lead them up to higher degrees of spiritual elevation, and to more glorious spiritual prospects, than could be attained by any of those gifts which they most vaunted; a Way which will teach them how to use aright all those spiritual gifts, and without which Way all those gifts are worthless; a Way which will remain when those gifts have vanished; a Way which will lead to Heaven, and abide for ever in Heaven—THE WAY OF CHARITY.

CH. XIII. 1. Ἀγάπην] Love. "Dilectionem," Tertullian, de Patient. 12, where he well says that this Apostolic description of Charity or Love is uttered "totis Spiritûs viribus." Compare his treatise contra Marcion. (v. 8). Ἀγάπη is rendered 'Caritas' by the Vulgate, which, however, almost always renders ἀγαπᾶν by diligere, and φιλεῖν by amare. See Buttmann ap. Lachmann, N. T. p. xlv, and above on John xxi. 15.

— γέγονα χ. ἠ., ἢ κ. ἀ.] I have become already—"factus sum,"—by my own fault, mere brass that rings, or a cymbal that clangs, without soul or sense, "vox et prætereà nihil." The words Δωδωναῖον χαλκεῖον were proverbial, and Apion, the grammarian, was called "Cymbalum orbis," for his garrulity (Sueton. de Grammaticis). The metaphor was suitable to Corinth, famous for its works in brass, "Ephyrëia æra" (Virg. Georg. ii. 464. Joseph. Vit. 13, and Winer, R. W. B. ii. 89). By their empty γλωσσολαλία the Corinthians reduced themselves from rational beings, living instruments (ἔμψυχα ὄργανα) of God, to mere κύμβαλα and κρόταλα (Aristoph. Nub. 448), cymbals and castagnettes, such as were made in their own factories.

2. ἐὰν ἔχω προφητείαν] though I have the gift of prophecy—, as Balaam had (cp. 2 Pet. ii. 15. Jude 11), and Caiaphas (John xi. 49—51) had; but they had not charity; and therefore their spiritual gifts only increased their guilt.

— καὶ εἰδῶ τὰ μυστήρια πάντα] and although I know the mysteries, all of them, and all the knowledge, and have all the faith. On the use of πᾶς, see Winer, § 18, p. 101.

3. ἐὰν ψωμίσω] even though I have reduced all my goods to provisions, ψωμία, fragments (from ψάω) dipped into the dish (John xiii. 26); and because bread was used for this purpose, hence in modern Greek, ψωμὶ = bread. The sense therefore is, though I have reduced to provisions, and doled out all my goods to feed the poor.

Ψωμίζω is found in LXX, with the accusative of the thing given to be eaten, as here, in Deut. viii. 3. 16, ψωμίσας τὸ μάννα, Lam. iii. 16, ἐψώμισέ με σποδὸν, and in Dan. iv. 22 (Theodot.), χόρτον ψωμιοῦσί σε. Cp. Dan. v. 21. The accusative of the person fed, occurs Aristoph. Lysist. 19, and in Rom. xii. 20, ψώμιζε αὐτόν. Cp. Winer, § 2.

— ἐὰν παραδῶ τὸ σῶμά μου] even if I have given up my body to be burned. So Ignatius (frag. ii. ap. Chrys. Hom. ad Ephes. Epist. xi.; see Jacobson, p. 493), "Not even the blood of Martyrdom can blot out the sin of Schism;" and after him, Cyprian (Ep. 55), "quale crimen, quod martyrio non potest expiari!" So Augustine (Serm. 138), "Ecce venitur ad passionem, ad sanguinis fusionem, ad corporis incensionem: et tamen nihil prodest, quia Caritas deest. Adde Caritatem, prosunt omnia; detrahe Caritatem, nihil prosunt cætera. Quale bonum est Caritas!" And he says, "Non habent Dei Caritatem, qui non amant Ecclesiæ Unitatem." A solemn caution against Divisions and Dissensions in the Church.

— καυθήσωμαι] A, B have καυχήσωμαι, which is worth notice, as showing that the best uncial MSS. are not always to be depended upon, and sometimes are blemished with errors.

— οὐδὲν ὠφελοῦμαι] I am profited nothing. "Qui deseruerit unitatem, violat Caritatem, et quisquis violat Caritatem, quodlibet magnum habeat, ipse nihil est. Si linguis hominum et Angelorum loquatur, si sciat omnia sacramenta, si habeat omnem fidem, ut montes transferat, si distribuat omnia sua pauperibus, si corpus suum tradat ut ardeat, Caritatem autem non habeat, nihil est, nihil ei prodest. Universa inutiliter habet, qui unum illud, per quod universis utatur, non habet. Amplectamur itaque Caritatem, studentes servare unitatem spiritûs in vinculo pacis (Eph. iv. 3). Non nos seducant, qui corporalem separationem facientes ab Ecclesiæ frumentis toto orbe diffusis, spirituali sacrilegio separantur." Augustine (Serm. 88). A salutary warning, whenever intellectual and spiritual gifts, and religious acts of self-devotion are proposed as objects for admiration and imitation, irrespectively of those principles of Unity and Charity, which are necessary to make them acceptable to Him who is the Author of Peace and Lover of Concord in His Church.

4. οὐ ζηλοῖ] envieth not—as Cain envied Abel; and his brethren envied Joseph. (Origen.)

— οὐ περπερεύεται] doth not show off itself by word or deed, in a restless and vain-glorious eagerness for display; does not put itself forward with professions of superior knowledge and skill. (Origen.) It is rendered by Tertullian (de Patient. c. 12), "non protervum sapit." It is used by Cicero (ad Att. i. 14) concerning himself, "Dii boni, quomodo ἐπερπερευσάμην novo auditori, Pompeio!" and Polybius (Exc. Leg. 122) applies the word πέρπερος to a vain, pompous, and loquacious pedant, and Schol. (ad Soph. Antig. 33) connects it with περίαλος. See Wetstein here; and from the fact of its denoting excess, it may be derived from the root περὶ, and may be connected with the Latin perperam. (Valck.)

5. οὐ λογίζεται τὸ κακόν] doth not reckon up, and impute the evil which it suffers; does not set it down and record it, as in a bill, against the person who does the wrong; but forgets it, and overcomes it with good. Cp. Theodoret, who says, συγγινώσκει τοῖς ἐπαισμένοις. As to this use of λογίζομαι, see 2 Cor. v. 19, μὴ λογιζόμενος αὐτοῖς τὰ παραπτώματα.

6. οὐ χαίρει ἐπὶ τῇ ἀδικίᾳ, συγχαίρει δὲ τῇ ἀληθείᾳ] Well rendered by Vulg. (as far as the Latin language allowed), "non gaudet super Iniquitate, congaudet autem Veritate." Charity does not rejoice in the Unrighteousness which prevails in the world—as evil spirits and evil men do (Rom. i. 32. Hos. vii. 3)—but she rejoices with the Truth, especially the saving Truth of Him Who is the Truth. She takes pleasure in all that the Truth achieves and endures now, and in all that she will enjoy hereafter.

As to the contrast here between ἡ ἀδικία and ἡ ἀλήθεια, or Christian Truth, see John vii. 18, and Rom. i. 18, and 2 Thess. ii. 10. 12, ἵνα κριθῶσι πάντες οἱ μὴ πιστεύσαντες τῇ ἀληθείᾳ, ἀλλ' εὐδοκήσαντες ἐν τῇ ἀδικίᾳ.

7. πάντα στέγει] beareth all things; βαστάζει, ὑπομένει (Hesych.): "sustinet, tolerat" (Tertullian, de Pat. 12). See 1 Thess. iii. 1. 5. 1 Cor. ix. 12. And on this verse and the context, compare the description of Ἀγάπη by S. Clement, writing also to the Corinthians (c. 49), Ἀγάπη πάντα ἀνέχεται, πάντα μακροθυμεῖ· οὐδὲν βάναυσον ἐν ἀγάπῃ, οὐδὲν ὑπερήφανον, ἀγάπη σχίσμα οὐκ ἔχει, οὐ στασιάζει, πάντα ποιεῖ ἐν ὁμονοίᾳ· δίκαι ἀγάπης οὐδὲν εὐάρεστον τῷ Θεῷ.

8. καταργηθήσονται] they will be brought to nought; they will be reduced to a state of ἀέργεια, or inoperation, because their ἔργον will be done; they will therefore be no more needed. On παύσονται· εἴτε γνῶσις, καταργηθήσεται. 9 Ἐκ μέρους γὰρ γινώσκομεν, καὶ ἐκ μέρους προφητεύομεν· 10 ὅταν δὲ ἔλθῃ τὸ τέλειον, τὸ ἐκ μέρους καταργηθήσεται. 11 Ὅτε ἤμην νήπιος, ἐλάλουν ὡς νήπιος, ὡς νήπιος ἐφρόνουν, ὡς νήπιος ἐλογιζόμην· ὅτε δὲ γέγονα ἀνὴρ, κατήργηκα τὰ τοῦ νηπίου. 12 [g] Βλέπομεν γὰρ ἄρτι δι' ἐσόπτρου ἐν αἰνίγματι, τότε δὲ πρόσωπον πρὸς πρόσωπον· ἄρτι γινώσκω ἐκ μέρους, τότε δὲ ἐπιγνώσομαι καθὼς καὶ ἐπεγνώσθην.

[g] 2 Cor. 3. 18. & 5. 7. Phil. 3. 12. Num. 12. 8. Matt. 5. 8. & 18. 10. Rom. 8. 18. 1 John 3. 2. Rev. 22. 4.

13 Νυνὶ δὲ μένει πίστις, ἐλπὶς, ἀγάπη, τὰ τρία ταῦτα· μείζων δὲ τούτων ἡ ἀγάπη.

XIV. 1 [a] Διώκετε τὴν ἀγάπην, ζηλοῦτε δὲ τὰ πνευματικὰ, μᾶλλον δὲ ἵνα προφητεύητε.

[a] ch. 12. 31.

---

this use of καταργεῖν, see on Luke xiii. 7. Gal. iii. 17; v. 4. 2 Cor. iii. 7. Rom. iii. 31. The ἔργον of ἀγάπη will remain when all χαρίσματα, and other χάριτες, will be καταργημένα; and her ἔργον will be τέλειον, and its τελειότης will have no τέλος, or end. The Latin word corresponding to καταργῶ is evacuo. So Tertullian (de Patient. c. 12), "Dilectio nunquam excidit; cætera evacuabuntur;" and so the Latin translation of Irenæus, who says admirably (iv. 12), "Paulus inquit, omnibus cæteris evacuatis, manere Fidem, Spem, Dilectionem, majorem autem esse omnium Dilectionem, eam verò perficere perfectum hominem, etenim qui diligit Deum perfectum esse in hoc ævo et futuro: nunquam enim desinemus diligentes Deum, sed quanto plus Eum intuiti sumus, tanto plus Eum diligemus.

"In Lege igitur et Evangelio quum sit primum et maximum præceptum diligere Dominum Deum ex toto corde, dehinc simile illi diligere proximum sicut seipsum, unus et idem ostenditur Legis et Evangelii conditor. Consummatæ enim vitæ præcepta in utroque Testamento cum sint eadem, eundem ostenderunt Deum, qui particularia quidem præcepta apta utrisque præcepit, sed eminentiora et summa (τὴν καθ' ὑπερβολὴν ὁδὸν τῆς ἀγάπης) sine quibus salvari non est, in utroque eadem suasit."

9. Ἐκ μέρους] ex parte cognoscimus, et ex parte prophetamus. (Iren. v. 7.)

11. ἐλάλουν—ἐφρόνουν—ἐλογιζόμην] Observe the imperfects; I was talking—I was thinking—I was reasoning—as a child.

— γέγονα] I am become.

12. Βλέπομεν ἄρτι δι' ἐσόπτρου ἐν αἰνίγματι] We now behold by means of a mirror objects revealed in enigma, "per speculum et per ænigmata." (Iren. iv. 9.) St. Paul alludes to Num. xii. 8, where δι' αἰνιγμάτων is opposed to ἐν εἴδει, and is explained by it, στόμα κατὰ στόμα λαλήσω αὐτῷ (to Moses) ἐν εἴδει, καὶ οὐ δι' αἰνιγμάτων.

St. Paul does not use the word δίοπτρον, but ἔσοπτρον, a glass to be looked into, and not a glass to be looked through; and δι' ἐσόπτρου does not mean, through a glass, in the sense of looking through it, unless perhaps it may be said that inasmuch as the object reflected in the glass appears to be behind the glass, so the spectator may be said to see it through the glass. Cp. Winer, § 47, p. 340. But it signifies, by means of a looking-glass or mirror (so xiv. 9, διὰ τῆς γλώσσης: cp. Winer, § 47, p. 399), in which heavenly things are represented to us, not distinctly, but dimly and ἐν αἰνίγματι, cp. Eurip. Rhes. 5, i. e. αἰνικτηρίως, αἰνιγματωδῶς, enigmatically, opposed to plainly. Æschyl. Prom. 852. 970. Agam. 1154. Compare 2 Cor. iii. 18, τὴν δόξαν Κυρίου κατοπτριζόμενοι, and James i. 23, κατανοοῦνται τὸ πρόσωπον ἐν ἐσόπτρῳ. The metaphor would be well understood by the Corinthians, because the ancient mirrors were (not of glass, but) of polished metal or brass (see Xenophon, Symp. 7, who calls a mirror χαλκεῖον), for working in which the Corinthians were famous. See Winer, R. W. B. art. Spiegel, p. 496, and the Anthology passim.

We now see with the eye of Faith and Hope, and behold the divine Attributes reflected in the mirror of God's Works, of His Word, and of His Sacraments, but hereafter we shall see God Himself face to face.

The Present things are a shadow of the Future. In Holy Baptism we see a type of the Resurrection; but hereafter we shall see the Resurrection itself. Now we see the symbols of Christ's Body; hereafter we shall see that Body itself, face to face. Theodoret.

God hath revealed Himself and His good pleasure towards us in His holy Word sufficiently to save our souls, if we will believe; but not to solve all our doubts, if we will dispute. The Scriptures being written for our sakes, it was needful they should be fitted to our capacities; and therefore the Mysteries contained therein are set forth by such resemblances as we are capable of, but far short of the nature and excellency of the things themselves. The best knowledge we can have of them here, is but per speculum (1 Cor. xiii. 12) and in ænigmate, as it were in a glass, and by way of riddle; darkly both God teacheth us by the eye in His creatures; that is, per speculum, as it were by a glass, and that but a dim one, wherein we may read τὸ γνωστὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ, some of the invisible things of God (Rom. i. 19, 20), but written in small and outworn characters, scarce legible by us. He teacheth us also by the ear, in the preaching of His holy Word; but that in ænigmate, altogether by riddles, dark riddles. That there should be three distinct Persons in one Essence, and two distinct Natures in one Person; that Virginity should conceive, Eternity be born, Immortality die, and Mortality rise from death to life; that there should be a finite and mortal God, or an infinite and immortal Man; what are all these, and many other more of like intricacy, but so many riddles? Bp. Sanderson (i. 234).

— ἐπιγνώσομαι] I shall fully know. More expressive than γνώσομαι. See Luke i. 4. I shall fully know and love as I have been fully known and loved by Him. Cp. xvi. 18, ἐπιγινώσκετε τοιούτους: Matt. xi. 27, ἐπιγινώσκει τὸν υἱὸν, and see the use of the word ἐπίγνωσις by St. Paul in Col. i. 9, 10; ii. 2; iii. 10. Philem. 6. Eph. i. 17; iv. 13. Tit. i. 1. Cp. 2 Pet. i. 2, 3. 8.

13. Νυνὶ δὲ μένει—τὰ τρία ταῦτα] But now, in this present state of being (as contradistinguished from hereafter; see on xiv. 6), abide these Three Christian Graces; that is, these Three are permanent in this world, which the supernatural χαρίσματα—in which ye Corinthians so much vaunt yourselves—are not.

This is said to show their dignity. How great, therefore, a fortiori, is the dignity of Love, which will survive the two other Graces! (see Rom. viii. 24. Heb. xi. 1, and Chrys. here,) which will survive those glorious Gifts of Tongues, and Miracles, and Prophecy—when Faith will be swallowed up in Sight, and Hope be absorbed in Fruition!

On the subject of this Chapter, see the affecting Sermon of S. Augustine, delivered by him in his old age (Serm. 350), and forming an appropriate sequel to the narrative concerning the beloved disciple, St. John (S. Jerome in Galat. vi.), that in his old age he was carried to the Church, where his Sermon was, "My dear Children, Love one another."

CH. XIV. 1. Διώκετε τὴν ἀγάπην] Follow ye after Charity. The metaphor is from the Stadium. Make Charity your aim and end (σκοπὸς) in the whole race of your Christian life. Cp. Phil. iii. 14.

Having described the character of Charity, St. Paul now proceeds to apply what he has said;

The main principle to be borne in mind throughout this chapter is, that the use of all supernatural χαρίσματα, or extraordinary spiritual Gifts (which were probationary talents and trusts that might be abused, and were often abused, by those who received them), is to be regulated by the great abiding Christian χάρις, or Charity.

The main work of Charity is Edification,—the building up of the Church, or body of Christ. See viii. 1, ἡ γνῶσις φυσιοῖ, ἡ δὲ ἀγάπη οἰκοδομεῖ. And therefore throughout this chapter he is perpetually inculcating the words edify and edification. See vv. 3—5. 12. 17. 26.

With this clue in our hands, we shall find no difficulty in following the Apostle's meaning through the Chapter, which otherwise would be intricate and perplexing, and which has been unhappily embarrassed and obscured by novel meanings assigned in some expositions to the word γλῶσσα, Tongue, used by St. Paul; which never means an incoherent jargon, or spasmodic utterance, or confused gibberish, but simply a foreign language not understood by the hearers (see above on xii. 10, and Acts ii. 4; x. 46; xix. 6), but uttered with full consciousness of its meaning by the speaker. See xiv. 2. 14—16.

This is the interpretation of the ancient Expositors;

In primitive times, believers were supernaturally gifted with

b Acts 2. 4. & 10. 46.
c Acts 13. 15. Rom. 12. 8.

2 [b] Ὁ γὰρ λαλῶν γλώσσῃ οὐκ ἀνθρώποις λαλεῖ ἀλλὰ τῷ Θεῷ, οὐδεὶς γὰρ ἀκούει, πνεύματι δὲ λαλεῖ μυστήρια· 3 [c] ὁ δὲ προφητεύων ἀνθρώποις λαλεῖ οἰκοδομὴν, καὶ παράκλησιν, καὶ παραμυθίαν. 4 Ὁ λαλῶν γλώσσῃ ἑαυτὸν οἰκοδομεῖ, ὁ δὲ προφητεύων ἐκκλησίαν οἰκοδομεῖ. 5 Θέλω δὲ πάντας ὑμᾶς λαλεῖν γλώσσαις, μᾶλλον δὲ ἵνα προφητεύητε· μείζων γὰρ ὁ προφητεύων ἢ ὁ λαλῶν γλώσσαις, ἐκτὸς εἰ μὴ διερμηνεύῃ, ἵνα ἡ ἐκκλησία οἰκοδομὴν λάβῃ.

d Eph. 1. 17. Phil. 3. 15.
e ch. 12. 8. & 13. 8, 9. Rom. 15. 14. 2 Cor. 11. 6. Eph. 3. 4. 2 Pet. 1. 5. & 3. 18.

6 [d] Νῦν δὲ, ἀδελφοὶ, ἐὰν ἔλθω πρὸς ὑμᾶς γλώσσαις λαλῶν, τί ὑμᾶς ὠφελήσω, ἐὰν μὴ ὑμῖν λαλήσω ἢ ἐν ἀποκαλύψει, ἢ ἐν [e] γνώσει, ἢ ἐν προφητείᾳ, ἢ ἐν διδαχῇ ;

7 [f] Ὅμως τὰ ἄψυχα φωνὴν διδόντα, εἴτε αὐλὸς εἴτε κιθάρα, ἐὰν διαστολὴν τοῖς φθόγγοις μὴ δῷ, πῶς γνωσθήσεται τὸ αὐλούμενον ἢ τὸ κιθαριζόμενον ; 8 καὶ γὰρ ἐὰν ἄδηλον φωνὴν σάλπιγξ δῷ, τίς παρασκευάσεται εἰς πόλεμον ;

9 Οὕτω καὶ ὑμεῖς διὰ τῆς γλώσσης ἐὰν μὴ εὔσημον λόγον δῶτε, πῶς γνωσθήσεται τὸ λαλούμενον ; ἔσεσθε γὰρ εἰς ἀέρα λαλοῦντες.

10 Τοσαῦτα, εἰ τύχοι, γένη φωνῶν εἰσιν ἐν κόσμῳ, καὶ οὐδὲν ἄφωνον. 11 Ἐὰν οὖν μὴ εἰδῶ τὴν δύναμιν τῆς φωνῆς, ἔσομαι τῷ λαλοῦντι βάρβαρος· καὶ ὁ the power of speaking foreign tongues. But many abused the gift. What was the benefit of speaking at Corinth in the language of Scythia, Persia, and Egypt? He who did this spoke not to man, but to God. St. Paul reprehends this vain-glory, and teaches the right use of the gift. Theodoret. See also Chrysostom on xii. 1.

---

— ζηλοῦτε δὲ τὰ πνευματικά] but earnestly covet and cherish spiritual gifts. See above, note on 1 Thess. v. 20, and cp. below, v. 39; and on the sense of ζηλοῦτε see Gal. iv. 17.

— ἵνα προφητεύητε] in order that you may prophesy: that is, may declare or expound God's Word. See above, 1 Thess. v. 20. 1 Cor. xi. 4, and below, Rom. xii. 6.

2. Ὁ λαλῶν γλώσσῃ] He that speaketh with a foreign tongue, speaketh not to men, but to God; for no one who is present understandeth him; but in his spirit, or inner man (see on v. 14) he speaketh mysteries,—things hidden, not clear to the hearers.

If a disciple has the gift of speaking to one person in the tongue of the Medes, and to another in that of the Elamites, and then were to go and speak in these tongues to the Jewish Synagogues, or[1] to the congregations of Greeks, concerning which the Apostle is here speaking, what use would it be? who would listen to him? God only, Who knoweth all things, would understand him. S. Cyril.

Ἀκούω, like the Hebrew שָׁמַע (shama), often signifies in the LXX, not simply to hear, but to perceive and understand; as S. Jerome says (in prolog. Ioelis): "Auditus in Scripturis Sacris non est iste qui ad aures sonat, sed qui in corde percipitur." Cp. Gen. xi. 7; xlii. 23. Matt. xv. 10. Glass., Phil. Sacr., p. 843, and Valck. here.

5. εἰ μὴ διερμηνεύῃ] unless he (the speaker) interpret what he says, into the vernacular language of the hearers (see v. 13); as was usually done in reading the Hebrew Scriptures, by means of oral and written translations, Paraphrases, or Targums. See Neh. viii. 4—8. Hottinger, Thesaur. Philol. pp. 251—260.

6. Νῦν δὲ, ἀδελφοί] But now, brethren, if I come to you—and by specifying myself I mean any one generally—if any one comes to you (see v. 14, and on vi. 12), now that ye are brethren, and have renounced Heathenism, and do not require to be converted to the faith by the miracle of tongues—.

He therefore means, that those who affected the use of foreign tongues at Corinth now, degraded their hearers to a heathen condition. See on vv. 21, 22.

For νῦν Elz. has νυνὶ here; and so some recent editions; but νῦν is in A, B, D*, F, G, and νυνὶ seems to be due to copyists, not fully understanding the argument of St. Paul; but even νυνὶ itself sometimes is expressive of time, see Rom. vi. 22; vii. 6. 17; xv. 23. 25; above, xiii. 13.

— ἐὰν μὴ ὑμῖν λαλήσω] unless I speak to you in some edifying manner, either by revelation, or knowledge, or prophecy, or doctrine. What shall I profit you if I speak with tongues? and what shall I profit you, except I speak to your edification? On the use of ἐὰν μὴ, where the excepted case does not belong to the same class as those which are not excepted, see Luke iv. 26.

7. Ὅμως] Even the lifeless instruments fail of their office, unless they give a διαστολὴ, or distinct articulation of musical notes, by their sounds.

Winer (§ 61, p. 488) connects ὅμως with ἐὰν, and construes it nevertheless.

St. Paul's argument is, It is required even of lifeless instruments that they should give a distinct utterance, a well-defined rhythm, and clearly expressed notes, ῥυθμὸν, ἐναρμόνιον ἦχον (Photius, Theodoret), by their voices. How else shall it be understood what that is which is designed to be played by their means? How shall it be understood whether it is a strain of Homer or of Pindar, or whether it is intended to be mournful or joyful?

What a tune is to the lifeless instrument, sense is to the living instrument, the human Tongue.

If then the lifeless instrument ought to have a distinct significance in its utterance, how much more ought the living instrument to give forth intelligible sounds? If the former ought to play a well-defined tune, in order to delight the hearers in the Odëum or the Theatre, how much more ought the latter to utter what can be understood by those who seek for edification in the Church of God? But how can it do this, if it speak in a foreign language to those who understand it not?

8. ἐὰν ἄδηλον φ. σάλπιγξ δ., τ. π. ε. πόλεμον;] if the trumpet also give an unmeaning sound, who shall prepare himself for the battle? If it does not give the war-note, who will obey it? It must be hortatory and practical. It was eminently so in the history of the ancient Church. See the divine injunctions concerning the silver Trumpets, Num. x. 1—9, "When ye go out to battle (πόλεμον), ye shall sound an alarm with the Trumpets."

Πόλεμος = battle in LXX. Ps. lxviii. 31. Job xxxviii. 23. and in N. T. Rev. ix. 9; xx. 8, and in the modern language of Greece to this day.

So in the spiritual battles of the Church against her ghostly enemies, unless the Preachers of the Gospel, who are commanded to "lift up their voice as a trumpet" (Isa. lviii. 1. Joel ii. 1), speak in a clear and thrilling language, which the people can understand and feel, who shall prepare for the spiritual conflict?

9. διὰ τῆς γλώσσης] by your tongue. Bp. Middleton.

10. Τοσαῦτα, εἰ τύχοι—ἄφωνον] There is perchance such a multitude of languages in the world (Roman, Scythian, and the rest. Chrysostom, Cyril), and nothing is without a language. Τοσαῦτα intimates that the diversities of languages in the world amount to such or such a number, and that a very great one, which the writer would specify if it could be counted, or if it were requisite for his argument that it should be specified. Compare τοσαῦτα, Luke xv. 29. John xii. 37. As to εἰ τύχοι, perchance, see xv. 37.

The best MSS. have εἰσὶν here. Elz. has ἐστὶν, and adds αὐτῶν without sufficient authority.

11. Ἐὰν οὖν] Since languages differ generally so much from one another, as has been said,—if, therefore, I do not know the meaning of the language spoken, I shall be a foreigner to him who speaks, and he will be a foreigner to me.

As to the word βάρβαρος, a stranger, properly one who is not a Greek, see note on Acts xxviii. 2. Rom. i. 14. And with

---

[1] The text of the Catena has οἱ here: read ἤ.

λαλῶν ἐν ἐμοὶ βάρβαρος. 12 Οὕτω καὶ ὑμεῖς, ἐπεὶ ζηλωταί ἐστε πνευμάτων, πρὸς τὴν οἰκοδομὴν τῆς ἐκκλησίας ζητεῖτε ἵνα περισσεύητε. 13 [f] Διόπερ ὁ λα- f ch 12. 10, 30. Mark 11. 24.
λῶν γλώσσῃ προσευχέσθω ἵνα διερμηνεύῃ. 14 Ἐὰν γὰρ προσεύχωμαι γλώσσῃ, τὸ πνεῦμά μου προσεύχεται, ὁ δὲ νοῦς μου ἄκαρπός ἐστι. 15 [g] Τί οὖν ἐστι; g Eph. 5. 19. Col. 3. 16.
προσεύξομαι τῷ πνεύματι, προσεύξομαι δὲ καὶ τῷ νοΐ· ψαλῶ τῷ πνεύματι, ψαλῶ Ps 47. 7.
δὲ καὶ τῷ νοΐ. 16 [h] Ἐπεὶ ἐὰν εὐλογήσῃς τῷ πνεύματι, ὁ ἀναπληρῶν τὸν τόπον h ch. 11. 24. & 16. 24.
τοῦ ἰδιώτου πῶς ἐρεῖ τὸ ἀμὴν ἐπὶ τῇ σῇ εὐχαριστίᾳ, ἐπειδὴ τί λέγεις οὐκ οἶδε; Matt. 6. 13. & 28. 20. Mark 16. 20. John 21. 25. Rev. 5. 14. & 22. 20.
17 σὺ μὲν γὰρ καλῶς εὐχαριστεῖς, ἀλλ' ὁ ἕτερος οὐκ οἰκοδομεῖται.
18 Εὐχαριστῶ τῷ Θεῷ πάντων ὑμῶν μᾶλλον γλώσσαις λαλῶν· 19 ἀλλ' ἐν ἐκ-regard to ἐν ἐμοί, in my view, relatively to me, see vi. 2. Phil. ii. 7. Winer, § 48, p. 345.

Thus then St. Paul teaches the Corinthian Greeks, who gloried in their country and in their intellectual powers, and regarded all other nations as barbarous, that they degraded themselves into Barbarians, by speaking, in a Greek assembly, strange languages which none could understand.

12. ζηλωταὶ πνευμάτων] ye are zealous in behalf of your own spirits, and covet power over other men's spirits. See the use of πνεύματα, v. 32.

The πνεῦμα here is the higher spiritual element, the inner man (see vv. 14—16. 1 Thess. v. 23); and St. Paul's meaning is, that by speaking in a foreign language in the public assemblies of their own Church, they lost that spiritual communion between their own πνεῦμα, or inner man, and the πνεῦμα, or inner man, of their hearers, for which they professed to be zealous; and that they degraded the relation between themselves and their hearers to that of a mere bodily and carnal intercourse of unmeaning sounds.

On the sense of the word ζηλωτὴς, see on Gal. iv. 17, 18.

13. προσευχέσθω ἵνα διερμηνεύῃ] These words are capable of two senses, viz.

(1) Let him pray that he may be endued with the faculty of interpreting. (Bengel.) So ἵνα is used after προσεύχομαι, Mark xiv. 35. Phil. i. 9, where see the note of Ellicott, and Winer, § 44, pp. 299, 300;

(2) Let him pray with the design and purpose (not to display his own gift of speaking in a foreign tongue, but) to interpret. So Winer, § 53, p. 408. The reason of this is given in the following verse.

Accordingly, St. Paul, in v. 28, does not allow a man to pray in a foreign tongue in the Church, but commands him to hold his peace (ἐὰν μὴ ᾖ διερμηνευτής), unless he have the faculty of expressing fluently in his own language what he was enabled by a supernatural charisma, or gift, to speak in a foreign tongue.

An illiterate person might have a special gift of speaking in a foreign tongue; and the miraculous operation of the Spirit would be more striking in his case. The Apostles, we are expressly told, were ἀγράμματοι καὶ ἰδιῶται (Acts iv. 13), and yet spake in foreign tongues; and the miracle of Pentecost was more striking on that account. And therefore the people asked, "Are not all these who speak Galilæans?" (Acts ii. 7.)

But it would not follow, that such a person would have the gift of expressing himself well in his own language, so as to edify such an audience as that at Corinth.

This verse therefore by no means gives any countenance to the notion that they who spake with γλῶσσαι (or foreign tongues) at Corinth were unconscious of what they said. And that notion is further refuted by what is said, v. 16, concerning the pronunciation of the blessing in the Holy Eucharist.

14. γλώσσῃ] in a foreign language. See on v. 1.

— τὸ πνεῦμά μου] my spirit, or the spirit of any one (vi. 12; above, v. 6) who does what is so absurd.

My spirit, or inner man, prays, but my understanding is unfruitful; it produces no fruit to others: it is barren.

15. προσεύξομαι] I will pray. He mentions what he himself will do, in order that they may do it.

— τῷ νοΐ] with my understanding: so that it may do its proper work of being fruitful to others. See v. 19, θέλω τῷ νοΐ μου λαλῆσαι, ἵνα καὶ ἄλλους κατηχήσω: and therefore I will pray with my spirit, or inner man (τῷ πνεύματι), i. e. fervently; but I will also pray with my νοῦς, or understanding, whose proper function it is to fructify and fertilize the minds of others by interpretation, and other similar intelligible communications with them.

Therefore I will not pray γλώσσῃ, i. e. in a foreign language.

16. ἐὰν εὐλογήσῃς] if thou shalt bless, i. e. if thou shalt say the prayer of Benediction, in the Holy Communion. This is addressed to a Teacher at Corinth, to a Minister of the Church. See x. 16, and next note.

— ὁ ἀναπληρῶν τὸν τόπον τοῦ ἰδιώτου—εὐχαριστίᾳ] he who filleth the place of the private person (see on Acts iv. 13) or layman (Theodoret, Chrys.), as distinct from thee, the public λειτουργὸς, or Minister officiating in the Church, particularly at the Εὐχαριστία or Lord's Supper,—how shall he, who is a layman, be able to say the Amen at thy Consecration of the Elements?

The Apostle thus intimates that the Laity or faithful have their τόπος, place, or office, to fill, in Church-assemblies, as much as the Minister has his; and that to pray in a foreign language is an infringement on their rights, as disqualifying them for their duties, and depriving them of their privileges.

Compare the use of τόπος in Clement R. 40, τοῖς ἱερεῦσιν ἴδιος ὁ τόπος ἐπίκειται· ὁ λαϊκὸς ἄνθρωπος λαϊκοῖς προστάγμασιν δέδεται.

The best comment on these words is supplied by S. Justin Martyr, describing the public assemblies of the Primitive Church (Apol. 85), where he says, "Bread is brought to the President (τῷ προεστῶτι) of the Assembly, and a cup of water and wine, and having received it, he puts up praise and thanksgiving to the Father of all, through the Name of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. . . . And when he has finished his prayer and thanksgiving (εὐχαριστίαν) all the people with an acclamation say Amen. And the food itself thus blessed is called the Eucharist;" and in chap. 87 he repeats the words as to the putting up of the Prayers by the Minister, and the acclamation of the Amen by the people. For the original words, see above on x. 16.

The word Εὐχαριστία is used to signify the Holy Communion by S. Ignatius also, Phil. 4, Smyrn. 6.

On the use of the Amen in the Early Church, see Tertullian de Spectaculis, c. 25, and the observations of Valesius in Euseb. vi. 43, and in vii. 9, which form an excellent exposition of this passage.

The following remarks are from a careful investigator of primitive Christian Antiquity;

On one occasion St. Paul, when speaking of the administration of the Sacrament, uses the phrase, "The Cup of blessing which we bless" (1 Cor. x. 16), implying a Prayer of Consecration; and the same inference may be drawn yet more certainly from another passage in the same Epistle, the irreverence of the Corinthians leading the Apostle to touch on the subject repeatedly, and thus to afford us information on it, which but for that might have been lost, "Else when thou shalt bless with the spirit how shall he that occupieth the room of the unlearned (τοῦ ἰδιώτου) say Amen at thy giving of thanks (or at thy Eucharist, ἐπὶ τῇ σῇ εὐχαριστίᾳ), seeing he understandeth not what thou sayest?" (1 Cor. xiv. 16,) where the Apostle contemplates the celebration of the Eucharist in a language unknown to the congregation, in which case he says, How is the blessing pronounced by the Minister over the Bread and the Wine to be understood by the People, and the several parts of the Liturgy to be properly recognized, so that they may themselves take their share in it?

For, in the terms "when thou shalt bless" and "at thy giving of thanks" there is comprised, almost beyond a doubt, a service of considerable detail. Justin Martyr, who lived so very soon after the Apostles, actually affirms as much; the officiating Minister, according to him, offering up prayers and thanksgivings at much length. And S. Chrysostom evidently supposes this passage of the Apostle to have a reference to such a formulary then in use; "for," says he, in commenting on the text of the Epistle to the Corinthians, "what the Apostle means is this, if you bless in a strange language, the layman not knowing what you are uttering, and not able to interpret it, cannot add the Amen; for, not hearing 'the world without end,' which is the conclusion (of the prayers), he does not repeat the Amen." Professor J. J. Blunt (Lectures, p. 33). Cp. Bingham, Antiq. i. chap. v.

18. Θεῷ] Elz. adds μου, not found in the best MSS.

— γλώσσαις λαλῶν] speaking with tongues. A, D, E, F, G have the singular, γλώσσῃ, which has been received by some Editors. The plural is found in B, K, L, and in the Syriac, κλησίᾳ θέλω πέντε λόγους τῷ νοΐ μου λαλῆσαι, ἵνα καὶ ἄλλους κατηχήσω, ἢ i Ps. 131. 2. Matt. 11. 25. & 18. 3. & 19. 14. Eph. 4. 14. Heb. 5. 12. 1 Pet. 2. 2. μυρίους λόγους ἐν γλώσσῃ. 20 i Ἀδελφοί, μὴ παιδία γίνεσθε ταῖς φρεσίν· ἀλλὰ τῇ κακίᾳ νηπιάζετε, ταῖς δὲ φρεσὶ τέλειοι γίνεσθε.

j John 10. 34. Deut. 28. 49. Isa. 28. 11, 12.
21 j Ἐν τῷ νόμῳ γέγραπται, Ὅτι ἐν ἑτερογλώσσοις, καὶ ἐν χείλεσιν ἑτέροις, λαλήσω τῷ λαῷ τούτῳ, καὶ οὐδ' οὕτως εἰσακούσονταί μου, λέγει Κύριος.
22 Ὥστε αἱ γλῶσσαι εἰς σημεῖόν εἰσὶν οὐ τοῖς πιστεύουσιν, ἀλλὰ τοῖς ἀπίσ-τοις· ἡ δὲ προφητεία οὐ τοῖς ἀπίστοις, ἀλλὰ τοῖς πιστεύουσιν.
k Acts 2. 13.
23 k Ἐὰν οὖν συνέλθῃ ἡ ἐκκλησία ὅλη ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ, καὶ πάντες γλώσσαις λαλῶσιν, εἰσέλθωσι δὲ ἰδιῶται ἢ ἄπιστοι, οὐκ ἐροῦσιν ὅτι μαίνεσθε; 24 Ἐὰν δὲ πάντες προφητεύωσιν, εἰσέλθῃ δέ τις ἄπιστος, ἢ ἰδιώτης, ἐλέγχεται ὑπὸ l Zech. 8. 23. Isa. 45. 14.
πάντων, ἀνακρίνεται ὑπὸ πάντων, 25 l τὰ κρυπτὰ τῆς καρδίας αὐτοῦ φανερὰ γίνεται, καὶ οὕτω πεσὼν ἐπὶ πρόσωπον προσκυνήσει τῷ Θεῷ, ἀπαγγέλλων ὅτι ὄντως ὁ Θεὸς ἐν ὑμῖν ἐστι.
m ch. 12. 8—10. Rom. 14. 19. 2 Cor. 12. 19. & 13. 10. Eph. 4. 12, 16, 29. 1 Thess. 5. 11.
26 m Τί οὖν ἐστιν, ἀδελφοί; ὅταν συνέρχησθε, ἕκαστος ὑμῶν ψαλμὸν ἔχει, διδαχὴν ἔχει, ἀποκάλυψιν ἔχει, γλῶσσαν ἔχει, ἑρμηνείαν ἔχει. Πάντα πρὸς οἰκοδομὴν γινέσθω. 27 Εἴτε γλώσσῃ τὶς λαλεῖ, κατὰ δύο, ἢ τὸ πλεῖστον τρεῖς, καὶ ἀνὰ μέρος· καὶ εἷς διερμηνευέτω. 28 Ἐὰν δὲ μὴ ᾖ διερμηνευτὴς, σιγάτω ἐν n ver. 39. ch. 12. 10. 1 Thess. 5. 19—21. 1 John 4. 1—3. ἐκκλησίᾳ· ἑαυτῷ δὲ λαλείτω καὶ τῷ Θεῷ. 29 n Προφῆται δὲ δύο ἢ τρεῖς λαλείτωσαν, καὶ οἱ ἄλλοι διακρινέτωσαν. 30 Ἐὰν δὲ ἄλλῳ ἀποκαλυφθῇ καθημένῳ, ὁ Æthiopic, and Arabic Versions, and so Origen, Chrys., Theodoret, and other Greek Fathers.

A person speaking on a particular occasion in a foreign tongue, might well be said γλώσσῃ λαλεῖν (as in vv. 2. 13, 14). But the general faculty of speaking in foreign languages, which St. Paul possessed, could hardly be described by that expression. Cp. xii. 30; xiii. 1; xiv. 5, 6. 23. 39.

St. Paul, the Apostle of the Gentiles (Rom. xi. 13), had special need of the faculty of speaking in various foreign languages. See Jerome, quoted above, on xii. 10, and notes on Acts xiii. 15, xiv. 11, and xxviii. 4, and Rom. i. 14.

The participle λαλῶν here (which has been altered in some copies to λαλῶ) denotes the cause of his thankfulness. See Acts xvi. 34, ἠγαλλιάσατο πεπιστευκώς. Winer, § 45, p. 309.

The sense is, Do not think that I am disparaging a gift because I do not possess it; I return thanks to God (perhaps there is a reference here to the εὐχαριστία just mentioned), speaking in foreign tongues more than you all. I bless God in more languages than you all. Him I bless, speaking in these languages. I bless Him in speaking, and by speaking, and for the power of speaking in these languages. St. Paul might have already celebrated the Eucharist in various languages in his different Missionary tours in Syria, Asia, and Greece.

Thus the participle λαλῶν seems to have more force and a larger meaning than the indicative λαλῶ.

19. θέλω—ἤ] I had rather than. Cp. Luke xvii. 2, λυσιτελεῖ—ἤ. Winer, § 35, p. 215, where examples of a similar construction with substantives and adjectives will be found.

— νοΐ] So A, B, D, E, F, G, and several Cursives. Elz. has διὰ τοῦ νοός.

20. τέλειοι] full-grown: ripe, mature in spiritual growth and stature. Eph. iv. 13.

21. Ἐν τῷ νόμῳ] In the Law. In a prophetical Book. Isa. xxviii. 11, 12. See on John x. 34, and Surenhus. p. 544.

The words are not from the LXX Version, but from that of Aquila.

The purport of the quotation is to show that a supernatural power of speaking with γλῶσσαι or foreign tongues is a χάρισμα or gift, vouchsafed by God for the conversion of unbelievers; and that it is an abuse of that gift, to employ it in congregations of Christians, who do not understand the tongue spoken. See above, v. 6.

The words of Almighty God in the passage of Isaiah quoted by St. Paul, are prophetic of the outpouring of the Gift of Tongues at Pentecost, and are referred to by St. Luke, recording that event, Acts ii. 4, ἤρξαντο λαλεῖν ἑτέραις γλώσσαις, cp. Acts x. 46; and the Holy Spirit adopting the words ἑτερογλώσσοις καὶ ἐν χείλεσιν ἑτέροις λαλήσω here, and ἑτέραις γλώσσαις there, connects this argument of St. Paul with the event of the day of Pentecost.

The meaning of Isaiah's prophecy is, that God would speak to the Jews in tongues foreign to the speakers (and He did so by the Apostles on the day of Pentecost), and yet that the Jewish Nation would not be converted, but resist God. They did resist the same Apostles, Peter and John, who spake ἑτέραις γλώσσαις (Acts ii. 4), and they shut them up in prison. (Acts iv. 3.)

St. Paul, as his custom is, whenever a divine gift has been abused, brings back the question to its first principles. He here traces the Gift of Tongues to its origin, the Day of Pentecost at Jerusalem, as he had done in the case of the Holy Eucharist, which he traces to its Institution, at the Feast of the Passover in the same city (xi. 23). He thus points out the declension of the practice of the Corinthians from the primitive standard, and endeavours to rectify the abuse by reference to the original use. An example of the true principles of genuine Reformation.

He shows them also, that by requiring the use of foreign tongues now in their own city, and by indulging in their display, they degrade themselves from the rank of Christians to that of unbelievers. See v. 6.

23. ἰδιῶται] ordinary persons, who have not the gift of tongues. The word is here distinguished from, and contrasted with, the πάντες, all, in this verse, who have the gift, and are using it together in the Church.

The signification of this word, ἰδιώτης, must always be determined by the context; it is always used πρὸς τί (see Hippocrat. ap. Wetstein), i. e. is put in opposition to something else, and intimates that the person called ἰδιώτης is distinguished by a difference of rank, or other quality, from him, or them, with whom he is compared. Cp. Tertullian (ad Mart. 1), "Non tantum magistri, sed etiam idiotæ," and see the collections of Wetstein here, p. 161, and note on Acts iv. 13. 1 Cor. xiv. 16. 2 Cor. xi. 6. The proper translation therefore of ἰδιῶται here would be persons not so gifted. And St. Paul's argument is, that the Corinthians, by their abuse of their superior gifts, expose themselves to the ridicule even of those who have not the gift; and that though they are vain of their intellectual and spiritual powers, they show that they have less common sense than those who have not those powers.

25. τὰ κρυπτά] the hidden things. Elz. prefixes καὶ οὕτω, not in the best MSS.

26. ψαλμόν] a psalm. Every one has a psalm of his own, which he is eager to sing. Psalmody was a part of primitive Christian worship, as appears from Pliny's Epistle to Trajan (lib. x. 97), and see Euseb. v. 28, ψαλμοὶ καὶ ᾠδαὶ ἀδελφῶν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς ὑπὸ πιστῶν γραφεῖσαι τὸν Λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ τὸν Χριστὸν ὕμνουν θεολογοῦντες (cp. Eph. v. 19). Psalms not authorized by the public sanction of the Church (ψαλμοὶ ἰδιωτικοί), were forbidden to be sung in the Church, by the Council of Laodicea, Can. 59. . . A rule needed now.

29. διακρινέτωσαν] let the rest discern, or discriminate: let πρῶτος σιγάτω· 31 δύνασθε γὰρ καθ' ἕνα πάντες προφητεύειν, ἵνα πάντες μανθάνωσι καὶ πάντες παρακαλῶνται· 32 καὶ πνεύματα προφητῶν προφήταις ὑποτάσσεται· 33 [o] οὐ γάρ ἐστιν ἀκαταστασίας ὁ Θεὸς, ἀλλὰ εἰρήνης· ὡς ἐν πάσαις ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις τῶν ἁγίων. o ch. 11. 16.

34 [p] Αἱ γυναῖκες ὑμῶν ἐν ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις σιγάτωσαν· οὐ γὰρ ἐπιτρέπεται αὐταῖς λαλεῖν, ἀλλὰ ὑποτάσσεσθαι, καθὼς καὶ ὁ νόμος λέγει. 35 Εἰ δέ τι μαθεῖν θέλουσιν, ἐν οἴκῳ τοὺς ἰδίους ἄνδρας ἐπερωτάτωσαν· αἰσχρὸν γάρ ἐστι γυναιξὶν ἐν ἐκκλησίᾳ λαλεῖν. p 1 Tim. 2. 11, 12. Col. 3. 18. 1 Pet. 3. 1. Gen. 3. 16.

36 *Ἢ ἀφ' ὑμῶν ὁ λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθεν; ἢ εἰς ὑμᾶς μόνους κατήντησεν; 37 [q] Εἴ τις δοκεῖ προφήτης εἶναι ἢ πνευματικὸς, ἐπιγινωσκέτω ἃ γράφω ὑμῖν, ὅτι Κυρίου ἐστὶν ἐντολή· 38 εἰ δέ τις ἀγνοεῖ, ἀγνοείτω. q 2 Cor. 10. 7. 1 John 4. 6.

39 [r] Ὥστε, ἀδελφοὶ, ζηλοῦτε τὸ προφητεύειν, καὶ τὸ λαλεῖν γλώσσαις μὴ κωλύετε. r 1 Thess. 5. 20.

40 Πάντα δὲ εὐσχημόνως καὶ κατὰ τάξιν γινέσθω.

XV. 1 [a] Γνωρίζω δὲ ὑμῖν, ἀδελφοὶ, τὸ εὐαγγέλιον ὃ εὐηγγελισάμην ὑμῖν, ὃ καὶ παρελάβετε, ἐν ᾧ καὶ ἑστήκατε, 2 [b] δι' οὗ καὶ σώζεσθε, τίνι λόγῳ εὐηγγελισάμην ὑμῖν εἰ κατέχετε, ἐκτὸς εἰ μὴ εἰκῇ ἐπιστεύσατε. a Gal. 1. 11, 12. Rom. 5. 1, 2. 2 Cor. 1. 24. 1 Pet. 5. 12. b Rom. 1. 16. ch. 1. 21. Gal. 3. 4.

3 [c] Παρέδωκα γὰρ ὑμῖν ἐν πρώτοις ὃ καὶ παρέλαβον, ὅτι Χριστὸς ἀπέθανεν ὑπὲρ τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν ἡμῶν κατὰ τὰς γραφὰς· 4 [d] καὶ ὅτι ἐτάφη, καὶ ὅτι ἐγήγερται c Isa. 53. 5. Dan. 9. 24. Zech. 13. 7.

1 Pet. 2. 24. d Ps. 16. 10. Isa. 53. 9. Hos. 6. 2. Matt. 12. 40.

them put to the test and sift that which has been said by the several expositors, and reject what is unsound, and authorize what is right. Cp. xii. 10, διακρίσεις πνευμάτων. Heb. v. 14, πρὸς διάκρισιν καλοῦ τε καὶ κακοῦ.

32. πνεύματα προφητῶν] The spirits or inner motions of Prophets, who are truly such, are in subjection to Prophets, are controlled and regulated by them; and therefore there is no reason why, on the plea of a prophetic rapture and ecstasy, ye should prophesy in an irregular manner. Ye can (δύνασθε) prophesy in order, as I command you (v. 31). And that which I have enjoined, being, as it is, the command of the Lord (v. 37), can, and will, be obeyed by them who are really Prophets.

They who professed to be moved by the Spirit might allege that they were not and could not be subject to any laws of order and discipline; and therefore the Apostle teaches that it is the very essence of genuine Prophecy, as distinguished from that which is spurious, to be regulated according to the laws prescribed by God (who is not a God of confusion, but of peace, v. 33), for the good order and edification of His Church.

If this rule had been duly observed, it would have checked the aberrations of fanatical pride and lawless enthusiasm, and have prevented the disorders, by which they have disorganized the framework, and marred the efficiency, of the Church.

St. Paul's principle was applied by the orthodox writers of ancient Christendom, who had to contend against the wild ecstasies and rhapsodies of Montanism (as may be seen in Euseb. v. 17, and Routh, Reliq. S. ii. 101), by whom the principle was thus expressed, μὴ δεῖν προφήτην ἐν ἐκστάσει λαλεῖν, "that a Prophet ought not to speak in an ecstasy." Indeed by so doing a Prophet would have confounded his sacred office with the phrenzied ravings of the Pythoness of Delphi, and other oracular rhapsodists of heathen superstition. See Chrysostom, and Vales. ad Euseb. v. 17. Divine Inspiration acts suaviter as well as fortiter; and whatever acts otherwise, is not a genuine emanation from the pure fountain of heavenly Wisdom and Love.

33. τῶν ἁγίων] F, G add διδάσκω: some Editors (e. g. Lachm., Tisch.) connect this verse with what follows in v. 34.

34. Αἱ γυναῖκες—σιγάτωσαν] Let your women keep silence in the churches. A precept violated by Priscilla and Maximilla, the followers of Montanus. But they say, had not Philip the Evangelist four daughters who prophesied? (Acts xxi. 9.) Yes: but not in the public assemblies of the Church. We never hear that Miriam, and Deborah, and Huldah prophesied to the people publicly, as Isaiah and Jeremiah did. It is an unseemly thing for a woman to speak in the Church. Origen in Caten. p. 279.

— οὐ γὰρ ἐπιτρέπεται] for it is not permitted. So A, B, D, E, F, G, a reading which seems preferable to that of Elz., ἐπιτέτραπται. Οὐκ ἐπιτρέπω is something more than "I do not permit;" it signifies "I forbid." Cp. 1 Tim. ii. 12, γυναικὶ διδάσκειν οὐκ ἐπιτρέπω.

— ὁ νόμος λέγει] The Old Testament by its general tenor, dating from the Creation (Gen. iii. 16; cp. 1 Tim. ii. 11, 12), and by not allowing women to do any ministerial office in the Temple, prescribes silence on their part in the Church.

35. γυναιξίν] for women. A, B have γυναικὶ in the singular.

36. *Ἢ ἀφ' ὑμῶν] The concluding argument. Ought your practice to overrule that of the other Churches, and of God's commands given through me? The proof of your spirituality will be seen,—not in independent and irregular action,—but in dutiful submission to the Word of God and to the Order of the Church.

37. ἐστὶν ἐντολή] is a command. So A, B. Some MSS. have the plural εἰσὶν ἐντολαὶ, and so Elz. The words are omitted by D*, E*, F, G.

39. ζηλοῦτε τὸ προφητεύειν κ.τ.λ.] earnestly desire to prophesy, and forbid not to speak with tongues. On this exhortation compare v. 1, and note above on 1 Thess. v. 20.

It is impossible not to recognize the bearing of St. Paul's argument, throughout this Chapter, on the practice of the Church of Rome in celebrating divine Service in a "tongue not understood by the People." See Article XXIV., "Of speaking in the congregation in such a tongue as the people understandeth."

St. Paul's words seem like a prophetic protest against that practice. The adoption of that practice, and obstinate perseverance in it, in defiance of these declarations of the Holy Spirit, speaking by the holy Apostle, are striking traits of the judicial blindness and reckless infatuation of that Power which exalts itself against human and divine authority, and sets itself in the Temple of God, claiming divine honour for itself (2 Thess. ii. 2—4).

Ch. XV. 3. Χριστὸς ἀπέθανεν ὑπὲρ τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν ἡμῶν] Christ died for our sins. It has been alleged by some, that it is evident from this text, that when it is said in Scripture that Christ died ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν, it is not meant that He died in our stead as our proxy.

But this is a groundless assertion. Christ died ὑπὲρ τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν ἡμῶν, on account of our sins, in order to take them away (John i. 29), and so to save us from their penalty, death.

But He also died, ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν, in our place.

On this use of ὑπὲρ, see above, i. 13. Luke xxii. 19, and cp. Winer, § 48, p. 342. Valck. illustrates this use of ὑπὲρ, as signifying a vicarious offering, from profane as well as sacred authors. Thus Alcestis is said by Hyginus to have died ὑπὲρ Ἀδμήτου, in his stead. "Tenendum est ἀποθανεῖν ὑπέρ τινος non tantum in N. T. sed et apud scriptores profanos significare mori loco alterius." And this is expressed by ἀντὶ, instead of, Matt. xx. 28. Mark x. 45; and St. Paul combines both prepositions, 1 Tim. ii. 6, δοὺς ἑαυτὸν ἀντίλυτρον ὑπὲρ πάντων. Cp. 2 Cor. v. 15.

4. ἐγήγερται] is risen; "excitatus est et nunc vivit."

This contrast of the permanency of the risen body of Christ, is happily marked by the change of tense into the perfect; while the transitoriness of His burial is expressed by the aorist, ἐτάφη.

e Luke 24. 34. Mark 16. 14. Acts 10. 41. f Acts 9. 3, 17. & 23. 11. ch. 9. 1. g Eph. 3. 7, 8. Acts 8. 3. Gal. 1. 13.

τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ τρίτῃ κατὰ τὰς γραφάς· [5] e καὶ ὅτι ὤφθη Κηφᾷ, εἶτα τοῖς δώδεκα· [6] ἔπειτα ὤφθη ἐπάνω πεντακοσίοις ἀδελφοῖς ἐφάπαξ, ἐξ ὧν οἱ πλείονες μένουσιν ἕως ἄρτι, τινὲς δὲ καὶ ἐκοιμήθησαν· [7] ἔπειτα ὤφθη Ἰακώβῳ, εἶτα τοῖς ἀποστόλοις πᾶσιν· [8] f ἔσχατον δὲ πάντων, ὡσπερεὶ τῷ ἐκτρώματι, ὤφθη κἀμοί. [9] g Ἐγὼ

Cp. Winer, § 40. 4, p. 243; and below, 2 Cor. v. 17, and the important text Col. i. 16.

5. ὤφθη] appeared to, manifested Himself to. See on John xvi. 16. Acts i. 2.

— τοῖς δώδεκα] to the twelve. Mark xvi. 14. John xx. 26.

6. ἐπάνω πεντακοσίοις] more than five hundred—probably on the Mountain of Galilee. Matt. xxviii. 16.

— καὶ ἐκοιμήθησαν] have also fallen asleep in Jesus: a pathetic introduction to his discourse concerning the hopes of a Resurrection. Observe this word κοιμᾶσθαι, four times repeated in this chapter, concerning the Resurrection of the body (vv. 6. 18. 20. 51). This word does not apply to the soul, for that does not sleep (see on Luke xvi. 22; xxiii. 43) when separated from the body by death. But it describes the state of the bodies of those who fall asleep in Jesus; and therefore is significantly applied to describe the bodily rest of the first Martyr, St. Stephen, who commended his spirit to Jesus (Acts vii. 59, 60). It implies that the bodies of the faithful sleep in peace until the day when they will be awakened. And it is a declaration of a belief in the Resurrection of the Body. Accordingly, from this word S. Jerome (ad Minervium iv. p. 212) infers the Resurrection of the body in its identity, and says, "Omnis qui dormit utique expergiscitur." By this word ἐκοιμήθησαν, he affirms the Resurrection, Chrys. and Bengel here, "ἐκοιμήθησαν obdormiverunt, ut resurrecturi."

See the notes above on 1 Thess. iv. 13.

The present chapter, in which St. Paul pleads for the doctrine of the Resurrection of the Body, is a vindication of their hope; it is a divine Apology in behalf of those who are asleep, ὑπὲρ τῶν κεκοιμημένων. (See vv. 18. 20.)

7. Ἰακώβῳ] to James. The ancient "Gospel according to the Hebrews" related a special appearance of our Lord, after His Resurrection, to James the Just, the Lord's Brother. In that narration, James is represented as an Apostle: cp. below, Introduction to the Epistle General of St. James.

— εἶτα τοῖς ἀποστόλοις πᾶσιν] then to the Apostles, every one of them. It has been inferred by some from this text, compared with v. 5, that 'the Apostles' are not the same as 'the Twelve;'

But this inference does not seem to be a sound one;

Our Lord appeared twice at least to the Twelve, or, as they are sometimes called, 'the Eleven' (John xx. 26. Mark xvi. 14, and Matt. xxviii. 16); and the second manifestation may be referred to by St. Paul here. Or it may be that he is speaking of manifestations made separately to every one of the Apostles, whom he would not, in that case, call τοὺς δώδεκα.

It does not appear in any passage of Scripture that ἀπόστολοι, with the article οἱ, as here, means any thing else than the Twelve Apostles.

Indeed, the force of St. Paul's own modest declaration (in v. 9) that he himself is not worthy to be called an Apostle, would be lost, if "an Apostle" is not understood to signify one of the Twelve, or one on a par with them, but only a disciple with no definite rank, or at least with none defined in Holy Writ.

8. ὡσπερεὶ τῷ ἐκτρώματι, ὤφθη κἀμοί] as to the untimely-born-one, He appeared to me also. Observe the order of the words here, which are rendered in the Latin version of Irenæus, i. 8, "Novissimè tanquam abortivo visus est et mihi."

St. Paul has just spoken of our Lord's manifestations of Himself to others, particularly to all the Apostles, and then he adds, Last of all, as it were, to the untimely-born-one of the Apostolic family, He appeared to me also. He appeared to me last of all, because I am, as it were, the ἔκτρωμα of the family.

The word ἔκτρωμα (from root ἐκτρόω, ἐκτιτρώσκω, violently to eject) = Hebr. נֵפֶל (nephel), what falls or is cast to the ground, "fœtus immaturus, cadivus," the untimely fruit of a woman (Ps. lviii. 7); and it is explained in the Greek Glossaries by παιδίον ἄωρον, ἐκβολή (Hesych.), and ἐξάμβλωμα, i. e. an abortion. Cp. Herod. iii. 32.

The best account of St. Paul's use of the word is supplied by the LXX in Num. xii. 12, where it is said of Miriam, μὴ γένηται ὡσεὶ ἴσον θανάτῳ, ὡσεὶ ἔκτρωμα ἐκπορευόμενον ἐκ μητρὸς, καὶ κατεσθίει τὸ ἥμισυ τῶν σαρκῶν αὐτῆς, where the word implies an injury done to the mother also, by the violence of the birth. Cp. Philo (i. p. 59, ap. Wetstein), Job iii. 16, and Eccles. vi. 3, where ἔκτρωμα is used with the definite article, as it is here, to distinguish the untimely-born-one, from the other naturally formed children,—ἀγαθὸν, ὑπὲρ αὐτὸν τὸ ἔκτρωμα.

(1) Why, then, is St. Paul called ὡσπερεὶ ἔκτρωμα?

(2) And why τὸ ἔκτρωμα?

(3) And what is the connexion between the two things here mentioned, viz. the appearance of Christ after His Resurrection to him, and the fact of his being τὸ ἔκτρωμα?

(1) As to the word ὡσπερεὶ (as it were) it softens the boldness of the figure, ὡσπερεὶ ἰᾶται τὰ τολμηρὰ, says Longinus, sect. 32.

And St. Paul is called an ἔκτρωμα among the Apostles, because he was not regularly born into the Apostleship, as the Twelve were, by a call from Christ when upon earth, but in a violent and untimely manner, and was indeed, in the true sense of the word, a נֵפֶל (nephel), being cast to the ground, πεσὼν ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν (Acts ix. 4) by the vehemence of the concussion from heaven, at his Conversion to Christ.

(2) He was τὸ ἔκτρωμα, the untimely-born-one of the Apostolic family, because he alone of all the Apostles was called in this manner by Christ.

(3) As to the connexion of the ἔκτρωμα with Christ's appearance to him last of all, it may be observed that an ἔκτρωμα represents a child which is, by the fact of its untimeliness, more diminutive in size, and more feeble in strength than the other children:

> "Appellat pullum, malè parvus
> Si cui filius est, ut abortivus fuit olim > Sisyphus." Horat. 1 Serm. iii. 46.

In his humility, St. Paul names himself ἔκτρωμα, not only because he was born in an untimely manner, but because in his own opinion he was ἐλάχιστος, the least of the Apostles, as he here calls himself.

Adopting and explaining St. Paul's word, the blessed Martyr S. Ignatius says of himself (ad Rom. 9), ἐγὼ αἰσχύνομαι ἐξ αὐτῶν (ἐπισκόπων) λέγεσθαι, ὢν ἔσχατος αὐτῶν, καὶ ἔκτρωμα.

(4) We may, perhaps, also be permitted to add, that there is another connexion between Christ's appearance last of all to St. Paul, the ἔκτρωμα of the Apostolic family.

There is (as has been observed by ancient Expositors) a remarkable analogical relation between the Patriarchs of the literal Israel, and the Patriarchs of the spiritual Israel, i. e. the Apostles. See on Matt. x. 1, 2. Acts viii. 17.

It has also been already remarked (on Acts ix. 1) that St. Paul was, as it were, the Benjamin of the Apostolic family. He was of that tribe (Phil. iii. 5.) He was like the son of Rachel (Gen. xxxv. 18), at first a Benoni, a child of sorrow, when he persecuted the Church, but he became a Benjamin, a son of the right hand, after his conversion. Indeed in a special manner was St. Paul a son of the right hand, as being the only one who was called by Christ after His Ascension, and when sitting at God's right hand. He was indeed the spiritual son of the Right Hand of the Father.

Accordingly, the Christian Fathers apply to St. Paul the prophecy of Jacob concerning Benjamin (Gen. xlix. 27). In the morning he shall ravin as a wolf, i. e. at the beginning of his career he shall tear Christ's sheep as a Persecutor, but in the evening he shall divide the prey, i. e. in the sequel he shall distribute spiritual food to them as a Preacher of the Church. See above on Acts ix. 1.

It has been also observed, that Benjamin is called by the Holy Spirit in the Psalms, "little," and yet "a Ruler" (Ps. lxviii. 27). So Saul was Paul, Paulus, Parvulus, little, as Augustine and others observe (and see Wetstein, ii. p. 16, and note on Acts xiii. 9). And he calls himself the least of the Apostles here (and cp. Eph. iii. 8), and yet he was a Ruler (cp. Ps. xlv. 17), and not a whit behind the chiefest Apostles (2 Cor. xi. 5; xii. 11). Indeed he had a double portion of labour; he laboured more abundantly than they all (1 Cor. xv. 10); and he had a double portion of grace. Cp. Gen. xlviii. 34.

Besides, Benjamin was the last born of all the Patriarchs, so Paul of the Apostles; and Benjamin's birth was sudden, on a journey, and, it seems, violent and untimely. It is said of his mother Rachel (Gen. xxxv. 16) that she σκληρῶς ἔτεκε, καὶ ἐδυστόκησεν ἐν τῷ τοκετῷ, and she called her son, therefore, son of my sorrow; and his birth was the cause of her death. Benjamin might almost be called an ἔκτρωμα.

(5) Now, as to the appearance of Christ risen, to St. Paul, ὡσπερεὶ τῷ ἐκτρώματι:

γάρ εἰμι ὁ ἐλάχιστος τῶν ἀποστόλων, ὃς οὐκ εἰμὶ ἱκανὸς καλεῖσθαι ἀπόστολος, διότι ἐδίωξα τὴν ἐκκλησίαν τοῦ Θεοῦ· 10 h χάριτι δὲ Θεοῦ εἰμὶ ὅ εἰμι. Καὶ ἡ χάρις αὐτοῦ ἡ εἰς ἐμὲ οὐ κενὴ ἐγενήθη, ἀλλὰ περισσότερον αὐτῶν πάντων ἐκοπίασα· οὐκ ἐγὼ δέ, ἀλλὰ ἡ χάρις τοῦ Θεοῦ ἡ σὺν ἐμοί. 11 Εἴτε οὖν ἐγώ, εἴτε ἐκεῖνοι, οὕτω κηρύσσομεν, καὶ οὕτως ἐπιστεύσατε.

h Rom. 1. 5. & 15. 18. ch. 11. 23. & 12. 11. 2 Cor. 3. 5, 6. Gal. 2. 8. Col. 1. 29.

12 Εἰ δὲ Χριστὸς κηρύσσεται ὅτι ἐκ νεκρῶν ἐγήγερται, πῶς λέγουσιν ἐν ὑμῖν τινες, ὅτι ἀνάστασις νεκρῶν οὐκ ἔστιν; 13 Εἰ δὲ ἀνάστασις νεκρῶν οὐκ ἔστιν, οὐδὲ Χριστὸς ἐγήγερται· 14 εἰ δὲ Χριστὸς οὐκ ἐγήγερται, κενὸν ἄρα καὶ τὸ κήρυγμα ἡμῶν, κενὴ καὶ ἡ πίστις ὑμῶν. 15 i Εὑρισκόμεθα δὲ καὶ ψευδομάρτυρες τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὅτι ἐμαρτυρήσαμεν κατὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὅτι ἤγειρε τὸν Χριστόν, ὃν οὐκ ἤγειρεν, εἴπερ ἄρα νεκροὶ οὐκ ἐγείρονται. 16 Εἰ γὰρ νεκροὶ οὐκ ἐγείρονται, οὐδὲ Χριστὸς ἐγήγερται· 17 k εἰ δὲ Χριστὸς οὐκ ἐγήγερται, ματαία ἡ πίστις ὑμῶν, ἔτι ἐστὲ ἐν ταῖς ἁμαρτίαις ὑμῶν. 18 Ἄρα καὶ οἱ κοιμηθέντες ἐν Χριστῷ ἀπώλοντο.

i Acts 2. 24, 32 & 4. 2.

k Acts 5. 31. Rom. 4. 25.

19 l Εἰ ἐν τῇ ζωῇ ταύτῃ ἐν Χριστῷ ἠλπικότες ἐσμὲν μόνον, ἐλεεινότεροι πάντων ἀνθρώπων ἐσμέν.

l 2 Tim. 3. 12.

20 m Νυνὶ δὲ Χριστὸς ἐγήγερται ἐκ νεκρῶν, ἀπαρχὴ τῶν κεκοιμημένων. 21 n Ἐπειδὴ γὰρ δι' ἀνθρώπου θάνατος, καὶ δι' ἀνθρώπου ἀνάστασις νεκρῶν· 22 ὥσπερ γὰρ ἐν τῷ Ἀδὰμ πάντες ἀποθνήσκουσιν, οὕτω καὶ ἐν τῷ Χριστῷ πάνm Acts 26. 23. ch. ver. 23. Col. 1. 18. Rev. 1. 5.

n Gen. 2. 17. & 3. 6. Rom. 5. 12, 18 John 11. 25.

Joseph, when delivered from the bonds of the prison-house, and raised to eminence in the kingdom of Egypt, has ever been regarded as a signal type of Christ's Resurrection. As Prosper says (de Promiss. i. 29), "Noster Joseph, Christus Dominus, die tertio resurrexit, præsentatur Pharaoni; mundo Resurrectio declaratur." (Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. v. and vi. pp. 475. 515.) And Joseph's appearances to his brethren after his deliverance and exaltation, are beautifully typical of Christ's manifestations to His brethren, as He vouchsafes to call them (Matt. xxviii. 10. John xx. 17) after His Resurrection. And as Joseph after his exaltation appeared last of all to the least and youngest of his brethren, Benjamin (Gen. xlv. 14), so Christ, after his Resurrection, to St. Paul. And as Benjamin was a special object of Joseph's favour (Gen. xliii. 34), so, as he here declares, was St. Paul a special subject and monument of Christ's grace. 1 Tim. i. 16.

10. οὐκ ἐγὼ δὲ, ἀλλὰ ἡ χάρις τ. Θ.] yet not I, but the grace that is with me. Not that St. Paul did not labour, for he has just said that he did labour more abundantly than the rest; but οὐκ here, which denies, is used to bring out more boldly what is affirmed. I laboured more abundantly than the rest; but the superabundance of my labour was as nothing when compared with the far more abundant superabundance of God's grace. On this use of οὐ, derived from the Hebrew idiom, see 1 Cor. x. 23. Acts v. 4, and on Matt. ix. 13, and Winer, § 55, p. 439.

The article ἡ before σὺν is omitted by B, D*, F, G.

12. ὅτι ἀνάστασις νεκρῶν οὐκ ἔστι;] that a resurrection of dead bodies hath no existence (οὐκ ἔστι), i. e. is an unreality. The word ἀνάστασις, resuscitatio, is not said of the soul, but of the body: τοῦ πεσόντος ἐστὶν ἡ ἀνάστασις. (Chrys.) These false Teachers did not deny the immortality of the soul, but they explained away the divine sayings which had declared the Resurrection of the body, and gave them a mere spiritual meaning, saying that the Resurrection was past already (2 Tim. ii. 18) in the new birth of the Christian soul. In a word, they confounded the First Resurrection (that of the soul) with the Second Resurrection (that of the body).

The Greek disbelief in the Resurrection of the body is expressed by Æschylus, Eum. 655:

> ἀνδρὸς δ' ἐπειδὰν αἷμ' ἀνασπάσῃ κόνις, > ἅπαξ θανόντος οὐκέτ' ἔστ' ἀνάστασις.

Eurip. Alcest. 783:

> οὐκ ἔστι θνητῶν ὅστις ἐξανίσταται.

Cp. Acts xvii. 18.

The popular life at Corinth, where the body was defiled by lusts of the flesh, was very unfavourable to the belief of the doctrine of its Resurrection, preached by St. Paul. Therefore he labours in this Epistle to deliver the body from the shameful debasement to which it was there degraded by sensuality, and specially he does this by means of the doctrine of its Resurrection. See 1 Cor. vi. 13—20.

Tertullian says well, "None live in so fleshly a manner as those who deny the Resurrection of the Flesh. They deny its future punishment, and neglect its present discipline. They despair of its glory hereafter, and debase it by sin here" (de Resurrec. Carnis, 11).

13. οὐδὲ Χριστὸς ἐγήγερται] not even hath Christ risen. "Ne Christus quidem resurrexit."

14. τὸ κήρυγμα ἡμῶν] our preaching, i. e. all that we preach. See i. 21.

17. ἔτι ἐστὲ ἐν ταῖς ἁμαρτίαις ὑμῶν] Ye are yet in your sins, and liable to the penalty of sin,—everlasting death. (Rom. vi. 23.) For though Christ died for your sins (v. 3), yet the proof that His death was accepted by God, as a propitiation for our sins, arises from the fact of His Resurrection. He died for our sins, and He rose again for our Justification. See on Rom. iv. 25. If then His body is still in the grave, we are still in our sins. See further on v. 55.

18. Ἄρα καί] Then even. A new argument.

— οἱ κοιμηθέντες ἐν Χριστῷ ἀπώλοντο] they who fell asleep in Christ perished. Observe ἀπώλοντο, the aorist, they then perished, when they fell asleep in Christ. Heaven forbid! Their bodies, weary of the labour of this life, then sank into a sweet slumber, from which they will be awakened to a glorious Resurrection and blessed Immortality. They did not therefore perish when they died. No. Death was not loss to them, but great gain, even as to their bodies. How much more as to their souls! Death to them was birth, birth into endless life.

19. ἠλπικότες ἐσμέν] we have hoped, and now hope.

20. Νυνὶ δέ] But now the fact is —. A glorious contrast. The Apostle bursts forth in a strain of exultation, when he compares the state of the World now, with that in which it was before Christ's Resurrection. This is an Easter homily, see Introd. p. 77.

Probably also these words were written at or near Easter. See Introduction, pp. 77, 78.

— κεκοιμημένων] Eliz. adds ἐγένετο, which is not in the best authorities, and weakens the sense, which is, Christ is risen from the dead,—the First-fruits of them that slept. He is the Wave-sheaf of the coming Harvest; see note above, on Levit. xxiii. 11.

22. ὥσπερ γὰρ ἐν τῷ Ἀδὰμ—οὕτω καὶ ἐν τῷ Χριστῷ] for even as in the Adam of the human family all die, so also in the Christ shall all be made alive. The definite articles prefixed to the two names, Adam and Christ, bring out the relationship of contrast more strongly, and point to Adam and to Christ as standing severally alone in the world as the two Heads and Representatives, the one of the Old Creation, the other of the New; the one of the natural, carnal, and lost race, the other of the spiritual, regenerate, and saved race; the one the author of death to all, the other the Author of Life to all.

In the first Adam (says Irenæus, v. 17) we fell by disobedience to God's commandment; but in the Second Adam we were restored by becoming obedient even unto death (ὑπήκοοι μέχρι θανάτου γενόμενοι). Christ cancelled the disobedience of Man, which had been shown in the beginning at the tree, by becoming obedient unto death, even the death of the Cross. (Phil.

o ch. ver. 20. 1 Thess. 4. 15—17.
p ch. 2. 6.
q Ps. 110. 1. Acts 2. 34. Eph. 1. 22.
r Rev. 20. 14. & 21. 4. s Ps. 8. 6. & 110. 1. Matt. 11. 27. & 28. 18. Eph. 1. 22. Heb. 2. 8.

τες ζωοποιηθήσονται. 23 ο Ἕκαστος δὲ ἐν τῷ ἰδίῳ τάγματι· ἀπαρχὴ Χριστὸς, ἔπειτα οἱ τοῦ Χριστοῦ, ἐν τῇ παρουσίᾳ αὐτοῦ. 24 p Εἶτα τὸ τέλος, ὅταν παραδῷ τὴν βασιλείαν τῷ Θεῷ καὶ Πατρὶ, ὅταν καταργήσῃ πᾶσαν ἀρχὴν, καὶ πᾶσαν ἐξουσίαν, καὶ δύναμιν. 25 q Δεῖ γὰρ αὐτὸν βασιλεύειν, ἄχρις οὗ θῇ πάντας τοὺς ἐχθροὺς ὑπὸ τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ. 26 r Ἔσχατος ἐχθρὸς καταργεῖται ὁ θάνατος· 27 s πάντα γὰρ ὑπέταξεν ὑπὸ τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ. Ὅταν δὲ εἴπῃ ὅτι πάντα ὑποτέτακται, δῆλον ὅτι ἐκτὸς τοῦ ὑποτάξαντος αὐτῷ τὰ

ii. 8.) And thus the disobedience of the first Adam at the tree was healed by the Obedience of the Second Adam on the tree.

Hence it is well said by Augustine (in Joann. Evang. Tract. iii.) "Sicut in Adam omnes moriuntur, sic et in Christo omnes vivificabuntur. (1 Cor. xv. 21, 22.) Qui pertinent ad Adam? omnes qui nati sunt de Adam. Qui ad Christum? omnes qui nati sunt per Christum. Quare omnes in peccato? Quia nemo natus est præter Adam. Non quia voluerunt, nati sunt ex Adam. Omnes qui ex Adam, cum peccato peccatores; omnes qui per Christum, justificati et justi, non in se, sed in Illo. Nam in se, si interroges, Adam sunt: in illo si interroges, Christi sunt. Quare? Quia ille caput Dominus noster Jesus Christus, non cum traduce peccati venit: sed tamen venit cum carne mortali."

23.] See Clem. Rom. i. 37.

24, 25. Εἶτα τὸ τέλος κ.τ.λ.] Then cometh the end, when He shall have delivered up; see next note.

24. ὅταν παραδῷ] So Elz., K, L, and many Cursives and Fathers; but B, F, G have παραδιδοῖ, and A, D, E have παραδίδω, and one of these is probably the true reading,—when He delivereth up His Kingdom to God the Father, when He shall have put down all rule and all authority and power, for He must reign till He hath put all His enemies under His feet.

St. Paul is here speaking of Christ's Mediatorial Kingdom, which He has by virtue of His humility and obedience as Man. This Kingdom is to be carefully distinguished from that Kingdom which will have no end (Luke i. 33), and which Christ has as God, and which He had from everlasting with the Father. See John xvii. 5. 11, and note on Matt. xxviii. 18, and Bengel here, and the excellent statement of the doctrine by Hooker (V. lv. 8), where he says, Christ as Man hath "all power in heaven and earth given" Him. (Matt. xxviii. 18.) He hath as Man, not as God only, supreme dominion over quick and dead (Rom. xiv. 9); for so much His Ascension into heaven and His Session at the right hand of God do import. The Son of God, which did first humble Himself by taking our flesh upon Him, descended afterwards much lower, and became according to the flesh obedient so far as to suffer death, even the death of the Cross, for all men, because such was His Father's will. The former was an humiliation of Deity, the latter an humiliation of Manhood. (Phil. ii. 8, 9. Heb. ii. 9.)

For which cause there followed upon the latter an exaltation of that which was humbled; for with power He created the world, but restored it by obedience. In which obedience as according to His Manhood He had glorified God on earth, so God hath glorified in heaven that nature which yielded Him obedience, and hath given unto Christ, even as He is Man, such fulness of power over the whole world (Luke xxi. 27), that He which before fulfilled in the state of humility and patience whatsoever God did require, doth now reign in glory till the time that all things be restored. (Acts iii. 21.)

He which came down from heaven and descended into the lowest parts of the earth, is ascended far above all heavens (Eph. iv. 9), that sitting at the right hand of God, He might from thence fill all things with the gracious and happy fruits of His saving presence. Ascension into heaven is a plain local translation of Christ, according to His Manhood, from the lower to the higher parts of the world. Session at the right hand of God is the actual exercise of that regency and dominion wherein the Manhood of Christ is joined and matched with the Deity of the Son of God. Not that His Manhood was before without the possession of the same power, but because the full use thereof was suspended, till that humility, which had been before as a veil to hide and conceal majesty, were laid aside. After His rising again from the dead, then did God set Him at His right hand in heavenly places (Eph. i. 20—23), far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not in this world only, but also in that which is to come, and hath put all things under His feet (Ps. viii. 6. Heb. ii. 8), and hath appointed Him over all the Head to the Church, which is His body, the fulness of Him that filleth all in all.

The sceptre of which spiritual regimen over us in this present world is at the length to be yielded up into the hands of the Father which gave it (1 Cor. xv. 24); that is to say, the use and exercise thereof shall cease, there being no longer on earth any militant Church to govern. This government, therefore, He exerciseth both as God and as Man; as God by essential presence with all things, as Man by co-operation with that which essentially is present. Hooker.

— ὅταν καταργήσῃ] when He shall have put down;—quum evacuaverit. When all kingdoms of this world shall have been swallowed up by the kingdom of Christ (Rev. xi. 15).

25. Δεῖ γὰρ αὐτὸν βασιλεύειν] For He must reign till He hath put all his enemies under His feet. But now we see not yet all things put under Him (Heb. ii. 8). Therefore He must still continue there; and this necessity is grounded upon the promise of the Father and the expectation of the Son; Sit Thou on my right hand, until I make thine enemies Thy footstool (Ps. cx. 1). Upon this promise of the Father, the Son sat down at the right hand of God, from henceforth expecting till His enemies be made His footstool. (Heb. x. 12, 13.) Our Mediator, therefore, shall exercise the regal power at the right hand of God till all opposition shall be subdued. Then, when all the enemies of Christ shall be subdued, when all the chosen of God shall be actually brought into His kingdom, when those which refused Him to rule over them shall be slain, that is, when the whole office of the Mediator shall be completed and fulfilled, then every branch of the execution shall cease. As, therefore, there shall no longer continue any act of the prophetical part to instruct us, nor any act of the priestly part to intercede for us, there shall be no farther act of this regal power of the Mediator necessary to defend and preserve us. The beatifical vision shall succeed our information and instruction, a present fruition will prevent oblation and intercession, and perfect security will need no actual defence and protection. As therefore the general notion of a Mediator ceaseth, when all are made one, because a mediator is not a mediator of one (Gal. iii. 20), so every part or branch of that mediatorship as such must also cease, because that unity is in all parts complete.

Now, though the mediatorship of Christ be then resigned, because the end thereof will then be performed; though the regal office, as part of that mediatorship, be also resigned with the whole, yet we must not think that Christ shall cease to be a King, or lose any of the power and honour which before He had. The dominion which He hath, was given Him as a reward for what He suffered; and certainly the reward shall not cease when the work is done. He hath promised to make us kings and priests, which honour we expect in heaven, believing we shall reign with Him (2 Tim. ii. 12), and therefore for ever must believe Him King. The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdom of the Lord, and of His Christ, and He shall reign for ever and ever (Rev. xi. 15), to the complete eternity of the duration of His humanity, which for the future is coeternal to His Divinity. Lest we should imagine that Christ should ever cease to be King, or so interpret this Article, as if He were after the day of judgment to be removed from the right hand of God, the ancient Fathers added those words to the Nicene Creed, Whose kingdom shall have no end, against the heresy which then arose denying the eternity of the kingdom of Christ. Bp. Pearson (on Art. vi. p. 528).

26. Ἔσχατος ἐχθρὸς καταργεῖται ὁ θάνατος] The last enemy that is to be brought to nought is Death. This destruction of Death reacheth no farther than the removing of all power (from Death) to hinder the bringing of all persons redeemed by Christ into the full possession of His Kingdom; for to the reprobate and damned persons, Death will not be destroyed. They will rise again to life, and so the first death is evacuated (καταργεῖται); but that life to which they rise, is a second and a far worse death. Bp. Pearson (Art. vi. 528). Cp. notes above on Matt. xxv. 46. Mark ix. 44—48.

27. ἐκτὸς τοῦ ὑποτάξαντος αὐτῷ τὰ πάντα] except Him Who did put all things under Him. It is well observed by Theodoret that this exceptional clause was very necessary as a caution to the Greeks, who might be disposed to imagine, from their heathen Mythology, that when the Apostle spoke of the supremacy of the Son, he was speaking of such a supremacy as was claimed for Jupiter, to the exclusion and dethronement of his Father, Kronus.

πάντα. 28 [t]Ὅταν δὲ ὑποταγῇ αὐτῷ τὰ πάντα, τότε καὶ αὐτὸς ὁ Υἱὸς ὑποτα- t Phil. 3. 20, 21 ch. 3. 23. & 11. 3.
γήσεται τῷ ὑποτάξαντι αὐτῷ τὰ πάντα, ἵνα ᾖ ὁ Θεὸς τὰ πάντα ἐν πᾶσιν.
29 Ἐπεὶ τί ποιήσουσιν οἱ βαπτιζόμενοι ὑπὲρ τῶν νεκρῶν, εἰ ὅλως νεκροὶ οὐκ

---

28. ὁ Υἱός] The Son will deliver up the kingdom to the Father. Hence the Ancient Fathers proved the distinct personality of the Father and of the Son, against the Noëtian and Sabellian Heretics. See Hippol. c. Noëtum, § 6, 7.

— ἵνα ᾖ ὁ Θεὸς τὰ πάντα ἐν πᾶσιν] in order that God may be all in all. On the subjection of Christ as Man, see also S. Jerome's comment on this text (ad Amandium, vol. iv. p. 163), who refers to S. Hilary's remarks upon it in his eleventh book against the Arians, who used this passage as an argument in favour of their tenets. And he observes that St. Paul does not say, "that the Father may be all in all," but that "God may be all in all." "Quod proprium nomen est Trinitatis, et tam ad Patrem quam ad Filium et Spiritum Sanctum referri potest; ut humanitas subjiciatur divinitati." Greg. Nyssen., in his homily on this text (i. p. 846), explains the subjection here described by St. Paul to mean the subjection of Human Nature, generally incorporated and summed up in Christ, to God; so that all its desires and affections will be conformed to His will.

29. Ἐπεὶ τί ποιήσουσιν οἱ βαπτιζόμενοι ὑπὲρ τῶν νεκρῶν] Since (if this is so), what will they do, who are baptized for the dead?

St. Paul having already shown that they who denied the Resurrection of the Body were guilty of doing dishonour

(1) to the Saints of God, who had fallen asleep in Christ in the hope of a glorious Resurrection, and

(2) to Christ Himself, who was risen from the dead, and had shown Himself alive to His Disciples after His Passion, and Who is the Second Adam, the Head of the New Creation which is quickened in and by Him, and Who ascended into heaven, where as Man He sits in His Risen Body at God's Right Hand in Glory, and Rules the World and the Church; and that they were also chargeable with doing injustice

(3) to all who endure bodily afflictions in the hope of a bodily Resurrection, and who teach the doctrine of the past Resurrection of Christ, and of the future Resurrection of all men, in and through Him,—

Now proceeds to show, that they who deny the Resurrection do injury also, and bring contempt on

(4) all Christians generally, and particularly on themselves, as teaching what is at variance with the universal practice of Christians, and with the first principles of Christianity, which they profess.

His assertion is,—that they reduce themselves to an absurdity, by denying the doctrine of the Resurrection of the Body, since (if that doctrine is not true), what shall they do who are baptized in behalf of the dead (as all Christians are, and as even these Corinthians themselves are, if they are Christians)? why are they even baptized in behalf of the dead?

(5) What then is the meaning of being baptized for the dead? (ὑπὲρ τῶν νεκρῶν.)

It cannot mean to be baptized as proxies, in the place of those who have died without baptism.

As far as we know, there was no such usage then practised at Corinth, or any where else in the Church of that age.

Some Heretics indeed, misinterpreting the present passage of St. Paul, grounded such a practice upon it, so misunderstood. (See Chrys. and Tertullian, de Resur. Carnis, c. 48.) The practice was posterior to the words of St. Paul; the words were not produced by the practice. And even if such a practice had existed at Corinth, it would have been unworthy of the Apostle to damage his sacred cause by resorting to a mere argumentum ad hominem, and to build any thing on the unsound foundation of a practice which, if he had mentioned, he would not have failed to condemn. Cp. Riyalt ad Tertullian, de Resur. Carnis, c. 48.

Besides, such imaginary proxies could not be said to be baptized ὑπὲρ τῶν νεκρῶν, i. e. for the dead, generally and collectively, but only ὑπὲρ νεκρῶν, for dead persons individually, of whom they were the proxies. Compare Winer, § 19, p. 112, on the difference of νεκροὶ, dead persons, and οἱ νεκροὶ, the dead, regarded as a whole, and as distinguished from the living.

The preposition ὑπὲρ is used here after βαπτίζονται, in the same sense as after other verbs, such as πρεσβεύω, 2 Cor. v. 20; λαλῶ, xii. 19.

The words "to be baptized for the dead, and in their behalf," are, therefore, to be explained as follows:

Every Baptism which is administered in the Church is an argument for the future Resurrection of the Body. It is a public profession of Belief in that Doctrine. "Know ye not," says St. Paul (Rom. vi. 3), "that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into His death? therefore we are buried with Him by Baptism into death, that, like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord." And so Col. ii. 12: "Buried with Him in Baptism, wherein also ye are risen with Him through the faith of the operation of God." Compare the Collect of the Church for Easter Even.

Besides, in every Baptism administered in the Church, a profession is made, by the person baptized, of Belief in Christ's Resurrection, and in the Resurrection of the Body. Every Baptismal Creed contains these Articles of the Faith. (See Chrys. here, and Rigalt ad Tertullian l. c.) Therefore, every one who is baptized, may be well said to be baptized ὑπὲρ τῶν νεκρῶν, in behalf of the dead. And this was specially true at Corinth. There some persons denied the Resurrection (v. 12). They alleged, that those who had fallen asleep in Christ had perished (v. 18). Such unbelieving persons might well be said to speak against the dead, κατὰ τῶν νεκρῶν. They disparaged their condition, impugned their privileges, and derided their hopes. They desecrated the Grave, which had been hallowed by Christ, and were calumniators, revilers, and accusers of the dead. But, in opposition to these heretics, all baptized persons, at their Baptism, pleaded the cause of the dead. Their Baptism was a practical argument ὑπὲρ τῶν νεκρῶν, for the dead. They were baptized in behalf of the dead, and in their vindication. They justified them from the charge of folly in grounding their hopes on a vain and false foundation.

Every baptized person was an apologist of the dead; he vindicated them from the calumnies of the sceptic, he was baptized in their behalf. He declared by his public profession before Baptism, that Christ was risen, and that the dead would rise; that the state of the dead in Christ was therefore a blessed one. Baptism itself was a public representation of the Resurrection. It was spiritually "a death unto sin, and a new birth unto righteousness." And therefore the Sacrament of the New Birth is called in Scripture the First Resurrection. (See note on Rev. xx. 5, 6.) And the immersion of the catechumen in the water, and his emersion from it, was a visible figure of the Resurrection of the dead.

Thus all Christians, even these Corinthians themselves, if they were Christians, were baptized ὑπὲρ τῶν νεκρῶν: and if they denied the Resurrection, they denied their own Christianity; they renounced the primary principle by which they had been engrafted into the Christian Church.

Well then might the Apostle say, If there is no Resurrection of the dead, what henceforth will they be able to do (Acts iv. 16; xxii. 10. Matt. xxvii. 22. Mark x. 17. Luke iii. 10; x. 25) who are baptized in behalf of the dead? What other principle of action can they have? Their foundation will have been destroyed. What then will they be able to effect? (Cp. Winer, p. 229, note, on the sense of ποιεῖν, and ibid. p. 259.) What other foundation will they be able to lay? What superstructure of Christian faith and practice will they be able to build? Why do they even take the pains to lay a foundation, which is to be destroyed as unsound? Why are they even baptized for the dead?

We may confirm what has been here said on this important text by the following words from S. Chrysostom.

When we have instructed the catechumen in the divine Mysteries of the Gospel, and are about to baptize him, we command him to say, 'I believe in the Resurrection of the Body.' And he is baptized in this faith. For, after he has made confession of this article of the faith, he descends to the fountain of those sacred waters. This is what St. Paul recalls to their memory. If there is no Resurrection of the Body, why are you baptized for the dead? Why are you baptized in the profession that they will rise from the grave? You, on your part, proclaim their Resurrection; and the Priest, on his side, represents it. For your immersion into the water at Baptism, and your emersion from it, is a figure of the Resurrection of the Dead. God raises you from the grave of sin by the 'laver of Regeneration' in Baptism; and thus gives you a pledge of the Resurrection which you profess. If then there is no Resurrection of the Body, all that is done in Baptism on behalf of the dead is a mere theatrical show. What then will they do, who are baptized for the dead, and in the profession on their behalf that they will arise from the grave? They will have been cheated by an idle delusion! (Chrys.) u 2 Cor. 11. 26.

x Rom. 8. 36. 2 Cor. 4. 10. 1 Thess. 2. 19.
y 2 Cor. 1. 8. Isa. 22. 13.
z ch. 5. 6.
a Rom. 13. 11. ch. 6. 5. Eph. 5. 14.
b Ezek. 37. 3.
c John 12. 24.
d Gen. 1. 16.

ἐγείρονται, τί καὶ βαπτίζονται ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν; 30 [u] Τί καὶ ἡμεῖς κινδυνεύομεν πᾶσαν ὥραν; 31 [x] Καθ' ἡμέραν ἀποθνήσκω, νὴ τὴν ὑμετέραν καύχησιν, ἣν ἔχω ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ τῷ Κυρίῳ ἡμῶν. 32 [y] Εἰ κατὰ ἄνθρωπον ἐθηριομάχησα ἐν Ἐφέσῳ, τί μοι τὸ ὄφελος, εἰ νεκροὶ οὐκ ἐγείρονται; φάγωμεν καὶ πίωμεν, αὔριον γὰρ ἀποθνήσκομεν. 33 [z] Μὴ πλανᾶσθε· φθείρουσιν ἤθη χρηστὰ ὁμιλίαι κακαί. 34 [a] Ἐκνήψατε δικαίως, καὶ μὴ ἁμαρτάνετε· ἀγνωσίαν γὰρ Θεοῦ τινὲς ἔχουσι· πρὸς ἐντροπὴν ὑμῖν λέγω.

35 [b] Ἀλλ' ἐρεῖ τις, Πῶς ἐγείρονται οἱ νεκροί; ποίῳ δὲ σώματι ἔρχονται; 36 [c] Ἄφρον, σὺ ὃ σπείρεις οὐ ζωοποιεῖται ἐὰν μὴ ἀποθάνῃ· 37 καὶ ὃ σπείρεις, οὐ τὸ σῶμα τὸ γενησόμενον σπείρεις, ἀλλὰ γυμνὸν κόκκον, εἰ τύχοι, σίτου ἤ τινος τῶν λοιπῶν. 38 Ὁ δὲ Θεὸς δίδωσιν αὐτῷ σῶμα καθὼς ἠθέλησε, καὶ ἑκάστῳ τῶν σπερμάτων τὸ ἴδιον σῶμα. 39 Οὐ πᾶσα σὰρξ ἡ αὐτὴ σάρξ· ἀλλὰ ἄλλη μὲν ἀνθρώπων, ἄλλη δὲ σὰρξ κτηνῶν, ἄλλη δὲ πτηνῶν, ἄλλη δὲ ἰχθύων. 40 [d] Καὶ σώματα ἐπουράνια, καὶ σώματα ἐπίγεια· ἀλλὰ ἑτέρα μὲν ἡ τῶν ἐπουρανίων δόξα, ἑτέρα δὲ ἡ τῶν ἐπιγείων· 41 Ἄλλη δόξα ἡλίου, καὶ ἄλλη δόξα σελήνης, καὶ ἄλλη δόξα ἀστέρων· ἀστὴρ γὰρ ἀστέρος διαφέρει ἐν δόξῃ. 42 Οὕτω καὶ ἡ ἀνά-

---

31. Καθ' ἡμέραν ἀποθνήσκω] Day by day I am dying. See S. Polycarp, frag. 11, p. 533, "Apostolus Paulus quotidie inquit morior, quoniam ad mortem jugiter erat præparatus."

— νὴ τὴν ὑμετέραν καύχησιν] by my glorying in you (see on Luke xxii. 19) and your faith (Theodoret), as hoping for a future reward, at the general Resurrection, for my labours endured among you and for you, in body and soul.

This form of speech is sometimes called an adjuration, but improperly; for it is essential to an Oath, that a superior Being, believed to be divine, should be invoked in it as a witness. See Sanderson, de Juram. v. c. 6, and i. c. 4, vol. iv. pp. 245 316.

32. κατὰ ἄνθρωπον ἐθηριομάχησα] as far as man was concerned (see on 1 Cor. ix. 8. Rom. iii. 5); as far as my adversaries were able to make me do it, and as far as I myself was concerned, and independently of God's supernatural interposition (κατὰ Θεόν) to deliver me, I fought with beasts at Ephesus; which some interpret in a figurative sense. S. Ignatius ad Rom. c. 5, says, ἀπὸ Συρίας μέχρι Ῥώμης θηριομαχῶ: and see Œcumen. and others here, and Bp. Sanderson, i. p. 225, "he fought with beasts in the shape of men."

But the words may well be taken literally: As far as my human will and agency was concerned, and apart from divine intervention (see 2 Cor. i. 8, 9), I fought with beasts at Ephesus. (See Chrys. here, and Tertullian, de Res. Carnis, c. 48.) The literal sense is also supported by Ignatius: "who fought with beasts at Rome" (Ephes. i.), ἐπιτυχεῖν ἐν Ῥώμῃ θηριομαχῆσαι. Cp. Trall. 10; and Christian Martyrs, contemporaries of Polycarp, fought with beasts at Smyrna. Martyr. Polyc. 3; cp. c. 12; and this sense seems to be confirmed by St. Paul's own history. See on 2 Tim. iv. 17.

There is also more propriety in the literal sense here. The Apostle is pleading for the Resurrection of the Body. Bodily afflictions were endured by him in the hope of a bodily reward. It was very apposite therefore to his purpose to say, that in will, is not in deed, he gave his body to be torn by wild beasts, and his bones to be ground by their teeth, in order that he might have in his body a more glorious Resurrection. Compare the fervent language of S. Ignatius panting for martyrdom, ad Rom. 4: "I beseech you, hinder me not, suffer me to be the food of wild beasts, who may send me to God. Corn I am of God. Let me be ground by their teeth, that I may be clean bread of Christ." See also ibid. c. 5.

St. Paul refers to this peril at Ephesus because he was now there, and that was his most recent danger. See above, Introduction, p. 76.

— τί μοι τὸ ὄφελος] what thence is the profit to me, if dead men rise not again?

— φάγωμεν καὶ πίωμεν] let us eat and drink. "Bibamus, moriendum est," quoted by Seneca, Controv. 14. See other expressions of this Epicurean sentiment in Wetstein, p. 169.

Such language as this shows what the popular feeling was, and gives us some notion of what the world owes to Christianity.

33. φθείρουσιν—κακαί] An Iambic senarius from Menander's Thais (Meineke, p. 75), and translated into a Latin Iambic verse by Tertullian (ad Uxorem, i. 8), who calls it "a verse sanctified by the Apostle,"—

"Bonos corrumpunt mores congressus mali."

The best MSS. have χρηστὰ, not χρῆσθ'. Cp. Winer, § 5, p. 40.

On other like verses quoted in N. T., see on Acts xvii. 28, and Winer, § 68, p. 563.

36. Ἄφρον] Thou fool! A reading altered by some editors to Ἄφρων, on the authority of A, B, D, E, G. But in such matters as this, where the similarity of sound and of writing led to confusion, the external evidence of MSS. is of less weight. See v. 49.

St. James uses the same case in a similar manner, ὦ ἄνθρωπε κενέ. (James ii. 20.)

37. γυμνόν] bare, naked seed, not yet clothed with the beauty which it will have after its death, when it sprouts in the blade and the ear, in the vernal Resurrection of a new year.

So we ourselves, when we die, are sown in the earth as naked and bare grain. "Naked came we out of our mother's womb, and naked shall we return" (Job i. 21). But we hope to be hereafter clothed-upon with our glorified body, and then we shall not be naked. See 2 Cor. v. 3. Cp. Tertullian, c. Marcion. v. 10, where is an exposition of St. Paul's words; and the vigorous language of Tertullian's Apology (c. 48), "Semina non nisi corrupta et dissoluta fœcundiùs surgunt; omnia pereundo servantur, omnia de interitu reformantur. Tu, homo, tantum nomen, ad hoc morieris, ut pereas?"

The hopes of the Christian, derived from this view of the vegetable world, form a striking contrast to the dreary notions of Heathenism, as expressed in the melodious lines of Moschus on the death of his contemporary pastoral Poet, Bion, v. 105:—

αἴ, αἴ, ταὶ μαλάχαι μὲν, ἐπὰν κατὰ κᾶπον ὄλωνται, ἢ τὰ χλωρὰ σέλινα, καὶ εὐθαλὲς ὑγρὸν ἄνηθον, ὕστερον αὖ ζώοντι, καὶ εἰς ἔτος ἄλλο φύοντι, ἄμμες δ', οἱ μεγάλοι καὶ καρτεροὶ ἢ σοφοὶ ἄνδρες, ὅππότε πρᾶτα θάνωμες, ἀνάκοοι ἐν χθονὶ κοίλᾳ εὕδομες εὖ μάλα μακρὸν, ἀτέρμονα, νήγρετον, ὕπνον.

See above on 1 Thess. iv. 13.

38. τὸ ἴδιον σῶμα] its own body. Wheat does not become barley, nor is barley changed into wheat. Each grain preserves its identity, and rises to life in a more beautiful form.

39—41.] St. Paul's argument is, If God can create such a variety of animal and vegetable genera, surely He can revivify any one genus, in a changed, glorified, form. (Greg. Nyss. i. 842.) If He can create, and has created, bodies terrestrial and also bodies celestial, He can make the terrestrial body to shine with celestial glory. And this is what our Lord Himself promises when He says, "Then shall the righteous shine forth as the Sun" (Matt. xiii. 43).

39. ἄλλη—ἰχθύων] So the best MSS., and it is observable this is the Psalmist's order, Ps. viii. 8, κτήνη, πετεινὰ, ἰχθύας. And St. Paul had evidently this Psalm in his mind, and quotes it in v. 27. Elz. has ἰχθύων before πτηνῶν.

41, 42. Ἄλλη δόξα ἡλίου—Οὕτω κ.τ.λ.] This text has been used by many of the Fathers in confirmation of the doctrine that there will be different degrees of glory in heaven. So Aug. (Serm. 132), "Comparata est Resurrectio mortuorum stellis in cœlo lucentibus. Stella a stella differt in gloriâ: splendor dispar, cœlum commune." So S. Jerome. Cp. on Luke xix. 17.

This text may indeed be accepted as an illustration of that doctrine, already proved from other places of Scripture. But the στάσις τῶν νεκρῶν. Σπείρεται ἐν φθορᾷ, ἐγείρεται ἐν ἀφθαρσίᾳ· [43] [e] σπείρεται ἐν ἀτιμίᾳ, ἐγείρεται ἐν δόξῃ· σπείρεται ἐν ἀσθενείᾳ, ἐγείρεται ἐν δυνάμει· [44] σπείρεται σῶμα ψυχικόν, ἐγείρεται σῶμα πνευματικόν. Εἰ ἔστιν σῶμα ψυχικόν, ἔστιν καὶ πνευματικόν. [45] [f] Οὕτω καὶ γέγραπται, Ἐγένετο ὁ πρῶτος ἄνθρωπος Ἀδὰμ εἰς ψυχὴν ζῶσαν· ὁ ἔσχατος Ἀδὰμ εἰς πνεῦμα ζωοποιοῦν. [46] Ἀλλ' οὐ πρῶτον τὸ πνευματικόν, ἀλλὰ τὸ ψυχικόν· ἔπειτα τὸ πνευματικόν. [47] [g] Ὁ πρῶτος ἄνθρωπος ἐκ γῆς χοϊκός· ὁ δεύτερος ἄνθρωπος ὁ Κύριος ἐξ οὐρανοῦ. [48] Οἷος ὁ χοϊκός, τοιοῦτοι καὶ οἱ χοϊκοί· καὶ οἷος ὁ ἐπουράνιος, τοιοῦτοι καὶ οἱ ἐπουράνιοι· [49] [h] καὶ καθὼς ἐφορέσαμεν τὴν εἰκόνα τοῦ χοϊκοῦ, φορέσομεν καὶ τὴν εἰκόνα τοῦ ἐπουρανίου.

[50] [i] Τοῦτο δέ φημι, ἀδελφοί, ὅτι σὰρξ καὶ αἷμα βασιλείαν Θεοῦ κληρονομῆσαι οὐ δύνανται, οὐδὲ ἡ φθορὰ τὴν ἀφθαρσίαν κληρονομεῖ. [51] [j] Ἰδοὺ, μυστήριον ὑμῖν λέγω· πάντες μὲν οὐ κοιμηθησόμεθα, πάντες δὲ ἀλλαγησόμεθα· [52] [k] ἐν

e Phil. 3. 21. Matt. 13. 43. Dan. 12. 3.

f Gen. 2. 7. Rom. 5. 14. John 5. 21. & 6. 33, 39. Col. 3. 3, 4.

g Gen. 3. 19. John 3. 13, 31.

h Gen. 5. 3. John 3. 31. Rom. 8. 29. 2 Cor. 3. 18. & 4. 11. Phil. 3. 21. 1 John 3. 2.

i ch. 6. 13.

j 1 Thess. 4. 15—17.

k 1 Thess. 4. 16.

---

true meaning of this text is, that as God has made one star to differ from another star in glory, so much more can He make the same body to differ hereafter in glory from what it is now.

— σπείρεται] is being sown. "Verbum amœnissimum pro sepulturâ." (Bengel.)

44. ἔστιν καὶ πνευματικόν] there is also a spiritual body. Not a spirit, but a true body with flesh and bones (Luke xxiv. 39), such as Christ's Body is since the Resurrection. See on John xx. 19, 20. 27. Phil. iii. 21.

Elz. omits εἰ, if, at the beginning of the sentence, but it is in A, B, C, D*, F, G.

The Apostle's statement is,—If there is a natural body,—marred and sullied by sin, and compassed with weakness and shame, yet, be comforted, there is also a spiritual body, to be raised in power and glory; and that body may hereafter be yours for ever.

47. χοϊκός] of dust, χοῦς. See Mark vi. 11, ἐκτινάξατε τὸν χοῦν. Rev. xviii. 19, ἔβαλον χοῦν. Compare Gen. ii. 7, where the creation of man is thus described by LXX, ἔπλασεν ὁ Θεὸς τὸν ἄνθρωπον, χοῦν ἀπὸ γῆς. Καὶ ἐνεφύσησεν εἰς τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ πνοὴν ζωῆς, καὶ ἐγένετο ὁ ἄνθρωπος εἰς ψυχὴν ζῶσαν.

This word χοϊκὸς is happily adopted by the Apostle, because it contains an argument in behalf of the doctrine of the Resurrection of the body, for which he is pleading. If God could create man from mere χοῦς, loose, flowing dust (root χέω), surely He can restore the work He has created, however that work may moulder in the ground, or be scattered to the wind, or be consumed in the fire, or dissolved in the waves.

— ὁ Κύριος] the Lord. Omitted by B, C, D*, E, F, G, and some recent Editors; but these two words are found in A, D, I, K, and in many Cursives, Versions, and Fathers; and are certainly as old as the age of Origen and Tertullian, who quotes them, c. Marcion. v. 10, "Primus homo de humo terrenus, secundus Dominus de cœlo." Indeed, the word ὁ Κύριος = JEHOVAH, adds much to the force of the statement. The first man was of the earth, χοϊκός, the second man is the Lord from heaven. The one, the creature; the other, the Creator. Therefore, the one the cause of death, the Other of life, to all.

49. καθὼς ἐφορέσαμεν] as we, Christians, bore, in our lifetime, the image of the earthy, the first Adam, in all its mortal weakness, so we shall bear also the image of the heavenly, the second Adam, "Who will change our vile bodies so as to be made like to His glorious body" (Phil. iii. 21).

— φορέσομεν] we shall bear. So Elz. with B alone of collated uncial MSS., and many Cursive MSS. But this seems to be the true reading, although another reading, φορέσωμεν, let us bear, is supported by A, C, D, E, F, G, K, and very many Cursive MSS. and Fathers, e. g. Tertullian, pp. 356. 474, de Res. Carnis, c. 49; c. Marcion. v. 10.

φορέσομεν is found in many Cursives and in the Syriac, Arabic, Æthiopic, and Armenian Versions and Fathers: and so Tischendorf.

It has been said by some, that the change to φορέσωμεν is to be ascribed to a desire on the part of the Copyists to improve an assertion into an earnest ethical exhortation; but such suppositions as these have a tendency to destroy the credit of the ancient MSS.; and if such surmises were true, those MSS. would hardly be worth the pains of collating them.

If there was any design in the change, it is more likely that the intention was to obviate thereby the erroneous notion of some heretics, that all men would eventually be saved, and be clothed with heavenly glory. But St. Paul is here speaking of the Saints only.

Nothing is more common in MSS. than the confusion of o and ω. See above, v. 36 and iv. 2. This change affords a proof, among others, that the best MSS. are not to be implicitly relied on, without reference to other considerations,—such as those afforded by the study of Palæography, and a knowledge of ancient Pronunciation.

50. σὰρξ καὶ αἷμα—οὐ δύνανται] Flesh and Blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God. On the error derived by some from these words, as if they were at variance with a belief in the Resurrection of the Flesh, see Irenæus, v. 9, where he shows that the Apostle's meaning is, that flesh, as flesh, cannot inherit the kingdom of God; and that fleshly lusts exclude from that kingdom; and that the Flesh needs the regenerating, renewing, and sanctifying influence of the Spirit, in order to qualify it for heaven.

S. Irenæus thence draws this practical lesson: Since we cannot be saved without the Spirit of God, the Apostle exhorts us carefully to keep and cherish (συντηρεῖν) the Spirit, by a sound faith and holy life, in order that we may not be bereft of the Spirit, and so forfeit the kingdom of God (v. 9. 3).

See also ibid. v. 10, where he says, St. Paul teaches us that they who live in the flesh cannot please God (Rom. viii. 8), and that flesh cannot inherit the kingdom of God. The Apostle does not reject the substance of the flesh, but invites the infusion of the Spirit.

And again (c. 11), We were cleansed in Baptism, not from the substance of our bodies and from the image of the creature, but from our former vain conversation; and in the same body as that in which we were dying, when we did the works of corruption, in that body are we made alive, when we do the works of the Spirit.

See also ibid. v. 13, 14. Indeed these chapters of the great work of Irenæus form one of the most interesting early Comments on this portion of St. Paul's Epistle. Compare also Tertullian, c. Marcion. v. 10, "Operibus carnis, non substantiæ carnis, denegatur regnum Dei," and de Resurrect. Carnis, c. 50.

See also S. Jerome in his eloquent Epistle ad Pammachium, vol. iv. pp. 319—329, where he comments on this passage of St. Paul, and shows the necessity of confessing the Resurrection of the Body, "Nos post resurrectionem eadem habebimus membra, quibus nunc utimur, easdem carnes et sanguinem et ossa; quorum in Scripturis opera, non natura, damnantur. Hæc est vera Resurrectionis confessio, quæ sic gloriam carni tribuit, ut non auferat veritatem."

The Resurrection of the Flesh is not due to the Flesh, but to the Spirit dwelling in the Flesh. See on Rom. viii. 11.

— οὐδὲ ἡ φθορὰ τὴν ἀφθαρσίαν κληρονομεῖ] nor doth Corruption inherit Incorruption. Will then the flesh be raised again? Yes; certainly. St. Paul does not say that flesh and blood will not arise from the grave, but that they will not inherit the kingdom of God. "Tamdiu regnum Dei non possidebunt, quamdiu caro tantum sanguisque permanserint. Quum autem corruptivum induerit incorruptionem, quæ prius gravi pondere premebatur in terram, acceptis spiritûs pennis, et immutationis non abolitionis novâ gloriâ, volabit ad cœlum" (Jerome, ad Pammach. vol. iv. p. 329). See Rom. viii. 11, and the homily of Methodius, de Resurrectione, in Amphilochii Opera, pp. 283—336.

51. πάντες μὲν—ἀλλαγησόμεθα] we shall not indeed all sleep, but we shall all be changed. Lachmann has adopted the reading of some ancient MSS. and Fathers, πάντες [μὲν] κοιμησόμεθα, οὐ πάντες δὲ ἀλλαγησόμεθα, the evidence for which is given by Wetstein, p. 173, and Tischendorf, and Dean Alford in his valuable collection of Various Readings. But the received reading is supported by B, D, E, I, K, by the Syriac, Coptic, Arabic, ἀτόμῳ, ἐν ῥιπῇ ὀφθαλμοῦ, ἐν τῇ ἐσχάτῃ σάλπιγγι· σαλπίσει γὰρ, καὶ οἱ νεκροὶ

1 2 Cor. 5. 4. ἐγερθήσονται ἄφθαρτοι, καὶ ἡμεῖς ἀλλαγησόμεθα· 53 l δεῖ γὰρ τὸ φθαρτὸν τοῦτο m Isa. 25. 8. Hos 13. 14. Heb. 2. 14. ἐνδύσασθαι ἀφθαρσίαν, καὶ τὸ θνητὸν τοῦτο ἐνδύσασθαι ἀθανασίαν. 54 m Ὅταν δὲ τὸ φθαρτὸν τοῦτο ἐνδύσηται ἀφθαρσίαν, καὶ τὸ θνητὸν τοῦτο ἐνδύσηται ἀθανασίαν, τότε γενήσεται ὁ λόγος ὁ γεγραμμένος, Κατεπόθη ὁ θάνατος εἰς νῖκος. 55 Ποῦ σοῦ, θάνατε, τὸ κέντρον; ποῦ σοῦ, ᾅδη, τὸ νῖκος; n Rom. 5. 12. & 3. 20. & 7. 5. o 1 John 5. 5. Rom. 7. 25. & 8. 37. 56 n Τὸ δὲ κέντρον τοῦ θανάτου ἡ ἁμαρτία· ἡ δὲ δύναμις τῆς ἁμαρτίας ὁ νόμος·
57 o Τῷ δὲ Θεῷ χάρις τῷ διδόντι ἡμῖν τὸ νῖκος διὰ τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.
58 p Ὥστε, ἀδελφοί μου ἀγαπητοὶ, ἑδραῖοι γίνεσθε, ἀμετακίνητοι, περισσεύοντες ἐν τῷ ἔργῳ τοῦ Κυρίου πάντοτε, εἰδότες ὅτι ὁ κόπος ὑμῶν οὐκ ἔστι κενὸς ἐν Κυρίῳ.

a Acts 11 29. Rom. 12. 13. 2 Cor. 8. 4. & 9. 1. XVI. 1 a Περὶ δὲ τῆς λογίας τῆς εἰς τοὺς ἁγίους, ὥσπερ διέταξα ταῖς ἐκκληand Gothic Versions, and many Cursives and Fathers, and, above all, by the context. And so Tisch., Alford, Meyer, with the omission of μέν.

The objection which was made by some in ancient times to the received reading was, that the wicked would not be changed, namely, glorified; but St. Paul is here speaking only of the Resurrection of the Just. See vv. 42—49. 53.

See note above on 1 Thess. iv. 15, and the excellent remarks on the various readings of this passage in Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. vii. p. 564, where, after summing up the evidence on the subject, he says, "we have no reason to doubt or question the received reading."

52. ἐσχάτῃ σάλπιγγι] at the last Trump. S. Jerome (ibid.) connects this Trumpet with the seventh Trumpet in the Apocalypse (viii. and xi.), "In Apocalypsi Joannis septem describuntur Angeli cum tubis; Novissimo, i. e. septimo claro tubæ strepitu, mortui suscitantur." And so Theodor. Mopsuest. and Severian, who observe that the Apostle speaks of the last Trumpet, with some reference to the other Trumpets. See below on Rev. viii. 1.

54. Κατεπόθη ὁ θάνατος εἰς νῖκος] Death was swallowed up in Victory, at the Death and Resurrection of Christ. Observe the aorist κατεπόθη.

The word in Isa. xxv. 8 for νῖκος, victory, is נֶצַח (netsah), eternity, as prevailing over time, and conquering all things, and sometimes used to signify victory (1 Chron. xxix. 11); and therefore the representation of the word by νῖκος, victory, was natural and easy. See Surenhusius, καταλλ. p. 552.

55. Ποῦ σοῦ, θάνατε, τὸ κέντρον;] Where, O Death, is thy sting? The sting of Death, which is sin (v. 56), has been taken away by the Obedience and Passion of Christ. The sting of the old Serpent of fire has been healed by the lifting up of the Serpent of brass, looked at with the eye of Faith. See on John iii. 14.

— ᾅδη] Hades. B, C, D, E, F, G have θάνατε repeated here, which has been received by some Editors, who suppose that ᾅδη is a correction of the copyists to suit the Septuagint Version of the passage here cited from Hosea xiii. 14.

But copyists might have been inclined to alter ᾅδη also, as appearing to give countenance to the heathen notion of a personal Deity bearing the name of Hades. The Latin Fathers, such as Tertullian, who repeated the word Mors (c. Marcion. v. 10), would have shrunk from the use of Orcus, or Dis. And the form of this eloquent appeal and magnificent pæan of victory seems to be weakened by the repetition of the word θάνατε. And an assertion of victory over Hades, שְׁאוֹל (Sheol), seems specially appropriate in this divine plea for the Resurrection of the Flesh.

We find a similar combination in the Apocalypse, xx. 13, ὁ θάνατος καὶ ὁ ᾅδης. And again, xx. 14.

And ᾅδη is found here in A, J, K, and in most of the Cursive MSS., and as early as Origen, and also in the Syriac, Gothic, and Arabic Versions. It is, therefore, retained in the text.

On the proper meaning of Hades, see above on Luke xvi. 23, and below on Rev. i. 18.

56. ἡ δὲ δύναμις τῆς ἁμαρτίας ὁ νόμος] but the strength of sin is the Law. For, where no Law is, there is no sin, for sin is the transgression of Law (see on Rom. iv. 15; vii. 7. 1 John iii. 4), and the nature of Law is to impose and exact a penalty for disobedience to it. Law does not make sin, but declares it; and no child of Adam is without some Law (see on Rom. i. 18; ii. 9), and no one lives up to the Law under which he lives. Every one, therefore, is by nature subject to condemnation, and under a curse. But Christ by His perfect obedience to the requirements, and by His submission to the penalties, of Law, in our Nature, has delivered us from the curse of the Law (Gal. iii. 13), has given us new powers of obedience, and has promised us infinite rewards for it. See below, Introduction to the Epistle to the Romans.

But why was mention made in this place by St. Paul of the Law, as the strength of sin? What is its connexion with his subject?

He is arguing against those who denied the Resurrection of the Body, and he had already said that if dead bodies cannot rise again, neither is Christ risen (v. 16), Christ's Body is still in the grave. And if that is so, then ye are still in your sins (v. 17). And why? Because the Resurrection of Christ is the proof that His sacrifice for your sins has been accepted by God. His Resurrection is the evidence of your Justification. (See on v. 16, and below on Rom. iv. 25.)

If there is no such thing as a Resurrection of the body, then your sins yet live and prevail; and the Law, which is the strength of sin, rises up against you with all its curses for disobedience.

But, God be praised, there is a Resurrection. Christ is risen. Ye have been justified (vi. 11). Thanks be to God Who giveth us the Victory through Jesus Christ our Lord!

This argument of the Apostle is a proof of the Resurrection. For, if Sin was the cause of Death, and if Christ loosed the bonds of Sin, and delivered us from it in our Baptism, and has taken away the curse of the Law, in the transgression of which is the essence of Sin, why should we doubt of the Resurrection? How can Death have any power over us? From the Law? No; Christ has destroyed its curse. From Sin? No; Christ has taken it away. Chrys.

57. Τῷ δὲ Θεῷ χάρις τῷ διδόντι ἡμῖν τὸ νῖκος διὰ τοῦ Κ. ἡ. Ἰ. Χ.] Christ has conquered Death, and enables us to conquer it. S. Athanasius argues for the triumph of Christ over death, from the joy with which Christian Martyrs, even young women and boys, have welcomed the most agonizing deaths for Christ, as contrasted with the fear with which men recoiled from Death before the Incarnation and Passion of Christ. See his Treatise de Incarnat. § 27—30, p. 56, and cp. Clem. Rom. § 6, where for γυναῖκες, δαναΐδες, καὶ δίρκαι we may read γυναῖκες, νεανίδες, παιδίσκαι. Cp. Athanas. l. c. οἱ ἐν Χριστῷ παῖδες καὶ νέαι κόραι παρορῶσι τὸν ἐνταῦθα βίον, καὶ θανεῖν μελετῶσι, and Aug. Serm. 143, p. 999.

58. ἐν τῷ ἔργῳ] The practical result of the Doctrine of the Resurrection, and of God's Grace in Christ, is the duty of abounding in the work of the Lord. See the next note.

CH. XVI. 1. Περὶ δὲ τῆς λογίας τῆς εἰς τοὺς ἁγίους] Now concerning the collection of alms for the poor Christians at Jerusalem, suffering then under special privations (cp. on Acts ii. 44) from the hatred of the Jews and the distresses of that age of afflictions which preceded the Fall of Jerusalem. See Gal. ii. 10. 2 Cor. ix. 1, 2. 12.

Observe the beauty of the connexion with what has gone before.

The Apostle had just been preaching consolation to the faithful, from the certainty of a glorious Resurrection of the body; and, in accordance with our Lord's declarations concerning works of mercy (Matt. xxv. 34—46), he had taken occasion from σίαις τῆς Γαλατίας, οὕτω καὶ ὑμεῖς ποιήσατε. 2 [b] Κατὰ μίαν σαββάτου ἕκαστος ὑμῶν παρ' ἑαυτῷ τιθέτω θησαυρίζων ὅ τι ἂν εὐοδῶται· ἵνα μὴ ὅταν ἔλθω τότε λογίαι γίνωνται. 3 [c] Ὅταν δὲ παραγένωμαι, οὓς ἐὰν δοκιμάσητε δι' ἐπιστολῶν, τούτους πέμψω ἀπενεγκεῖν τὴν χάριν ὑμῶν εἰς Ἰερουσαλήμ. 4 Ἐὰν δὲ ᾖ ἄξιον τοῦ κἀμὲ πορεύεσθαι, σὺν ἐμοὶ πορεύσονται.

5 [d] Ἐλεύσομαι δὲ πρὸς ὑμᾶς, ὅταν Μακεδονίαν διέλθω· Μακεδονίαν γὰρ διέρχομαι· 6 [e] πρὸς ὑμᾶς δὲ, τυχὸν, παραμενῶ, ἢ καὶ παραχειμάσω, ἵνα ὑμεῖς με προπέμψητε οὗ ἐὰν πορεύωμαι· 7 [f] οὐ θέλω γὰρ ὑμᾶς ἄρτι ἐν παρόδῳ ἰδεῖν· ἐλπίζω γὰρ χρόνον τινὰ ἐπιμεῖναι πρὸς ὑμᾶς, ἐὰν ὁ Κύριος ἐπιτρέψῃ. 8 Ἐπιμενῶ δὲ ἐν Ἐφέσῳ ἕως τῆς Πεντηκοστῆς· 9 [g] θύρα γάρ μοι ἀνέῳγε μεγάλη καὶ ἐνεργὴς, καὶ ἀντικείμενοι πολλοί.

10 [h] Ἐὰν δὲ ἔλθῃ Τιμόθεος, βλέπετε ἵνα ἀφόβως γένηται πρὸς ὑμᾶς· τὸ γὰρ ἔργον Κυρίου ἐργάζεται, ὡς καὶ ἐγώ· 11 [i] μή τις οὖν αὐτὸν ἐξουθενήσῃ. Προπέμψατε δὲ αὐτὸν ἐν εἰρήνῃ, ἵνα ἔλθῃ πρός με· ἐκδέχομαι γὰρ αὐτὸν μετὰ τῶν ἀδελφῶν.

12 Περὶ δὲ Ἀπολλὼ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ, πολλὰ παρεκάλεσα αὐτὸν ἵνα ἔλθῃ πρὸς ὑμᾶς μετὰ τῶν ἀδελφῶν· καὶ πάντως οὐκ ἦν θέλημα ἵνα νῦν ἔλθῃ· ἐλεύσεται δὲ ὅταν εὐκαιρήσῃ.

13 [k] Γρηγορεῖτε, στήκετε ἐν τῇ πίστει, ἀνδρίζεσθε, κραταιοῦσθε· 14 [l] πάντα ὑμῶν ἐν ἀγάπῃ γινέσθω.

15 [m] Παρακαλῶ δὲ ὑμᾶς, ἀδελφοὶ, οἴδατε τὴν οἰκίαν Στεφανᾶ, ὅτι ἐστὶν ἀπαρχὴ τῆς Ἀχαΐας, καὶ εἰς διακονίαν τοῖς ἁγίοις ἔταξαν ἑαυτούς, 16 [n] ἵνα καὶ ὑμεῖς ὑποτάσσησθε τοῖς τοιούτοις, καὶ παντὶ τῷ συνεργοῦντι καὶ κοπιῶντι. 17 Χαίρω δὲ ἐπὶ τῇ παρουσίᾳ Στεφανᾶ καὶ Φορτουνάτου καὶ Ἀχαϊκοῦ, ὅτι τὸ ὑμέτερον

b Acts 20. 7. Rev. 1. 10.
c 2 Cor. 8. 16, 19.
d Acts 19. 21. 2 Cor. 1. 16.
e 2 Cor. 1. 15. Rom. 15. 24.
f Acts 18. 21. ch. 4. 19. James 4. 15.
g Acts 14. 27.
h ch. 4. 17. 1 Thess. 3. 2.
i 1 Tim. 4. 12. 3 John 6. k Matt. 24. 42. Eph. 6 10. Col. 1. 11. 1 ch. 13. 1.
l ch. 1. 16. Rom. 16. 5.
m Phil. 2. 29. 1 Thess. 5. 12. Heb. 13. 7.
n

---

that doctrine to enforce the duty of labouring stedfastly in the Lord, in deeds of piety and charity, in order to a blessed Immortality.

He now applies that Christian doctrine and duty to a particular work, in which he himself was then engaged, and in which he desired to engage the Corinthians—that of contributing alms and offerings to the poor Christians at Jerusalem.

The former chapter, which is read in the Office for the Burial of the Dead, closes with an exhortation to the living, to be fruitful in good works, while they have time; and in like manner the Psalm (Ps. xc.), said in the Burial Service, improves the solemn warnings of mortality into an occasion of prayer for grace to labour in good works,—"Prosper Thou the works of our hands upon us, O prosper Thou our handiwork."

After St. Paul had written his two Epistles to the Corinthians, he came through Macedonia to Corinth, whence he wrote to the Church of Rome on the same subject, when he was on the point of setting out to Jerusalem through Macedonia, and by Philippi and Troas, and so along the coast of Asia to Jerusalem (Acts xx. 4—xxi. 17) with the contribution. See Rom. xv. 25, where he says, "I am now going unto Jerusalem to minister unto the Saints; for it hath pleased them of Macedonia and Achaia to make a certain contribution for the poor Saints at Jerusalem."

On the occasion of that visit he was arrested by some of the Asiatic Jews in the Temple, and so eventually came to Rome. See Acts xxiv. 17, 18.

— ὥσπερ διέταξα—Γαλατίας] as I gave order to the Churches of Galatia. Probably in a recent visit to the Galatian Churches,—who had therefore now been retrieved from their disaffection to the Apostle. See above, Introduction to the Epistle to the Galatians, pp. 39—41.

2. σαββάτου] So A, B, C, D, E, F, G. Elz. has σαββάτων. For the use of the singular σάββατον, in the sense of week, see Mark xvi. 9. Luke xviii. 12.

As to the primitive observance of the First Day of the week, see on Acts xx. 7. Matt. xxviii. 1.

And on this text, as regarded in primitive times as an authority for the Weekly Offertory on the Lord's Day, see Joseph Mede's Works, p. 273. Cp. Justin Martyr, Apol. i. 88, where he says, "Each of those who are willing, gives according as he is minded, and offers what is contributed to the Minister; and he succours therewith the orphan and widow, and those who are sick and in prison, and strangers, and in a word, is the guardian of those who are in need."

3, 4. οὓς ἐὰν δοκιμάσητε] whom ye may have approved. St. Paul himself was desired by the Churches of Achaia and Macedonia to go with their alms to Jerusalem (see on v. 1). A practical proof of their confidence and affection; the more honourable to him and to the Corinthians, after the stern rebukes of his two Epistles to them.

— δι' ἐπιστολῶν] by your letters to the Church at Jerusalem. The Corinthians were to certify their own sanction of the parties sent with the alms, in order that those persons might not seem to have taken the office upon themselves, and in order that their mission might have proper credentials and due authority.

Some ancient Expositors connect δι' ἐπιστολῶν with πέμψω.

5. Μακεδονίαν γὰρ διέρχομαι] for I am now intending to pass through Macedonia. He had not yet left Ephesus, nor would do so before the ensuing Pentecost (v. 8).

As to the Chronology of this period, see the "Chronological Table," and the Introduction to this Epistle, p. 76.

7. οὐ θέλω] it is not my will. On St. Paul's desires and designs in regard to a visit to Corinth, see on 2 Cor. i. 15—23.

— γὰρ—ἐπιτρέψῃ] So the best MSS. Elz. has δὲ and ἐπιτρέπῃ.

8. Πεντηκοστῆς] Pentecost—mentioned as a Christian Festival by Tertullian, together with the Lord's Day (de Idol. c. 14).

9. ἀντικείμενοι πολλοί] many adversaries. Where the foes are thickest, and the fight hottest, thither the Apostle flies and plants the banner of the Cross.

11. μή τις οὖν αὐτὸν ἐξουθενήσῃ] let no man therefore despise him,—on account of his youth. Cp. 1 Tim. iv. 12, written some years after this. (Theodoret, Dr. Paley.)

— ἵνα ἔλθῃ πρός με· ἐκδέχομαι γὰρ αὐτόν] that he may come to me, for I am expecting him. Timothy had rejoined St. Paul when he wrote his second Epistle. (2 Cor. i. 1.)

— μετὰ τῶν ἀδελφῶν] with the brethren, probably those who had been sent from Corinth by the Corinthians with the letter of questions addressed to the Apostle (vii. 1), and who would be the bearers of this Epistle in reply.

12. Περὶ δὲ Ἀπολλώ] But concerning Apollos our brother. Do not imagine, therefore, from my language in this Epistle (i. 10. 12) concerning Apollos, that there is any rivalry between him and me: he is our brother.

17. Χαίρω ἐπὶ τῇ παρουσίᾳ Στεφανᾶ κ. Φ. κ. Ἀ.] I rejoice at the ὑστέρημα αὐτοὶ ἀνεπλήρωσαν· 18 ἀνέπαυσαν γὰρ τὸ ἐμὸν πνεῦμα καὶ τὸ ὑμῶν· ἐπιγινώσκετε οὖν τοὺς τοιούτους.

o Rom. 16. 5. 19 ο Ἀσπάζονται ὑμᾶς αἱ ἐκκλησίαι τῆς Ἀσίας· ἀσπάζονται ὑμᾶς ἐν Κυρίῳ p 2 Cor 13. 12. 1 Pet. 5. 14. πολλὰ Ἀκύλας καὶ Πρίσκιλλα, σὺν τῇ κατ' οἶκον αὐτῶν ἐκκλησίᾳ· 20 p ἀσπάζονται ὑμᾶς οἱ ἀδελφοὶ πάντες· ἀσπάσασθε ἀλλήλους ἐν φιλήματι ἁγίῳ.

q 2 Thess. 3. 17. r Eph. 6. 24. 21 q Ὁ ἀσπασμὸς τῇ ἐμῇ χειρὶ Παύλου. 22 r Εἴ τις οὐ φιλεῖ τὸν Κύριον Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν, ἤτω ἀνάθεμα· μαρὰν ἀθά.

s Rom. 16. 20. 23 s Ἡ χάρις τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ μεθ' ὑμῶν. 24 Ἡ ἀγάπη μου μετὰ πάντων ὑμῶν ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ· ἀμήν.

---

coming of Stephanas and Fortunatus and Achaïcus, who, it is probable, brought the letter of the Corinthians (vii. 1), and carried back this reply. (Theodoret.) The name of a Fortunatus occurs in the Epistle of S. Clement (c. 59) as one of the bearers of it to the Church of Corinth.

— ὑμέτερον] yours. So the best authorities. Elz. ὑμῶν. Cp. Phil. ii. 30.

— αὐτοί] So the best MSS., a reading preferable to that of Elz., οὗτοι. St. Paul means that Stephanas and the others, αὐτοὶ, 'ipsi,' i. e. in their own persons, of their own accord, and free-will, supplied what was lacking on the part of the Corinthian community.

Though St. Paul did not exact maintenance from the Corinthians, yet he did not excuse the Corinthians for not offering to supply it to him their spiritual father and Apostle. See on Acts xviii. 5, and cp. 2 Cor. xi. 8, 9, which is the best commentary on this passage, παρὼν πρὸς ὑμᾶς (i. e. at Corinth) καὶ ὑστερηθεὶς οὐ κατενάρκησα οὐδενός· τὸ γὰρ ὑστέρημά μου προσανεπλήρωσαν οἱ ἀδελφοὶ ἐλθόντες ἀπὸ Μακεδονίας.

This interpretation is confirmed by the character here given of Stephanas and his companions, that they gave themselves to acts of Christian beneficence, εἰς διακονίαν τοῖς ἁγίοις.

Some expositors interpret ὑστέρημα as absence; but this is a sense in which it is not used in N. T. And cp. Luke xxi. 4. 2 Cor. viii. 13, 14. Phil. ii. 30. 1 Thess. iii. 10.

18. ἀνέπαυσαν γὰρ τὸ ἐμὸν πνεῦμα καὶ τὸ ὑμῶν] for they refreshed my spirit, and yours. Observe the aorist here.

They were benevolent and charitable persons; they ministered to his needs; and supplied the deficiencies of others who fell short of their duty to him (cp. note on 1 Thess. ii. 9); and they did something more, they were his fellow-labourers in preaching the Gospel, συνεργοῦντες καὶ κοπιῶντες (see v. 16). Hence he might well say, they refreshed my spirit by acts of kindness, and they refreshed yours by spiritual comfort. Therefore he exhorts the Corinthians ἐπιγιγνώσκειν, to acknowledge and love them—a duty to be paid specially to Pastors. See 1 Thess. v. 12. On the meaning of ἀναπαύω, cp. Philem. 7. 20.

19. Ἀκύλας καὶ Πρίσκιλλα] Aquila and Priscilla. See on Acts xviii. 18. Rom. xvi. 3. 2 Tim. iv. 19.

— τῇ κατ' οἶκον αὐτῶν ἐκκλησίᾳ] the Church that is in their house. See Rom. xvi. 5. Col. iv. 15.

20. ἀσπάσασθε ἀλλήλους] Salute ye one another with a holy kiss.

The words ἀσπάσασθε ἀλλήλους were uttered by the Deacon in the Ancient Liturgies. See the Liturgy of St. Mark, p. 15 (ed. Neale), and note above, 1 Thess. v. 26, and below, 2 Cor. xiii. 12. Rom. xvi. 16.

21. Ὁ ἀσπασμὸς τῇ ἐμῇ χειρὶ Παύλου] The salutation by the hand of me Paul. Having dictated the former part of the Epistle to an amanuensis, he now takes the pen into his own hand, and concludes it. See above on 1 Thess. v. 28.

22. οὐ φιλεῖ τὸν Κύριον] doth not love the Lord. Observe the word φιλεῖ. Φιλῶ is rarely, if ever, applied to Almighty God in the New Testament; and yet the words οὐ φιλεῖ are not equivalent to μισεῖ. See 2 John 10, and Winer, § 55, p. 425. And φιλῶ here represents the love which Christians are permitted, and encouraged, and even required, to pay to Christ, who is Man as well as God. See John xxi. 15—17. Matt. x. 37.

And yet, lest any one should presume on this love, and pervert it into an occasion of familiarity and irreverence, the Apostle adds the solemn words Maran-atha.

There is something therefore remarkable in the word φιλεῖ, expressive as it is of tender affection, and to a Greek ear signifying to kiss (Luke xxii. 47, 48), and therefore so rarely and reverently used by the Evangelists in regard to the Divine Being, and yet introduced here in relation to Christ immediately after the exhortation to salute one another, as the primitive Christians did, especially at the Holy Eucharist (see v. 20, and 1 Thess. v. 26, and Rom. xvi. 6), with an ἅγιον φίλημα, a holy kiss. These words were full of meaning to the men and women of Corinth, and were fraught with warning against unholy acts. Shall I take the members of Christ, and make them the members of a harlot? (1 Cor. vi. 15.) Shall I pollute the lips which have been sanctified by the eucharistic reception of His most Blessed Body and Blood?

The words Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν are not in A, B, C*.

— ἤτω ἀνάθεμα· μαρὰν ἀθά] let him be Anathema: the Lord cometh. On the form ἤτω for ἔστω, see James v. 12. Winer, § 14, p. 73.

A pause is to be made after "Anathema." Let him be accursed (Acts xxiii. 14; Rom. ix. 3. Gal. i. 8, 9. 1 Cor. xii. 3): not, however, by man. For, the Lord, מָרָן (maran), אָתָה (atha), cometh to execute judgment on him. Cp. Jude 14, 15.

Perhaps the Apostle uses two Aramaic or Syro-Chaldaic words here, maran, atha, in this imprecation, and joins them to the Greek Anathema, in order to remind the Greeks that there were treasures of divine Knowledge in other languages, which they regarded as barbarous (cp. Chrys. here), and that Greek and Jew are accountable to Christ the Lord and Judge of all. Compare the notes on the combination of the words Ἀββᾶ, πατὴρ in Mark xiv. 36. Gal. iv. 6. Rom. viii. 15.

Perhaps also he does it with an allusion to the Hebrew form of Cherem, or Imprecation, uttered in the Name of God: and called Shem-atha, i. e. "the NAME," the ineffable Name (viz.) JEHOVAH, "cometh" to execute judgment (see Lightfoot); thus reminding his readers that our Lord Jesus Christ, Whom they are required φιλεῖν, to love as man, is no other than God, in whose Name Blessings and Curses are pronounced, and that He will come hereafter to execute Judgment on all Nations and Tongues.

ἀμήν] Amen: omitted by B, F, G, but it is in A, C, D, E, I, K; and it is also in ℵ.

Subscription to the Epistle.

In the Gothic Version of Ulphilas, it is rightly noted that although some persons say that this Epistle was written from Philippi in Macedonia, yet, according to the Apostle's own intimation, it was rather written from Asia.

INTRODUCTION

TO THE

SECOND EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

On the Date of Time and Place of the SECOND EPISTLE to the CORINTHIANS.

THE Second Epistle to the Corinthians was written soon after the First Epistle. This appears from the language in chapter ii. 13, where St. Paul describes his disappointment at not finding Titus, whom he expected from Corinth, to report what impression had been made on the Corinthians by the First Epistle; and also from chapter vii. 6—13, where he describes the joy he felt at the coming of Titus to him in Macedonia, with a good report of the salutary effect produced at Corinth by that Epistle.

The First Epistle was written at Ephesus in the Spring of A.D. 57. See above, Introduction to that Epistle, p. 76.

St. Paul had announced in that Epistle his intention to winter at Corinth (1 Cor. xvi. 6). It appears from Acts xix. 21, 22, that St. Paul, when at Ephesus, where he wrote his First Epistle to the Corinthians, "purposed in his spirit to pass through Macedonia and Achaia, and thence to go to Jerusalem," with the alms which he had collected for the poor Christians at Jerusalem.

It appears also, from Acts xix. 22, that he sent Timothy and Erastus from Ephesus into Macedonia.

He himself remained some time longer at Ephesus, and there wrote his First Epistle to the Corinthians, in which he announces to them that he had sent Timothy to them (1 Cor. iv. 17; xvi. 10).

Then arose the tumult excited by Demetrius the silversmith (Acts xix. 24—41). After which St. Paul having passed three years at Ephesus (Acts xx. 31), and having been exposed to great peril there (1 Cor. xv. 32; xvi. 8), and having suffered severe afflictions in that city (2 Cor. i. 8) quitted Asia; and came by Troas (2 Cor. ii. 13) into Macedonia, and passed through those regions (Acts xx. 2), and preached the Gospel in a westerly direction, as far as Illyricum (see note on Acts xx. 2. Rom. xv. 19).

Soon afterwards he came to Corinth, and spent there three months; and thence returned by Macedonia and Troas, and came by Miletus to Cæsarea and Jerusalem, where he arrived at the Pentecost of A.D. 58. (See Acts xx. 1—5; xxi. 17.)

The Second Epistle to the Corinthians was written soon after the First Epistle, and it was written before this latter visit to Corinth.

For, it is evident (from 2 Cor. i. 23; ii. 1) that he had not been at Corinth after the date of the former Epistle, and that he was in Macedonia when he wrote this Second Epistle, and was intending shortly to come to Corinth. (See 2 Cor. ix. 1—4.)

From these facts it may be concluded that the Second Epistle to the Corinthians was written by St. Paul late in the summer or in the autumn of A.D. 57, when he was in Macedonia.

Hence he reports, in this Second Epistle to the Corinthians, what the Churches of Macedonia had done and were doing towards the collection of alms which he was about to carry to Jerusalem (2 Cor. viii. 1—6; ix. 2), and to which the Corinthians had already contributed (2 Cor. ix. 2). And he announces to them as probable that some Christians of Macedonia will come with him to Corinth (2 Cor. ix. 4); which proved to be the case, as we find in the Acts of the Apostles (xx. 4)

These Macedonians who accompanied St. Paul to Corinth were Aristarchus and Secundus, of Thessalonica (Acts xx. 4). Perhaps the Epistle was written from that city, or from Philippi.

In order to understand the design and tenour of this Epistle, which is of an apologetic character[1], it is requisite to bear in mind the circumstances in which St. Paul was placed when he wrote it.

He had been at Ephesus and in its neighbourhood during the preceding three years (Acts xx. 31). There he had displayed his Apostolic power in working miracles (Acts xix. 11, 12), and had been favoured with signal success in preaching the Word of God (Acts xix. 10. 17). And yet, notwithstanding all this, Almighty God had allowed the enemies of the Gospel to persecute and afflict him; he had been exposed to the severest trials, and was in great tribulation and distress; he had fought with beasts at Ephesus (1 Cor. xv. 32. Cp. Rom. xvi. 4), and eventually he had quitted that city, after a tumult, in which he had hardly escaped with life (Acts xix. 31; xx. 1. 2 Cor. i. 8).

Hence his adversaries and rivals, of whom he had many at Corinth, had an occasion for malignant cavils and disdainful insinuations against him.

If the Gospel which he preached was true, if he himself was, as he claimed to be, a chosen vessel of God, an authorized Ambassador from heaven, how was it, that after three years' labour in Asia, the fruits of his ministry seemed to be blighted and withered? how was it that his opponents were enabled to thwart and almost frustrate his work, and to rise up against him in furious rage at Ephesus?

The faith of the Corinthians was severely tried by such allegations as these; and the Apostle was constrained to explain to them the purposes of God's dealings with himself.

He takes occasion, in the following Epistle, to declare to them the reasons for which a Christian man and an Apostle is permitted by God to be visited with severe sufferings.

He shows that those sufferings are designed to be a moral discipline of faith and trust in God, and to save His saints and ministers from the peril of pride; and to teach them that all their strength is from Him alone, and to show to their flocks that the success of the Gospel, which they have received, is not due to men, but to God; and to prove God's power and love by overruling their trials and afflictions into occasions and instruments for the greater manifestation of His glory, and for the everlasting salvation of His servants, and to make them to be like Christ Himself in suffering, and also in victory.

This Epistle, therefore, has a special value and interest of an ethical kind, for all ages of God's Church, in justifying the moral dispensations of His Providence, especially in the afflictions and sufferings of His servants.

Had St. Paul been more than once at Corinth when he wrote this Epistle?

This question has been answered in the affirmative by some recent learned Expositors, who suppose that he had crossed over from Ephesus to Corinth in the interval of the three years mentioned Acts xx. 31. The arguments in behalf of this opinion are derived from 2 Cor. ii. 1, ἔκρινα μὴ πάλιν ἐν λύπῃ ἐλθεῖν πρὸς ὑμᾶς, and from 2 Cor. xiii. 1; and will be examined in the notes on these passages.

[1] See above, Introduction to the Two Epistles to the Corinthians, p. 75, especially as to the statement, in this Epistle, of St. Paul claims to reverence and obedience.

ΠΡΟΣ ΚΟΡΙΝΘΙΟΥΣ Β΄.

I. [1] [a] ΠΑΥΛΟΣ ἀπόστολος Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ διὰ θελήματος Θεοῦ, καὶ [b] Τιμόθεος ὁ ἀδελφὸς, τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ τοῦ Θεοῦ τῇ οὔσῃ ἐν Κορίνθῳ, σὺν τοῖς ἁγίοις πᾶσι τοῖς οὖσιν ἐν ὅλῃ τῇ Ἀχαΐᾳ· [2] [c] χάρις ὑμῖν καὶ εἰρήνη ἀπὸ Πατρὸς ἡμῶν καὶ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.

[3] [d] Εὐλογητὸς ὁ Θεὸς καὶ Πατὴρ τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, ὁ Πατὴρ τῶν οἰκτιρμῶν, καὶ Θεὸς πάσης παρακλήσεως, [4] [e] ὁ παρακαλῶν ἡμᾶς ἐπὶ πάσῃ τῇ θλίψει ἡμῶν, εἰς τὸ δύνασθαι ἡμᾶς παρακαλεῖν τοὺς ἐν πάσῃ θλίψει διὰ τῆς παρακλήσεως ἧς παρακαλούμεθα αὐτοὶ ὑπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ· [5] [f] ὅτι καθὼς περισσεύει τὰ παθήματα τοῦ Χριστοῦ εἰς ἡμᾶς, οὕτω διὰ τοῦ Χριστοῦ περισσεύει καὶ ἡ παράκλησις ἡμῶν. [6] [g] Εἴτε δὲ θλιβόμεθα, ὑπὲρ τῆς ὑμῶν παρακλήσεως καὶ σωτηρίας, τῆς ἐνεργουμένης ἐν ὑπομονῇ τῶν αὐτῶν παθημάτων ὧν καὶ ἡμεῖς πάσχομεν, καὶ ἡ ἐλπὶς ἡμῶν βεβαία ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν· εἴτε παρακαλούμεθα, ὑπὲρ τῆς ὑμῶν παρακλήσεως καὶ σωτηρίας, [7] [h] εἰδότες ὅτι ὡς κοινωνοί ἐστε τῶν παθημάτων, οὕτω καὶ τῆς παρακλήσεως.

a Phil. 1. 1. Rom. 16. 21. 1 Cor. 16. 10.
b Acts 16. 1.
c Rom. 1. 7. 1 Cor. 1. 3. Gal. 3. 16. Eph. 1. 2. & 16. 23. Phil. 1. 2. Col. 1. 2. 1 Pet. 1. 2. d Eph. 1. 3. 1 Pet. 1. 3.
e ch. 7. 6, 7. Isa. 12. 1. & 49. 10. & 51. 3, 12. & 52. 9. & 66. 12, 13.
f ch. 4. 8—12. Col. 1. 24.
g ch. 4. 15, 18. 2 Tim. 2. 10.
h Rom. 8. 17. 2 Tim. 2. 11.

Πρὸς Κορινθίους Β΄.] So A, B, and several Cursive MSS.

Ch. I. 1. Τιμόθεος ὁ ἀδελφός] Timothy our brother, who had been with St. Paul on his first visit to Corinth (Acts xviii. 5. 2 Cor. i. 19), and had been sent from Ephesus to Corinth (1 Cor. iv. 17; cp. xvi. 10), whence he had now returned to St. Paul.

How was it, then, that Timothy had not brought back a report to St. Paul of the impression made at Corinth by his first Epistle? Or if he had brought back a report, how is it that St. Paul does not refer to him, but only to Titus, as his intelligencer in this respect? 2 Cor. vii. 6—13.

The reason seems to be, that Timothy rejoined St. Paul in Macedonia soon after Titus had come to him, or they may have come back together; and he does not refer to Timothy for this report, but associates Timothy with himself in writing the Epistle; and thus the report is virtually adopted by Timothy. And the Corinthians in reading this Epistle, to which Timothy's name is prefixed, would understand that he had concurred with Titus in the favourable representation there given of the manner in which the former Epistle of St. Paul had been received by them.

Silas and Timotheus are represented in the Acts of the Apostles as St. Paul's associates at Corinth. (Acts xviii. 5.) In harmony with this statement, we find Silas and Timotheus mentioned as his fellow-labourers there in this chapter (v. 19), and here he associates Timothy's name with his own in the address of this Epistle.

— τῇ οὔσῃ ἐν Κορίνθῳ] that exists at Corinth. See above, on 1 Cor. i. 2.

— ἐν ὅλῃ τῇ Ἀχαΐᾳ] in all Achaia. See 1 Cor. i. 2.

3. ὁ Πατὴρ τῶν οἰκτιρμῶν] the Father of mercies; the most merciful Father (Theophyl.), according to the Hebrew idiom, in which the genitive case expresses the quality, and the plural number indicates abundance. See on Luke xvi. 8, 9, and Vorst. de Hebr. N. T., p. 248. And the definite article of the Greek language denotes the special mercy, which exceeds all other mercy. Οἰκτιρμὸς = Hebr. רַחַם (rechem); literally σπλάγχνα, the bowels, hence pity and love; and is used in this sense in the plural in numerous places by the LXX; e. g. Isa. lxiii. 15. Dan. ix. 9.

5. τὰ παθήματα τοῦ Χριστοῦ] the afflictions which Christ endures in His members, who suffer for Him. See on Acts ix. 4, and Col. i. 24. Phil. iii. 10. Heb. iv. 15. Chrys., Theoph., Œcum.; and so Winer, p. 170.

It is indeed alleged by some interpreters here, that this exposition is inconsistent with the doctrine of Christ's exaltation. But this is erroneous. See Heb. vi. 6, where men are said to crucify afresh the Son of God. All things are not yet put under His feet. (1 Cor. xv. 25.) He has enemies who rebel against Him, even though He is seated in glory at God's right hand. (Ps. ii. 9—12.) And so intimate is His union with His members, by reason of His Incarnation, and their baptismal Incorporation into Him, that whatever may be predicated of His members in the way of suffering, may, by virtue of that mystical union, be said of Him, even though He is exalted to the Right Hand of God.

Still it must be remembered (by way of caution against the Romish doctrine, which makes the sufferings of the Saints to be meritorious, and associates them in this respect with the sufferings of Christ), that Christ our Head made a plenary satisfaction on the Cross for the sins of the whole world, and He no longer suffers as our Head, but He suffers in His members. But their sufferings are not propitiatory, as His own proper sufferings were. See on Col. i. 24.

6. Εἴτε δὲ θλιβόμεθα—ἐλπὶς ἡμῶν βεβαία ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν] If we are afflicted, it is for your sake. We might escape afflictions, if we did not preach the Gospel; but we preach it, in order that you may be saved; and in preaching it we endure affliction for your sake, and this salvation which we preach operates in you in the patience which it produces in you, who bear similar afflictions for the Gospel which you receive. Theophyl.

The reading in the text is that of the greatest number of uncial and cursive MSS. and best Editions.—Elz. has καὶ ἡ ἐλπὶς —ὑμῶν after σωτηρίας.

i Acts 19. 23, &c. 1 Cor. 15. 32. & 16. 9.

8 i Οὐ γὰρ θέλομεν ὑμᾶς ἀγνοεῖν, ἀδελφοί, ὑπὲρ τῆς θλίψεως ἡμῶν τῆς γενομένης ἐν τῇ Ἀσίᾳ, ὅτι καθ' ὑπερβολὴν ἐβαρήθημεν ὑπὲρ δύναμιν, ὥστε ἐξαπορηθῆναι ἡμᾶς καὶ τοῦ ζῆν· 9 j ἀλλὰ αὐτοὶ ἐν ἑαυτοῖς τὸ ἀπόκριμα τοῦ θανάτου ἐσχήκαμεν, ἵνα μὴ πεποιθότες ὦμεν ἐφ' ἑαυτοῖς, ἀλλ' k ἐπὶ τῷ Θεῷ τῷ ἐγείροντι τοὺς νεκρούς, 10 l ὃς ἐκ τηλικούτου θανάτου ἐρρύσατο ἡμᾶς, καὶ ῥύεται, εἰς ὃν ἠλπίκαμεν ὅτι καὶ ἔτι ῥύσεται, 11 m συνυπουργούντων καὶ ὑμῶν ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν τῇ δεήσει, ἵνα ἐκ πολλῶν προσώπων τὸ εἰς ἡμᾶς χάρισμα διὰ πολλῶν εὐχαριστηθῇ ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν.

j Jer. 17. 5—7. Ezek. 33. 13. Luke 18. 9. k ch. 4. 13, 14. Ezek. 37. 1—14. Rom. 4. 17—25. Heb. 11. 19.
l 2 Pet. 2. 9.
m Rom. 15. 30—32. Phil. 1. 19. Col. 4. 3. 1 Thess. 5. 25.

12 n Ἡ γὰρ καύχησις ἡμῶν αὕτη ἐστί, τὸ μαρτύριον τῆς συνειδήσεως ἡμῶν, ὅτι ἐν ἁπλότητι καὶ εἰλικρινείᾳ τοῦ Θεοῦ, οὐκ ἐν σοφίᾳ σαρκικῇ, ἀλλ' ἐν χάριτι Θεοῦ, ἀνεστράφημεν ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ, περισσοτέρως δὲ πρὸς ὑμᾶς. 13 Οὐ γὰρ ἄλλα γράφομεν ὑμῖν ἀλλὰ ἢ ἃ ἀναγινώσκετε, ἢ καὶ ἐπιγινώσκετε· ἐλπίζω δὲ ὅτι καὶ ἕως τέλους ἐπιγνώσεσθε, 14 o καθὼς καὶ ἐπέγνωτε ἡμᾶς ἀπὸ μέρους, ὅτι καύχημα ὑμῶν ἐσμεν, καθάπερ καὶ ὑμεῖς ἡμῶν, ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ.

n ch. 4. 15. 1 Cor. 2. 4, 13. ch. 4. 2.
o ch. 5. 12. Phil. 2. 16. & 4. 1. 1 Thess. 2. 19, 20.

15 p Καὶ ταύτῃ τῇ πεποιθήσει ἐβουλόμην πρότερον ἐλθεῖν πρὸς ὑμᾶς, ἵνα δευτέραν χάριν ἔχητε, 16 q καὶ δι' ὑμῶν διελθεῖν εἰς Μακεδονίαν, καὶ πάλιν ἀπὸ Μακεδονίας ἐλθεῖν πρὸς ὑμᾶς, καὶ ὑφ' ὑμῶν προπεμφθῆναι εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν.

p Rom. 1. 11. 1 Cor. 16. 5.
q 1 Cor. 16. 6.

17 r Τοῦτο οὖν βουλόμενος μήτι ἄρα τῇ ἐλαφρίᾳ ἐχρησάμην; ἢ ἃ βουλεύομαι, κατὰ σάρκα βουλεύομαι, ἵνα ᾖ παρ' ἐμοὶ τὸ ναὶ ναί, καὶ τὸ οὒ οὔ;

r 1 Cor. 16. 5—7.

---

8. Οὐ γὰρ θέλομεν ὑμᾶς ἀγνοεῖν] For we would not, brethren, have you ignorant of—do not therefore imagine that we are ashamed of—our tribulation, which came to us in Asia (especially at Ephesus. Acts xix. 31. Cp. 1 Cor. xv. 32. Rom. xvi. 4), that we were oppressed exceedingly above our own strength, insomuch that we despaired even of life, yea, for we have had the sentence of death in ourselves (i. e., as far as our own strength, and our own means of preservation were concerned, we were utterly lost, and no better than dead, and our escape was due to God alone), in order that we should not rely on ourselves, but should put our trust in God, who raiseth the dead.

Here is the key-note of this Epistle. It must be read with a careful remembrance of St. Paul's condition when he wrote it.

He had been exposed to great peril at Ephesus, and had been tried by severe sufferings. And his enemies at Corinth and elsewhere may have taken occasion to misinterpret these sufferings, and seeming failures, into evidences that he was not accredited by God: and thus the Corinthians might be staggered and perplexed, and lose their confidence in his preaching.

He therefore explains the reasons of his sufferings. See above, Introduction, p. 146.

— ὑπέρ] concerning. As Latin super, Hebr. עַל. See 2 Thess. ii. 1, ὑπὲρ τῆς παρουσίας: below, viii. 23, ὑπὲρ Τίτου. Winer, § 47, p. 342. Some MSS. have περὶ here, but this is probably a correction of the copyists.

— ἐν τῇ Ἀσίᾳ] in Asia. See Rom xvi. 3, where he speaks of Aquila and Priscilla—who were at Ephesus when he wrote his First Epistle to the Corinthians (1 Cor. xvi. 19)—as having laid down their necks for his own life.

Whether the peril to which he here refers was consequent on the popular tumult excited by Demetrius against him (Acts xix. 26), as Theodoret and others suppose, is not certain. Tertullian (de Resur. Carnis, c. 28) connects this passage with 1 Cor. xv. 32, "I fought with beasts at Ephesus."

9. ἀλλὰ—τὸ ἀπόκριμα τοῦ θανάτου] but (ἀλλά), more than this, we not only were in an ἀπορία, or extremity, without means of life, but we had also in ourselves the sentence of death; ἀπόκριμα = ψῆφον. Theodoret, Chrys. When we asked ourselves the question, whether we had any hope of life in ourselves, we ourselves pronounced ourselves to be lost. But God saved us.

Ἀπόκριμα differs from Ἀπόκρισις. Ἀπόκριμα is that which is the substance of the ἀπόκρισις.

— ἐσχήκαμεν] we have had; a stronger word than ἔσχομεν, as showing duration of suffering, and intimating that its moral effect would be more permanent. We have had this trial and distress, and have it still, in order that we may feel our own weakness and dependence, and may rely wholly on God. See below, vii. 5.

In order to understand fully the force of the perfect tense as used here (cp. above, 1 Cor. xv. 4; below, v. 17), it must be remembered, that wherever St. Paul was, he was exposed to plots and persecutions from the Jews. Cp. Acts xx. 3; below, iv. 9.

— ἵνα] in order that. He thus marks the providential reason for which he was permitted by God to give himself up as lost. See 1 Cor. i. 15. 2 Cor. iv. 7, and below on Rom. iii. 4.

11. συνυπουργούντων—ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν] You also succouring us by your prayers, in order that the free gift (of God) to us, evoked by many persons, may be acknowledged on our behalf by means of many; and so God may be more glorified by public praise for His goodness to me. A precept that we should not only pray God for blessings on others, but also praise Him for them. Theoph.

12. καύχησις] glorying (not καύχημα, or subject-matter of glorying). Our glorying is nothing more than the witness of our conscience, that we have not preached to you with the wisdom of the world, but with the simplicity and sincerity of God. The genitive Θεοῦ indicates the author and source from which it comes. See 1 Cor. iii. 9. Col. ii. 19, αὔξησις τοῦ Θεοῦ.

— ἁπλότητι] simplicity. A, B, C, K have ἁγιότητι, which is perhaps due to want of right apprehension of the meaning of ἁπλότης Θεοῦ. Compare 2 Cor. xi. 3. Eph. vi. 5, for this use of ἁπλότης, which is in more direct opposition to σοφία σαρκικὴ than ἁγιότης, and is confirmed by the authority of D, E, F, G, J, and Vulg., Syriac, and Arabic Versions, Chrys., and Theodoret.

13. Οὐ γάρ] For we have practised no disguise or reserve in our preaching. Cp. Acts xx. 27. We are not like the philosophers of your ethical Schools, who make a difference between their exoteric and esoteric teaching. We preach one and the same Gospel to all. We have no secret correspondence with any; we write nothing to you that you do not read publicly in the Church, or that you do not openly acknowledge in your public professions of faith.

14. ἀπὸ μέρους] in part. See below, ii. 5. Rom. xi. 25. Winer, p. 376. I say 'in part;' for although you have complied generally with my commands, yet some of you have not recognized my Apostolic authority, and you have not altogether rejected those who impugn it. Theodoret.

— καύχημα] subject-matter of boasting. 1 Cor. v. 6; ix. 15. 2 Cor. v. 12; ix. 3. Gal. vi. 4. Phil. i. 26; ii. 16.

15. ἐβουλόμην] I was desirous. He does not say that it was his settled purpose, βούλευμα, nor yet his θέλημα, or will, to do so. See on v. 17, and above, Matt. i. 19, Ἰωσὴφ . . . μὴ θέλων αὐτὴν παραδειγματίσαι ἐβουλήθη λάθρα ἀπολῦσαι αὐτήν, and below, Philem. 13, where ἐβουλόμην in like manner signifies a wish, which is controlled and overruled by the will (θέλησις); and see note above, 1 Thess. ii. 18.

He does not say, I wrote to you, saying that I was resolved to pass through you to Macedonia, but only I was wishing (imperfect) to do so.

— ἵνα δευτέραν χάριν ἔχητε] that you may have a second benefit, by a second visit from me. See below on xiii. 1.

17. βουλόμενος] wishing. So A, B, C, F, G.—Elz. βουλευόμενος. But St. Paul does not say that he purposed, ἐβουλεύσατο, after mature deliberation and counsel to come; but that only he had a wish to come.

18 [s] Πιστὸς δὲ ὁ Θεὸς, ὅτι ὁ λόγος ἡμῶν ὁ πρὸς ὑμᾶς οὐκ ἐστὶν ναὶ καὶ οὔ· 19 ὁ τοῦ Θεοῦ γὰρ υἱὸς Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς, ὁ ἐν ὑμῖν δι' ἡμῶν κηρυχθεὶς, δι' ἐμοῦ καὶ Σιλουανοῦ καὶ Τιμοθέου, [t] οὐκ ἐγένετο ναὶ καὶ οὔ, ἀλλὰ ναὶ ἐν αὐτῷ γέγονεν· 20 ὅσαι γὰρ ἐπαγγελίαι Θεοῦ, ἐν αὐτῷ τὸ ναὶ, διὸ καὶ δι' αὐτοῦ τὸ ἀμὴν τῷ Θεῷ πρὸς δόξαν δι' ἡμῶν. 21 [u] Ὁ δὲ βεβαιῶν ἡμᾶς σὺν ὑμῖν εἰς Χριστὸν καὶ χρίσας ἡμᾶς, Θεὸς, 22 [v] ὁ καὶ σφραγισάμενος ἡμᾶς, καὶ δοὺς τὸν ἀρραβῶνα τοῦ Πνεύματος ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις ἡμῶν.

23 [x] Ἐγὼ δὲ μάρτυρα τὸν Θεὸν ἐπικαλοῦμαι ἐπὶ τὴν ἐμὴν ψυχὴν, ὅτι φειδόμενος ὑμῶν οὐκέτι ἦλθον εἰς Κόρινθον· 24 [y] οὐχ ὅτι κυριεύομεν ὑμῶν τῆς πίστεως, ἀλλὰ συνεργοί ἐσμεν τῆς χαρᾶς ὑμῶν· τῇ γὰρ πίστει ἑστήκατε.

II. 1 [a] Ἔκρινα δὲ ἐμαυτῷ τοῦτο τὸ μὴ πάλιν ἐν λύπῃ πρὸς ὑμᾶς ἐλθεῖν.

s Acts 9. 20.
t Exod. 3. 14. Matt. 24. 35. John 8. 58. Heb. 1. 11, 12. & 13. 8. Rev. 1. 8, 11, 17.
u ch. 5. 5. 1 John 2. 20, 27.
v Eph. 1. 13, 14. & 4. 30.
x Rom. 1. 9. 1 Cor. 4. 21. ch. 13. 2, 10.
y 1 Cor. 3. 5. & 15. 1. 1 Pet. 5. 3. Rom. 11. 20.
a ch. 7. 5—8. & 12. 21. & 13. 10. 1 Cor. 4. 21.

In fact, there is a contrast here between βούλομαι and βουλεύομαι: and he defends himself from the charge of levity, by asserting that his wishes were controlled by his will, which was regulated by right reason and by the will of God; so that his βουλήματα were duly subject to his βουλεύματα. Cp. ii. 1, where his resolve is expressed by ἔκρινα κ.τ.λ.

— ἆρα τῇ ἐλαφρίᾳ] did I therefore at all act with the fickleness and lightness (κουφότητι, Hesych.) which my adversaries at Corinth impute to me, as veering from one purpose to another, altering my plans merely from caprice or fear?

The ἆρα, consequently, shows that this was the inference which St. Paul's enemies had drawn from his conduct; and he rejects that inference as false.

— ἢ ἃ βουλεύομαι] He answers here a second and very different imputation, and says: or, as to those things which I purpose (i. e. resolve, βουλεύομαι distinguished from βούλομαι, I desire), do I purpose them with carnal wilfulness, in order that with me (and not with God) the yea should be yea, and the nay should be nay; that is, so that my determinations to do or not to do a thing, should be decided by my own fleshly will, irrespectively of God's guidance, and the directions of the Holy Spirit?

Do I so determine matters, that (whatever may be the providential order of circumstances subsequent to my determination) I will make my own will to be of more account than the will of God? Am I so obstinately fixed in my own purposes, or so vainly enamoured of my own resolves, as, in a headstrong spirit, to arrogate to myself the determination of my own conduct, and the shaping of my own plans, without any regard to the divine disposition of events? Do I say, "Sic volo, sic jubeo; stet pro ratione voluntas?"

No: God forbid! I not only submit my own wishes to my reason, and frame my resolves accordingly; but I subject my resolves also to God's good pleasure, as intimated to me by the illuminations of His Holy Spirit. Cp. Chrys., Theophyl., who rightly point to Acts xvi. 6, 7, for evidence that St. Paul's wishes were controlled by the Holy Ghost.

Thus the Apostle in these two verses disposes of two objections;

The first, charging him with capricious fickleness in his wishes;

The second, imputing to him arbitrary imperiousness of will.

St. Paul's uniform resolve was, to conform his own will to God's will, and to make his actions subservient to God's glory and the salvation of others. And in this resolve he never wavered. As Theodoret well explains the passage, St. Paul's conduct is exemplary, in that he neither wavered in his mind, nor yet was resolved to follow his own choice, at any rate. See above on 1 Thess. ii. 18.

18. Πιστὸς δὲ ὁ Θεός] But God is to be believed that, &c. If you do not believe me, believe Him, Whose Son is preached by me, and Who has accredited my Word, and has given us His Spirit. See vv. 19—23.

— ἐστίν] So the best authorities.—Elz. ἐγένετο.

19. ναὶ ἐν αὐτῷ γέγονεν] Observe the perfect γέγονεν. It hath become yea, and remains yea in Him. There may be changes in the ordering of my own purposes to preach the Gospel; for my purposes are human. But there is no variableness in the Gospel, which is the subject of our preaching; for that is divine. It is fixed for ever in Christ, the Rock of Ages. It is not sometimes "yea and sometimes nay;" but it is an eternal Yea, and an everlasting Amen, in Him.

On this sense of the perfect tense, see on 1 Cor. xv. 4; 2 Cor. v. 17. Col. i. 16. 1 John iii. 9.

He thus obviates another objection, viz. that his own avowal of a modification in his purposes of preaching implied also a possibility of change in the substance of what he preached. (Theophyl., Œcumen.)

20. διὸ καὶ δι' αὐτοῦ] So A, B, C, F, G. Elz. καὶ ἐν αὐτῷ. The sense is, How many and great soever are the promises of God, their Yea (i. e. their confirmation of them) is in Him, i. e. in Christ; wherefore through Him is the Amen (or verification of them) for God's glory, through the instrumentality of us His Ministers, and through our Ministry. Therefore, since we are the appointed Ministers of God's Truth to men, you may be sure that the promises made by us, who have been sent by Christ, and are guided and strengthened by Him, Who is the Word and Truth of God, are not fickle or illusory.

22. ἀρραβῶνα] from Heb. עֵרָבוֹן, Gen. xxxviii. 17, 18. 20, where LXX have ἀῤῥαβών. It is cited from Menander by Etymol. M. See authorities in Wetstein. The root is Heb. עָרַב (arabh), to give in pledge. Hence the Latin arrha and the modern word arrhes, an earnest, something given as a πρόδομα (Hesych.), as present and part payment, and as a pledge for future and full payment, or for the performance of a covenant. Cp. Eph. i. 14, where the gift of the Holy Spirit is called the arrhabon, or present earnest of the future heavenly inheritance.

If the part of the payment has been given us by God, He will not fail to give the whole. Εἰ τὸν ἀῤῥαβῶνα ἔδωκεν ἡμῶν ὁ Θεὸς, καὶ τὸ πᾶν δώσει πάντως. Theophyl.

23. τὸν Θεὸν ἐπικαλοῦμαι] I call God to witness. A solemn adjuration. "Jurat Apostolus" (Bengel). See Bp. Sanderson, as referred to in the note on 1 Cor. xv. 31.

In two places in this Epistle St. Paul calls God to witness; here, and xi. 31. And with good reason. For in both places he is speaking of what God only knew, viz., the inner workings of his own heart.

24. οὐχ ὅτι] not that. These words depend on φειδόμενος, sparing you, I say; not thereby implying that I am lord of your faith, but am a helper of your joy. (2 Cor. iv. 5.)

— τῇ γὰρ πίστει ἑστήκατε] for by Faith ye stand. By it ye hold fast to Christ, your only foundation (1 Cor. iii. 11). Do not think then that I tamper with that, because I make changes in my plans of preaching to you. See v. 19.

CH. II. 1. Ἔκρινα δέ] But I determined. The δὲ connects this sentence with ἐβουλόμην, i. 15. I was wishing (imperfect) to come by a direct course to you from Ephesus, and to pass by you to Macedonia; but, knowing in what an unhappy state you were, and not knowing what effect my Epistle would produce upon you, I ἔκρινα, resolved (aorist) not to come to you again while I was in grief on your account. Therefore, as I said before, it was because I would spare you (i. 23) that I came not as yet (οὐκέτι ἦλθον) to you.

He was wishing to come to them, but was restrained from coming to them by considerations of love towards them (Chrys.), and by the guidance of the Holy Spirit. See i. 17.

St. Paul had announced to the Corinthians this resolve in his former Epistle. (See 1 Cor. xvi. 5.) I will come to you when I have passed through Macedonia, for I am now going to pass through Macedonia.

But he had not disclosed to the Corinthians the inner workings of his own mind and heart (see here i. 23), which led him to frame this resolve.

— πάλιν ἐν λύπῃ πρὸς ὑμᾶς ἐλθεῖν] So A, B, C. And some MSS. (D, E, F, G) have ἐν λύπῃ ἐλθεῖν πρὸς ὑμᾶς. Elz. has ἐλθεῖν ἐν λύπῃ πρὸς ὑμᾶς.

The words πάλιν ἐν λύπῃ ἐλθεῖν do not mean (as has been alleged) that he had already come once to them in sorrow, and

2 Εἰ γὰρ ἐγὼ λυπῶ ὑμᾶς, καὶ τίς ὁ εὐφραίνων με, εἰ μὴ ὁ λυπούμενος ἐξ ἐμοῦ;
h ver. 12. Gal. 5. 10. Philem. 21. c ch. 7. 8, 9.
3 [b] Καὶ ἔγραψα τοῦτο αὐτό, ἵνα μὴ ἐλθὼν λύπην ἔχω ἀφ' ὧν ἔδει με χαίρειν, πεποιθὼς ἐπὶ πάντας ὑμᾶς, ὅτι ἡ ἐμὴ χαρὰ πάντων ὑμῶν ἐστιν. 4 [c] ἐκ γὰρ πολλῆς θλίψεως καὶ συνοχῆς καρδίας ἔγραψα ὑμῖν διὰ πολλῶν δακρύων, οὐχ ἵνα λυπηθῆτε, ἀλλὰ τὴν ἀγάπην ἵνα γνῶτε ἣν ἔχω περισσοτέρως εἰς ὑμᾶς.
d 1 Cor. 5. 1—5, 12, 13. e 1 Cor. 5. 4, 5.
5 [d] Εἰ δέ τις λελύπηκεν, οὐκ ἐμὲ λελύπηκεν ἀλλὰ ἀπὸ μέρους, ἵνα μὴ ἐπιβαρῶ πάντας ὑμᾶς. 6 [e] Ἱκανὸν τῷ τοιούτῳ ἡ ἐπιτιμία αὕτη ἡ ὑπὸ τῶν πλειόνων· 7 [f] ὥστε τοὐναντίον μᾶλλον ὑμᾶς χαρίσασθαι καὶ παρακαλέσαι, μήπως τῇ περισσοτέρᾳ λύπῃ καταποθῇ ὁ τοιοῦτος.
f Gal. 6. 1, 2. & 6 1, 2. 10 Jude 22, 23.
g ch. 7. 12—15. & 8. 24.
8 Διὸ παρακαλῶ ὑμᾶς κυρῶσαι εἰς αὐτὸν ἀγάπην· 9 [g] εἰς τοῦτο γὰρ καὶ ἔγραψα, ἵνα γνῶ τὴν δοκιμὴν ὑμῶν, εἰ εἰς πάντα ὑπήκοοί ἐστε. 10 [h] Ὧι δέ τι χαρίζεσθε, κἀγώ· καὶ γὰρ ἐγὼ ὃ κεχάρισμαι, εἴ τι κεχάρισμαι, δι' ὑμᾶς, ἐν προσώπῳ Χριστοῦ, 11 [h] ἵνα μὴ πλεονεκτηθῶμεν ὑπὸ τοῦ Σατανᾶ· οὐ γὰρ αὐτοῦ τὰ νοήματα ἀγνοοῦμεν.
h Luke 22. 31. 1 Pet. 5. 8.
i Acts 16. 8. 1 Cor. 16. 9.
12 [i] Ἐλθὼν δὲ εἰς τὴν Τρωάδα εἰς τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τοῦ Χριστοῦ, καὶ θύρας μοι ἀνεῳγμένης ἐν Κυρίῳ, οὐκ ἔσχηκα ἄνεσιν τῷ πνεύματί μου, τῷ μὴ εὑρεῖν με Τίτον τὸν ἀδελφόν μου· 13 [k] ἀλλὰ ἀποταξάμενος αὐτοῖς ἐξῆλθον εἰς Μακεδονίαν.
k ch. 7. 5, 6. l Rom. 8. 37. Cant. 1. 3.
14 [l] Τῷ δὲ Θεῷ χάρις, τῷ πάντοτε θριαμβεύοντι ἡμᾶς ἐν τῷ Χριστῷ, καὶ τὴν that therefore he had been already twice at Corinth before he wrote his first Epistle.

---

It is clear, and is generally allowed, that he did not come to them in the interval between the writing of his First and of his Second Epistle. See below, vii. 5—8, and Introduction to this and to the First Epistle;

As Theodoret says, πάλιν is not to be construed with ἐν λύπῃ, but with ἐλθεῖν;

No such second visit, as is supposed by some to have taken place before the date of the First Epistle, is mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles. Only one visit before that date is recorded there, the visit described Acts xviii. 1—18. Besides, if the Apostle had been with the Corinthians in sorrow, before he wrote his first Epistle, he would have referred to that visit in his first Epistle, and would not have grounded his censures of them on information received from others, e. g. those of Chloe (1 Cor. i. 11), and common hearsay (1 Cor. v. 1; xi. 18), but on his own personal observations.

If, also, he had been recently there, it is by no means probable that such excesses and abuses would have grown up in the Corinthian Church, or that such heresies would have been propagated there as he describes in his first Epistle;

Further; there is not the least intimation in that Epistle of any recent visit to them, or of any other visit than that one which he had paid to Corinth four years before, viz. A.D. 53, 54, and which is described in Acts xviii. 1—18;

On the contrary, the whole tenour of that Epistle is in harmony with the conclusion that he had not been at Corinth since that first visit;

He also says in the present Epistle (2 Cor. i. 15) that he had been desirous to come to them, that they might have a second benefit, i. e. from a second visit, and not a third benefit from a third visit.

Besides, the abuses and excesses to which he refers in his Epistle, were notorious and inveterate. He could not but have heard something of them when at Ephesus. And the same reasons which restrained him from visiting them in grief now, would have restrained him from visiting them in grief then.

His mode of dealing with them was to try first what could be done by a Letter, and then to come in person.

"In tristitiâ antè scripserat, non venerat." Bengel.

Compare the remarks on the similar case of the Galatians above, Introduction to that Epistle, pp. 39, 40.

On the objections from 2 Cor. xiii. 1, τρίτον τοῦτο ἔρχομαι, see note there.

As to the position of πάλιν, see Bengel here, and cp. σχεδὸν, in Heb. ix. 22; and εὐθέως, Mark i. 10; ix. 15. And see Winer, p. 488. These adverbs are to be combined, as πάλιν here, with the principal word in the sentence, generally the verb or participle: and so πάλιν seems to be used in 2 Cor. xii. 21, μὴ πάλιν ἐλθόντος μου ταπεινώσῃ με ὁ Θεός μου πρὸς ὑμᾶς.

2. καὶ τίς ὁ εὐφραίνων] and (καὶ is used to express surprise and indignation; cp. on James ii. 4) who then is he that maketh me glad, save he who is being grieved by me? Elz. adds ἐστὶ, with D, E, F, G, I, K, after καὶ τίς, but it is not in A, B, C, nor in ℵ.

— εἰ μὴ ὁ λυπούμενος] he who is being grieved by me, i. e. you yourselves.

3. ἔγραψα] I wrote. Elz. adds ὑμῖν with D, E, F, G, I, K, but ὑμῖν is not in A, B, C, nor in ℵ.

5. ἀλλὰ ἀπὸ μέρους—ὑμᾶς] He has not grieved me (i. e. not so much me personally and individually, or me only or mainly; cp. Luke x. 20. Acts v. 4. 1 Cor. xv. 10. Winer, p. 439) but in part, i. e. in my relation to you, and in the share which I take in your griefs, in order that I may not lay the load of grief on you all (for what has been done by one among you), and yet take no share of the sorrow's burden on myself, your spiritual Father.

No; do not suppose on the one hand, that in my reproofs I vented the bitter feelings of a personal grief; nor yet imagine, on the other, that I would lay the whole burden on you all for the sin of one among you, and not bear any part of it myself.

The sinner, the incestuous person mentioned above, 1 Cor. v. 1—5, who was excommunicated for his sin, and has been now brought to repentance, has indeed grieved me by his sin in particular, as distinguished from the rest of you, to whom he belongs; and he has grieved me in part as sharing in your sorrow for the sin of one of your members.

Thus the words ἀπὸ μέρους, in part, appear to have a twofold relation; first, to the sinner as regarded with reference to the πάντες, of whom he was a part; and next to the Apostle, as participating in all that concerned his spiritual flock. And this double relation of ἀπὸ μέρους is brought out by the words ἵνα μὴ ἐπιβαρῶ πάντας ὑμᾶς.

The passage is rightly rendered by Tertullian, de Pudicit. c. 13, "Non me contristavit, sed ex parte, ne vos onerem omnes."

10. ὃ κεχάρισμαι, εἴ τι κεχάρισμαι] what I have forgiven, if I have forgiven any thing. So A, B, C, F, G. Elz. has εἴ τι κ. ᾧ κεχ.

St. Paul does not here rest his pardon on the grounds of regard and relation to the party pardoned; he had considered that point in v. 7; but he now says, that whatsoever pardon he has granted, he has granted it for the sake of all.

Tertullian (l. c.) rightly renders the words, "Ego si quid donavi, donavi in personâ Christi."

11. ὑπὸ τοῦ Σατανᾶ] by Satan, to whom he had been delivered, in order that by the exercise of godly discipline he might be delivered from Satan. 1 Cor. v. 5. See note there.

12. δέ] but. This conjunction marks the end of the parenthesis (vv. 5—12), and connects what follows with the narrative in v. 4, interrupted by it. Cp. Meyer here, and Winer, p. 402.

— οὐκ ἔσχηκα ἄνεσιν] I have not had rest. The Perfect takes the reader back to the time specified, and makes it present to him, and marks a longer duration than the aorist εἶχον would have done. Cp. above, i. 9, and below, vii. 5.

— Τίτον] Titus, whom I expected to come from you.

14. θριαμβεύοντι] leading us in triumph —; rendered by some, ὀσμὴν τῆς γνώσεως αὐτοῦ φανεροῦντι δι' ἡμῶν ἐν παντὶ τόπῳ· [15] [m] ὅτι Χριστοῦ εὐωδία ἐσμὲν τῷ Θεῷ ἐν τοῖς σωζομένοις καὶ ἐν τοῖς ἀπολλυμένοις, οἷς μὲν [n] ὀσμὴ θανάτου εἰς θάνατον, [16] [n] οἷς δὲ ὀσμὴ ζωῆς εἰς ζωήν.

m 1 Cor. 1. 18. 2 Thess. 2. 10.
n Luke 2. 34. John 9. 39. ch. 3. 5, 6.

making us to triumph. Similarly other neuter verbs are sometimes used in an active sense, as Ps. cxix. 49, 50, μνήσθητι τῶν λόγων σου ὧν ἐπήλπισάς με . . . ὅτι τὸ λόγιόν σου ἔζησέ με. So μαθητεύειν ἔθνη, Matt. xxviii. 19; and 1 Sam. viii. 22, βασίλευσον αὐτοῖς βασιλέα. See Winer, p. 22, and Meyer here.

But St. Paul uses the word θριαμβεύειν in another place, Col. ii. 15, θριαμβεύσας αὐτούς, where the sense is, to display them publicly in triumphal pomp and pageantry in that very thing, the Cross, which was the instrument of shame. As the Fathers say, The Cross of Christ became to Him like a Triumphal Car, in which He rode as a Conqueror, and exhibited to the world His glory, by the subjection of His foes, and by the glorious rewards which He procured for, and distributed to, His faithful soldiers, the partners of His Victory and Triumph. See Barrow's words (vi. p. 595) as quoted below on Col. ii. 15.

This being the sense in which St. Paul uses the word θριαμβεύω in Col. ii. 15, it seems most probable that it is employed here in a similar meaning;

Thanks be to God, Who displays us to the world as trophies of His Triumph in Christ.

The Cities of Greece had now been subjugated by Roman armies. Corinth herself had been sacked by the legions of Rome. Her spoils, pictures, statues, had been displayed in the triumphal procession of her Conquerors, her Generals had been led in triumph to the Roman Capitol. She herself had been led in triumph; as a Roman Poet says,

> "Captivum portatur ebur, captiva Corinthus."
> (Horat. 2 Epist. i. 193.)

And as another Roman poet writes, speaking of the conquests of Rome,

> "Ille triumphatâ Capitolia ad alta Corintho > Victor aget currum cæsis insignis Achivis."
> (Virgil, Æn. vi. 837.)

Such were the triumphs of Rome. How much more glorious are those of Christ!

St. Paul does not lay any stress here on the hostile character of those who were led in triumph by earthly conquerors, of whom they were said θριαμβεύειν. See Plutarch, Romul. p. 38, D; Coriolan. p. 231, A; Arat. p. 1052, C; and other passages quoted by Wetstein here. And see also the leading incidents of a Triumph, to which the Apostle here refers, in Plutarch, Æmil. § 32; Josephus, B. J. vii. 5; Juvenal, Sat. x. 38—45; Grævius, Thesaurus Ant. vol. xxx.; Dr. Smith's Dict. of Antiq. p. 1008.

Indeed, it may rather be said, that there is a contrast here between the savage barbarity of earthly Conquerors toward those whom they led in triumph, and the mild yoke which Christ places on the neck of those whom He subdues to Himself. Earthly Victors lead their captives in triumph, in order to put them to death, but Christ leads us in triumph, in order that we may have everlasting life. Our heavenly Conqueror, Christ, in His infinite love to us, leads us in triumph, in order that we, His captives, may become His soldiers, and partners of His Victory.

St. Paul's thoughts are absorbed in contemplating the Triumph of Him Who rides on the White Horse, going forth "conquering and to conquer" (Rev. vi. 2); and he exults in regarding himself as an instrument used for the display of Christ's triumphal glory in the march of His Gospel through the world.

This is the sense which, with more or less clearness, is assigned to these words by ancient Expositors. Thus Theodoret, "In all things we sing hymns to God (does he refer to the triumphal pæan?), Who leads us hither and thither, displaying us to the world, and diffusing by us the knowledge of His truth." So Chrys., "The Apostle has been speaking of his afflictions. But do not think, he says, that I am distressed by them. No; they are my glory. These trials are our triumphs. Thanks be to God, Who triumphs us, that is, makes us illustrious (περιφανεῖς) in the eyes of all. Our persecutors are the trophies which we erect in every land. We triumph in Christ, and in His Gospel. And since we are engaged in a triumph, we must bear His trophy aloft, the Cross, in the eyes of the world."

And so Theophylact, and Jerome, ad Hedib. qu. 11, "Triumphat nos Deus in Christo. Triumphus enim Dei, Passio Martyrum pro Christi nomine, cruoris effusio, et inter tormenta lætitiæ." And thus he well connects this verse with what follows: "Cum enim viderit quis tantâ perseverantiâ stare Martyres, et in suis persecutionibus gloriari, odor notitiæ Dei disseminatur in gentes, et subit tacita cogitatio, quòd, nisi verum esset Evangelium, nunquam sanguine defenderetur."

St. Paul, in writing these words, doubtless reverts in his mind to the fact, that he himself had once been, in a special degree, an Enemy of Christ (indeed, who had not been an Enemy once? see Rom. v. 10), and that he had formerly taken up arms against Christ, and that he had been thrown prostrate on the ground, as a soldier in a field of battle, by Christ's victorious power and glory, in his mad career to Damascus, and that he had been led by Him in triumph as a captive by a Conqueror. His mind is also filled with an awful sense of Christ's majesty, and with joy and gratitude that he himself, once the furious enemy of Christ, and proud rebel against Him, is now one of his soldiers, accompanying Him always, and in every place (πάντοτε, and ἐν παντὶ τόπῳ), in the triumphal progress of the Gospel (as the laurelled Legions of the Roman Cæsars followed them on their victorious career through the streets of the cities of the world), and showing forth His praise, and chanting a sacred "Io TRIUMPHE" to Christ, and proclaiming peace and safety to all who receive Him, and submit to His victorious sway.

Hence the Metaphor which follows;

14—16. τὴν ὀσμὴν τῆς γνώσεως αὐτοῦ φανεροῦντι—εἰς ζωήν] and maketh manifest by us in every place the odour (ὀσμὴν) of the knowledge of Him: because we are unto God a sweet odour of Christ among them that are being saved (that are in the way of salvation), and among them that are perishing; to the one, an odour of death unto death; to the other, an odour of life unto life. These verses may best be considered together.

'Οσμὴ = odor, smell; εὐωδία, sweet smell, fragrance, perfume.

Some MSS. (A, B, C, and also ℵ) prefix ἐκ to θανάτου and to ζωῆς, "to some an odour from death unto death; to others an odour from life unto life," which is received by some Editors. The reading in the text is found in D, E, F, G, I, K; and is confirmed by Vulg., Syriac, Gothic, and Æthiopic Versions, and Cod. Augiens. and Boerner., and by the majority of Ancient Interpreters. This difference of reading is remarkable; and it is difficult to determine which is preferable.

The sense is, we diffuse the odour of His knowledge in every place. They who follow an earthly Conqueror in his triumphal march through the cities of this world, cause the citizens of those cities to kindle incense on the altars of those cities, in sacrificial praise, on the approach of the conqueror, and so a perfume is every where diffused by his arrival, and ascends in a fragrant cloud to heaven. See Plutarch, Æmil. § 32, p. 272 (quoted by Macknight here), Dio Cassius lxxiv. 1, who speaks of the streets as full of θυμιάματα, or aromatic exhalations from the altars; and Horat. Od. iv. 2. 50,

> "Tuque dum procedis, Io Triumphe!
> Non semel dicemus, Io Triumphe!
> Civitas omnis, dabimusque Divis
> Tura benignis."

So we, the preachers of the Gospel, cause the incense of prayer and praise to be kindled on sacred altars erected to God, which breathe forth a sacrificial odour, and waft a sweet perfume to heaven. Cp. Rev. viii. 3, 4.

The ὀσμὴ, or odour, diffused by the incense on the altars in the streets of the cities of this world at the approach of the earthly Victor in his triumph, was a signal of death to some, and of life to others.

It was a signal of death to those who had rebelled against the victor, and would not submit to him, and who were then slaughtered. See Josephus, B. J. vii. 24. Livy xxvi. 13.

It was a signal of life to others, whom he delivered by his Victory, and who welcomed the Victor with joy.

So the Gospel which we preach, in our progress through the world; so the incense which we cause to be kindled on Christian altars. It is an odour of death unto death to those who reject Christ, and it is an odour of life unto life to all who receive Him.

Compare what he had said 1 Cor. i. 18, where the preaching of the Gospel is described as foolishness to them that are perishing (ἀπολλυμένοις, as here), but the power of God to the σωζόμενοι. See also below, iv. 3, If our Gospel is hid, it is hid τοῖς ἀπολλυμένοις.

On this use of σωζόμενοι, see Acts ii. 47. St. Paul adopts and improves upon a mode of expression which was common to Jewish Teachers, who called the Law an "aroma vitæ" to the good, and "aroma mortis" to the evil. See the passages quoted from the Talmud by Wetstein, p. 182.

o ch. 4. 2. & 11. 13—15. Jer. 5. 31. & 23. 27—32. Matt. 24. 24. 1 Tim. 1. 19, 20. & 4. 1—3.

Καὶ πρὸς ταῦτα τίς ἱκανός; [17] ° οὐ γάρ ἐσμεν, ὡς οἱ πολλοὶ, καπηλεύοντες τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἀλλ' ὡς ἐξ εἰλικρινείας, ἀλλ' ὡς ἐκ Θεοῦ, κατενώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἐν Χριστῷ λαλοῦμεν.

a ch. 5. 12. & 10. 8, 12. & 11. 19. 1 Cor. 3. 10. & 4. 5. & 10. 33. b 1 Cor. 9. 2, 3. c Exod. 24. 12. & 34. 1. Jer. 31. 33. Ezek. 11. 19. & 36. 26. Heb. 8. 10.

III. [1] [a] Ἀρχόμεθα πάλιν ἑαυτοὺς συνιστάνειν, εἰ μὴ χρῄζομεν, ὡς τινὲς, συστατικῶν ἐπιστολῶν πρὸς ὑμᾶς, ἢ ἐξ ὑμῶν; [2] [b] Ἡ ἐπιστολὴ ἡμῶν ὑμεῖς ἐστε, ἐγγεγραμμένη ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις ἡμῶν, γινωσκομένη καὶ ἀναγινωσκομένη ὑπὸ πάντων ἀνθρώπων, [3] [c] φανερούμενοι ὅτι ἐστὲ ἐπιστολὴ Χριστοῦ διακονηθεῖσα ὑφ' ἡμῶν, ἐγγεγραμμένη οὐ μέλανι, ἀλλὰ Πνεύματι Θεοῦ ζῶντος, οὐκ ἐν πλαξὶ λιθίναις, ἀλλὰ ἐν πλαξὶ καρδίας σαρκίναις.

St. Paul's words, "an odour of death unto death, and of life unto life," are to be explained by reference to the regenerating power of the Gospel, "à parte antè," and to the immortality which it bestows, "à parte pòst." Christ gives the vivifying odour of the new birth in Baptism; and the new life then bestowed, will, if duly cherished in the soul, lead on to life eternal: and so the Gospel is an odour of life to life—of life spiritual to life immortal.

But to those who reject it, it is an odour of death, that is, of the death of sin, which the Gospel declares, and in which it finds all men; and this state of spiritual death will lead those who refuse the Gospel to what is called in Scripture the second death, viz. death eternal (Rev. ii. 11; xx. 14; xxi. 8).

And therefore S. Irenæus says (iv. 28), "Quibus est odor mortis ad mortem, nisi qui non credunt, neque subjecti sunt Verbo Dei? . . . Qui autem sunt, qui salvantur (οἱ σωζόμενοι) et accipiunt vitam æternam? Nonne hi qui diligunt Deum, et pollicitationibus ejus credunt, et malitiâ parvuli effecti sunt?"

In this statement of St. Paul we have an inspired declaration of the Freedom of the human Will. As S. Jerome says (ad Hedibiam iv. p. 183), The name of Christ is ever fragrant: but because men are left to their own freedom of will,—in order that if they believe they may be saved, and if they reject Him, they may be lost,—therefore the fragrance of our preaching of Christ, which in itself is sweet, is rendered either deadly, or else "salvific," by the sin or faith of those who reject or receive it. So Christ Himself was "set for the fall of some, and for the rising up of others in Israel" (Luke ii. 34).

Indeed it is a solemn truth, that in the Christian scheme nothing that God has done, is indifferent. Every thing is as a two-edged sword. All Christian privileges, all the means of Grace, Scriptures, Sermons, Sacraments, Sundays, Churches, Chapels, Liturgies, and all things that Christ's Ministers do and teach in His Name, are—according as they are used—either blessings or banes, either physic or poison; they are either for weal or woe, either an odour of life unto life eternal, or of death unto death eternal, to the souls of all to whom they come. Cp. Aug. Serm. 4 and Serm. 273.

16. τίς ἱκανός] who is sufficient? See iii. 5, where he answers this question.

17. οἱ πολλοί] the many, at Corinth, as distinguished from the few who do not so. Cp. Phil. ii. 21. 1 Tim. vi. 5. Titus i. 11, where St. Paul deplores the practice of many among Christian Teachers to seek their own personal ends in preaching the Gospel, and to adulterate it for the sake of advantage, or to accommodate it to the taste of men, for popular applause, or for lucre's sake (2 Pet. ii. 3).

This might be expected to be a prevalent practice at Corinth from the example and influence of Greek Philosophers, Rhetoricians, and Sophists in that city. See next note.

— καπηλεύοντες] "adulterantes" (Iren. iv. 26). The meaning of καπηλεύω, "cauponari," is

(1) To deal by retail.

(2) To make a gain of.

(3) To adulterate—especially wine. See LXX, Isa. i. 22, οἱ κάπηλοί σου μίσγουσι τὸν οἶνον ὕδατι, and Greg. Nazian. Orat. 2, p. 34, οὐ γάρ ἐσμεν ὡς οἱ πολλοὶ καπηλεύειν δυνάμενοι τὸν λόγον τῆς ἀληθείας, καὶ ἀναμιγνύναι τὸν οἶνον ὕδατι, ὥστε αὐτοί τι παρακερδαίνειν ἐκ τῆς καπηλείας ὁμιλοῦντες πᾶσι πρὸς χάριν, ὡς ἂν μάλιστα εὐδόκιμοι μὲν παρὰ τοῖς πολλοῖς.

Cp. Bentley's excellent remarks on the word at the beginning of his Sermon on this text (Works iii. p. 242), "καπηλεύειν, besides the sense of adulterating, has an additional notion of unjust lucre; and here signifies to corrupt the word of God for gain."

Thus Plato speaks of those Teachers who go like pedlars from city to city, and sell and huckster their Sciences to any one who has an appetite for them (καπηλεύοντες τὰ μαθήματα τῷ ἀεὶ ἐπιθυμοῦντι): and Lucian (Hermotim. c. 59) says, the Philosophers retail their theories like chapmen (κάπηλοι), the most of them having mixed them up together, and adulterating them, and fraudulently measuring them out.

See other similar passages concerning the Greek Sophists in Wetstein.

The reference to this subject as illustrated by Greek Philosophy, and as treated with reference to Christian Doctrine by the Apostle St. Paul here, can hardly fail to inspire the English reader with feelings of thankfulness to God, that through the provision of settled endowments by the piety of his Christian Forefathers, for the maintenance of Christian Teachers in the Parishes of England and in her Seats of Learning, He has delivered the Clergy of England, and her Academic Instructors, from that fascinating lure and dangerous temptation, to which some are exposed, of vending paradoxical speculations and heterodox novelties for the sake of popular applause and personal emolument, and of adulterating the purity of the Gospel by corrupt admixtures, in order to gratify a vicious appetite and diseased taste, and of retailing poison to the People instead of saving their souls.

CH. III. 1. Ἀρχόμεθα] Are we beginning again to commend ourselves, as our adversaries charge us with doing—cp. below, v. 12—if indeed, forsooth, we do not even require, as certain others do (and as some may think that we also do) commendatory letters from you! We, your Apostle and Teacher, from you, our flock! An answer to an objection; and also a censure on the false Teachers who sent themselves, and commended themselves. See xi. 4.

Εἰ μὴ, if not, unless, is the reading of A, B, I, K, and so Meyer. Cp. 2 Cor. xii. 13, where εἰ μὴ introduces similarly an hypothesis put ironically, as here, only to be exploded as absurd. See also xiii. 5.

C, D, E, F, G have ἢ μὴ, which has been received by Griesb., Scholz, Lach., Tisch., Alford. But the ἢ seems to be a confusion from similarity of sound with εἰ. See 2 Cor. xii. 1.

— ὑμῶν] Elz. adds συστατικῶν, not in A, B, C.

This sentence obviates an objection, supposed to proceed from a Corinthian hearer or reader of what the Apostle had been saying concerning himself.

Do not imagine, from what I have stated concerning my afflictions and the success and integrity of my ministry, that I am conscious of any need of commendatory letters to you or from you. No; we dare not commend ourselves. (2 Cor. v. 12; x. 12.) You yourselves are our testimonial; you are our letter of recommendation. (Chrys.) Cp. 1 Cor. ix. 1, 2, "The seal of my Apostleship are ye in the Lord."

There is also an emphasis on ἑαυτούς. Do we commend ourselves? No; but we do magnify our office. Cp. Rom. xi. 13.

2. Ἡ ἐπιστολὴ ἡμῶν ὑμεῖς ἐστε] Cp. S. Polycarp ad Philipp. c. 11: "Nihil tale sensi in vobis in quibus laboravit beatus Paulus, qui estis in principio Epistolæ ejus." The original is lost here. S. Polycarp probably wrote οἵ ἐστε ἐν ἀρχῇ ἐπιστολαὶ αὐτοῦ. See below on Phil. iv. 15.

3. ἐστὲ ἐπιστολὴ Χριστοῦ] ye are an Epistle of Christ, written by Him with the finger of the Holy Ghost, who has engraven His Law on your hearts by the instrumentality of our Ministry, which He has blessed to you, and so made you to be the credentials of our Apostleship, and to be our letter of recommendation.

— καρδίας] of the heart. A, B, C, D, E, F, G, and ℵ (Cod. Sinait.) have καρδίαις here, received by Lachmann and others. And if this is the true reading, then the words must be rendered in fleshy tables, our hearts. But the position of the words seems to forbid this construction: and the reading in the text is authorized by the early testimony of Origen, Irenæus (v. 13), and Hilary, and by the great body of Cursive MSS. and ancient Versions, and is adopted by Tisch. and Meyer. As to the sense, see Ezek. xi. 19, quoted below on v. 6.

4 Πεποίθησιν δὲ τοιαύτην ἔχομεν διὰ τοῦ Χριστοῦ πρὸς τὸν Θεόν· 5 [d] οὐχ ὅτι ἱκανοί ἐσμεν λογίσασθαί τι ἀφ' ἑαυτῶν, ὡς ἐξ ἑαυτῶν, ἀλλ' ἡ ἱκανότης ἡμῶν ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ, 6 [e] ὃς καὶ ἱκάνωσεν ἡμᾶς διακόνους καινῆς διαθήκης, οὐ γράμματος, ἀλλὰ Πνεύματος· τὸ γὰρ γράμμα ἀποκτείνει, τὸ δὲ Πνεῦμα ζωοποιεῖ.

7 [f] Εἰ δὲ ἡ διακονία τοῦ θανάτου ἐν γράμμασι ἐντετυπωμένη λίθοις ἐγενήθη

[d] ch. 2. 16. Phil 2. 13.
[e] Jer. 31. 31. Heb. 8. 6, 8. Rom. 7. 6. ch. 5. 18.
[f] Deut. 4. 13. & 27. 26. Exod. 34. 29—35. Heb. 9. 4.

But how are we to account for καρδίαις here in so many uncial MSS. ?

It is not impossible that the true reading may be simply ἐν πλαξὶ σαρκίναις, and that the substantive καρδίαις was only an explanatory gloss, imported from v. 2, ἐγγεγραμμένοι ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις ὑμῶν, and that this was corrected by other copyists into καρδίας.

Though the theory of explanatory interpolations of marginal glosses into the text of the New Testament has been sometimes carried too far (e. g. by Wassenberg in Valcken. Scholæ in N. T. tom. i.), yet probably this has been the most fertile source of error in some MSS. of the Sacred Volume.

5. οὐχ ὅτι] not as if —. Cp. i. 24, οὐχ ὅτι κυριεύομεν. Winer, § 61, p. 490.

6. ἱκάνωσεν διακόνους] enabled us for ministers; ἐνεδυνάμωσεν. (Theoph.) So διδάσκειν σοφὸν, αὐξάνειν μέγαν. Matth. G. G. § 414. 3. Cp. above on 1 Cor. i. 8.

— καινῆς διαθήκης, οὐ γράμματος, ἀλλὰ Πνεύματος—γράμμα ἀποκτείνει,—Πνεῦμα ζωοποιεῖ] of the New Covenant (as distinguished from the Old); not of the letter, but of the Spirit; for the letter (as far as it is the letter, and is without the Spirit) killeth.

Καινὴ διαθήκη here does not signify the "New Testament" (it is hardly necessary to say) considered as a Book, and as distinguished from the "Old Testament" (i. e. the Hebrew Scriptures), called by that name by St. Paul here (v. 14).

For this is a name posterior to the Apostolic age; and when St. Paul wrote to the Corinthians, only a portion of the New Testament was as yet in existence.

Besides, the words καινὴ διαθήκη stand here without the definite article ἡ, and mean a New Covenant, with an allusion to the words of Jeremiah, xxxi. 31 (or as it is in LXX, xxxviii. 31), διαθήσομαι διαθήκην καινὴν, οὐ κατὰ τὴν διαθήκην ἣν διεθέμην τοῖς πατράσιν αὐτῶν . . . . δώσω νόμους εἰς τὴν διάνοιαν αὐτῶν, καὶ ἐπὶ καρδίας αὐτῶν γράψω αὐτούς. And Ezekiel, xi. 19: δώσω αὐτοῖς καρδίαν ἑτέραν, καὶ Πνεῦμα καινὸν δώσω ἐν αὐτοῖς, καὶ ἐκσπάσω τὴν καρδίαν τὴν λιθίνην τῆς σαρκὸς αὐτῶν, καὶ δώσω αὐτοῖς καρδίαν σαρκίνην, ὅπως ἐν τοῖς προστάγμασί μου πορεύωνται, καὶ τὰ δικαιώματά μου φυλάσσωνται, καὶ ποιῶσιν αὐτὰ . . . . And see St. Paul's own words, Heb. viii. 8—10.

The connexion of the sentences therefore is: I do not need letters of commendation. Ye are my Apostolic credentials. Your conversion to Christianity wrought by my instrumentality, and the gifts of the Holy Spirit poured upon you, through my ministry, are my testimonials, "known and read" by the eyes of all. Ye are Christ's Epistle ministered by me,—an Epistle written by the hand of the Holy Ghost, who has inscribed the Gospel by my means, not on tables of stone, but on your hearts. Not that I therefore claim any honour to myself. I am a mere διάκονος, a servant. Christ is the Master; He the only Source; I am a mere channel. He is the divine Agent; I am a mere instrument. But He has been pleased to employ and enable me to fulfil His promises and prophecies, and to write by me a New Covenant, not of Letter, but of Spirit; that is, not of a Law written on stone, but of the Spirit, writing on the heart; and teaching and enabling you to perform it, by the gracious outpourings of the Holy Ghost, shed upon you through my Apostolic ministry.

Thus, in passing, he reprehends the Judaizers at Corinth (as Chrys. observes), who did not regard the Gospel as the fulfilment of the Law, but only as an appendage to it; and teaches, that the Letter of the Law only serves to condemn, unless they who receive it are regenerated by the vivifying Spirit of the Gospel.

On this subject the reader may consult S. Augustine's Treatise, "De Spiritu et Literâ," vol. x. pp. 311—363, where he compares the two Dispensations, and asserts the Dignity of the New, against the Pelagians.

It may be requisite to observe, that there is no disparagement here of the Levitical Law, as has been alleged by some in ancient times, e. g. by the Marcionites (see Tertullian c. Marcion. v. c. 11) and the Manichæans (see Augustine contra Adversarium Legis, ii. 24), and by others in modern times; nor any depreciation of the letter of Holy Scripture, as distinguished from the inner working of the Spirit.

One and the same Immutable God wrote the Law on the Tables of stone, and writes His Law by the Spirit on the heart (Tertullian l. c.). And the Language of Holy Scripture is from the Holy Ghost. Holy men spake of old as they were moved (φερόμενοι) by the Holy Ghost (2 Pet. i. 21); and St. Paul says that he himself speaks in words which the Holy Ghost teacheth. (1 Cor. ii. 13) And he declares, that the Holy Scriptures are the things which are able σοφίσαι εἰς σωτηρίαν, through faith in Christ. (2 Tim. iii. 15.) And, as God Himself had proclaimed by the Prophets (see Ezek. xi. 20), to whom he refers here, the very end for which the Spirit was to be given in the New Covenant, was, that they to whom it was given might be enabled to do the moral Law, enounced in the Old Covenant, and explained and spiritualized in the New. See further in the next note.

— τὸ γὰρ γράμμα ἀποκτείνει, τὸ δὲ Πνεῦμα ζωοποιεῖ] for the Letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life.

The letter of God's Law,—without the Spirit,—killeth; but the Spirit quickeneth.

This is no disparagement of the Letter of the Law, but only shows the corruption of the Nature of Man, to whom the Law is given, and proclaims the blessedness of the Gospel.

The dignity of the Ministry of the New Covenant as distinguished from the Old, is, that it bestows the Holy Ghost, Who enables to fulfil the Law, which is perfectly holy, just, and good in itself (Rom. vii. 12—14), but by reason of man's corrupt nature killeth; i. e. brings with it condemnation (ἀποκτείνει) for man's disobedience to it. See on 1 Cor. xv. 56; and Augustine, de Doctr. Christ. iii. 4; and Chrys. and Theophyl. here.

In this New Covenant, the Holy Ghost, in virtue of Christ's sacrifice for sin, bestows new life in the laver of Regeneration in Holy Baptism (Theoph.), and dispenses gifts of comfort and peace to the penitent; and so quickens those who were morally dead, and raises them by a spiritual Resurrection to a life of Grace here, and to a glorious Immortality hereafter.

The moral Resurrection, of which he speaks, is exactly analogous to the bodily Resurrection, of which St. Paul had spoken in the First Epistle; and St. Paul uses the same mode of speech with regard to both.

In his First Epistle he had said that "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God." (1 Cor. xv. 50.) That is, as far as they are flesh and blood, and are not vivified and renewed by the Holy Spirit, Whom God has promised to pour out on all flesh (Joel ii. 28. Cp. Acts ii. 17), they have no hope of heaven;

But yet (as he had there affirmed, against all who deny the Resurrection of the Body) the Flesh, when it has been quickened by the Spirit, will arise to Everlasting Glory.

So here, the Letter of the Law, taken by itself, killeth. Unless it be read by the aid of the same Spirit Who wrote it, and Who alone can enable to understand and to do it, it brings with it, not life, but death; not salvation, but condemnation.

But, if it be so read as it ought to be, if the Spirit acts in the Letter, on the heart, then the Word of God is a "lively oracle," and brings life to the soul. (Acts vii. 38. James i. 21.)

As our Blessed Lord had said in words which are applicable to both these Resurrections,—"It is the Spirit that quickeneth, the Flesh (i. e. alone) profiteth nothing; the words which I have spoken to you, they are Spirit and they are life." (John vi. 63.)

Here then is a warning against placing confidence on Systems of Education which give instruction in the Letter of Scripture, but do not afford those means of Grace by which the Holy Spirit works on the soul: such as Public Prayer, the Sacraments, the Ministry of Reconciliation, Benedictions, and laying on of Apostolic hands in Confirmation; and by which He writes the Law of God with His divine Finger on the heart. Cp. Theophyl. here.

On this subject the Editor may perhaps be permitted to refer to No. xx. of Occasional Sermons, "On the Office of the Holy Ghost in Education."

7—18. Εἰ δὲ] But if the ministration of death written in letters, engraven on stones, was in glory, so that the children of Israel could not look stedfastly on the face of Moses, for the glory of his countenance which was to be done away, how shall not the ministration of the spirit be much rather in glory?

The words δόξα, δεδόξασται τὸ δεδοξασμένον, κάλυμμα περιαιρεῖται, as used here (vv. 7—16), are derived from the g Luke 9. 29—31. Acts 6. 15.

h Exod. 19. 12—19. & 20. 18, 19. Rom. 1. 18. & 8. 3, 4. Gal. 3. 10. Heb. 12. 18—21.

i Rom. 1. 17.

ἐν δόξῃ, [8] g ὥστε μὴ δύνασθαι ἀτενίσαι τοὺς υἱοὺς Ἰσραὴλ εἰς τὸ πρόσωπον Μωϋσέως, διὰ τὴν δόξαν τοῦ προσώπου αὐτοῦ τὴν καταργουμένην, [8] πῶς οὐχὶ μᾶλλον ἡ διακονία τοῦ Πνεύματος ἔσται ἐν δόξῃ; [9] h Εἰ γὰρ ἡ διακονία τῆς κατακρίσεως δόξα, πολλῷ μᾶλλον περισσεύει ἡ διακονία τῆς δικαιοσύνης ἐν δόξῃ. [10] Καὶ γὰρ οὐ δεδόξασται τὸ δεδοξασμένον ἐν τούτῳ τῷ μέρει ἕνεκεν τῆς ὑπερβαλλούσης δόξης. [11] i Εἰ γὰρ τὸ καταργούμενον διὰ δόξης, πολλῷ μᾶλλον τὸ μένον ἐν δόξῃ.

j Eph. 6. 18. k Exod. 34. 33, &c. Rom. 10. 4. Gal. 3. 25.

[12] j Ἔχοντες οὖν τοιαύτην ἐλπίδα πολλῇ παῤῥησίᾳ χρώμεθα, [13] k καὶ οὐ, καθάπερ Μωϋσῆς ἐτίθει κάλυμμα ἐπὶ τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ, πρὸς τὸ μὴ ἀτενίσαι

Mosaic narrative in the Septuagint Version of Exodus xxxiv. 29—35, where Moses describes his own appearance when he came down from Sinai, and when he talked with the people, and went in again to converse with God.

Indeed, the language of the Septuagint here, as in many other places, affords the best commentary on that of St. Paul.

For a preparatory illustration of the Apostle's words, let the reader compare the two placed side by side.

Exod. xxxiv. 29—35.	2 Cor. iii. 7—16.
Ὡς δὲ κατέβαινε Μωϋσῆς ἐκ τοῦ ὄρους καὶ αἱ δύο πλάκες ἐπὶ τῶν χειρῶν, ... οὐκ ᾔδει ὅτι δεδόξασται ἡ ὄψις τοῦ χρώματος τοῦ προσώπου αὐτοῦ ἐν τῷ λαλεῖν αὐτὸν αὐτῷ· καὶ εἶδεν Ἀαρὼν, καὶ πάντες οἱ πρεσβύτεροι Ἰσραὴλ, τὸν Μωϋσῆν, καὶ ἦν δεδοξασμένη ἡ ὄψις τ.χ.τ.π.α. καὶ ἐφοβήθησαν ἐγγίσαι αὐτῷ καὶ ἐκάλεσεν αὐτοὺς Μωϋσῆς καὶ ἐπεστράφησαν πρὸς αὐτὸν Ἀαρὼν καὶ πάντες οἱ ἄρχοντες τῆς συναγωγῆς, καὶ ἐλάλησεν αὐτοῖς Μωϋσῆς.	Εἰ δὲ ἡ διακονία τοῦ θανάτου ἐν γράμμασι ἐντετυπωμένη λίθοις ἐγενήθη ἐν δόξῃ, ὥστε μὴ δύνασθαι ἀτενίσαι τοὺς υἱοὺς Ἰσραὴλ εἰς τὸ πρόσωπον Μωϋσέως, διὰ τὴν δόξαν τοῦ προσώπου αὐτοῦ τὴν καταργουμένην, πῶς οὐχὶ μᾶλλον ἡ διακονία τοῦ Πνεύματος ἔσται ἐν δόξῃ; Εἰ γὰρ ἡ διακονία τῆς κατακρίσεως δόξα, πολλῷ μᾶλλον περισσεύει ἡ διακονία τῆς δικαιοσύνης ἐν δόξῃ. Καὶ γὰρ οὐ δεδόξασται τὸ δεδοξασμένον ἐν τούτῳ τῷ μέρει ἕνεκεν τῆς ὑπερβαλλούσης δόξης. Εἰ γὰρ τὸ καταργούμενον διὰ δόξης, πολλῷ μᾶλλον τὸ μένον ἐν δόξῃ.
Καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα προσῆλθον πρὸς αὐτὸν πάντες οἱ υἱοὶ (al. πρεσβύτεροι) Ἰσραὴλ, καὶ ἐνετείλατο αὐτοῖς πάντα ὅσα ἐνετείλατο Κύριος πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐν τῷ ὄρει Σινά.	Ἔχοντες οὖν τοιαύτην ἐλπίδα πολλῇ παῤῥησίᾳ χρώμεθα, καὶ οὐ, καθάπερ Μωϋσῆς ἐτίθει κάλυμμα ἐπὶ τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ, πρὸς τὸ μὴ ἀτενίσαι τοὺς υἱοὺς Ἰσραὴλ εἰς τὸ τέλος τοῦ καταργουμένου, ἀλλ' ἐπωρώθη τὰ νοήματα αὐτῶν, ἄχρι γὰρ τῆς σήμερον ἡμέρας τὸ αὐτὸ κάλυμμα ἐπὶ τῇ ἀναγνώσει τῆς παλαιᾶς διαθήκης μένει μὴ ἀνακαλυπτόμενον, ὅτι ἐν Χριστῷ καταργεῖται, ἀλλ' ἕως σήμερον, ἡνίκα ἀναγινώσκεται Μωϋσῆς, κάλυμμα ἐπὶ τὴν καρδίαν αὐτῶν κεῖται, ἡνίκα δ' ἂν ἐπιστρέψῃ πρὸς Κύριον, περιαιρεῖται τὸ κάλυμμα. Ὁ δὲ Κύριος τὸ Πνεῦμά ἐστιν· οὗ δὲ τὸ Πνεῦμα Κυρίου ἐλευθερία. Ἡμεῖς δὲ πάντες ἀνακεκαλυμμένῳ προσώπῳ τὴν δόξαν Κυρίου κατοπτριζόμενοι τὴν αὐτὴν εἰκόνα μεταμορφούμεθα ἀπὸ δόξης εἰς δόξαν, καθάπερ ἀπὸ Κυρίου Πνεύματος.

7. ἐγενήθη ἐν δόξῃ] was made to be in glory: invested with glory as a halo. See below on v. 11; and contrast here the word ἔσται, shall be permanently in glory, spoken of the Gospel.

9. ἡ διακονία] the ministration. So B, D, E, K, L, and many Cursives, Versions, and Tisch.—A, C, D*, F, G have τῇ διακονίᾳ, to the ministration: and this reading deserves consideration, and is received by Lachmann.

— δικαιοσύνης] righteousness. As Chrys. says here, The Ministry of the Law showed men to be sinners, and denounced on them the curse for sin; but the Ministry of the Spirit does not inflict punishment, but imparts righteousness. This is the Gift in Baptism, τοῦτο τὸ βάπτισμα ἐχαρίζετο. See below on Rom. iii. 21—26.

10. ἐν τούτῳ τῷ μέρει] in this respect. See ix. 3. 1 Pet. iv. 16. These words are introduced to guard the reader against the notion that he is disparaging the Mosaic dispensation. Theophyl. That was δεδοξασμένον, glorified; but glorious as it was, it was not glorified in one respect,—that is, it was not glorified, relatively to, and in comparison with, the Evangelical Ministry, which far transcends its glory, and absorbs it.

11. τὸ καταργούμενον] that which is now in course of being done away. Cp. 1 Cor. ii. 6.

— διὰ δόξης] If that which is now evanescent (i. e. the Levitical Dispensation) was invested with glory. Διὰ denotes the quality with which a thing is endued, particularly in a state of transition. So δι' ὑπομονῆς, Rom. viii. 25; διὰ πίστεως, 2 Cor. v. 7. See Winer, pp. 339. 376, and next note.

— ἐν δόξῃ] in glory, i. e. permanently; and so distinguished from διὰ δόξης, through glory, i. e. transitorily. Chrys., Beng.

The glory of the Mosaic Dispensation was shown in the irradiation of the face of Moses (Exod. xxxiv. 29, 30); but that illumination, which was only for a time, indicated the transitory character of the glory of his dispensation.

But Christ is the 'Light of the World,' and "He lighteneth every man that cometh into the world." (John i. 9; viii. 12; ix. 5.) The light which shone on the face of Moses was only a passing gleam, reflected from the countenance of Christ.

This relation of Moses to Christ, and of the glory of his ministry as compared to that of the Gospel, was visibly displayed at the Transfiguration. There Moses and Elias (i. e. the Ministers of the Law and of Prophecy, see on Matt. xvii. 2, 3) are brought into juxtaposition with Christ. They appeared in glory. (Luke ix. 31.) But their conversation is concerning Christ and His death, ἔξοδον,—the true Exodus of the spiritual Israel. (See on Luke ix. 31.) He is the Centre, to which their thoughts converge, and from which their glory radiates. The brightness of His Raiment is described. The lustre of His face is mentioned in the Gospel-history of the Transfiguration. (Matt. xvii. 2. Mark ix. 3. Luke ix. 29.) And the voice from heaven came to Him alone,—"This is My beloved Son, hear ye HIM." (Matt. xvii. 5. Mark ix. 7. Luke ix 35.)

Hence St. Peter, one of the witnesses of the Transfiguration, says (2 Pet. i. 17), "He received from God the Father honour and glory, when there came such a voice to Him from the excellent glory." And see the expressive words of the three Evangelists after this declaration from heaven; they saw no man (οὐκέτι) but Jesus left alone, μόνον, and Jesus εὑρέθη μόνος. The Law passes, the Prophets pass, διὰ δόξης, through glory, but the Gospel remains, ever remains, ἐν δόξῃ, in glory.

13. οὐ, καθάπερ Μωϋσῆς] we do not [i. e. put a veil on our faces], as Moses did. On this ellipse see Matt. xx. 23; xxvi. 5. Rom. i. 21; ix. 32; xiv. 23. 1 Cor. ix. 12. 25; xi. 16. Phil. iii. 5. Winer, p. 514.

— ἐτίθει] he was placing; i. e. when he had delivered his message to the people; but he removed it when he went in to converse with God. (Exod. xxxiv. 34. See above on v. 7.)

St. Paul here states another proof of the transcendent glory of that Evangelical Ministry, with which he was invested.

He had shown its dignity and glory in its gracious and vivifying spirit, as contrasted with the condemnatory rigour of the Law (vv. 6—9), and in its permanence as compared with the transitory character of the Law (vv. 7—11).

He now declares its exceeding dignity and glory in two other respects;

(1) Inasmuch as the Law had a veil on its countenance; that is, it was veiled in dim types and shadows; as St. Paul himself had taught the Corinthians in his former Epistle, where he shows, that whatever things happened to the Israelites in the Passover, the passage of the Red Sea, the Manna, the smitten Rock, were τύποι ἡμῶν, figures of us, Christians (1 Cor. x. 1—6; v. 7), shadows of good things to come, but the substance is CHRIST. (Col. ii. 17. Heb. x. 1.)

(2) Inasmuch as the only mode by which the Law itself can τοὺς υἱοὺς Ἰσραὴλ εἰς τὸ τέλος τοῦ καταργουμένου, 14 ἀλλ' ἐπωρώθη τὰ νοήματα αὐτῶν, ἄχρι γὰρ τῆς σήμερον ἡμέρας τὸ αὐτὸ κάλυμμα ἐπὶ τῇ ἀνα- 1 Isa. 6. 10. & 20. 10—12. & 42. 18—20. Ezek. 12. 2.

Matt. 13. 14. Acts 28. 26. Rom. 11. 7—10, 25.

be understood, is by the reception of the Gospel. It is the Spirit of Christ in the Gospel, which illuminates the Law, and takes the veil from its face, and makes its true features discernible; and which also takes the veil from the hearts of the readers of the Old Testament, and enables them to see its true beauty and glory, illuminated by the light of Christ's actions, sufferings, and exaltation, as shown in the Gospel. The Gospel is the unveiling of the Law; and it is the unveiling also of the hearts of its readers, and qualifies them to read it aright.

Behold then the transcendent glory of the Evangelic Ministry, with which I (says the Apostle) have been entrusted.

And in this respect St. Paul's interpretation of the figurative meaning of the veil on the face of Moses, as typical of the veil on the hearts of the people, and his prophecy of its removal by the Spirit of God, is happily illustrated by the language of Isaiah xxv. 7, "He will destroy in this Mountain (the Christian Sion) the face of the covering cast over all people, and the veil that is spread over all Nations."

6—13. οὐ γράμματος] not of the letter—τοῦ καταργουμένου] of that which is being done away.

On reviewing these verses it may appear to be not unnecessary to insert a caution against the perversion of them into a depreciation of the Old Testament;

The abuse of them by the Marcionites has been exposed and confuted by Tertullian (v. 11); and S. Augustine has vindicated and explained their true sense against the Manichæans in his Treatise "Contra Adversarium Legis et Prophetarum" (iv. 24), where he says that "the blasphemers of divine Oracles have alleged that the Law given by Moses was evil, because St. Paul calls it a Ministration of death; not perceiving that St. Paul said this to those who imagine that the Law is sufficient for their own will, and who, not being aided by the Spirit of Grace, were held captive by the guilt of disobedience under the Letter of the Law. But (he adds) that disobedience itself would not be evil, if the Law, which they disobeyed, had not been good."

The Law (he adds) is distinguished by St. Paul from the Gospel, in that the one commands what is good, the other confers what is good; the one makes man a hearer of righteousness, the other a doer. Why then should we be surprised that St. Paul calls the Law a ministration of death, in that it forbids that which we do, and commands what we cannot do; and that the Gospel is a ministration of the Spirit, which quickens and enables us to rise from the death of sin?

And what does the Apostle mean, in saying that the veil was on the face of Moses, in order that they might not see stedfastly to the end of that which was being done away? What was that end? Christ; the end of the Law to every one that believeth. (Rom. x. 4.) But what kind of end? An end which perfects, not destroys. "Finis quippe dicitur, propter quem fiunt omnia, quæcunque aliquo fiunt officio." The glorified face of Moses, on which the veil was, signified Christ. And that glory was to pass away, because all significations pass away, when that which is signified by them is revealed. As the Apostle says that all earthly knowledge will pass away (1 Cor. xiii. 10. 12) when we are admitted to see God face to face, so those things which were foreshown in shadows to the Jews in the Old Testament, have passed away, now that the substance has been revealed to us in the New.

But that the Law itself is good, although it is called a Ministration of death, is obvious from what the same Apostle says in his Epistle to the Romans. (Rom. vii. 6—13, where see note.) See also S. Augustine, contra Faustum Manichæum, xix. 7.

On the perversion of this doctrine of St. Paul by the Antinomians and Anabaptists, and others of later days, see the Seventh Article of the Church of England, "The Old Testament is not contrary to the New," &c., and the Expositions of Dr. Hey, Professor Browne, and others on that Article.

13—16. πρὸς τὸ μὴ ἀτενίσαι—περιαιρεῖται τὸ κάλυμμα] in order that the children of Israel might not stedfastly look, or penetrate with the glance of their eyesight (see Acts i. 10; iii. 4; vii. 55), to the end of that dispensation which was evanescent.

The force of the expression πρὸς τὸ, in order that, and of what follows, cannot be understood without reference to the facts of the history. (Exod. xxxiv. 29—35.)

After the making of the golden calf (Exod. xxxii. 1—6), and the breaking of the two Tables of stone written with the finger of God (xxxi. 18; xxxii. 15, 16. 19), and the murmuring of the people (xxxiii. 4, 5), and the hewing of two other Tables of stone which Moses took up with him into the mount (xxxiv. 1—5), and the fast of forty days and forty nights, and the writing of the Commandments upon them by the hand of Moses (xxxiv. 27, 28), Moses came down from Mount Sinai, and was not conscious of the glory of his countenance, and Aaron and the children of Israel were afraid to come near him. But he called them to him, and Aaron and the rulers returned to him, and he talked with them; and afterwards the children of Israel came nigh, and he declared to the people all that God had spoken with him in the mount. See the passage in the LXX, as cited on v. 7.

It was not till he had ceased speaking to them, that Moses put a veil on his face (see v. 33 as it is in the original Hebrew, and in the Septuagint quoted on v. 7). And when he returned to speak to the Lord he drew off the veil, and kept it off till he came back to speak to the people; and they saw that his face shone, and Moses drew on the veil till he went back to God.

It is evident, therefore, that after he came down from Sinai with the two Tables, Moses spoke to Aaron, the Rulers, and People without any veil on his face, and that he did not put the veil on, till he had rehearsed to them the Commandments.

They received the Decalogue from him while his face shone brightly with the glory reflected from the vision of God. The Law was given in glory. It was a glorious Revelation from God. But they to whom it was given were a rebellious and stiffnecked people (see Exod. xxxiii. 5; xxxiv. 9), as he himself knew and said. If they had been pure in heart, if they had been obedient to God, they would have been able to see the divine glory, they would not have been dazzled by the brightness of his countenance. It was the God of this world who blinded their minds (τὰ νοήματα) because of their unbelief. See what St. Paul himself says in the next chapter, iv. 4. Satan, whose service they preferred to God's, blinded their eyes that they could not look at the glory of God.

Moses therefore punished them for their hardness of heart. After that he had declared God's Law with his face uncovered, and showing by its brightness the glory of that Law of which he was a Minister, and the glory of that God Whose Law he declared, and Whose glory beamed in his countenance, he put a veil on his face, in order to reprove and condemn the people for their moral and spiritual blindness, and in order that they might not see to the end of that which was evanescent; in order that they might not see his own entrance into God's presence, when his countenance would be uncovered by the removal of the veil from his face, and God's glory would beam upon it.

This act of Moses was prophetic and typical;

It showed that there was no reserve or disguise on the part of God.

He sent the Lawgiver down from the mountain with the Two Tables in his hand, and his face resplendent with divine glory. Moses did not then veil his countenance of his own accord; no, he wist not even that it shone. But the People were dazzled with its glory. They were blinded by that brightness, of which Moses himself was unconscious; and were unable to look on the reflection of that which he had seen face to face. A proof of their unholiness and disobedience. No wonder, for they had just been guilty of idolatry and impurity (Exod. xxxii. 6—9).

However, he proclaimed to them the Law, in the first instance at least, without any veil on his face. But when he had done so, he put on a veil, to denote their blindness in not considering, and their stubbornness in disobeying, the Law, and in order to punish that blindness and stubbornness. He did so in order that they might not see to the end of the Law. He punished them for their blindness, by darkness, according to the words of God to the prophet (Isa. vi. 9, 10), "Hear ye, but understand not; see ye, but perceive not. Make the heart of this people fat, and make their ears heavy, and shut their eyes; lest they see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and convert, and be healed." He put a veil on his face, that they might not see to the end of his revelation in the presence of God,—ἵνα μὴ βλέπωσιν (says Chrys.), οὐ γὰρ ἐχώρουν, ὥστε ἐκείνων ἐλάττωμα τοῦτο,—and thus intimated that they would be punished for their blindness by not being able to pierce with their spiritual eyesight, and to discern (says Theodoret) the end of the Law, which is CHRIST (Rom. x. 4. Col. ii. 17); for to Him the Law tends, and in Him it terminates, and is fulfilled. There was no failing in God, nor in Moses, nor in the Law. The Apostle (says Chrys.) does not disparage the Law, nor Moses, but he censures the unbelief of the Jews. God illumined the countenance of Moses with His own Glory, and Moses delivered the Law, and his countenance shone, while he held the Tables in his hand, and rehearsed them to the People. But (ἀλλὰ, v. 14) their minds (νοήματα, cp. iv. 4) were blinded (ἐπωρώθησαν), γνώσει τῆς παλαιᾶς διαθήκης μένει μὴ ἀνακαλυπτόμενον, ὅτι ἐν Χριστῷ καταργεῖται, 15 ἀλλ' ἕως σήμερον, ἡνίκα ἀναγινώσκεται Μωϋσῆς, κάλυμμα ἐπὶ τὴν

m Rom. 11. 23, 26. καρδίαν αὐτῶν κεῖται, 16 m ἡνίκα δ' ἂν ἐπιστρέψῃ πρὸς Κύριον, περιαιρεῖται τὸ κάλυμμα.
n John 4. 24. 17 n Ὁ δὲ Κύριος τὸ Πνεῦμά ἐστιν· οὗ δὲ τὸ Πνεῦμα Κυρίου, ἐλευθερία.
o 1 Cor. 13. 12. ch. 5. 7. 18 o Ἡμεῖς δὲ πάντες ἀνακεκαλυμμένῳ προσώπῳ τὴν δόξαν Κυρίου κατοπτριζόμενοι τὴν αὐτὴν εἰκόνα μεταμορφούμεθα ἀπὸ δόξης εἰς δόξαν, καθάπερ ἀπὸ Κυρίου Πνεύματος.

veiled with a thick and callous film of spiritual blindness (see Mark iii. 5; vi. 52), because of their unbelief. The Veil, therefore, which Moses put on his face, was typical of their sin and punishment. It was significant of the veil which was on their hearts, and which still remains, even to this day, on the hearts of the Jews in reading the Old Testament, because (ὅτι) that veil can only be done away by faith in Christ; and because they do not believe, and because they do not read the Old Testament illumined by the light of the Gospel. Cp. Clem. Alexandrin. Strom. iv. p. 541, ἄχρι τῆς σήμερον ἡμέρας τὸ αὐτὸ κάλυμμα τοῖς πολλοῖς ἐπὶ τῆς ἀναγνώσεως τῆς παλαιᾶς διαθήκης μένει, μὴ ἀνακαλυπτόμενον κατὰ τὴν πρὸς τὸν Κύριον ἐπιστροφήν.

But Moses drew off the veil from his face, when he returned to God, and entered the presence of the Lord, and his countenance shone with His glory; and thus he typically showed that when the people would return to God, the veil would be drawn off from their hearts, and they would be able to see stedfastly (ἀτενίσαι) to the end of the glory of the Law, consummated and glorified in Christ.

How transcendently glorious, therefore, is the Ministry of the Gospel (argues the Apostle), which is not only luminous in itself, but irradiates the Law with its splendour!

16. περιαιρεῖται] the veil is being removed. By the present tense he indicates what is always going on; and he intimates the certainty of the future total removal of the veil from the Jewish heart; when it will turn to Christ. Rom. xi. 26.

17. Ὁ δὲ Κύριος τὸ Πνεῦμά ἐστιν] But the Lord Jehovah, with whom Moses spake, is the Holy Ghost, Who writes the New Covenant, of which we are Ministers, on the heart. A proof of the Divinity of the Holy Ghost. He is speaking of the Paraclete, and calls Him God. (Chrys.) The Spirit is here plainly said to be the Lord, that is, Jehovah, with Whom Moses spake. See Bp. Pearson (Art. viii. p. 590), and Dr. Barrow (Serm. xxxiv. vol. v. p. 161).

— πνεῦμα Κυρίου] the Spirit of the Lord. The Holy Ghost is called the LORD in this verse. "The Lord" Jehovah, with whom Moses spake, "is the Holy Ghost," and now He is called "the Spirit of the Lord." The reason is because the Holy Ghost is God, and also proceeds from God (John xiv. 16; xv. 26). He is the Lord, and He is the Spirit of the Lord. Cp. Bp. Pearson, Art. viii. pp. 599—609.

— ἐλευθερία] is Liberty. We are not like the Jews under a Law (says Augustine, de Continentiâ, c. 3) which commands what is good, but does not enable to do it; but we are under Grace, which makes us love what the Law commands, and is the Law of those who are Free. And see Aug. de Spirit. et Literâ, c. 10; de Naturâ et Grat. c. 57. (A Lapide.) Elz. prefixes the word ἐκεῖ before ἐλευθερία, but it is not found in A, B, C, D*, nor in ℵ, and probably it ought to be cancelled.

Our Liberty, whether of Glory or Grace, whether from the guilt of sin in our Justification, or from the dominion of sin in our Sanctification, is purchased for us by the Blood of Christ, and is revealed to us in the preaching of the Gospel, which is therefore called the Law of Liberty, and is conveyed to us invariably and effectually by the Spirit of God and of Christ, which is therefore called a free Spirit (Ps. li. 12); for where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is Liberty. Bp. Sanderson, iii. p. 276.

18. Ἡμεῖς δὲ πάντες] But we all. Under the Law Moses alone partook of the glory, his face alone shone; but under the Gospel, not only the faces of its Ministers, but of all the people who believe through their Ministry, shine with divine glory. (Theodoret.) Πάντες, Antitheton ad unum Mosen (Bengel). As Isaiah says (lx. 1) to the Church Universal, "Arise, shine, for thy Light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee."

— κατοπτριζόμενοι] beholding the glory of the Lord Jehovah as in a glass. Κατοπτριζόμενοι signifies—

(1) To look into a glass and see one's self. See Artemidor. ii. 7. Diog. Laert. in Socr. ii. 33, ἠξίου νέους συχνῶς κατοπτρίζεσθαι, and other passages in Wetstein.

(2) To look in a mirror, and see any object reflected in it. See Philo, Alleg. p. 79, μηδὲ κατοπτρισαίμην ἐν ἄλλῳ τινὶ τὴν σὴν ἰδέαν ἢ ἐν σοὶ τῷ θεῷ. Loesner, p. 304; and Meyer, p. 77; and Winer, p. 227.

And this is the sense here. As Augustine says (de Trin. xv. 8), "Per speculum videntes, in speculo intuentes."

But where do we all see the glory of the Lord reflected as in a κάτοπτρον or glass?

The answer is, In CHRIST; Him Whom we preach. In Him we see the glory as of the only-begotten of the Father. (John i. 14.) He that hath seen Him, hath seen the Father. (John xiv. 9.) He, as the Apostle says in the next chapter (which explains this passage), is the Image of God (2 Cor. iv. 4), εἰκὼν τοῦ Θεοῦ. He is the Image of the Invisible God. (Col. i. 15.) The brightness (ἀπαύγασμα) of His Father's Glory, the express Image of His Person. (Heb. i. 3.) And He is our "Emmanuel," "God with us," "God manifest in our Flesh."

This is the sense in which St. Paul's words here were understood by his fellow-labourer, S. Clement, Bishop of Rome, who adopting the Apostle's language, thus writes in his Epistle to the Corinthians, c. 36:—

By means of Christ we gaze stedfastly (ἀτενίζομεν, St. Paul's word here, vv. 7. 13) into the depths of heaven; by means of Him we see in a glass (ἐνοπτριζόμεθα, cp. St. Paul's κατοπτριζόμενοι) His pure and majestic countenance; by His means the eyes of our hearts have been opened, and our foolish and darkened mind sprouts upward (ἀναθάλλει) to His glorious Light; the Lord of all wills us to taste by Him of His immortal knowledge, for He is the brightness (ἀπαύγασμα) of His Majesty. S. Clement.

Therefore the Apostle says, As Moses with face unveiled went into the presence of Jehovah, so we all, the veil being taken off from our hearts by the Spirit, behold the glory of Jehovah reflected, as in a mirror, in Christ revealed to us in the Gospel. And, as the Apostle himself explains his meaning in the next chapter, v. 6, God shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, in the face of Jesus Christ, Who is the Image of God. (iv. 4.)

And not only so, but by reason of His Incarnation and of our baptismal Incorporation into Him, we are being transfigured (μεταμορφούμεθα) into the same image of God that we see in Him (on the accusative εἰκόνα after μεταμορφούμεθα, see Meyer, and compare Rom. viii. 29); we are made partakers of the divine Nature in Him (2 Pet. i. 4); being baptized into Him, we have put on the new man which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness (Eph. iv. 24), and are transformed by the renewing of our mind (Rom. xii. 2), and have put on the new man, and are renewed after the Image of Him who created Him (Col. iii. 10); and labour and pray for grace to follow His example (John xiii. 15. 1 Pet. ii. 21), that the same mind may be in us as was in Him (Phil. ii. 5). And we have hope that He will change our vile body also, so as to be fashioned (σύμμορφον) like unto His glorious body (Phil. iii. 21); and that when He shall appear, we may be like Him (1 John iii. 2).

The Jews were not able to gaze at the divine glory even when reflected in Moses; they were dazzled and blinded by it, and could not ἀτενίσαι its splendour. But we all are enabled by the Spirit to see the Glory itself. And, besides, we are transfigured into it. This was more evident when miracles and supernatural spiritual gifts were vouchsafed to the Church. But even now the eyes of the faithful may see gleams of the divine glory. When we are baptized the soul receives new rays from heaven, being cleansed by the Spirit; and we not only see the glory of God, but receive some lustre from it, as silver receives the rays of the Sun and reflects them. Chrysostom.

St. Paul shows that the veil on the face of Moses was a type of the veil on the hearts of the Jews; for Moses is not now discerned by them with the heart, as he was not then with the eye... The Jews did not understand their own Sacraments (the Passover, the Manna, the smitten Rock, &c.), because the veil was on their hearts, which did not see Christ. But when the Jew turns to God, the veil will be removed. He has now on his heart the veil typified by that of Moses, but he will perceive Christ to

IV. [1] [a] Διὰ τοῦτο ἔχοντες τὴν διακονίαν ταύτην, καθὼς ἠλεήθημεν, οὐκ ἐγκακοῦμεν, [2] [b] ἀλλ' ἀπειπάμεθα τὰ κρυπτὰ τῆς αἰσχύνης, μὴ περιπατοῦντες ἐν πανουργίᾳ, μηδὲ δολοῦντες τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἀλλὰ τῇ φανερώσει τῆς ἀληθείας συνιστάντες ἑαυτοὺς πρὸς πᾶσαν συνείδησιν ἀνθρώπων, ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ.

[3] [c] Εἰ δὲ καὶ ἔστι κεκαλυμμένον τὸ εὐαγγέλιον ἡμῶν, ἐν τοῖς ἀπολλυμένοις ἐστὶ κεκαλυμμένον, [4] [d] ἐν οἷς ὁ θεὸς τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου ἐτύφλωσε τὰ νοήματα a 1 Cor. 7. 25. b ch. 2. 17. 1 Thess. 2. 3, 5. ch. 6. 4. c 1 Cor. 1. 18. ch. 2. 15. d Isa. 6. 10. John 12. 31, 40, 45. & 14. 9, 30. ch. 3. 8, 9, 18. Col. 1. 15. Heb. 1. 3.

---

have been preached by Moses, when he turns to the faith of Christ. But we, with eyes unveiled, that is, of the heart (which is veiled to the Jew), contemplate Christ, and are transfigured by the same image from glory (i. e. from that glory by which Moses was transfigured) to glory, i. e. of Christ, or (it may be) from the glory of the life of grace on earth, to the glory of the life immortal in heaven. Tertullian (c. Marcion. v. 11).

— καθάπερ ἀπὸ Κυρίου Πνεύματος] as from the Lord, the Spirit; i. e. as might be reasonably expected from the divine energy, and vivifying power, and gracious loving-kindness of Him Who is no other than the Almighty and Everlasting LORD JEHOVAH (the Everlasting I AM, the Author of all life and being), and therefore able to do all things, and Who is also the Holy SPIRIT, whose special office it is, by His own blessed effusion, to regenerate, renew, sanctify, and transform us into the image of God in Christ. Some render these words "as by the Spirit of the Lord;" but if this had been St. Paul's meaning, he would have written ἀπὸ πνεύματος Κυρίου.

Observe how the Apostle here calls the Spirit Lord, τὸ Πνεῦμα Κύριον καλεῖ. (Chrys.) And so A. V. R. "as by the Lord the Spirit." It is hence evident that in the previous place also (v. 17) he called the Spirit Lord. Theodoret.

St. Paul had said above (v. 6) that the Spirit is the "Giver of Life" (ζωοποιεῖ). He had said also that the Lord Jehovah, Who spake to Moses, is the Holy Ghost.

See also S. Basil on the word Κύριος, the LORD JEHOVAH, predicated of the Holy Ghost by St. Paul. S. Basil's words are cited by Bp. Pearson, note (Art. viii. pp. 591, 592).

St. Paul says also that the process of transformation and transfiguration of the Christian into the divine Image, is operated by the energy of God the Holy Ghost. Cp. Rom. viii. 15—17. Gal. iv. 6. 1 Cor. vi. 17; xii. 11. 2 Cor. i. 22.

These important statements concerning the Nature and Office of the HOLY SPIRIT deserve careful consideration.

The Holy Spirit is Κύριος = יְהוָה, Jehovah, the "I AM that I AM," the ὁ ὤν, the self-existing First Cause. He is the Author and Giver of Life to the soul, ζωοποιός.

The Church Universal has embodied (against the Macedonian Heretics, the πνευματόμαχοι, who denied the Godhead of the Holy Ghost. Epiphan. Hæret. 84. Aug. Hæres. 52) these two great truths in her Creed, Πιστεύω εἰς Πνεῦμα τὸ Ἅγιον, τὸ Κύριον, καὶ Ζωοποιὸν, "I believe in the Holy Ghost, the LORD, and GIVER of LIFE." It is to be regretted, that, through the non-insertion of a comma after LORD, this sentence of the Creed is often said and sung as if it signified that the Spirit is the Lord of Life; whereas, as the original shows, and history testifies, the word LORD was introduced by the framers of the Creed, in order to declare that the Holy Ghost is the LORD JEHOVAH.

CH. IV. 1. οὐκ ἐγκακοῦμεν] we faint not. So A, B, D*, F, G, and so ℵ. Elz. has ἐκκακοῦμεν; the same variety as in Luke xviii. 1. 2 Cor. iv. 16. Gal. vi. 9. Eph. iii. 13. 2 Thess. iii. 13. The former seems more appropriate here. The metaphor is from military life. (See above, ii. 14, and below, iv. 7.) We do not act as cowards (κακοί) and deserters; we do not swerve from the post of service in which we have been stationed by the Captain of our Salvation, Who enlisted us under His banner (2 Tim. ii. 4) at our baptism; however hard, painful, and perilous the service may be (i. 8), we do not abandon our colours, οὐκ ἐκκακοῦμεν, no, nor do we faint in and under our afflictions, οὐκ ἐγκακοῦμεν, but we remember that when He enlisted us, we renounced the hidden things of darkness, and so far from deserting our standard, or fainting under it, we fight boldly against our spiritual foe.

2. ἀπειπάμεθα] we renounced. Observe the aorist and middle voice; we renounced them at our Baptism; we put them far away from ourselves, ἀπερριψάμεθα (Hesych.). We cast them off from ourselves, when we enlisted under Christ's banner. On the force of this middle voice, see Winer, p. 227.

— μηδὲ δολοῦντες] nor adulterating the Word of God so as to allure. See ii. 17.

— συνιστάντες] So C, D*, F, G, and also ℵ. Some have συνιστάνοντες, others συνιστῶντες.

3. κεκαλυμμένον] veiled. He keeps up the type of the κάλυμμα, the veil on the face of Moses.

— ἐν τοῖς ἀπολλυμένοις] in those who are perishing. See ii. 15.

4. ὁ θεὸς τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου] the god of this world. The Devil. (Œcumen.) See John xii. 31; xiv. 30; xvi. 11. Eph. ii. 2; vi. 12.

— τὰ νοήματα] the understandings. See iii. 14, and notes.

How wretched, therefore (argues the Apostle), is the condition of the Infidel under the Gospel. Far worse than that of the Jews under the Mosaic Dispensation, "whose carcases fell in the wilderness." (1 Cor. x. 5.) See the comparison here with their case, as described before, iii. 14. The eyes of the Jews were blinded by Satan, that they could not see the glory of Moses; the eyes of the Infidel are blinded by Satan, that they cannot see the gospel of the Glory of Christ, Who is the Image of God, Whose Glory reveals itself to the eyes of the faithful in the countenance of Jesus Christ. (v. 6.)

And therefore the case of the Jew rejecting Christ is far more desperate than that of those who rebelled against Moses, and perished in the desert. See this comparison more fully developed in the Epistle to the Hebrews, ii. 1—3; xii. 18—25.

This intellectual and spiritual blindness of Unbelief is the punishment inflicted by retributive justice on the moral pravity of those who do not use their faculties, whether of mind or body, in obedience to the Law of God Who gave them, and to His glory. "Deus his qui non credunt sed nullificant (ἀθετοῦσιν) Eum, infert cæcitatem" (Irenæus). And he quotes this passage of St. Paul, and Rom. i. 28, Because they would not retain God in their knowledge, He gave them up to a reprobate mind; and 2 Thess. ii. 10—12.

As S. Augustine says (c. Julian. Pelagian. v. 3), "Cæcitas cordis, quam solus removet Illuminator Deus, et peccatum est, quo in Deum non creditur, et pœna peccati, quâ cor superbum dignâ animadversione punitur, et causa peccati cùm mali aliquid cæci cordis errore committitur." And in Ps. ii., "Ira Dei est mentis obscuratio, quæ consequitur eos qui legem Dei transgrediuntur." And in Serm. 117, "Vindicat Deus in animâ aversâ à se exordio pœnarum, ipsâ cæcitate; qui enim avertit se à lumine vero, jam cæcus efficitur. Nondum sentit pœnam, sed jam habet."

The origin of spiritual blindness is Disobedience. Disobedience to God's will, however made known to men, whether by Reason and Conscience (the Law written in our hearts), or in Holy Scripture, is always punished by Him with spiritual blindness.

This Disobedience shows itself in two ways;

(1) By lusts of the flesh, such as uncleanness, covetousness, and the like; and

(2) By intellectual and spiritual sins, such as pride of reason, want of attention to evidence, wilfulness, self-love, self-conceit, self-sufficiency, restless eagerness for self-display, desire of worldly glory and pre-eminence, impatience of neglect, resentment, and contempt of others.

Here was the cause of the fall of Angels, who disobeyed the law of their being, which was obedience to God. Here was the cause of the blindness of Heathenism: The prince of the power of the air worked in the children of disobedience. (Eph. ii. 2. Cf. Rom. i. 21. Eph. iv. 18.) Their blindness was the judicial penalty inflicted upon them for turning away their eyes from the true light, which is God.

Here was the cause of the blindness of the Israelites in the wilderness; they would not rejoice in the light which shone from the pillar of fire, but took up the tabernacle of Moloch, and the star of their god Remphan, whose name is Blindness. (See on Acts vii. 43.)

The practical conclusion from these facts is:

In all systems of Morals and Theology, there must be the fundamental principle, that God is the only source of light to the soul. As in the natural world, it is not so much the eye which is the cause of vision,—for it cannot see in the dark,—but it is the sun in the heavens, which by its luminous beams paints pictures on the retina; and these pictures are the only means by which the mind is enabled to hold converse with the visible world; so is it in the spiritual universe. Christ, the Sun of Righteousness, τῶν ἀπίστων, εἰς τὸ μὴ αὐγάσαι τὸν φωτισμὸν τοῦ εὐαγγελίου τῆς δόξης τοῦ Χριστοῦ, ὅς ἐστιν εἰκὼν τοῦ Θεοῦ. [5] [e]Οὐ γὰρ ἑαυτοὺς κηρύσσομεν, ἀλλὰ Χριστὸν Ἰησοῦν Κύριον, ἑαυτοὺς δὲ δούλους ὑμῶν διὰ Ἰησοῦν. [6] [f]ὅτι ὁ Θεὸς ὁ εἰπὼν ἐκ σκότους φῶς λάμψαι, ὃς ἔλαμψεν ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις ἡμῶν, πρὸς φωτισμὸν τῆς γνώσεως τῆς δόξης τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν προσώπῳ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.

[7] [g]Ἔχομεν δὲ τὸν θησαυρὸν τοῦτον ἐν ὀστρακίνοις σκεύεσιν, ἵνα ἡ ὑπερβολὴ τῆς δυνάμεως ᾖ τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ μὴ ἐξ ἡμῶν, [8] ἐν παντὶ θλιβόμενοι ἀλλ' οὐ στενοχωρούμενοι, ἀπορούμενοι ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐξαπορούμενοι, [9] [h]διωκόμενοι ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐγκαταλειπόμενοι, καταβαλλόμενοι ἀλλ' οὐκ ἀπολλύμενοι, [10] [i]πάντοτε τὴν νέκρωσιν τοῦ Ἰησοῦ ἐν τῷ σώματι περιφέροντες, ἵνα καὶ ἡ ζωὴ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ ἐν τῷ σώματι ἡμῶν φανερωθῇ. [11] [k]Ἀεὶ γὰρ ἡμεῖς οἱ ζῶντες εἰς θάνατον παραδιδό-

e ch. 1. 24.
f Gen. 1. 3. & 14. 15. Ps. 74. 16. & 136. 7—9. Acts 7. 55, 56. Eph. 5. 8. 1 Pet. 2. 9.
g ch. 5. 1. 1 Cor. 2. 5. 2 Cor. 3. 5. & 12. 9.
h Heb. 13. 5, 6. Ps. 37. 24. i Rom. 8. 17. Gal. 6. 17. Phil. 3. 10. 2 Tim. 2. 11, 12. 1 Pet. 4. 13. ch. 1. 5. k Ps. 44. 22. Rom. 8. 36. 1 Cor. 4. 9. & 15. 31, 49.

---

illumines the spiritual iris with His divine rays, which pass through the lens and penetrate the pupil of the inner eye, and delineate images on the camera obscura of the soul. But unless He does this work, and unless the spiritual organ and optic nerve of the heart is rightly disposed by obedience, and quickened by the Spirit of God to receive this illumination, all is dark within. The commandment of the Lord is pure, and giveth light unto the eyes. (Ps. xix. 8.) When Thy word goeth forth, it giveth light and understanding unto the simple. (Ps. cxix. 130. Prov. vi. 23.) Open Thou mine eyes, that I may see the wondrous things of Thy law. (Ps. cxix. 18.)

This spiritual illumination is vouchsafed only to those who obey God: If any man will do His will, he shall know of the doctrine. (John vii. 17.)

If this light is not vouchsafed, spiritual darkness prevails. The inner eye is blinded by the Evil One; it cannot see the things of the Spirit, which are spiritually discerned. (1 Cor. ii. 14.)

— εἰκὼν τοῦ Θεοῦ] the Image of God. On this phrase as applied to Christ, see on Col. i. 15.

6. λάμψαι] A, B, D* have the future tense, λάμψει, and so ℵ and Lachmann.

7. ἐν ὀστρακίνοις σκεύεσιν] in earthen vessels,—vases of terra cotta,—κεραμικά.

On the word σκεῦος see Mark xi. 16. John xix. 29. Rom. ix. 21. 2 Tim. ii. 20. σκεύη κεραμικὰ, Rev. ii. 27. Cp. Rev. xviii. 12. The human body is fitly so called, being formed from the earth, χοϊκὸν (1 Cor. xv. 47. 49. Gen. ii. 7; iii. 19), and feeble and fragile as a vessel of clay, and destined for the dust (Job iv. 19; xiii. 12).

As to the treasure in vessels of clay, earthenware, cp. Pers. ii. 10:

"O si
Sub rastro crepet argenti mihi seria!"

It may be, that St. Paul, in describing the progress of the Gospel preached by his Ministry, still keeps up the military metaphor (see above, iv. 1), and has here in his mind the circumstances of a Triumphal Procession (ii. 14), in which it was usual to carry vessels (θησαυροὶ) filled with gold and silver coin ('stips'), which were dispensed by the Conqueror. See the description, in Plutarch, of the Triumph of Paulus Æmilius, where he says: "Next went those who carried the gold coin in vessels which held three talents each, like those that contained the silver, and which were to the number of seventy-seven."

We (says the Apostle) carry the treasure of Christ; we bear it through the world, in its triumphal progress; we dispense it to the people; but we bear it, not in vessels of gold and silver,—like those in which the treasure of earthly Conquerors is borne,—but in vessels of clay; in order that the excellency of the power of what we dispense in the Ministry of the Word and Sacraments may be, and be seen to be, of God, and not of men.

— ἵνα] in order that. The conjunction ἵνα marks God's providential design, in committing His spiritual treasure to frail men, as its depositories and dispensers. On this use of ἵνα, see 1 Cor. i. 15; xi. 19, and Winer, § 53, p. 408; and cp. Philem. 13.

St. Paul is here replying to an objection of his adversaries, and is showing that his afflictions and distresses were no proofs of God's displeasure, but that the cause of the Gospel, and God's glory, and his own salvation, and that of his hearers, were promoted thereby. See above on i. 9.

God chose Fishermen and Publicans to be the first Preachers of the Gospel; in order that it might be seen, by the weakness of the instruments used, and by the greatness of the work done by their means, that the effect was not due to the human instruments, but to the Divine Agent Who wrought by them. See 1 Cor. i. 27—29.

Herein is the power of God magnified, when He works mighty things by weak means. His strength is perfected in our weakness. (2 Cor. xii. 9.) Chrys.

God is pleased to work by human means, even in the most signal manifestations of His mercy,—such as the reception of Saul into the Church at Damascus, and of Cornelius, the first-fruits of the Gentile world, at Cæsarea. Although He had called the one by the mouth of Jesus Christ Himself from heaven, and the other by an Angel, yet He sent them both to hear the Word, and receive the Sacrament of Baptism from the hands of men. See above on Acts ix. 6.

So, in the ordinary dispensations of His gifts to the soul, He uses the simplest elements; the element of Water in Baptism, the creatures of Bread and Wine in the Holy Communion. He consigns the golden treasure of Regeneration and Renewal to those earthen vessels—those fictile urns—in order that from the greatness of the gift bestowed, and from the simplicity of that in which it is conveyed, all may see and confess that the excellency of the Gift is of God.

8. θλιβόμενοι ἀλλ' οὐ στενοχωρούμενοι] afflicted but not distressed. Our enemies θλίβουσιν, affligunt nos, they press on us, and would stifle and strangle us, but we are not angustiati, reduced to distress by them, we have great spiritual εὐρυχωρία, room wide enough, and large enough; for our hearts are enlarged by Christian Love (vi. 11); the Word of God which we preach is not bound (2 Tim. ii. 9), our heart is in heaven; cp. Acts xvi. 25. See below, Rom. ii. 9; viii. 35.

— καταβαλλόμενοι] struck down, as with a dart. A. V. R.

10. πάντοτε τὴν νέκρωσιν τοῦ Ἰησοῦ ἐν τ. σ. περιφέροντες] always bearing about the putting to death of Jesus: "mortificationem Jesu." Iren. v. 13. Cp. Tertullian c. Marcion. v. 11, and see Primasius here.

Observe, he does not say τὸν θάνατον, the death of Jesus, but τὴν νέκρωσιν, the putting to death, the Crucifixion.

We who die daily (1 Cor. xv. 31) for Christ, and are being killed all the day long (Rom. viii. 36) for His sake, and are in deaths oft (xi. 23), and are crucified to the world (Gal. vi. 14), and by the world, and are conformed to the likeness of Christ's Death, in order that we may also be conformed to the likeness of His Resurrection (Rom. vi. 5), we bear about and display to the world the Crucifixion of Christ in our own bodies: we bear it about, not as a thing of which we are ashamed, but in which we glory, as the very cause of all our hope and joy.

What is the putting to death of Jesus which the Apostle bare about with him? It is the death by which he died daily, by which he also preached the Resurrection. Christ's power is shown by the ability He gives us to die daily, and by the deliverances which He works for us. Chrysostom.

— ἵνα καὶ ἡ ζωὴ] in order that the life also of Jesus may be made manifest in our body. For if we suffer with Him, we shall also reign with Him. 2 Tim. ii. 12. Rom. viii. 17. 36. 38. 2 Cor. vi. 9.

S. Irenæus hence proves the doctrine of the Resurrection of the Body. The sufferings which the Apostle endured in the Body, preached his belief in its future glory. Cp. on 1 Cor. xv. 32; and Tertullian c. Marcion. vii.: "Hæc fictilia vasa, in quibus tanta nos pati dicit Apostolus, in quibus etiam mortificationem circumferimus Domini, hanc substantiam Deus resuscitaturus est, in quâ pro fide Ejus tot tolerantur, in quâ mors Christi circumfertur."

11. οἱ ζῶντες] we that live are daily being delivered, παραδιδόμεθα (present); the very essence of our life is to die daily for Christ.

μεθα διὰ Ἰησοῦν, ἵνα καὶ ἡ ζωὴ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ φανερωθῇ ἐν τῇ θνητῇ σαρκὶ ἡμῶν· 12 [l] ὥστε ὁ θάνατος ἐν ἡμῖν ἐνεργεῖται, ἡ δὲ ζωὴ ἐν ὑμῖν. l 1 ch. 13. 9.

13 [m] Ἔχοντες δὲ τὸ αὐτὸ πνεῦμα τῆς πίστεως, κατὰ τὸ γεγραμμένον, Ἐπί- m Ps. 116. 10. ch. 3. 12.
στευσα, διὸ ἐλάλησα· καὶ ἡμεῖς πιστεύομεν, διὸ καὶ λαλοῦμεν, 14 [n] εἰδότες n Rom. 8. 11. 1 Cor. 6. 14.
ὅτι ὁ ἐγείρας τὸν Κύριον Ἰησοῦν καὶ ἡμᾶς σὺν Ἰησοῦ ἐγερεῖ, καὶ παραστήσει see Acts 2. 24.
σὺν ὑμῖν. 15 [o] Τὰ γὰρ πάντα δι' ὑμᾶς, ἵνα ἡ χάρις πλεονάσασα διὰ τῶν πλει- o ch. 1. 6, 11. 2 Tim. 2. 10. ch. 9. 11.
όνων τὴν εὐχαριστίαν περισσεύσῃ εἰς τὴν δόξαν τοῦ Θεοῦ. p Rom. 7. 22. Eph. 3. 16. Col. 3. 10. 1 Pet. 3. 4.

16 [p] Διὸ οὐκ ἐγκακοῦμεν· ἀλλ' εἰ καὶ ὁ ἔξω ἡμῶν ἄνθρωπος διαφθείρεται, ἀλλ' q Ps. 30. 5. Rom. 8. 18.
ὁ ἔσωθεν ἀνακαινοῦται ἡμέρᾳ καὶ ἡμέρᾳ. 17 [q] Τὸ γὰρ παραυτίκα ἐλαφρὸν τῆς 1 Pet. 1. 6. θλίψεως ἡμῶν καθ' ὑπερβολὴν εἰς ὑπερβολὴν αἰώνιον βάρος δόξης κατεργάζεται r Rom. 8. 24. Heb. 11. 1.
ἡμῖν, 18 [r] μὴ σκοπούντων ἡμῶν τὰ βλεπόμενα, ἀλλὰ τὰ μὴ βλεπόμενα· τὰ γὰρ a J. b 4. 19. & 19. 25, 26.
βλεπόμενα πρόσκαιρα, τὰ δὲ μὴ βλεπόμενα αἰώνια. V. 1 [a] Οἴδαμεν γὰρ, ὅτι, Ps. 56. 9. 2 Tim. 1. 12.
ἐὰν ἡ ἐπίγειος ἡμῶν οἰκία τοῦ σκήνους καταλυθῇ, οἰκοδομὴν ἐκ Θεοῦ ἔχομεν, 2 Pet. 1. 13, 14.
οἰκίαν ἀχειροποίητον, αἰώνιον, ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς. 2 [b] Καὶ γὰρ ἐν τούτῳ στενά- b Rom. 8. 23. 2 Esd. 2. 45.
ζομεν, τὸ οἰκητήριον ἡμῶν τὸ ἐξ οὐρανοῦ ἐπενδύσασθαι ἐπιποθοῦντες, 3 εἴ γε c 1 Cor. 15. 53—55. Rev. 3. 19. & 16. 15.
καὶ ἐνδυσάμενοι οὐ γυμνοὶ εὑρεθησόμεθα. 4 [c] Καὶ γὰρ οἱ ὄντες ἐν τῷ σκήνει Wisd. 9. 15.

---

12. ὁ θάνατος ἐν ἡμῖν—ἡ δὲ ζωὴ ἐν ὑμῖν] The Death of Martyrs is the Life of the Church; the Blood of Martyrs is the Seed of the Church. Tertullian. See on Acts viii. 1—4.

13. κατὰ τὸ γεγραμμένον] according to what is written. The Psalm which St. Paul here quotes (Ps. cxvi. 10) is one of thanksgiving, in which David praises God for his own deliverance. As David returns thanks to God for his marvellous rescue from his enemies when he was in despair, so we for our surprising deliverances from our perils.

That Psalm is happily chosen by the Church as one of the Psalms for the religious use of women on their deliverance from the pain and peril of childbirth.

14. σὺν Ἰησοῦ] with Jesus. So B, C, D, E, F, G, and Lachm., Tisch., Meyer, Alf. Elz. has διὰ Ἰησοῦ, with D, I, K, and many Cursive MSS. and Fathers.

Some Expositors interpret the words of a spiritual Resurrection, but this seems to be erroneous.

Some MSS. have ΕΓΙΡΕΙ here, but the future, ἐγερεῖ, was the reading of MSS. in the second century.

Hence Tertullian (de Resur. Carnis, c. 44), arguing for the future Resurrection of the Body, thus quotes this passage: "Scientes quòd qui suscitavit Jesum, et nos suscitabit cum Ipso, qui jam resurrexit à mortuis. Quî 'cum Ipso,' nisi quia 'cum Ipso' 'sicut Ipsum,' sapit? (i. e. σὺν αὐτῷ is equivalent to ὡς αὐτόν). Si vero sicut Ipsum, non utique sine carne."

And so Primasius understands the words σὺν Ἰησοῦ, 'similiter Jesu, si cum Eo moriamur.'

Compare 1 Cor. vi. 14, Θεὸς καὶ τὸν Κύριον ἤγειρε, καὶ ἡμᾶς ἐξεγερεῖ: and St. Paul says, Eph. ii. 6, ἡμᾶς συνήγειρεν ἐν Χριστῷ.

And hence S. Polycarp, ad Phil. c. 2: ὁ ἐγείρας αὐτὸν ἐκ νεκρῶν καὶ ἡμᾶς ἐγερεῖ, ἐὰν ποιῶμεν αὐτοῦ τὸ θέλημα.

On comparison of those passages with the present, we cannot entertain any doubt of St. Paul's meaning, which is expressed concisely so as to affirm,

(1) That we shall be raised in our bodies; and

(2) That our future Resurrection will be due to Christ's past Resurrection (see 1 Cor. xv. 20, 21), and to the fact of our being incorporated in Him, and dwelling in Him, and dying with Him. See vv. 10, 11.

(3) That He will raise us, so as to be with Jesus (cp. 1 Thess. iv. 17), and so shall we be ever with the Lord. Hence he speaks of those who are laid asleep in peace through Jesus (διὰ Ἰησοῦ), being brought together with Him (σὺν αὐτῷ). (1 Thess. iv. 14.) They who are buried with Him in baptism (Rom. vi. 4. Col. ii. 12); they who have died with Him, will live with Him (Rom. vi. 8); they who suffer with Him (Rom. viii. 17), they will also reign with Him (2 Tim. ii. 11, 12).

16. ἡμέρᾳ καὶ ἡμέρᾳ] day by day. Hebraismus. Esther iii. 4. Ps. lxviii. 19. Wetstein.

17. καθ' ὑπερβολὴν] ὑπερβολὴ, from ὑπερβάλλω, to shoot beyond; and καθ' ὑπερβολὴν εἰς ὑπερβολὴν is to be joined with the verb, as in Gal. i. 13, καθ' ὑπερβολὴν ἐδίωκον, and 2 Cor. i. 8, καθ' ὑπερβολὴν ἐβαρήθημεν.

The present, short-lived, light affliction is placed in the opposite scale, to the eternal weight of glory; and it worketh out that glory for us, as its effect, καθ' ὑπερβολὴν εἰς ὑπερβολὴν, by excess to a still greater excess. Cp. Rom. viii. 18. Matt. v. 11, 12. 1 Pet. i. 6, 7.

18. μὴ σκοπούντων ἡμῶν τὰ βλεπόμενα] while we regard not—do not fix our eyes upon, and direct our aims to—the things which are looked at, but the things which are not looked at. Observe the words here used. Things, which are looked at and discerned by the bodily eye, are not the scope of our spiritual vision. He does not say τὰ ὁρώμενα, the things which are seen, but τὰ βλεπόμενα, the things which are looked at; which is something more.

— τὰ γὰρ βλεπόμενα—αἰώνια] for the things which are looked at, are temporal, but the things which are not looked at, are eternal: a saying quoted by S. Ignatius, in his Epistle to the Romans, c. 3, where he introduces the passage with the words οὐδὲν φαινόμενον αἰώνιον, and thus marks the difference between the objective οὐ and the subjective μὴ, as here used by St. Paul: μὴ σκοπούντων ἡμῶν—μὴ βλεπόμενα. Cp. Winer, p. 429. We who walk by faith (v. 7. Rom. viii. 23—25. Heb. xi. 1—27) contemplate with our inner eye those objects which we cannot look at with our outward eye; for we know that those things which we can look at with our outward eye are only temporal, but those things which we cannot so discern are eternal. Therefore he adds, v. 1, οἴδαμεν γὰρ κ.τ.λ. As was expressed by the Author of the "Night Thoughts," in the Inscription placed at the end of the arcade in his garden, "Invisibilia non decipiunt."

Ch. V. 1. τοῦ σκήνους] of the tabernacle, in which we now dwell. See v. 4; and Bp. Middleton here, p. 472; and Winer, p. 98. The σκῆνος, or temporary tent, of the natural body on earth, is contrasted with the eternal mansion of the glorified body in heaven. Cp. St. Peter's words, 2 Pet. i. 13, 14, which form the best commentary on this text.

2. ἐπενδύσασθαι] to put on (ἐπὶ) in addition.

The glorified body will not only be an ἔνδυμα, or indumentum, but an ἐπ-ένδυμα, or super-indumentum. See v. 3, and above on 1 Cor. xv. 35, and S. Jerome ad Pammachium (tom. iv. p. 323), who says: St. Paul declares that this mortal will put on immortality; that is, that the flesh will not be annihilated, but be spiritualized, glorified, and beautified; as the human body of Christ was at the Transfiguration, when He was still recognized as before, "ut eadem membra, solis fulgore rutilantia, Apostolorum oculos præstringerent."

Therefore (he adds) St. Paul does not desire to be unclothed, but to be clothed upon; that is, not to lose his mortal flesh, but to have it super-invested with heavenly glory. "Nemo superinduitur, nisi qui antè vestitus est." And in another place he says: "Dicit Apostolus, Nolumus exspoliari sed (volumus) supervestiri, ut absorbeatur mortale hoc à vitâ, ne scilicet corpus ab animâ deseratur, sed, animâ inhabitante in corpore, fiat inclytum, quod antè inglorium erat." S. Jerome ad Marcell. iv. p. 166.

3. εἴ γε καὶ (B, D, E, F, G have εἴπερ, and so Lach.) ἐνδυσάμενοι οὐ γυμνοὶ εὑρεθησόμεθα] yes truly,—if indeed, when we have even put on our bodies again, we shall be found to be not naked. The body itself is called here an ἔνδυμα, indumentum; but the future glory of the risen body is called an ἐπ-ένδυμα (see v. 4), super-indumentum: and they who rise with the ἔνδυμα of their bodies, but without the ἐπ-ένδυμα of that glory which is στενάζομεν βαρούμενοι, ἐφ' ᾧ οὐ θέλομεν ἐκδύσασθαι, ἀλλ' ἐπενδύσασθαι, ἵνα καταποθῇ τὸ θνητὸν ὑπὸ τῆς ζωῆς.

d Isa. 29. 23. ch. 1. 22. Eph. 1. 13. & 4. 30.

5 [d] Ὁ δὲ κατεργασάμενος ἡμᾶς εἰς αὐτὸ τοῦτο Θεός, ὁ δοὺς ἡμῖν τὸν ἀρραβῶνα τοῦ Πνεύματος.

e Heb. 11. 13.

6 [e] Θαρροῦντες οὖν πάντοτε καὶ εἰδότες, ὅτι ἐνδημοῦντες ἐν τῷ σώματι ἐκδημοῦμεν ἀπὸ τοῦ Κυρίου, 7 [f] διὰ πίστεως γὰρ περιπατοῦμεν, οὐ διὰ εἴδους, 8 [g] θαρροῦμεν δὲ, καὶ εὐδοκοῦμεν μᾶλλον ἐκδημῆσαι ἐκ τοῦ σώματος, καὶ ἐνδημῆσαι πρὸς τὸν Κύριον. 9 Διὸ καὶ φιλοτιμούμεθα, εἴτε ἐνδημοῦντες εἴτε ἐκδημοῦντες, εὐάρεστοι αὐτῷ εἶναι. 10 [h] Τοὺς γὰρ πάντας ἡμᾶς φανερωθῆναι δεῖ ἔμπροσθεν τοῦ βήματος τοῦ Χριστοῦ, ἵνα κομίσηται ἕκαστος τὰ διὰ τοῦ σώματος, πρὸς ἃ ἔπραξεν, εἴτε ἀγαθὸν, εἴτε κακόν.

f Rom. 8. 24, 25. 1 Cor. 13. 12. ch. 3. 18.

g Phil. 1. 23.

h Ps. 62. 12. Jer. 17. 10. & 32. 19. Matt. 25. 32. Rom. 2. 6, 7. & 14. 12. 1 Cor. 22. 12. & 4. 5. Gal. 6. 5. Col. 3. 24, 25. Rev. 2. 23.

11 [i] Εἰδότες οὖν τὸν φόβον τοῦ Κυρίου, ἀνθρώπους πείθομεν, Θεῷ δὲ πεφανερώμεθα· ἐλπίζω δὲ καὶ ἐν ταῖς συνειδήσεσιν ὑμῶν πεφανερῶσθαι.

i ch. 4. 2.

12 [k] Οὐ πάλιν ἑαυτοὺς συνιστάνομεν ὑμῖν, ἀλλὰ ἀφορμὴν διδόντες ὑμῖν καυχήματος ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν, ἵνα ἔχητε πρὸς τοὺς ἐν προσώπῳ καυχωμένους, καὶ οὐ καρδίᾳ.

Jude 23.

k ch. 1. 14. & 10. 8. & 3. 1.

---

prepared for the Saints, are properly called γυμνοὶ, naked, to their endless shame. (Dan. xii. 2.) See above on 1 Cor. xv. 37, which is the best exposition of this text. They who rise to shame will have only the under garment (or tunic) of flesh; but not the upper garment (ἱμάτιον) of glory: and therefore will be γυμνοί. On this meaning of γυμνὸς, naked, see on John xxi. 7.

Similarly the word γυμνὸς in the Apocalypse describes the absence of spiritual clothing. (Rev. iii. 17, 18; xvi. 15.)

Hence Tertullian (de Res. Car. c. 4) well interprets ἐπενδύσασθαι by "superinduere virtutem cœlestem immortalitatis;" and c. Marcion. v. 12: "Mortui recipient corpus super quod induant incorruptelam de cœlo . . . . uti devoretur mortale hoc à vitâ, dum eripitur morti per superindumentum demutationis."

Similarly Chrys., Theodoret, and Theophylact explain γυμνὸς here to mean, not clothed with the garb of glory and immortality,—the marriage garment of the heavenly nuptials of Christ and His Bride the Church glorified (Iren. iv. 36. 6), which will be given to the Righteous only, and which will be like that of Christ's glorified Body (Phil. iii. 21. Iren. v. 13. 3, 4. 1 Cor. xv. 53); whereas the Wicked will be despoiled even of that corporeal beauty and grace which they had as men upon earth, and will be made like to Evil Angels in the lake of fire. Hence therefore we groan and labour here on earth, in order that we may not be despoiled by fire with the Wicked, but be superinvested with Immortality with the Righteous. Primasius.

4. τῷ σκήνει] the tabernacle of our body. See v. 1.

5. ἀρραβῶνα τ. Π.] See i. 22.

6. ἐνδημοῦντες—ἐκδημοῦμεν] we, being at home in the body, are absent from the Lord. An assertion of the separate existence of the disembodied spirits of the righteous, in a state of peace and happiness in the interval between their Death and the Resurrection. See above on Luke xxiii. 43.

7. διὰ πίστεως] by faith, as the means,—the way, which we pass through, and by which we are guided, as a traveller is by a road. Cp. Rom. viii. 24, 25. Winer, p. 339.

— οὐ διὰ εἴδους] not by the visible appearance of things; εἶδος is species, that which aspicitur, is seen. We do not walk—do not guide our steps—by the aspect of things, but by faith in their existence, although we cannot now see them. Cp. Heb. xi. 1.

10. φανερωθῆναι] to be made manifest. However now we may endeavour to disguise ourselves from the eyes of men; or however much we may be misconceived and misrepresented by them, we shall then be all displayed in our true colours, and all the secrets of all hearts will be made known, in the presence of men and angels, at the Judgment-seat of Christ.

— ἔμπροσθεν τοῦ βήματος τοῦ Χριστοῦ] before the Judgment-seat—not of an earthly judge, such as Gallio, Acts xviii. 12, but—of Christ. Hence S. Polycarp ad Phil. 6, ἀπέναντι τῶν τοῦ Κυρίου καὶ Θεοῦ ἐσμεν ὀφθαλμῶν, καὶ πάντας δεῖ παραστῆναι τῷ βήματι τοῦ Χριστοῦ, καὶ ἕκαστον ὑπὲρ ἑαυτοῦ λόγον δοῦναι.

— ἵνα κομίσηται ἕ. τὰ διὰ τοῦ σώματος] in order that each man may then receive what he has laid up in store for himself by means of his body; according to the things which he did by the same body's instrumentality when he was upon earth. See on Eph. vi. 8. Col. iii. 25. Gal. vi. 8. 2 Cor. ix. 6.

The aorist ἔπραξεν happily marks the earthly life past, as appearing then to be only like a single moment of time, compared with Eternity.

That which shall then be received will be either a reward or punishment; a reward for the good, a punishment for the evil done in the body: and that which shall receive the reward, and be liable to the punishment, is not only the soul, but the body. It stands not, therefore, with the nature of a just retribution, that he which sinned in one body should be punished in another, or that he which pleased God in his own flesh should see God with other eyes. As for the wicked, God shall destroy both their soul and body in hell (Matt. x. 28), but they which glorify God in their body and their spirit, which are God's (1 Cor. vi. 20), shall be glorified by God in their body and their spirit: for they are both bought with the same price, even the blood of Christ. (1 Cor. vi. 20.) The bodies of the Saints are the members of Christ (1 Cor. vi. 15), and no members of His shall remain in death: they are the temples of the Holy Ghost (1 Cor. vi. 19), and therefore if they be destroyed, they shall be raised again. For if the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in us, as He doth, and by so dwelling maketh our bodies temples, He which raised up Christ from the dead, shall also quicken our mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in us. (Rom. viii. 11.) Bp. Pearson.

Furthermore, the identity of the dying and rising body will appear by those bodies which shall never rise, because they shall never die. This may be considered not only in the translations of Enoch and Elias, but also in those whom Christ shall find alive at His coming, whom He shall not kill, but change. The dead in Christ shall rise first: then they which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall they ever be with the Lord. (1 Thess. iv. 16, 17.) If those which are alive shall be caught up as they are alive with the same bodies, only changed into glorified and spiritual bodies, that is, with the same bodies spiritualized and glorified, certainly those which were dead shall rise out of their graves to life in the same bodies in which they lived, that they may both appear alike before the Judge of the quick and the dead. (Acts x. 42.) Otherwise the saints, which shall be with God and with the Lamb for evermore, would be chequered with a strange disparity, one part of them appearing and continuing with the same bodies in which they lived, another part with others. Bp. Pearson on the Creed, Art. vi. p. 709.

Because it is here said that every one would be judged according to what he has actually done in the body, the Pelagians hence argued that Infants are sinless, and that there is no such thing as Original sin, or, at least, that it has no guilt, and is not liable to punishment.

But if, for argument's sake, it be allowed that St. Paul's assertion here respects Infants, which may be doubted (see viii. 12), then we may say with Aug., Epist. 217, p. 1220, "Scimus etiam parvulos secundum ea quæ per corpus gesserunt recepturos vel bonum vel malum. Gesserunt autem non per se ipsos, sed per eos quibus pro illis respondentibus et renuntiare diabolo dicuntur et credere in Deum, unde et in numero fidelium computantur, pertinentes ad sententiam Domini dicentis, 'Qui crediderit et baptizatus fuerit salvus erit.'" (Mark xvi. 16.) And by nature we are all in Adam, and we all sinned in him, and are guilty before God. See Rom. v. 12. Eph. ii. 2.

12. Οὐ πάλιν] We are not again commending ourselves to you, as your false Teachers, our rivals and adversaries, charge us with doing. See iii. 1.

13 l Εἴτε γὰρ ἐξέστημεν, Θεῷ· εἴτε σωφρονοῦμεν, ὑμῖν· 14 ἡ γὰρ ἀγάπη τοῦ Χριστοῦ συνέχει ἡμᾶς, 15 m κρίναντας τοῦτο, ὅτι εἷς ὑπὲρ πάντων ἀπέθανεν, ἄρα οἱ πάντες ἀπέθανον, καὶ ὑπὲρ πάντων ἀπέθανεν, ἵνα οἱ ζῶντες μηκέτι ἑαυτοῖς ζῶσιν, ἀλλὰ τῷ ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν ἀποθανόντι καὶ ἐγερθέντι.

16 n Ὥστε ἡμεῖς ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν οὐδένα οἴδαμεν κατὰ σάρκα· εἰ δὲ καὶ ἐγνώκαμεν κατὰ σάρκα Χριστόν, ἀλλὰ νῦν οὐκ ἔτι γινώσκομεν.

l ch. 11. 1, 16, 17. & 12. 6, 11. m Rom. 5. 15 & 6. 11, 12 & 14. 7. Gal. 2. 20. 1 Thess. 5. 10. 1 Pet. 4. 2. n Gal. 2. 5, 6. & 5. 6. & 6. 15. Col. 3. 11. 1 Tim. 5. 21, 22. James 2. 1—4. & 3. 17.

13. Εἴτε γὰρ ἐξέστημεν, Θεῷ] For if we were beside ourselves in boasting of ourselves, and so, in your eyes are chargeable with folly (see xi. 1—19; xii. 6. 11, γέγονα ἄφρων), it was not for the sake of any glory to ourselves, but to God, Whose Ministers we are, and Whose grace has made us what we are, and to Whom therefore be all the praise! (1 Cor. xv. 10. 2 Cor. iii. 5, 6.)

14. ἡ ἀγάπη τοῦ Χριστοῦ] the love which Christ showed in dying for us constraineth us to suffer gladly, even death, for you. (See Eph. v. 2.) "Walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us, and given Himself for us (ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν) an offering and a sacrifice to God. He laid down His life for us, and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren." (1 John iii. 16.) Cp. John xv. 12.

15. κρίναντας τοῦτο, ὅτι εἷς—ἄρα οἱ πάντες ἀπέθανον] the Love of Christ constraineth us, having formed this judgment, viz., because one died in the stead of all Mankind, then (ἄρα, consequently) all Mankind (οἱ πάντες, all collectively) died in Him.

Elz. has εἰ after ὅτι, but this arose from a misunderstanding of ὅτι, which means because, and is not found in the best MSS.

— εἷς ὑπὲρ πάντων ἀπέθανεν] One (i. e. Christ) died for all, as their Proxy and Substitute, in their stead.

Christ, the Second Adam, summed up all Mankind in Himself. He died for all, and all died in Him; and since He is also the Everlasting Word, the Co-eternal Son of God, and rose again from the Dead, He rescued all Mankind, whose Nature He had taken, from corruption, and raised it to Immortality. See Athanas. de Incarnatione Verbi Dei, § 9, 10, p. 44, who refers to this passage of St. Paul, and to 1 Cor. xv. 21. Heb. ii. 9—14.

It has indeed been alleged by some recent Expositors, that wherever ὑπὲρ is used in the N. T. to declare the great doctrine of the Atonement, it signifies only for the benefit of, i. e. that Christ died for the good of, Mankind, but that it never signifies that He died in the place of Mankind.

This assertion is made even by some in expounding the present passage; but

(1) It is unquestionable that ὑπὲρ is sometimes used to signify in the stead of, by St. Paul. See Philem. 13, ἵνα ὑπὲρ σοῦ διακονῇ μοι. 1 Tim. ii. 6, concerning Christ's sacrifice, δοὺς ἑαυτὸν ἀντί-λυτρον ὑπὲρ πολλῶν. See on 1 Cor. i. 13, and on 1 Cor. xv. 3, and Winer, § 47, p. 342.

(2) St. Paul's argument here would fail, if ὑπὲρ does not signify in the place of. If a person has done a thing merely for the good of others, it cannot be said that they did it; but if a person has done a thing in the place of others, as their Sponsor and Representative, it is rightly said that they did it. "Qui facit per alium, facit per se." Sponsors at Baptism renounce the Devil and profess faith in Christ not only for the good of the Child baptized, but in the place of the Child; and therefore the Child is rightly said to have renounced the Devil, and to have professed faith in Christ. So Christ—our Divine Sponsor and Proxy—died, not only for the good of Mankind, but in the place of Mankind.

Therefore the Apostle rightly concludes (which otherwise he could not have done) that all men died (ἀπέθανον) in Christ.

This is the true meaning of his words (πάντες ἀπέθανον), all died; and not, as the words are sometimes translated, all were dead; a translation at variance with the true use of the aorist ἀπέθανον, which is applied here to all men, as well as to Christ.

It is urged by those who maintain the opinion above mentioned, that if St. Paul had used ὑπὲρ as meaning in the stead of, he could not have added that He rose again (ἐγερθέντι), as he does in v. 15. For it is alleged that Christ did not rise again in our stead.

But this objection has no weight. St. Paul adds that Christ rose again as well as died; and for a very good reason, viz., to prove that Christ, Who was the Proxy of Mankind in His Death for the sins of the whole World, was accepted as such by God.

This great Doctrine of the vicarious suffering of Christ, and of the full, perfect, and sufficient sacrifice, oblation, and satisfaction which He made for us, as our Head and Representative, and that other Truth, no less important, of our Justification by our virtual Resurrection in Him, are well expressed by Dr. Barrow (Serm. xxx. vol. v. p. 69).

God, in the Death of our Lord, did manifest His wrath toward us, and execute His justice upon us. So in raising Him thence, correspondently God did express Himself appeased, and His law to be satisfied. As we in His suffering were punished (the iniquity of us all being laid upon Him, Isa. liii. 6), so in His Resurrection we were acquitted and restored to grace. As Christ did merit the remission of our sins and the acceptance of our persons by His Passion, so God did consign them to us in His Resurrection: it being that formal act of grace, whereby, having sustained the brunt of God's displeasure, He was solemnly reinstated in favour, and we representatively or virtually in Him; so that (supposing our due qualifications, and the performances requisite on our parts) we thence become completely justified; having not only a just title to what Justification doth import, but a real instatement therein, confirmed by the Resurrection of our Saviour; whence He was delivered for our offences, and raised again for our Justification. (Rom. iv. 25.)

Our Justification and Absolution are rather ascribed to the Resurrection of Christ than to the Death; for that indeed His Death was a ground of bestowing them, but His Resurrection did accomplish the collation of them. For since, the Apostle argues, God hath acknowledged satisfaction done to His justice by discharging our Surety (Christ) from restraint, and from all further prosecution,—since, in a manner so notorious, God hath declared His favour toward our Proxy,—what pretence can be alleged against us? what suspicion of displeasure can remain? Had Christ only died, we should not have been condemned, our punishment being already undergone; yet had we not been fully discharged without that express warrant and acquittance which His Rising doth imply. So may St. Paul be understood to intimate when he saith, If Christ be not raised, your faith is vain, ye are yet in your sins. (1 Cor. xv. 17.) He (saith S. Chrysostom), by His Resurrection, dissolved the tyranny of death, and with Himself raised up the whole world. By His Resurrection not only the natural body of Christ was raised, but the mystical Body also; each member of His Church was restored to life, being thoroughly rescued from the bondage of corruption, and translated into a state of immortality, so that God, saith St. Paul, hath quickened us together with Christ, and raised us together, and made us to sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. (Rom. viii. 11. 21. Eph. ii. 5, 6.)

Hence in our Baptism (wherein Justification, and a title to eternal life are exhibited to us), as the Death and Burial of Christ are symbolically undergone by us, so therein also we do interpretatively rise with Him. Being, saith St. Paul, buried with Christ in Baptism, in it we are also raised together with Him. (Col. ii. 12, 13.) And Baptism, St. Peter telleth us, being the antitype of the passage through the flood, doth save us by the Resurrection of Christ presented therein. (1 Pet. iii. 21.) Dr. Barrow.

— ἄρα οἱ πάντες ἀπέθανον] therefore all died in Him. Christ was the Representative, Proxy, and Substitute of all Mankind, and, in His Death all died; all collectively (οἱ πάντες, the all) died, were summed up in Him, and suffered Death, the penalty of the sins of all. Consequently (ἄρα) all Men died in Christ's Death.

And He died for all, in order that He might rise for all and might live for all (Heb. vii. 25), and so all might rise and live in and by Him.

We all died in Him, died to sin, died to our lusts, died to our old man: and we died, not in order that we might remain dead, but in order that we might rise again, and live in newness of life as new creatures (v. 17) in Him, and that we might live, not to ourselves, but to Him Who died and rose again for us.

And how are we to rise for Christ, and to live for Him? By showing to Him, in His Members, the same love that He showed to us; that is, by being ready to suffer for them as He suffered for us.

Therefore the Love, which Christ showed to us, constraineth us to labour for the salvation of all, by endeavouring to reconcile all to God. (v. 20.)

Thus we imitate Him in the καταλλαγὴ or At-onement which He wrought for us.

— οἱ ζῶντες] they who live by virtue of Christ's Resurrection; they who are incorporated into Him Who is the "Resurrection and the Life."

16. οὐδένα οἴδαμεν κατὰ σάρκα] we know no one according to the flesh. The words κατὰ σάρκα are opposed to κατὰ πνεῦμα, according to the spirit. See i. 17, and 1 Cor. i. 26, and iii. 3, 4.

The sense is, we regard no one according to carnal cono Rom. 8. 10. Gal. 6. 15. Rev. 21. 5. Isa. 43. 18, 19. p Rom. 5. 10. Col. 1. 20. 1 John 2. 2. & 4. 10.

q Rom. 3. 24, 25. Col. 1. 20.

17 ο Ὥστε εἴ τις ἐν Χριστῷ, καινὴ κτίσις· τὰ ἀρχαῖα παρῆλθεν, ἰδοὺ γέγονε καινὰ τὰ πάντα.

18 ρ Τὰ δὲ πάντα ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ, τοῦ καταλλάξαντος ἡμᾶς ἑαυτῷ διὰ Χριστοῦ, καὶ δόντος ἡμῖν τὴν διακονίαν τῆς καταλλαγῆς· 19 q ὡς ὅτι Θεὸς ἦν ἐν Χριστῷ siderations; we do not look at men κατὰ πρόσωπον (see v. 12), according to their outward appearance; we measure no one by mere worldly standards of secular power, learning, eloquence, or wealth; but we regard men κατὰ πνεῦμα, spiritually, and as they are in Christ, Who is no respecter of persons.

In Him all men died. For He died for all. And He died for all, in order that all might rise by the first Resurrection of the Spiritual Regeneration, and live in Him, and to Him, and so rise again to everlasting glory in the Second Resurrection at the Great Day.

All Christians are engrafted into His Body. They have arisen by "the washing of Regeneration and Renewing of the Holy Ghost." (Titus iii. 5.) The Old Man is buried in them by virtue of their Baptism, in which they have been buried with Christ, wherein also they arose with Him, that they should walk in newness of life. (Col. ii. 12. Rom. vi. 4.) Henceforth they have another conversation, another life,—that which is from above. Chrysostom.

And so Theodoret here; νεουργηθέντες διὰ τοῦ παναγίου βαπτίσματος τὸ τῆς ἁμαρτίας ἀπεξεδυσάμεθα γῆρας. And so Theophyl.

— εἰ δὲ καὶ ἐγνώκαμεν κ.τ.λ.] but if we have ever known Christ Himself according to the flesh. St. Paul is not here speaking of himself personally, but of himself as a Christian Man and Minister. He says ἡμεῖς, we; and If any one is in Christ (i. e. whosoever is in Christ) he is a new creature.

Therefore the comparison here is not between different periods in St. Paul's own life, subsequent to his conversion and ordination to the Apostleship, but between the state in which he was before and after his Baptism.

Consequently, the notions which have been built by some on this passage, as intimating a gradual development in St. Paul's Apostolic Teaching, are groundless.

His meaning is,—Before we were made Christians, the Cross was unto us a stumbling-block or foolishness. (1 Cor. i. 23.) We regarded Christ merely κατὰ σάρκα, with carnal eyes, we knew Him according to the flesh; we judged of Him, as the Jews still do in their carnal notions of a mere worldly conqueror and king; we saw Him only as a Man,—poor, despised, rejected, crucified by the Rulers of this world; we even thought it a duty to do many things contrary to the Name of Jesus of Nazareth. (Acts xxvi. 9.)

But now the scales are fallen from our eyes (Acts ix. 18); the veil has been taken from our hearts. We see the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. We glory in the Cross, and in that alone. (Gal. vi. 14. Phil. iii. 7, 8.) We know nothing but Jesus Christ, and Him crucified. (1 Cor. ii. 2.)

St. Peter himself, for a time, knew Christ only according to the flesh, when, in his carnal notions, he shrunk from the doctrine of Christ crucified, and would have deterred Him from suffering, "That be far from Thee, Lord" (Matt. xvi. 22); and he was therefore rebuked by Christ, as an offence to Him. He stumbled at the offence of the Cross; and therefore was an offence to Christ.

There is also another sense in which the Apostles might be said not to know Christ after the flesh; which is expressed by S. Leo, who observes (Serm. 69), that though Christ retained His human body after the Resurrection, yet it was become "corpus impassibile, immortale, incorruptibile, ita ut meritò dicatur caro Christi, in eo quo fuerat statu ante passionem, nesciri."

By His Resurrection and Ascension He changed and glorified that flesh which He took from us; and we in hope and expectation are already changed and glorified, because we His Members are risen in our Head. See Athanas. de Incarnat. § 10. Looking at Christians as thus transfigured in Christ, we may be said not to know them κατὰ σάρκα. And so Theoph. here.

This sense, both as regards Christ and Christians, is also adopted by Augustine c. Faustum, xi. 7. Though in another place (Serm. 5) he says, "When we knew Christ carnally, we knew Him only as Man, but now we know Him as God co-equal with the Father." And so in his 147th Epistle "de Videndo Deo," c. 35, he interprets this knowledge which is not after the flesh, as equivalent to faith in Christ.

17. εἴ τις ἐν Χριστῷ] if any one is in Christ. Cp. xii. 2, οἶδα ἄνθρωπον ἐν Χριστῷ.

— τὰ ἀρχαῖα] the old things—the original things—of our unregenerate nature (τὰ ἀρχαῖα is far more expressive than ἀρχαῖα). The old things (τὰ ἀρχαῖα), the original things of the old Adam, passed away from us, in our Baptism; they were drowned then, as Pharaoh and his host were in the Red Sea; and now all things have become and are new to us in Christ.

Observe the aorist παρῆλθεν, used to express the passing away of the old things at a particular time, i. e. in Baptism, when the Old Man was buried in us, and the New man raised up in us; and observe also the perfect tense γέγονε, used to describe the state which then succeeded, and still continues. The Apostle refers to Isa. xliii. 18, μὴ μνημονεύετε τὰ πρῶτα, καὶ τὰ ἀρχαῖα μὴ συλλογίζεσθε, ἰδοὺ ἐγὼ ποιῶ καινά. Cp. Rev. xxi. 5, ἰδοὺ καινὰ πάντα ποιῶ. And as to the sense of the perfect as distinct from the aorist, cp. above, 1 Cor. xv. 4, and below, notes on 1 John iii. 9, and on Rev. xxi. 1.

18. τοῦ καταλλάξαντος ἡμᾶς ἑαυτῷ] of Him who reconciled us to Himself through Christ.

On this subject the reader may be reminded of the following words of Bp. Pearson: We must conceive that God was angry with Mankind, before He determined to give our Saviour. We cannot imagine that God, Who is essentially just, should not abominate iniquity. The first affection we can conceive in Him upon the lapse of man, is wrath and indignation. God therefore was most certainly offended, before He gave a Redeemer; and though it be most true that He so loved the world that He gave His only-begotten Son (John iii. 16), yet there is no incongruity in this,—that a Father should be offended with that son which he loveth, and at that time offended with him when he loveth him.

Notwithstanding therefore that God loved men, whom He created, yet He was offended with them, when they sinned, and gave His Son to suffer for them; that through that Son's obedience He might be reconciled to them.

This Reconciliation is clearly delivered in the Scriptures as wrought by Christ. For all things are of God, Who hath reconciled us to Himself by Jesus Christ (2 Cor. v. 18); and that by virtue of His death; for when we were enemies, we were reconciled unto God by the death of His Son (Rom. v. 10) making peace through the blood of His cross, and by Him reconciling all things unto Himself. (Col. i. 20.)

In vain it is objected, that the Scripture saith our Saviour reconciled men to God, but nowhere teacheth that He reconciled God to man; for in the language of the Scripture, to reconcile a man to God, is in our vulgar language to reconcile God to man,—that is, to cause Him Who before was angry and offended with him, to be gracious and propitious to him. See 1 Sam. xxix. 4. Matt. v. 23, 24.

In the like manner we are said to be reconciled unto God, when God is reconciled, appeased, and become gracious and favourable unto us; and Christ is said to reconcile us unto God, when He hath moved and obtained God to be reconciled unto us, when He hath appeased Him and restored us unto His favour. Thus when we were enemies we were reconciled to God,—that is, notwithstanding He was offended with us for our sins, we were restored unto His favour by the death of His Son. (Rom. v. 10.)

Whence appeareth the weakness of the Socinian exception, that in the Scriptures we are said to be reconciled unto God; but God is never said to be reconciled unto us. For by that very expression it is understood, that he which is reconciled in the language of the Scriptures, is restored unto the favour of Him Who was formerly offended with that person which is now said to be reconciled. As when David was to be reconciled unto Saul (1 Sam. xxix. 4), it was not that David should lay down his enmity against Saul, but that Saul should become propitious and favourable unto David: and therefore, where the language is, that David should be reconciled unto Saul, the sense is, that Saul, who was exasperated and angry, should be appeased, and so reconciled unto David. Bp. Pearson (on the Creed, Art. x. p. 677). See also Grotius, de Satisfactione Christi, c. 7, and notes below on Rom. v. 10, and on 1 Tim. ii. 6, and on 1 John iv. 10.

— τὴν διακονίαν τῆς καταλλαγῆς] the Ministry of Reconciliation. This Ministry of Reconciliation, committed by Christ to the Apostles, and to the Christian Priesthood after them in succession to the end of time, is exercised,

(1) In Preaching the Word; wherein they open the kingdom of heaven by the key of knowledge.

(2) In the Sacrament of Baptism; wherein they actually receive men into the Household of God by the opened Door.

κόσμον καταλλάσσων ἑαυτῷ, μὴ λογιζόμενος αὐτοῖς τὰ παραπτώματα αὐτῶν, καὶ θέμενος ἐν ἡμῖν τὸν λόγον τῆς καταλλαγῆς.

20 [r] Ὑπὲρ Χριστοῦ οὖν πρεσβεύομεν, ὡς τοῦ Θεοῦ παρακαλοῦντος δι' ἡμῶν, δεόμεθα ὑπὲρ Χριστοῦ, καταλλάγητε τῷ Θεῷ. 21 [s] Τὸν μὴ γνόντα ἁμαρτίαν ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν ἁμαρτίαν ἐποίησεν, ἵνα ἡμεῖς γενώμεθα δικαιοσύνη Θεοῦ ἐν αὐτῷ.

r ch. 6. 1. Eph. 6. 20. Mal. 2. 7.
s Isa. 53. 6, 9, 12. Rom. 5. 19. & 8. 3. Gal. 3. 13. 1 John 3. 5. 1 Pet. 2. 22.

(3) In the Absolution of Penitent Sinners; especially in the Pardon pronounced and conveyed in, and sealed by, the Holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

The office, which they so exercise, is a Ministry (διακονία), because they only apply the means instituted by God for the salvation of men; and the virtue and efficacy of what they minister is not from them who dispense the means, but from Him Who instituted the means, and Who conveys the blessings of spiritual birth, life, health, recovery, and salvation, by the instrumentality of the means which He has appointed, and by the agency of those whom He has appointed to minister them.

See the Authorities on this subject in Theophilus Anglicanus, Part i. chaps. xiii. and xiv.

19. θέμενος ἐν ἡμῖν] having deposited for Himself the treasures of His grace in us, as in vessels chosen for that purpose—earthen and fragile though we be (iv. 7). Observe the middle voice, θέμενος.

21. μὴ γνόντα ἁμαρτίαν] Him Who did not know sin. Here μὴ, the subjective negative, is supposed by some Expositors to correct the notion of those who condemned and crucified Christ as a sinner. Winer, p. 430.

But it rather serves to indicate that, although, and even because, God knew Christ to be perfectly sinless (for unless He had been perfectly sinless, He could not have redeemed sinners), He treated Him as Sin in the abstract; in order that Christ might be "the Lord Our Righteousness, and that we might become the Righteousness of God, in Him."

— ἁμαρτίαν ἐποίησεν] The sense of this expression is to be explained from a consideration of the word ποιῶ as used in N. T.

It cannot mean that God made Christ to be sin. For how could He that is sinless become Sin in the abstract? How could He be said to have sin? Such an expression (as Aug. says, Serm. 134 and 155), "intolerabile videretur, absit!" But God treated Him, accounted Him as such, and gave Him up, sinless as He was, and known by Him as such, and even because He was sinless—for if He had been a sinner He could not have made a satisfaction for sin—to suffer as sin for our sakes, as our Proxy and Substitute. See Isa. liii. 5, 6. 9—12, "The Lord laid on Him the iniquity of us all. He bore the sin of many." Cp. Rom. viii. 3. 1 Pet. ii. 24; and above on v. 15.

The verb ἐποίησεν is here used as in John v. 18, ἴσον ἑαυτὸν ποιῶν τῷ Θεῷ: viii. 53, τίνα σεαυτὸν ποιεῖς: x. 33, σὺ ἄνθρωπος ὢν ποιεῖς σεαυτὸν Θεόν. 1 John i. 10, ψεύστην ποιοῦμεν αὐτόν. Hence S. Augustine, in applying Psalm lxix., "I paid them the things that I never took," to Christ, says, "Non peccavi, et pœnas dabam;" and that He was "delictorum susceptor, non commissor," and "delicta nostra sua fecit, ut Suam Justitiam nostram Justitiam faceret."

This interpretation seems preferable to that of some Expositors who regard ἁμαρτίαν as equivalent to a sacrifice for sin; though not without some authority from the LXX. Lev. iv. 8. 21. 24. 34; v. 9—12; vi. 23. But ἁμαρτία is here opposed by St. Paul to δικαιοσύνη.

The passage in Gal. iii. 13, where Christ is said to have been made a curse for us, has been quoted in support of the exposition that Christ was actually made to be sin. But it does not authorize such a notion as that. St. Paul explains there what he means, viz. that Christ was made the object of execration, for "cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree." But a person may be holy—and Christ is perfectly holy—and yet be subject to a curse. See Matt. v. 11. Luke vi. 22; vii. 33.

A curse is the expression of another's judgment on the person who is subject to it; but it does not alter the essential character and qualities of the person who is under the curse.

Hence Theodoret says here: "He Who was sinless suffered the death of sinners; and having been called that which we were (viz. sin), He called us that which He was (viz. Righteousness); for He gave us the riches of Righteousness as a gift." Compare Chrys. and Theoph. here; and Bp. Bull on Justification, Answer to Stricture xi. § 10; and Bp. Sanderson (iii. p. 65), who thus speaks: That alone satisfactory punishment of our blessed Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, was not at all for His own sins,—far be the impiety from us so to imagine; for He did no sin, neither was there any guile found in His mouth (1 Pet. ii. 22), but for ours. He paid that which He never took (Ps. lxix. 5); it was for our transgressions that He was wounded, and the chastisement of our peace was laid upon Him.

Yet even those meritorious sufferings of His may be said in a qualified sense to have been for His own sins; although, in my judgment, it be far better to abstain from such like speeches as are of ill and suspicious sound, though they may be in some sort defended.

But how for His own sins? His own by commission? By no means. God forbid any man should teach, any man should conceive so: the least thought of this were blasphemy, but His own by imputation. Not that He had sinned, and so deserved punishment, but that He had taken upon Him our sins (Isa. liii. 5), which deserved that punishment.

As he that undertaketh for another man's debt, maketh it his own, and standeth chargeable with it as if it were his own personal debt, so Christ, becoming surety for our sins, made them His own, and so was punishable for them, as if they had been His own personal sins, Who His own self bare our sins in His own body upon the tree. (1 Pet. ii. 24.) That He was punished for us Who Himself deserved no punishment, it was because He was made sin for us Who Himself knew no sin. (2 Cor. v. 21.) Bp. Sanderson.

— ἵνα ἡμεῖς γενώμεθα δικαιοσύνη Θεοῦ] that we might be made the Righteousness of God in Him.

This is something more than the Righteousness provided by God and accepted by Him, which is the interpretation of some Expositors. Cp. Rom. i. 17; iii. 21. 25; iv. 5; x. 3.

It is the righteousness of God, contrasted with, and taking the place of, the unrighteousness of man. It is the righteousness of God in the Second Adam, as prevailing over the unrighteousness of man in the First Adam.

Christ, God of God, took our Nature, and is God manifest in the Flesh; and having summed up all Mankind in Himself, as our Head, the Second Adam, suffered for our sins as our Representative and Proxy; and by virtue of the infinite value of the sacrifice which He in His Person, the One Christ, God as well as Man, offered for us, and of the full satisfaction which He made, He effected an Atonement, καταλλαγήν, or reconciliation between God and Man, and united us to God in Himself, being perfect God and perfect Man; and so He took away our sins; and we, by reason of His Incarnation and Death for us, and of our baptismal Incorporation and mystical indwelling in Him, are become the Righteousness of God in Him. God regards us as no longer sinners, but as having His own righteousness in Christ. God laid on Him the Sin of Mankind, in order that Mankind might become the Righteousness of God in Him who is called 'EMMANUEL,' 'God with us,' and Whose Name is, "the LORD (Jehovah) OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS." (Jer. xxiii. 5, 6.) Cp. Isa. xlv. 24, "In the LORD have I righteousness and strength; even to Him shall men come. In the Lord shall all the seed of Israel be justified." And see 1 Pet. ii. 24. 2 Pet. i. 4.

Christ is more than Jehovah our Justifier, He is Jehovah our Justice. He is made unto us by God very Righteousness itself. (1 Cor. i. 30.) And yet more, He is made Righteousness to us that we may be the Righteousness of God in Him. (2 Cor. v. 21.) Which place, S. Chrysostom, well weighing, says: "This very word δικαιοσύνη the Apostle useth to express the unspeakable bounty of the gift; that God hath not given us only the operation or effect of His Righteousness, but His very Righteousness, His very Self unto us." God made Him Who knew no sin to be sin, in order that we might be made (not righteous persons, that was not full enough, but) Righteousness itself; and there He stays not yet,—not every Righteousness, but the Righteousness of God Himself. What can be further said? What can be conceived more comfortable? Bp. Andrewes (v. p. 112).

See also Bp. Bull on Justification, Answer to Strict. xi. § 10, who however does not seem to give sufficient weight to the abstract words ἁμαρτία and δικαιοσύνη. Christ was treated not only as a sinner, but as sin in the abstract, collectively and universally, in order that all men, collectively and universally, as members of the Church Universal, which is Christ's Body, might become the Righteousness of God in Him.

See Chrys. here, who well observes: "St. Paul expresses here the quality itself. He does not say that God treated Christ as a sinner, but as sin, in order that we might become,—he does not say righteous men, but the Righteousness of God in Him."

Sometimes we meet in the Psalms with heavy complaints of the number and burden of sins; and these passages are quoted a ch. 5. 18—20. 1 Cor. 3. 9. Heb. 12. 15. b Isa. 49. 8.

VI. [1] [a] Συνεργοῦντες δὲ καὶ παρακαλοῦμεν, μὴ εἰς κενὸν τὴν χάριν τοῦ Θεοῦ δέξασθαι ὑμᾶς, [2] [b] λέγει γάρ, Καιρῷ δεκτῷ ἐπήκουσά σου, καὶ ἐν ἡμέρᾳ σωτηρίας ἐβοήθησά σοι· ἰδοὺ, νῦν καιρὸς εὐπρόσδεκτος, ἰδοὺ, νῦν ἡμέρα σωτηρίας· [3] [c] μηδεμίαν ἐν μηδενὶ διδόντες προσκοπὴν, ἵνα μὴ μωμηθῇ ἡ διακονία, [4] [d] ἀλλ' ἐν παντὶ συνιστάντες ἑαυτοὺς ὡς Θεοῦ διάκονοι, ἐν ὑπομονῇ πολλῇ, ἐν θλίψεσιν, ἐν ἀνάγκαις, ἐν στενοχωρίαις, [5] [e] ἐν πληγαῖς, ἐν φυλακαῖς, ἐν ἀκαταστασίαις, ἐν κόποις, ἐν ἀγρυπνίαις, ἐν νηστείαις, [6] ἐν ἁγνότητι, ἐν γνώσει, ἐν μακροθυμίᾳ, ἐν χρηστότητι, ἐν Πνεύματι ἁγίῳ, ἐν ἀγάπῃ ἀνυποκρίτῳ, [7] [f] ἐν λόγῳ ἀληθείας, ἐν δυνάμει Θεοῦ, διὰ τῶν ὅπλων τῆς δικαιοσύνης τῶν δεξιῶν καὶ ἀριστερῶν, [8] διὰ δόξης καὶ ἀτιμίας, διὰ δυσφημίας καὶ εὐφημίας, ὡς πλάνοι, καὶ ἀληθεῖς, [9] [g] ὡς ἀγνοούμενοι, καὶ ἐπιγινωσκόμενοι, ὡς ἀποθνήσκοντες, καὶ ἰδοὺ ζῶμεν, ὡς παιδευόμενοι, καὶ μὴ θανατούμενοι, [10] [h] ὡς λυπούμενοι, ἀεὶ δὲ χαίροντες, ὡς πτωχοὶ, πολλοὺς δὲ πλουτίζοντες, ὡς μηδὲν ἔχοντες, καὶ πάντα κατέχοντες.

c Rom. 14. 13. 1 Cor. 10. 32. d 1 Cor. 4. 1. ch. 4. 2. & 12. 23. e ch. 11. 23—25. Deut. 25. 3. Isa. 53. 5. Acts 16. 23.

f 1 Cor. 2. 4. ch. 10. 4. Rom. 13. 12. Eph. 6. 11, 13. 2 Tim. 4. 7. g ch. 11. 6. 1 Cor. 15. 31. Ps. 118. 18. h ch. 2. 4. & 7. 3—10. Matt. 5. 4—12. Luke 6. 21. John 16. 22.

[11] Τὸ στόμα ἡμῶν ἀνέῳγε πρὸς ὑμᾶς, Κορίνθιοι, ἡ καρδία ἡμῶν πεπλάτυνται· [12] [i] οὐ στενοχωρεῖσθε ἐν ἡμῖν, στενοχωρεῖσθε δὲ ἐν τοῖς σπλάγχνοις ὑμῶν· [13] [j] τὴν δὲ αὐτὴν ἀντιμισθίαν, ὡς τέκνοις λέγω, πλατύνθητε καὶ ὑμεῖς.

i ch. 7. 2, 3. j 1 Cor. 4. 14. k Deut. 7. 2, 3. 1 Cor. 5. 9. Eph. 5. 7, 11. Eccl. 13. 17. 1 Cor. 10. 21.

[14] [k] Μὴ γίνεσθε ἑτεροζυγοῦντες ἀπίστοις· τίς γὰρ μετοχὴ δικαιοσύνῃ καὶ in the New Testament as uttered by our Redeemer, and in which there seems to be no change of person from beginning to end. We are assured by the Apostle (Heb. x. 5), that the sixth, seventh, and eighth verses of the fortieth Psalm, "Sacrifice and offering thou didst not desire," &c., are spoken by Messiah coming to abolish the legal sacrifices, by the oblation of Himself once for all. The same person, to appearance, continues speaking, and, only three verses after, complains in the following terms: "Innumerable evils have compassed me about; mine iniquities have taken hold upon me, so that I am not able to look up."

---

See also Ps. lxix. 5. The solution of this given in the writings of the Fathers is this; that Christ, in the day of His passion, standing charged with the sin and guilt of His people, speaks of such their sin and guilt as if they were His own, appropriating to Himself those debts for which, in the capacity of a surety, He had made Himself responsible. The Lamb, which under the Law was offered for sin, took the name אָשָׁם (asham), guilt; because the guilt contracted by the offerer was transferred to that innocent creature, and typically expiated by its blood. See Lev. v. 6.

Was not this exactly the case in truth and reality with the Lamb of God? "He did no sin, neither was guile found in His mouth, but He bare our sins in His own Body on the tree. (1 Pet. ii. 22.) He was made Sin for us, Who knew no sin, that we might be made the Righteousness of God in Him." Christ and the Church compose one mystical Person, of which He is the Head, and the Church the Body; and as the Body speaks by the Head, and the Head for the Body, He speaks of her sin, and she of His Righteousness. Bp. Horne (Preface to the Psalms, p. xiv).

Christ takes her sin, in order that she may receive His Righteousness.

Ch. VI. 2. Καιρῷ δεκτῷ] In an acceptable season. A remarkable application of inspired Prophecy. It contains the Words of God the Father to God the Son, Incarnate, and subject to scorn and to suffering for man's redemption, and interceding as Mediator for His Members.

To the Son thus praying the Father says, "In an acceptable season I hearkened to Thee." See the passage in Isaiah xlix. 6—8, which is here introduced with great propriety, when the Apostle had been speaking of God the Father as having treated the sinless Son as Sin; and which, therefore, is a seasonable declaration from God the Father that the Son's sacrifice for sin was accepted, and that His Prayers for the Church, which He has purchased with His blood, are heard; and it thus affords a divine assurance, that the Grace proffered by God to all in Christ will, if it be duly used, be available for their everlasting salvation.

— καιρὸς εὐπρόσδεκτος] a season well accepted; more than δεκτός.

7. ὅπλων—δεξιῶν καὶ ἀριστερῶν] arms on the right hand and on the left; that is, offensive and defensive weapons. The reference is to the Sword and Spear (ξίφος καὶ δόρυ) in the soldier's right hand, by which he attacks the enemy, and to the Shield (ἀσπὶς) on his left arm, by which he defends himself from the foe. See Blomfield on Æsch. Agam. 116, χερὸς ἐκ δορικτύπου, i. e. the right hand; and cp. Bengel here.

Such is the spiritual armour of the Christian soldier against his ghostly Enemy. (See Eph. vi. 14—17.) He has to wage a war of attack, as well as of defence, against Satan. The Christian is therefore provided by God with both kinds of weapons,—both with spiritual sword and shield,—and he must exercise himself in wielding both.

8—10.] As unknown, and yet well known; as dying, and behold, we live; as chastened, and not killed; as sorrowful, yet always rejoicing; as having nothing, and yet possessing all things. Compare the beautiful language of the ancient Christian Apologist. They (the Christians) live in the flesh, but not according to the flesh (see below, x. 3); they dwell on earth, and are citizens of heaven; they obey the Laws, and soar above the Laws with their own lives (ἰδίοις βίοις νικῶσι τοὺς νόμους); they love all men, and are persecuted by all; they are not known, and yet are condemned; they are put to death, and are made alive; they are poor, and make many rich; they lack all things, and they abound in all things; they are treated with scorn, and rejoice therein; they are vilified, and they are justified; they are reviled, and they bless; they are insulted, and they obey; they do well, and are punished as evil-doers; and being punished they rejoice, as being thus raised to life. Justin Martyr (p. 497).

10. πτωχοί] paupers; poorer than the poor (πένητες). See viii. 9.

— κατέχοντες] possessing, holding fast. On the force of κατὰ, see 1 Cor. vii. 31. Observe the difference between ἔχοντες and κατέχοντες. Though we have nothing on earth, yet we possess an eternal treasure in heaven.

12. στενοχωρεῖσθε] Ye are straitened; "angustiamini" (Vulg.), opposed to πεπλάτυνται. There is ample room for you all to dwell at large in my heart, πάντας ἔνδον ἔχομεν, καὶ τοῦτο μετ' εὐρυχωρίας πολλῆς. (Chrys.)

But ye are cramped and straitened in your own bowels. I open my heart wide to you, but not so you to me. As to this mode of speaking, see 1 Kings iv. 29. Ps. cxix. 32.

S. Chrysostom has here a beautiful passage displaying the tenderness and expansive largeness of St. Paul's heart, as seen in the numerous passages of his several Epistles, in which he pours out an effusion of love to those whom he addresses. See 1 Thess. i. 2; ii. 19. 2 Thess. ii. 17. Gal. iv. 15. 19. 2 Cor. vii. 7; xii. 15. Rom. i. 11. Eph. iii. 14. Col. i. 3. 7. 24. Tit. i. 4. 2 Tim. i. 4.

13. τὴν αὐτὴν ἀντιμισθίαν] in the same manner by way of recompense. For τὸ αὐτὸ, ὅ ἐστιν ἀντιμισθία, see Winer, pp. 469. 546. An example of conciseness, together with apposition. (Rom. xii. 1. 1 Thess. ii. 6. 2 Thess. i. 4, 5; ii. 14.)

14. Μὴ γίνεσθε ἑτεροζυγοῦντες ἀπίστοις] Do not ye become unequally matched (whether by marriage, or friendship, or participation in idolothyta) with unbelievers, i. e. heathens (1 Cor. vi. 6; vii. 12—15; x. 27; xiv. 23), as oxen ill yoked with other animals; a conjunction forbidden by the Levitical Law. (Deut.

ανομίᾳ ; ἢ τίς κοινωνία φωτὶ πρὸς σκότος ; [15] τίς δὲ συμφώνησις Χριστῷ πρὸς Βελίαρ ; ἢ τίς μερὶς πιστῷ μετὰ ἀπίστου ; [16] [l] τίς δὲ συγκατάθεσις ναῷ Θεοῦ μετὰ εἰδώλων ; Ὑμεῖς γὰρ ναὸς Θεοῦ ἐστε ζῶντος, καθὼς εἶπεν ὁ Θεὸς, Ὅτι ἐνοικήσω ἐν αὐτοῖς, καὶ ἐμπεριπατήσω· καὶ ἔσομαι αὐτῶν Θεὸς, καὶ αὐτοὶ ἔσονταί μοι λαός. [17] [m] Διὸ ἐξέλθετε ἐκ μέσου αὐτῶν καὶ ἀφορίσθητε, λέγει Κύριος, καὶ ἀκαθάρτου μὴ ἅπτεσθε· κἀγὼ εἰσδέξομαι ὑμᾶς, [18] [n] καὶ ἔσομαι ὑμῖν εἰς πατέρα, καὶ ὑμεῖς ἔσεσθέ μοι εἰς υἱοὺς καὶ θυγατέρας, λέγει Κύριος παντοκράτωρ.

VII. [1] [a] Ταύτας οὖν ἔχοντες τὰς ἐπαγγελίας, ἀγαπητοὶ, καθαρίσωμεν ἑαυτοὺς ἀπὸ παντὸς μολυσμοῦ σαρκὸς καὶ πνεύματος, ἐπιτελοῦντες ἁγιωσύνην ἐν φόβῳ Θεοῦ.

[2] [b] Χωρήσατε ἡμᾶς· οὐδένα ἠδικήσαμεν, οὐδένα ἐφθείραμεν, οὐδένα ἐπλεονεκ-l 1 Cor. 3. 16. Eph. 2. 21. 1 Pet. 2. 5.

Exod. 29. 45. Lev. 26. 12. Ps. 90. 1. Ezek. 37. 26, 27. Hos. 2. 23. Zech. 8. 8. & 13. 9. Rom. 9. 26. Heb. 8. 10. Rev. 21. 7. m Isa. 52. 11. Rev. 18. 4.
a ch. 7. 1.
n Jer. 31. 1. 9. Rev 21. 7.
a ch. 6. 18 1 Tim. 4. 1. 1 John 3. 3. b Acts 20. 33. ch. 12. 17.

---

xxii. 9.) And hence ἑτεροζύγῳ is used by the Septuagint (Lev. xix. 19) to describe two animals of different kinds.

Compare the compound words (used by St. Paul), ἑτερόγλωσσος, 1 Cor. xiv. 21; ἑτερο-διδασκαλεῖν, 1 Tim. i. 3; vi. 3. And as to the thing itself, cp. Ovid, Epist. ix. 29, "Quàm malè inæquales veniunt ad aratra juvenci," and the authorities for ἑτερόζυγος in Wetstein, who quotes Hesych., ἑτερόζυγοι, οἱ μὴ συζυγοῦντες, which explains the dative here. Cp. Winer, p. 198.

Hence St. Paul may be understood to express concisely here two precepts;

(1) Be not unequally yoked, but seek for union and partnerships in wedlock, friendship, &c. with persons of the same Christian faith, love, and holiness with yourselves,—what the Apostle himself calls γνησίους συζύγους, genuine yoke-fellows (Phil. iv. 3),—that you may pace on equably side by side, "pari passu, passibus æquis," and may together bear the yoke of life with patience and concord. Cp. Juvenal, xiii. 22, "ferre incommoda vitæ, nec jactare jugum." And cp. Theocrit. xii. 15, ἀλλήλους ἐφίλασαν ἴσῳ ζυγῷ, and xiii. 15, αὐτῷ δ' εὖ ἕλκων, where the dative may be compared with ἀπίστοις here; and the description in Æschyl. Pers. 185—199;

(2) If you are to be unequally matched at all, let it be with any one rather than with unbelievers, heathens, idolaters, ἀπίστοις. For what partnership can there be of righteousness with lawlessness? of light with darkness? of Christ with Belial? the Temple of God (which ye are) with Idols?

15. Βελίαρ] Belial = Heb. בְּלִיַּעַל, nequam; from root בָּלִי = non, and, perhaps, יֹעַל, jugum, a yoke. See S. Jerome in Eph. iv., who says, "Belial, absque jugo, quod de collo suo Dei abjecerit servitutem." Cp. Mintert. in v. So that Belial is one who is lawless, and submits to no yoke; which, if so, may reflect further light on St. Paul's word, ἑτεροζυγοῦντες.

The λ is changed into ρ at the end of the word, "quod Græcis nullum nomen desit in ρ." Mintert., and see Gesen. Thes. i. p. 210.

— πιστῷ] to a believer.

16. Ὅτι ἐνοικήσω] I will dwell in them, and will walk among them. St. Paul cites here Lev. xxvi. 11, 12, from LXX, where God is promising His presence to those who were following the itinerant Tabernacle in the Wilderness. And thus the Apostle teaches us to regard that Tabernacle, on its march through the desert, as a type of the Christian Church travelling through the wilderness of this world, and there carried up and down, with its chosen vessels of God's grace, which at last will be translated into, and enshrined in, the stationary and everlasting Temple of the Jerusalem that is above,—the Church glorified.

This is what is declared by Ezekiel (xxxvii. 26), who employs similar language to that here used by St. Paul, and to whom the Apostle here refers, and who thus describes the days of the Messiah: διαθήσομαι αὐτοῖς διαθήκην εἰρήνης, διαθήκη αἰωνία ἔσται μετ' αὐτῶν, καὶ θήσω τὰ ἁγιά μου ἐν μέσῳ αὐτῶν εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα, καὶ ἔσται ἡ κατασκήνωσίς μου ἐν αὐτοῖς, καὶ ἔσομαι αὐτοῖς Θεὸς, καὶ αὐτοί μου ἔσονται λαός· καὶ γνώσονται τὰ ἔθνη ὅτι ἐγώ εἰμι ὁ Κύριος ὁ ἁγιάζων αὐτοὺς, ἐν τῷ εἶναι τὰ ἁγιά μου ἐν μέσῳ αὐτῶν εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα. Cp. the promises in the Christian Scriptures; Rev. vii. 15; xxi. 3.

17, 18. Διὸ ἐξέλθετε κ.τ.λ.] Wherefore come ye out. In these verses St. Paul (as is usual with the Apostles and Evangelists, and as was common with Hebrew Teachers) combines several passages from the Old Testament, and blends them into one. See Surenhus. p. 557; and above on 1 Cor. i. 31. Acts vii. 43.

The passages are Isa. xlviii. 20; lii. 11. Jer. l. 8; li. 6. 45. These are admonitions to fly from Babylon and its idolatrous abominations. (Cp. Rev. xviii. 4.) And they are properly applied by the Apostle as exhortations to Christians to flee from communion with Heathens and Idolaters in acts of idolatrous worship (cp. 1 Cor. x. 21), and also to shun association with them in the intimate relationships of domestic life, particularly in Marriage (1 Cor. vii. 39). Compare Tertullian, ad Uxor., on marriage with a heathen, ii. 2—4.

On account of the misuse of this passage of St. Paul by some in later days, it is requisite to observe, that it cannot be rightly applied to justify separation from the Visible Church of Christ, on the plea of flaws and blemishes in her.

There were flaws and blemishes, more than enough, in the Church of Corinth, as is shown in St. Paul's two Epistles to that Church, especially in the first Epistle. See above on 1 Cor. i. 2.

But St. Paul never advises any one to separate himself from that Church. No; in his first Epistle he condemns schisms and divisions as works of the flesh (1 Cor. iii. 3), and he exhorts the Corinthians to be perfectly joined together in one mind (1 Cor. i. 10), and teaches that there should be no schism in the body (1 Cor. xii. 25), and that no spiritual gifts are of any profit without Love (1 Cor. xiii. 1—3).

He allows no one to separate himself from, or to make schisms in, a Church, on the plea of defects in it.

If indeed a Church, in her teaching and practice, not only adulterates truth with falsehood, and corrupts what is holy with what is idolatrous, but also enforces her errors and corruptions on others as terms of communion with her, and thus makes it impossible to communicate with her in what she has that is true and holy, without communicating also with what is erroneous and idolatrous; if she excommunicates all who do not and cannot communicate with her in her errors and corruptions, then a schism there is, and must be; and a sin there is, and a grievous sin. For wherever schism is, there is sin. But the guilt of the schism rests with her, who makes communion in her sins to be essential and indispensable to communion with herself.

This is the case with the present Church of Rome.

But it is not the case with the Church of England.

The Church of England requires nothing to be received, as necessary to salvation, but what is contained in Holy Scripture, or may be proved thereby. And she ministers the Word and Sacraments of Christ by the hands of an Apostolical Ministry.

It is therefore not sinful to communicate with her; but it is sinful not to communicate with her.

Therefore a solemn warning must be addressed to all in this Country who wilfully separate themselves from Communion with her.

To be blind to the solemn cautions against schism which abound in these Epistles to the Corinthians, and to palliate the sin of separation from her by a text like the present, which exhorts the Christians of Corinth to separate themselves from heathens and idolaters in their heathenism and idolatry, is to daub with untempered mortar (Ezek. xiii. 10), and to wrest the Scriptures, as the unlearned and unstable do unto their own destruction (2 Pet. iii. 16); and to do despite to the Holy Spirit Who wrote them, and Who is the Spirit of Peace and Concord, as well as of Wisdom and Truth.

18. καὶ ἔσομαι] and I will be unto you a Father, and ye shall be unto Me sons and daughters. This promise also is the sum and substance of several Scriptures blended together, particularly Jer. xxxi. 1. 9. Isa. xliii. 6. See Surenhus. p. 559.

CH. VII. 2. οὐδένα ἠδικήσαμεν—ἐφθείραμεν] We injured no man, we corrupted no man, we defrauded no man, when we were τήσαμεν· 3 [c] Οὐ πρὸς κατάκρισιν λέγω· προείρηκα γὰρ, ὅτι ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις ἡμῶν ἐστε, εἰς τὸ συναποθανεῖν καὶ συζῆν. 4 [d] Πολλή μοι παῤῥησία πρὸς ὑμᾶς, πολλή μοι καύχησις ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν· πεπλήρωμαι τῇ παρακλήσει, ὑπερπερισσεύομαι τῇ χαρᾷ ἐπὶ πάσῃ τῇ θλίψει ἡμῶν.

5 [e] Καὶ γὰρ ἐλθόντων ἡμῶν εἰς Μακεδονίαν οὐδεμίαν ἔσχηκεν ἄνεσιν ἡ σὰρξ ἡμῶν, ἀλλ' ἐν παντὶ θλιβόμενοι· ἔξωθεν μάχαι, ἔσωθεν φόβοι. 6 [f] Ἀλλ' ὁ παρακαλῶν τοὺς ταπεινοὺς παρεκάλεσεν ἡμᾶς ὁ Θεὸς ἐν τῇ παρουσίᾳ Τίτου, 7 οὐ μόνον δὲ ἐν τῇ παρουσίᾳ αὐτοῦ, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐν τῇ παρακλήσει ᾗ παρεκλήθη ἐφ' ὑμῖν, ἀναγγέλλων ἡμῖν τὴν ὑμῶν ἐπιπόθησιν, τὸν ὑμῶν ὀδυρμὸν, τὸν ὑμῶν ζῆλον ὑπὲρ ἐμοῦ, ὥστε με μᾶλλον χαρῆναι· 8 [g] ὅτι εἰ καὶ ἐλύπησα ὑμᾶς ἐν τῇ ἐπιστολῇ, οὐ μεταμέλομαι, εἰ καὶ μετεμελόμην· βλέπω γὰρ ὅτι ἐπιστολὴ ἐκείνη εἰ καὶ πρὸς ὥραν ἐλύπησεν ὑμᾶς· 9 [h] νῦν χαίρω, οὐχ ὅτι ἐλυπήθητε, ἀλλ' ὅτι ἐλυπήθητε εἰς μετάνοιαν· ἐλυπήθητε γὰρ κατὰ Θεὸν, ἵνα ἐν μηδενὶ ζημιωθῆτε ἐξ ἡμῶν.
10 [i] Ἡ γὰρ κατὰ Θεὸν λύπη μετάνοιαν εἰς σωτηρίαν ἀμεταμέλητον ἐργάζεται· ἡ δὲ τοῦ κόσμου λύπη θάνατον κατεργάζεται.
11 Ἰδοὺ γὰρ αὐτὸ τὸ κατὰ Θεὸν λυπηθῆναι ὑμᾶς, πόσην κατειργάσατο ὑμῖν σπουδὴν, ἀλλὰ ἀπολογίαν, ἀλλὰ ἀγανάκτησιν, ἀλλὰ φόβον, ἀλλὰ ἐπιπόθησιν, ἀλλὰ ζῆλον, ἀλλὰ ἐκδίκησιν. Ἐν παντὶ συνεστήσατε ἑαυτοὺς ἁγνοὺς εἶναι τῷ πράγματι.
12 [k] Ἄρα εἰ καὶ ἔγραψα ὑμῖν, οὐχ εἵνεκεν τοῦ ἀδικήσαντος, οὐδὲ εἵνεκεν τοῦ

c ch. 6. 11—13.
d ch. 1. 14. Phil. 2. 17. Col. 1. 24.
e Deut. 32. 25. Acts 16. 19. 23. 1 Cor. 15. 31. ch. 2. 13.
f ch. 1. 3, 4. & 2. 13. 1 Cor. 16. 17, 18. 1 Thess. 3 2, 6, 7. 3 John 2—4.
g ch. 2. 4.
h ch. 5. 11.
i Matt. 26. 75. Prov. 17. 22. k ch. 2. 4. 1 Cor. 5. 1.

---

with you. Very different was the conduct of their false Teachers; 2 Cor. xi. 19, 20.

3. εἰς τὸ συναποθανεῖν] even to die together with you. As those persons, among the nations, who are under a vow to die with their friends; whence the words συναποθνήσκοντες and commorientes. Such were "the Sacred band" (ἱερὸς λόχος) among the Thebans (Plutarch in Pelopida), and the Soldurii among the Gauls (Cæsar, de B. G. iii.). Cp. Horat. 2 Od. xvii. 11, "supremum carpere iter comites parati." Athenæus, vi. 249, B, τούτους οἱ βασιλεῖς ἔχουσι συζῶντας καὶ συναποθνήσκοντας. See A Lapide and Wetstein.

5. ἔσχηκεν] hath had. This perfect tense has been altered to the aorist ἔσχεν in some MSS., viz. B, F, G, K. But the perfect has a peculiar force here, much more powerful than the aorist, which would reduce the protracted feeling of anguish here to a mere momentary pang. And it fixes, as it were, a permanent centre, to which other things are made to converge. On that centre the writer's own mind is fixed, and to it he draws the mind of his readers. Cp. i. 9; ii. 12.

The sense of the passage is, We came to Macedonia. Think of us there. Fix your minds on us there; contemplate our condition there. We have had no respite, but in all things are afflicted; without, fightings; within, fears. But God comforted us in our distress by the arrival of Titus from you.

Compare Rev. v. 7, ἦλθε, καὶ εἴληφε τὸ βιβλίον. He came, and (as I see) he hath taken the book, which he holds.

— ἐν παντὶ θλιβόμενοι] The broken abruptness of the sentence represents the agitated condition of the writer's feelings at the time. Cp. Winer, p. 315, and see on vv. 5 and 8.

These natural anacolutha, which place before the eyes of the reader the inner workings of the great Apostle's heart, are far beyond the rigid rules of ordinary Grammar; they belong to a higher science, the Grammar of Nature, and even of Inspiration, and impart an indescribable grace of tenderness and truth to these the impassioned outpourings of his full heart. If they so touch the soul when read now, what must have been their effect when they sounded forth in all their original freshness, with the living voice, in the public recitations of these Epistles in the Churches of Corinth and Achaia! Cp. Gal. iv. 12.

7. ὥστε με μᾶλλον χαρῆναι] so that my joy exceeded my sorrow, great as that had been.

8. ἐν τῇ ἐπιστολῇ] by the Epistle: the first to the Corinthians.

— βλέπω γάρ] For I perceive this, that that Epistle did give you pain, although it were for a short time.

Βλέπω is more expressive than ὁρῶ. Do not think that I do not care what pain I give you. I, though absent from you in body, contemplate your inmost feelings, with the eyes of paternal love, and feel for you and with you.

9. κατὰ Θεόν] with a view to God, and not with an eye to yourselves only, or to the world, κατὰ κόσμον. "Ἡ κατὰ Θεὸν λύπη est dolor animi Deum spectantis et sequentis." (Bengel.) And so Winer, p. 358, note; whereas "ἡ κατὰ κόσμον λύπη est dolor animi mundum spectantis et sequentis."

This and the following verse give the definition of genuine Repentance, as distinguished from spurious;

True Repentance is dolor admissi, grief for the sin committed against God. False Repentance is only dolor amissi, grief for what is lost by the sin. The former is dolor ob culpam, i. e. it arises from sense of sin; the other is only dolor ob pœnam, and is produced by fear of punishment.

The latter was the repentance of Cain, of Esau, of Saul, of Ahab, of the Pharisees, of Judas, whose eyes were turned on themselves and on worldly things, in their expressions of sorrow; whence proceeds hopeless despondency, perhaps self-destruction.

But the other Repentance was the Repentance of David, of the Publican, of the Prodigal, and of Peter, whose eyes were fixed on God, and looked at their sin in its relation to Him, and to His Purity, Justice, and Love; whence arises in the heart a feeling of godly sorrow, shame, and remorse; and yet not of despair, for with the eyes fixed on God, the sinner sees in Him a merciful Father, as well as a Holy God, and Just Judge; and it sees the all-sufficient propitiation which He has provided for sin, in Christ, and it resorts to the means of pardon and grace, which He dispenses by the Ministry of Reconciliation in His Church, especially in the Holy Communion, and by which He restores the penitent to Himself. See above, v. 20, 21.

10. σωτηρίαν ἀμεταμέλητον] salvation not to be repented of. A striking contrast. Worldly sorrow worketh death—eternal death,—which is for ever to be rued. But godly sorrow worketh salvation which (whatever pain it may now cost to attain it) is never to be rued, but will be rejoiced in for Eternity.

Observe also the distinction between μετάνοια and μεταμέλεια. Μετάνοια, change of mind, belongs only to the good; μεταμέλεια, pain of mind, belongs to evil men as well as good. Peter μετανοεῖ, as well as μεταμέλεται. Judas μεταμέλεται (Matt. xxvii. 3), but not μετανοεῖ. Μετάνοια begins with μεταμέλεια, but at length delivers from μεταμέλεια; whereas μεταμέλεια, without μετάνοια, continues to eternity.

— ἐργάζεται] worketh. So B, C, D, E. Elz. κατεργάζεται. But there seems to be a designed contrast between the working of godly and worldly sorrow. The former ἐργάζεται μετάνοιαν, the latter κατεργάζεται θάνατον.

11. ἀλλά] yea—. On this use of ἀλλὰ, see 1 Cor. vi. 11.

— πράγματι] Elz. prefixes ἐν, not in the best MSS.; and πράγματι is to be joined with ἐν παντί.

12. Ἄρα] Consequently—the result of that Epistle is now manifest, and a blessed result it is.

— οὐδὲ εἵνεκεν τοῦ ἀδικηθέντος] not mainly and primarily for ἀδικηθέντος, ἀλλ' εἵνεκεν τοῦ φανερωθῆναι τὴν σπουδὴν ὑμῶν τὴν ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν πρὸς ὑμᾶς ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ.

13 l Διὰ τοῦτο παρακεκλήμεθα· ἐπὶ δὲ τῇ παρακλήσει ἡμῶν περισσοτέρως μᾶλλον ἐχάρημεν ἐπὶ τῇ χαρᾷ Τίτου, ὅτι ἀναπέπαυται τὸ πνεῦμα αὐτοῦ ἀπὸ πάντων ὑμῶν· 14 ὅτι εἴ τι αὐτῷ ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν κεκαύχημαι, οὐ κατῃσχύνθην· ἀλλ' ὡς πάντα ἐν ἀληθείᾳ ἐλαλήσαμεν ὑμῖν, οὕτω καὶ ἡ καύχησις ἡμῶν ἡ ἐπὶ Τίτου ἀλήθεια ἐγενήθη. 15 m Καὶ τὰ σπλάγχνα αὐτοῦ περισσοτέρως εἰς ὑμᾶς ἐστιν, ἀναμιμνησκομένου τὴν πάντων ὑμῶν ὑπακοήν, ὡς μετὰ φόβου καὶ τρόμου ἐδέξασθε αὐτόν.

16 n Χαίρω ὅτι ἐν παντὶ θαῤῥῶ ἐν ὑμῖν.

VIII. 1 a Γνωρίζομεν δὲ ὑμῖν, ἀδελφοί, τὴν χάριν τοῦ Θεοῦ τὴν δεδομένην ἐν ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις τῆς Μακεδονίας, 2 ὅτι ἐν πολλῇ δοκιμῇ θλίψεως ἡ περισσεία τῆς χαρᾶς αὐτῶν, καὶ ἡ κατὰ βάθους πτωχεία αὐτῶν ἐπερίσσευσεν εἰς τὸν πλοῦτον τῆς ἁπλότητος αὐτῶν· 3 ὅτι κατὰ δύναμιν, μαρτυρῶ, καὶ παρὰ δύναμιν αὐθαίρετοι, 4 b μετὰ πολλῆς παρακλήσεως δεόμενοι ἡμῶν τὴν χάριν, καὶ τὴν κοινωνίαν τῆς διακονίας τῆς εἰς τοὺς ἁγίους, 5 καὶ οὐ, καθὼς ἠλπίσαμεν, ἀλλ'

l Rom. 15. 32.

m ch. 2. 9. Phil. 2. 12.

n 2 Thess 3. 4. Philem. ver 21.

a Rom. 15. 26. ch. 9. 1—4. Rom. 5. 3. 2 Cor. 7. 4. James 1. 2. Mark 12. 44.

b Acts 11. 29. Rom. 15. 26. 1 Cor. 16. 1. ch. 9. 1.

---

their sakes; that is, for the sake of the incestuous person and his father. (1 Cor. v. 1.) Cp. 1 Cor. ix. 9, μὴ τῶν βοῶν μέλει τῷ Θεῷ; Theophyl.

— ὑμῶν—ἡμῶν] So the best MSS. authorities. Elz. has ἡμῶν—ὑμῶν.

St. Paul's meaning is, that he wrote his former Epistle in order that the zeal (σπουδὴ, see v. 11) of the Corinthians in behalf of their Ministers (Paul and his associates), and in obedience to their admonitions, might be made manifest among them by their godly repentance and exercise of salutary discipline.

13. Διὰ—ἡμῶν περισσοτέρως μᾶλλον] So the best MSS. Elz. inserts δὲ after περισσοτέρως, and has ὑμῶν instead of ἡμῶν.

The sense is, for this cause we have been comforted; but in our comfort we joyed the more exceedingly for the joy of Titus, because his spirit hath received refreshment from you all.

The sense is well given in Vulg., "Ideò consolati sumus. In consolatione autem nostrâ abundantiùs magis gavisi sumus super gaudio Titi, quia refectus est spiritus ejus ab omnibus vobis." So Syriac, Æthiopic, and Gothic Versions.

On the accumulation of comparatives denoting intensity of feeling and vehemence of action, see Phil. i. 23, πολλῷ μᾶλλον κρεῖσσον. Mark vii. 36. Winer, p. 214. And in 2 Cor. xii. 9 a superlative is joined with a comparative, ἥδιστα μᾶλλον.

On the word ἀναπαύω, see 1 Cor. xvi. 18.

S. Chrysostom remarks here on St. Paul's prudence in stating these particulars concerning Titus; which would be very acceptable to the Corinthians, of whom he had brought so favourable a report to St. Paul, and would prepare the Corinthians, on their side, to give a hearty welcome to Titus, whom the Apostle now designed to send back to them, in order to gather their charitable contributions for the poor Saints at Jerusalem. See here viii. 6. 16. 23.

He wins their love for Titus; for nothing more cements affection than a good testimony concerning those whose love is to be won. And what the Apostle says of Titus is, that his arrival from Corinth with the report he gave of them, turned his own sadness into joy. Chrys.

15. ὡς μετὰ φόβου] how with fear and trembling ye received him. This assertion of the feelings of alarm produced, by the coming of Titus from St. Paul, in the minds of the Corinthians,—who had been puffed up by pride, and exulted in their own fancied pre-eminence (see 1 Cor. iv. 8. 18; v. 2),—affords silent and remarkable evidence of the reality of the effects of Apostolic authority, especially in the delivery to Satan by Excommunication. 1 Cor. v. 3—5.

CH. VIII. 1, 2. Γνωρίζομεν δέ] Observe the connexion of this statement with the main subject of this Epistle, vindicating God's dispensation in the affliction of His servants, and showing forth the blessings of suffering. See Introduction, p. 146.

The saints of Jerusalem were in affliction, and the Christians of Macedonia were poor; but the poverty of the latter made them feel more tenderly for the afflictions of the former.

1. δεδομένην ἐν ταῖς ἐκκλ.] the grace of God given in the Churches of Macedonia. Cp. Acts iv. 12, δεδομένον ἐν ἀνθρώποις. 1 John iv. 9, ἐφανερώθη ἡ ἀγάπη Θεοῦ ἐν ὑμῖν.

The preposition ἐν here expresses more than the dative. The gift or grace was not only bestowed upon, but operated in, the Churches. It was a χάρις ἐνεργουμένη, a grace working in them by love, and showing itself by acts of Charity to others.

2. ἐν πολλῇ δοκιμῇ θλίψεως] in much trial of affliction. On the word δοκιμὴ, see ii. 9; ix. 13; xiii. 3; and on Rom. v. 4.

Affliction is here represented as a fire which tries the Christian soul—as the furnace tries and tests metal—whether it is of sterling ore, or adulterated (κίβδηλος), and therefore reprobate (ἀδόκιμος), and which not only tries, but refines it. Jer. vi. 30. Gen. xxiii. 16. Prov. xvii. 3; xxvii. 21, LXX. 1 Pet. i. 7, λυπηθέντες ἐν ποικίλοις πειρασμοῖς ἵνα τὸ δοκίμιον ὑμῶν τῆς πίστεως πολὺ τιμιώτερον χρυσίου τοῦ ἀπολλυμένου, διὰ πυρὸς δὲ δοκιμαζομένου, εὑρεθῇ εἰς ἔπαινον. . . .

The Churches of Macedonia stood the trial well, and were purified by affliction (on which see 1 Thess. i. 6; ii. 14), so that their love shone more brightly in acts of kindness. Their own experience of suffering made them more charitable to others. "Non ignara mali miseris succurrere disco." Virgil, Æn. i. 630.

— ἡ κατὰ βάθους πτωχεία] A beautiful and picturesque image. Their penury reaching downward to a low level—like a well, sunk to a great depth in the soil—gushed forth in a copious flow of fresh and living water of love, in the spiritual wealth of their Christian liberality. The depth of the well caused the abundance of the water.

Thus their severe affliction produced much joy; thus their deep poverty produced much riches of Alms. Chrys.

On κατὰ βάθους πτωχεία, see Winer, p. 341, and p. 377.

Observe, also, the Apostle does not say that it abounded to much wealth in the amount given, but abounded to much wealth in honest openness and heartiness (ἁπλότητι) of giving. (See Rom. xii. 8.) For it is not the sum given, but the spirit of the giver, which is the measure of almsgiving in the sight of God.

Some render ἁπλότητος by liberality, here and in Rom. xii. 8, but this is a questionable rendering; and the sense is that in which the word is commonly used by St. Paul, in 2 Cor. i. 12; xi. 3. Eph. vi. 5. Col. iii. 22.

Ἁπλότης is not merely simplicity, but honest openness and freeness, and expansive largeness of heart ("cordis simplex dilatatio"), free from all guile, and sinister considerations of self.

It is well described by Phavorinus as τὸ μηδὲν μετὰ ἐπινοίας ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ πλάττον ἢ λαλοῦν.

3. παρά] So B, C, D, E, G. Elz. ὑπέρ.

4. ἁγίους] Elz. adds δέξασθαι ἡμᾶς, not found in the best MSS.

The sense is—Instead of our being suppliants to them for aid, they contributed according to their power, and beyond their power, of their own will; praying us with much entreaty, with regard to the grace and partnership in the communication (i. e. contribution) that we were making for the saints. They implored us to allow them to be associated with us in the privilege of giving alms to their poorer brethren at Jerusalem. See Theodoret here, who says, τὴν ἡμετέραν παραίνεσιν προὔλαβον αὐτοὶ, δεηθέντες ἡμῶν τῆς τῶν ἁγίων θεραπείας φροντίσαι.

Here was true Christian Charity, anticipating St. Paul's appeal for aid; and regarding it as a boon, to be permitted to take part in labours of love, "remembering the words of the Lord Jesus, how He said, It is more blessed to give than to receive"

c ver. 17. 2 Cor. 12. 18.
d 1 Cor. 1. 5. ch. 9. 8.
e 1 Cor. 7. 6.
f Luke 9. 58. Phil. 2. 6, 7.
g 1 Cor. 7. 6, 25. 2 Cor. 9. 2. h Prov. 3. 28. & 19. 22. Mark 12. 42—44. & 14. 7, 8. Luke 21. 3. 1 Pet. 4. 10.

ἑαυτοὺς ἔδωκαν πρῶτον τῷ Κυρίῳ, καὶ ἡμῖν διὰ θελήματος Θεοῦ· [6] [c] εἰς τὸ παρακαλέσαι ἡμᾶς Τίτον, ἵνα καθὼς προενήρξατο, οὕτω καὶ ἐπιτελέσῃ εἰς ὑμᾶς καὶ τὴν χάριν ταύτην. [7] [d] Ἀλλ', ὥσπερ ἐν παντὶ περισσεύετε, πίστει καὶ λόγῳ, καὶ γνώσει, καὶ πάσῃ σπουδῇ, καὶ τῇ ἐξ ὑμῶν ἐν ἡμῖν ἀγάπῃ, ἵνα καὶ ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ χάριτι περισσεύητε. [8] [e] Οὐ κατ' ἐπιταγὴν λέγω, ἀλλὰ διὰ τῆς ἑτέρων σπουδῆς καὶ τὸ τῆς ὑμετέρας ἀγάπης γνήσιον δοκιμάζων.

[9] [f] Γινώσκετε γὰρ τὴν χάριν τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, ὅτι δι' ὑμᾶς ἐπτώχευσε πλούσιος ὤν, ἵνα ὑμεῖς τῇ ἐκείνου πτωχείᾳ πλουτήσητε. [10] [g] Καὶ γνώμην ἐν τούτῳ δίδωμι· τοῦτο γὰρ ὑμῖν συμφέρει, οἵτινες οὐ μόνον τὸ ποιῆσαι, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸ θέλειν προενήρξασθε ἀπὸ πέρυσι.

[11] Νυνὶ δὲ καὶ τὸ ποιῆσαι ἐπιτελέσατε, ὅπως, καθάπερ ἡ προθυμία τοῦ θέλειν, οὕτω καὶ τὸ ἐπιτελέσαι ἐκ τοῦ ἔχειν. [12] [h] Εἰ γὰρ ἡ προθυμία πρόκειται καθὸ

(Acts xx. 35). A striking example to Christian Congregations. Many now wait to be asked, and when asked refuse to give; and thus forfeit the blessing, which these ancient Churches eagerly desired, and joyfully obtained—that of being permitted to give to Christ in the persons of His Poor.

St. Paul happily applies the word χάρις, grace, to a work of charity, in this appeal to the Corinthians, who prided themselves much on their own spiritual gifts and graces: and thus enforces the teaching of his former Epistle (chap. xiii.), that no spiritual gifts avail without Charity. See v. 6 and v. 7, ὥσπερ ἐν παντὶ περισσεύετε, πίστει καὶ λόγῳ καὶ γνώσει . . . ἵνα καὶ ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ χάριτι περισσεύητε. Chrysostom.

5. καὶ οὐ, καθὼς ἠλπίσαμεν, ἀλλ' ἑαυτοὺς ἔδωκαν πρῶτον] and not, as we hoped, their substance, but they gave themselves also first to the Lord. On this ellipse, see Acts v. 4. 1 Cor. xv. 10. Winer, p. 439. We had indeed expected their substance, for we have had experience of their love (see xi. 9), but they went beyond our hopes, and gave themselves.

Thus he shows that, to the honour of the Macedonians, they were not puffed up by their own works of charity, nor were so elated by them, as to neglect other things, as if in giving their money they had done all that was needed. No: they not only gave their money, but themselves. (Theoph.) Thus also he obviates an objection that he had a personal end to serve in these collections; and shows that it was not the money of the Corinthians that he desired so much as themselves. (See xii. 14.)

7. λόγῳ] language,—utterance of prophecy and tongues. See 1 Cor. i. 5.

8. διά] i. e. δοκιμάζων διὰ, testing, proving, by means of.

9. δι' ὑμᾶς ἐπτώχευσε πλούσιος ὤν] He, being rich, became a beggar, πτωχὸς, on our account. Πτωχὸς is more humble and destitute than πένης. (See vi. 10.) Christ reduced Himself to penury, for us, in order that ye might become rich thereby.

Another privilege of suffering: it renders us like Christ.

Christ became πτωχὸς, a beggar, and in the persons of His poorer brethren He asks for and receives alms. See Matt. xxv. 40.

Behold Him Who is rich, and Who made Himself poor for our sakes. By Him all things were made (John i. 3). It is a greater thing to make gold than to have it. You may be rich in gold and silver and cattle; but you could not make them. But see Him Who was rich. All things were made by Him. Now see Him Who made Himself poor. The Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us (John i. 14). Who can conceive His riches? And now think on His Poverty. He is conceived in the Virgin's womb. O paupertas! He is born in a poor inn, wrapped in swaddling clothes, laid in a stable; He, the Lord of heaven and earth, the Maker of Angels, the Creator of all things, Visible and Invisible, is fed at the breast of His Mother, veils His Majesty, is taken and bound, and scourged, and buffeted, and crowned with thorns, nailed to a tree, pierced with a lance. . . . O paupertas! Augustine (Serm. 14).

10. οὐ μόνον τὸ ποιῆσαι, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸ θέλειν προενήρξασθε] Ye pre-commenced,—that is, ye originated of your accord, ye took the initiative, before (πρὸ) ye received any instigation from me, ye pre-commenced not only the act (of beneficence), but the desire.

The priority to which the Apostle here refers, is not (as some have supposed) with regard to the Macedonian Christians. This would have been an invidious comparison.

But the meaning is,—'Ye anticipated all suggestions from me.' There is a refined delicacy in this statement, in which he gives to them (as it were) precedence to himself, their Teacher. Ye outran my wishes and requests, by your love.

It is to be observed, that in all this discourse concerning Almsgiving, St. Paul lays the main stress on the cheerfulness and eagerness to give, by which genuine Charity is characterized, and which God most loves, in all offerings to Him. Cp. Exod. xxv. 2; xxxv. 5. The Macedonians besought him to receive their alms. And the Corinthians (he says) anticipated his appeal, by their own desires to give.

There is therefore something very significant and instructive in this sentence, where τὸ θέλειν, the desire, is placed above τὸ ποιῆσαι, the act. For the act of giving might be only done at the instigation of others. But the desire to give is a free motion of the giver. And where the desire is, there will be the act; but the act is sometimes done without the desire to do it.

It may also be remarked that St. Paul applies this word προενάρχομαι to Titus (v. 6), as well as to the Corinthians; and these are the only passages where the word occurs in the New Testament. Titus is commended as αὐθαίρετος, v. 17, in his appeals for alms. He anticipated St. Paul's wishes, and voluntarily undertook the task of suing for the benevolence of the Corinthians in aid of the poor Christians at Jerusalem. He προενήρξατο τὴν χάριν. But to the honour of the Corinthians, be it said, they anticipated the appeal by their own spontaneous offers of aid,—προενήρξαντο τὸ θέλειν.

St. Paul adds also that this alacrity of theirs was displayed in the past year, (see next note,) in order to show that he does not claim to himself the credit of having first excited it by his own Epistle.

Observe how the Apostle shows that the Corinthians came forward to this labour of love without exhortation from others; and of their own free will. A salutary lesson to all Christian Congregations. Chrysostom.

— ἀπὸ πέρυσι] from last year. Cp. ix. 2; and see authorities in Wetstein, ἡ πέρυσι κωμῳδία (Aristoph.), αἱ πέρυσι πρέσβειαι (Demosth.), πέρυσι ἐπιδημῶν (Theophrast.). Not, therefore, necessarily, "a year ago."

The time to which St. Paul refers might have been not more than nine months before. It must have been, however, before the writing of his First Epistle, which was sent in the same year as the Second to the Corinthians. See the Introduction, p. 145.

On the use of ἀπὸ in measures of time and place, see Acts xxviii. 23, and Winer, pp. 375. 491, 492.

St. Paul had shown to the Corinthians (v. 1—4) that the Macedonians had come forward and pressed him to admit them to be his partners in making the collection for the poor. But he would not disparage the Corinthians by extolling those of Macedonia. He therefore records their free overtures of a similar kind. He reminds them not only of their own acts, but of their desires.

And he does not say ἐνήρξασθε, but προ-ενήρξασθε ἀπὸ πέρυσι. I therefore now am only exhorting you (he means) to accomplish that to which you yourselves, willingly outrunning all exhortation from me, stimulated yourselves to do with all promptitude and alacrity. Chrys. He makes their own acts to become like exhortations to themselves.

11, 12. ἐκ τοῦ ἔχειν κ.τ.λ.] from, and according to your means. Winer, p. 329. ἐκ signifies the standard by which a thing is measured, as in "ex pede, Herculem."

The sense is unfolded in the following verse. If the alacrity of mind of the giver is manifestly set forth as an offering to God (like the "panes propositionis," or shewbread), according to what a man may have (which God knows), it is acceptable to Him, and is not estimated according to what he has not. Elz. corrects τις after ἔχῃ, but this is not in B, C*, D, E, F, G. As to the difference of the conditional ἔχῃ and the definite ἔχει, see Winer, p. 275, and Meyer here.

ἐὰν ἔχῃ εὐπρόσδεκτος, οὐ καθὸ οὐκ ἔχει. 13 Οὐ γὰρ, ἵνα ἄλλοις ἄνεσις, ὑμῖν δὲ θλῖψις, ἀλλ' ἐξ ἰσότητος, ἐν τῷ νῦν καιρῷ τὸ ὑμῶν περίσσευμα εἰς τὸ ἐκείνων ὑστέρημα· 14 ἵνα καὶ τὸ ἐκείνων περίσσευμα γένηται εἰς τὸ ὑμῶν ὑστέρημα, ὅπως γένηται ἰσότης, 15 [i] καθὼς γέγραπται, Ὁ τὸ πολὺ, οὐκ ἐπλεόνασε· καὶ [i] Exod. 16. 18.
ὁ τὸ ὀλίγον, οὐκ ἠλαττόνησε.

16 [k] Χάρις δὲ τῷ Θεῷ τῷ δόντι τὴν αὐτὴν σπουδὴν ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ [k] ver. 6. Col. 3. 17. Rev. 17. 17.
Τίτου, 17 ὅτι τὴν μὲν παράκλησιν ἐδέξατο, σπουδαιότερος δὲ ὑπάρχων αὐθαίρετος ἐξῆλθε πρὸς ὑμᾶς.

18 [l] Συνεπέμψαμεν δὲ μετ' αὐτοῦ τὸν ἀδελφὸν, οὗ ὁ ἔπαινος ἐν τῷ εὐαγγελίῳ [l] ch. 12. 18.

Cp. Aug. in Ps. 103, "Coronat Deus in te bonitatem, ubi non invenit facultatem. Nemo dicat, 'non habeo,' Caritas de sacculo non erogatur;" and S. Leo (Serm. iv. de Jejun.), "æquatur merito qui distat impendio. Potest par esse animus ubi dispar est census" (A Lapide); and see on Mark xii. 42, 43. Luke xxi. 2, 3.

15. καθὼς γέγραπται κ.τ.λ.] as it is written. Exod. xvi. 18, LXX, where the words are μετρήσαντες γομὸρ, οὐκ ἐπλεόνασεν ὁ τὸ πολὺ, καὶ ὁ τὸ ὀλίγον (al. ἔλαττον) οὐκ ἠλαττόνησε.

Thus the Holy Spirit, speaking by St. Paul, reveals to us another specimen of the moral and spiritual meaning of the dealings of Almighty God with the Israelites under the Levitical Law. See on 1 Cor. ix. 9, οὐ φιμώσεις βοῦν ἀλοῶντα.

The command of God was, that the manna, which the several members of the same tent (συσκήνιοι) had gathered, should be put together into one common stock, that it should be συνηγμένον, συλλελεγμένον (see LXX), and then be meted out with an homer; and when this was done, it was so ordered by Almighty God, that when the whole was measured out, each person had exactly an homer, neither more nor less (Exod. xvi. 16—18).

God thus condemned covetousness. Chrys.

God not only gave the manna, but ordered it to be measured out, so that none should abuse His gift by selfishness. Theodoret.

This St. Paul applies as a practical lesson to the members of the Christian Church. They are all συσκήνιοι, inmates of the same spiritual tent (σκηνή); travellers together through the wilderness of this world to the same heavenly Canaan. It is God who rains down the manna of His bounty in their temporal wealth. What they gather is His. And they may not gather only for themselves. What is gathered by them, is to be regarded by them as belonging to others, so that there may be a liberal communication of God's gifts to all; and that the needs of their poorer brethren may be supplied from their abundance, and that there may be an equality. Thus God admits them to the high privilege of being fellow-workers with Himself in His own munificence to men.

17. σπουδαιότερος] more zealous than to need any exhortation from me. Cp. Acts xxv. 10. Phil. ii. 28. Other examples of this use of a comparative, with relation to something understood, may be seen in Winer, p. 217.

— ἐξῆλθε] he went forth, and now goes. The aorist is used here as in the next verse. See next note, and Meyer and Alford here.

18. Συνεπέμψαμεν] We now send with him. The aorist is used in this case as ἔγραψα, scripsi, dictavi. See Acts xxiii. 30, and below, ix. 3.

— τὸν ἀδελφὸν, οὗ ὁ ἔπαινος ἐν τῷ εὐαγγελίῳ] the brother, of whom the praise (is) in the Gospel throughout all the Churches. A more significant expression than "whose praise is in the Gospel." It indicates that the praise, which the person here described desires and has, is not any praise from men, but the approval of God, for his work in the Gospel.

To whom does the Apostle refer, under this honourable title?

The person here mentioned, as sent together with Titus to Corinth, and as one, the praise of whom is in the Gospel throughout all the Churches, had (as appears from St. Paul's statement, v. 19) been appointed by the Churches to be St. Paul's fellow-traveller and coadjutor in the administration of the alms now in course of collection for the relief of the poor Christians at Jerusalem;

Therefore this person must have been not only one who was sent with this Epistle, but also one of those who afterwards accompanied St. Paul to Jerusalem on his subsequent visit to that City "with the alms and offerings," which, soon after the date of this Epistle, he carried with him (Acts xxiv. 17) in the journey to Jerusalem, described in the Acts of the Apostles, xx. 4—xxi. 17.

This consideration at once excludes Barnabas, whom some have supposed to be here meant;

Of those persons who are mentioned in Acts xx. 4 as St. Paul's fellow-travellers, Sopater is also excluded, because he went with St. Paul as far as Asia only, and not to Jerusalem. Timothy also is excluded, because he is associated with St. Paul in writing this Epistle (i. 1), and could not have been sent with Titus.

There remain Aristarchus, Secundus, Gaius of Derbe, Tychicus, Trophimus, and St. Luke.

Of those just mentioned, only St. Luke appears to have been St. Paul's constant fellow-traveller to Jerusalem. Those others (he says) went before, and waited for us at Troas; and we sailed from Philippi to them at Troas. See Acts xx. 5.

It is evident also, from the perpetual recurrence of the words we and us in every stage of St. Paul's journey from Troas (Acts xx. 6) to Jerusalem (xxi. 17), that St. Luke was St. Paul's fellow-traveller from Corinth to that City.

It has been said with much confidence by some in recent times, that, in using the word Gospel, St. Paul does not here refer to any written Gospel, and particularly not to St. Luke's Gospel, which (they affirm) was not then written.

But even although it be supposed for argument's sake, that St. Luke's Gospel had not as yet been written, yet they who believe that St. Paul wrote by divine inspiration, may be allowed to suppose that the holy Apostle's words were so ordered by the Holy Ghost that they might have afterwards a wider meaning, beyond the range of the immediate circumstances under which they were written.

We need not, therefore, despise the argument supplied, à posteriori, by the fact that St. Luke's praise was certainly, if not then, yet soon afterwards, and has ever since been, throughout all the Churches, by means of his written Gospel. And we need not disparage the application made of these words to St. Luke by ancient Christian Writers such as Origen, Primasius, and S. Jerome (Epist. 50, ad Paulin.), "Actorum noverimus scriptorem Lucam esse medicum, cujus laus est in Evangelio;" and again (in Ephes. c. 1), "Loquitur de Lucâ, cujus laus," &c., and by the Church of England in her Collect for St. Luke's Day,—an application fully justified by the event.

The gifts, which qualified St. Luke for writing the Gospel and the Acts, had, it is probable, previously recommended him also for preaching the Gospel orally, especially to those persons, viz. the inhabitants of Macedonia and Achaia, of whom and to whom St. Paul is now writing.

The excellency of St. Luke's Greek style marked him out, à priori, for that purpose. And Church-History points to St. Luke as having written his Gospel there. "Lucas, Medicus, discipulus Pauli Apostoli, in Achaiæ Bœotiæque partibus volumen condidit." Jerome (Cat. Scr. Ecc. c. 7).

Thus we are brought to the question, Has it ever been proved, that St. Paul does not refer here to a written Gospel, and consequently not to the Gospel of St. Luke?

Certainly not.

The words here are "the praise of whom (is) in the Gospel throughout all the Churches."

It is not easy to see, how the praise of any one, and particularly how the praise of any of those who were St. Paul's fellow-travellers to Jerusalem (whose names are supplied by the Acts), could be said to be throughout all the Churches by means of mere oral teaching;

The words seem plainly to point to some written document, circulated, like St. Paul's own Epistles at this time, by copies through the Churches, and probably read publicly in them, as those Epistles were, and as was the case with the Scriptures of the Old Testament.

Such a document as this, relating the acts and words and sufferings of Christ, would in all probability have been provided for the Churches of Asia and Greece, who would be very desirous διὰ πασῶν τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν· [19] [m] οὐ μόνον δὲ, ἀλλὰ καὶ χειροτονηθεὶς ὑπὸ τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν συνέκδημος ἡμῶν, ἐν τῇ χάριτι ταύτῃ τῇ διακονουμένῃ ὑφ' ἡμῶν, πρὸς τὴν τοῦ Κυρίου δόξαν καὶ προθυμίαν ἡμῶν, [20] στελλόμενοι τοῦτο, μή τις ἡμᾶς μωμήσηται ἐν τῇ ἁδρότητι ταύτῃ τῇ διακονουμένῃ ὑφ' ἡμῶν, [21] [n] προνοούμενοι καλὰ οὐ μόνον ἐνώπιον Κυρίου, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐνώπιον ἀνθρώπων.

m 1 Cor. 16. 3, 4. ch. 4. 15. ver. 9. 12—14. Phil. 4. 18, 19.
n Prov. 3. 4. Rom. 12. 17. Phil. 4. 8. 1 Tim. 5. 14. Tit. 2. 5, 8. 1 Pet. 2. 12.

to have such a history; and who were distinguished by their literary endowments and pursuits, and to whom St. Paul had now been preaching the Gospel for more than seven years.

See above on 1 Thess. i. 9.

As to the Gospel of St. Luke, we know from himself that it was written before the Acts (Acts i. 1. Luke i. 1), the composition of which, in all probability, was not later than A.D. 63, only four or five years after the date of this second Epistle to the Corinthians (see on Acts i. 1, and the Introduction to St. Luke's Gospel, p. 168, and the Introduction to this Epistle, p. 145).

If, as Christian Antiquity believed, and as many reasons suggest, St. Paul refers to some one of the written Gospels here, when writing to the Churches of Achaia, it is most probable that he refers to that written by St. Luke.

St. Paul himself seems to be quoting from St. Luke's Gospel in 1 Thess. v. 3. 1 Cor. x. 27, and to call it Scripture in 1 Tim. v. 18.

That Gospel was specially designed for the use of the Greeks, and, as early testimonies affirm, was written in Greece, and under the superintendence of St. Paul (see the Introduction to it, p. 157).

Supposing this to be so, we may next observe, that there is peculiar propriety in the fact, that St. Paul, the inspired Apostle of the Gentile Churches, here sets his Apostolic seal on that Gospel, the Gospel of St. Luke, which was specially designed for Gentile use.

Observe also, the person here mentioned by St. Paul was chosen and appointed by the suffrages of the Churches (ἐχειροτονήθη, v. 19) to be St. Paul's coadjutor in an important mission, and to convey the alms of the Gentile Churches to Jerusalem.

This incident confirms the supposition that the person in question was St. Luke.

He was St. Paul's intimate friend and companion. Who more likely than he to be associated with St. Paul?

The person in question was also well known, and highly esteemed by all the Churches for his labours in the Gospel, and he was chosen also for that reason.

If St. Luke's Gospel had been written and circulated, it would have commended him to the Churches for such a mission.

Here also we may, perhaps, recognize the reason for what Dr. Paley has noticed as surprising, viz. that the purpose for which St. Paul went to Jerusalem is never expressly mentioned in St. Luke's work, the Acts of the Apostles, but only comes out incidentally in the report there given of one of St. Paul's speeches. (Acts xxiv. 17.)

Probably St. Luke's own modesty restrained him from mentioning a circumstance which redounded so much to his own honour, lest he should be suspected of praising himself (Prov. xxvii. 2), who had been elected by the Churches to accompany the great Apostle in this embassy of love.

Another reason for supposing that St. Paul here refers to St. Luke is as follows:—

It is observable that St. Paul here mentions Titus by name.

Why does he not also mention by name this companion of Titus? Why does he not mention by name him, "whose praise is in the Gospel in all the Churches?"

May it not be, because he was St. Paul's fellow-traveller, and because he was already designated as the historian of his Acts, and because to praise such a person by name might have been inexpedient, as savouring too much of that spirit which eulogizes those from whom it expects to receive praise in return?

Certainly there was something more than accidental in the fact, that a person who was so constant an attendant on St. Paul, as St. Luke was, in his journeyings, voyages, and imprisonments, and who was chosen by the Holy Ghost to write the history—the only history—of his Acts, as well as one of the Gospels, has received so little notice by name from St. Paul in his fourteen Epistles. He is there mentioned only three times, and this merely in a very cursory way, Col. iv. 14. Philem. 24. 2 Tim. iv. 11.

What can be the reason of this silence?

None more probable, it seems, can be assigned, than that the Apostle would thus show, that the blessed Evangelist St. Luke acted, wrote, and suffered, with a higher aim than for praise, even from the lips of an Apostle, and that he whose praise is in the Gospel needed no other praise; and that the Apostle would not expose himself to the imputation of having purchased the honourable record he has received from the Apostolic historian, by panegyrizing the historian himself.

Such considerations as these may perhaps also throw some light on an interesting question which will have suggested itself to the student of St. Paul's history and writings;

Why a person so eminent as Titus was, as a fellow-worker of St. Paul, is never mentioned by name in the Acts of the Apostles by St. Luke, who often mentions Timothy?

Was there any relationship between them? Titus is seen first at Antioch (see Gal. ii. 1), which was probably the native place of St. Luke. He was a Hellenist (Gal. ii. 3) perhaps of that City, and Titus was associated with St. Luke (if the above exposition be correct) in this work of charity for the poor Christians at Jerusalem.

Did St. Luke feel a delicacy in praising by name a person who seems to have been his co trustee in this important and delicate matter of collecting and administering those pecuniary collections in Macedonia and Achaia? Or was Titus instrumental with St. Luke in composing and publishing the Acts of the Apostles? And did the same reasons, which deterred St. Luke from mentioning his own name in the work of which he was the author, and which records events at which he was present, and in which he took a leading part, deter him from mentioning that of Titus also?

Doubtless, if the truth were now known, as it will be hereafter, the reason would be seen to be one alike honourable to St. Titus and St. Luke. Even now, knowing what we do of St. Titus from this and other Epistles of St. Paul, we may be sure that St. Luke's silence concerning him is the silence of respect and love.

Lastly, if the above reasonings are sound, it is interesting and satisfactory to reflect that the writer of the Acts of the Apostles was not only connected by ties of personal friendship with St. Paul, the Apostle of the Gentiles, but that he was appointed by the suffrage of the Churches (v. 19) to be his fellow-traveller in that important mission to Jerusalem, which was the occasion of so many benefits to the Church, and led eventually to St. Paul's testimony to the Gospel at Rome; and that in reading the Acts of the Apostles, we read a History composed by one who received a public witness from the Churches, and who was set apart by their voice for intimate association with the Apostle whose history he relates.

19. χειροτονηθείς] chosen, properly by show of hands. See Acts xiv. 23, and Wetstein here.

— ἐν] in the matter of. So B, C, and many Cursives.— Elz. σύν.

— πρὸς τὴν τοῦ Κυρίου δόξαν] with a view to the glory of God.

— καὶ προθυμίαν ἡμῶν] to promote our ready zeal,—our prompt alacrity, and eager desire.

Do not think, therefore, that we are jealous of the interference of others in this collection. We desired to have a coadjutor; and one has been given us to further our zeal.

Elz. has ὑμῶν here against the authority of the best MSS.

20. στελλόμενοι] shunning. The Metaphor is from navigation (see Gloss. Phrynich., ap. Wetstein, ἡ μεταφορὰ ἀπὸ τῶν ἱστίων, cp. Iliad, i. 433): shifting, furling, shortening, or reefing our sails, so as to avoid the injurious effects of a gale of calumny from suspicious men.

On St. Paul's use of nautical terms, particularly after a voyage, and in addressing maritime people, as the Corinthians, see above on Acts xx. 20, ὑπεστειλάμην, and Gal. ii. 12.

— ἁδρότητι] abundance; said of a rich harvest or wealthy freight, as here. St. Paul compares himself to a mariner, sailing with a rich cargo of spiritual merchandise and Christian beneficence towards Jerusalem; and he says that he so pilots the vessel, as to decline the winds of envious censure, to which, on account of the riches of his freight, he was exposed.

21. προνοούμενοι] providing. So Elz. and C, I, K, and Coptic, Gothic Versions, and Clem., Chrys., Theodoret, and Cursive MSS. Some MSS. (B, D, E, F, G) have προνοοῦμεν γὰρ, but this seems too direct an expression of self-commendation. The participle introduces the reason for a particular act, in a delicate and modest manner. See LXX in Prov. iii. 4, whence the quotation is; and cp. Rom. xii. 17, and S. Polycarp ad Philipp. 6, προνοοῦντες ἀεὶ τὸ καλὸν ἐνώπιον Θεοῦ καὶ ἀνθρώπων.

22 Συνεπέμψαμεν δὲ αὐτοῖς τὸν ἀδελφὸν ἡμῶν, ὃν ἐδοκιμάσαμεν ἐν πολλοῖς πολλάκις σπουδαῖον ὄντα, νυνὶ δὲ πολὺ σπουδαιότερον πεποιθήσει πολλῇ τῇ εἰς ὑμᾶς. 23 [o] Εἴτε ὑπὲρ Τίτου, κοινωνὸς ἐμὸς καὶ εἰς ὑμᾶς συνεργός· εἴτε ἀδελφοὶ ἡμῶν, ἀπόστολοι ἐκκλησιῶν, δόξα Χριστοῦ. o Phil. 2. 25.

24 [p] Τὴν οὖν ἔνδειξιν τῆς ἀγάπης ὑμῶν, καὶ ἡμῶν καυχήσεως ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν, εἰς αὐτοὺς ἐνδείξασθε εἰς πρόσωπον τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν. p ch. 7. 14. & 9. 2.

IX. 1 [a] Περὶ μὲν γὰρ τῆς διακονίας τῆς εἰς τοὺς ἁγίους περισσόν μοί ἐστι τὸ γράφειν ὑμῖν· 2 [b] οἶδα γὰρ τὴν προθυμίαν ὑμῶν, ἣν ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν καυχῶμαι Μακεδόσιν, ὅτι Ἀχαΐα παρεσκεύασται ἀπὸ πέρυσι· καὶ ὁ ἐξ ὑμῶν ζῆλος ἠρέθισε τοὺς πλείονας. a Acts 11. 29. Rom. 15. 26. 1 Cor. 16. 1. ch. 8. 4. b ch. 8. 10, 19, 24.

3 [c] Ἔπεμψα δὲ τοὺς ἀδελφούς, ἵνα μὴ τὸ καύχημα ἡμῶν τὸ ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν κενωθῇ ἐν τῷ μέρει τούτῳ· ἵνα, καθὼς ἔλεγον, παρεσκευασμένοι ἦτε· 4 μή πως, ἐὰν ἔλθωσι σὺν ἐμοὶ Μακεδόνες, καὶ εὕρωσιν ὑμᾶς ἀπαρασκευάστους, καταισχυνθῶμεν ἡμεῖς, ἵνα μὴ λέγωμεν ὑμεῖς, ἐν τῇ ὑποστάσει ταύτῃ. c ch. 8. 6, 17—22. 1 Cor. 16. 2. Tit. 3. 1.

5 Ἀναγκαῖον οὖν ἡγησάμην παρακαλέσαι τοὺς ἀδελφούς, ἵνα προέλθωσιν πρὸς ὑμᾶς, καὶ προκαταρτίσωσι τὴν προεπηγγελμένην εὐλογίαν ὑμῶν ταύτην ἑτοίμην εἶναι οὕτως ὡς εὐλογίαν, καὶ μὴ ὡς πλεονεξίαν. 6 [d] Τοῦτο δέ, ὁ σπείρων φειδομένως φειδομένως καὶ θερίσει· καὶ ὁ σπείρων ἐπ' εὐλογίαις ἐπ' d Prov. 11. 18. & 19. 17. & 22. 9. Gal. 6. 8.

---

22. τὸν ἀδελφὸν ἡμῶν] our brother. Perhaps Silas, ἀνὴρ ἡγούμενος ἐν τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς, who had been with St. Paul as his fellow-labourer at Corinth (Acts xviii. 5, and see Acts xv. 22. 27. 32. and 40; xvi. 19. 25. 29; xvii. 4. 10. 14. 2 Cor. i. 19), and had been associated with St. Paul in writing to the Macedonian Churches. (1 Thess. i. 1. 2 Thess. i. 1.)

23. ὑπὲρ Τίτου] concerning Titus. On this use of ὑπὲρ see 2 Cor. i 6. 8. 2 Thess. ii. 1. Winer, p. 343.

— ἀπόστολοι ἐκκλησιῶν] envoys of Churches. "Sent by the Churches." (Chrys.) The word ἀπόστολοι, used here with a genitive, and that of a human society, and without an article, is not to be confounded with the words οἱ ἀπόστολοι, the Apostles (i. e. of Christ); nor does it give any countenance to the notion, that the title of Apostle was given as a designation to others besides the Twelve, and Matthias, Paul, and Barnabas. Cp. on Rom. xvi. 7.

24. ἐνδείξασθε] show ye. So C, D, E, K, L, and most Cursives. B, D*, E*, F, G have ἐνδεικνύμενοι, showing.

CH. IX. 2. ὑμῖν] to you; emphatic, you who have already shown your good-will. (viii. 10.)

2. καυχῶμαι Μακεδόσιν] I am glorying to the Macedonians. Cp. v. 4. Therefore this Epistle was probably written from Macedonia. See Introduction.

— ἀπὸ πέρυσι] from last year. See viii. 10.

3. Ἔπεμψα] I send the brethren (mentioned viii. 17—22) with this Epistle. Ἔπεμψα is used as ἔγραψα, scripsi, I write; the reference being to the time when the letter would be read by the receiver, to whom the writing and the sending of it would be acts of the past. See Acts xxiii. 30. Above, viii. 18. Phil. ii. 28. Philem. 11. Winer, p. 249.

4. ἐὰν—Μακεδόνες] if any Macedonians come with me on my visit to Corinth. It appears from Acts xx. 4 that Aristarchus and Secundus of Thessalonica were with him there.

— τῇ ὑποστάσει ταύτῃ] this firm reliance—this confidence. See Wetstein here, and Heb. iii. 14. Elz. adds τῆς καυχήσεως, which words are not found in B, C, D*, F, G, and are probably a gloss from xi. 17.

5. εὐλογίαν] εὐλογία = בְּרָכָה (beracah), and is used for it by LXX as:

(1) A blessing, Gen. xxvii. 12. 36. 38. 41. Cp. Gal. iii. 14. Eph. i. 3. Heb. vi. 7. James iii. 10. Rev. v. 12, 13;

(2) A thank-offering, a gift or bounty. Gen. xxxiii. 11, λάβε τὰς εὐλογίας μου. Josh. xv. 19, δός μοι εὐλογίαν.

As Theodoret observes here, St. Paul when speaking of offerings of beneficence in this discourse concerning alms, does not speak of them as gifts proceeding from one person to another, but rather as κοινωνίαν, communication of what belongs to many, and not to the possessor only (viii. 4; ix. 13. Cp. Heb. xiii. 16. Rom. xii. 13. Gal. vi. 6. Phil. iv. 15); and as a χάριν, grace, as something freely bestowed by God, like manna (cp. 1 Cor. xvi. 3. 2 Cor. viii. 6. 19; ix. 8. 14), in order to be freely and thankfully dispensed by men to others.

He also calls it εὐ᾽ογίαν, a word used by him in speaking of the Holy Communion (1 Cor. x. 16) as that in which men offer the eucharistic sacrifice of praise and thanksgiving, and on which they implore His blessing.

Thus, then, the Holy Spirit, speaking by the Apostle, represents Almsgiving not only as a duty necessarily following on the mutual communion of the members of Christ's bod᾽y, but as a privilege; an act of eucharistic Worship, due to God, the sole Author and Fountain of all blessings and graces, spiritual and temporal; and therefore to be a joyful effusion of benediction and beneficence.

— μὴ ὡς πλεονεξίαν] not as matter of covetousness. Do not imagine, that we desire to extort your alms from you as a benefit to ourselves, from which we expect to reap any worldly gain (ὡς πλεονεκτοῦντες, Chrys.), but rather we wish to procure thereby a blessing to you. Do not therefore give grudgingly, as those who are constrained to give; but give joyfully, as those who are receiving a blessing by giving to others. (Chrys., Theoph.)

Cp. Phil. iv. 17, "Not that I desire a gift, but fruit that may abound to your account." And see below, xii. 17, ἐπλεονέκτησα ὑμᾶς;

6. ὁ σπείρων φειδομένως] he that soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully.

This text confirms the doctrine, that there will be different degrees of bliss and glory hereafter (see on Luke xix. 17. John xiv. 2, 3. 1 Cor. xv. 41, 42), as also different degrees of punishment (see Matt. xi. 22. Luke xii. 47). Cp. Chrys. in 1 Cor. Hom. xli. S. Ambrose in Luc. vi. S. Aug. Enchir. c. 3; de Civ. Dei ii. c. 3; and in Ps. cl.

The Apostle teaches, that we must all be made manifest before the Judgment Seat of Christ; and lest you should say that we shall be so made manifest, in order that the good may receive good things in equal degrees one with another, and the bad may receive evil things, he adds, in the same Epistle, that he who soweth in blessings will reap in blessings, and he that soweth sparingly will reap sparingly; and though both reap, yet their harvest will differ in measure and quantity. S. Jerome (c. Jovin. ii. tom. vi. pt. 2, p. 217).

From the measure, which is according to the subject of sin, there are, in that eternity of punishment, varieties, whereby may be gathered a rule much built upon in Holy Scripture,—that degrees of wickedness have answerable degrees in the weight of their endless punishment. God is not wanting to the world in any necessary thing for the attainment of eternal life, though many things be necessary now, which, according to our first condition, we needed not. He bestoweth now eternal life, as His own free and undeserved gift; together also with that general inheritance and lot of eternal life, great varieties of rewards proportioned to the very degrees of those labours, which to perform He Himself by His grace enableth. Hooker, book v. Appendix, No. i. p. 722. Cp. Hooker, Eccl. Polity, ii. 8. 4. See also Bp. Bull, Sermon i. p. 168.

The words ὁ σπείρων ἐπ' εὐλογίαις literally mean, He that εὐλογίαις καὶ θερίσει. 7 [e] Ἕκαστος καθὼς προῄρηται τῇ καρδίᾳ, μὴ ἐκ λύπης ἢ ἐξ ἀνάγκης, ἱλαρὸν γὰρ δότην ἀγαπᾷ ὁ Θεός. 8 [f] Δυνατὸς δὲ ὁ Θεὸς πᾶσαν χάριν περισσεῦσαι εἰς ὑμᾶς, ἵνα ἐν παντὶ πάντοτε πᾶσαν αὐτάρκειαν ἔχοντες περισσεύητε εἰς πᾶν ἔργον ἀγαθὸν, 9 [g] καθὼς γέγραπται, Ἐσκόρπισεν, ἔδωκε τοῖς πένησιν, ἡ δικαιοσύνη αὐτοῦ μένει εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα. 10 [h] Ὁ δὲ ἐπιχορηγῶν σπέρμα τῷ σπείροντι καὶ ἄρτον εἰς βρῶσιν χορηγήσει καὶ πληθυνεῖ τὸν σπόρον ὑμῶν, καὶ αὐξήσει τὰ γενήματα τῆς δικαιοσύνης ὑμῶν· 11 [i] ἐν παντὶ πλουτιζόμενοι εἰς πᾶσαν ἁπλότητα, ἥτις κατεργάζεται δι' ἡμῶν εὐχαριστίαν τῷ Θεῷ, 12 [k] ὅτι ἡ διακονία τῆς λειτουργίας ταύτης οὐ μόνον ἐστὶ προσαναπληροῦσα τὰ ὑστερήματα τῶν ἁγίων, ἀλλὰ καὶ περισσεύουσα διὰ πολλῶν εὐχαριστιῶν τῷ Θεῷ, 13 [l] διὰ τῆς δοκιμῆς τῆς διακονίας ταύτης δοξάζοντες τὸν Θεὸν ἐπὶ τῇ ὑποταγῇ τῆς ὁμολογίας ὑμῶν εἰς τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τοῦ Χριστοῦ, καὶ ἁπλότητι τῆς κοινωνίας εἰς αὐτοὺς καὶ εἰς πάντας, 14 [m] καὶ αὐτῶν δεήσει ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν ἐπιποθούντων ὑμᾶς διὰ τὴν ὑπερβάλλουσαν χάριν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐφ' ὑμῖν.

15 Χάρις δὲ τῷ Θεῷ ἐπὶ τῇ ἀνεκδιηγήτῳ αὐτοῦ δωρεᾷ.

X. 1 [a] Αὐτὸς δὲ ἐγὼ Παῦλος παρακαλῶ ὑμᾶς διὰ τῆς πραΰτητος καὶ ἐπιεικείας τοῦ Χριστοῦ, ὃς κατὰ πρόσωπον μὲν ταπεινὸς ἐν ὑμῖν, ἀπὼν δὲ θαρρῶ εἰς ὑμᾶς. 2 [b] Δέομαι δὲ τὸ μὴ παρὼν θαρρῆσαι τῇ πεποιθήσει, ᾗ λογίζομαι τολμῆσαι ἐπί τινας τοὺς λογιζομένους ἡμᾶς ὡς κατὰ σάρκα περιπατοῦντας· 3 ἐν σαρκὶ γὰρ περιπατοῦντες οὐ κατὰ σάρκα στρατευόμεθα· 4 [c] τὰ γὰρ ὅπλα τῆς στρατείας e Exod. 25. 2. & 35. 5. Deut. 15. 7. Eccl. 35. 11. Rom. 12. 8. f Phil. 4. 19.

g Ps. 112. 9.
h Isa. 55. 10. Hos. 10. 12.
i ch. 1. 11. & 4. 15.
k ch. 8. 14. & 4. 15.
l Matt. 5. 16. John 15. 8. Acts 4. 21. & 11. 18. & 21. 19, 20. Gal. 1. 24.
m ch. 8. 1.
a ver. 10. 1 Cor. 2. 3.
b ch. 13. 2. & 4. 21.
c ch. 6. 7. Jer. 1. 10. Eph. 6. 13. 1 Thess. 5. 8.

---

soweth with blessings from himself will reap with blessings from God. Ἐπὶ = on or at, as the moving principle and accompaniment. See vii. 13; ix. 13. 1 Cor. xiv. 16; xvi. 17.

Almsgiving is spiritual husbandry, which returns a rich harvest to the husbandman. Sow thankfully in alms, and you will reap joyfully in blessing. Cp. Gal. vi. 7.

7. προῄρηται] he hath purposed. So B, C, F, G. Elz. προαιρεῖται. The perfect tense is preferable. St. Paul charitably supposes that the Corinthians have already made up their minds to give liberally.

— ἱλαρὸν δότην] a cheerful giver. Cp. Prov. xxii. 8, ὁ σπείρων φαῦλα θερίσει κακὰ . . . ἄνδρα ἱλαρὸν καὶ δότην εὐλογεῖ ὁ Θεός.

9. καθὼς γέγραπται] as it is written. Ps. cxii. 9. See Dr. Barrow's Spital Sermon on this text (Serm. xxxi. vol. ii. pp. 136—206), which has almost exhausted the subject on which it treats—"The Duty and Reward of Bounty to the Poor." See particularly there, pp. 194, 195.

— Ἐσκόρπισεν] He winnowed out, and gave of His winnowings to the poor. St. Paul keeps up the metaphor of the husbandman. He sows in alms, and reaps a rich harvest. He winnows his harvest, and gives thereof to the poor. See on Matt. xxv. 24.

10. χορηγήσει—πληθυνεῖ—αὐξήσει] He shall supply, &c. So the best MSS., in the future tense.—Elz. has χορηγήσαι κ.τ.λ. in the optative mood.

On the sense of χορηγέω,—properly said of a wealthy person supplying the requisite funds for the equipment and training of a tragic χορὸς,—see the authorities in Wetstein here. Cp. on 2 Pet. i. 5.

— γενήματα] Luke xii. 18.

— δικαιοσύνης] of righteousness. See Matt. vi. 1.

11. πλουτιζόμενοι] being enriched. A nominativus pendens evolved from the preceding words. Cp. Rom. xii. 9. Heb. xiii. 5. Eph. iv. 2. Col. iii. 16. So δοξάζοντες, v. 13. Cp. Winer, p. 505.

13. διὰ τῆς δοκιμῆς] through the proof. Cp. viii. 2. 8, and Winer, p. 340.

— δοξάζοντες] glorifying. The nominative is evolved from πολλῶν εὐχαριστιῶν, others glorify God, and give Him thanks by means of and through the proof, &c. See note on v. 11.

The sense is, Do not suppose that the only benefit of this collection will be that thus relief will be provided for the necessities of the Saints. No; glory will thence redound to God. All who see how you have received the Gospel, and have submitted yourselves to the Lord, and how you have proved your Christian love by aid to your poorer brethren at a distance, and to all men, will praise God, Who is the author of all the graces seen in your acts. You also will receive the fruit of prayers offered on your behalf. Blessed therefore be God for His unspeakable gift! Theodoret.

— ἐπὶ τῇ ὑποταγῇ] upon the subjection to your confession, with regard to the Gospel of Christ; that is, upon your compliance with the principles of your Christian profession; which you proved to be sincere, by your acts. On the genitive, cp. x. 5, ὑπακοὴ τοῦ Χριστοῦ, Winer, § 30, p. 167.

— ἁπλότητι] See above, viii. 2, and below, Rom. xii. 8.

The word ἁπλότης denotes specially that disinterested candour, and unambitious simplicity, and genuine openness of heart and hand which God specially loves in those who give alms. Cp. Loesner, p. 262, citing examples from Philo on this usage, who combines the word with ἀκακία. Opif. 36 B, 39 C.

14. αὐτῶν δεήσει] glorifying God on account of the prayer of them (the recipients of your alms) on your behalf, who long after you, by reason of the exceeding grace of God, shed upon you. This is another occasion of glory to God.

Ch. X. 1. παρακαλῶ διά] I exhort you by Christ's gentleness, as the instrument and means through which I would move you. Cp. Rom. xii. 1; xv. 30. 1 Cor. i. 10.

— κατὰ πρόσωπον μὲν ταπεινός] who when present am mean among you, but when absent am bold towards you. The Apostle here quotes the language of his adversaries, who thus disparaged his personal appearance. Cp. vv. 7 and 10. See Nicephor. H. E. ii. 37. Joh. Malelas, Chron. x. p. 257, on the traditions concerning St. Paul's stature and personal presence; and Chrys., vol. v. p. 992, ὁ τρίπηχυς ἄνθρωπος.

Κατὰ πρόσωπον, face to face, is opposed to ἀπὼν here, as in Acts iii. 13; xxv. 16. On the word ταπεινὸς see below, Rom. xii. 16.

2. Δέομαι δὲ, τὸ μὴ παρὼν θαρρῆσαι] But I beseech you (to take care) that I may not, when present, be bold. Chrys. Winer, p. 288.

— λογίζομαι] I reckon.

— ἐπί τινας τοὺς λ.] against certain persons,—namely, those that reckon, &c. St. Paul in these two Epistles always spares the names of his opponents and accusers. See 1 Cor. iv. 18.

— κατὰ σάρκα] according to the flesh: opposed to κατὰ Πνεῦμα, according to the Spirit. See v. 16. Hence Justin Martyr, p. 497, ἐν σαρκὶ τυγχάνουσιν, ἀλλ' οὐ κατὰ σάρκα ζῶσιν.

4. τὰ γὰρ ὅπλα] for the weapons of our warfare. Another use of metaphors from military life, by means of which he had described the martial struggles, and victorious successes, of the Christian Ministry. See on ii. 14—16; iv. 1—17.

The Armies of Imperial Rome, her Camps, and her campaigns, her legionary organization and discipline; her forts and citadels, military roads and bridges, trophies, triumphal processions, triumphal arches, triumphal columns,—objects which presented themselves to St. Paul in his travels through the Roman empire, and were very familiar to his readers, supply the Apostle with imagery which is consecrated and christianized by him, and ἡμῶν οὐ σαρκικὰ, ἀλλὰ δυνατὰ τῷ Θεῷ πρὸς καθαίρεσιν ὀχυρωμάτων, [5] [d] λογισμοὺς καθαιροῦντες, καὶ πᾶν ὕψωμα ἐπαιρόμενον κατὰ τῆς γνώσεως τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ αἰχμαλωτίζοντες πᾶν νόημα εἰς τὴν ὑπακοὴν τοῦ Χριστοῦ, [6] [e] καὶ ἐν ἑτοίμῳ ἔχοντες ἐκδικῆσαι πᾶσαν παρακοὴν, ὅταν πληρωθῇ ὑμῶν ἡ ὑπακοή.

d 2 Esdr. 14. 34. 1 Cor. 1. 19. & 3. 19. Isa. 2. 11, 12.

e ch. 13. 2, 10.

[7] [f] Τὰ κατὰ πρόσωπον βλέπετε; Εἴ τις πέποιθεν ἑαυτῷ Χριστοῦ εἶναι, τοῦτο λογιζέσθω πάλιν ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ, ὅτι καθὼς αὐτὸς Χριστοῦ, οὕτω καὶ ἡμεῖς. [8] [g] Ἐάν τε γὰρ καὶ περισσότερόν τι καυχήσωμαι περὶ τῆς ἐξουσίας ἡμῶν, ἧς ἔδωκεν ὁ Κύριος ἡμῖν εἰς οἰκοδομὴν, καὶ οὐκ εἰς καθαίρεσιν ὑμῶν, οὐκ αἰσχυνθήσομαι· [9] ἵνα μὴ δόξω ὡς ἂν ἐκφοβεῖν ὑμᾶς διὰ τῶν ἐπιστολῶν,—[10] [h] ὅτι αἱ μὲν ἐπιστολαί, φησι, βαρεῖαι καὶ ἰσχυραὶ, ἡ δὲ παρουσία τοῦ σώματος ἀσθενὴς, καὶ ὁ λόγος ἐξουθενημένος·—[11] τοῦτο λογιζέσθω ὁ τοιοῦτος, ὅτι οἷοί ἐσμεν τῷ λόγῳ δι' ἐπιστολῶν ἀπόντες, τοιοῦτοι καὶ παρόντες τῷ ἔργῳ.

f 1 Cor. 14. 37. & 3. 23. & 9. 1 Gal. 1. 11—13 & 2. 5—9.

g 1 John 4. 6. ch. 7. 14. & 12. 6. & 13. 10.

h 1 Cor. 2. 3, 4. ch. ver. 1.

[12] [i] Οὐ γὰρ τολμῶμεν ἐγκρῖναι ἢ συγκρῖναι ἑαυτοὺς τισὶ τῶν ἑαυτοὺς συνιστανόντων· ἀλλὰ αὐτοὶ ἐν ἑαυτοῖς ἑαυτοὺς μετροῦντες, καὶ συγκρίνοντες ἑαυτοὺς ἑαυτοῖς, οὐ συνιοῦσιν.

i ch. 3. 1. & 5. 12.

[13] [k] Ἡμεῖς δὲ οὐκ εἰς τὰ ἄμετρα καυχησόμεθα, ἀλλὰ κατὰ τὸ μέτρον τοῦ κανόνος οὗ ἐμέρισεν ἡμῖν ὁ Θεὸς μέτρου ἐφικέσθαι ἄχρι καὶ ὑμῶν· [14] [l] οὐ γὰρ k 1 Cor. 12. 11. ch. 11. 18. & 12. 5, 6. Eph. 4. 7.

l 1 Cor. 4. 15. & 3. 5, 10. & 9. 1.

---

is made subservient to describe the conflicts and conquests of the Cross.

— δυνατὰ τῷ Θεῷ] mighty, God-ward. Though they may seem foolishness to the world, yet they are strong to God. Weak though they may be man-ward, yet powerful they are God-ward: for whatever we bind on earth, is bound in heaven (Matt. xvi. 19; xviii. 18); whatsoever the Ministers of Christ do lawfully in His Name, and by His Authority, is ratified by His Omnipotence.

Whether they remit or retain sins, whatsoever is done by way of orderly and lawful proceeding, the Lord Himself hath promised to ratify. Hooker, vi. 4. 2. Other similar passages may be seen in Theoph. Anglican. ch. xiii. xiv.

The dative τῷ Θεῷ, God-ward, is here used as in Acts vii. 20, ἀστεῖος τῷ Θεῷ. Cp. Winer, p. 221.

9. ἵνα μὴ δ. ὡς ἂν ἐκφοβεῖν] that I may not seem as if I would terrify you by letters.

This is the only passage in the New Testament where ἄν is used with an Infinitive, as in classical Greek it often is. Cp. Matth. G. G. 597. Ἄν is very rarely used in the New Testament with the Optative after Conjunctions and Relatives, but ἐὰν takes its place. Cp. Winer, p. 277.

On the rare use of ἄν in the Septuagint, even with the Aorist Indicative, see above on Luke xvii. 6.

— διὰ τῶν ἐπιστολῶν] by my letters.

10. φησί] saith one,—as inquit and ait in Latin. Any one says, whom the writer does not care to specify by name. Horat. Sat. i. 1. 62, "Nil satis est, inquit." Heindorf, p. 146. So φησὶ is used indefinitely, as here, in the best Greek authors. Wolf ad Demosth. Lept. p. 288; and in LXX, Wisd. xv. 12. Winer, p. 462. As was before observed, St. Paul never mentions his accusers by name in these Epistles.

12. ἐγκρῖναι] to approve: a metaphor from the athletic games, in which they who were admitted to be competitors for the prize were said ἐγκρίνεσθαι, and they who were rejected were said ἐκκρίνεσθαι. See Aristid. Panath. p. 109, and Wetstein here.

— συγκρῖναι] to compare. Cp. 1 Cor. ii. 13.

— ἐν ἑαυτοῖς ἑαυτοὺς μετροῦντες] measuring themselves among themselves. Something more than ἑαυτοῖς simply. The ἐν marks that the measurement was confined within themselves, instead of its being extended to others beyond and without (ἔξω) themselves.

But we do not measure ourselves at all; but we labour in the field which God has measured out for us. Cp. Horat. Sat. ii. 2. 114:

"Videas metato in agello
. . . . . fortem mercede colonum."

13. κατὰ τὸ μέτρον κ.τ.λ.] according to the measure of our rule or line (see preceding note), which God assigned to us as a measure to reach even to you. Cp. Rom. xii. 3, ἑκάστῳ ὡς ὁ Θεὸς ἐμέρισε μέτρον πίστεως.

Almighty God marked out to St. Paul his duty, not only in direction, but also in extent. The Apostle, zealous as he was, did not venture to deviate from its direction, nor to exceed its extent.

God's will to him was not only a κανὼν, but a μέτρον,—a κανὼν in direction, and a μέτρον in extension.

The Apostle therefore says, we boast according to the μέτρον or extent of the κανὼν, or rule of direction, which God allotted to us (not we assigned to ourselves), as a measure to extend even to you. The κανὼν marked out our direction towards you, the μέτρον was our commission of extension to you.

Here is a lesson to all Christians, not to swerve from, nor to go beyond, the line of their own duty; not to deviate from its direction by intruding into other men's duties, so as to become ἀλλοτριοεπίσκοποι (1 Pet. iv. 15), nor yet to fall short of the point to which God has appointed them to reach.

A warning also to Churches, not to usurp and invade the spiritual provinces assigned to others.

The metaphor here (say Chrys. and Theophyl.) is either from a Vineyard, which a Landlord measures out to be cultivated by his labourers, or from a Territory, which a King assigns to the generals of his forces, to be subdued by them.

God has allotted the world to His Apostles and their successors, to be conquered by them as soldiers for Christ, and to be tilled by them as His husbandmen.

It is observable, that the Psalmist (Ps. xix. 4, explained by Rom. x. 18) speaks of the line of the Preachers of the Gospel as extending, like that of the Natural Elements themselves, to the ends of the earth. "Their Line is gone out through all the earth, and their words to the end of the world." And it is probable that the Apostle refers here to the Psalmist's words. Cp. Rom. x. 18.

St. Paul's μέτρον of extension is described by himself in Gal. ii. 8, 9. Rom. i. 14; and God interfered from time to time, by special revelation, to declare His κανόνα of direction. See Acts xvi. 6. 9, 10.

— κανόνος] (1) Rule, from קָנֶה, kaneh (Ezek. xl. 5), κάννα, κανών, Latin canna (reed), Engl. cane, a measuring rod or rule.

Hence the Canon of Scripture; which is, as it were, put into the hands of the Church by the Holy Spirit, Who wrote the Canonical Books of Holy Scripture, as the Rule by which all Doctrines are to be measured. Cp. 1 Pet. iv. 11, and the authorities cited in the Editor's Lectures on the Canon of Scripture, p. 6, and below on Rev. xi. 1.

The word is used by St. Paul here and Gal. vi. 16. Phil. iii. 16.

(2) κανὼν also is used for the line which marks a special allotment of labour and assignment of territory, and the course along which a person was to run; hence it was an athletic term; see Jul. Pollux, iii. 151, τὸ μέτρον τοῦ πηδήματος κανών.

Consequently, κανὼν came to signify a state of life, a τάγμα, a λειτουργία, function or ministry. Thus S. Clement, in his Epistle to the Corinthians, 41: ἕκαστος ἐν τῷ ἰδίῳ τάγματι εὐχαριστείτω τῷ Θεῷ, μὴ παρεκβαίνων τὸν ὡρισμένον τῆς λειτουργίας αὐτοῦ κανόνα.

This appears to be its sense here. And St. Paul himself explains it by his expression στοιχεῖν κανόνι (Gal. vi. 16. Phil. iii. 16; and see here, vv. 15 and 16), to walk by a line measured ὡς μὴ ἐφικνούμενοι εἰς ὑμᾶς ὑπερεκτείνομεν ἑαυτούς· ἄχρι γὰρ καὶ ὑμῶν m Rom. 15. 20. ἐφθάσαμεν ἐν τῷ εὐαγγελίῳ τοῦ Χριστοῦ· 15 [m] οὐκ εἰς τὰ ἄμετρα καυχώμενοι ἐν ἀλλοτρίοις κόποις, ἐλπίδα δὲ ἔχοντες, αὐξανομένης τῆς πίστεως ὑμῶν, ἐν ὑμῖν μεγαλυνθῆναι κατὰ τὸν κανόνα ἡμῶν εἰς περισσείαν, 16 εἰς τὰ ὑπερέκεινα ὑμῶν εὐαγγελίσασθαι, οὐκ ἐν ἀλλοτρίῳ κανόνι εἰς τὰ ἕτοιμα καυχήσασθαι.

n Isa. 65. 16. Jer. 9. 23, 24. 1 Cor. 1. 31. o Prov. 27. 2. Rom. 2. 29. 1 Cor. 4. 5. a ch. 5. 13. & ver. 16. & 12. 6. b John 3. 29. Col. 1. 28. 1 Cor. 4. 15. c Gen. 3. 4. John 8. 44. Col. 2. 4, 8.
17 [n] Ὁ δὲ καυχώμενος, ἐν Κυρίῳ καυχάσθω· 18 [o] οὐ γὰρ ὁ ἑαυτὸν συνιστάνων ἐκεῖνός ἐστι δόκιμος, ἀλλ' ὃν ὁ Κύριος συνίστησιν.
XI. 1 [a] Ὄφελον ἀνείχεσθέ μου μικρόν τι ἀφροσύνης· ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀνέχεσθέ
μου. 2 [b] Ζηλῶ γὰρ ὑμᾶς Θεοῦ ζήλῳ· ἡρμοσάμην γὰρ ὑμᾶς ἑνὶ ἀνδρὶ παρθένον ἁγνὴν παραστῆσαι τῷ Χριστῷ· 3 [c] φοβοῦμαι δὲ, μήπως, ὡς ὁ ὄφις ἐξηπάτησεν Εὔαν ἐν τῇ πανουργίᾳ αὐτοῦ, οὕτω φθαρῇ τὰ νοήματα ὑμῶν ἀπὸ τῆς ἁπλότητος καὶ τῆς ἁγνότητος τῆς εἰς τὸν Χριστόν.
d Gal. 1. 7, 8.
4 [d] Εἰ μὲν γὰρ ὁ ἐρχόμενος ἄλλον Ἰησοῦν κηρύσσει ὃν οὐκ ἐκηρύξαμεν, ἢ e 1 Cor. 15. 10. ch. 12. 11. Gal. 2. 6.
Πνεῦμα ἕτερον λαμβάνετε ὃ οὐκ ἐλάβετε, ἢ εὐαγγέλιον ἕτερον ὃ οὐκ ἐδέξασθε, καλῶς ἀνείχεσθε. 5 [e] Λογίζομαι γὰρ μηδὲν ὑστερηκέναι τῶν ὑπερλίαν ἀπο-and marked out as a guide; in which sense, the line itself may be called a regula, or rule.

---

14. οὐ γὰρ ὡς μὴ κ.τ.λ.] for we are not overstretching ourselves, as if we were not reaching unto you. We are not straining ourselves by an unnatural effort (as it were) to grasp at you, as if you were not within our arm's length. For (he adds) we arrived at you, we did attain to you (ἐφθάσαμεν) in our appointed range of preaching the Gospel. On the difference between οὐ and μὴ here, cp. 1 Cor. ix. 26. Winer, p. 421.

— ἐφθάσαμεν] we arrived. Luke xi. 20. Rom. ix. 31. Phil. iii. 16. St. Paul might well say this, for he had been at Corinth, and had preached the Gospel there for a year and six months with great success. Acts xviii. 11.

15. ἐν ὑμῖν μεγαλυνθῆναι] to grow in, by, and with your growth.

17. Ὁ δὲ καυχώμενος] But he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord. 1 Cor. i. 31.

18. οὐ γάρ] αὐτεπαινέτους μισεῖ Θεός. Clemens Rom. c. 30.

— συνιστάνων] So B, D, E, F, G.—Elz. συνιστῶν. The form συνιστάνοντες may probably be the correct one in iv. 2; vi. 4. Cp. iii. 1, and above, v. 12.

CH. XI. 1. Ὄφελον] Cp. 1 Cor. iv. 8. Winer, § 41, p. 270.

— ἀνείχεσθε—μικρόν τι ἀφροσύνης] Would that ye could bear with me in a little folly!—"utinam sustineretis modicum quid insipientiæ." (Vulg.) So B, D, E, and Lach., Tisch., Meyer, Alf. Elz. inserts τῆς before ἀφροσύνης, which would give the sense "my folly," which is less suitable here. Cp. v. 16, μικρόν τι καυχήσωμαι.

2. Ζηλῶ γὰρ ὑμᾶς Θεοῦ ζήλῳ] For I am jealous over you, and zealous for you, with a godly jealousy and zeal. See above on Gal. iv. 17, 18, which affords the best comment on this passage.

— ἡρμοσάμην] I betrothed you: when I preached to you at Corinth. Prov. xix. 14, παρὰ Κυρίου ἁρμόζεται γυνὴ ἀνδρί. Do not suppose, that, because I speak of jealousy, I wish to have myself regarded by you as the Bridegroom. No, I am only the paranymph. I have not sought you for myself, but I have brought you as a bride to Christ. "He that hath the bride is the Bridegroom"—Christ—and He alone (John iii. 29).

On this use of ἁρμόζομαι in the Middle Voice, see Loesner, p. 321.

— ὑμᾶς—παρθένον ἁγνήν] you as a pure Virgin. The Church is like the blessed Mary, a Virgin and a Mother. S. Aug., Serm. i. de Verb. Dom., "Ecclesiæ concessit Christus in Spiritu, quod Mater Ejus habuit in corpore, ut et Mater et Virgo sit." Serm. 16, de Temp., "Ecclesia Mater est visceribus charitatis, Virgo integritate fidei." S. Ambrose ad Ev. S. Luc. xv. 18, "Vir Christus est, Uxor Ecclesia; caritate Uxor, integritate Virgo."

And such is the duty of each Christian soul, espoused to Christ in baptism, and pledged to be true to Him, in purity of faith and holiness of life, in hope of being admitted to share in the future bliss of the Bride glorified in heaven.

As Aug. says (Serm. 93), "In corde omnes virginitatem habere debent," and he compares the Christian soul to the wise Virgins in Matt. xxv. 1—13, where see note; and (in Johann. Tract. 13), "Virginitas mentis est integra fides, solida spes, sincera charitas."

— ἑνὶ ἀνδρί] to one husband. Christianity is the Marriage of the soul to Christ, as the single object of affection, expressed in v. 3 by ἁπλότης, and distinguished from the spiritual Polygamy of Heathenism, and the spiritual Fornication of Heresy.

3. φοβοῦμαι δὲ, μήπως, ὡς ὁ ὄφις ἐξηπάτησεν Εὔαν] but I fear lest by some means, as the serpent deceived Eve. A clear assertion of the reality of the appearance of Satan in the form of a serpent to Eve in Paradise. Cp. Rev. xx. 2, τὸν ὄφιν τὸν ἀρχαῖον, ὅς ἐστι διάβολος.

As Adam was a type of Christ, so Eve, the spouse of Adam, and "the Mother of all living," was a type of Christ's Church. As Eve was taken from the side of Adam when asleep, so the Church was formed from the side of Christ on the Cross. As Eve was united to Adam by God, so the Church to Christ. And as the Devil tempted Eve, so he tempts the Church. Compare what St. John reveals in the Apocalypse (xii. 9—17), of the Serpent's rage against the Woman (i. e. the Church) in the wilderness.

— ἐξηπάτησεν] deceived. Compare the statement in 1 Tim. ii. 14.

St. Paul dwells mainly on the subtlety of this false Teacher; he describes him as πανοῦργος, as a δόλιος ἐργάτης (v. 13), disguised as an Angel of light.

It appears, then, that this false Teacher did not openly impugn the Apostle's doctrine (cp. v. 4), but attempted surreptitiously to supplant his authority.

— τῆς ἁπλότητος] the singleness of your love, and reverence and devotion to Christ as your one Husband.

— καὶ τ. ἁγνότητος] and the purity. Not in Elz., but in B, D, E, F, G.—D, E place τῆς ἁγνότητος first. Cp. 2 Cor. i. 12, where ἁγιότητι and ἁπλότητι are interchanged in the MSS. by reason of their similarity (ΑΠΛΟΤΗΤΙ and ΑΓΙΟΤΗΤΙ), which probably occasioned the omission of one of the two substantives here. Ἁγνότητος has a special reference to παρθένος ἁγνὴ in v. 2.

4. Εἰ μὲν γὰρ ὁ ἐρχόμενος] For if he that cometh preacheth another Jesus —. There is a severe censure in these words, which is carefully to be noted. Ὁ ἐρχόμενος is he who cometh; i. e. he who is not sent with a regular ordination and mission. This is the true character of an unauthorized Teacher, such as St. Paul here describes; and is the term which our Lord Himself had used in this sense in the Gospel where He says that all who came before Him were thieves and robbers. See note on John x. 8.

Hence ὁ ἐρχόμενος here, the Teacher who sends himself, is contrasted with the Apostle who is sent by another, namely, by Christ. And therefore St. Paul, speaking of himself here, as distinguished from this self-sent comer, who would have supplanted him (v. 5), says, "I reckon that I was in no respect behind the chiefest Apostles." See also on xii. 12, "Truly the signs of the Apostle were wrought by me among you in miracles and mighty works;" where ὁ ἀπόστολος is opposed to ὁ ἐρχόμενος.

4, 5. ἄλλον Ἰησοῦν κηρύσσει—καλῶς ἀνείχεσθε. Λογίζομαι γὰρ—ἀποστόλων] You might well have tolerated him, if he is able to reveal to you another, or second, Jesus (ἄλλον, not ἕτερον: see above on Gal. i. 7), an additional Saviour (cp. John xiv. 16, ἄλλον παράκλητον), besides the Jesus who was preached to you by me. And you might reasonably have borne with your new self-sent Instructor, if you are now receiving (λαμβάνετε) from him a different Spirit (ἕτερον) from that Holy Ghost Who στόλων. 6 [f] Εἰ δὲ καὶ ἰδιώτης τῷ λόγῳ, ἀλλ' οὐ τῇ γνώσει· ἀλλ' ἐν παντὶ φανερωθέντες ἐν πᾶσιν εἰς ὑμᾶς.

7 [g] [] Ἢ ἁμαρτίαν ἐποίησα ἐμαυτὸν ταπεινῶν ἵνα ὑμεῖς ὑψωθῆτε, ὅτι δωρεὰν τὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ εὐαγγέλιον εὐηγγελισάμην ὑμῖν; 8 [h] [] Ἄλλας ἐκκλησίας ἐσύλησα, λαβὼν ὀψώνιον πρὸς τὴν ὑμῶν διακονίαν· 9 καὶ παρὼν πρὸς ὑμᾶς καὶ ὑστερηθεὶς οὐ κατενάρκησα οὐδενός· τὸ γὰρ ὑστέρημά μου προσανεπλήρωσαν οἱ ἀδελφοὶ ἐλθόντες ἀπὸ Μακεδονίας· καὶ ἐν παντὶ ἀβαρῆ ὑμῖν ἐμαυτὸν ἐτήρησα, καὶ τηρήσω. 10 [i] [*] Ἔστιν ἀλήθεια Χριστοῦ ἐν ἐμοί, ὅτι ἡ καύχησις αὕτη οὐ φραγήσεται εἰς ἐμὲ ἐν τοῖς κλίμασι τῆς Ἀχαΐας. 11 [k] Διατί; ὅτι οὐκ ἀγαπῶ ὑμᾶς; ὁ Θεὸς οἶδεν. 12 [l] [a] Ὃ δὲ ποιῶ καὶ ποιήσω, ἵνα ἐκκόψω τὴν ἀφορμὴν τῶν θελόν-f 1 Cor. 1. 17. & 2. 1, 13. Eph 3. 4. ch. 4. 2. & 5. 11. & 12 12.

g ch. 12. 13, 16. 1 Cor. 9. 6, 12.
h Acts 20. 33. & 12. 13. 1 Thess. 2. 9. 2 Thess. 3. 8. Phil. 4. 10, 15.
i Rom. 9. 1. 1 Cor. 9. 15.
k ch. 6. 11. & 12. 15.
l 1 Cor. 9. 12.

has been bestowed upon you through me. And you might well have borne with him, if you yourselves are accepting (δέχεσθε) a different Gospel from that which you have already accepted at my hands.

That is,—If my Apostleship to you had been defective (εἰ ὑστέρησεν) either in the terms of salvation which I preached to you in Jesus my Saviour, or in the supplies of the Holy Spirit which were dispensed to you by me in my Gospel, and by the effusion of grace in the Sacraments and laying on of hands, administered by me,—if, in a word, I, your Apostle, had failed in my Apostolic work; and if this self-sent Comer is able to supply my failings, and to make you abound more largely in spiritual wealth (πλουσιωτέρους ὑμᾶς ποιεῖ κατὰ χάριν, Chrys.), then, indeed, you might well have borne with him.

But none of these suppositions can be admitted; for, I reckon that I have not fallen short in any respect of the very chiefest Apostles (cp. xii. 11, τῶν ὑπερλίαν ἀποστόλων). So Chrys. and others. Or these words may be ironical, and signify "those over much Apostles" (Beza, Olshausen, De Wette, Meyer, A. V. R.). See also xii. 11. And this my Apostolic power was made manifest among you in all things (v. 6); and the signs of the Apostle (the sent Ambassador of Christ, contrasted with the self-ordained Comer, ὁ ἐρχόμενος) were wrought among you in miracles and mighty works (xii. 12).

Observe, that this false Teacher, to whom St. Paul alludes, does not appear to have ventured to censure the Apostle's teaching; but only to have insinuated certain objections against the mere externals of St. Paul's ministry; such as his personal appearance, his address, his utterance, his not taking wages of the Corinthians (vv. 6, 7); and, on such pleas as these, to have set himself up as a rival to the Apostle.

Here, then, is a warning against those, who say in fair speeches, and with a flattering semblance of friendship, that they have no objections to make against the Doctrines of the Church, and yet separate themselves from her Communion; and perhaps obtrude themselves as rival Teachers against her lawfully sent and ordained Ministers, or abet those who are guilty of doing so. Their case is one of Schism—simple and formal Schism—which is condemned here by the Apostle, and in his former Epistle, as a carnal work; 1 Cor. iii. 1—5.

6. ἰδιώτης τῷ λόγῳ] untutored in speech, not a professional rhetorician. Cp. 1 Cor. xiv. 16, and Acts iv. 13, on the proper signification of ἰδιώτης.

S. Augustine (de Doctr. Christ. iv. 7) supposes that St. Paul is only adopting the language of his accusers here; for (says Aug.) the Apostle was not, nor could he allow himself to be, rude in speech ("imperitus sermone"), his eloquence being unrivalled.

This is true; but ἰδιώτης τῷ λόγῳ does not mean one who is not eloquent as a speaker, but one who has not learnt eloquence by the rules of rhetorical Schools: and in this sense the Apostle was ἰδιώτης τῷ λόγῳ, at the same time that he surpassed in eloquence all who had been trained in the schools of human Oratory.

— οὐ τῇ γνώσει] not in knowledge. What matters it, then, as to my speech? What am I the worse, even if I be not tutored by your Greek Teachers? What is the use of a key of gold, if it cannot unlock the treasures of divine Knowledge? and what is the harm of a key of wood, if it can open them? Aug. (de doctr. Christ. iv. 26.)

7. Ἢ ἁμαρτίαν ἐποίησα;] Did I commit a sin? Irony.

— δωρεὰν—εὐηγγελισάμην] I preached gratuitously. I waived my right to ministerial wages from you. This was done for your spiritual edification (see 1 Cor. ix. 4—12); and yet even this is now turned as an argument against me, as if I had no confidence in my own claim to maintenance from those who were taught by me!

9. καὶ ὑστερηθεὶς] and being reduced to want, I—your Apostle—who had not been a whit lacking in my spiritual gifts to you (v. 5), even I was allowed by you to lack, in your carnal dues to me!

— οὐ κατενάρκησα] A word full of meaning, for which it is not possible to find an equivalent in English;

The metaphor is from the fish νάρκη, or torpedo, which attaches itself to other creatures, and produces torpor in that to which it attaches itself, and then endeavours to derive nourishment from it. See Athen. vii. p. 314, C, νάρκη θηρεύει εἰς τροφὴν ἑαυτῆς τὰ ἰχθύδια, προσαπτομένη καὶ νάρκαν ποιοῦσα. Hence Hesych. κατενάρκησα = κατεβάρυνα. Cp. below, xii. 14, where the word is repeated.

I was not like a torpedo to any among you; I did not attach myself to any for the purpose of first rendering him torpid by my touch, and then sucking nourishment from him, and preying upon him.

This might be truly said of False Teachers, who attach themselves to the unwary, and beguile them into a state of lethargy and swoon-like trance (which they call faith) with the spiritual narcotics of their delusive doctrines; and then, having spoiled them of their Reason and their Conscience, make them their victims, and prey upon them.

Too many in the present age may know by painful experience what this spiritual κατανάρκησις is.

— τὸ γὰρ ὑστέρημα—Μακεδονίας] for the brethren who came from the poorer Macedonia to the wealthy Corinth supplied my needs. This allusion to the supply of St. Paul's wants at Corinth by the brethren (Silas and Timothy) coming to him with gifts from the Churches of Macedonia, is explained in the history of his visit to Corinth in the Acts of the Apostles; see xviii. 3—5, and notes there.

10. οὐ φραγήσεται] this glorying of mine shall not be obstructed, as by a φραγμὸς or fence. St. Paul uses the expression φράττειν στόμα, to shut and stop the opening of the mouth as by a hedge, Rom. iii. 19. Heb. xi. 33.

The introduction of this figure of a φραγμὸς, or work of defence, thrown across an outlet to block it up, and to prevent the ingress of something from without, which endeavours to enter it, and the application of this metaphor to the regions of Achaia, may perhaps have been suggested to St. Paul by the frequent endeavours to obstruct the passage of the Isthmus of Corinth, in order to prevent aggressions from the North.

"Nothing can be more obvious and natural than the project of erecting works of defence across the Isthmus for the protection of the Peninsula ('the regions of Achaia') . . . so we find that this operation is often alluded to in ancient History. See Herod. viii. 71. Diodor. Sic. xv. 68. Xenophon (Hell. vii. 1)." Col. Leake (Morea iii. 297).

Some foundations of this Isthmian wall still remain, which was a work of the Corinthians, and a part of that system for defending the Corinthia which the position of Corinth naturally suggested. Leake (iii. 304).

St. Paul is writing from the North of the Isthmus—from Macedonia. He has told the Corinthians that the line of his spiritual Province reaches to Corinth (x. 14), and he now adds that no obstructions of theirs can exclude and fence him off from displaying his power, and from glorying in Christ, "in the regions of Achaia."

12. ἐκκόψω τὴν ἀφορμήν] I will cut off the means of attack. Another military metaphor. Those false Teachers among you perhaps think to block up my entrance to you at Corinth, as if I were an invader and an enemy.

But my stratagem—which they think to defeat—will have the effect, as it was designed to have, of cutting off their ἀφορμὴν, or sallying place, from their stronghold, in which they have fenced themselves, and from which they think to attack me.

On the word ἀφορμὴ, see below, Rom. vii. 11.

των ἀφορμὴν, ἵνα ἐν ᾧ καυχῶνται εὑρεθῶσι καθὼς καὶ ἡμεῖς. [13] [m] Οἱ γὰρ τοιοῦτοι ψευδαπόστολοι, ἐργάται δόλιοι, μετασχηματιζόμενοι εἰς ἀποστόλους Χριστοῦ. [14] Καὶ οὐ θαῦμα, αὐτὸς γὰρ ὁ Σατανᾶς μετασχηματίζεται εἰς ἄγγελον φωτός· [15] [n] οὐ μέγα οὖν, εἰ καὶ οἱ διάκονοι αὐτοῦ μετασχηματίζονται ὡς διάκονοι δικαιοσύνης· ὧν τὸ τέλος ἔσται κατὰ τὰ ἔργα αὐτῶν.

[16] [o] Πάλιν λέγω, μή τις με δόξῃ ἄφρονα εἶναι· εἰ δὲ μή γε, κἂν ὡς ἄφρονα δέξασθέ με, ἵνα κἀγὼ μικρόν τι καυχήσωμαι. [17] [p] Ὃ λαλῶ, οὐ κατὰ Κύριον λαλῶ, ἀλλ' ὡς ἐν ἀφροσύνῃ, ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ ὑποστάσει τῆς καυχήσεως. [18] [q] Ἐπεὶ πολλοὶ καυχῶνται κατὰ τὴν σάρκα, κἀγὼ καυχήσομαι. [19] [r] Ἡδέως γὰρ ἀνέχεσθε τῶν ἀφρόνων φρόνιμοι ὄντες· [20] [s] ἀνέχεσθε γὰρ, εἴ τις ὑμᾶς καταδουλοῖ, εἴ τις κατεσθίει, εἴ τις λαμβάνει, εἴ τις ἐπαίρεται, εἴ τις εἰς πρόσωπον ὑμᾶς δέρει.

[21] [t] Κατὰ ἀτιμίαν λέγω, ὡς ὅτι ἡμεῖς ἠσθενήσαμεν· ἐν ᾧ δ' ἄν τις τολμᾷ, ἐν m Acts 15. 1, 24. & 20. 30. Gal. 1. 7. & 2. 4. & 4. 17. & 6. 12. Phil. 3. 2. Tit. 1. 10, 11. n Phil. 3. 19.

o ch. 12. 6, 11.
p ch. 9. 4.
q ch. 10. 13. & 12. 6. Phil. 3. 3, 4.
r 1 Cor. 4. 10.
s Gal. 2. 4. & 4 9.
t Phil. 3. 4, 5.

— ἵνα—εὑρεθῶσι καθὼς καὶ ἡμεῖς] in order that they may be found even as we. Let it not be supposed that St. Paul indulges any vindictive feeling against his adversaries. No: in his Christian charity, he wishes that God may turn their hearts, and that they may be brought to the same temper of mind as himself; and that they may cease to vaunt themselves against him, and be found to be as he is, in what they glory; that is, that they may not glory in themselves, but in the Lord, as he does, and may do all for the glory of God. 1 Cor. i. 31. 2 Cor. x. 17, "Let him that glorieth glory in the Lord." Cp. 2 Thess. i. 4. 12. Gal. vi. 14. 2 Cor. xi. 30; xii. 9.

Compare his charitable speech when in bonds at Cæsarea, "I would to God that all who hear me this day, might become such as I also am, save these bonds" (Acts xxvi. 29).

Our Blessed Lord had set the example of endeavouring to cut off occasion for the indulgence of evil passions, and of removing stumbling-blocks from the way of His bitterest enemies, and of winning them over (if they would be won) by love and wisdom, to Himself.

It is hardly necessary to observe, that St. Paul cannot mean, that wherein the false teachers glory in preaching the Gospel freely, they may be found even as we; for their objection to him was, that he did not venture to claim wages; and they did not preach without reward. See v. 20. 1 Cor. ix. 12.

14. αὐτὸς γὰρ ὁ Σατανᾶς] for even Satan himself transformeth himself into an angel of light. See Mede's Essay, Works, p. 225; Bp. Sanderson, i. p. 244; note above on Matt. vii. 16. 20; and Dr. South's Sermon, preached before the University of Oxford, on this text, and applying it to the History of the Christian Church, and to that of the Church of England (Sermons, iii. pp. 450—495, and inserted in Christian Institutes, iv. pp. 1—35).

16. κἂν ὡς ἄφρονα δ. μ.] receive me—even though ye receive me (καὶ ἐὰν δέξησθέ με) as a fool. Cp. Mark vi. 56. Acts v. 15. Winer, Meyer.

17. Ὃ λαλῶ, οὐ κατὰ Κύριον λαλῶ] What I am now saying, I am not saying according to the Lord; that is, not according to the Lord, but by constraint from you, who extort these words of glorying from me.

Yet he does not thereby deny his own Inspiration in what he now writes, as has been alleged by some.

The case of self-praise is like that of some other things uttered by the tongue, which are not in themselves according to the Lord (κατὰ Κύριον), but are even from the Evil One (ἐκ τοῦ πονηροῦ). They owe their origin to men's bad passions, and to their strifes and differences. But yet they are, under certain circumstances, expedient and necessary, and are conducive to the glory of God.

Such particularly are Oaths, as Christ Himself and His Apostles teach And therefore God Himself does not refuse to confirm His promises by an oath (Heb. vi. 16, 17), and He authorizes and prompts holy men, on fit occasions, to swear. See above on Matt. v. 34.

So self-praise. It is ἐκ τοῦ πονηροῦ. But, like an oath, it may, under certain circumstances, on account of the bad passions and jealous calumnies of men, become expedient and necessary, especially for those, who, like St. Paul, have the public duties of a sacred ministry to discharge, and whose official character cannot be disparaged without injury to God and the Church, whose Ministers they are.

And it is not unworthy of remark, that St. Paul concludes this vehement burst of self-collaudation with a solemn oath. See below on v. 31.

Self-praise in the mouth of St. Paul is like the sword of the Philistines in the hands of David,—a suitable instrument for destroying the enemies of God.

As Bp. Sanderson observes (i. 119) on this case of St. Paul, "Your undervaluing of me (your Apostle) to the great prejudice of the Gospel, but advantage of false Teachers, hath made that glorying now necessary, which had been otherwise but vanity and folly."

It was therefore a function worthy of that Divine Spirit, Who inspired the Apostle in writing this Epistle for the edification of the Church in every age, to direct him in this difficult task of vindicating himself. Cp. Lee on Inspiration, Lect. vi. pp. 297, 298.

Consequently, St. Paul distinctly asserts here that he is not to be regarded as ἄφρων, v. 16. Let no man think me a fool, he says, but if you do think me so, receive me as such, that I also may boast a little. Cp. xii. 6.

Indeed, we may magnify God's goodness in thus overruling evil for good, so as to make evil itself ministerial to His glory.

If the Evil Spirit had not tempted his emissaries at Corinth to array themselves as angels of Light (vv. 14, 15), and to set themselves up as rivals of St. Paul, and to disparage his authority, and to depreciate his acts, the Church of Christ would never have possessed this and the following chapters of this Epistle, and would never have known what it now does of the triumphs of divine Grace working in the heroic actions, and patient sufferings, and glorious revelations of St. Paul. See above, Introduction, p. 75.

Even now it must be remembered, that this self-vindication falls short of all that could be said on this point.

Much more of Apostolic labour is to be added to this record, written about ten years before his martyrdom. But from what is recorded, the rest may be inferred; and that is reserved for the Revelation of the Great Day.

18. κατὰ τὴν σάρκα] A stronger expression than κατὰ σάρκα. They not only glory κατὰ σάρκα, but κατὰ τὴν σάρκα, according to their flesh, i. e. their carnal and external advantages.

19. ἀνέχεσθε κ.τ.λ.] φρόνιμος ἡδέως μωρῶν ἀνέχῃ. Theophil. Antioch. (ad Autol. iii. p. 119.)

20. λαμβάνει] taketh wages. See v. 8, ἄλλας ἐκκλησίας ἐσύλησα λαβὼν ὀψώνιον. And so Chrys. And though this was not an act of violence, yet, as it was a permanent charge, the payment of such wages might well be noted as a proof of ἀνοχὴ on the part of the Corinthians with respect to others, especially when they did not give such a regular maintenance to St. Paul. See also this use of λαμβάνειν in connexion with μισθὸν, 1 Cor. iii. 8; and applied to tithes, Heb. vii. 8, 9; and λῆψις, Phil. iv. 15. Cp. also 3 John 7, μηδὲν λαμβάνοντες (taking no wages for ministerial service) ἀπὸ τῶν ἐθνικῶν. See above, note on 1 Cor. ix. 6, in illustration of the fact that such payment would be regarded as a burden by the Corinthians, and other Gentile Christians.

— εἰς πρόσωπον—δέρει] smiteth you on the face, as an insult (Matt. v. 39. Luke xxii. 64. Acts xxiii. 2. 1 Cor. iv. 11. 1 Tim. iii. 3), and perhaps, fanatically, with a pretence of divine enthusiasm and prophetic zeal. Cp. 1 Kings xxii. 24. Neh. xiii. 25. Isa. lviii. 4. Bengel.

21. Κατὰ ἀτιμίαν λέγω, ὡς ὅτι ἡ. ἠ.] I am speaking this with reference to dishonour, to which I have been subjected by some among you. Cp. vi. 8, διὰ δόξης καὶ ἀτιμίας. On this use of κατὰ, see Phil. iv. 11, οὐχ ὅτι καθ' ὑστέρησιν λέγω. Acts iii. 17. I am pleading apologetically, as one who would defend himself from ignominy. I am entreating you to bear with me, as if I were a burden to you! I am thus debasing myself, as if it were true that I were feeble; whereas the fact is, the weapons that ἀφροσύνῃ λέγω, τολμῶ κἀγώ. 22 [u] Ἑβραῖοί εἰσι; κἀγώ· Ἰσραηλῖταί εἰσι; κἀγώ· σπέρμα Ἀβραάμ εἰσι; κἀγώ· 23 [v] διάκονοι Χριστοῦ εἰσι; παραφρονῶν λαλῶ, ὑπὲρ ἐγώ· ἐν κόποις περισσοτέρως, ἐν πληγαῖς ὑπερβαλλόντως, ἐν φυλακαῖς περισσοτέρως, ἐν θανάτοις πολλάκις· 24 [x] ὑπὸ Ἰουδαίων πεντάκις τεσσαράκοντα παρὰ μίαν ἔλαβον, 25 [y] τρὶς ἐρράβδίσθην, ἅπαξ ἐλιθάσθην, τρὶς ἐναυάγησα, νυχθήμερον ἐν τῷ βυθῷ πεποίηκα, 26 [z] ὁδοιπορίαις πολλάκις, κινδύνοις ποταμῶν, κινδύνοις λῃστῶν, κινδύνοις ἐκ γένους, κινδύνοις ἐξ ἐθνῶν, κινδύνοις ἐν πόλει, κινδύνοις ἐν ἐρημίᾳ, κινδύνοις ἐν θαλάσσῃ, κινδύνοις ἐν ψευδαδέλφοις· 27 [a] κόπῳ καὶ μόχθῳ, ἐν ἀγρυπνίαις πολλάκις, ἐν λιμῷ καὶ δίψει, ἐν νηστείαις πολλάκις, ἐν ψύχει καὶ γυμνότητι· 28 [b] χωρὶς τῶν παρεκτὸς, ἡ ἐπίστασίς μοι ἡ καθ' ἡμέραν, ἡ μέριμνα πασῶν τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν. 29 Τίς ἀσθενεῖ, καὶ οὐκ ἀσθενῶ; [c] τίς σκανδαλίζεται, καὶ οὐκ ἐγὼ πυροῦμαι; 30 [d] Εἰ καυχᾶσθαι δεῖ, τὰ τῆς ἀσθενείας μου καυχήσομαι. 31 [e] Ὁ Θεὸς καὶ Πατὴρ τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ u Acts 22. 3 Rom. 11. 1.

v ch. 6. 4, 5. Acts 9. 16. & 21. 11. 1 Cor. 15. 10, 31.
x Deut. 25. 3.
y Acts 16. 22. & 14. 19.
z Acts 9. 23. & 14. 5. & 17. 5. & 19. 28. & 20. 3. 2 Thess. 3. 8.
a ch. 6. 5. 1 Cor. 4. 11.
b Acts 20. 18, &c. Rom. 1. 14.
c 1 Cor. 9. 22.
d ch. 12. 5. & 9. 10.
e Rom. 1. 9. & 9. 1. ch. 1. 23. Gal. 1. 20. Phil. 1. 8. 1 Thess. 2. 5.

---

we wield are mighty (x. 4), and we can do all things through Him Who strengtheneth us (xii. 9. Phil. iv. 13).

But let me now change my tone,—If any one is bold, I am bold also.

22. Ἑβραῖοι] Hebrews. Acts vi. 1. Phil. iii. 5.

23. ἐν κόποις] in labours. This is the subject of my glorying. Not the earthly advantages which I had enjoyed, but the sufferings which I endured.

On St. Paul's actions and sufferings, as recorded in these verses, see the eloquent passages in Greg. Nazian. Orat. ii. pp. 38—40.

24. παρὰ μίαν] save one. See Deut. xxv. 3. Josephus, Antt. iv. 8, speaks of πληγὰς μιᾶς λειπούσης τεσσαράκοντα. See also the Rabbinical Authorities in Wetstein's note here, on the scrupulous care of the Jews in this matter.

On the penal discipline exercised among the Jews by scourging in the Synagogue, see on Acts xxvi. 11. Cp. Acts xxii. 19, δέρων κατὰ τὰς συναγωγάς. And cp. Matt. xxiii. 34, μαστιγώσετε ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς ὑμῶν.

On the use of παρὰ here, cp. Winer, p. 360.

25. ἐρράβδίσθην] I was beaten with rods by heathen Magistrates, as at Philippi. (Acts xvi. 22.)

— ἅπαξ ἐλιθάσθην] once was I stoned at Lystra. (Acts xiv. 19.) He had been almost stoned at Iconium. (Acts xiv. 5.)

It is observable—

(1) That of these sufferings, viz. beating with rods, stoning, shipwreck, which were endured by St. Paul within the period contained in the Acts of the Apostles, the greater number are not mentioned in that History by St. Luke.

And (2) that the History of St. Luke itself concludes about five years before St. Paul's Martyrdom, and therefore leaves a large portion of his sufferings altogether unnoticed.

But (3) that St. Luke gives a record of one beating with rods (Acts xvi. 22), of one stoning (Acts xiv. 19), and of one shipwreck, suffered by St. Paul (Acts xxvii. 41).

This is according to the plan of that History (as is observed above in the Introduction to that Book, p. xii), viz. to present the world with specimens of what was done and suffered by one or two Apostles as specimens of the Apostolic body, and to leave the rest to be inferred from those one or two cases; "ab uno Disce omnes." — νυχθήμερον—πεποίηκα] I have passed a night and a day in the deep, i. e. the deep water, with no rest for the sole of my feet (on the ground) for that time. That this is the natural interpretation (which is given by Chrys., Theophyl., and others) seems clear, especially from the connexion of the words with what precedes, ἐναυάγησα. I suffered shipwreck thrice; and on one occasion, after being wrecked, did not reach the land for a night and a day, but remained in the deep water, swimming and tossed by the waves for that time.

Observe the use of the perfect here, and compare above, vii. 5.

28. χωρὶς τῶν παρεκτός] apart from the other things; which are παρὰ, beside, and ἐκτὸς, without.

— ἡ ἐπίστασίς μοι ἡ καθ' ἡμέραν] that which presseth upon me daily. "Instantia mea quotidiana." Vulg.

Ἐπίστασις is used in this sense in 2 Macc. vi. 3, ἡ ἐκ κακίας ἐπίστασις. And Theophrast. (C. Pl. ii. 9. 1) speaks of the ἐπίστασις πνευμάτων, "the continual stress of winds." And in Soph. (Antig. 225), φροντίδων ἐπιστάσεις may be rendered "curarum instantias, pressuras." Elz. has ἐπισύστασίς μου. But ἐπίστασις is in B, D, E, F, G, and μοι is in B, F, G.

— ἡ μέριμνα πασῶν τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν] the care of all the Churches. If there was any one Visible Head of all the Churches among the Apostles, it was not St. Peter, but St. Paul. Cp. note above on Acts xiii. 9 as to the Western Church.

29. Τίς ἀσθενεῖ—πυροῦμαι;] Who is weak, and I do not sympathize with him in his weakness? To the weak I become weak, in order to save the weak. (See on 1 Cor. ix. 22.) Who has a stumbling-block thrown in his way by another, and I am not immediately fired (πυροῦμαι) with sorrow, shame, and indignation at this outrage against one for whom Christ died (see 1 Cor. viii. 9—11), and at this breach of Christian Charity? (Rom. xiv. 15.)

30. τὰ τῆς ἀσθενείας] I will glory, not in my miracles, but in my infirmities; not in what I have done, but what I have suffered. "Vincit qui patitur." See further the note at end of the chapter.

31. Ὁ Θεὸς—οἶδεν] God—knoweth; a solemn adjuration (see above, 1 Cor. xv. 31. 2 Cor. i. 23), proving the great weight and importance of what he has said; and showing that, however he might seem to be speaking as a fool (ἄφρων), yet this ἀφροσύνη or folly was like μωρία Θεοῦ, the foolishness of God, as the Greeks accounted the Gospel (1 Cor. i. 21—23); and that, if he had been "beside himself," it was to God. (2 Cor. v. 13.) See above on v. 17.

— Ὁ Θεὸς καὶ Πατήρ] God, Who is also the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. See on Tit. ii. 13.

— οἶδεν—ὅτι οὐ ψεύδομαι] God knoweth that I lie not.

In what?

Not in the record that he had just been giving of his sufferings. These were public and notorious, and needed no such solemn adjuration.

But the Apostle's meaning is (and this is carefully to be noted, for otherwise the connexion of what precedes and what follows cannot be understood), Almighty God, the Omniscient Searcher of hearts, knows that I lie not in saying that I glory in my infirmities. He knows that I do not glory (as some do) in any supernatural endowments and spiritual gifts, such as working of miracles, speaking with tongues, and prophecy, but (what perhaps you cannot believe, and therefore I call God to attest the truth of what I say) that the things in which I most glory are my infirmities: the ignominies to which I have been exposed, and which I have now recorded, in being publicly beaten and scourged, and treated with contumely by my own kindred, the Jews, and by treacherous Christians; and the dangers and hardships by sea and land which I have endured, and from which I never delivered myself miraculously, or was rescued by any splendid interference of God in my behalf.

As he says in another place (2 Cor. xii. 9, 10), "Of myself I will not glory save only in my infirmities. I glory in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses."

And why does he glory in these? His answer is, Because by sufferings I am made like Christ; and because the power and goodness of God is most glorified in making use of so weak and despised an instrument as I am seen to be, in order to work out His great and gracious purposes; because God's strength is made perfect in my weakness. (2 Cor. xii. 9.) And since God's glory, and not my own glory, is the aim and end of all my actions, and since my doctrine to you is, "let him that glorieth, glory in the Lord" (1 Cor. i. 31. 2 Cor. x. 17); and since the Lord is most glorified in my weaknesses, therefore I glory in them,—and God, Who knows the secrets of my heart, knoweth that I lie not, when I say that I glory in them.

The connexion of this solemn declaration with what follows, will be pointed out at the close of the next note.

f Acts 9. 24, 25. οἶδεν, ὁ ὢν εὐλογητὸς εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας, ὅτι οὐ ψεύδομαι. 32 f Ἐν Δαμασκῷ ὁ ἐθνάρχης Ἀρέτα τοῦ βασιλέως ἐφρούρει τὴν Δαμασκηνῶν πόλιν πιάσαι με· g Josh. 2. 18. 1 Sam. 19. 12. 33 καὶ διὰ θυρίδος ἐν σαργάνῃ g ἐχαλάσθην διὰ τοῦ τείχους, καὶ ἐξέφυγον τὰς χεῖρας αὐτοῦ.

32. ὁ ἐθνάρχης Ἀρέτα] the Ethnarch, or Governor (according to the sense of the word as illustrated by Wetstein), appointed by Aretas the king (of Arabia Petræa), was guarding the city (ἐφρούρει). And in Acts ix. 24 it is said, the Jews were watching the gates of the city (παρετηροῦντο τὰς πύλας) day and night, in order to kill him. He therefore did not attempt to escape by the gates, but over the wall.

Observe, that St. Paul here describes Damascus as "the city of the Damascenes;" by which he seems to intimate that Damascus was not altogether subject to Aretas, but had some independent jurisdiction left, at the same time that Aretas had an Ethnarch there.

Damascus seems to have been then in the condition of a city nominally free, under the protection of a superior power.

As to the circumstances under which Aretas the king was enabled to exercise his influence at Damascus, and appoint an Ethnarch or Governor there, see above, "Chronological Synopsis" prefixed to the Acts of the Apostles, and notes on Acts ix. 2 and 24, where the incident here mentioned is described. Cp. Wieseler, Chronol. Synops. pp. 167—176. Dr. Kitto's Illustrations, pp. 153—5, and Howson, i. pp. 99—101.

After πιάσαι με Elz. adds θέλων, against the preponderance of the best MSS.

33. διὰ θυρίδος] by a window, probably in a house built on the city wall. Wetstein.

— ἐξέφυγον] I escaped. On the question as to the lawfulness of flight in persecution, in reference to the duty of the Christian Pastor, see on Matt. x. 23. St. Paul had not as yet been ordained to the Apostleship, when he escaped from Damascus (see Acts xiii. 3), and he knew that he was designed by Christ to preach the Gospel "to all men" (Acts xxii. 14; xxvi. 17), and he reserved himself for the work to which he would be afterwards ordained. He gave no scandal to the disciples by his flight; for it is specially mentioned that they aided him in it. Acts ix. 25. Cp. Acts xvii. 14. See also Acts viii. 1; xiv. 6.

32, 33.] But what, it may be asked, is the connexion between this incident at Damascus (which seems to be introduced very abruptly) and what goes before, and what follows?

A reply to this question has in part been suggested in the note on v. 31, οὐ ψεύδομαι. It may be continued as follows;

(1) As to what precedes.

St. Paul had called God to witness, that the things which he himself gloried in were his infirmities—not his miraculous powers and supernatural gifts—but the reproaches, insults, ignominies, distresses which he had suffered, without the exercise of any miracle to rescue him from them, as some might have expected would have been wrought for so great an Apostle, and as had been done more than once in the case of St. Peter. See Acts v. 19; xii. 7—11.

The reason why he gloried in his infirmities (as has been already stated), was because by suffering and shame he was made most like Him Who was "a Man of sorrows;" and Who "came to His own, and His own received Him not;" and because God was most glorified in working such wonderful results, as He had done, in the conversion of so many souls, by an instrument so weak and so despised by men as Paul was, and because the Gospel which he preached was thus shown to be not of man, but of God. 2 Cor. iv. 7.

God, Who alone sees the inmost recesses of the heart, and Whom I solemnly call to witness, knoweth that I lie not in thus glorying,—not in miracles and other supernatural gifts, which may bring glory to me,—and in which some other men (e. g. the Corinthian false Teachers) might be disposed to glory, but in my sufferings and indignities, which have exposed me to contempt, but which bring glory to Him.

He now proceeds to illustrate and confirm this solemn adjuration by a signal example;

In Damascus—that great City, the capital of Syria—whither, as you know, I had gone, invested with secular power and dignity, an envoy from the Jewish Sanhedrim, with full powers to execute their mandates; and where, if I had preferred worldly glory to the offence of the Cross of Christ, I should have been honourably entertained and aided by the Ethnarch of Aretas, the king, there I, who present myself before you as no whit inferior to the very chiefest Apostles, even there I was exposed to great danger. But I did not work any wonder to deliver myself, nor did God interfere to rescue me. I was watched by a military force, and was in great peril; but I, the Apostle of the Lord, did not go boldly forward, and encounter, and put to flight, my enemies, as the Prophets of old—Moses, Elijah, and Elisha—did theirs (2 Kings i. 10. Luke ix. 54. 2 Kings ii. 24), nor was I delivered by any glorious miracle, as Daniel of old (Dan. vi. 22), or as Peter in later days (Acts v. 19; xii. 7), but (mark, I confess the truth) I fled away from mine enemies. And the mode of my escape was ignominious and contemptible. I was let down concealed—and as if I were not a man, but consigned as a mere bale of goods—in a basket through a window in a house built on the wall, and so I escaped their hands. This was the manner in which I, who had come down to Damascus in worldly power, pomp, and glory, skulked away and absconded from it. I, the zealous persecutor of Christianity, endured this shame for Christ.

Believe me, then, I hide nothing from you,—my fears, my weaknesses, my most ignominious adventures. No; I glory in them. And why? Because they are the things which prove the power and love of God, in effecting such mighty works by one so weak.

Probably, this escape from Damascus had been made the occasion of obloquy against St. Paul. Probably, he had been taunted with it as a base and cowardly act, unworthy of an Apostle, by some of his adversaries and rivals at Corinth. He does not disguise the circumstance; he glories in it. He even reserves it for the last place in the catalogue of his sufferings for Christ.

(2) Next, as to the connexion of these two verses with what follows.

Observe the striking contrast.

He had said, that if he gloried, he would glory in the things concerning his infirmities: and he had therefore recounted them. He had just detailed one of the most humiliating (his escape from Damascus) as the climax of them all.

He now goes on and says, "To glory, verily, is not expedient for me." Οὐ συμφέρει, It is not profitable or edifying (1 Cor. vi. 12; x. 23) for me. Remark μοι, for me, reserved for the last emphatic place: To glory is not expedient for such an one as me, in any thing which concerns myself. In myself I am nothing but weakness. I know this, and I will act upon this knowledge. For I will now proceed to visions and revelations vouchsafed to me by the Lord.

Γὰρ is introduced here, as often, where a proposition is followed by the discussion of it, "ubi propositionem excipit tractatio." See Bengel, xii. 58; and cp. 1 Cor. xi. 26, and Winer, p. 403. Cp. Æschyl. Theb. 42, ἄνδρες γὰρ ἑπτὰ κ.τ.λ.

Observe also the contrast between μοι, for me, and Κυρίου, of the Lord, corresponding to each other at the ends of the two clauses.

See also μοι explained by ἐμαυτοῦ in xii. 5. I will not glory of myself, abstractedly as myself, save only in my infirmities. But I will glory of what has been done to me and in me by the love and power of the Lord.

Mark then the striking character of the transition from himself, simply as himself,—from Paul, simply as Paul,—to Paul the Apostle, enlightened by Visions of the Lord. Observe the transition from Paul simply as a man, to Paul as a man in Christ: from the σκεῦος ὀστρακινὸν (2 Cor. iv. 7) to the σκεῦος ἐκλογῆς (Acts ix. 15); from the earthen vessel of his own human weakness, to the chosen vessel of divine Grace.

I (he may now be understood to say), who in fear and trembling and in darkness was let down in a basket through a window in the wall, and so escaped by flight from Damascus (such I am simply in myself, weak and contemptible), I, the same Paul, as a man in Christ, and favoured with visions of the Lord, was caught up to the third heaven. I, who had been let down in the basket through a window, was carried up above the clouds through the golden portals of heaven (cp. Rev. iv. 1) to the bright regions of glory, and I was caught up to Paradise, to the peaceful abode of the blessed, and heard unutterable words, which it is not lawful for a man to reveal.

How striking the contrast! how sublime the transition! From Paul, the earthen vessel, let down in the basket at Damascus, to Paul, the chosen vessel, caught up by the Spirit to the third heaven, and to Paradise!

Hence the connexion is obvious; and it is to be regretted that, by the break made by the end of the chapter, the one part of this glorious picture of the great Apostle, drawn by his own hand, should ever be read without the other.

XII. [1] Καυχᾶσθαι δὴ οὐ συμφέρει μοι· ἐλεύσομαι γὰρ εἰς ὀπτασίας καὶ ἀποκαλύψεις Κυρίου.

[2] [a] Οἶδα ἄνθρωπον ἐν Χριστῷ, πρὸ ἐτῶν δεκατεσσάρων, εἴτε ἐν σώματι, οὐκ οἶδα, εἴτε ἐκτὸς τοῦ σώματος, οὐκ οἶδα, ὁ Θεὸς οἶδεν, ἁρπαγέντα τὸν τοιοῦτον ἕως τρίτου οὐρανοῦ. a Acts 9. 3. & 14. 6. & 22. 17. 1 Cor. 15. 8.

[3] [b] Καὶ οἶδα τὸν τοιοῦτον ἄνθρωπον, εἴτε ἐν σώματι, εἴτε ἐκτὸς τοῦ σώματος, b Luke 23. 43.
οὐκ οἶδα, ὁ Θεὸς οἶδεν, [4] ὅτι ἡρπάγη εἰς τὸν παράδεισον, καὶ ἤκουσεν ἄρρητα ῥήματα, ἃ οὐκ ἐξὸν ἀνθρώπῳ λαλῆσαι.

Ch. XII. 1. Καυχᾶσθαι δή] To glory, verily, I know, is not expedient for me; for (γὰρ) I will proceed to speak of Visions and Revelations from the Lord.

On the meaning and connexion of this with what precedes, see above, the note on xi. 32, 33.

These Visions and Revelations are described as of the Lord, that is, from Christ. So the Apocalypse is entitled "the Revelation of Jesus Christ." See on Rev. i. 1.

B, D, E, F, G have καυχᾶσθαι δεῖ, which has been received by Scholz and Lachmann, not Tisch. But this is another example of error, propagated even in the oldest MSS. by identity of sound of letters, i. e. in this case of ει and η. The Codex Sinaiticus has δὲ, which a later hand has altered into δεῖ.

2. Οἶδα ἄνθρωπον] I know (not to be translated "I knew") a man. This is St. Paul himself, as is clear from v. 7.

— πρὸ ἐτῶν δεκατεσσάρων] fourteen years ago. On this use of πρὸ see John xii. 1. Winer, pp. 491, 492.

Fourteen years, reckoned inclusively, carry us back to the time of St. Paul's ordination to the Apostleship, which must not be confounded with the time of his conversion to Christianity. See note on Acts xiii. 2, ἀφορίσατε δή.

The "Visions and Revelations of the Lord," his rapture into the "Third Heaven" and into "Paradise," appear to have been vouchsafed to him at the time of his Ordination to the Apostleship of the Gentiles.

Probably they were vouchsafed to St. Paul, because he was called by God to endure more sufferings, and to "labour more abundantly" than the rest of the Apostles. And they were vouchsafed to him at that particular crisis, because he was then going forth, for the first time, as an Apostle and Missionary of Christ.

He was about to incur shame and suffering, both from Jews and Gentiles, for the sake of the Gospel.

The long series of his afflictions and humiliations for Christ, which St. Luke has recorded in the Acts, and which St. Paul himself has enumerated here, was then about to commence. It was therefore very reasonable that he, who was going forth to suffer for the Lord, should then have "Visions from the Lord;" that he should have Revelations from the Lord, of the glory to be enjoyed hereafter.

If, therefore, a conjecture may be permitted as to the place in which these Visions were vouchsafed to the Apostle, we should not perhaps be in error if we were to specify Antioch. See on Acts xiii. 1—4.

These glorious Visions had been vouchsafed to the Apostle as long as fourteen years before.

St. Paul had been resident at Corinth for a year and six months, and he had written an Epistle to the Corinthians.

And yet he had never as yet disclosed to them the glorious privileges which the Lord had vouchsafed to himself in these Visions and Revelations.

Here is an exemplary pattern of modesty and humility, and a signal proof of his constraint and reserve in speaking of himself.

Here is also a clear evidence, that, when he now relates these Visions and Revelations vouchsafed to him by the Lord, it is by compulsion and necessity (cp. Theodoret, Theophyl.); and that the thorn "in the flesh" had done the work, for which it was given him by God, that he might not be elated by them, v. 7.

— εἴτε ἐν σώματι, οὐκ οἶδα, εἴτε ἐκτὸς τοῦ σώματος] This was not therefore a trance, but a local translation. If it had been only a trance or ecstasy, he could not have doubted whether he was in the body or no. For in all such visions the soul and body remain united.

St. Paul says that he was caught up; his only doubt is whether this rapture was a translation of his body and soul together, or a translation of his disembodied spirit alone.

This sentence, therefore, shows that the soul, when separated from the body, has powers of perception. If not, it could not have been a matter of doubt with St. Paul, whether he was out of the body or no, when he was translated to heaven and to Paradise, and heard what he did there.

It therefore confirms the doctrine, that the soul, when separated from the body by death, does not sleep. See on Luke xii. 4; xvi. 23; xxiii. 43.

2—4. ἁρπαγέντα—ἕως τρίτου οὐρανοῦ—ἡρπάγη εἰς τὸν παράδεισον] I know a man in Christ fourteen years ago—whether in the body I know not, or whether out of the body I know not, God knoweth—such an one caught up even unto the Third Heaven.

And I know such a man—whether in the body or out of (or apart from, χωρὶς) the body, I know not, God knoweth, that he was caught up into Paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for man to utter.

In v. 3, for ἐκτὸς (the reading of ℵ and of D, E, F, G, I, K, M), some MSS., B, D*, E*, have χωρίς.

St. Paul speaks here of two several raptures or translations to two several places.

(1) A rapture to the Third Heaven.

(2) Another rapture to Paradise.

He distinguishes the places themselves by two several names. And he distinguishes them also by the prepositions which he uses to characterize those two raptures respectively.

He was carried up as far as the third heaven.

He was also carried into Paradise.

Accordingly we find (as has been well shown by Whitby and Wetstein here, and on Luke xxiii. 43) that the ancient Writers carefully distinguished between the two.

Thus S. Irenæus (ii. 34), "Paulus, usque ad tertium cœlum raptum se esse significans; et rursum delatum esse in Paradisum. Quid illi prodest aut in Paradisum introitus, aut in tertium cœlum assumptio?"

See also Tertullian, de Præscr. c. 24, and Justin M. and Methodius; and (of the moderns) Bp. Jeremy Taylor, quoted in Grabe's note to Irenæus, l. c.

So S. Jerome (Ep. ad Joh. Hieros. c. 3), "Quis audiat Origenem in tertio cœlo nobis donantem Paradisum?" And see Jerome in Ezek. xxviii. Epiphan. Hær. 64, Δὶς ἀναληφθεὶς ἐναργῶς (Παῦλος) ἅπαξ μὲν ἕως τρίτου οὐρανοῦ, ἅπαξ δὲ εἰς τὸν παράδεισον. And Athanasius, Gregory Mag., and Primasius in Bengel's note here.

With regard now to these two several places—

(1) The Third Heaven.

This is generally understood by ancient Christian Writers to be the highest heaven.

It is true, indeed, that some Rabbinical writers speak of the seventh heaven as the highest. See the authorities in Wetstein here. But other Jewish teachers specify the third heaven as the highest, and as equivalent to the "heaven of heavens." See the note of Grotius and Bengel, who says that the Hebrew Dual (shamayim) bespoke two heavens, but the revelation of the glory of the third or highest, was reserved to the New Testament.

It is also evident, that St. Paul would not have used the words he does here, saying that he was caught up (ἕως) as far as to the third heaven, if there had been as many as four degrees of heavenly glory beyond and above it.

We may therefore conclude with ancient Christian Authors, that when St. Paul says that he was caught up as far as to the third heaven, he means that he was translated into the company of the Angelic Hierarchy, and that he mingled with the Seraphim, and had the fruition of the Beatific Vision; and that thence was kindled within him that ardour of zeal, and fire of love, and light of knowledge, with which he inflamed and illuminated the world. Cp. A Lapide here, and Augustine, super Gen. ad literam, 12; "Tertium cœlum dicitur Visio intellectualis Dei; Ipsius Dei cognitio."

(2) Paradise, i. e. the place of peace, of joy, to which the souls of the righteous are carried immediately on their dissolution from the body, and in which place they remain till the last Trump shall sound, and the General Resurrection shall take place; when their bodies will be raised, and reunited to their souls, and they will be "caught up into the air," and will receive their full reward, according to their works, from the Everlasting Judge, and

e ch. 11. 30.

5 c Ὑπὲρ τοῦ τοιούτου καυχήσομαι· ὑπὲρ δὲ ἐμαυτοῦ οὐ καυχήσομαι, εἰ μὴ ἐν ταῖς ἀσθενείαις μου.

d ch. 10. 8. & 11. 16.

6 d Ἐὰν γὰρ θελήσω καυχήσασθαι, οὐκ ἔσομαι ἄφρων· ἀλήθειαν γὰρ ἐρῶ· φείδομαι δὲ, μή τις εἰς ἐμὲ λογίσηται ὑπὲρ ὃ βλέπει με, ἢ ἀκούει τι ἐξ ἐμοῦ.

e Job 2. 6, 7. Luke 13. 16. 1 Cor. 4. 5.

7 e Καὶ τῇ ὑπερβολῇ τῶν ἀποκαλύψεων ἵνα μὴ ὑπεραίρωμαι, ἐδόθη μοι σκόλοψ be for ever, in soul and body, in heavenly glory with the Lord. (1 Thess. iv. 17.)

The word Paradise is of Eastern origin (Heb. פַּרְדֵּס, Neh. ii. 8. Eccles. ii. 5. Cant. iv. 12), and signifies a Royal garden or park, girt with an enclosure, adorned with trees and shrubs and flowers, and stocked with beasts and birds, and watered with fair rivers. Hence it is applied in the Septuagint version of the Old Testament (Gen. ii. 8—10, &c.) to that region, that Gan, גַּן, Eden, עֵדֶן, or 'Garden of delight,' which was intersected with Rivers, and planted with every tree pleasant to the sight and good for food, and in which our first Parents were placed by God, to keep it and dress it.

Though the word Paradise in its literal sense signifies a place fenced off from common ground, and much more beautiful than it; and though it means a Royal Park, and though the Park leads to the Palace, yet the Park is not the Palace. So likewise, in its figurative sense, Paradise means a place separate from, and much more delightful than, Earth; but it is not the heavenly Palace of the Great King.

The Place called Paradise is not the perpetual abode of the souls of the righteous. The word itself denotes that it is a temporary resting-place; an abode of delightful but transitory sojourn. It signifies a royal demesne, a fair park, a beautiful enclosure, leading to the Royal Palace of the Great King; but it is not the Palace itself. The spiritual Paradise is filled with unspeakable joys, and it leads to the Spiritual Palace, to Heaven itself, to the everlasting abode of the Saints of God; but it is not Heaven. It conducts to the royal mansion of the Eternal King, but it is not that Mansion itself.

And as the presence of Eastern Kings was oftener vouchsafed to their Paradise or Park than to other places, so Scripture teaches, that the Souls which are in Paradise have a nearer fruition of the Divine Presence than they had on Earth, and therefore are said to be "in the hand of God," and to be "with Christ," and so are unspeakably happy; yet they have not as yet attained the supreme and perfect joys of the beatific Vision, to which they will be admitted after the General Resurrection and Day of Judgment.

Hence Tertullian (Apol. 47) says, "Paradisum nominamus locum divinæ amœnitatis, recipiendis sanctorum spiritibus destinatum."

The word Paradise is found in numerous passages in the Greek Septuagint Version of the Old Testament, but it is never used for Heaven. In the New Testament the word Paradise is found three times only, once in Luke xxiii. 43, once in the Revelation of St. John (Rev. ii. 7), and once here (2 Cor. xii. 4), where the Apostle speaks of his own Visions and Revelations of the Lord, and where he distinguishes between the Vision which he had of Paradise and that other Vision with which he was favoured of the third Heaven.

Almighty God, in order to qualify St. Paul for encountering all the trials which awaited him, and to teach us by him, of how little account all earthly sufferings are, when compared with the joys of the future state, was pleased to reveal to him, not only the full and final joys "such as eye has not seen, nor ear heard," which are reserved in Heaven for all God's faithful Servants, but to show him also the joys of Paradise, joys (the Apostle says) of such transcendent felicity, that it is not for man to utter them, to which the souls of the righteous are admitted immediately on their delivery from the burden of the flesh.

It was St. Paul's personal knowledge of these two successive states,—the one the immediate, the other the final, state of the departed Soul of the faithful Christian,—the one the first state of his soul at the very moment of his dissolution, and during the interval between it and the day of Judgment; and the other the state of his soul from the day of Judgment through the countless ages of Eternity, which elicited from the Apostle those memorable words, "I reckon (λογίζομαι, that is, I, who have full knowledge of the fact, pronounce) that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with, or put in the scale against, the glory that shall be revealed in us." (Rom. viii. 18.) Therefore, he also said, "I long to depart, and to be with Christ, which is far better. (Phil. i. 23.) When we are absent from the body, we are present with the Lord." (2 Cor. v. 8.)

But knowing that his happiness, though great, in Paradise, would not be perfected, until his mortal body was raised from the dead at the coming of Christ to Judgment, he says (2 Cor. v. 4), "We that are in this tabernacle (of the body) do groan, being burdened, not that we would be unclothed, but we would be clothed upon" (2 Cor. v. 2); that is, we long for the general Resurrection, we long to be arrayed in our heavenly body, like unto Christ's glorious body, and to enter into the full enjoyment of a blessed Eternity. And he encourages all the faithful with the assurance, that "when Christ, who is their life, shall appear again in His glorified body, they also shall appear with Him in glory." (Col. iii. 4.)

It may, perhaps, be asked here, If Paradise is the place to which the souls of the righteous are conveyed immediately after their dissolution, and if the Third Heaven is the region of everlasting bliss and celestial glory, why did St. Paul mention his rapture into Paradise after his rapture into the Third Heaven?

This question may be answered by reference to our Lord's words to the penitent thief (Luke xxiii. 43), To-day shalt thou be with Me in Paradise;

The penitent thief had prayed to Christ that he might be remembered by Him in the future glory of His kingdom (v. 42). Christ gave him more than he asked; He gave him an immediate reward, that of Paradise, to which his soul would be conveyed on that self-same day, and which would be preparatory and introductory to the greater and everlasting bliss of the heavenly kingdom. See note on Luke xxiii. 43.

So it is with St. Paul. He had a vision of the heavenly glory. But this was not all. Nor, indeed, would that Vision have ministered all the comfort which he needed under suffering, and which was ministered to him by the Vision of Paradise. For the bliss of heaven is posterior to the Resurrection and Day of Judgment, which might be very distant, and (as the event has shown) were very distant from St. Paul. But the joys of Paradise being immediate, and being introductory to heavenly glory, would afford him the greatest comfort, and inspire him with the greatest courage under suffering, and would give to Martyrdom the character of a blessed and immediate transition from a world of sin and sorrow to a state of holiness and joy.

7. ἐδόθη μοι σκόλοψ τῇ σαρκί] there was given a thorn to me, and to that part of me which is σὰρξ, flesh,—as distinguished from my πνεῦμα or spirit. On this use of the double dative, the former describing the person, the second specifying the member, or part of the person, as in the Homeric expression δίδου δὲ οἱ ἡνία χερσὶν, see Winer, p. 197. The word σκόλοψ (root σκάλλω, fodio) is used by LXX for a thorn. Num. xxxiii. 55, σκόλοπες ἐν τοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς, said of the nations of Canaan in relation to the Israelites. So Ezek. xxviii. 24, σκόλοψ πικρίας καὶ ἄκανθα ὀδύνης: and Hos. ii. 6, φράξω τὴν ὁδὸν αὐτῆς σκόλοψι. This is doubtless its sense here.

What was this σκόλοψ, or Thorn, which was given to St. Paul?

It cannot be (as has been supposed by some) an affection of the eyes consequent on the glare of light at his Conversion. The σκόλοψ was not given him then, but some years after (see on v. 2). And it is more likely that by his Conversion to Christianity he was enlightened not only spiritually, but physically. Cp. Acts ix. 18.

This conjecture of some in modern times, that the great Apostle laboured under physical deficiency of eyesight, rests on no grounds of Holy Scripture or primitive Tradition. Cp. on Acts xxiii. 5.

This thorn was in the flesh,—that is, in the outer man; and it was given him (observe the word given) as a gracious dispensation, in order that he might not be exalted above measure (he repeats this twice) by the transcendent altitude (τῇ ὑπερβολῇ) and exceeding sublimity and glory of his Revelations. It was a gift bestowed on him as a remedy and safeguard against spiritual Pride and Presumption.

He was endowed with this infirmity lest he should fall from the truth, and in order that he might escape the sin of elation against God by pride. Irenæus (v. 3).

This thorn must have been therefore something external, which might expose him to disparagement from censorious men, and depress all aspirations of self-complacency, by the chastening discipline of worldly scorn.

Cp. Bp. Bull's Sermon on this subject, Serm. v. vol. i. pp. 117 and 126, and Prof. Lightf. on Galatians, pp. 169—175.

Accordingly, St. Paul speaks of it in another place as a "trial τῇ σαρκὶ, ἄγγελος Σατᾶν, ἵνα με κολαφίζῃ, ἵνα μὴ ὑπεραίρωμαι. 8 Ὑπὲρ τούτου τρὶς τὸν Κύριον παρεκάλεσα ἵνα ἀποστῇ ἀπ' ἐμοῦ· 9 f καὶ εἴρηκέ μοι, Ἀρκεῖ σοι ἡ χάρις μου· ἡ γὰρ δύναμίς μου ἐν ἀσθενείᾳ τελειοῦται.

f Phil. 4. 13. Col. 1. 11. Heb. 11. 34.

in his flesh," which made him an object of contempt to some, and tried their affection and reverence for him. He praises the Galatians (iv. 14), because they did not set at nought and scoff at (οὐκ ἐξουθενήσατε οὐδὲ ἐξεπτύσατε) this trial in his flesh, but accepted him as an Angel of God, as Christ Jesus,—as one who was chastened by suffering, as He was. The thorn in his flesh reminded them that he was a minister of Him Who was crowned with thorns. (Mark xv. 17. John xix. 5.)

Hence we may account for the mention of it here. Doubtless, among those at Corinth who carped and cavilled at the Apostle, especially at his personal presence (2 Cor. x. 10), some indulged in sneers on his physical infirmity, which sometimes probably made itself manifest in his address; and they used it as an occasion for disparaging his office and discrediting his ministry, as if in his bodily presence he was weak, however much he might attempt to intimidate and overawe them, when he was absent, by menaces in his letters (x. 10).

What was the explanation (they might ask with bitter irony) to be given of this bodily affliction? Was it likely, that God would visit a favoured Apostle of Christ with such an infirmity, and thus damage his success in preaching the Gospel?

St. Paul answers this question, and solves the objections arising from it;

The thorn in his flesh (he says) was a gift from God—ἐδόθη μοι. And why was it given? In order that I should not be too much lifted up by the exceeding altitude of my Revelations from Him.

It is therefore a mark of His favour. It is a consequence and a memento of the privileges I have received from Him. It may remind you, as it does me, of the abundance of my Revelations. It is even a badge of my office, a credential of my ministry.

God would take care that the success of his ministry (for which he was zealous) should not be impaired by his infirmity. "My grace," God has said (εἴρηκε—has said once for all), "is sufficient for thee: My strength is perfected in thy weakness." The weaker the instrument, the greater the triumph of God's grace, which enables that instrument to do what it does, and accomplishes such mighty works by its means.

They who read Scripture with awe, and contemplate with reverence the Saints of old, will not indulge in inquisitive and profitless speculations on the precise nature of this thorn in the flesh of St. Paul.

The Holy Spirit does not gratify such curiosity as this. He tells us that the holy Apostles were men of like passions with ourselves. (Acts xiv. 15.) And we know from the present instance, that the great Apostle of the Gentiles, he who laboured more abundantly than the rest (1 Cor. xv. 10), and with the most blessed fruit from his labours, and who had a great abundance of Visions and Revelations in the Lord, was also afflicted by some visible infirmity in his body, which might expose him to contempt from his hearers, and was designed by God to keep him humble, and also to test their dutiful love for the Apostle of Christ.

But the Holy Spirit does not give any minute personal details concerning the external appearance of the Holy Apostles. He does not perpetuate any of the flaws and blemishes of our feeble and frail humanity which might have been visible in their form or features. He abstracts all that is accidental and temporary in the portrait, and presents us with a beautiful ideal picture of what was essential and is eternal, and so gives us a truer likeness of them. And who would wish to mar this divine work, by intruding into it what was merely earthly and temporary? who would wish to know what St. Paul's thorn in the flesh was? Who would wish to associate him with any bodily blemish, now that all the "spots and wrinkles" of mortality have disappeared, and he has been transfigured by the bright illuminations of the Holy Ghost, and his soul has passed into Paradise; and he enjoys the blessed assurance that he will be clothed hereafter with a glorified body, and dwell in soul and body in the infinite felicity of the third heaven?

See further what has been said on this subject in the Introduction to the Acts of the Apostles, pp. xii, xiii, or p. 6, new edit.

— ἄγγελος Σατᾶν] He calls the thorn in his flesh a messenger of Satan to buffet him. "Sudem refert datum sibi Angelum Satanæ" (Tertullian, de Fugâ, c. 3, and de Pudic. 13) "a quo colaphizaretur, ne se extolleret." And yet St. Paul says that it was given him (i. e. by God) in order that he might not be too much exalted by the exceeding glory of his revelations.

A very important declaration, teaching,

(1) That physical evils are from Satan, who assails holy men, in order to torment them. Similarly it was revealed by the Holy Spirit in the history of Job, that his afflictions were from Satan (Job ii. 6, 7); and our Lord Himself declares that the woman in the Gospel, whom He calls a daughter of Abraham, and who was bowed together with a spirit of infirmity for eighteen years, had been bound by Satan. (Luke xiii. 16.)

(2) That God, Who is Almighty and All-merciful, permits Satan to visit holy men with severe afflictions, in order that those afflictions may be made subservient to His own wise and gracious purposes. He thus overrules evil with good, and defeats Satan with his own weapons. God permitted Satan to afflict Job, that his patience might be tried and be an example to every age. He permitted Satan to bind the daughter of Abraham for eighteen years, that her faith might be a pattern to all, and that Christ's power and love in loosing her – touching only the hem of His garment with faith – might be known. And He permitted Satan to afflict the Apostle with the thorn in his flesh, in order that he who had been caught up into the Third Heaven might be saved from the peril of pride, by which Satan fell from heaven; He permitted him "to fall under the Devil's scourge, that he might not fall into the Devil's sin" (Bp. Bull); and that God's grace and power might be displayed and glorified in and through his weakness. Cp. Tertullian (de Fugâ, c. 2).

God permitted Satan to buffet the Apostle by a Thorn; but under the transmuting influence of God's grace working with St. Paul's free will, that Thorn has been made, as it were, to bloom and "blossom as the rose," for an unfading garland of glory to the Apostle's head.

Therefore he says: "Most gladly will I then glory in my infirmities; for when I am weak, then am I strong."

"Ne extollar datus est mihi stimulus carnis meæ angelus Satanæ. O venenum quod non curatur nisi veneno! O antidotum quod quasi de Serpente conficitur et propterea theriacum nuncupatur! Serpens enim ille superbiam persuadet dicens Gustate et eritis sicut dii. (Gen. iii. 5.) Superbiæ persuasio ista est. Unde cecidit serpens inde nos dejecit. Meritò ergo venenum serpentis de serpente sanatur. Quid ait Apostolus Ter Dominum rogavi ut auferret? Deus precanti aderat. Videte quid ter roganti responderit, 'Sufficit tibi gratia mea.' Ego, medicus optimus, novi in quem tumorem pergat id quod volo sanare. Quiesce, sufficit tibi gratia mea; non sufficit tibi voluntas tua." S. Augustine (Serm. 163). See also Serm. 354.

8. Ὑπὲρ τούτου] Concerning this. On this use of ὑπὲρ = Heb. עַל, and Latin super, see 2 Cor. i. 8, and 2 Thess. ii. 1; and see Winer, p. 343.

— τρὶς] thrice in three prayers, consequent perhaps on three several severe assaults of temptation. Job is tempted by Satan thrice,—(1) by the loss of his goods; (2) of his children; (3) of his health. Our Lord is tempted by Satan thrice. (Matt. iv. 1—11. Luke iv. 1—13.) Peter was tempted by Satan thrice. (Matt. xxvi. 34—75. Luke xxii. 31.) And after his fall was enabled by Christ to profess his love thrice. (John xxi. 17.)

— ἵνα ἀποστῇ ἀπ' ἐμοῦ] in order that he might depart from me. St. Paul had claimed the power of delivering the incestuous Corinthian to Satan. (1 Cor. v. 5.) He here represents himself as buffeted by a "messenger of Satan," and desiring, but not able, to free himself from the visitation.

He affirms that he also had proved his Apostleship by miracles (v. 12).

Yet he never pretends that he worked any miracle to heal himself of his severe bodily infirmity, which exposed him to disparagement and obloquy.

We learn these things from himself,—an evidence of his veracity, and of his confidence in the truth of his cause. No enthusiast would have written thus. The exception proves the rule. The candid avowal of weakness confirms the assertion of power.

Thus also we see the principles by which the miraculous powers given to the Apostles were regulated by God. St. Paul himself tells us that he lacked bodily sustenance (xi. 9), and was often in hunger, thirst, in cold and nakedness (xi. 27); and that he had a thorn in his flesh, by which Satan buffeted him, and which exposed him to reproach. Yet we never hear that he was authorized or enabled to exert his miraculous powers in order to provide himself with food, or to heal himself of sickness. They who were more privileged by God than other men in working miracles, were not exempted by Him from enduring severe afflictions. Indeed, they were as much depressed below other men in their sufferings as they were raised above them by their miracles. They were designed by Almighty God to be exemplary to the world in suffering; which they would not have been, if they Ἥδιστα οὖν μᾶλλον καυχήσομαι ἐν ταῖς ἀσθενείαις μου, ἵνα ἐπισκηνώσῃ ἐπ' ἐμὲ ἡ δύναμις τοῦ Χριστοῦ. 10 Διὸ εὐδοκῶ ἐν ἀσθενείαις, ἐν ὕβρεσιν, ἐν ἀνάγκαις, ἐν διωγμοῖς, ἐν στενοχωρίαις ὑπὲρ Χριστοῦ. Ὅταν γὰρ ἀσθενῶ τότε δυνατός εἰμι.

g ch. 11. 1, 16, 17. 1 Cor. 15. 8—10. Eph. 3. 8.
11 g Γέγονα ἄφρων· ὑμεῖς με ἠναγκάσατε· ἐγὼ γὰρ ὤφειλον ὑφ' ὑμῶν συνίστασθαι· οὐδὲν γὰρ ὑστέρησα τῶν ὑπερλίαν ἀποστόλων, εἰ καὶ οὐδέν εἰμι.

h Rom. 15. 19. 1 Cor. 9. 2. ch. 6. 4. & 11. 6.
12 h Τὰ μὲν σημεῖα τοῦ ἀποστόλου κατειργάσθη ἐν ὑμῖν ἐν πάσῃ ὑπομονῇ, σημείοις καὶ τέρασι καὶ δυνάμεσι.

i 1 Cor. 9. 12. ch. 11. 7, 9.
13 i Τί γάρ ἐστιν ὃ ἡττήθητε ὑπὲρ τὰς λοιπὰς ἐκκλησίας, εἰ μὴ ὅτι αὐτὸς ἐγὼ οὐ κατενάρκησα ὑμῶν; χαρίσασθέ μοι τὴν ἀδικίαν ταύτην.

k Acts 20. 33. ch. 13. 1. 1 Cor. 4. 14, 15. & 10. 33.
14 k Ἰδοὺ, τρίτον τοῦτο ἑτοίμως ἔχω ἐλθεῖν πρὸς ὑμᾶς, καὶ οὐ καταναρκήσω ὑμῶν· οὐ γὰρ ζητῶ τὰ ὑμῶν, ἀλλὰ ὑμᾶς· οὐ γὰρ ὀφείλει τὰ τέκνα τοῖς γονεῦσι θησαυρίζειν, ἀλλ' οἱ γονεῖς τοῖς τέκνοις.

l ch. 1. 6 & 6. 12, 13. Col. 1. 24. 2 Tim. 2. 10.
15 l Ἐγὼ δὲ ἥδιστα δαπανήσω καὶ ἐκδαπανηθήσομαι ὑπὲρ τῶν ψυχῶν ὑμῶν· εἰ καὶ περισσοτέρως ὑμᾶς ἀγαπῶν ἧττον ἀγαπῶμαι.

16 Ἔστω δὲ, ἐγὼ οὐ κατεβάρησα ὑμᾶς, ἀλλὰ ὑπάρχων πανοῦργος δόλῳ ὑμᾶς ἔλαβον.

m ch. 7. 2.
17 m Μή τινα ὧν ἀπέσταλκα πρὸς ὑμᾶς, δι' αὐτοῦ ἐπλεονέκτησα ὑμᾶς;

n ch. 8. 6, 16, 18, 22.
18 n Παρεκάλεσα Τίτον, καὶ συναπέστειλα τὸν ἀδελφόν· μήτι ἐπλεονέκτησεν ὑμᾶς Τίτος; οὐ τῷ αὐτῷ πνεύματι περιεπατήσαμεν; οὐ τοῖς αὐτοῖς ἴχνεσι;

o ch. 5. 12. & 11. 31. 1 Cor. 10. 33.
19 o Πάλιν δοκεῖτε ὅτι ὑμῖν ἀπολογούμεθα; κατέναντι Θεοῦ ἐν Χριστῷ λαλοῦμεν· τὰ δὲ πάντα, ἀγαπητοὶ, ὑπὲρ τῆς ὑμῶν οἰκοδομῆς.

---

had wrought miracles for their own benefit. Their history shows that the true principle of the Gospel of Christ is imitation of Christ; that it is sacrifice of self for the good of others, and for the glory of God.

As to the causes of the non-exertion of the miraculous power of the Apostle, in order to heal the infirmities of his own friends, e. g. of Timothy, see below on 1 Tim. v. 23.

9. εἴρηκε] He hath said. Observe the force of the perfect tense. God hath said it; I remember it well. He has said it, Whose word is Yea and Amen. He has said it once for all. Man prays thrice, but God speaks once. He has spoken it; and the force of that speech still abides with me, and works its work upon me. Cp. εἴρηκε, Heb. i. 13; iv. 4.

Although the petitions of holy men are not always granted, yet their prayers are always heard. God sometimes shows His love to them by denying them their requests; and in this denial He gives them what He, Who is omniscient and all-merciful, knows to be best for them, and so deals with them according to their prayers, which are always framed and uttered in a spirit of submission to the divine Will. Cp. Augustine (in Joann. Tract. 6).

"Apostolus ad voluntatem non est exauditus, sed est exauditus ad salutem. Paulo Apostolo negavit quod oravit; sæpe malis hominibus dat Deus ad damnationem; huic negavit ad sanitatem." "Rogavit Dominum ut auferret stimulum carnis a quo colaphizabatur, aliquem forte dolorem corporalem, et dicit Deus sufficit tibi gratia mea, &c. Ego novi quem curo. Tanquam emplastrum mordax urit te, sed sanat te." Augustine (in Ps. xxvi. xcviii., Serm. 47. 154).

On the other hand, Almighty God often punishes evil men by giving them what they most desire;

The Devil's petition was granted by God, when the Devil asked leave to tempt Job; and so the Devil was worsted. God gave the Israelites their desire, and they perished in their lust. (Ps. lxxviii. 30.)

Doubtless, Satan exulted in being allowed to buffet St. Paul. But how much shame has thence recoiled upon Satan from his conflict with the Apostle! and how much glory to God, and how much benefit to the Church! Cp. Augustine (Serm. 354).

— ἡ γὰρ δύναμίς μου] for My Power. A*, B, D*, F, G, and also ℵ, omit μου; and this reading deserves attention, Power is perfect in weakness. ℵ has τελεῖται, and so A, B, D*, F, G, and this probably may be the true reading.

— Ἥδιστα—μᾶλλον] Most gladly will I therefore glory rather (i. e. rather than faint) in my infirmities (i. e. rather than in my miracles). On this combination, see vii. 13.

10. ἐν στενοχωρίαις] B has καὶ στ., and so ℵ.

11. Γέγονα ἄφρων] I am become a fool. Perhaps this may be put interrogatively, "Have I become a fool? If so, ye constrained me." St. Paul does not allow that he is ἄφρων. See xi. 16; xii. 6. Elz. adds καυχώμενος here, an explanatory gloss, not found in the best MSS.

— τῶν ὑπερλίαν ἀποστόλων] See xi. 5.

12. τοῦ ἀποστόλου] of the Apostle, as distinguished from all other men; and especially as distinguished from all false Teachers, who are not sent by Christ (ἀπόστολοι), but are mere comers (ἐρχόμενοι). See above, xi. 4.

On this use of the definite article, see above on John iii. 10, ὁ διδάσκαλος, and John xviii. 10, τὸν δοῦλον.

13. ἡττήθητε ὑπέρ] ye were lessened—were worse off—above the other Churches. A remarkable use of ὑπὲρ, above, with something of an oxymoron in it, a favourite figure with St. Paul (see Rom. xii. 11), Ye were lessened and abased above; and perhaps marking that the ἧττα or loss (if ἧττα it was) was a proof of St. Paul's love, and so a privileye. There is a gentle tone of delicate irony and affectionate playfulness in the whole sentence, especially in the words, Forgive me this wrong.

— εἰ μή] unless. See on 2 Cor. iii. 1.

— κατενάρκησα] See on xi. 9.

14. τοῦτο] So the best MSS.; not in Elz.

15.] On this text, see Bp. Andrewes' Sermons, ii. p. 98.

— ἀγαπῶν] ℵ has ἀγαπῶ, and so the Coptic and Sahidic Versions.

16. Ἔστω δέ] But be it so. A supposition. He recites an objection of his adversaries. I, they say, do not burden you in my own person; I did not venture to do it, they allege; I was not straightforward and courageous enough to do it myself; but with a sort of moral cowardice, and being by nature (ὑπάρχων) crafty, I caught you by guile. I ensnared you by an artifice, by a mere semblance of disinterestedness, in order to make you my prey by means of others my emissaries. Cp. Theophyl., and see Bp. Sanderson, ii. p. 349.

17, 18. ἀπέσταλκα] I have sent. The sense of this and the following verses seems to be, I am charged with craftiness in suborning others to be my agents in promoting my personal interests. If this were true, then the persons of whom I have made choice to be my delegates to you, would be of such a character as to be fit ministers of my artful and covetous designs.

But what is the case? Who are they? Titus and the brother. You know Titus by experience. Their character is a guarantee of my integrity. The choice which I have now made is a proof that the allegation just recited is false.

18. τὸν ἀδελφόν] the brother; perhaps St. Luke (see viii. 18), or the brother mentioned viii. 22.

19. Πάλιν] Are ye thinking that we are again pleading our own cause before you? Is this your present surmise? It is a very erroneous one. We are pleading before God, not you. We are speaking in Christ not for our own glory, but for His; and we are doing this and all things for your edification.

A, B, F, G have πάλαι here, and so ℵ and Vulg., which has 20 [p] Φοβοῦμαι γὰρ, μήπως ἐλθὼν οὐχ οἵους θέλω εὕρω ὑμᾶς, κἀγὼ εὑρεθῶ ὑμῖν οἷον οὐ θέλετε· μήπως ἔρεις, ζῆλος, θυμοὶ, ἐριθεῖαι, καταλαλιαὶ, ψιθυρισμοὶ, φυσιώσεις, ἀκαταστασίαι· 21 [q] μὴ πάλιν ἐλθόντος μου ταπεινώσῃ με ὁ Θεός μου πρὸς ὑμᾶς, καὶ πενθήσω πολλοὺς τῶν προημαρτηκότων, καὶ μὴ μετανοησάντων ἐπὶ τῇ ἀκαθαρσίᾳ καὶ πορνείᾳ καὶ ἀσελγείᾳ ᾗ ἔπραξαν.

p 1 Cor. 4. 21. ch. 10. 2. & 13. 2, 10.
q ch. 3. 2.
r Rom. 13. 13. 1 Cor. 5. 9—11 & 6. 15 - 18. Gal. 5. 19. Eph. 5. 5, 6. Col. 3. 5. 1 Thess. 4. 3—7 Heb. 13. 4.

XIII. 1 [a] Τρίτον τοῦτο ἔρχομαι πρὸς ὑμᾶς· ἐπὶ στόματος δύο μαρτύρων καὶ τριῶν σταθήσεται πᾶν ῥῆμα. 2 [b] Προείρηκα καὶ προλέγω, ὡς παρὼν τὸ δεύτερον, [b] καὶ ἀπὼν νῦν, τοῖς προημαρτηκόσι, καὶ τοῖς λοιποῖς πᾶσιν, ὅτι ἐὰν ἔλθω εἰς τὸ πάλιν οὐ φείσομαι· 3 [c] ἐπεὶ δοκιμὴν ζητεῖτε τοῦ ἐν ἐμοὶ λαλοῦντος Χριστοῦ, ὃς εἰς ὑμᾶς οὐκ ἀσθενεῖ, ἀλλὰ δυνατεῖ ἐν ὑμῖν. 4 [d] Καὶ γὰρ εἰ ἐσταυρώθη ἐξ ἀσθενείας, ἀλλὰ ζῇ ἐκ δυνάμεως Θεοῦ· καὶ γὰρ ἡμεῖς ἀσθενοῦμεν ἐν αὐτῷ, ἀλλὰ ζήσομεν σὺν αὐτῷ ἐκ δυνάμεως Θεοῦ εἰς ὑμᾶς.

a ch. 12. 14. Num. 35 30. Deut. 17. 6. & 19. 15. Matt. 18. 16. John 8. 17.
b ch. 12. 21. & 1. 23.
c Matt. 10. 20.
d Phil. 2. 7, 8. 1 Cor. 9. 2. 1 Pet. 3. 18.

5 [e] Ἑαυτοὺς πειράζετε εἰ ἐστὲ ἐν τῇ πίστει, ἑαυτοὺς δοκιμάζετε· ἢ οὐκ ἐπιγινώσκετε ἑαυτοὺς, ὅτι Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς ἐν ὑμῖν ἐστιν, εἰ μήτι ἀδόκιμοί ἐστε; 6 Ἐλπίζω δὲ ὅτι γνώσεσθε ὅτι ἡμεῖς οὐκ ἐσμὲν ἀδόκιμοι. 7 [f] Εὐχόμεθα δὲ πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν, μὴ ποιῆσαι ὑμᾶς κακὸν μηδέν· οὐχ ἵνα ἡμεῖς δόκιμοι φανῶμεν, ἀλλ' ἵνα ὑμεῖς τὸ καλὸν ποιῆτε, ἡμεῖς δὲ ὡς ἀδόκιμοι ὦμεν· 8 οὐ γὰρ δυνάμεθά τι κατὰ τῆς ἀληθείας, ἀλλ' ὑπὲρ τῆς ἀληθείας· 9 [g] χαίρομεν γὰρ ὅταν ἡμεῖς ἀσθενῶμεν, ὑμεῖς δὲ δυνατοὶ ἦτε· τοῦτο καὶ εὐχόμεθα, τὴν ὑμῶν κατάρτισιν.

e 1 Cor. 11. 28.
f ch. 6. 9.
g ch. 11. 30. & 12. 5, 9, 10.
h 1 Cor. 4. 21. ch. 2. 3. & 10. 2, 8. & 12. 20, 21.
i 1 Cor. 1. 10. Rom. 12. 16, 18. & 15. 5. Phil. 2. 2. 1 Pet. 3. 8. Heb. 12. 14. k Rom. 16. 16. 1 Cor. 16. 20. 1 Thess. 5. 26. 1 Pet. 5. 14.

10 [h] Διὰ τοῦτο ταῦτα ἀπὼν γράφω, ἵνα παρὼν μὴ ἀποτόμως χρήσωμαι κατὰ τὴν ἐξουσίαν ἣν ἔδωκέ μοι ὁ Κύριος εἰς οἰκοδομὴν, καὶ οὐκ εἰς καθαίρεσιν.

11 [i] Λοιπὸν, ἀδελφοὶ, χαίρετε, καταρτίζεσθε, παρακαλεῖσθε, τὸ αὐτὸ φρονεῖτε, εἰρηνεύετε· καὶ ὁ Θεὸς τῆς ἀγάπης καὶ εἰρήνης ἔσται μεθ' ὑμῶν.

12 [k] Ἀσπάσασθε ἀλλήλους ἐν ἁγίῳ φιλήματι· ἀσπάζονται ὑμᾶς οἱ ἅγιοι πάντες.

---

been adopted by some Editors, Lach., Tisch., Alf. And this reading affords a very good sense; Long ago ye are deeming that we are commending ourselves. Πάλιν is in D, E, I, K, and the majority of Cursive MSS., Versions, and Fathers. It is confirmed also by iii. 1, ἀρχόμεθα πάλιν ἑαυτοὺς συνιστάνειν.

The confusion of ΠΑΛΑΙ and ΠΑΛΙΝ is frequent in MSS. And there is no instance in the N. T. where πάλαι stands at the beginning of a sentence. And πάλαι appears to mark a past time as contrasted with the present (as in Heb. i. 1), whereas the Apostle is speaking of present surmises. And the sense given in the English Authorized Version, and in many Ancient Versions, where the sentence is rightly represented as interrogatory, appears more forcible and just than that arising from the reading πάλαι δοκεῖτε.

Ch. XIII. 1. Τρίτον τοῦτο ἔρχομαι] This is the third time that I am intending to come to you. So Jud. xvi. 15, τρίτον τοῦτο. Num. xxii. 28, LXX. John xxi. 14.

St. Paul had been once, and only once, at Corinth, viz. in the visit described in Acts xviii. 1—11, which visit lasted a year and a half, and ended about three years and a half before this Epistle was written.

That ἔρχομαι may have the sense of I am now intending to come, is evident from his words written at Ephesus, 1 Cor. xvi. 5, Μακεδονίαν διέρχομαι, I am now intending to go through Macedonia.

That the visit he was now intending to pay to Corinth, and which he did pay soon after these words were written, was only a second visit, may be inferred from his words above (i. 15), "I was desirous to come to you before this, that you might have a second benefit." And again (xiii. 2), "I have said before, and now premonish you, as though I were present the second time."

This sense of his words τρίτον τοῦτο ἔρχομαι, is further cleared by what he had said just before (xii. 14), "This is the third time that I am in readiness (ἑτοίμως ἔχω) to come to you."

He had been ready once, and did come; he had been ready again, but did not come, because they were not ready to receive him (see 2 Cor. i. 23); he had even been very desirous to come, but their disorders had prevented him from coming.

He, for his part, is now ready a third time to come to them. But whether he will actually now come or no, is dependent on something else, namely, on whether they, on their side, make themselves ready, by godly repentance and amendment, to receive the visit which he is ready and desirous to pay.

Thus he reminds them that his absence, which some among them had misinterpreted and censured (2 Cor. i. 15—17), was not due to any levity, fickleness, estrangement, or failure on his part. On the contrary, in will and desire this was the third time in the course of four years that he was with them. And if he was absent longer from them, his absence would not be due to himself, but to them. They might secure his presenceby readiness for it; but would forfeit it by unreadiness. Other reasons for this interpretation may be seen above in the note on 2 Cor. ii. 1.

— ἐπί] ℵ has ἵνα before ἐπὶ—a reading which does not seem to be cited from any other uncial MS., but from one Cursive, 35.

— ἐπὶ στόματος δύο μαρτύρων καὶ τριῶν] Every matter that has been spoken (ῥῆμα, see on Luke i. 38) shall be established at the mouth of at least two witnesses, and, if it may be so, of three. From Deut. xix. 15, LXX; and see Deut. xvii. 6. John viii. 17, and Heb. x. 28, i. e. on the testimony of not less than two. Compare Titus iii. 10, αἱρετικὸν μετὰ μίαν (one at least) καὶ (and if it may be) δευτέραν νουθεσίαν παραιτοῦ.

St. Paul appeals to his three intentions to come to Corinth as three witnesses that he is in earnest in what he says, and as three pledges that what he says, will be done. Ἀντὶ μαρτυριῶν τὰς παρουσίας αὐτοῦ τιθεὶς καὶ τὰς παραγγελίας, says Chrys. And so Œcumen.; and Theophylact says, Almighty God threatens the sinner, and for a time forbears to punish. But at last, after reiterated warnings, He executes judgment. So the Apostle. He says that in the same manner as every controversy is determined on the testimony of two or three witnesses, so the sentence which he has often threatened will be executed unless they repent.

4. εἰ] if —. Omitted by B, D*, F, G, K, and ℵ, and Lach.

— ζήσομεν] On this form of the future, see Winer, p. 80.

5. Ἑαυτούς] yourselves. Emphatic. Do not examine me, your Apostle, but examine yourselves.

— εἰ μήτι] unless haply (which God forbid!) ye are reprobates. On this use of εἰ μήτι, see above, iii. 1.

10. Διὰ—γράφω] For this cause I, being absent, write these things, that I may not when present deal sharply. On St. Paul's habit of trying the lenitive process of writing an Epistle, before he resorted to that of a personal visit, see above, Introduction to Galatians, p. 39.

12. ἐν ἁγίῳ φιλήματι] with a holy kiss. See above, 1 Thess. v. 26. 1 Cor. xvi. 20; below, Rom. xvi. 16.

13 Ἡ χάρις τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, καὶ ἡ ἀγάπη τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ ἡ κοινωνία τοῦ ἁγίου Πνεύματος μετὰ πάντων ὑμῶν.

13. Ἡ χάρις τοῦ Κυρίου] The Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the Love of God, and the Communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all. S. Athanasius (Ep. iii. ad Serapion. § 6, p. 555) refers to this Benediction in proof of the Doctrine of the distinct personality of each of the Three Persons of the Ever-Blessed Trinity. "Egregium de SS. Trinitate testimonium." (Bengel.)

Compare the remarkable parallel, Jude 20, 21.

The Three Persons are named in this Benediction, which has been adopted by the Christian Church; and is a full exposition of the doctrine of the Trinity less explicitly expressed in the Levitical Benediction, which God Himself prescribed to be used (Num. vi. 23—26), and in which the word יְהוָה, JEHOVAH (= Κύριος (LXX), the LORD), is repeated thrice.

In like manner S. Clement of Rome (Frag. 7) recites a primitive form of Christian Adjuration, in which the Three Persons of the Blessed Trinity are expressed as they are here in the Apostolic Benediction, Ζῇ ὁ Θεὸς, καὶ ὁ Κύριος Ἰησοῦς, καὶ τὸ Πνεῦμα Ἅγιον.

The Son is here named before the Father—a proof of His co-equality. Cp. 2 Thess. ii. 15.

As to the evidence of the same doctrine from the Baptismal Formula, see Matt. xxviii. 19, and Waterland's Moyer Lectures, Serm. viii.

In order to understand the force of this Benediction, it is to be observed,—

(1) That all spiritual Blessings come from (ἐκ) God the FATHER, through (διὰ) God the SON (see 1 Cor. viii. 6), and by God the HOLY GHOST.

The Love of God is the one source and inexhaustible well-spring of all spiritual blessings to men; and these blessings are conveyed to us through the Son, in "Whom all the Fulness of the Godhead dwells" (Col. i. 19), and Who took our Nature, and is our Emmanuel, "God with us," and has made us members of His Body, and has become the Channel of Grace to us. And so we have "all received of His fulness, and Grace for Grace." (John i. 16.)

This Grace, flowing through the Son from the source of the Father's Love, is applied personally and individually to us, and made energetic to our spiritual New Birth and New Life in this world, and everlasting salvation in the world to come, by the operation of the Holy Ghost, Who overshadowed our Nature in the Blessed Virgin's Womb (Luke i. 35), and Who enabled her to conceive and to bring forth Christ, Who is the Second Adam; and so wrought the New Birth of our Nature, which was regenerated by the Incarnation of Christ; and Who, by His personal Communion with us, bestows, communicates, and applies the Grace flowing from the Father through the Son, for our personal Regeneration in Baptism, and forms Christ within us; and by His renovating and quickening operation makes Christ to dwell in us, and makes us to dwell in Him. See below on Titus iii. 5.

(2) These divine operations of the Three Persons of the Ever-Blessed Trinity, in the World of Grace, are analogous to their workings respectively in the world of Nature.

God the Father made the World, but this work of Creation was wrought through the Son (John i. 1, 2. Heb. i. 2), and by the vivifying influence of the Holy Ghost. See on Matt. iii. 16 Cp. Gen. i. 2.

(3) Also, the effusion of all grace to us from the Father, through the Son, and by the Holy Ghost, was declared at the Baptism of Christ, God and Man, when the voice of the Father proclaimed Jesus to be His well-beloved Son, and the Holy Ghost came upon Him from heaven as a Dove. (Matt. iii. 16, 17.)

(4) This Benediction is to be understood also as declaring not only the manner of the descent of Blessings from God to us, but also the means of our ascent to God;

This latter article of our faith is expressed by St. Paul thus:—Christ came and preached to you that were afar off, and them that are nigh. For through Him we both have access by one Spirit unto the Father. (Eph. ii. 17, 18.)

Subscription to the Epistle.

"From Philippi in Macedonia." So the Gothic Version, and B, and other authorities. Perhaps correctly. See the Introduction to the Epistle.

INTRODUCTION

TO THE

EPISTLE TO THE ROMANS.

I. St. Paul himself has supplied the best materials for an Introduction to this Epistle. These will be found in his speeches, recorded in the Acts of the Apostles, and in his Epistle to the Galatians, and in portions of his two Epistles to the Corinthians [1].

The Discourse which he delivered, in his first Missionary Tour, in the Synagogue at Antioch in Pisidia, contains the germ of the argument which he afterwards unfolded in this Epistle.

In that address he declared to the Jews, that he was commissioned to proclaim the fulfilment of the Promise made unto their fathers, and now accomplished in the Gospel of Jesus Christ, Whom God has raised from the dead; and that through Him Forgiveness of Sins is now preached, and that every one who believes in Him is justified from those things, from which men could not be justified by the Law of Moses [2].

The jealousy of the Jews, and the joy of the Gentiles, on the announcement of this intelligence, as described by the Sacred Historian, and the results of the Apostle's preaching at Antioch to these two communities, present a significant specimen, and display a vivid picture of the feelings produced in the minds of the Jewish and Gentile population throughout the world by the preaching of St. Paul.

On referring to that narrative [3], the reader will recognize a practical exhibition of some of the main difficulties with which the Apostle had to contend in writing the Epistle to the Romans.

The treatment which he afterwards experienced, in his second Missionary journey, from the Jews of Thessalonica, who were filled with envy against him, because he preached to the Gentiles [4], and because he proclaimed, that salvation was now offered to them on equal terms with the Jews; and the inveterate rancour, with which they excited the suspicions of the civil Magistrates against him, and with which they pursued him to Berœa [5], will afford further insight into the state of mind with which the Jews, and many of the Jewish Christians, regarded the Apostolic declaration of Free Grace offered to all Nations in Christ.

The same feeling which had shown itself at Antioch in Pisidia, and at Thessalonica, manifested itself also in the cities of Corinth [6] and Ephesus [7], and followed St. Paul to Jerusalem.

This feeling is exhibited in a striking manner in the narrative of the Acts of the Apostles, where it is related, that when St. Paul addressed the Jews in their own tongue from the stairs of the Castle, overhanging the platform of the Temple, at Jerusalem, they kept silence, and listened with attention to his speech, till he uttered the words which had been spoken to him by Christ, "Go; for I will send thee far off unto the Gentiles." Then they lifted up their voice, and cried, "Away with him, he ought not to live;" they shook their garments, and tossed dust into the air, and would have killed him, if he had not been rescued by the Roman power [8].

[1] See 1 Cor. i. 23, 24. 30; x. 1—12; xv. 56, "The strength of sin is the Law" (2 Cor. iii. 6—18; v. 14—21).
This consideration illustrates the importance of studying the Epistles of St. Paul in chronological order, and with special reference to the historical commentary provided for them in the Acts of the Apostles.

[2] Acts xiii. 32—39.

[3] Acts xiii. 42—51.

[4] Ib. xvii. 5. Cp. 1 Thess. ii. 15, 16.

[5] Ib. xvii. 6—13.

[6] Ib. xviii. 5, 6—12.

[7] Ib. xix. 9.

[8] Ib. xxii. 1. 21—24.

In his speech before Felix, at Cæsarea, the Apostle asserted the harmony of the Gospel with all that is written in the Law and the Prophets[1]; and in his appeal to King Agrippa he affirmed, that the reason of the jealousy of the Jews was no other than this, that he preached to them and to the Gentiles the doctrine of Repentance and Conversion; and that he had taught nothing that was not in accordance with what their Prophets and Moses had said concerning the Passion and Resurrection of Christ; and that He should be the first, on His Resurrection from the Dead, to publish Light to the Jewish Nation, and to the Gentiles. . . . King Agrippa, believest thou the Prophets? I know that thou believest[2].

Thus the Apostle constantly presented two main assertions to his hearers; and the sacred Historian, his faithful companion, St. Luke, takes care to give special prominence to them, as fundamental principles of the Gospel, namely,

(1) That Remission of Sins, and Everlasting Life, are offered freely by Almighty God to all men, whether Jews or Gentiles, in Christ, and in Christ alone, and

(2) That this Divine Plan of Universal Redemption is not at variance with His previous Revelation in the Holy Scriptures of the Old Testament, and with His particular dispensation to the Jews, in the Levitical Law, and with His choice of them as His people; but had been pre-announced by those Scriptures, and had been prefigured by that Law and Dispensation, as their own fulfilment and consummation.

Three of the speeches, which have been just mentioned, were delivered by St. Paul after the date of the Epistle to the Romans; but before his arrival in the City of Rome. His first act on reaching Rome, was, as we find in the Acts of the Apostles, to desire the personal attendance of the principal Jews of that city[3]. His discourse to them, and its consequences, are very expressive of his own feelings, and theirs; and supply a clear illustration of the Epistle which he had addressed, about three years previously, to the inhabitants, especially the Jews and Jewish Christians, of that city. "For the hope of Israel," he says, "I am bound with this chain;" and he reasons with them from morning to evening "concerning Jesus, both out of the Law of Moses and the Prophets." And some believed, and others did not believe; and when they agreed not among themselves, and departed from him, Paul reminded them of the prediction of their own Prophet, Isaiah, foretelling the unbelief of the Jews[4], and said, "Be it known, therefore, to you, that the salvation of God is sent to the Gentiles, and they will hear it[5]."

The next important help for a profitable study of the Epistle to the Romans, is to be found in the Epistle to the Galatians.

This assistance is rendered more valuable and interesting by the similarity of substance, and difference of circumstances, of the two Epistles;

The Galatian Church consisted mainly of persons who had been originally Gentiles;

The Roman Church was mainly composed of Jewish Christians;

The Galatian Church had been founded by St. Paul;

But the Roman had not been visited by him when he addressed it in his Epistle;

The Galatians had been beguiled by Judaizing Teachers to forsake the faith as taught by St. Paul, and to adopt the ceremonies of the Levitical Law, as necessary to salvation;

The Romans had been trained in conformity to those ceremonies from their infancy.

St. Paul had already had a difficult task to perform, in recovering the Gentile Christians of Galatia from the false position into which they had been betrayed, and in rescuing them from the dangerous delusion of building on any other foundation than the merits of Christ, and of placing their hopes of justification and everlasting salvation on works done by themselves in conformity with the Levitical Law, which he shows to have had only a manuductory office, in bringing mankind, regarded as in a state of spiritual pupilage, to maturity and manhood in Christ[6].

He had now the still more arduous duty of endeavouring to persuade the Jewish Christians and Jews of Rome, to regard the Mosaic Law as only a provisional and preparatory Dispensation, and as designed by God to prove man's guilt, but as totally unable to remove it; and as intended to lead the way to the full and final Revelation conceived in the Divine Mind from Eternity, and now at length displayed in the Gospel, wherein the Righteousness of God is communicated to men in Christ, the Incarnate Word, reconciling the World to God, by the offering of Himself, in their

[1] Acts xxiv. 14.
[2] Ib. xxvi. 19—27.
[3] Acts xxviii. 17—23.
[4] Isa. vi. 9.
[5] Acts xxviii. 20. 23. 25. 28.
[6] Gal. iii. 24, 25.

flesh, and as their Representative; and as joining together all who believe, whether Jews or Gentiles, as fellow-members in Himself [1].

There is good reason to believe, that the labour of love which the Apostle had performed in writing to the Churches of Galatia, had been attended with success, and that they had been restored by his efforts to the true foundation, from which they had lapsed, of Faith in the merits of Christ, as their only ground of Justification [2].

The work in which he was now about to engage, in addressing the Jews and Jewish Christians at Rome, was beset with far greater difficulties than those which he had encountered in writing to the Gentile Christians of Galatia.

In the Epistle to the Galatians he had addressed himself to Gentiles, who had recently fallen into error.

But here, in the Epistle to the Romans, he had to contend against the inveterate prejudices of the Jews; prejudices consecrated, as they thought, by their national religion for many generations.

In the Epistle to the Galatians, he had dwelt upon the ceremonial provisions of the Levitical Law, and had shown their transitory character. But this was only a small portion of his argument [3] with the Jews. They might be ready to waive all claims to Justification from conformity to the Levitical Ritual; but it did not therefore follow, that they would not firmly maintain a claim to Justification on the ground of their Obedience to the Moral Law, promulgated by God from Mount Sinai.

II. In order to understand the peculiar character of the difficulties which beset the Apostle, and the drift of the arguments by which he labours to surmount them in the Epistle to the Romans, we must endeavour to realize the feelings of the Jews and Jewish Christians whom he is addressing, and to place ourselves in their position.

With this view let us bear in mind the following facts:

1. The Jews regarded themselves as the elect people of God. They had been distinguished for many centuries by Him, Who does all things wisely, and had been separated by Him from all the other Nations of the World, for some adequate reason, which they imagined to be no other than some special merit, inherent in their own race, deriving its origin from Abraham, the Father of the Faithful, the Friend of God.

They could not, therefore, readily accept the Apostle's proposition, that all marks of spiritual distinction between themselves and the Gentiles were now to be effaced; and that the religious privileges which they had inherited, and had hitherto enjoyed for so many generations, were suddenly to be withdrawn; and that all Nations were to be henceforth placed on an equality, and to be received as brethren and fellow-members of an Universal Church; and that this Universal Church of Christ was paramount and supreme above the Hebrew race; that it had claims to superior antiquity and to higher dignity in the Divine Counsels; that it had been foreknown by God antecedently to the choice of the Jewish Nation, and had been foreordained by Him even from Eternity [4]; and that they themselves, as a separate People, were now to be superseded by it in the favour of God; and that they could have no hope of His favour, and of everlasting salvation, unless they were received into the Church of Christ.

Such declarations as these seemed to them to involve a sentence of national disfranchisement, and also to expose the Immutable God to a charge of fickleness and caprice, as imputing to Him an alteration of purpose with respect to their own Nation, His own favoured People; or as even arraigning the Almighty with imbecility, as if He were not able to maintain His own, and had been frustrated in a design prosecuted for Two Thousand years, but now, as it seemed to them, rashly reduced to an abortion in the Gospel preached by St. Paul.

[1] Rom. iii. 22; xvi. 25, 26.

[2] See above, Introduction to the Epistle to the Galatians, pp. 36—42.

[3] St. Paul seems designedly to have distributed his argument with the Jews into three parts,

(1) As to the Ceremonial Law—specially handled in the Epistle to the Galatians.

(2) The Moral Law—in that to the Romans.

(3) The dignity of the Priesthood, and Legislation of the Sinaitic Dispensation, as compared with that of CHRIST—in the Epistle to the Hebrews.

Thus these three Epistles constitute a complete body of Christian Apologetics in reply to Jewish objections; with the exception of one part of the Christian argument; namely, that which relates to the Prophecies of the Old Testament concerning the Messiah, and shows that they have been fulfilled in Jesus Christ.

This portion of the work had been accomplished in the Gospel of St. Matthew. And it is probable that it would have been undertaken by St. Paul, in his zeal for the conversion of the Jews, if it had not been already done by another.

[4] Rom. viii. 29, 30; xvi. 26.

2. The Jews could also point to the fact, that the only written Revelation that had ever been hitherto vouchsafed by Almighty God to Mankind, had been made to themselves. The Law had been given them from Mount Sinai, with awful manifestations of the Divine Majesty. It had been promulgated with signs and wonders. The Two Tables had been enshrined in the Holy of Holies under the Wings of the Cherubim[1]. The whole Pentateuch had been placed by God's command in that divine sanctuary. Its holiness was thus attested by God Himself[2]. All infractions of the Mosaic Law had been sternly punished. Its mandates were published in order to be obeyed. Obedience to them must, therefore, as they thought, be possible. And if so, it must entitle the obedient to Reward from that Righteous God Who had promulgated the Law.

A doctrine, such as St. Paul's, which represented the Mosaic Law as having only a preparatory and provisional character, and not as perfect in itself, but as designed by its Divine Author to lead to a perfect Dispensation, the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and to be, as it were, merged in it; and which affirmed that this Gospel was the consummation, for which the Patriarchs and Prophets, and all the holy men who lived before, and under, the Law, had yearned with longing aspirations, as the fulfilment of all their hopes, was in their eyes a disparagement of the Law, and of its Divine Author.

Besides, the Apostle's assertion, that the Law was unable to give Life, but brought with it Death[3], and that all their claims to reward, grounded on their own supposed obedience to the Law, were only treacherous and illusory, and that, if they were to be judged by the Law, apart from the merits of that Jesus Whom their Priests and Rulers had killed by a death which their Law declared to be accursed[4], they had no hope of salvation—was, in their opinion, an outrage against all the holy men of their own Nation who had lived and died under the Law, and against the Almighty Being Himself Who had given the Law in order that they might live thereby, and had communicated to it, as they supposed, His own Divine Attributes of perfection.

3. St. Paul preached Christ Crucified as the end of the Law for Righteousness to all who believe[5]. He also preached the Divinity of Christ[6]. And on the ground of that doctrine of Christ's Godhead he rested his assertion of the infinite merits of Christ, "God manifested in the flesh[7]," incorporating all by Faith in Himself, offering an acceptable sacrifice for all, taking away the sins of all, and having the same universal relation to all mankind by Grace, that the common Parent of all, Adam, had by Nature[8]; and by virtue of the two Natures, the Divine and Human, united in His one Person, being no other than "the LORD our RIGHTEOUSNESS" pre-announced by the Prophets[9], the very Righteousness of God to us[10], that we might be made the Righteousness of God in Him[11].

But this Doctrine of a suffering Manhood in Christ was very obnoxious to the Jews, who looked for a temporal Deliverer, and placed their hopes of future national emancipation from the Heathen Rule of Rome, and of national aggrandizement, in the triumphs to be achieved, as they fondly hoped, by their expected Messiah.

Nor was the assertion of Christ's Divinity more acceptable to them[12]. They were tenacious of what they supposed to be the true Doctrine of the Divine Unity. They were not, therefore, prepared to accept the doctrine of the Atonement, and man's consequent Justification, as preached by St. Paul; inasmuch as that Doctrine rests on two fundamental verities,—namely, the sufferings of Christ as man, and the infinite virtue and universal efficacy of those sufferings, because they were endured by Him Who is God[13].

4. The treatment which Christ had experienced from the Chief Priests and People of the Jewish Nation at Jerusalem, presented another obstacle, and rendered the reception of the Gospel a difficult thing for the Jews. If Jesus, whom they had crucified, was indeed the promised Messiah, as St. Paul affirmed; if he had been pre-announced as such by Moses and the Prophets, if also He is a Divine Person, coequal with the JEHOVAH of their own Scriptures, if He Who is "the Christ according to the flesh, is also GOD over all, Blessed for ever, Amen[14]," then it must be acknowledged that in rejecting Him, the Jewish Nation had been guilty of an act of blindness and of impiety which no language could describe.

[1] Deut. x. 2. 5.
[2] Ib. xxxi. 9. 24—26.
[3] vii. 10—13. Gal. iii. 21.
[4] See Gal. iii. 13.
[5] Rom. x. 4.
[6] ix. 5.
[7] 1 Tim. iii. 16.
[8] Rom. v. 14—18.
[9] Jer. xxiii. 6; xxxiii. 16.
[10] 1 Cor. i. 30.
[11] 2 Cor. v. 21.
[12] Hence arises one of the strongest proofs of the doctrine of the Divinity of Christ; and of the doctrine of the Trinity. See above on Acts ii. 36.
[13] Hence the expressive and emphatic combination in Rom. ix. 5, Χριστὸς τὸ κατὰ σάρκα, ὁ ὢν ἐπὶ πάντων Θεὸς εὐλογητὸς εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας, concluded with a solemn ἀμήν. Cp. xvi. 27.
[14] ix. 5.

The recognition of the doctrines preached by St. Paul, concerning Christ, involved therefore a sentence of condemnation on their own Hierarchy and Nation—the favoured People of God.

Such difficulties as these beset the Apostle addressing the Jewish Nation, for whose special benefit he wrote the Epistle to the Romans.

He had to perform a task like that of the Father in our Lord's parable of the Prodigal Son. Indeed, with reverence be it said, in this divinely inspired Epistle, the Father of all Himself, Who had now graciously received the Younger Son, the Gentile World, with gladness into His Own House, the Universal Church of Christ, comes out and entreats the Elder Brother, the Jewish Nation, to enter the House, and join with Him in joy, because his "brother was dead and is alive again, he was lost, and is found[1]."

From these considerations it will appear that the present Epistle necessarily assumed a peculiar form. It may be called an "Apology for the Gospel against Judaism."

This, its apologetic character, must be constantly borne in mind, in order that the writer's design and language may be duly understood. St. Paul is necessarily led to state the objections of the Jews. But he was also bound to do this with Christian Charity.

Hence some parts of the Epistle are constructed in the shape of a Theological Dialogue.

The Apostle, with that Christian kindness which imparts a holy beauty and grace to his character and language, often identifies himself with his adversaries, and states their objections as if they were his own. He enters into their feelings, sympathizes with them in their difficulties, and even seems to be swayed by their prejudices; he puts himself in their place, and speaks for them.

Objections are introduced by him without any notice of the name of the objector, who finds himself refuted without any personal reflections on himself.

In this way successive allegations are disposed of, with true oratorical skill, blended with genuine Christian courtesy.

The suddenness of the transitions from one objection to another, and the delicate tact and refined sympathy for his opponents, with which the objections are stated and answered, have doubtless been the occasions of some difficulty to the reader.

Besides, the typographical form in which the Epistle is often represented, either as broken up into single verses, or else exhibited in long paragraphs, without any note of transition, or any intimation of the apologetic and interlocutory character of the Epistle, has served to increase the difficulty.

But if the reader is on the alert, and applies to the Epistle some of that lively sensibility and sympathetic effusion of heart with which it is written, these difficulties will disappear; and those very characteristics, which at first may have occasioned embarrassment in his mind, will only serve to increase his affection and veneration for the inspired writer of the Epistle.

III. We are led by these preliminary remarks to take a summary view of the contents of the Epistle itself.

The Apostle begins with proving,—

(1) That the whole world is guilty before God;

(2) That all therefore need a Redeemer;

(3) That a Redeemer has been provided for all in Christ.

His Jewish readers would readily admit the first assertion as to human guilt, as far as it concerned the Gentiles; but not in respect to themselves.

1. In making this general affirmation, the Apostle takes care to state, that the Gentiles had not been left by God without a Law. He asserts that they had from the beginning, the Original and Universal Law, of Natural Reason and Human Conscience. Indeed if they had not been under a Law they could not be guilty of Sin. For, the essence of Sin is, that it is the transgression of the Law; and where there is no Law, there is no transgression[2].

He shows that Law is as ancient as the Creation. Indeed it is older than the Creation. It is a necessary consequence of the Divine Attributes of the Everlasting Himself[3].

He affirms that Almighty God had never "left Himself without a witness" in the world:

[1] See above on Luke xv. 11—28.

[2] Rom. iv. 15; v. 13. 20; vii. 8. 1 Cor. xv. 56.

[3] Rom. i. 19—21. 32; ii. 14—16. As Hooker says, "The seat of Law is the bosom of God" (I. xvi. 8).

that the visible Creation proves the existence, and wisdom, and love, and power of the Creator. The Elements and the Seasons, the Sky, Sea, and Earth are His Preachers, and Evangelists to the World. "The invisible things of Him are clearly seen from the creation of the world; even His Eternal Power and Godhead, being perceived by means of the things that are made; so that they," the Heathen, "are without excuse, if they do not know and serve God[1]."

2. Thus he prepares the way for the statement of the important truth, that the Mosaic Law, as to its Moral provisions, was not an original, or independent Code, but came in, as it were, indirectly and accidentally, "because of transgressions[2];" and was only a republication of the antecedent, original, universal unwritten Law, which Mankind had received from God at the beginning, and which still remained engraven in the Conscience of the Gentile world, though its characters had been bedimmed by sin.

Having stated that the Heathen had always possessed a Law, and that they were guilty before God, because they did not obey that Law[3], and therefore had no hope of Salvation in themselves, he next proceeds to show that the Jews were not in a better condition than the Heathen.

This he proves from the testimony of those very Scriptures which the Jews had received from God Himself, and in the possession of which they justly gloried as their distinguishing privilege, and which could not be gainsayed by them, because they were "the oracles of God[4]," and which affirm their guilt, and testify that there is "none righteous, no not one." ALL are under sin; all fail of the glory of God[5]; all, therefore, need a Redeemer.

But God has not left Mankind in a state of despair. He has mercifully devised a remedy co-extensive with the disease; He has graciously provided a Restoration not less universal than the Fall.

All are unrighteous in themselves; but the righteousness of God is freely offered to all, whether Jews or Gentiles, in Christ[6].

It is offered, by virtue of Christ's Incarnation and Death, Whom God hath "set forth to be a propitiation" for the sins of all, by fulfilling the Law of Obedience for all, suffering the penalty due for the sins of all, and exhibiting at once God's infinite hatred of sin, and His immense love for sinners.

This Righteousness is to be laid hold of by a lively Faith in the cleansing and saving efficacy of the Blood of Christ[7].

St. Paul is thus brought to his main conclusion, that the Evangelical Doctrine of Universal Redemption in Christ, is not a contravention of the Mosaic Law, but a fulfilment of it. "Do we make void the Law through Faith? God forbid! Nay, but we establish the Law[8]."

He next proceeds to reply to some objections raised by the Jews.

1. From the case of Abraham.

The Jews alleged, that Abraham was justified by something inherent in himself; and they pleaded, that they, his posterity, could be justified in the same manner. St. Paul shows, that Abraham was not justified by any thing in his own flesh[9],—that is, in his own nature,—irrespectively of God's Spirit; but that he was justified, because he did not lay his foundation on any thing in himself, but built himself upon the Word of God. Abraham was not justified by reliance on himself, but by dependence upon God; he was not justified by trusting to any supposed merits of his own, but by firm assurance in the promises of God; he was not justified by looking downward, and inwardly, on himself; but by looking upwards, and externally, and, as it were, projecting himself out of himself, and by dwelling, by Faith, in God. He was justified, by emptying himself of himself, in order to be filled with God.

He reminds the Jews, that Abraham was not justified by the Law, nor by Circumcision, but was justified long before the Law was given[10], and even before he was circumcised[11]; and therefore Justification cannot rest on the foundation of Circumcision, or of the Law.

Abraham, he shows, was justified; not, however, as the father of the Jewish race, but as the [1] Rom. i. 20. We may compare the handling of the same argument in St. Paul's speeches at Antioch in Pisidia, and at Athens, as recorded by St. Luke (Acts xiv. 17; xvii. 24—29); and in this coincidence, and also in the treatment of the doctrine of Justification, in another speech of St. Paul reported by St. Luke (Acts xiii. 39), we may recognize interesting evidences of the unity of St. Paul's character as a speaker and a writer, and of the harmonious truthfulness of St. Luke's narrative.

[2] Rom. iii. 20; v. 20; vii. 8. Cp. Gal. iii. 19. 23.

[3] i. 21—32.

[4] iii. 1—19.

[5] iii. 23.

[6] iii. 21, 22. See note.

[7] iii. 22—26.

[8] iii. 31.

[9] iv. 1. See note.

[10] iv. 13.

[11] iv. 10.

father of all of every nation, who are children of his Faith[1], and believe in God Who raised Jesus Christ from the dead, "Who was delivered to die for our sins, and was raised again for our Justification[2]."

2. Yet further. The Apostle not only goes back to Abraham, the Father of the Faithful, but to Adam, the Father of the whole human race.

He shows that Universal Redemption in Christ is provided by God's love as a gracious remedy correlative to, and coextensive with, universal guilt in Adam. As all men are by nature in Adam, and as all men sinned and fell in Adam[3], so all men are by grace in Christ, and rise in Him from the grave of sin, and are accepted in Him by God[4].

St. Paul raises the doctrinal superstructure of Universal Redemption on the historical basis of Original Sin.

3. He is thus led further to disabuse the Jews of their erroneous notions concerning their own Law as a Moral Code.

They regarded it as originally and absolutely designed for the Jewish Nation, and as intended by God to be an instrument of Justification to them.

But the Apostle carries their thoughts backward from themselves, and from Mount Sinai, even to Adam in Paradise.

He shows the essence of the Law there. The disobedience of Adam proved the pre-existence of Law; and the universal prevalence of Death, the consequence of Sin, proved the universality of Law.

All sinned in Adam, all fell in Adam, and all die in Adam. Even Infants, who are not guilty of actual sin, are subject to death[5]. And why? Because they also are in Adam; they fell in him, and in him they die[6].

The Law, in its moral essence, is coeval with Creation, and coextensive with the World.

Why then was the Levitical Law given on Mount Sinai?

That Law came in, as it were, by a side-door[7], in order to prove the universality of man's sin. It came in incidentally and parenthetically, and in order to show,—by giving new clearness and firmness to the dim and worn-out outlines of the original universal Law of Ethics, vouchsafed by God to mankind at the beginning, and by refreshing and re-illuminating its faded characters,—how far mankind had declined and degenerated from that primitive standard. It came in, in order to be a witness of human delinquency and depravity, and in order to humble the haughty imaginations of mankind, who were fondly enamoured of themselves, and vainly supposed that they were able to live up to the requirements of their moral nature, by their own unassisted reason and unregenerate will; and it came in, in order to reveal them to themselves, and to display them in the revolting hideousness and authentic features of their own moral turpitude, and so to put them out of conceit with themselves, and thus to reduce them from their intellectual intoxication to a state of moral sobriety; and to prove to them their need of a Saviour, and of the cleansing blood of Christ, and of the regenerating and renewing influences of the Holy Ghost; and to prepare them to receive with meek and humble thankfulness the gracious dispensation of the Gospel, in which a healing stream is poured forth from the side of Christ hanging on the cross on Calvary, and stems and throws back, in a retroverted current, and with superabundant power, all the tide of pollution, which had flowed downwards from the Tree of Knowledge in Paradise and from the Disobedience of Adam, and had tainted all his posterity, and had streamed forth in the countless channels of its dark waters through every age of the world[8].

4. But here another objection arose. Did not such a doctrine as this afford encouragement to sin? If the consequences of Adam's sin were overruled for good by Divine Grace in Christ,—if the loss of Paradise by the first Adam had been made, under God's controlling power and love, to be ministerial to the attainment of the far greater glory and felicity of Heaven, through the Second Adam; if heavenly blessedness, far exceeding all the bliss that had been enjoyed by Adam in Paradise, had been freely poured forth from the exhaustless well-spring of God's love on mankind incorporated in Christ, and dwelling in Him by Faith, would it not be permissible, might it not be even expedient, to continue in sin, in order that grace may abound[9]?

This question, as the Apostle shows, is founded in ignorance of the primary principles of the Christian Profession.

[1] iv. 11.
[2] iv. 25.
[3] v. 12.
[4] v. 15—19.
[5] v. 14.
[6] 1 Cor. xv. 22.
[7] παρεισῆλθεν, v. 20, and above on Gal. iii. 19, 20.
[8] Rom. v. 12—21.
[9] vi.

According to the terms of Holy Baptism, by which he is engrafted in Christ, the Christian is dead to sin, and born anew unto righteousness[1]. If he were to continue in sin, he would be falling backward into the state of death from which he has now been delivered, instead of going forward in his spiritual life of grace, into which he has been born anew. He would be sinking again into the slavery of Satan, instead of going onward to the glory of the liberty of the children of God[2]. He would be falling downwards into everlasting misery, instead of rising upward to eternal felicity.

Therefore, the Apostolic assertion that the Christian is no longer under the Law (that is, is no longer under the rigour and the curse of the Law[3]), but is under Grace, affords no countenance to sin.

On the contrary, it is by Divine Grace alone, which he receives by virtue of his membership in Christ, that he is able to overcome sin, and to obey God's law, and to bring forth fruit unto holiness, and to attain the proper end of his existence, the free gift of God, in Christ, everlasting life[4].

5. But some persons might allege, that such reasonings as these implied a disparagement of the Divine Wisdom and Goodness in giving the Mosaic Law. Was it consistent—they might ask—with those attributes of the unchangeable God, to publish, with dread solemnities, a Law of such a character, that those persons to whom it was given should be eventually released from some of its provisions, especially its penal enactments? And was this release to be regarded by them as having been antecedently contemplated, and previously provided for by Him Who had given the Law, and even as a natural and a necessary consequence and consummation of the Law itself?

Was not the Law from God? Certainly it was. Is not God infinitely good? Assuredly He is. Was then the Law Sin[5]? Heaven forbid! Was it not, like its Author, holy, just, and good[6]? Doubtless it was. What then was its purpose?

The Apostle shows that man's relation to the Law might be changed, and had been changed, without any disparagement of the Law itself.

Marriage is instituted by God. But the Levitical Law itself had provided that a Wife might marry a second Husband after the decease of the first[7].

The Law—as far as its rigour and curse are concerned—is now dead to us. That rigour and curse, which was not the consequence of man's nature (as it came originally from God), but was due to the corruption of man's nature, created at first pure and in the image of God, had been removed by the Death of Christ[8], suffering for the sake of man. The Law being dead, we are now free to be espoused to Him, our heavenly Bridegroom, Who has married our nature, and has joined us to Himself in holy wedlock; and has given life to the Universal Church by His own Death on the cross, as Adam gave life to Eve, "the mother of all living," formed from his side as he slept.

But shall we say that "the Law is sin," because we are delivered from its rigour and curse by Christ? Heaven forbid! St. Paul here leads us to look back on the state of man before the Law had been given from Mount Sinai.

In the loving fulness of his Apostolic heart, by which he made himself "all things to all men[9]," he identifies himself with Human Nature, in its primitive Universality, as it existed before the Decalogue.

Sin is the transgression of Law; and "where no Law is, there is no transgression."

It is true that there never was a time when Human Nature was without Law.

But in the course of many ages after the Fall, the voice of primeval Law became feebler and feebler. Its characters, inscribed on the human Conscience, became more and more faint and evanescent. Man was almost without the presence and consciousness of Law; and by consequence he was almost also without the knowledge of sin. Sin itself seemed to be laid asleep. It was, as it were, dead[10]. A miserable state of ignorance, it is true, but one of comparatively little responsibility[11].

While man was dreaming away his life in this spiritual swoon of unconsciousness, suddenly the Trumpet of God sounded on Mount Sinai; and a Law, clear in its tones, like the loud voice of the Trumpet with which it was given, was promulgated by Him. This solemn sound aroused the human Conscience from its slumber; and with it awakened Sin. It showed to man what was the will of [1] vi. 3, 4.

[2] vi. 11—17. 23.
[3] See on vi. 15.
[4] vi. 22, 23.
[5] vii. 7; ii. 12.
[6] vii. 12.
[7] vii. 1—3.
[8] vii. 6.
[9] 1 Cor. ix. 22.
[10] Rom. vii. 8. Compare our Lord's words, "If I had not come . . . they had not had sin." John xv. 22. 24.
[11] See vii. 7.

God. It displayed God's Law before his eyes; a Law which, in its moral provisions, was no new creation, but was a re-publication of the old original Law, under which man had been from the beginning. It showed to him Sin, in its true character, as rebellion against the Will, and violation of the Law, of God. And it did more than this. The Law of God, the All Pure and All Holy, encountered Human Depravity face to face. It arraigned Human Nature: and summoned it to appear before its Judgment-Seat.

And what was the consequence?

Man, impatient of control, and exasperated by interference, resented this manifestation of God's Law. Elated by the pride of his stubborn will, tainted by the disease of his disordered nature, and weighed down by the heavy load of inveterate evil habits, he was indignant at the voice of Law; he hated Law even because it was Law; he spurned at it, and kicked against it, because it was holy, and just, and good, and was therefore offensive to him in his unholiness, injustice, and wickedness; he rebelled, audaciously and impiously rebelled, against the Law of God, even because it was the Law of God.

Yet, all the while, Man's Conscience and Man's Reason could not deny that the Law was good. They were on the side of the Law. But his Conscience and Reason were under the tyranny of his Will and Appetite, and their voice was drowned by the vociferous clamour of his Lusts.

Human Nature was then like a Civil Government amid the turbulence of a Revolution, when the ignobler members of the Commonwealth gain the ascendancy, and hold in thraldom those who ought to rule. The inner voice of Conscience and of Reason, which ought to exercise a Royal Supremacy over Human Nature, but which uttered their mandates in vain, and were powerless to overrule the madness of the rebellious democracy and furious mob of excited and inflamed Passions and Appetites, served only to show, to what a miserable condition of bondage Human Nature was reduced.

Thus by reason of man's corrupt and wretched condition, the publication of the Law could not remove sin, but only displayed, provoked, and aggravated it. It showed the foulness and loathsomeness of man's moral disease, and caused his wounds to fester, and made sin to be more exceeding sinful[1].

Well, therefore, might the Apostle exclaim, in the name of suffering Humanity, "O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" Well might he reply from the bottom of his heart, "I thank God, through Jesus Christ our Lord[2]."

Jesus Christ has saved me from myself. He, God of God, the Everlasting Son of the Everlasting Father, has taken Human Nature, and by becoming Incarnate, and being born for me, has done for me what by reason of the weakness of my flesh the Law could not do. He, the Incarnate God, has even made my flesh, by which I fell, to be the instrument of my rising again; He, by suffering death for me, which He could not do unless He had taken my flesh, has delivered me from the body of death, the penalty of the Law; and has raised me to life, and has infused His Divine Spirit into my nature, and has imparted to me His Righteousness; and at the same time that He has taken away the curse of the Law, He has enabled me to perform the righteous requirement of the Law[3]; and has given to me, in His own glorious Resurrection in the flesh, a pledge of my Resurrection in His likeness, if I continue in Him.

Therefore, I am under the strongest obligations to live, not after the Flesh, but after the Spirit[4].

6. They, who thus live, are sons of God by adoption, and are heirs of all things in Christ, and will be glorified together in Him.

Therefore they rejoice in tribulation, because it was His path to glory, and is also theirs; and they are not staggered by sufferings, because in their own sufferings, and in the vanity and bondage of all earthly things, they recognize a consequence of the Fall, and a cause of thankfulness for their own Recovery, and a pledge of future emancipation into glory for those who are redeemed in Christ[5].

They know that all things work together for good to them who love God, and who see a proof of His love to them in the fact, that they themselves have been called into His Church Universal, according to His purpose, which He purposed in Christ from the beginning. All things work together for good to those who love God, and were foreknown in Christ by Him, and foreordained for conformity to the likeness of His own Son, so that He might be the First-born among many brethren, and who in due course of time were called by Him into His Church, and justified by their Baptism into Christ's body, and have been glorified by their union with Him[6].

[1] vii. 13.
[2] vii. 24, 25.
[3] viii. 1—4.
[4] viii. 9—12.
[5] viii. 7—28.
[6] viii. 8—30.

Yes, God has glorified them already in Christ. For we may regard this blessed consummation of glory as already realized, when we look at what God has done for us all. Since He spared not even His own Son, but delivered Him up to death for us all, how is it possible that He should not likewise, together with this gift of Him, freely give us all things? Since He has raised Him, Who is our Head, to glory, will He not raise us, who are His Members? Yes, Christ's Resurrection is a pledge of our Resurrection, His Ascension is an earnest of our Ascension.

Who, therefore, can now bring any condemnatory charge against us who love God, and who are shown, by His gracious acts to us, to be greatly beloved of Him, and who are therefore authorized to call ourselves the elect people of God? It is God who justifieth us,—Who is he that condemneth us[1]? When we behold Christ, Who took our Nature, and died in our flesh for us all, now raised from the dead, and enthroned in our Nature at the Right Hand of God,—when we behold Him ever living to pray for us, there we see our own Justification, our own Exaltation, our own Glorification[2].

May we not therefore speak of ourselves (as far as God's will is concerned) as already saved[3], and glorified in Christ? May we not feel assured, that, if we do our part,—we, whose Nature Christ has taken, and for whom He died, such is the immensity of His Love, and Who has carried that Nature into heaven, we, who have been made sons of God in Him, cannot fail of everlasting salvation? for it is written, that "every one that believeth in Him shall not be confounded[4]."

7. This declaration, that God now offers salvation to all men in Christ, and that all, of every nation, who embrace that offer, and comply with its conditions, and dwell by faith in Christ, are God's elect people, could not fail to raise the question concerning the relation of the Jews to God under the Gospel.

Are not the Jews His elect people? Were not they chosen by Him, and set apart by a special mark as His own? Did He not therefore see in them some special merit, on account of which He was induced to make this distinction between them and all other nations? Have they been cast off by Him? Is He then changeable and inconstant? Is not this assertion of His election of an Universal Church, from all nations in Christ, irreconcileable with the love and faithfulness of Him Who is infinitely Good, and ever the same?

8. The answer to these questions had been in part anticipated by the Apostle.

He had spoken of the Universal Church of all faithful people as foreseen and foreordained in Christ[5]. All members of the Christian Church are the Elect People of God even from Eternity[6].

The choice of the Jews, as God's favoured people, was, like the giving of the Mosaic Law, a parenthetical act.

The Law of Moses was a posterior promulgation of the Original Law of Eternal and Immutable Morality. It came in subsequently and accidentally, "because of transgressions[7]."

So the Choice of the Jews. It was not God's primary purpose. His antecedent and original design was to save all in Christ. The subsequent choice of a particular People, the Jews, could not frustrate that original purpose. No. It prepared the way for its effect.

The Apostle meets the question of the Jews, concerning the alleged inconsistency in the divine counsels, by a full acknowledgment of the special privileges of the Jewish Nation; and he happily sums up his recital of their national prerogatives, by the solemn asseveration, that from out of them "sprung the Christ according to the Flesh, Who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen[8]." This, he reminds them, is their greatest privilege; and he invites them to accept the Gospel as their own national inheritance in Christ.

He then grounds his answer on the foundation of God's Sovereignty. God chooses whom He wills. Even in the case of Abraham, He showed this. He chose the seed of Abraham by Sarah, and not by Hagar or Keturah[9]. "In Isaac shall thy seed be called." This was still more remarkable in the case of Isaac's children, born of the same mother at the same birth. He loved Jacob, and hated Esau[10]. They who are chosen are not themselves the cause of the choice. They have not entitled

[1] viii. 33.
[2] viii. 15—34.
[3] St. Paul therefore says, "according to His mercy He saved us, by the washing of Regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Ghost" (Titus iii. 5).—He speaks of our salvation as a thing already done; for it is done, as far as God's part is concerned. It remains only for us to do ours. Cp. Eph. ii. 5. 8.
[4] ix. 33.
[5] viii. 28—30, where see note.
[6] See Eph. i. 4—11.
[7] See above, p. 191.
[8] ix. 5.
[9] ix. 7. 9.
[10] ix. 10—13, where see note.

themselves to be chosen, by any thing inherent in themselves, or by reason of their own works [1]. It is not from their merits, either actual or foreseen, but only from God's love, that the choice proceeds. That which God loves in those whom He foreknows and chooses, is His own work in them. And that which He hates in those whom He rejects, is their own sin.

Here is an answer to the Jewish notion, that they had been constituted to be God's elect people on account of their own deserts.

9. In reading these declarations of the Apostle, certain principles are to be borne in mind.

God is Sovereign Lord of all. He is the sole Author of all good in man.

He also foreknows all men from Eternity, and foresees what every man will be. All things are present to Him at once.

He loves the good and holy. But it is not on account of any thing inherently good in themselves (as distinguished from goodness derived from God), and growing out of themselves as from a root, that He loves them. But He loves in them His own image and His own work. He loves in them His own Nature. He loves in them the work of Christ, and of the Holy Ghost. He loves that work, not resisted, not marred, and frustrated by them, but cherished in them [2], by a right exercise of their Free-will, which is His gift. He loves His own People foreseen and foreknown from Eternity in Christ.

So likewise what He hates in the wicked, is not any thing which He Himself has made, or foreordained in them. What He hates in them, is not the Nature which He has given them; but it is that Nature spoiled and corrupted by their own sin; it is that Nature perverted and depraved by their abuse of the good gifts of Reason, Conscience, Grace, and Free-Will, which He in His love has bestowed upon them.

And in choosing according to His own Sovereign Will and Pleasure, He chooses nothing unjustly, arbitrarily, capriciously, and unreasonably. "There are no antinomies with God [3]." Whatsoever He does, He does "by the counsel of His Will [4]." He is the King of whom it is written, that "The King's Power loveth Judgment." The exercise of His Sovereign Power is ever guided and regulated by His infinite Justice, infinite Wisdom, and infinite Love.

10. The Sovereignty of God, Who is infinitely wise, just, holy, and merciful, is clearly seen in the case of those who proudly resist His Will.

His Power is shown even in their Rebellion against it. And the mightier the human Rebel is, so the punishment inflicted on him by the divine Justice is more signal; and the conquest achieved over him by the divine Power is more glorious.

Therefore the Apostle well chooses the example of Pharaoh, a Royal Rebel against God [5]; one whose resistance against Him appeared to be triumphant for a time, during the long period in which he held God's people in bondage; one whose pride and stubbornness defied the divine Majesty and Omnipotence, which displayed itself in mighty works, calling him mercifully to repentance, and chastening him justly for his sins.

In the end God conquered Pharaoh by means of Pharaoh's own acts. He punished him by his sins. He chastised him by his hardness of heart. In order that Pharaoh might not imagine that he by his power had triumphed over God, and in order that others might not be led by him to presume and to resist God, He declared to Pharaoh that He had raised him up on high in order that He might show by him His power, and in order that His Name might be proclaimed in all the Earth by his means [6].

The display of God's sovereignty to the world is the end which He has in view in raising up all, who are raised, to high dignity and royal estate. And this purpose is not frustrated, although they resist Him, as Pharaoh did. The end is always sure; for it is an end fixed by God. The means are left free to man. Men may choose the good, and they may choose the evil; they may obey God, and they may rebel against Him. This is by God's own permission; for He has given them Free-Will. If they obey Him, as God desires and commands and invites them to do by many gracious promises of reward, then His glory is promoted directly by their actions, they are admitted to be fellow-workers with Him, and are rewarded by Him. But even if they resist Him, in defiance of His commands, and in spite of His threats and encouragements, still His purpose, in raising them up to eminence, is not defeated by them. Whether they obey Him, or rebel against

[1] ix. 11.
[2] See on ix. 13.
[3] Hooker, Appendix, book v.
[4] See Eph. i. 5—11. Ps. xcix. 4.
[5] ix. 17.
[6] ix. 17

Him, the end, which is His glory, is always attained. His design cannot be frustrated by their sin. Indeed, if they rebel against Him, the attainment of His end is made more triumphant by their endeavours to prevent it. The irresistible Might and Majesty of the Divine Conqueror is made more illustrious even by the pride and power of the human Rebel who is conquered. The glory of God is displayed in the overwhelming of Pharaoh and of his host when engaged in an act of rebellion against Him; and plunged down, in the fiercest paroxysm of their rage and fury against heaven, into the lowest depths of the Red Sea.

11. Let no one, on the ground of God's irresistible Power, proceed to arraign God's Justice. It is enough for us, that God, Who is infinite in Wisdom and Goodness, acts as He does. God's Sovereign Omnipotence is never at variance with His Infinite Justice. Therefore who art thou, O man, that repliest against God[1]? Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, Why hast thou made me thus[2]? He has power, if He had so willed it, to create one vessel to honour, and another to dishonour.

But[3], instead of doing this, He, in His great long-suffering, bears with vessels of wrath, fitted by themselves for destruction[4]; and at last overtaken, like Pharaoh, by that destruction for which they had prepared themselves.

Thus by them He shows His power; and makes them to be a warning to others against sin. The Wicked, preaching to others by their punishment, are like the Poet's Theseus, who cries with a loud voice through the darkness of the shades below, in which he is imprisoned,

"Discite justitiam moniti, et non temnere Divos[5]."

On the other hand, God shows the riches of His glory on vessels of mercy which He Himself prepared for glory[6].

Here then is your answer. You Jews, who complain, that if God has chosen an Universal Church in Christ, He has dealt unfairly with you His Elect People, may see yourselves also chosen here. Every one who believeth in Christ shall not be confounded[7]. This Universal Church is for Jews as well as for Gentiles. Indeed, salvation is first offered to you[8]. And it is for Gentiles as well as for Jews; as your own Prophets foretold that it would be[9]. And the goodness of the God of Abraham is magnified by the extension of His grace in Abraham's seed, which is Christ, to all who show themselves to be children of Abraham, by imitating Abraham's Faith.

True it is, that while Gentiles have been received as God's people, and have attained to that Righteousness, which God offers to all through faith in Christ[10], many of you have failed of the glory designed for you by God. And why? Because you build yourselves on a wrong foundation. Because you build yourselves on yourselves, and not, as your father Abraham did, on something external to himself, namely, on the Rock of Salvation, which God has provided for you, and which many of you (as your own Prophets forewarned you would be the case) have made to be for yourselves a stone of stumbling, and Rock of offence[11].

This is no new thing. You had previous intimation of it from Moses. He told you that no one can be justified by the Law. It is only he whose obedience is perfect, that can hope for Justification thereby. But this is not your case. It is not the case of any man. No man's obedience is perfect. Christ alone fulfilled all Righteousness.

12. But your Scriptures speak to you also of another mode of Justification, a method which is not from man, but from God; one which is built by Faith on Christ. And this foundation is universal. It is the same for all, whether Jew or Gentile, for there is no difference. Every one who believeth on Him shall not be ashamed. The same God is rich in mercy to all who call upon Him. He therefore sends Preachers to all. He pre-announced in your Scriptures this Universal Evangelization. Our office in preaching to the Gentiles (an office which you regard with hatred and indignation) is pre-supposed by your own Scriptures. It is pre-announced in the Old Testament, and is there blessed by God[12]. And He pre-announced also in your Scriptures, that many of you would reject the offer, and that it would be received by the Gentile world[13].

Therefore the doctrine which we preach, of Universal Redemption by Christ, and of Justification by Faith in Him, is not, as you allege it to be, a new doctrine; it is contained in the Scriptures which have been in your hands for many hundred years.

But do not therefore suppose, that God, in receiving the Gentiles, has rejected you. You may,

[1] ix. 20.
[2] ix. 20.
[3] Observe the transition marked by δὲ, ix. 22.
[4] ix. 22.
[5] Virg. Æn. vi. 620.
[6] ix. 23.
[7] ix. 33; x. 4. 11.
[8] Rom. i. 16. Acts xiii. 46; xxviii. 27.
[9] ix. 24 - 26.
[10] ix. 30; x. 4.
[11] ix. 32, 33.
[12] x. 15.
[13] x. 19—21.

perhaps, imagine that the number of the Jews who have accepted God's offers in Christ, is small. Some certainly have accepted them. I, myself, who have been called to be the Apostle of the Gentiles, am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin[1]. There is a remnant according to the election of Grace[2]. There is a residue of faithful Israelites building on God's free favour in Christ, and not relying for hopes of Justification on any supposed merit of their own. The rest, it is true, have been blinded. It was prophesied in your Scriptures that so it would be[3].

Here also, in His own due time, God will overrule evil with good. His design is to provoke you to godly jealousy by means of the Gentiles[4]. His purpose will be effected in its season, and so "all Israel will be saved[5]."

IV. 1. The Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, and Eleventh Chapters, to which we have now been referring, have been made the groundwork of controversies concerning Predestination, Election, and Reprobation.

These questions will be considered further, as far as the language of the Epistle requires, in the course of the notes on those Chapters.

But a general observation, in addition to what has been already said on this subject, may be offered here with respect to them.

How did the question of Predestination come under St. Paul's consideration in this Epistle at all?

It did not arise with reference to the future salvation of any particular individuals, as contrasted with other individuals.

But it was produced by the opinion of the Jews, that they themselves, as a Nation, were the elect People of God; and that, as such, they had special merits of their own, entitling them, nationally, to such a favour from Him.

It arose from the allegation of the Jews, that the Apostle, in affirming that God had now received an Universal Church in Christ as His chosen people, was charging Him, Who is unchangeable and all-wise, with inconstancy and vacillation, or with lack of forethought or foreknowledge, as revoking a privilege awarded by Himself to the Jewish People, and as transferring or extending that privilege to others, the Gentiles, from whom they, the Jews, had been severed and kept apart, as an Elect People, by God. This consideration may serve to remove the difficulties that have been found by some in these Chapters.

2. It is certain, that the Apostle is not here treating professedly the question of personal Election or Reprobation. He has his eye fixed on a very different subject, namely, on the blessed truth, that God had chosen in Christ an Universal Church, as His elect People, from the beginning.

St. Paul's purpose is, to show the entire conformity, harmony, and consistency, of this previous choice, with another no less certain fact, namely, God's choice of the Jews as His peculiar people.

It is also certain, that the Apostle nowhere asserts, that God has created any one for wrath and destruction. But, on the contrary, St. Paul has declared, that God "spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all[6];" and he has said more than once in this Epistle that "every one who believes in Him will not be confounded[7]."

He teaches, that God has foreknown and foreordained to salvation an Universal Church; and that He has purchased to Himself that Church by the precious blood of his Dear Son, and that He has chosen, as His own elect People, all, whether Jew or Gentile, of every nation under heaven, who are incorporated in the Body of Christ, and constantly abide in Him by Faith.

3. God's primary Will and Predestination is, that all men should be saved.

"He will have all men to be saved" (says St. Paul), "and to come to the knowledge of the truth[8]."

It is God's Will also, that every man should have Free-Will. "Ipse nos velle vult." And therefore it is God's will, that all should be able to receive or reject the offer of salvation made to all men in Christ.

God predestinates every man to be free in the exercise of his will. And He gives Grace, in order to quicken our will. And He gives us Reason, Conscience, and Scripture, to guide it. It is also God's Will, that all they who freely accept the terms of salvation which are freely made by Him,

[1] xi. 1, 2. Cp. 13.
[2] xi. 5.
[3] xi. 7—10.
[4] x. 19; xi. 14.
[5] xi. 25, 26.
[6] Rom. viii. 32, where see note.
[7] ix. 33; x. 11.
[8] 1 Tim. ii. 4. Titus ii. 11. 2 Pet. iii. 9.

should be saved; but that they who abuse their free-will and reject what He offers, and what He desires them to accept [1], shall fail of salvation, and incur punishment and perdition.

Therefore it may be truly said, that God predestinates the faithful to salvation; and predestinates the unbelieving to destruction.

This is what St. Paul declares, when he says that God "is the Saviour of all men," that is, in desire and design. This is His primary predestination. But then the Apostle adds, "specially of them that believe [2]." In desire, He predestinates all men unto salvation; and He predestinates the faithful, in act.

4. But in making this statement, we must not fall into the Arminian error, which represents man's goodness, foreseen by God, as the ground of God's predestination of the godly.

God predestinates the godly to salvation; but the primary cause of that Predestination on God's side is His Love; and the primary cause of it on man's side is not any thing inherent in man as man, but it is the work of God in man; it is the Nature created by God, and taken by Christ; it is man seen by God, not as man is in himself, but as he was originally when formed in God's image, and as he is, by grace, now that he is restored and created anew in Christ, Who has taken man's nature, and has made man a member of Himself, and a temple of the Holy Ghost, by Regeneration and Justification. It is man redeemed, and sanctified, and dwelling in Christ, and not resisting God's grace, but abiding in Christ unto the end, who is the object of God's love and the subject of His Predestination. Man's Faith in God is indeed a condition of that Predestination, but God's Love to man in Christ is its cause.

Almighty God foreknows from Eternity who will be saved. But God's Foreknowledge, though it foresees every thing, forces nothing. He foreknows every thing that will be; but nothing will be because He foreknows it. And man has not divine prescience. Man cannot tell who will be saved. No man can be sure even of his own salvation [3]. And man cannot read the heart, and pronounce sentence on others. And man must speak as man, and not as God. It is not for him to usurp the judgment-seat of God. Man can only speak from what he sees. And wherever he sees that God has freely given all the necessary means of grace and salvation, there, in Christian charity, "which hopeth all things," he ought to presume that God's good counsel will not be frustrated by man's sin, to man's own loss and destruction. St. Paul therefore speaks of all his brethren in Christ as "called and holy [4]," and he regards all Christian men and women as "the elect people of God [5];" and, in a like spirit, his brother Apostle St. Peter exhorts all Christians to "give diligence to make their calling and election sure [6]."

5. It is remarkable, that (as if in order to clear away all doubt on this subject) St. Paul commences the next Epistle which he wrote, namely, that to the Ephesians, by addressing them all as predestinated in Christ. The preamble of the Epistle to the Ephesians is the best elucidation of, and corollary to, the doctrine of Predestination as taught in the Epistle to the Romans.

With regard to our own predestination, the Apostle teaches us to look for the evidence of it (as far as it can be seen) in what God has done for us; and in our own lives.

"All things," he says, "work together for good to them that love God, to them that are called according to His purpose [7]."

The fact that we have been called by God into His Church is a proof of His Love to us. The fact that He has given His only-begotten Son "for us all," is another proof of His immense Love to us. It is a pledge that He will deny us nothing, if we are faithful to Him, but will "freely give us all things." It is an earnest of future glory.

Our own love to Him is also a proof of His love to us; for our love to Him is a fruit of His Spirit given to us, and working in our hearts.

We have been called by Him, we have been justified by Faith in Him and have received the Seal of Pardon in Baptism [8], and have been born anew in Christ; and if we feel that we love Him, if we see the fruits of that love in our actions, if we recognize the likeness of Christ in ourselves, and of His life in our lives, then we may humbly hope and believe, that we have been predestinated by Him to life eternal.

[1] Deut. v. 29. Ezek. xviii. 32; xxxiii. 11. Matt. xxiii. 37. Rom. x. 21.

[2] 1 Tim. iv. 10.

[3] Cp. note above on 1 Cor. ix. 27.

[4] See on Rom. i. 6, 7. 1 Cor. i. 2.

[5] See on Eph. i. 4—11. Col. iii. 12. Cp. 1 Thess. i. 4. 1 Pet. ii. 9; v. 13. So the apostolic Father S. Ignatius calls the entire Ephesian Church ἐκλελεγμένην, Eph. i., and of Tralles ἐκλεκτήν: and the ἐκλεκτοί are opposed to the heathen in Martyr. Polycarp. 16.

[6] 2 Pet. i. 10.

[7] Rom. viii. 28.

[8] See on 1 Cor. vi. 11, and Rom. v. 1. 9.

For, says the Apostle, "whom God foreknew, them He did predestinate to be conformed to the likeness of His Son, and whom He did predestinate, them He also called, and whom He called, them He justified[1]." Our Calling, therefore, and Justification, together with our love to Him, are evidences of our Predestination. "Whom He justified, them (in His divine will and design) He also glorified." And "if He be for us, who shall be against us? who shall separate us from the love of Christ?" what can hinder this predestination of us (who have been called, and who love God) from taking effect? Nothing. For, in all our afflictions, "we are more than conquerors through Him that loved us. I am persuaded, then, that nothing will be able to separate us from the love of God in Christ." And, therefore, by His grace, we will continue in His love; and we know that he who "endureth to the end shall be saved[2]."

This is the language of St. Paul; this is the language of the Christian Church[3].

6. The Calvinistic scheme of Predestination fails, when it attempts to account for the introduction of the question of Election in this Epistle. It cannot explain the presence of the topic here[4].

It fails also, when it endeavours to reply to the Apostle's Jewish objectors.

If the Calvinistic interpretation of these chapters is applied to the solution of the questions, by which the Jews, with whom the Apostle is arguing, pressed St. Paul, it will be found to be wholly inadequate to the purpose.

Indeed, that Interpretation would involve the Apostle in an irrelevant and weak paralogism, which would recoil on himself to his own discomfiture and confusion. Of little avail would it have been for him to assure the Jews (who supposed themselves to be God's elect), that some few, unknown persons, had been predestined by God to salvation, under the Gospel, and that all the rest

[1] Rom. viii. 29, 30.

[2] Matt. x. 22.

[3] See on Rom. viii. 29, 30. Eph. i. 5—11.

[4] The following summary of the Calvinistic doctrines, as far as they bear on the questions mentioned above, is derived from the editor's Occasional Sermons (First Series, p. 87), where other authorities on the subject are collected:—

"God," says Calvin, "preordained and forewilled Adam's fall," and "all are born of the same corrupt mass of perdition," and "out of this mass God elects some." (Calvin, De Prædest. pp. 607, 608. 613. Inst. iii. 23, §§ 3, 4. 7. Comm. in Rom. ix. 23.) "Predestination," he says, "is the eternal decree of God, by which He determined what He would do with every man. For all men are not created on equal terms; but to some of them eternal life is preordained, and to others eternal condemnation. Therefore, accordingly as a person is created for one or other of these two ends, so, I affirm, he is predestinated either to life or death." (Calvin, Inst. III. c. xxi. § 5.) They who are called to a state of salvation are few in number compared with those who are left in a state of perdition. "The Grace of God," he says, "does not rescue many from eternal death, and it leaves the world in that perdition to which it is doomed." (Calvin, Inst. III. xxii. § 7.)

He teaches, that they who have once received grace can never fall away.

"They," he says, "who are once engrafted by Christ into His body, can never perish; for Christ will exert the power of God to preserve them, which power is greater than all. They who are incorporated in Christ can never fail of salvation." (Inst. III. ii. § 12. III. xxii. § 7; xxi. § 7.)

He defines saving faith to be a personal assurance in the individual that he himself will be saved. Thus: "Faith is a firm and certain knowledge of God's goodwill to ourselves; and he only is a true believer, who, being persuaded of God's fatherly love to himself, and relying on His promises to himself, has an undoubting confidence in his own future salvation." (Inst. III. ii. § 16.)

All they who will fail of salvation, are represented by Calvin as created for the purpose of being condemned eternally.

"Almighty God," he says, "created them for shame in life, and for perdition in death." (Inst. III. xxiv. § 12.)

"They are born from their mother's womb devoted to inevitable destruction." (Inst. III. xxiii. § 6.)

Hence Calvin is far from allowing that Christ died for all men: or that offers of salvation are made freely by God in Him to all, and that the merits of His sufferings extend to all nations in every age.

On the contrary, he thus speaks:—"How comes it to pass that the fall of Adam has involved so many nations, with their infant children, irremediably, in everlasting perdition? How, but because it so pleased God? 'Decretum quidem horribile, fateor!' 'A horrible decree! I grant it.' But no one can deny that God foreknew it, because He Himself had so foreordained it." (Inst. III. xxiii. § 8.)

Hence it is alleged by him, that Free-Will is no essential part of man's nature. He says, "Man's desires and endeavours have no part in working out his salvation." (Calvin, Inst. III. xxiv. § 1.) "It is not in man's power to refuse or to accept divine grace." (Inst. II. iii. § 11.) "God," he says, "so moves the will, not (as for many ages it has been taught and believed) as if it were in our choice whether we will resist or obey the motions of grace. We must repudiate the assertion so often iterated by Chrysostom, in which he says (see Chrys. in Joann. vi. 44), that 'whom God draws, He draws willing to be drawn.'" (Inst. II. iii. § 10.)

Hence the sounder Confession of the Lutherans, to be subscribed by their Clergy, thus speaks:—

"The false and erroneous doctrine of the Calvinists concerning Predestination and Providence, is as follows:—

"I. That Christ did not die for all, but only for the elect.

"II. That God created the greatest part of men for damnation, and willeth not they should be converted and live.

"III. That the Elect and Regenerate cannot lose their faith, or forfeit the grace of the Holy Ghost, or be damned, although they commit heinous sin.

"IV. That those who are not elect are necessarily damned, and cannot be saved .... although they live holy and blameless lives." (From Articuli Visitatorii a Ministris Ecclesiarum, &c. ad subscribendum propositi anno Christi 1592. See Hase, Libri Symbolici, p. 866, ed. Lips. 1837.)

Hence it may readily be inferred, what the teaching of Calvin is concerning the Sacrament of Baptism. "It is a great error," he says, "to imagine that Sacraments confer grace, provided we do not oppose to them the bar of mortal sin" (which is the case with infants). "This opinion," he adds, "is pernicious, deadly, diabolical." (Inst. IV. xiv. § 14.)

"In Baptism there is no virtue of Regeneration or Salvation, but only a knowledge and assurance of them." (Inst. IV. xv. § 2.)

"Baptism is not represented as an effectual means of grace, but a sign and assurance to the elect that God pardons their sins." (Inst. IV. xv. §§ 1. 10; xvi. § 22.)

"The children of believers are baptized, not in order that they may be made therein the children of God; but they are thus, by a sacred sign, received into the Church because they already belong to Christ's body." (Inst. IV. xv. §§ 20. 22.) And one of Calvin's disciples says, that "St. Augustine greatly erred in attributing too much efficacy to Baptism; for he did not perceive that it was only an outward mark of Regeneration, but asserted, that by the act of Baptism we are regenerate, and adopted, and engrafted into the family of Christ."

of mankind had been eternally condemned as Reprobates, and were doomed by an irresistible decree to eternal perdition.

Yet this is the assertion which the Calvinistic interpretation imputes to St. Paul!

7. Let us turn from this erroneous interpretation to that of Primitive Antiquity.

The whole of the Apostle's argument then becomes clear and convincing. It becomes also persuasive, encouraging, and attractive.

You Jews allege that you are the Elect People of God; and that by our preaching of the doctrine of Universal Redemption and of Justification by Faith in Christ, you are disinherited. Heaven forbid! God's gifts are without repentance[1]. The first offer of the Gospel is made to you. Believe in Christ. Then you also, yes, all of you, are God's People. Then you are God's elect. You are His favoured Heritage in a far higher sense than you were before, or could ever have hoped that you would be. You are sons of God in Christ, you are united to one another as fellow-members in Him Who comes from you "according to the flesh," and is also "God over all, blessed for evermore. Amen[2]."

V. The doctrine of St. Paul thus expounded is followed appropriately and logically by a series of practical precepts concerning ordinary duties[3].

Such exhortations would have no rational connexion with the foregoing argument of the Apostle, if he had intended to show, (as the Calvinistic theory alleges that he did,) that men are what they are, by a fatal necessity, and that the greater part of mankind were created, by the Father of the Saviour of the World, in order to be eternally lost!

But these exhortations follow naturally from the Apostle's statement, that as we are all by nature in Adam, so by grace we are all in Christ; and that as we are all members of Christ, so the law of our being is Love[4].

Consequently the latter parts of the Epistle are of a practical character. Its precepts naturally arise from the doctrinal assertions of the Epistle, that—

(1) All are guilty before God; that (2) all need a Saviour; that (3) Christ died for all; and that (4) we are all one body in Him.

Therefore let not the strong judge the weak, nor the weak judge the strong. Let the brother who has been rescued from Heathen Idolatry, and has been received into the Church of Christ, not censure him who has passed from the Law to the Gospel, and from the Synagogue into the Church. But let Gentile Christians and Jewish Christians "bear one another's burdens, and so fulfil the Law of Christ;" and let them join together in praising God with one heart and mouth, and so fulfil the prophecies of the Old Testament[5].

After sundry salutations to brethren at Rome, he closes the Epistle with a Doxology, in which he expresses the main doctrine of the whole. He there claims for the Gospel its true title. He declares it to be the Mystery hidden in the Divine Counsels from Everlasting; and to have been pre-announced by the Prophets; and to be now manifested by the command of God to all Nations for the obedience of Faith in Christ.

Thus he asserts the precedence of the Gospel over the Law, and declares that the calling out from all Nations of an Universal Church in Christ was God's design before the foundation of the world[6].

VI. On the whole it may be affirmed, that the great characteristic of this Epistle is its Universality.

It is addressed to the great Capital of the Fourth and Last Monarchy of the world. It confutes the exclusive notions of the Jewish People, who would have limited God's mercies to themselves. It proves from the Jewish Scriptures, as well as from the World's History, that all are guilty before God. It proclaims the universal prevalence of human corruption, and the universal effusion of divine grace. It declares the Universality of sin and death overflowing on mankind from the Fall of the First Adam; and it preaches the Universality of Redemption, Justification, and Sanctification procured for the World by the death of the Second Adam, Jesus Christ.

It displays Mankind alienated from God by the one, and reconciled to God by the Other. It

[1] Rom. xi. 29.
[2] ix. 5.
[3] xii. 1—20; xiii. 1—14.
[4] xii. 4—6; xiii. 8.
[5] xv. 8—12.
[6] xvi. 25—27. See Eph. i. 3—8. 2 Thess. ii. 13.

exhibits all men as reunited to Him,—in His Will and desire,—as sons of God by adoption in Christ. It declares that Jews and Gentiles are joined to one another, and to God in Him, Who is both God and Man, Jesus Christ; and Who is both the Seed of the Woman, and was also born under the Law, and thus belongs to both Gentiles and Jews. It represents them all as knit together in One Universal Church, foreknown by God from Eternity, and purchased by the precious Blood of His beloved Son. And it affirms, that, in this Church Universal, God offers freely, fully, and actually the gift of the Holy Ghost and of Eternal Life to all who believe in Christ, and who dwell by Faith and Love in Him, and endure stedfastly unto the end.

It may, indeed, seem strange and surprising, that an Epistle designed as a refutation of narrow theories concerning the saving efficacy of Christ's Death, and distinguished by its bold declarations of God's immense Love to Mankind in Christ, should have been perverted by some into an occasion and instrument for disseminating narrow notions, similar to those which it was intended to banish from the world.

But this is no new thing. The most wholesome spiritual food is often abused by the Evil One into the most noxious poison.

There is, however, little fear that any should be beguiled by these erroneous perversions, if the Apostle's aim in writing this Epistle be steadily kept in view; and if the persons to whom and by whom it was written, and if the time and the circumstances of its composition, be carefully borne in mind; and if the reader does not allow his mind to dwell exclusively or mainly on single expressions occurring here and there in the Epistle[1], but considers their relation to the context, and to the whole scope of the Epistle, and to the other Epistles of St. Paul, and to the general Teaching of Holy Writ, not as expounded by some few Expositors of comparatively recent date, but as interpreted by the consentient doctrine and concurrent practice of the Universal Church of Christ in her Creeds, Prayers, and Administration of Sacraments, and in other Symbols of Faith, and in the writings of her ancient and best Divines; and if this work be performed with fervent Prayer to the Holy Ghost, Who inspired the heart of the Apostle to unfold fully to the world the blessed truth which was proclaimed by Christ Himself, "God so loved the world, that He gave His Only-Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting Life[2]."

On the Doctrine of JUSTIFICATION, and on the Teaching of St. PAUL on this subject, compared with that of St. JAMES.

I. The following summary of Propositions (which will be more fully illustrated in the course of the Notes on this Epistle) may serve to prepare the way for the consideration of this subject, especially as treated by St. Paul to the Romans and to the Galatians:—

(1) Almighty God is infinitely holy, and hates sin.

(2) Man is by nature in a state of sin, and liable to God's wrath.

(3) The word "to justify," as applied in Holy Scripture to man in his fallen state, signifies to acquit, to absolve, to declare and pronounce him not guilty, by a judicial act[3]. And Justification signifies acquittal, a grant of pardon, a discharge from penalty, an acceptation of man as just[4], and entitled as such (as long as he remains in a justified state) to the everlasting salvation promised by God to the righteous.

(4) He Who thus justifies man, is GOD. "It is God that justifieth[5]."

(5) The first moving cause of man's Justification by God, is God's infinite Love, and free Grace, and Favour to man.

(6) The meritorious cause of Man's Justification by God, is the sacrifice offered by the Son of God, Who took man's nature, and became our Second Adam and Head, summing up all mankind in Himself; so that in Him we were created anew, and became in Him a new Man, and are made the sons of God by adoption[6]; and Who in our nature fulfilled perfectly the Law of God by a sinless Obedience, and at length died in that nature on the Cross for the sins of the whole world, in order to redeem it from the bondage of sin, and to reconcile God to man by the plenary propitiation, satisfaction, and expiation then made by the infinite value of the blood of Him Who is God and

[1] See below on xii. 6, and above on 1 Cor. ii. 13.

[2] John iii. 16.

[3] See Gal. ii. 16; iii. 8. 11. 24; v. 4. Rom. ii. 13; iii. 24. 26. 28. 30; iv. 2. 5; v. 1. 9; viii. 30. 33.

[4] The question whether the word "to justify" is used by St. Paul to describe an infusion of a quality of Righteousness, as well as the act of our acquittal, by reason of imputation to us of Christ's Righteousness, will be considered below in the notes on iii. 17–26. Cp. on i. 17.

[5] Rom. viii. 33.

[6] Eph. ii. 15. Gal. iv. 5. Eph. i. 5.

Man, and Who purchased Mankind to Himself by the price of that blood, and redeemed them by that ransom from everlasting death to everlasting life in Himself, and who incorporates and engrafts us as members in Himself, so that God sees us in Christ, and accepts us "in the Beloved [1]," Who is "the Lord our Righteousness [2]," and is made by God "Righteousness to us [3], so that we might become the Righteousness of God in Him [4]."

(7) The immediate and efficient cause of man's Justification is the operation of the Holy Ghost, who applies to man personally and individually, the benefits, which have been procured for all by the meritorious cause (the death of the Son of God), and are derived to us through Him from the Origin of all good, the Love of God the Father [5].

(8) Thus the Three Persons of the Ever-Blessed Trinity are seen co-operating in the work of man's Justification.

The first cause is God the Father and Creator of all; from Whom are all things.

The second cause is God the Son, the Redeemer; through Whom are all things

The third is God the Holy Ghost, the Sanctifier; by Whom are all things.

(9) The Holy Ghost applies the benefits of Christ's death by certain instrumental means, appointed by God for the conveyance of those benefits to man, and deriving their virtue from the meritorious efficacy of Christ's death, and administered by those whom God "hath set in the Church," and hath empowered by the Holy Spirit "for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ [6]."

The first of these instrumental means, on God's part, is the Sacrament of Holy Baptism, whereby the justifying efficacy of Christ's blood is applied to man, and man is regenerated, and made the child of God by adoption, and engrafted into the body of Christ [7].

This first application of that meritorious efficacy would suffice for man's deliverance from the penalty of sin, and for his everlasting salvation, if he did not subsequently fall into actual sin.

But "in many things we offend all [8]." Consequently, other means have been appointed by God, for the Restoration of the sinner to his justified state, by the application of the meritorious efficacy of Christ's death.

This work of Restoration is specially performed by the operation of the Holy Ghost through the Ministry of Reconciliation [9]; particularly by the administration of the Holy Sacrament of the Communion of the Body and Blood of Christ, wherein pardon is sealed and dispensed to the faithful and penitent receiver, and he is re-instated in the favour of God.

A man is born anew in Baptism, the Sacrament of Regeneration [10]. But the new life then given needs continual renovation and increase. We are justified once, but the Justification once given needs constant reparation.

There is this difference, however, between Regeneration and Justification; Regeneration is new Birth, and is never repeated. It takes place once, and once only. The same life which is given in the new birth, is afterwards quickened and increased in Renovation.

But Justification is the grant of pardon and a title to heaven; and this grant may be forfeited, this title may be cancelled, and a new grant and a new title may be necessary.

To speak strictly, the word "to justify" signifies (as was before said) to acquit, to declare just, and to accept and to treat as just. It does not properly mean to make just.

Justification on God's part is not, in the strict sense of the term, the infusion of righteousness and holiness into man. This work is properly the work of God in Regeneration and subsequent Renovation. It is the work, not so much of Justification as of Sanctification. God justifies, when He grants pardon; He sanctifies, when He gives grace.

Thus much may be premised concerning the work of Justification on the part of God the Agent.

(10) It is now requisite to consider Justification on the side of man the recipient.

St. Paul teaches that the essential requisite on man's side for the reception of Justification from God, is Faith.

Faith is that habit of mind, which does not build on any thing that is intrinsic and inherent in man's own self (such as works done by his own strength), but looks outward and upward for mercy

[1] Eph. i. 3—6.
[2] Jer. xxiii. 6; xxxiii. 16.
[3] 1 Cor. i. 30.
[4] 2 Cor. v. 21.
[5] See on 2 Cor. xiii. 13.
[6] Eph. iv. 11—13.
[7] See Acts ii. 38; ix. 6, and note on Rom. iii. 21—28; iv. 25, and Gal. iii. 26, 27. 1 Cor. vi. 11; xii. 13. Titus iii. 5—7.
[8] James iii. 2
[9] 2 Cor. v. 18, 19. John xx. 23.
[10] Titus iii. 5.

and strength and salvation, and lays its foundation upon the promises and acts of God, in Christ, God and man, dying for the sins of the world, and relies and rests on the meritorious efficacy of His blood.

St. Paul affirms that man is justified by God in respect of, and by means of, Faith[1] in Christ.

He does not represent our Faith as the principal cause of our Justification; for, God's mercy is the principal cause.

Nor does he represent our Faith as the meritorious cause of our Justification; for, this is to be sought in Christ's death.

Nor does he represent our Faith as the efficient cause of our Justification; for, this is to be found in the gracious operation of God the Holy Ghost.

Nor does he represent our Faith as the instrumental cause in God's hand for bestowing pardon on us. For, the ordinary instruments and means by which God works in justifying us are the Holy Sacraments and the ministry of the Word, by which He applies to sinners the meritorious efficacy of Christ's death.

But he represents Faith as the instrument on our side, by which we rely on God's word, and appeal to Him for mercy, and receive a grant of pardon, and a title to the Evangelical promises from God.

"It is God Who justifieth;" and He reads the heart. He knows whether or no we have Faith; and of what kind our Faith is. And He has taught us by St. Paul, that the wages of sin is death[2]; that "neither circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision: but Faith working by Love[3];" that we have been made free from sin, and have become servants of God, that we should have our fruit unto holiness and the end everlasting life[4]; that for this cause Christ died for all, in order that we, who live by His death, should not live unto ourselves, but unto Him that died for us[5] and rose again; and that they who have "believed in God must be careful to maintain good works[6];" and that we are created in Christ Jesus unto good works[7]; and that though we have all Faith, but have not Charity, we are nothing[8]; and that we shall be judged hereafter by our works, and be rewarded according to our works[9].

It is indeed the peculiar office and proper function of Faith, to rely on God, and to discern and receive God's free pardon bestowed on us in virtue of the death of Christ.

Faith is the eye by which we see, and the hand by which we stay ourselves on God's truth, and rest on His power and love, and lay hold on His grace.

But as, in order to see any object aright, the eye must be a living and healthful eye; and as, in order to receive, lay hold on, grasp, and retain what is offered to it and put into it, the hand must not be a dead, cold, and palsied limb, but be firmly strung with sinews, and warmed by a free circulation of blood; so the Faith which discerns, receives, and retains God's grace and pardon, is a clear-sighted, vigorous, energizing faith, having its spiritual eye opened and cleansed by the Holy Spirit, and its spiritual hand nerved by Hope and warmed by Love; so that it may work its proper works of piety, holiness, and charity, and may receive their proper reward at the Great Day of account.

II. We are hence led to the following question:—

How is the Doctrine of Justification, as stated by St. Paul in his Epistles to the Galatians and the Romans, to be regarded in relation to the Doctrine as afterwards[10] stated by St. James in his General Epistle?

(1) St. Paul says, λογιζόμεθα πίστει δικαιοῦσθαι ἄνθρωπον, χωρὶς ἔργων νόμου[11], i. e. we reckon that a man is justified by Faith, apart from the works of the Law.

St. Paul uses here the dative case πίστει: and his meaning is, that we are justified by faith as by an instrument; and that the only instrument, on our side, by which we receive pardon from God, is Faith.

(2) St. James says, ὁρᾶτε τοίνυν ὅτι ἐξ ἔργων δικαιοῦται ἄνθρωπος, καὶ οὐκ ἐκ πίστεως

[1] See notes on Rom. v. 1, and cp. Rom. i. 17; iii. 22—30; iv. 1—25; ix. 32. Gal. ii. 16—20; iii. 8—26; v. 5. Cp. Phil. iii. 9, 10. Acts xiii. 38, 39.
[2] Rom. vi. 23.
[3] Gal. v. 6.
[4] Rom. vi. 22.
[5] 2 Cor. v. 15.
[6] Titus iii. 8.
[7] Eph. ii. 10.
[8] 1 Cor. xiii. 2.
[9] Rom. ii. 6; and see 1 Cor. iii. 8. 2 Cor. v. 10. Eph. vi. 8. Col. iii. 25. Cp. Matt. xvi. 27; xxv. 31—46. Rev. ii. 23; xxii. 12.
[10] On the date of the Epistle of St. James, see below, the Introduction to it.
[11] Rom. iii. 28.

μόνον[1],—that is, "Ye see, therefore, that man's justification proceeds from works, and not from Faith only."

St. James uses the genitive case with the preposition ἐκ, prefixed to both ἔργων and πίστεως.

He does not say that we are justified by works (ἔργοις); and St. Paul says that we are justified by Faith (πίστει[2]).

But the Apostle St. James teaches that our Justification proceeds from, and comes out of, Faith (ἐκ πίστεως); but that it does not proceed or arise from it only (μόνον), but comes from works also.

His meaning may be illustrated thus;

We quench our thirst from out of (ἐκ) a river (ἐκ ποταμοῦ) which proceeds from out of (ἐκ) a well-spring beneath the earth. We gather food from off a tree which grows from a root beneath the ground. We could not quench our thirst from the river, unless the water flowed out of the subterranean spring; we could not gather food from the tree unless it grew from the subterranean root.

The subterranean spring and the subterranean root are the proper and primary means and instruments by which we receive natural refreshment and food from the bounty of the Creator, Almighty God.

But the spring and the root are not the only things from which we receive them. They are derived to us from the river that flows from the source, and from the tree that grows up from the root.

So Faith is the proper means by which we receive the spiritual refreshment and food of pardon and grace from God; but it is that Faith which does not hide itself beneath the earth, but flows forth in a healthful stream, and grows up in a fruitful tree, of a holy and religious life.

Some writers on this subject have said that good works are only Fruits of Justification.

This assertion is manifestly at variance with the teaching of St. James, who says that a man is justified ἐξ ἔργων καὶ οὐκ ἐκ πίστεως μόνον[3], from works, and not from faith only.

He represents Justification as proceeding from works; and not works as proceeding from Justification.

Other writers say, that Works are conditions of Justification.

But this assertion is not strictly accurate, if works are taken in their proper sense of outward, visible acts.

The truth may be expressed more clearly by the affirmation, that the only proper instrumental mean of Justification, on man's side, is such a Faith as is approved by God, Who sees the heart, and knows the future, and who can foresee all contingencies; that is, Who not only knows how every man will act, but how he would act under circumstances which might arise, and yet may not arise.

The instrumental means of Justification is such a Faith as either actually does good works, or is desirous to do them, by acting or suffering, when God gives the occasion, and which acts and suffers with an eye fixed on God, as the only giver of all pardon and grace, in virtue of the merits of Christ, and with a single view to God's glory, and with a deep sense of its own weakness and unworthiness, and with an absolute renunciation of all notions of merit in itself, and with an abiding persuasion that, though it can claim no reward on account of its works, yet it will be tested by its works, and rewarded hereafter according to its works.

III. With regard to the use of the word Faith by St. Paul, in the Epistles to the Galatians and Romans, as compared with its use by St. James, it is to be remembered that the two Apostles are writing with two totally different objects before them.

They had two different questions to solve, and they had two different classes of adversaries and errors to encounter and refute.

Judaism presented itself to them in two different aspects, in regard to this great question concerning man's Justification.

(1) There was the rigid Judaism which sought for Justification by the works of the Law.

(2) There was that other form of Judaism which boasted that it alone had clear knowledge (γνῶσις) of God; and that it had Faith in Him; and imagined that this would suffice for Justification without Good Works.

The first form of Judaism is that which is encountered by St. Paul in these two Epistles.

The second form of Judaism is that which is condemned by St. James.

St. Paul maintains the Evangelical grace and virtue of Faith in the merits of Christ, as opposed to all proud notions of righteousness grounded on legal works and human deserts.

[1] James ii. 24. [2] Rom. iii. 28. [3] James ii. 24.

St. James asserts the necessity of an operative Faith of the heart and life, in opposition to a mere speculative assent and barren persuasion of the mind.

St. Paul encounters the self-righteousness of the Jew, by pointing to the example of Abraham the Father of the faithful, whose seed the Jews boasted to be. St. Paul shows by the history of Abraham, as written by God Himself in the Ancient Scriptures delivered to the Jews, that their father Abraham, although eminent in obedience, was not justified by works meriting a reward from God as wages due to them, but was justified by God's free grace to which he looked by Faith. He believed in God's promise, and his faith was imputed to him for righteousness[1].

St. James, on the other hand, is refuting those who trusted to a mere speculative faith, as confidently as the others did to their legal obedience. And he shows that Abraham's faith was not a mere assent of the mind, or a mere nominal profession, but was a living, operative Faith; that "Faith wrought with his works, and that from (ἐκ) his works his faith was made perfect[2]."

Faith is the root of works, and unless works spring from that root they are counted as dead in God's sight. But Faith without works is also dead, being alone[3]. Indeed, in God's eye it is not really Faith, although it may assume the name of faith. It does not bring forth the proper fruit by which Faith is exercised, increased, proved, and known, and which God expects to find growing upon it.

Such a Faith, falsely so called, is like the barren Fig-tree, luxuriant only in leaves, to be withered by the breath of Christ[4].

St. James agrees with St. Paul, and supplies what it was not within the immediate scope of St. Paul's argument to express in the Epistles to the Romans and Galatians on the article of Justification.

St. Paul teaches that in order to be justified by God, we must not rely on any thing in ourselves as having any merit, but solely on God's free grace in Christ.

Similarly, St. James represents us as freed from the rigour of the Law of Works, and as living under the Covenant of Grace, which he calls the perfect Law of Liberty[5].

St. Paul represents Faith as the instrumental means on our part for receiving grace from God. But he teaches also throughout his Epistles the indispensable necessity of Charity and of good works.

St. James in like manner asks, "What profit is it, if a man say that he have Faith, if he have not works? can Faith save him[6]?" He contends against a nominal Faith; he condemns a hollow profession of Faith in words, on the part of those who bore no fruit of Faith in their deeds. He vindicates the character of genuine justifying Faith, by rebuking the pretensions of a specious hollow Hypocrisy, calling itself by the sacred name of Faith. He says that such a Faith as that, is dead[7], and that it is not better than the Faith which the Devils have, who believe in God and tremble[8]: that Abraham's Faith is exemplary to us because it was an operative Faith[9], a faith receiving perfection from its works (ἐκ τῶν ἔργων): and that as the human body apart from the spirit (χωρὶς πνεύματος) is dead, so likewise Faith separated from the works which are to be expected from it (χωρὶς τῶν ἔργων) is dead also[10]. He teaches that our Justification does not proceed from (ἐκ) Faith only, but from works also[11], which manifest the life and perfect the growth of Faith.

Thus the teaching of each of the two Apostles, St. Paul and St. James, mutually supports, illustrates, and completes that of the other[12].

The one, St. Paul, refutes all presumptuous notions of human merit, and establishes the great doctrine of God's free grace, and the plenary virtue and efficacy of Christ's sufferings.

The other, St. James, condemns the specious semblance of empty professions, and asserts the doctrine of human free-will and human responsibility; and declares that the Sufferings of Christ are not only meritorious, but exemplary; and that they do not offer any pretext or plea for man's sin, nor afford any cloak or shelter for those who wilfully break His laws.

The one, St. Paul, in these two Epistles, warns us against Pride; the other, St. James, denounces Hypocrisy. Both show the dignity of Faith rightly so called; the one by declaring that it looks up to Him Who alone can justify the sinner, and that it relies only on God's promises and attributes, and on the obedience and sufferings of Christ, and on the gracious workings of the Holy

[1] Rom. iv. 1—16.
[2] James ii. 22.
[3] ii. 17. 20.
[4] Matt. xxi. 19.
[5] James i. 25; ii. 12.
[6] ii. 14.
[7] ii. 17.
[8] ii. 19.
[9] ii. 21, 22.
[10] ii. 26.
[11] ii. 24.
[12] Compare Introduction below to the Epistle General of St. James. The true doctrine is well expressed by Hooker (I. xi. 6): "'This is the work of God, that ye believe in Him whom He hath sent' (John vi. 29); not that God doth require nothing unto happiness at the hands of men, save only a naked belief (for Hope and Charity we may not exclude), but that without belief all other things are as nothing; and it is the ground of those other divine virtues."

Ghost in the divinely appointed means of pardon and grace, and does not place any trust in any fancied deserts of its own.

The other declares the true character of genuine Faith, as distinguished from the specious counterfeits which too often call themselves by its name.

Thus the two holy Apostles join together in teaching, that the Faith by which we are justified is that living Faith, which fixes its eyes stedfastly on God's love, and moves habitually in harmony with His Will and Word.

IV. In the last place, it is carefully to be remembered, that St. Paul himself, having, in these two Epistles, to the Galatians and to the Romans, contended earnestly against that form of Judaism which sought to justify itself by the works of the Law, combats no less strenuously that other form of Judaism condemned by St. James, which imagined that it could approve itself to God by a vain and hollow γνῶσις, or knowledge, and by a mere speculative profession of Faith, barren of Good Works.

This he has done in his later Epistles, especially in his two Epistles to Timothy, and in his Epistle to Titus.

In those three Epistles St. Paul delivers to Timothy and Titus, the chief Pastors of the Churches of Ephesus and Crete, a solemn charge to stop the mouths of those who make a profession that they know God, but in works deny Him [1], and who have the form of godliness but deny its power [2]. Such a γνῶσις or science, is, he declares, falsely so named [3]. And he insists in the strongest terms [4], that all who profess Faith in God must be careful to maintain Good Works [5]; and thus he declares his entire accordance, when treating of the same subject, in the teaching of his brother Apostle St. James.

On the Date of the Epistle to the Romans.

This Epistle was probably written in the spring of A.D. 58, at Corinth, or in its neighbourhood.

This may be inferred from the following circumstances:—

1. St. Paul, when he wrote it, had never been at Rome, but had been desirous to visit it for many years, ἀπὸ πολλῶν ἐτῶν [6].

2. He had no longer any occasion to remain where he was [7], but was now setting out on a journey to Jerusalem with a collection gathered from Macedonia and Achaia for the poor Saints at Jerusalem [8].

3. From Acts xxiv. 17, compared with 1 Cor. xvi. 1—4, 2 Cor. viii. 1—4, it appears that he carried such a collection from Achaia and Macedonia to Jerusalem, on his visit to Jerusalem after his second visit to Achaia.

4. He mentions in the Epistle, Timotheus, Gaius, and Sosipater (Sopater), as with him [9]. And these persons are described, in the Acts of the Apostles, as being with him on his second visit to Achaia [10].

5. He commends to them Phœbe, a deaconess of Cenchreæ, which was the eastern harbour of Corinth.

Hence we may infer, that the Epistle to the Romans was written in Achaia (as was supposed by Origen, Theodoret, and others of the ancients), at Corinth its capital, or at its port Cenchreæ [11], at the close of St. Paul's second visit to Southern Greece, viz. in the spring of A.D. 58.

[1] Tit. i. 16.
[2] 2 Tim. iii. 5.
[3] 1 Tim. vi. 20.
[4] Tit. iii. 8.
[5] It is observable that the term "good works" occurs no less than fourteen times in these three short Epistles of St. Paul. See 1 Tim. ii. 10; iii. 1; v. 10 (twice). 25; vi. 18. 2 Tim. ii. 21; iii. 17. Tit. i. 16; ii. 7. 14; iii. 1. 8. 14; and see below, the Introduction to those Epistles.
[6] Rom. xv. 23.
[7] Ib.
[8] xv. 26.
[9] xvi. 21. 23.
[10] Acts xx. 2—4.
[11] See on Acts xx. 2, and Rom. xvi. 1.

ΠΡΟΣ ΡΩΜΑΙΟΥΣ.

I. [1] [a] ΠΑΥΛΟΣ, δοῦλος Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, κλητὸς ἀπόστολος, ἀφωρισμένος εἰς εὐαγγέλιον Θεοῦ, [2] [b] ὃ προεπηγγείλατο διὰ τῶν προφητῶν αὐτοῦ ἐν γραφαῖς ἁγίαις, [3] [c] περὶ τοῦ Υἱοῦ αὐτοῦ, τοῦ γενομένου ἐκ σπέρματος Δαυὶδ κατὰ σάρκα, [4] [d] τοῦ ὁρισθέντος Υἱοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν δυνάμει κατὰ πνεῦμα ἁγιωσύνης ἐξ ἀναστάσεως νεκρῶν, Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν, [5] [e] δι' οὗ ἐλάβομεν χάριν καὶ ἀποσa Acts 9. 22. & 13. 2, 9. Gal. 1. 15.

b Acts 3. 18. Tit. 1. 2. Gen. 3. 15. & 22. 18. & 26. 4 & 49. 10. Deut. 18. 15. 2 Sam. 7. 12. Ps. 132. 11.

Isa. 4. 2. & 7. 14. & 9. 6. Jer. 23. 5. & 33. 14. Ezek. 34. 23. & 37. 24. Dan. 9. 24. Micah 7. 20.
Matt. 1. 1, &c. Luke 1. 32. & 3. 23, 31. Acts 2. 30. & 13. 23. 2 Tim. 2. 8. c ch. 9. 1—22. John 1. 14. Ps. 132. 11. d John 10. 30, &c. Acts 13. 32, 33. Heb. 1. 5. & 5. 5, 6.
e Rom. 12. 3. & 15. 15, 16. 1 Cor. 15. 9, 10. Eph. 3. 8.

TITLE. Πρὸς Ῥωμαίους] So A, B, C.

CH. I. 1. Παῦλος] On the name Paul, see on Acts xiii. 9, and cp. Origen here.

— δοῦλος Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ] a bondsman of Jesus Christ. So St. James, i. 1, and St. Peter, 2 Pet. i. 1, St. Jude 1, and St. John, Rev. i. 1, who says also, τοῖς ἑαυτοῦ δούλους τοὺς προφήτας. Other men in the beginning of their Epistles, especially those which they addressed to the Roman people, recited their own titles as Rulers, Kings, or Conquerors; but the Apostles claim to be heard as δούλους, bondsmen,—bondsmen of Jesus Christ.

— κλητός] Not self-called (αὐτό-κλητος), but called to be an Apostle by Christ and the Holy Ghost. See 1 Cor. i. 1.

— ἀφωρισμένος] set apart and dedicated, ἐκλελεγμένος, διακεκριμένος (Hesych.), not only by an ἀφορισμὸς from my mother's womb (Gal. i. 15), but specially by the ἀφορισμὸς of the Church at Antioch, at the express mandate of the Holy Ghost, to ordain me to the Apostleship. See on Acts xiii. 2 (the best comment upon this text), where the Holy Ghost says, Ἀφορίσατε (the word here used by St. Paul) δή μοι Σαῦλον εἰς τὸ ἔργον ὃ προσκέκλημαι αὐτὸν, so that he was both κλητὸς and also ἀφωρισμένος: he was not only called by God, but was also visibly set apart for the Apostolic office by an outward mission and ordination, at His command.

2. ὃ προεπηγγείλατο κ.τ.λ.] which (Gospel) God promised afore by his Prophets in the Holy Scriptures (of the Old Testament) concerning His Son who was born of the seed of David.

St. Paul thus anticipates and obviates a Jewish objection, that the Gospel preached by himself, the Apostle of the Gentiles, and proclaiming salvation to all Nations (v. 5) on equal terms, in Christ, was at variance with the Law of Moses; and he affirms that the Gospel is the fulfilment of the promises of God made in the Holy Scriptures by the Prophets of the Old Dispensation; and, particularly, of the divine promise to David the King and Prophet of the Jewish Nation.

He begins and ends his Epistle with this declaration, which contains the substance of the argument of the whole. See below, xvi. 25—27.

3. ἐκ σπέρματος Δαυὶδ κατὰ σάρκα] from the seed of David according to the flesh (Acts ii. 30. 2 Tim. ii. 8).

Hence it may be inferred that Mary, as well as Joseph, was of the house and lineage of David. See on Luke iii. 23.

4. τοῦ ὁρισθέντος Υἱοῦ Θεοῦ] Who was defined (as distinguished from all others) by a divine decree, and proclaimed to be the Son of God. Chrys., Theophyl.

The best exposition of this text is Psalm ii. 7, where Christ says, after His Crucifixion, and at his Resurrection, "I will declare the decree (חק, chok) whereby THE LORD said unto me, Thou art My Son, this day have I begotten Thee. Sit Thou at My Right Hand until I make Thy foes Thy footstool."

— κατὰ πνεῦμα ἁγιωσύνης] according to the Spirit of Holiness which was in Him, by which He was anointed (Luke iv. 18. John x. 36. Acts iv. 27; x. 38. Heb. i. 9), and by which He was declared to be the Messiah, the Son of God, and by which Spirit He worked (Matt. xii. 28. Acts ii. 22), and overcame the spirits of darkness; and by which He offered Himself (Heb. ix. 14), and which Spirit of Holiness being in Him, rendered it impossible that he, the Holy One of God, should be holden by the bonds of Death and the Grave, and see corruption. Cp. Acts ii. 24—27.

Therefore, as the first Birth of Jesus, namely, that from the womb of His Virgin Mother, was by the operation of the Holy Ghost (Luke i. 35), so likewise His second Birth, that from the Tomb, by which He was the first-born of the dead (Col. i. 18. Rev. i. 5), was due to the energy of the same Divine Person, the Holy Ghost. Cp. below, viii. 11, and see Chrys., Theodoret, and next note.

— ἐξ ἀναστάσεως νεκρῶν] from the Resurrection of the dead. Observe, he does not say only from "the Resurrection of Christ," but from the Resurrection of the Dead generally. Christ was conceived by the Holy Ghost. The Spirit of Holiness in Him rendered it impossible for Him to see corruption (Acts ii. 27; xiii. 35). According to the working of that Spirit He was raised from the dead (below, viii. 11), and was declared to be the Son of God with power, displayed in that glorious Victory. And not only so, but by virtue of His Incarnation, and by reason of the mystical union of all His Members with Him,—His Resurrection was their Resurrection; they all rise from the dead and are made alive in Him (see 1 Cor. xv. 22), by means of the Spirit which dwelleth in them (viii. 11), and which they have by their union with Him. And thus He was declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the working of the Spirit of Holiness, from the Resurrection of the Dead. His glorious title of Sonship in power arises and springs forth from that blessed consummation, the Resurrection of the Dead.

5. ἐλάβομεν χάριν καὶ ἀποστολήν] we received (at our ordination) Grace and Apostleship. "Gratiam ad laborum patientiam, Apostolatum ad prædicationis auctoritatem." Origen.

I, no less than the other Apostles, received grace and Apostolic commission and authority (Chrys.) from God through Christ (cp. xii. 3; xv. 15. 1 Cor. iii. 10. Eph. iii. 7, 8), with a view to the ὑπακοὴ πίστεως, obedience of faith; that is, in order that I might bring all Nations to that faith which manifests itself in hearkening to the Word, and in obedience to the Will, of God. See Rom. xv. 18; xvi. 26. 2 Cor. x. 5. Gal. v. 6. 1 Pet. i. 14. 22.

f ch. 9. 24. 1 Cor. 1. 2.
g Acts 9. 13. 1 Cor. 1. 2.

τολὴν εἰς ὑπακοὴν πίστεως ἐν πᾶσι τοῖς ἔθνεσιν ὑπὲρ τοῦ ὀνόματος αὐτοῦ, 6 [f] ἐν οἷς ἐστε καὶ ὑμεῖς κλητοὶ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, 7 [g] πᾶσι τοῖς οὖσιν ἐν Ῥώμῃ ἀγαπητοῖς Θεοῦ κλητοῖς ἁγίοις, χάρις ὑμῖν καὶ εἰρήνη ἀπὸ Θεοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῶν καὶ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.

h Eph. 5. 20. Heb. 13. 15. 1 Pet. 2. 5. 1 Thess. 1. 8.
i Rom. 9. 1. 2 Cor. 1. 23. & 11. 31. Gal. 1. 20. Phil. 1. 8. 2 Tim. 1. 3. k ch. 15. 23, 32. 1 Thess. 3. 10. 1 ch. 15. 29.

8 [h] Πρῶτον μὲν εὐχαριστῶ τῷ Θεῷ μου διὰ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ περὶ πάντων ὑμῶν, ὅτι ἡ πίστις ὑμῶν καταγγέλλεται ἐν ὅλῳ τῷ κόσμῳ· 9 [i] μάρτυς γάρ μου ἐστὶν ὁ Θεὸς, ᾧ λατρεύω ἐν τῷ πνεύματί μου ἐν τῷ εὐαγγελίῳ τοῦ Υἱοῦ αὐτοῦ, ὡς ἀδιαλείπτως μνείαν ὑμῶν ποιοῦμαι, 10 [k] πάντοτε ἐπὶ τῶν προσευχῶν μου δεόμενος, εἴπως ἤδη ποτὲ εὐοδωθήσομαι ἐν τῷ θελήματι τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐλθεῖν πρὸς ὑμᾶς· 11 [l] ἐπιποθῶ γὰρ ἰδεῖν ὑμᾶς, ἵνα τι μεταδῶ χάρισμα ὑμῖν πνευματικὸν εἰς τὸ στηριχθῆναι ὑμᾶς, 12 [m] τοῦτο δέ ἐστι συμπαρακληθῆναι ἐν ὑμῖν διὰ τῆς ἐν ἀλλήλοις πίστεως, ὑμῶν τε καὶ ἐμοῦ.

m ch. 15. 32.

n ch. 15. 23. 1 Thess. 2. 18.

13 [n] Οὐ θέλω δὲ ὑμᾶς ἀγνοεῖν, ἀδελφοὶ, ὅτι πολλάκις προεθέμην ἐλθεῖν πρὸς ὑμᾶς, καὶ ἐκωλύθην ἄχρι τοῦ δεῦρο, ἵνα τινὰ καρπὸν σχῶ καὶ ἐν ὑμῖν, καθὼς καὶ ἐν τοῖς λοιποῖς ἔθνεσιν. 14 [o] Ἕλλησί τε καὶ βαρβάροις, σοφοῖς τε καὶ ἀνοήτοις, ὀφειλέτης εἰμί· 15 οὕτω τὸ κατ' ἐμὲ πρόθυμον καὶ ὑμῖν τοῖς ἐν Ῥώμῃ εὐαγγελίσασθαι.

o 1 Cor. 9. 16. Acts 28. 2.

— ὑπέρ] in behalf of His Name, or for His Name's sake, as 2 Cor. v. 20, ὑπὲρ Χριστοῦ πρεσβεύομεν.

6, 7. κλητοὶ—κλητοῖς] called. He gives emphasis to this word, by repeating it. As your father Abraham was called by God, so you in obeying the Gospel are the called of God. He thus declares that in embracing Christianity the Jews are God's people, and that all who are members of the Visible Church (ἐκκλησία) are the called of God. See below, viii. 30.

— ἁγίοις] holy: properly, separated by dedication to God. Another comfortable assurance to the Jews. They had been distinguished by God as "a holy nation" (Lev. xx. 8. Ezek. xx. 12). St. Paul assures them that they did not lose that title by accepting Christianity, but enjoyed its privilege in a higher sense than before. He regards all the faithful whom he addresses, as called and holy, not in themselves, but by virtue of their holy calling (2 Tim. i. 9. Heb. iii. 1), and by the grace and holiness of Him who has called them, and has so obliged them to holiness of life. "Be ye holy; for I am holy" (1 Pet. i. 16).

He applies this title without distinction to them all, intimating thereby that God offers grace sufficient for them all, and that all may be meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the Saints in light. See above on 1 Cor. i. 2. 1 Tim. ii. 4.

Men are not called by God because they are already holy; but they are made holy because they are called. Augustine.

— χάρις καὶ εἰρήνη] Grace and Peace. See on 1 Thess. i. 1.

An ancient Father uses this salutation as an argument against the Pelagian Heresy. "Cunctæ prope Epistolæ Apostoli hoc habent principium Gratia Vobis et Pax; et simili fine clauduntur" (see above on 1 Thess. v. 28); and he observes that St. Paul, who was more eminent in labours than the rest, is a signal example of humility, ascribing all his powers to divine Grace. "Vas Electionis humilitate dejectus, imo Conscientiâ fragilitatis suæ, loquitur Ego minimus Apostolorum," &c. Jerome adv. Pelagianos Dial. ii. p. 515.

8. Πρῶτον μὲν εὐχαριστῶ] First of all I render thanks. As usual, the Apostle begins with a sentiment by which he expresses his gratitude to God, and conciliates the good will of those to whom he writes. Cp. 1 Thess. i. 2. 2 Thess. i. 3. 1 Cor. i. 4.

— περὶ] So A, B, C, D*, K, and others, and Griesbach, Lachm., Tisch., Meyer, Alford. Elz. ὑπέρ.

10. εἴπως—εὐοδωθήσομαι] if haply I shall be prospered on my way, so as to come to you.

The verb εὐοδοῦν τινα signifies to lead prosperously on a journey. See Gen. xxiv. 27. 48.

Hence in Greece and Asia, at this day, the parting wish to travellers is καλὸν κατευόδιον, buon viaggio.

St. Paul compares his ministry to a journey; and his desire is, that it may be so prospered as to bring him to Rome.

— ἤδη ποτέ] now at length. His prayers in this respect were granted about three years after this was written, A.D. 61.

11. ἐπιποθῶ] I long earnestly. See xv. 23. 32, and 2 Cor. v. 2; ix. 14. Phil. i. 8; ii. 26.

— εἰς τὸ—ἐμοῦ] to the end that ye may be established in the faith; that is (for, think not that I am so presumptuous as to imagine that the benefit will be wholly yours), that I also may be comforted with you, each by the faith that is in the other, both you and me. The faith of the Teacher grows with that of his hearers, and so all edify one another in love.

13. ἐκωλύθην] I was hindered. See above on 1 Thess. ii. 18. Cp. below, xv. 22.

— τινὰ καρπόν] So the best MSS. Elz. καρπόν τινα. Cp. τὶ χάρισμα, v. 11.

14. Ἕλλησί τε καὶ βαρβάροις] To Greeks and Barbarians, i. e. to all the world. St. Paul was now at Corinth, among the Greeks, and he speaks according to their ideas, in which all who did not speak Greek were βάρβαροι.

"Huic nomen Græcè est Onagos fabulæ. Demophilus scripsit; Marcus vortit barbarè, i. e. Latinè." Plautus, Asinar. Prolog. 10. Cp. Horat. 1 Ep. ii. 7, "Græcia Barbariæ lento collisa duello." Juvenal, Sat. vi. 156, and note above on Acts xxviii. 4. Cicero indeed says (de Fin. ii. 15), "non solum Græcia et Italia sed etiam omnis Barbaria." The word does not necessarily convey any notion of inferiority, but only of distinction of language and race.

— ὀφειλέτης εἰμί] I am a debtor. I only pay a debt when I preach to all the world. Cp. 1 Cor. ix. 16; xi. 23. 2 Cor. v. 14. Bp. Sanderson, iv. p. 80.

Another proof of the gift of "divers languages" for preaching the Gospel. How could St. Paul be said to owe the debt of the Gospel to all the world, if he had not the means of paying it? And how could he pay it without the coinage of intelligible words? See on Acts ii. 4; xiv. 11; xxviii. 2, and Theodoret here.

St. Paul spake with tongues more than all (1 Cor. xiv. 18), and this χάρισμα laid him under an obligation to preach to all.

Hence an ancient Father well says, "Arbitror Paulum diversis gentibus effectum esse debitorem, quòd omnium gentium linguis eloqui suscepit, per gratiam Spiritus Sancti" (1 Cor. xiv. 18). So Origen; who thus refutes some recent allegations, that there is no evidence of a belief in the second and third centuries that the Apostles possessed and exercised the power of speaking foreign languages, for preaching the Gospel. See above on Acts ii. 3—8.

If the Apostles were debtors, not only to the Jews, but to the Grecians and Barbarians too, then they must have had the tongues not only of the Jews, but of the Grecians and Barbarians to pay this debt, to discharge the duty, "Ite prædicate," "Go ye and preach" to all. And this was a special favour from God, for the Propagation of His Gospel far and wide, this division (or distribution) of Tongues (to the Apostles at Pentecost and Sion), which was a reversing of the curse of Babel. Bp. Andrewes (on the sending of the Holy Ghost, iii. 123).

See above, notes on Acts ii. 4; xiv. 11; xxviii. 2. 1 Cor. xii. 10. 28. 30; xiv. 2. 5, 6. 19.

15. οὕτω τὸ κατ' ἐμὲ πρόθυμον] so there is the readiness of mind on my part (κατ' ἐμέ); whatever, on the side of God, may be ordered by His Will (κατὰ Θεὸν), to which my will is subject, and will be conformed.

16 [p] Οὐ γὰρ ἐπαισχύνομαι τὸ εὐαγγέλιον· δύναμις γὰρ Θεοῦ ἐστιν εἰς σωτηρίαν παντὶ τῷ πιστεύοντι, Ἰουδαίῳ τε πρῶτον καὶ Ἕλληνι.

17 Δικαιοσύνη γὰρ Θεοῦ ἐν αὐτῷ ἀποκαλύπτεται ἐκ πίστεως εἰς πίστιν, καθὼς γέγραπται, [q] Ὁ δὲ δίκαιος ἐκ πίστεως ζήσεται.

18 [r] Ἀποκαλύπτεται γὰρ ὀργὴ Θεοῦ ἀπ' οὐρανοῦ ἐπὶ πᾶσαν ἀσέβειαν καὶ p Ps. 40. 10. 2 Tim. 1. 8. 1 Cor. 1. 18. & 15. 2. q Hab. 2. 4. John 3. 36. ch. 3. 21. Gal. 3. 11. Phil. 3. 9. Heb. 10. 38.

r Eph. 5. 6.

On this use of κατὰ, see vii. 22; viii. 1. 1 Cor. iii. 3; xv. 32. Eph. i. 15.

τὸ πρόθυμον is nearly equivalent to ἡ προθυμία, as ii. 4, τὸ χρηστὸν for ἡ χρηστότης. Cp. below, viii. 3; ix. 22. So 1 Cor. i. 25, τὸ μωρὸν, τὸ ἀσθενές. Phil. iv. 5, τὸ ἐπιεικές. Cp. Philippi, p. 28.

St. Paul here, as often, omits the verb. See ii. 8. 2 Cor. ix. 6. Gal. v. 13, especially the verb substantive ἐστὶ, 2 Cor. xi. 22. Eph. iii. 1. 2 Tim. iii. 16. Cp. Meyer, who however does not combine τὸ with πρόθυμον, but with κατ' ἐμέ. But the article τὸ seems to be best so joined, and so Reiche, Glöckler, Philippi, Fritzsche, and others. See Meyer, p. 44, and Winer, Gr. § 34, p. 210.

— καὶ ὑμῖν] even to you, who dwell in a City renowned for its intelligence, literature, and learning. Fritzsche.

16. Οὐ γὰρ ἐπαισχύνομαι] For I am not ashamed of the Gospel. An answer by anticipation to a supposed objection, as usual with the Apostle, "Paulus solet, quidquid alius objicere potest, antequàm objiciatur, edisserere." Jerome (ad Hedib. qu. 11); see above, p. 189. The objection had been suggested by the word Rome—the imperial Metropolis of Heathenism—where Christianity was despised (Acts xxviii. 22), and where a fierce Persecution would ere long rage against it. Cp. Apollinar. in Catenâ here.

I am not ashamed to preach "Christ crucified" (1 Cor. i. 23) even in the most powerful and learned Cities of the Heathen world.

— τὸ εὐαγγέλιον] Elz. adds τοῦ Χριστοῦ, with some MSS., but not found in A, B, C, D*, E, G, and the earliest Fathers.

— Ἰουδαίῳ τε πρῶτον] both to the Jew first. First, in having a prior claim, as the covenanted people of God: first, therefore, in the season of its offer (cp. Matt. xv. 24. Rom. iii. 2; ix. 5), but not in the condition of the recipients after its acceptance.

For, he adds, the Gospel is the power of God unto salvation unto every man believing, τῷ πιστεύοντι, that is, on his acceptance of its terms by Faith, which is the hand by which the soul takes hold of Christ's Righteousness.

By the word πιστεύοντι, believing, the Apostle prepares the way for the declaration of the functions of Faith in the next following verses.

17. Δικαιοσύνη γὰρ Θεοῦ ἐν αὐτῷ ἀποκαλύπτεται] For the Righteousness of God is therein revealed from faith unto faith.

This significant phrase, "the Righteousness of God," is not to be lowered, weakened, and impaired, so as to mean only the method of Justification by which God acquits and justifies mankind (Fritz. p. 47, De Wette, and others). But it is the very Righteousness of God Himself, which is both imputed and imparted to men in Jesus Christ, "the Righteous" (1 John ii. 1), Who is "the Lord our Righteousness" (Jer. xxiii. 6; xxxiii. 16); and who, being God from everlasting, and having also taken the nature of Man, and having made us members of Himself in Baptism, is made Righteousness to us (1 Cor. i. 30), and does effectually, by His Incarnation, and by our Incorporation into Him, justify us believing on Him, and making Him ours by Faith, so that we may not only be acquitted by God, but may become the righteousness of God in Him (2 Cor. v. 21).

This Righteousness is called the Righteousness of God, because it is not of man (see iii. 22; x. 2), but of God only, and is revealed in Christ, in order to take away man's unrighteousness, and to declare us righteous in Christ, which is the work of Justification: and also to make us righteous in Him, which is the work of Sanctification.

See above, Introduction to this Epistle, pp. 201—4, and below on iii. 24—26.

This Righteousness of God, which was kept secret in former ages, is now revealed to the World for the first time in the Gospel, and is made available to man by Faith unto Faith, that is, by Faith growing continually, and rising from one degree to another, going on from strength to strength (Ps. lxxxiv. 7), and receiving grace for grace (John i. 16), till it is transformed from glory to glory (2 Cor. iii. 18).

The opposite to this is described by a similar phrase below, vi. 19, τῇ ἀνομίᾳ εἰς τὴν ἀνομίαν, one degree of wickedness unto another. Cp. Jer. ix. 3, in the Hebrew, and 2 Cor. ii. 16.

By this expression, ἐκ πίστεως εἰς πίστιν, from or out of Faith (as a root), unto Faith (as the tree), St. Paul enters on his great argument concerning Faith, as the proper organ, on man's side, of Justification—that is, the organ by which man trusts in God (and not in himself), and lays hold of the Righteousness of Christ slain for the sins of the whole world, and delivering His own members from a state of guilt, and raising them to one of favour with God.

By the words ἐκ πίστεως, he declares that Faith is the root of the Christian life, and by adding εἰς πίστιν, he guards against the supposition that the Christian life consists only in the root, and shows that it is continually growing with fresh increments from the small seed (Matt. xvii. 20) to greater altitude and vigour, putting forth new leaves and branches, and bringing forth new fruit in due season; but still it is ἐκ πίστεως εἰς πίστιν. The vital principle is one—Faith, the "prora et puppis" of the Christian life. Cp. Theophyl., Bengel. See also St. Paul's account of his own spiritual growth and life, Phil. iii. 9—14.

This is well expressed by the great African Father and Bishop: "We were called, when we were made Christians. Men are baptized; all their sins are forgiven them; they are justified from sin. We cannot deny this. Yet there still remains a warfare against the Flesh, the World, and the Devil. We have been justified. But our righteousness grows, as we advance. Therefore, let every one of you who has already been placed in a justified state (when he received remission of sins 'by the washing of Regeneration,' and when he received the Holy Ghost) advance day by day; and let him look to himself whether he is making progress: let him grow and ripen, till he is perfected. Man begins with Faith; and if you have in you that faith which worketh by love (Gal. v. 6), you already belong to the number of the predestinate, called, and justified. (Rom. viii. 29, 30.) Therefore let Faith grow in you. We live by Faith as long as we are on the road, as long as we are in the journey of our mortal pilgrimage, as long as we are in the body; but when we come to our journey's end, then we shall see Him as He is." Augustine (Serm. 158).

— Ὁ δὲ δίκαιος ἐκ πίστεως ζήσεται] But the just shall live by faith. (Habak. ii. 4.) This was said by the Prophet Habakkuk to encourage the Jews when fainting under the oppression of the Chaldeans. Have faith in God. He will send you a deliverer. Cyrus, a type of Christ, was raised up, as God had promised (Isa. xliv. 28); he conquered and destroyed the Chaldean king in his revelry, and restored the Jews to Jerusalem, and enabled them to rebuild the Temple, an emblem of the Church in glory.

The Apostle applies this prophecy of Habakkuk to the Christian Church, and to his own argument concerning the blessings of eternal life, consequent on Faith in Christ. This application was specially appropriate, in reference to his Jewish fellow-Christians, who were thus taught that the temporal promises to their fathers in the Old Dispensation had a spiritual fulfilment to themselves in the New.

Concerning this prophecy and its relation to the Doctrine of Justification by Faith, see above on Gal. iii. 11; v. 11.

The conjunction δὲ, but, contains a warning, that, while the just shall live by faith, the unjust, who does not believe, shall perish, and so it is introductory to what follows.

18. Ἀποκαλύπτεται γὰρ ὀργὴ Θεοῦ] For the Wrath of God (as well as the Righteousness of God, v. 17) is being revealed in the Gospel. The Apostle had prepared the way for this declaration by saying, "but the just shall live by Faith;" implying that the unbelieving and unjust should not live.

He had stated, that by a gracious method of Universal Justification, Eternal Life is now being revealed in the Gospel both to Jew and Gentile.

He now takes occasion to guard against abuses of that doctrine, by stating that a righteous process of Universal Judgment is also revealed in the same Gospel.

He shows the reasonableness of this, from the fact, that every one who lives is a responsible agent, as being subject to some Law, either that of

(1) Natural Reason, or

(2) Written Revelation,

Or to both, and therefore all, without exception, must render an account of themselves to God, Who will judge them all at the Great Day. He thus also answers an allegation, grounded by some on the fact, that God passed by the sins of the Heathen without intervening to punish them in this world. See below, s Acts 17. 24, &c. ἀδικίαν ἀνθρώπων τῶν τὴν ἀλήθειαν ἐν ἀδικίᾳ κατεχόντων, 19 [s] διότι τὸ γνωστὸν t Ps. 19. 2, &c. Acts 14. 17. τοῦ Θεοῦ φανερόν ἐστιν ἐν αὐτοῖς, ὁ Θεὸς γὰρ αὐτοῖς ἐφανέρωσε· 20 [t] τὰ γὰρ ἀόρατα αὐτοῦ ἀπὸ κτίσεως κόσμου τοῖς ποιήμασι νοούμενα καθορᾶται, ἥ τε u Eph. 4. 7. ἀΐδιος αὐτοῦ δύναμις καὶ θειότης, εἰς τὸ εἶναι αὐτοὺς ἀναπολογήτους, 21 [u] διότι γνόντες τὸν Θεὸν οὐχ ὡς Θεὸν ἐδόξασαν, ἢ εὐχαρίστησαν, ἀλλ' ἐματαιώθησαν ἐν τοῖς διαλογισμοῖς αὐτῶν, καὶ ἐσκοτίσθη ἡ ἀσύνετος αὐτῶν καρδία· 22 φάσκον-v Deut. 4. 15, &c. Ps. 106. 20. Wisd. 12. 23, &c. Isa. 40. 17, 18. Acts 17. 29. τες εἶναι σοφοὶ ἐμωράνθησαν, 23 [v] καὶ ἤλλαξαν τὴν δόξαν τοῦ ἀφθάρτου Θεοῦ ἐν ὁμοιώματι εἰκόνος φθαρτοῦ ἀνθρώπου, καὶ πετεινῶν, καὶ τετραπόδων, καὶ ἑρπετῶν.

x Ps. 81. 12. Acts 14. 16. 24 [x] Διὸ καὶ παρέδωκεν αὐτοὺς ὁ Θεὸς ἐν ταῖς ἐπιθυμίαις τῶν καρδιῶν αὐτῶν εἰς ἀκαθαρσίαν, τοῦ ἀτιμάζεσθαι τὰ σώματα αὐτῶν ἐν ἑαυτοῖς, 25 οἵτινες μετήλλαξαν τὴν ἀλήθειαν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν τῷ ψεύδει, καὶ ἐσεβάσθησαν καὶ ἐλάτρευσαν τῇ κτίσει παρὰ τὸν κτίσαντα, ὅς ἐστιν εὐλογητὸς εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας, ἀμήν.

---

iii. 25. 29. All men are under some Law. Sin is the breach of Law. God is always angry with sin; but His anger against it is now displayed more clearly in the Gospel.

Since also the Wrath of God is revealed in the Gospel, all have now a clear warning of God's purpose to judge the World. Cp. Acts xvii. 30, 31.

— τῶν τὴν ἀλήθειαν ἐν ἀδικίᾳ κατεχόντων] holding, keeping down, the Truth in ungodliness, as in a prison-house. Men have incarcerated the Truth, and hold her a captive under restraint and durance, with the bars and bolts of a depraved will and vicious habits, so that she cannot go forth and breathe the air, and see the light, and do works suitable to her own nature. See Chrys., Aug. (Serm. 141), Theophyl., Œcumen.

19. διότι τὸ γνωστὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ] Quia quod notum est Dei. (Vulg.) Because that which is known of (concerning) God, is manifest in them: that is, is clearly displayed among men, as men, generally. That which we know of God's justice is not nidden from any, but is made manifest to all men by His works.

S. Basil therefore (Hexaëmeron 1) called the Natural World θεογνωσίας παιδευτήριον, a School of the knowledge of God. Almighty God has two Books, in which men may read His attributes,—the Book of Nature and the Book of Scripture; and He has two Temples, in which He is to be worshipped,—the World and the Church.

— ὁ Θεὸς γάρ] So the best MSS.—Elz. ὁ γὰρ Θεός. For God Himself made it manifest to them by creation.

20—23.] These verses are quoted by S. Hippolytus, the scholar of S. Irenæus, in his recently recovered Philosophumena, pp. 99, 100.

20. τὰ γὰρ ἀόρατα] for the unseen things of Him are seen from the creation of the world, being understood by, and in, His works.

The words from the creation of the world may signify either

(1) From the time of the Creation; that is, from the beginning of the world,—compare Matt. xiii. 35. Mark x. 6. 2 Pet. iii. 4,—or

(2) From the structure and fabric of the world. Theodoret; and so Luther and others. See Meyer, p. 54.

The former appears to be the better sense; the latter being contained in what follows.

The meaning is, that God never left Himself without a witness (Acts xiv. 17); and that, long before the Mosaic Law was given, and ever since the Creation, men have had clear evidence of God in His works.

This truth was confessed by the Heathens. See Cicero (de Nat. Deor. ii. 6. 26, and Tuscul. Quæst. i. 29): "Deum non vides, tamen Deum agnoscis ex operibus ejus." Aristot. (de Mundo, vi.): πάσῃ θνητῇ φύσει γενόμενος ἀθεώρητος ἀπ' αὐτῶν τῶν ἔργων θεωρεῖται ὁ Θεός.

On this argument (viz. the proof of the Attributes of God from the Works of Creation), compare Wisdom of Solomon, cap. xiii.; Clemens Romanus, i. 20; Athanasius, ad Gentes, § 35, p. 27; and Barrow's Sermon "on the Being of God proved from the Frame of the World," iv. 141, where (p. 161) he thus expounds this text: "The invisible things of God, by the make and constitution of the world, are clearly seen . . . . so that they are inexcusable who from hence do not know God, or knowing Him, do not render Him due glory and service."

— ἀΐδιος αὐτοῦ δύναμις] The eternity of God is proved from the corruptible nature of the visible world. Cyril.

— θειότης] divinity. The word θειότης expresses the attributes of the Θεότης; the divine features of the Deity; the God-like working of the Godhead. Cp. Col. ii. 9.

The words εἰς τὸ εἶναι αὐτοὺς ἀναπολογήτους are also capable of two meanings; they may either signify—

(1) so that they are without excuse. Cp. this use of εἰς τὸ below, vii. 5; or

(2) to the intent that they may be without excuse. See Meyer, and A. V. R. (Authorized Version Revised), p. ix.

The former—which is the translation of the ancient Expositors, and Reiche, De Wette (p. 20), Philippi (p. 37), and others—seems to be the preferable rendering. For it can hardly be thought, that the conviction, confusion, and condemnation of men was any part of the divine plan in Creation, although it followed as a consequence from it.

21. διότι] because —. This word introduces the reason why they are without excuse, and are punished.

— γνόντες τὸν Θεόν] Observe τὸν Θεὸν, the one God; they knew the one true God, and yet they worshipped many false gods.

— ἐν τοῖς διαλογισμοῖς] in their disputations; in their intellectual reasonings, and philosophical disputings,—in which they imagined themselves to be most ingenious and subtle (cp. 1 Cor. iii. 20),—even in them, and by them, they were reduced to vanity (see Eph. iv. 17), and all their proud intelligence became mere hollowness and emptiness.

— καρδία] St. Paul places the seat of infidelity in the heart; it is the heart which is ἀσύνετος, without understanding; "the fool saith in his heart, that there is no God" (Ps. xiv. 1); "the evil heart of unbelief." (Heb. iii. 12. Cp. John vii. 17.)

22. φάσκοντες εἶναι σοφοί] professing to be wise, they became fools. Intelligence is no safeguard against Superstition. Knowledge puffeth up. (1 Cor. viii. 1.) It often engenders Pride, and Pride is punished by God with spiritual Blindness, which is the mother of Idolatry. "Vindicat Deus in animâ aversâ à se exordio pœnarum ipsâ cæcitate." Augustine, Serm. 117.

"Cæcitas mentis est pœna peccati, quâ cor superbum dignâ animadversione punitur" (c. Julian. Pelag. v. 3). See also Aug. in Ps. ii. and v. on spiritual Blindness as the necessary consequence of Unbelief and Disobedience to God. See 2 Pet. i. 9.

23. καὶ—καὶ—καί] Observe this repetition, marking successive stages of their moral and intellectual degradation: ending in the transmutation of the living God of heaven into the likeness of unclean reptiles crawling upon earth!

See also the emphatic καὶ in the next verse, marking the retribution for all this.

24. τοῦ ἀτιμάζεσθαι τὰ σώματα] to dishonour their bodies. They dishonoured God by vile corporeal representations of Him, and He punished them by corporeal debasements of themselves.

25. οἵτινες] who—or rather, "in that they," or "seeing that they," "quippe qui." Such is the usual difference between οἵτινες and οἱ; the former generally introduces the reason of the statement that precedes it. Cp. 1 Pet. ii. 11.

— τῷ ψεύδει] the lie. Idolatry is emphatically called τὸ ψεῦδος, the lie, in Scripture. (Isa. xxviii. 15; xliv. 20. Jer. xiii. 25), because the gods whom Idolaters worship, do not even exist, and yet they worship them in the place of Him Who is the Cause of all existence, and Who is the Truth. Cp. Severian, and above, 2 Thess. ii. 11, and 1 Cor. viii. 4.

— παρὰ τὸν κτίσαντα] beside, and rather than, the Creator, 'præ Creatore,' and so as eventually to exclude Him. Hilary (de Trin. 12). Cp. v. 26, παρὰ φύσιν.

From this text a strong argument may be derived against

(1) The Arians, who assert Christ to be a Creature, and yet profess to worship Him; and 26 [y] Διὰ τοῦτο παρέδωκεν αὐτοὺς ὁ Θεὸς εἰς πάθη ἀτιμίας. Αἵ τε γὰρ θήλειαι αὐτῶν μετήλλαξαν τὴν φυσικὴν χρῆσιν εἰς τὴν παρὰ φύσιν· 27 ὁμοίως τε καὶ οἱ ἄρσενες, ἀφέντες τὴν φυσικὴν χρῆσιν τῆς θηλείας, ἐξεκαύθησαν ἐν τῇ ὀρέξει αὐτῶν εἰς ἀλλήλους, ἄρσενες ἐν ἄρσεσι τὴν ἀσχημοσύνην κατεργαζόμενοι, καὶ τὴν ἀντιμισθίαν ἣν ἔδει τῆς πλάνης αὐτῶν ἐν ἑαυτοῖς ἀπολαμβάνοντες.

28 Καὶ καθὼς οὐκ ἐδοκίμασαν τὸν Θεὸν ἔχειν ἐν ἐπιγνώσει, παρέδωκεν αὐτοὺς ὁ Θεὸς εἰς ἀδόκιμον νοῦν, ποιεῖν τὰ μὴ καθήκοντα· 29 πεπληρωμένους πάσῃ ἀδικίᾳ, πονηρίᾳ, πλεονεξίᾳ, κακίᾳ, μεστοὺς φθόνου, φόνου, ἔριδος, δόλου, κακοηθείας, 30 ψιθυριστὰς, καταλάλους, θεοστυγεῖς, ὑβριστὰς, ὑπερηφάνους, ἀλαζόνας, ἐφευρετὰς κακῶν, γονεῦσιν ἀπειθεῖς, 31 ἀσυνέτους, ἀσυνθέτους, ἀστόργους, ἀνελεήμονας· 32 [z] οἵτινες τὸ δικαίωμα τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐπιγνόντες ὅτι οἱ τὰ τοιαῦτα πράσσοντες ἄξιοι θανάτου εἰσὶν, οὐ μόνον αὐτὰ ποιοῦσιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ συνευδοκοῦσι τοῖς πράσσουσι.

[y] Lev. 18. 22, 23 Eph. 5. 11, 12.

[z] Hos. 7. 3. Ps. 50. 18.

---

(2) Against those who pay religious worship to any creature;

According to Scripture, no one is to be worshipped who is not God by nature (Gal. iv. 8); no creature, but the Creator only. (Rom. i. 25.) From whence it is evident that there is no middle between Creator and creature, Creator and creature being opposites: so that a creature cannot be Creator, nor Creator a creature. Scripture knows nothing of creature-worship, nothing of inferior, relative, or mediate worship distinct from divine; nothing of two worships, of different kinds,—either before the Gospel or after. The one fundamental rule of Worship, from Genesis down to Revelation, is to worship God alone,—the God of Israel, the Jehovah, the Creator, Sustainer, Preserver of all things. There was never any distinction made of supreme and inferior sacrifices, vows, oaths, prayers, protestations. All religious worship is God's peculiar, all of the same nature, and of like import and significancy. Waterland (iv. p. 359, "The Scriptures and the Arians compared").

— εὐλογητός] בָּרוּךְ (baruk), blessed; to be distinguished from μακάριος, also translated in English by blessed; but the latter is applied to men: the former only to God. See ix. 5.

26, 27. Διὰ τοῦτο—ἀπολαμβάνοντες] A dark picture of Heathenism, but fully verified from the writings of what has been called the most brilliant age of the most intellectual Nations of the world, e. g. from those of Aristophanes, Catullus, Horace, Sallust, Suetonius, Tacitus, Juvenal, and Martial.

It is also important to observe, that the same Divine Spirit Who gives this fearful catalogue of vices consequent on the Infidelity of mankind in the past ages of the world (vv. 29—32) has drawn a similar picture of what yet remains to be revealed in the future. See the words of the Apostle in 2 Tim. iii. 1—9.

The results of the Infidelity which will display itself in the world, will, it is to be feared, in one respect be worse than those of former ages, inasmuch as Christianity is a clearer Revelation than any that had previously been vouchsafed to the world, and the sin of Apostasy from it, and the punishment due to such Apostasy, will be proportionably great.

26. ἀτιμίας] of dishonour. See above on 1 Thess. iv. 4; below, Heb. xiii. 4.

28. οὐκ ἐδοκίμασαν] (1) They did not apply the proper tests to discover the truth, and

(2) They did not approve it (Phil. i. 10); and therefore God punished them by giving them over to be the victims of their own νοῦς, now no longer γνήσιος and καθαρὸς, but κίβδηλος and ἀδόκιμος, reprobate. The punishment was proportioned and adjusted to the sin; and this exact moral retribution is expressed more strongly by the paronomasia between ἐδοκίμασαν and ἀδόκιμον.

The metaphor is from metals; and the fate of the mind which does not seach for, examine, and approve the truth, may be described in the Prophet's words, "How is the gold become dim, and the most fine gold changed." (Lam. iv. 1.) "Thy silver is become dross." (Isa. i. 22.) "Reprobate silver shall men call them, because the Lord hath rejected them." (Jer. vi. 30.)

These verses (26, 27) are quoted by S. Hippolytus l. c. p. 100.

On the Laws of Nature cognizable by man (in opposition to the later theory of Locke), see Hooker, i. 8. 10.

— τὰ μὴ καθήκοντα] the things that are not convenient. See on Eph. v. 4.

29. ἀδικίᾳ] Elz. adds πορνείᾳ, which is not found in the best MSS., and is rejected by Lach., Tisch., Alf.

— κακοηθείας] ill-nature; that malignant habit, which turns every thing, however good, into evil, and lives on the poison which it makes for itself. Cp. Aristot. Rhet. ii. 13. Wetstein, ii. 27. Schleusner in v. Trench, Syn. N. T. § xi.

30. ψιθυριστὰς] backbiters; properly whisperers, 'susurrones,' clandestine propagators of calumnious reports; and so distinguished from the following word, καταλάλους, slanderers, persons guilty of evil-speaking, privately and in public.

— θεοστυγεῖς] haters of God. So the Authorized English Version, after Theodoret, Suidas, Œcumenius, Grotius, and Syriac Version; and so Passow. This sense seems most consistent with the context. The Apostle is describing here the sins of the Heathen, and not their punishment; and it was competent for him to pronounce that they were haters of God (for this was seen from their own words and works), but it was not for him to declare that they were hated by God. Perhaps, therefore, the active sense is preferable, although the passive, "hated by God," has been adopted, as most consistent with analogy, by many recent Expositors (Fritzsche, Meyer, De Wette, Alford, Philippi), and by the learned Revisers of the English Authorized Version. The argument from analogy is not conclusive for the passive sense: θεομισὴς is 'a hater of God' (Aristoph. Av. 1555), and why not also θεοστυγὴς? Compare also iii. 18.

— ὑβριστὰς, ὑπερηφάνους, ἀλαζόνας] Insolent and injurious in acts, proud in thoughts, and boastful in words. Cp. Fritzsche, and Trench, Syn. § xxix.

31. ἀσυνθέτους] fœdifragos; truce-breakers: μὴ ἐμμένοντας ταῖς συνθήκαις, Gloss. N. T. Alberti, p. 94. Cp. Jer. iii. 7. 10, LXX.

— ἀστόργους] Elz. adds ἀσπόνδους, not in A, B, D*, E, G, nor in ℵ*.

32. τὸ δικαίωμα τοῦ Θεοῦ] the righteous decree or requirement of God. Δικαίωμα is that which δεδικαίωται, i. e. has been counted just, and has been ordained and decreed, and is enforced as just. See ii. 26; viii. 4.

Hence, in a secondary sense, it signifies the statute kept, by righteous obedience; and a justified state. See v. 18.

— οἵτινες—οὐ μόνον αὐτὰ ποιοῦσι—πράσσουσι] who, although they well know the just sentence of God, that they who practise (πράσσουσι) such things are worthy of death, not only do them, but even patronize those who practise them.

In the word πράσσω (from περάω, περαίνω, Buttmann, Lexil. § 95) the idea of continuance and repetition in several acts is brought out more clearly than in ποιῶ. Compare below, ii. 1, 2, 3; vii. 14, 15, 16. 20, 21.

And the word συνευδοκεῖν aggravates the offence; for he who does evil is carried away by his own passion, but he who patronizes it in others does it deliberately, and with malice prepense inflames the passions of others. See Œcumen., Bengel, Meyer.

It is well said by Dr. South (in a Sermon on this text), that "the innate principle of self-love, that very easily and often blinds a man, as to any impartial reflection upon himself, yet for the most part leaves his eyes open enough to judge truly of the same thing in his neighbour, and to hate that in others which he allows and cherishes in himself. And therefore when it shall come to this, that he approves, embraces, and delights in sin, as he observes it even in the person and practice of other men; this shows that the man is wholly transformed from the creature that God first made him; nay, that he has consumed those poor remainders of good that the sin of Adam left him; that he has worn off the very remote dispositions and possibilities to virtue; and in a word, has turned grace first, and afterwards nature itself out of doors."

a 2 Sam. 12. 25. Matt. 7. 1.

II. [1] [a] Διὸ ἀναπολόγητος εἶ, ὦ ἄνθρωπε πᾶς ὁ κρίνων, ἐν ᾧ γὰρ κρίνεις τὸν ἕτερον, σεαυτὸν κατακρίνεις, τὰ γὰρ αὐτὰ πράσσεις ὁ κρίνων. [2] Οἴδαμεν δὲ ὅτι τὸ κρῖμα τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐστὶ κατὰ ἀλήθειαν ἐπὶ τοὺς τὰ τοιαῦτα πράσσοντας.

[3] Λογίζῃ δὲ τοῦτο, ὦ ἄνθρωπε, ὁ κρίνων τοὺς τὰ τοιαῦτα πράσσοντας, καὶ ποιῶν αὐτά, ὅτι σὺ ἐκφεύξῃ τὸ κρῖμα τοῦ Θεοῦ; [4] [b] ἢ τοῦ πλούτου τῆς χρηστότητος αὐτοῦ καὶ τῆς ἀνοχῆς καὶ τῆς μακροθυμίας καταφρονεῖς, ἀγνοῶν ὅτι τὸ χρηστὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ εἰς μετάνοιαν σὲ ἄγει; [5] [c] κατὰ δὲ τὴν σκληρότητά σου καὶ ἀμετανόητον καρδίαν θησαυρίζεις σεαυτῷ ὀργὴν ἐν ἡμέρᾳ ὀργῆς καὶ ἀποκαλύb ch. 9. 23. Isa. 30. 18. 2 Pet. 3. 9, 15.

c Deut. 32. 34. James 5. 3.

Ch. II. 1. Διὸ ἀναπολόγητος] Wherefore thou art inexcusable, O man, whosoever thou art (whether Jew or Gentile) that judgest.

An answer on the part of the Apostle (as usual with St. Paul, see i. 16) to a supposed objection.

Yes (the Jew might say), all that you have just now said concerning the moral condition and consequent misery of the Heathen is true. But what is that to us? We are God's elect. We are His privileged people. We have His Law. We have the Holy Scriptures.

True (the Apostle may be now supposed to reply), and therefore you are without excuse, for (as he has just said, i. 32) it is declared in God's just decree (δικαίωμα) that all who do such things are worthy of death; and "we all know this" to be so (v. 2). And you Jews who condemn the Heathen, practise yourselves the sins which ye condemn in others. And it is not by hearing the law of God that you can be justified, but by doing it. (See v. 13.) It is not γνῶσις, but πρᾶξις that will save you. And therefore you are liable to the same, nay rather to greater, condemnation than the Heathen; inasmuch as you sin against clearer light and a more explicit Law than they. You, therefore, who are first in privileges, will be first in punishment (v. 9); and you will be condemned at the Great Day even by some of them whom you condemn, who, though they have not the Law, yet are Law unto themselves; and though they have not the letter of the Law written on tables of stone, yet show the work of the Law written in the fleshly tables of their own hearts. (vv. 14, 15. 27.)

— ἄνθρωπε] O man. He does not say ὦ Ἰουδαῖε, O Jew! but he says, and says twice, ὦ ἄνθρωπε, O man.

Why does he adopt this general designation?

(1) Because, the proposition he is about to state is one of universal application.

(2) Because he would approach the Jew with gentleness, and not exasperate and alienate him by any abrupt denunciation.

(3) Because if the Jew does those things with which St. Paul here charges him, he has disinherited himself: he is no longer worthy of the name of Ἰουδαῖος, but is a mere ἄνθρωπος (not ἀνὴρ), in a lost state. See ii. 28, 29, and on Rev. ii. 9; iii. 9, as to the word Ἰουδαῖος; and on the word ἄνθρωπος, see 1 Cor. iii. 3, 4.

— ἐν ᾧ] in that wherein.

— κρίνεις] thou judgest, condemnest. See xiv. 4. 10.

— τὸν ἕτερον] thy neighbour; for, whatever thou mayest think, the Gentile is thy neighbour. Cp. xiii. 8. 1 Cor. vi. 1; x. 24. Luke x. 29. 36.

2. Οἴδαμεν] We (who are Jews and have the Scriptures) know. The Apostle charitably and wisely identifies himself with the Jews, with whom he is arguing, and proceeds from the common ground of Holy Scripture to conciliate and convince them.

3. σύ] thou —, emphatic: as σὲ, v. 4.

4. ἀγνοῶν] not considering and acknowledging. (Acts xiii. 27. 1 Tim. i. 13.) See on Acts xv. 18; xxiii. 5.

— τὸ χρηστόν] the kindness (ἡ χρηστότης). See on i. 15. Titus iii. 4.

— ἄγει] is leading, designs to lead. So 1 Cor. x. 33, ἀρέσκω, I try to please. 1 Cor. xvi. 5, Μακεδονίαν διέρχομαι, I am designing to pass through Macedonia.

The word ἄγει, leads, intimates not only the will of God, but also the will of man. God leads, but man may refuse to be led. "Deus ducit volentem duci," as Bengel says, "ducit suaviter, non cogit necessitate."

5. θησαυρίζεις σεαυτῷ ὀργήν] thou treasurest for thyself wrath. It is not God who treasureth it up for thee (Chrys.), but thy destruction is from thyself. Θησαυροί εἰσιν ὥσπερ ἀγαθῶν οὕτω καὶ κακῶν παρὰ τῷ Θεῷ, Philo, Alleg. ii. p. 80. Deut. xxxii. 33. 35. Prov. i. 18, θησαυρίζουσιν ἑαυτοῖς κακά. James v. 3, πῦρ ἐθησαυρίσατε.

This passage occupies an important place in the Pelagian controversy concerning Human Free-Will, Divine Foreknowledge, and Divine Grace.

See the Dialogue on these questions in the works of S. Jerome, where the argument for Free-Will is thus stated:—

Critobulus. Quid ergo juvat atque coronat in nobis Deus et laudat quod Ipse operatus est?

Atticus (Orthodoxus). Voluntatem nostram, quæ obtulit omne quod potuit; et laborem, qui contendit ut faceret; et humilitatem, quæ semper respexit ad auxilium Dei.

Crit. Ergo si non fecimus quod præcepit, aut voluit nos adjuvare Deus, aut noluit. Si voluit et adjuvit, et tamen non fecimus quod voluimus, non nos, sed ille superatus est. Sin autem noluit adjuvare, non est culpa ejus, qui voluit facere, sed illius qui adjuvare potuit, et noluit facere.

Att. Non intelligis διλήμματον tuum in grande blasphemiarum decidisse barathrum, ut ex utraque parte, aut invalidus sit Deus, aut invidus, et non tantum ei laudis sit, quod bonorum auctor est et adjutor, quantum vituperationis, quòd mala non coercuit. Detrahatur ergo illi, cur Diabolum esse permiserit, cur passus sit, et hujusque patiatur quotidie aliquid in mundo mali fieri. Quærit hoc Marcion, et omnes Hæreticorum canes, qui Vetus laniant Testamentum, et hujuscemodi syllogismum texere consueverunt;

Aut scivit Deus hominem, in paradiso positum, prævaricaturum esse mandatum illius; aut nescivit.

Si scivit, non est in culpa is qui præscientiam Dei vitare non potuit, sed ille qui talem condidit, ut Dei non posset scientiam devitare.

Si nescivit, cui præscientiam tollis, aufers et divinitatem.

Hoc enim genere in culpa erit qui elegit Saül futurum postea regem impiissimum. Et Salvator aut ignorantiæ, aut injustitiæ tenebitur reus, cui in Evangelio sit loquutus: Nonne vos duodecim ego elegi Apostolos, et unus de vobis diabolus est? (Joh. vi. 70.) Interroga Eum, cur Judam elegerit proditorem? cur ei loculos commiserit, quem furem esse non ignorabat? Vis audire rationem. Deus præsentia judicat, non futura. Nec condemnat ex præscientia, quem noverit talem fore, qui sibi postea displiceat: sed tantæ bonitatis est, et ineffabilis clementiæ, ut eligat eum, quem interim bonum cernit, et scit malum futurum, dans ei potestatem conversionis et pœnitentiæ, juxta illum sensum Apostoli: Ignoras quia benignitas Dei ad pœnitentiam te adducit? secundum duritiam autem tuam et cor impœnitens thesaurizas tibi iram in die iræ et revelationis justi judicii Dei, qui reddet unicuique secundùm opera ejus.

Neque enim ideo peccavit Adam, quia Deus hoc futurum noverat; sed præscivit Deus, quasi Deus, quod ille erat propria voluntate facturus. Accusa ergo Deum mendacii quare dixerit per Jonam: Adhuc tres dies et Ninive subvertetur. (Jonah iii. 4.) Sed respondebit tibi per Jeremiam: Ad summam loquar contra gentem et regnum, ut eradicem et destruam et disperdam illud. Si pœnitentiam egerit gens illa à malo suo, quod loquutus sum adversùs eam, agam et ego pœnitentiam super malo quod cogitavi ut facerem ei. Et ad summam loquar de gente et regno, ut ædificem et plantem illud: si fecerit malum in conspectu meo, ut non audiat vocem meam; pœnitentiam agam super bono, quod loquutus sum ut facerem ei. (Jer. xviii. 8; xxvi. 13.) Indignabatur quondam et Jonas, cur Deo fuerit jubente mentitus: sed injusti mœroris arguitur, malens cum pernicie innumerabilis populi verum dicere, quàm cum tantorum salute mentiri. Ponitur ei exemplum: Tu doles super hedera sive cucurbita, in qua non laborasti, neque fecisti ut cresceret, quæ sub una nocte nata est, et una nocte periit: et ego non parcam Ninive civitati magnæ, in qua sunt plus quàm centum viginti millia hominum, qui nesciunt quid sit inter dexteram et sinistram suam? (Jonah iv. 10, 11.) S. Jerome (Dialog. adv. Pelag. iii. p. 536).

— ἐν ἡμέρᾳ ὀργῆς] in the Day of Wrath. Now, on earth, temporal blessings may be given to sinners; but at the last Great Day of everlasting recompense, when He shall render to every man according to his work, His vengeance shall manifest His wrath, and the righteousness of His judgment shall be revealed to every eye in the condign punishment of unreconciled sinners. Bp. Sanderson (Serm. iii. 5. 63).

ψεως δικαιοκρισίας τοῦ Θεοῦ, [6] [d] ὃς ἀποδώσει ἑκάστῳ κατὰ τὰ ἔργα αὐτοῦ, [7] τοῖς μὲν καθ' ὑπομονὴν ἔργου ἀγαθοῦ δόξαν καὶ τιμὴν καὶ ἀφθαρσίαν ζητοῦσι ζωὴν αἰώνιον, [8] [e] τοῖς δὲ ἐξ ἐριθείας, καὶ ἀπειθοῦσι μὲν τῇ ἀληθείᾳ πειθομένοις δὲ τῇ ἀδικίᾳ, ὀργὴ καὶ θυμός, [9] θλῖψις καὶ στενοχωρία ἐπὶ πᾶσαν ψυχὴν ἀνθρώπου τοῦ κατεργαζομένου τὸ κακόν, Ἰουδαίου τε πρῶτον καὶ Ἕλληνος, [10] δόξα δὲ καὶ τιμὴ καὶ εἰρήνη παντὶ τῷ ἐργαζομένῳ τὸ ἀγαθόν, Ἰουδαίῳ τε πρῶτον καὶ Ἕλληνι. [11] [f] Οὐ γάρ ἐστι προσωποληψία παρὰ τῷ Θεῷ· [12] [g] ὅσοι γὰρ ἀνόμως ἥμαρτον ἀνόμως καὶ ἀπολοῦνται· καὶ ὅσοι ἐν νόμῳ ἥμαρτον διὰ νόμου κριθήσονται· [13] [h] οὐ γὰρ οἱ ἀκροαταὶ νόμου δίκαιοι παρὰ τῷ Θεῷ, ἀλλ' οἱ ποιηταὶ νόμου δικαιωθήσονται.

[14] Ὅταν γὰρ ἔθνη τὰ μὴ νόμον ἔχοντα φύσει τὰ τοῦ νόμου ποιῇ, οὗτοι νόμον μὴ ἔχοντες ἑαυτοῖς εἰσι νόμος, [15] οἵτινες ἐνδείκνυνται τὸ ἔργον τοῦ νόμου d Job 34. 11. Ps. 62. 12. Jer. 17. 10. & 32. 19. Matt. 16. 27. ch. 14. 12. 1 Cor. 3. 8. 2 Cor. 5. 10. Rev. 22. 12. e Job 24. 13. 2 Thess. 1. 8.

f Deut. 10. 17. Gal. 2. 6. Eph. 6. 9. Col. 3. 25. 1 Pet. 1. 17.
g Luke 12. 47.
h Matt. 7. 21. James 1. 22, 25. 1 John 3. 7.

---

8. τοῖς δὲ ἐξ ἐριθείας] to those who act from a principle of factious and self-seeking resistance to God. Cp. Phil. i. 16.

On the sense of ἐριθεία, see above on Gal. v. 20, the Excursus of Fritzsche here, pp. 105. 143—148, and Philippi, p. 56.

On the use of ἐκ, out of, as from a root, cp. iii. 26; iv. 12. 14.

— ὀργὴ καὶ θυμός] anger and fury. So the best MSS. Elz. has θυμὸς καὶ ὀργή. Θυμὸς πρόσκαιρος, ὀργὴ πολυχρόνιος (Ammon.). Θυμὸς is fitly placed after ὀργὴ, for it is iræ excandescentia. (Cic. Tusc. iv. 9.) Ὀργὴ is the heat of the fire, θυμὸς is the bursting forth of the flame. See below, Rev. xix. 15.

St. Paul, in the rapidity of his style, omits the verb. See i. 15.

There is something very expressive in the change of structure of the sentence, and in the omission of the Verb here. It is Almighty God Who ἀποδώσει ζωὴν αἰώνιον. It is His primary design and desire to give eternal life to all. (1 Tim. ii. 4.) But man's destruction is brought down by man on himself, Deo nolente. (Hos. xiii. 9.) Cp. Œcumen.

9. θλῖψις καὶ στενοχωρία] affliction and distress. Cp. 2 Cor. iv. 8, ἐν παντὶ θλιβόμενοι, ἀλλ' οὐ στενοχωρούμενοι. Cp. Isa. viii. 22, LXX; below, viii. 35. The former word represents the act by which a man is cast down and dashed to the ground, the latter the state in which he is kept by continued pressure and constraint.

— Ἰουδαίου πρῶτον] of the Jew first. The servant who knew his Lord's will, and did not do it, and will be beaten with many stripes, is the Jew; the servant who knew it not, is the Gentile. (Luke xii. 47, 48.) Origen.

11. προσωποληψία] respect of persons. A, D, G have προσωπολημψία, which reading has been received by Lachmann, and some other Editors, here and elsewhere, Acts x. 34. James ii. 9. So πρόσλημψις below, xi. 15.

This form with μ is probably an Alexandrine one. (Sturz. de Dialect. p. 130.) But it is very doubtful whether it ought to be admitted into the N. T.; or, if it is admitted into the N. T., it ought, by parity of reason, to be received also into the editions of Herodotus, Thucydides, and Plato, inasmuch as it is found in ancient MSS. of those Authors. But it is probably due to a vicious pronunciation of the Copyists, who sounded β and π as μ. See Thilo, Cod. Apocryph. N. T. p. 288, and Fritzsche, p. 110, here.

12. ἀνόμως] without the written law. For all have some Law (v. 15), otherwise they could not sin; for where no Law is, there is no transgression. (Rom. iv. 15; v. 13. 20, and 1 Cor. xv. 56.) Sin is the transgression of the Law. (1 John iii. 4.)

— ἀνόμως καὶ ἀπολοῦνται] will also perish without the written Law; that is, they will not be dealt with according to the rigour of that Law; but they will be judged by that Code which is written, not on tables of stone, but on the fleshly tables of the heart (2 Cor. iii. 3, and see v. 15),—"the common law of the world" (Bp. Andrewes, i. 290), the code of Conscience and of Reason.

13. νόμου] of the Law. Elz. has τοῦ νόμου, but τοῦ is not in A, B, D, G.

14. Ὅταν γὰρ ἔθνη τὰ μὴ νόμον ἔχοντα] For whenever Gentiles—that is, any Gentiles—they who have not the Law. He does not say τὰ ἔθνη, the Gentiles, for that would be contrary to the supposition of the general moral depravity of the Heathen world, already described, i. 22—32.

— τὰ μὴ νόμον ἔχοντα] they who have not the Law, the written Law. See below, v. 17. He does not say τὰ μὴ ἔχοντα νόμον, but he says τὰ μὴ νόμον ἔχοντα. The word νόμον is placed emphatically as the first word; and the possession denied to the Gentiles is that of the Law, not of a Law; for all men have some law.

— φύσει τὰ τοῦ νόμου ποιῇ] when they do by nature the precepts of the Law of Moses. When they do them, φύσει, by Nature, as distinct from θέσει or written Law. When they do them φύσει, by Nature rightly understood, and as distinguished from the vices of a corrupt Nature, in which sense St. Paul uses φύσις, Eph. ii. 3.

In the Nature of Man, rightly understood, Conscience reigns and judges, and exercises royal Supremacy, and Sovereignty, and Judicial authority over the Will and Appetites of Man; and is, as it were, the Governing Power (subject always to the Supreme Law of God) in the constitution of Human Nature considered as a whole.

This dominion of Conscience is called by Origen here, "Naturalis Lex quæ communiter omnibus hominibus inest."

Consequently, whenever Passion domineers over human nature, it is guilty of usurpation; and when man allows this to be the case, he is guilty of violating the Law of his Nature, which is the work of God.

See Bp. Butler's Sermons ii. and iii. on Human Nature, and the Preface to them: cp. Hooker, I. viii., and II. ii. and viii.

On this important subject the reader may consult the expositions of Hooker, Bp. Sanderson, and Bp. Butler, brought together in vol. i. of the Christian Institutes by the late Master of Trinity College, Cambridge, Dr. Wordsworth, i. pp. 121. 145, note. 174. 562. 569. 572, 573.

See also the Edition of the three Sermons of Bp. Butler, published by his successor, one of the restorers of the true System of Ethics in that University, the Rev. William Whewell, D.D.; and compare the Sermon of their great predecessor, Dr. Isaac Barrow, "On the Being of God, proved from the frame of Human Nature," Works, iv. pp. 163—183.

The subject is fully treated in the fourth Lecture of Bp. Sanderson, de Conscientiâ (vol. iv. pp. 65—90), particularly pp. 71—81, following Hooker, II. ii. 1—6, and II. viii. 6, 7, and confuting the Puritan theory that man is subject to no Law but that of the Written Word; and the tenets of the school of Hobbes, followed by Locke and others, that there are no principles of Ethics written by the finger of God in the heart of man. Against such a system of Philosophy the Heathens themselves reclaimed. See Soph. Antig. 450—455, and even Juvenal, xiii. 192.

— ἑαυτοῖς εἰσι νόμος] they are to themselves Law. Νόμος is not to be rendered a Law (for a Law may be an unjust Law, and there is but one Moral Law), nor yet does it here mean the Mosaic Law, as far as it was Mosaic, and was delivered specially to the Jews, and as distinguished from the antecedent, unwritten, universal Code of Morality, engraven on the Human Conscience, and promulgated by God, at the beginning of the World, as the Common Law of Human Nature.

The Apostle means, that when Gentiles, which have not the Law of Moses, do the works of that Law (which was only a republication of the primeval Code of Ethics), "they are to themselves Law," in her abstract dignity, "whose seat is the bosom of God, her voice the harmony of the world." (Hooker, I. xvi. 8.) Cp. Aristot. Eth. Nic. iv. 14, ὁ ἐλεύθερος οὕτως ἕξει, οἷον νόμος ὢν ἑαυτῷ.

15. οἵτινες ἐνδείκνυνται τὸ ἔργον τοῦ νόμου] inasmuch as they display the work of the Law, even of the Mosaic Law itself, written on their hearts; for there is but one Moral Law, Eternal, Immutable, Universal; and the Mosaic Law, in its moral enactments, was only a Transcript and Republication of the Original and Eternal Law of Ethics, graven on Man's Conscience, Reason, γραπτὸν ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις αὐτῶν, συμμαρτυρούσης αὐτῶν τῆς συνειδήσεως, καὶ i Matt. 25. 31. Acts 17. 31. 1 Cor. 4. 5. μεταξὺ ἀλλήλων τῶν λογισμῶν κατηγορούντων ἢ καὶ ἀπολογουμένων, 16 [i] ἐν ἡμέρᾳ ὅτε κρινεῖ ὁ Θεὸς τὰ κρυπτὰ τῶν ἀνθρώπων κατὰ τὸ εὐαγγέλιόν μου διὰ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.

j ch. 9. 4. John 8. 33, 41. 17 [j] Εἰ δὲ σὺ Ἰουδαῖος ἐπονομάζῃ, καὶ ἐπαναπαύῃ νόμῳ, καὶ καυχᾶσαι ἐν k Phil. 1. 10. Θεῷ, 18 [k] καὶ γινώσκεις τὸ θέλημα, καὶ δοκιμάζεις τὰ διαφέροντα, κατηχούμενος
l Matt. 23. 16. John 9. 34, 40, 41. ἐκ τοῦ νόμου, 19 [l] πέποιθάς τε σεαυτὸν ὁδηγὸν εἶναι τυφλῶν, φῶς τῶν ἐν σκότει, 20 παιδευτὴν ἀφρόνων, διδάσκαλον νηπίων, ἔχοντα τὴν μόρφωσιν τῆς γνώσεως
m Ps. 50. 16, &c. Matt. 23. toto. καὶ τῆς ἀληθείας ἐν τῷ νόμῳ, 21 [m] ὁ οὖν διδάσκων ἕτερον σεαυτὸν οὐ διδάσκεις ;
ὁ κηρύσσων μὴ κλέπτειν κλέπτεις ; 22 ὁ λέγων μὴ μοιχεύειν μοιχεύεις ; ὁ βδεn ch. 9. 4. λυσσόμενος τὰ εἴδωλα ἱεροσυλεῖς ; 23 [n] ὃς ἐν νόμῳ καυχᾶσαι, διὰ τῆς παραβά-o 2 Sam. 12. 14. Isa. 52. 5. Ezek. 36. 20, 23. σεως τοῦ νόμου τὸν Θεὸν ἀτιμάζεις ; 24 [o] τὸ γὰρ ὄνομα τοῦ Θεοῦ δι' ὑμᾶς βλασφημεῖται ἐν τοῖς ἔθνεσι, καθὼς γέγραπται.

25 Περιτομὴ μὲν γὰρ ὠφελεῖ ἐὰν νόμον πράσσῃς· ἐὰν δὲ παραβάτης νόμου ᾖς, ἡ περιτομή σου ἀκροβυστία γέγονεν. 26 Ἐὰν οὖν ἡ ἀκροβυστία τὰ δικαιώματα τοῦ νόμου φυλάσσῃ, οὐχὶ ἡ ἀκροβυστία αὐτοῦ εἰς περιτομὴν λογισθήσεται, 27 καὶ κρινεῖ ἡ ἐκ φύσεως ἀκροβυστία τὸν νόμον τελοῦσα σὲ τὸν διὰ γράμματος καὶ περιτομῆς παραβάτην νόμου ;

---

and Heart, in the time of his innocency, and grounded on the everlasting foundation of the Attributes of God.

On this use of οἵτινες, quippe qui, see i. 25. 32, Meyer, Philippi, and "Revised Version," p. ix.

— μεταξὺ ἀλλήλων] between one another; invicem, inter se. On this use of μεταξὺ, see Acts xv. 9, διέκρινε μεταξὺ ἡμῶν καὶ αὐτῶν. Matt. xviii. 15.

Man needs not external witnesses or accusers. He has them in his own breast, αὐτόθεν ἐξ αὐτῶν λογισμῶν ἡ ἁμαρτία παρίσταται. Œcumen.

The λογισμοὶ here specified are man's inward reasonings, reckonings with himself, with which he audits the accounts of his own conduct, at a "Session holden in his own heart, which is a forerunner of the great Session that is to ensue." Bp. Andrewes (iii. 334).

The λογισμοὶ of man are here represented as Witnesses testifying, and as Advocates pleading, inter se, i. e. for and against him, in the Court of his Συνείδησις or Conscience, which is God's Vicegerent and Deputy, holding an Assize in his heart, and administering Justice in God's Name, according to the Law, which is given by Him "Who is the only Lawgiver that is able to save and to destroy." (James iv. 12.) Cp. Bp. Sanderson, de Conscient. Præl. ii. 2, vol. iv. p. 24, who cites Menander, p. 358, βροτοῖς ἅπασιν ἡ Συνείδησις θεὸς, and Prælect. iv. Serm. iv. 9, vol. ii. p. 113, and Serm. vi. 23—25, vol. iii. p. 237, and iv. pp. 15. 72.

Not but that these λογισμοὶ themselves are acts of Conscience also, which performs the part of a Monitor and Counsellor "de faciendis, ▪ Testis de factis, and also ▪ Judex de rectène an malè factis." See Sanderson, Præl. i. 27, who observes that St. Paul is speaking here of Heathens; and that he teaches here that every man, however unholy, has a Conscience, though depraved; and that, at the Fall of Man, Conscience itself was not lost, but its rectitude and integrity were impaired; and that when we are born again in Baptism we do not receive the infusion of another Conscience, but our Conscience, which was before unclean, is washed by the blood of Christ, and is cleansed by Faith, and is enlightened by the Holy Spirit, in order that it may please God.

16. ἐν ἡμέρᾳ] in the day when God will judge the secrets of men. This seems to follow on v. 10; the introduction and continuation of the Parenthesis being marked by the conjunction γὰρ, repeated four times, vv. 11, 12, 13, 14. Still there is a connexion between this verse and what immediately precedes. For, as Origen observes, Conscience, which exercises a judicial office in the present life, will exercise it in a special and solemn manner at the Great Day. It will be the accuser of the evil, the acquitter of the good. It will be even, as it were, an Assessor of the Judge Himself. And so Bp. Pearson (Art. vii. on the Creed) explains the words, who says, "Conscience is a witness bound over to give testimony for or against us at some Judgment after this life to pass upon us."

17. Εἰ δέ] But if. Elz. has ἴδε, but εἰ δὲ is found in A, B, D*, E, K, and the preponderance of MSS. is in its favour, and is received by Griesb., Scholz, Lach., Tisch., Alf., Bloomf.

Observe the argument in ἐπ—ονομάζῃ, thou hast a title in addition to (ἐπὶ) that which other men possess. The sense is, But if thou who art not only a rational man, as the Gentiles are, endued with Reason and Conscience, and having the Volume of God's Works open before thee (see i. 19; ii. 14), but hast an additional privilege and title, and art also named a Jew (Ἰουδαῖος), one who by his very name professes to praise God, (see v. 29, and Rev. iii. 9), one who has been specially favoured by God, one who has the lively oracles of His written Word (iii. 2). If thou art a Jew in name, then show thyself a Jew in deed.

Elz. has τῷ before νόμῳ, but it is not in A, B, D*; and νόμος has the force of a proper name, as in v. 14, and signifies here, as usual, the positive written Law. See Meyer, Alf., and Philippi, p. 59.

18. δοκιμάζεις τὰ διαφέροντα] thou discernest the things that are more excellent. Having the touchstone of the written Law in thy hand, art able to ascertain and recognize that which is genuine and true, and to distinguish it from what is spurious and false, and (as far as thy reason is concerned) approvest it as such. See above, i. 28, and 1 Cor. iii. 13; and below, Phil. i. 10.

— κατηχούμενος] being orally instructed. See Luke i. 4, and on Luke ii. 46, as to the use of catechetical instruction among the Jews.

20. μόρφωσιν] model; 'formam honesti,' Cic. de Off. i. 5. So exemplar, effigies, species, τύπος, are used in the philosophical writings of Antiquity, for an ideal personification of Virtue. See Bentley on Freethinking, p. 278, near the end.

21, 22. κλέπτεις—μοιχεύεις ;] dost thou steal? dost thou commit adultery? See the sins charged, and the woes denounced, by our Lord, on the Jewish Teachers and Rulers, Matt. xxiii. 13—28; and the description given by St. James of the state of morals at Jerusalem, v. 1—6; and by Josephus at the time of the siege, B. J. iv. 3. 3; v. 9. 4. 13. 6; and his remarkable confession v. 10. 5, that "no City had ever suffered such miseries, nor did any age produce a generation more fruitful in wickedness, since the beginning of the World."

As to the prevalence of μοιχεία among the Jews, see John viii. 9.

— ἱεροσυλεῖς] Thou who abhorrest the idols of the heathen, dost thou rob the temple of God? Particularly in tithes and offerings. (Mal. i. 8. 12. 14; iii. 10.) A very common sin among the Jews, and for which Ananias, the High Priest, was specially notorious (Joseph. Ant. xx. 9. 2); thus imitating the sin for which his namesake, Ananias, was struck dead by God. (Acts v. 2. 5.)

The profanation of the Temple, twice punished by our Lord, was also a public example of ἱεροσυλία. (Matt. xxi. 13. John ii. 14.)

24. καθὼς γέγραπται] as it is written. He proves the sinfulness of the Jews from their own Scriptures, on the ground of which they claimed and enjoyed pre-eminence over the Gentiles. See iii. 1, 2. Cp. Isa. lii. 6. Ezek. xxxvi. 19. Surenhus. p. 437.

27. κρινεῖ] will judge: κατακρινεῖ (Matt. xii. 41), will rise up in the judgment against thee. (Œcumen.) Ἐλέγξει σὲ (so

28 p Οὐ γὰρ ὁ ἐν τῷ φανερῷ Ἰουδαῖός ἐστιν, οὐδὲ ἡ ἐν τῷ φανερῷ ἐν σαρκὶ περιτομή, 29 q ἀλλ' ὁ ἐν τῷ κρυπτῷ Ἰουδαῖος, καὶ περιτομὴ καρδίας ἐν πνεύματι οὐ γράμματι· οὗ ὁ ἔπαινος οὐκ ἐξ ἀνθρώπων ἀλλ' ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ.

III. 1 Τί οὖν τὸ περισσὸν τοῦ Ἰουδαίου, ἢ τίς ἡ ὠφέλεια τῆς περιτομῆς; 2 a Πολὺ κατὰ πάντα τρόπον· πρῶτον μὲν γὰρ ὅτι ἐπιστεύθησαν τὰ λόγια τοῦ Θεοῦ. 3 b Τί γὰρ εἰ ἠπίστησάν τινες; μὴ ἡ ἀπιστία αὐτῶν τὴν πίστιν τοῦ Θεοῦ καταργήσει; 4 c μὴ γένοιτο· γινέσθω δὲ ὁ Θεὸς ἀληθὴς, πᾶς δὲ ἄνθρωπος ψεύστης, καθὼς γέγραπται, Ὅπως ἂν δικαιωθῇς ἐν τοῖς λόγοις σου, καὶ νικήσῃς ἐν τῷ κρίνεσθαί σε.

p John 8. 39. ch. 9. 7.
q Deut. 10. 16. & 30. 6. Jer. 4. 4. Col. 2. 11. Phil. 3. 2, 3. 1 Pet. 3. 4. 1 Cor. 4. 5.
1 Thess. 2. 4.
a Deut. 4. 8. Ps. 147. 19, 20. ch. 2. 18. & 9. 4. b Num. 23. 19. ch. 9. 6. 2 Tim. 2. 13. Heb. 4. 2. c Ps. 51. 4. & 62. 9. John 3. 33.

---

read for ἐλέγξῃσε) ὁ τὸ σημεῖον μὴ ἔχων, τὰ δὲ τοῦ σημείου κατορθώσας, ὡς μὴ κατορθώσαντα. Origen (in Caten. p. 4).

— ἡ ἀκροβυστία] the Uncircumcision, i. e. the Gentile world, as the Jews are called ἡ περιτομὴ, the Circumcision. See Phil. iii. 2.

On the word ἀκροβυστία, see 1 Cor. vii. 18.

— τὸν διὰ γράμματος καὶ περιτομῆς παραβάτην νόμου] thee, who through the letter and circumcision transgressest the law. Διὰ signifies here something more than the state in which the agent is (as iv. 11; xiv. 20. 2 Cor. ii. 4; iii. 11); it intimates in the present passage (as an aggravation of the sin) that the Jew breaks through the barriers with which the Law fences him in. So iv. 11, οἱ πιστεύοντες δι' ἀκροβυστίας, those who, being in uncircumcision, overcome, and, as it were, pass through its hindrances and believe. See also on xiv. 20, τῷ διὰ προσκόμματος ἐσθίοντι, and cp. Winer, § 47, p. 339.

29. περιτομὴ καρδίας] circumcision of the heart. Circumcision has a moral and spiritual meaning: εἴ τις οὐκ ἐκκόπτεται τὰ πάθη (his sinful affections), ἀκρόβυστός ἐστιν. Photius.

— ἐν πνεύματι] in the spirit, the inner man, as opposed to the flesh. Theodor. Mopsuest.

— οὗ ὁ ἔπαινος] the praise whereof, not merely of whom: the praise and reward is applicable to the whole character and subject described in vv. 28, 29. Cp. Meyer.

CH. III. 1. Τί οὖν τὸ περισσόν] What then is the acknowledged pre-eminence of the Jew? A question from a Jewish objector,—If what you have said be true, what becomes of the preference given by God Himself to us, His chosen people the Jews? Does not your argument contravene that? Does not it involve an assertion that we Jews have no pre-eminence at all, except one of present guilt and future punishment? Does it not tend to subvert the Law, which is from God?

No, replies the Apostle; and he now proceeds to prove that his argument is in perfect harmony with the divine choice of the Jews, as a peculiar people, and that it establishes the Law. See v. 31.

On τὸ περισσὸν, cp. Matt. v. 37. 47.

2. ἐπιστεύθησαν τὰ λόγια] they (the Hebrew nation) were entrusted with the Oracles of God.

On the grammatical structure, see above, 1 Thess. ii. 4. So far am I from disparaging the Law, that I affirm your greatest privilege to be in possessing the Law; your greatest prerogative is that you have been entrusted with the Oracles of God (cp. Acts vii. 38. 1 Pet. iv. 11), the Law, and the Prophets.

But observe also, that in them, as will now be shown, God has declared His wrath against sin, and He has shown the universal sinfulness of mankind, whether Jew or Gentile, and their universal need of a Redeemer, and of His righteousness; and by consequence He has revealed His wrath against you for your sins, and your need of that gracious method of Justification which He has provided for all through Faith in Jesus Christ.

The Apostle thus confirms his argument concerning the greater responsibility, and consequent guilt, of the Jews, proportionate to the greater knowledge communicated to them by God in the Holy Scriptures. He also prepares the way for his quotations from the Law and the Prophets, the λόγια Θεοῦ in their hands (see 10—19), concerning their own sinfulness, and concerning Justification by Faith in Christ.

This Text supplies an important testimony concerning the Canon of Holy Scripture. Cp. ix. 9.

The Holy Spirit, by the mouth of St. Paul, declares here that those Writings which were committed to the charge of the Hebrew Nation, as "the Oracles of God," are indeed what that Nation esteemed them to be, the inspired and perfect Written Word of God, as far as it had then been delivered to the Church.

Therefore—

(1) Those Writings are to be revered as such by all who hope to be saved; and

(2) No other writings are to be so regarded, such as the Apocrypha, which then existed, but were not committed as λόγια Θεοῦ to the Hebrew Church, nor were ever received by it as such. See Bp. Cosin on the Canon, chap. ii.; and the authorities cited in the Editor's 2nd, 3rd, and 4th Lectures on the Canon of Scripture and on the Apocrypha, 1851, pp. 27—128, as to the functions of the Hebrew Church as the divinely constituted Trustee and Guardian of the Old Testament, until the Coming of Christ.

3. Τί γάρ] For what, albeit some (among the Jews) were unbelieving? He solves an objection raised from their disobedience to the Law which God committed to their trust. Photius.

— μὴ ἡ ἀπιστία αὐτῶν τὴν πίστιν τοῦ Θεοῦ καταργήσει;] Shall the unfaithfulness of them nullify the faithfulness of God?

There is a paronomasia in the words ἐπιστεύθησαν, ἠπίστησαν, ἀπιστία, πίστιν, which ought to be observed, but is difficult to express in English. The phrase πίστιν τοῦ Θεοῦ (which is an unusual one) is best explained by the assertion πιστὸς ὁ Θεὸς, God is faithful. (1 Cor. i. 9; x. 13. 2 Cor. i. 18.) Πίστις is used for a pledge and promise, Acts xvii. 31. 1 Tim. v. 12.

4. μὴ γένοιτο] Heaven forbid that this should be so! "Minimè vero!"

On the phrase μὴ γένοιτο, containing a very strong negation, and often used by St. Paul in this Epistle and that to the Galatians, and only once in all his other Epistles, 1 Cor. vi. 15, see above on Gal. ii. 17; iii. 21; below, vv. 6. 31; vi. 2. 15; vii. 7. 13; ix. 14; xi. 1. 11.

— γινέσθω—ψεύστης] Let God be accounted true. Let Him become true, i. e. subjectively, even to those who now suspect Him to be not so. Let the truth of His promises be acknowledged by all (he does not venture to say ἔστω, but γινέσθω), although that recognition should involve the admission that every man is false. Photius.

Nothing that is in man can annul the faithfulness of God; neither the original unworthiness of God's children, nor their actual unfaithfulness. Still God will be glorified in the truth and faithfulness of His promises. Bp. Sanderson, Serm. ii. vol. ii. p. 41, where he gives an exposition of verses 5—8.

— Ὅπως ἂν] In order that. (See Ps. li. 6.) David does not mean that he had committed sin with the intention of glorifying God. By so doing he would have exposed himself to the condemnation pronounced in v. 8 here. But he means that the evil of his sin had been overruled by God for good, in order that even it might be conducive to the greater manifestation of the Divine Justice. Cp. Bp. Sanderson, Prælect. ii. 8.

With this use of ὅπως ἄν, indicating a providential design, compare that of ἵνα above, 1 Cor. i. 15. 2 Cor. i. 9; iv. 7, and note.

David does not excuse his sin on the ground that in its pardon God's mercy will be glorified, although he says that this will be the result (Ps. li. 6); but he grieves over his sins, and declares that God will judge the world (ix. 8; lviii. 10); and that the wicked shall be punished by Him for ever (ix. 17).

God may, and does, exercise His power, and wisdom, and love, in educing the greatest good from the worst evil; but this is the effect of His own incommunicable attributes, and not of man's sins, which are not "ordinabilia ad bonum finem."

God never does evil in order to elicit good from it, nor does He permit any man to do evil in order that good may come. The intention with which a thing is done is, indeed, of very great importance; but whatever is sinful is never to be done on the plea of good intention. S. Augustine (de Mendacio, c. 7).

— Ὅπως ἂν δικαιωθῇς] In order that thou mayest be justified, i. e. be accounted just. By using this word here, St. Paul puts into our hand a key for unlocking the meaning of his argument concerning Justification. The sense in which David used the word צָדַק (tsadak), and its compounds, and in which his LXX Translators used δικαιῶν and δικαιοῦσθαι, is the sense in which he is about to use them. See below, vv. 24—26.

— καὶ νικήσῃς] and mayest prevail judicially in Thy cause.

5 Εἰ δὲ ἡ ἀδικία ἡμῶν Θεοῦ δικαιοσύνην συνίστησι, τί ἐροῦμεν ; μὴ ἄδικος ὁ Θεὸς ὁ ἐπιφέρων τὴν ὀργήν ; κατὰ ἄνθρωπον λέγω.
d Gen. 18. 25. Job 8. 3. & 34. 17. 6 d Μὴ γένοιτο· ἐπεὶ πῶς κρινεῖ ὁ Θεὸς τὸν κόσμον ;
7 Εἰ γὰρ ἡ ἀλήθεια τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν τῷ ἐμῷ ψεύσματι ἐπερίσσευσεν εἰς τὴν δόξαν αὐτοῦ, τί ἔτι κἀγὼ ὡς ἁμαρτωλὸς κρίνομαι, 8 καὶ μὴ, καθὼς βλασφημούμεθα, καὶ καθώς φασί τινες ἡμᾶς λέγειν, ὅτι ποιήσωμεν τὰ κακὰ, ἵνα ἔλθῃ τὰ ἀγαθά ;
—ὧν τὸ κρῖμα ἔνδικόν ἐστι.
e Gal. 3. 22. 9 e Τί οὖν ; προεχόμεθα ;
Οὐ πάντως· προῃτιασάμεθα γὰρ Ἰουδαίους τε καὶ Ἕλληνας πάντας ὑφ' ἁμαρ-f Ps. 14. 3. & 53. 3. τίαν εἶναι· 10 f καθὼς γέγραπται, ὅτι οὐκ ἔστι δίκαιος οὐδὲ εἷς· 11 οὐκ ἔστιν ὁ συνιῶν, οὐκ ἔστιν ὁ ἐκζητῶν τὸν Θεόν. 12 Πάντες ἐξέκλι-

---

5. Εἰ δὲ—ὀργήν] But if the unrighteousness of us men manifests the righteousness of God; if our sin lays a foundation on which God builds His righteousness as a superstructure, what then shall we say? If our sin sets forth in a clear light the righteousness of God, is God unrighteous, He Who bringeth down upon us (ὁ ἐπιφέρων) the wrath by which our unrighteousness is punished?

On the use of συνίστημι, constituo, colloco, and manifesto, φανεροῦν, βεβαιοῦν (Hesych.), and thence signifying to introduce and present by a commendatory letter, see above, Gal. ii. 18 and 2 Cor. vii. 11; and below, v. 8 and xvi. 1.

Here is another objection, suggested by the mention of the sin of David, to which he had just referred. David himself had said, in the words just quoted by the Apostle, "Against Thee only have I sinned, in order that thou mightest be justified in thy words, and prevail when thou art judged."

Thus (it might be alleged) David, by sinning, was like one who built up and displayed God's righteousness to the world. Is God then unrighteous in inflicting the punishment upon the sin, which had been, as it were, the groundwork of his own righteousness? This question is a general one, for all sin and all evil will in the end be overruled by God for Good.

On the use of μὴ, num (not nonne), see Winer, § 57, p. 453. St. Paul would not venture to ask, "Is not God unjust?" It is enough for him to allow the question to be put, as if it admitted a doubt, and he apologizes even for that.

7. Εἰ γὰρ ἡ ἀλήθεια] For if the truth of God abounded by my lie unto His glory, why am I still as a sinner liable to be judged?

Here is another objection, which St. Paul rejects with indignation. See a parallel instance of an objection thus suddenly introduced, as in a dialogue, between the Apostle and an interlocutor, in 1 Cor. x. 29.

"My lie," that is, mine, or any one's. On the practice of St. Paul thus introducing the objections of others (in which he by no means concurs) in his own name, see above on Gal. ii. 18, and 1 Cor. vi. 12, and Introduction, p. 189.

8. Καὶ μὴ, καθὼς βλασφημούμεθα] And why do we not rather say, as we are blasphemously reported, and as some affirm that we do say, "let us do those things that are evil (τὰ κακὰ) in order that those things which are good (τὰ ἀγαθὰ) may come?"

This imputation to him of such a doctrine as this, that "we may do evil in order that good may come," is resented by St. Paul as a blasphemous slander; and all who hold such a doctrine as that are thus denounced by him, their "condemnation is just."

See Bp. Sanderson's Sermon (A.D. 1626) on this text, vol. ii. pp. 41—75, where (p. 48) he mentions with approval two interpretations, viz. the damnation is just of those,

(1) Who unjustly slander us in this manner, or

(2) Who adventure to do any evil under whatsoever pretence of good to come.

The former appears to be the preferable sense. Compare his Prælect. de Consc. ii. 5, where he says: To understand the full scope and design of this passage, we are to observe that, of all the Apostles of our Lord, St. Paul asserts every where in the most copious manner, the extensive mercy and compassion of God in entering into a covenant of grace with sinners, and fulfilling faithfully the promises of the Gospel, notwithstanding the wickedness and infidelity of mankind, who were corrupted at the heart, and in their daily practice betrayed their impiety and want of faith; and yet so far was the sinner from vacating the Evangelical promises, and making them of none effect, that his very sins contributed to God's glory, and made His truth and grace still more illustrious; for where sin abounded, grace did much more abound. (Rom. v. 20.)

From this doctrine of the Apostle, not only the Sophisters and Impostors took occasion to defame and undermine the authority of St. Paul, but the Hypocrites and Libertines of the age made use of it to countenance and give them a security in their vices. And no wonder; for if the preaching of the Apostle were true, that the sins of men redounded to the glory of God, the divine justice could not reasonably exert itself in the punishment of sinners; there would be no encouragement for Virtue or Religion; nay, men were obliged to sin more abundantly, that God might receive the more abundant glory; and it would be their duty, upon all occasions, to do evil, that good might come. Other aspersions that were thrown upon the Apostle by his enemies, he confuted by proper arguments. But this he thought unworthy of an answer; he only expostulates with indignation, and resents it as the vilest slander, and as a degree of blasphemy. Bp. Sanderson (Prælect. de Consc. vol. ii. p. 73, English Translation. Lond. 1783).

9. Τί οὖν : προεχόμεθα;] What then? Do we Jews excel them, the Gentiles? No; in no wise. The word προεχόμεθα seems to be the middle voice (not passive), and may be compared with σεαυτὸν παρεχόμενος τύπον, Tit. ii. 7. And the sense is, Do we occupy a higher position in virtue than they do? So Vulg. 'præcellimus eos;' and similarly Origen, Theophyl., Theodoret., and Tholuck, De Wette, Philippi, Bloomf., A. V. R. Cod. Boerner. has προκατέχομεν περισσὸν, which gives the same sense.

This exposition is combined by some of these interpreters and others, with the sense, 'Are we preferred by God?' But the Apostle is not dwelling on God's favour, but on man's sin: and he shows that the Jews are not at all superior to the Gentiles in holiness.

Some recent Interpreters render the words, Have we any pretext or excuse for ourselves? But this rendering does not cohere with the argument.

The Apostle employs the pronoun we (as usual) to conciliate the Jews, by associating himself with his countrymen. See above, ii. 2.

The περισσὸν or prerogative of the Jews was, that they were the appointed keepers of the books of the Law (v. 2); he now goes on to show that this privilege is, by their sin, made rather an argument for their condemnation, because they have not kept the precepts of the Law, of which they were the appointed Guardians.

— Οὐ πάντως] No; in no wise. Winer, § 61, p. 489. Cp. Matt. xxiv. 22, and below, v. 20.

— προῃτιασάμεθα] we before charged or arraigned both Jew and Gentile as under sin. See i. 18; ii. 1.

10. καθὼς γέγραπται] as it is written. His argument against the Jews is grounded on the Jewish Scriptures, as before;

This ground of the Scriptures is properly taken by him,

(1) Because the Jews charged him with disparaging the Law contained in the Scriptures, by his doctrine of Justification by Faith.

(2) Because the custody of the Scriptures was the great privilege of the Jews (v. 1).

(3) Because his doctrine of Justification by Faith establishes the Law contained in those Scriptures.

Accordingly, he repeats the words καθὼς γέγραπται, as it is written, or γέγραπται, or the like, no less than nineteen times in this Epistle: i. 17; ii. 24; iii. 4. 10; iv. 17. 23; viii. 36; ix. 13. 33; x. 5. 15; xi. 8. 26; xii. 19; xiv. 11; xv. 3, 4. 9. 21.

He convinces the Jews of guilt by the testimony of their prophetical Scriptures, especially the Psalms, which denounce punishment on the sin of those who reject Christ.

11. συνιῶν] Matt. xiii. 23. Winer, 75. The form in ω is also used, as ἀφίω, Mark i. 34; xi. 16.

ναν ἅμα ἠχρειώθησαν. οὐκ ἔστι ποιῶν χρηστότητα, οὐκ ἔστιν ἕως ἑνός. 13 g Τάφος ἀνεῳγμένος ὁ λάρυγξ αὐτῶν, ταῖς γλώσσαις αὐτῶν ἐδολιοῦσαν, ἰὸς ἀσπίδων ὑπὸ τὰ χείλη αὐτῶν, 14 h ὧν τὸ στόμα ἀρᾶς καὶ πικρίας γέμει· 15 i ὀξεῖς οἱ πόδες αὐτῶν ἐκχέαι αἷμα· 16 σύντριμμα καὶ ταλαιπωρία ἐν ταῖς ὁδοῖς αὐτῶν, 17 καὶ ὁδὸν εἰρήνης οὐκ ἔγνωσαν, 18 k οὐκ ἔστι φόβος Θεοῦ ἀπέναντι τῶν ὀφθαλμῶν αὐτῶν.

g Ps. 5. 9. & 140. 3.
h Ps. 10. 7.
i Prov. 1. 16. Isa. 59. 7, 8.
k Ps. 36. 1.

19 l Οἴδαμεν δὲ, ὅτι ὅσα ὁ νόμος λέγει, τοῖς ἐν τῷ νόμῳ λαλεῖ· ἵνα πᾶν στόμα φραγῇ, καὶ ὑπόδικος γένηται πᾶς ὁ κόσμος τῷ Θεῷ· 20 m διότι ἐξ ἔργων νόμου οὐ δικαιωθήσεται πᾶσα σὰρξ ἐνώπιον αὐτοῦ. Διὰ γὰρ νόμου ἐπίγνωσις ἁμαρτίας. 21 n Νυνὶ δὲ χωρὶς νόμου δικαιοσύνη Θεοῦ πεφανέρωται, μαρτυρουμένη ὑπὸ τοῦ νόμου καὶ τῶν προφητῶν, 22 o δικαιοσύνη δὲ Θεοῦ, διὰ πίστεως Ἰησοῦ

l Ezek. 16. 63.
m ch. 7. 7. Gal. 2. 16. & 3. 11. Ps. 143. 2. Acts 13. 39. n John 5. 46. Acts 15. 11. & 26. 22. ch. 1. 17.
o ch. 10. 12. Gal. 3. 23. Col. 3. 11.

---

13. ἐδολιοῦσαν] An Hellenistic form. Ps. lxx. 2, ἤλθοσαν. Josh. v. 11, ἐφάγοσαν. So 2 Thess. iii. 6. See Bekker, Anecd. 91. 14. Sturz. de Dialect. p. 60. Winer, § 13, p. 73.

16. σύντριμμα] concussion and bruising together, e. g. of bones; hence it means calamity, affliction, destruction. Levit. xxi. 18. Ps. cxlvii. 3. Job ix. 17. Isa. xxx. 14, LXX.

19. Οἴδαμεν δέ] Now we know that whatsoever the Law (the Old Testament, which he has just been quoting) saith, it saith to them that are under the Law; and therefore the descriptions of sin, which have just been cited from the Old Testament, are to be applied by you, who are Jews, to yourselves, as representing your own guilt before God.

— ὁ νόμος] the Law: Holy Scripture; the Law and the Prophets, and Hagiographa; for he had just been quoting the Psalms and Isaiah: Νόμον λέγει πᾶσαν τὴν παλαιάν. Œcum. See above, Luke xxiv. 44. John viii. 17; xv. 25.

— ἵνα—ὑπόδικος γένηται] in order that all the world (Jews as well as Gentiles) may come under sentence of condemnation before God. Ὑπόδικος means something more than guilty; it is, convicted of guilt, and therefore under penalty for it; τιμωρίαις ὑποκείμενος. Alberti Gloss. N. T.

20. διότι ἐξ ἔργων νόμου – σάρξ] Because no flesh shall be justified in His sight by works of the Law.

Here is the reason, why all mankind, including the Jews, are liable to sentence of condemnation. The Law gives clearer knowledge of sin, but does not enable any one to be sinless, nor provide any expiation for sin.

— Διὰ γὰρ νόμου ἐπίγνωσις ἁμαρτίας] For, through the Law, is a clear knowledge of sin, and nothing more; and sins of knowledge are greater than sins of ignorance. Œcumen.

21 – 26. Νυνὶ δὲ – Ἰησοῦ] But now (in the Christian dispensation) apart from the Law (of Moses), the Righteousness of God, namely, that Righteousness which appertains to God alone (for all men are sinners), and which is not only imputed, but imparted, to men through the Incarnation of Jesus Christ, "the Righteous," Who is the "Lord our Righteousness" (see above, i. 17, and 1 Cor. i. 30), hath been made manifest in the Gospel; that Righteousness which was before attested by the Law and the Prophets; but (δὲ), observe, it is the Righteousness of God, and not of man (see x. 2), for all men sinned in Adam, and all fail of the glory of God (v. 23), and this Righteousness is conveyed through Faith in Jesus Christ unto all, and upon all, so as to extend as a gift to all, and so as to cover all (see Gal. iii. 27), that believe; the Righteousness of God in Christ, the Eternal Word, reaching to all, and flowing like a stream upon all, and cleansing all whose nature He has taken, and who are made members of Him, and so are partakers of the Divine Nature, by Faith. (2 Pet. i. 4.)

For, all alike need a Redeemer; and Christ, "Who is God over all" (ix. 5), has taken the nature of all, and died for all; there is no difference. All sinned, and fall short of the glory of God. Being justified freely by His grace and favour, not by their own works, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, Whom God set forth as a Propitiation through faith, by the shedding of His blood for the manifestation of God's Judicial Righteousness, which might otherwise have been questioned because of the passing over of the former sins (which deserved punishment, and yet did not receive it, being winked at by God) in the forbearance of God, for the manifestation of His Judicial Righteousness in the present season, to the intent that God may be just, and yet also at the same time may be justifying the man who rests on the Faith that is in Jesus; and grows as it were out of that Faith (and not on his own works) as the root of his Christian life.

This passage brings before us the following important truths:

(1) That δικαιοσύνη Θεοῦ, Righteousness, not devised by man for himself, but by God for man, has now been made manifest in the Gospel.

(2) That it is χωρὶς νόμου, apart from the Mosaic Law, independent of the Law,—not of the Law as a rule of Practice, but of the Law as a Covenant. See v. 31.

(3) That it was pre-announced and 'attested' by the previous and preparatory 'witness of the Law and the Prophets,' and therefore is not contrary to 'the Law and the Prophets,' but is the fulfilment of them.

(4) That it is available to all universally by Faith in Christ.

(5) That it is needed by all; for all men sinned. Observe the aorist; all men sinned in Adam, all men fell in him (cp. below, v. 12), and there is no man who sinned not. The universal sinfulness of mankind is summed up as it were in one act. "All sinned, all come short of the glory of God" (v. 23), and cp. v. 2, ἐπ' ἐλπίδι τῆς δόξης τοῦ Θεοῦ.

(6) That it is not purchased or procured by man for himself, but is given freely, by the grace of God; so that God looks on man no longer as he is in his fallen nature, stripped of original righteousness, wounded and naked (as the traveller in the road from Jerusalem to Jericho, see on Luke x. 31); but God beholds man as created anew in Christ, and as invested with the robe of His Righteousness, with Whom the Father is well pleased; and as "accepted in the Beloved." (Eph. i. 6.)

(7) That this Righteousness is given by God's free grace and favour, through the Redemption or Ransom (ἀπολύτρωσις) in Christ Jesus, Who as Jesus, or man, was able to suffer, and also, as Christ, the Son of God, was able to satisfy, for all, whose nature He has taken, and so became our second Adam, and joined our nature to the nature of God.

(8) That this Redemption has been provided for us by God Himself, Who set forth Christ for Himself (προέθετο), so as to satisfy His offended Justice, to be a Propitiatory Victim for our sins.

Some Expositors (Theophyl., Œcumen., Erasmus, Luther, following Theodoret) suppose ἱλαστήριον here to signify the Propitiatorium, the Propitiatory, or the Mercy-Seat, or Throne of Grace, on which God's presence and favour rests, and in which His Shechinah or Glory manifests itself, as it did between the Cherubim overshadowing the Ark (Ps. lxxx. 1), and which is sprinkled by our Great High Priest with His own Blood. (Exod. xxv. 17. Levit. xvi. 14—18.) Cp. Heb. ix. 5.

This exposition deserves consideration, and was adopted by many ancient Interpreters, and has been ably maintained by Philippi, p. 106; but it does not seem so suitable to the context as that which renders ἱλαστήριον a Sin-Offering, or Propitiatory Victim. See the authorities in Fritz., p. 193, and in Meyer, De Wette, and Alf.

For, the fact on which the Apostle here dwells, is the blood-shedding of Christ, by which He paid the price of our Redemption (ἀπολύτρωσις), and appeased the anger of God, and cleansed us from sin, and displayed the sternness of God's Justice and Wrath against it; and showed that the temporary præter-mission (πάρεσις, v. 25) on God's part, of the past sins of mankind, was not due to any indifference on His side to the guilt of sin (as some might have imagined, Ps. x. 12; l. 21), and yet enabled Him, without any compromise of His Justice, to be the Justifier of all who build their foundation on Faith in Jesus, the Saviour of all.

Besides, the word προέθετο, He publicly set forth (cp. Thucyd. ii. 34), is not applicable to the covering of the Mercy-

Χριστοῦ, εἰς πάντας καὶ ἐπὶ πάντας τοὺς πιστεύοντας, οὐ γάρ ἐστι διαστολή, p ch. 11. 32. Gal. 3. 22.
23 p πάντες γὰρ ἥμαρτον, καὶ ὑστεροῦνται τῆς δόξης τοῦ Θεοῦ· q Matt. 20. 28. Eph. 1. 7. & 2. 8. Tit. 3. 5, 7. 1 Pet. 1. 18.
24 q δικαιούμενοι δωρεὰν τῇ αὐτοῦ χάριτι διὰ τῆς ἀπολυτρώσεως τῆς ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ, r Acts 13. 38, 39. Col. 1. 20. 1 John 2. 2. & 4. 10.
25 r ὃν προέθετο ὁ Θεὸς ἱλαστήριον διὰ τῆς πίστεως ἐν τῷ αὐτοῦ αἵματι, εἰς ἔνδειξιν τῆς δικαιοσύνης αὐτοῦ, διὰ τὴν πάρεσιν τῶν προγεγονότων ἁμαρτημάτων
26 ἐν τῇ ἀνοχῇ τοῦ Θεοῦ, πρὸς ἔνδειξιν τῆς δικαιοσύνης αὐτοῦ ἐν τῷ νῦν καιρῷ, εἰς τὸ εἶναι αὐτὸν δίκαιον καὶ δικαιοῦντα τὸν ἐκ πίστεως Ἰησοῦ.

Seat, which was concealed from the People, and even from the Priests, and which is, as its name, ἱλαστήριον, כַּפֹּרֶת, capporeth, or covering (Levit. xvi. 2. Exod. xxv. 17, 18—22. Cp. Heb. ix. 5) signifies, the covering of our sins by Christ's Righteousness, by which ἐπεκαλύφθησαν αἱ ἁμαρτίαι. Rom. iv. 7. 1 John ii. 2.

(9) That the blood of the Son of God was shed for an exhibition of (εἰς ἔνδειξιν) God's Justice,—requiring no less a sacrifice than One of infinite value; and because (διὰ) of the præter-mission (πάρεσιν), passing-by or overlooking of sins that had been committed in past times, which sins had been winked at by God (Acts xvii. 30),—not because He was indifferent to sin, but in His long-suffering (ἀνοχή) to men.

But this præter-mission of sin necessitated such an exhibition of God's hatred against sin, as Christ's Death was, lest men should suppose that God is only merciful, and not also just; and that He will not punish sin; whereas the truth is, that God in Christ is not only the Justifier of sinners, but is also Just in punishing sin.

By this assertion the Apostle also obviates the objections of Jews, and also of Socinians, against the doctrine of the Atonement, as if it were an arbitrary act of severity. He shows that it is grounded on the attributes of the Godhead—Justice and Holiness.

See further, on this doctrine of the Atonement, the notes below on 1 John iv. 10.

The word πάρεσις, the temporary præter-mission (cp. Acts xvii. 30), is to be distinguished from ἄφεσις, total remission. God παρῆκεν ἁμαρτίας before Christ's Passion, but He forgives sins, ἀφίησιν ἁμαρτίας, in, by, and after it. The former was a work of ἀνοχή, or forbearance, the latter of χάρις, or grace.

Whenever He forgave sins under the old Dispensation it was by reason of the Blood of Christ, presupposed, and having a retrospective efficacy. Cp. Heb. ix. 15.

On the sense of πάρεσις, see Grotius de Satisfactione Christi, c. 1, who has well explained this passage; and Fritz. pp. 199, 200; Meyer, p. 117; Trench, Syn. xxxiii.

(10) That this sacrifice was provided for the manifestation of His Justice in the present season (καιρῷ, that of the Gospel dispensation), so that He might be proved to be Just (according to the Moral Law) in punishing the sins of Mankind, represented by His own well-beloved Son, obeying and suffering in their Nature, and as their Proxy; and in accepting a competent satisfaction offered to Him, in amends for the debt due to Him, and in reparation of the injury done to Him; and in consequence thereof acquitting the debtor, and remitting the offence. (Rom. iii. 24. 26.) And therefore Justification is expressed as a result of Christ's redemption,—a proper and immediate effect of our Saviour's Passion. (Rom. v. 9. Eph. i. 7. Col. i. 14.) Cp. Dr. Barrow's Sermon on Justification by Faith, vol. iv. p. 127.

On the doctrine contained in the above Verses, see also above in the Introduction to this Epistle, pp. 186—191. 198.

24. δικαιούμενοι] being justified; observe the present tense: the work of Justification is ever going on, by the application of the cleansing efficacy of Christ's blood to all who lay hold on Him by Faith.

25. ἱλαστήριον] Propitiation. See above on v. 21.

— τῆς πίστεως] So Elz. with B, C, D, E, I, K,—but C*, D*, F, G omit τῆς, and so ℵ.

26. δικαιοῦντα τὸν ἐκ πίστεως Ἰησοῦ] justifying him who builds by Faith on Jesus as his foundation, and springs from Him as from the source of his life, and as the root of his spiritual being. On this use of ἐκ, see i. 17; ii. 18.

On Faith, as the instrument by which we are justified, see below on v. 1, and above, pp. 201–203.

These paragraphs require an investigation of the meaning of the word ΔΙΚΑΙΟΩ, as used by St. Paul.

St. Paul has given a clue for the interpretation of this word by the use he has already made of it in i. 17; ii. 13; iii. 4.

Its sense had also been declared by the usage of the Septuagint Version, where δικαιοῦν is equivalent to הִצְדִּיק (hitsedik), justificavit, and has the force of acquitting or accounting and declaring righteous, in opposition to condemning and pronouncing guilty. Cp. below, viii. 33, with the use of the word by the LXX in Gen. xxxviii. 26; xliv. 16. Exod. xxiii. 7. Deut. xxv. 1. 2 Sam. xv. 4. Ps. lxxxii. 3. Isa. v. 23.

This meaning is further illustrated and confirmed by the use of the word δικαιόω in the Gospels and Acts. See Matt. xi. 19; xii. 37. Luke vii. 29. 35; x. 29; xvi. 15; xviii. 14. Acts xiii. 39, where see note. In all these cases the word δικαιοῦν signifies to account and declare righteous, and to regard and to treat as such. But it does not signify to make righteous.

This appears to be the proper sense of the word δικαιόω, as used by St. Paul.

Here then we are led to advert to the controversies that have arisen in the Church concerning the words Justification and to justify, as applied to man.

It is affirmed by some that they intimate an imputation of the righteousness of another (viz. of Christ) to us.

Others assert that they also represent the infusion of His righteousness (δικαιοσύνη) into us.

Perhaps the truth may best be cleared by saying, that while it is true, that the word δικαιοῦν, strictly rendered, signifies to account righteous by imputation, and not to make righteous by infusion; and that the formal act, wherein Justification, properly understood, consists, is the imputation of the righteousness of Christ to us, and the declaration of our acquittal and restoration to God's favour by virtue of the meritorious acts and sufferings of Christ; yet that in this statement there is no denial, but rather a declaration, that we are also made righteous by our union with Christ, and that God's Righteousness (δικαιοσύνη) is not only imputed, but also is imparted to us in Him who is "the Lord our Righteousness." See above on 1 Cor. i. 30. 2 Cor. v. 21. Rom. i. 17; iii. 21, 22, and below on chap. v. 21.

This work is done by the grace received from God through Christ by the operation of the Holy Ghost; but this work of infusion of grace is not properly to be called Justification, but rather to be designated as Sanctification.

On this point we may refer to the language of Hooker (Serm. ii. on Justification, vol. iii. p. 484), where he examines the doctrines of the Council of Trent, which taught, that Justification itself is a righteousness in us inherent (whereas St. Paul teaches that, if we are faithful, we are to be found in Christ, not having our own righteousness, Phil. iii. 9); and which taught that Grace is applied by good works to the meriting of more Grace and more Justification.

This, says Hooker, is the "mystery of the Man of sin" (p. 489).

And he adds (p. 491), Now concerning the righteousness of Sanctification, we grant that, unless we work, we have it not. Only we distinguish it as a thing in nature different from the righteousness of Justification.

Of the one St. Paul speaks (Rom. iv. 5); of the other, St. John (1 John iii. 7), He that doeth righteousness is righteous.

Of the one, St. Paul proves by Abraham's example that we have it of faith without works (Rom. iv.); of the other, St. James proves by Abraham's example that by works we have it, and not only by Faith (James ii.).

St. Paul doth plainly sever these two parts of Christian Righteousness from one another (Rom. vi. 22), "Being freed from sin, and made servants unto God;"—this is the righteousness of Justification,—"ye have your fruit unto holiness;"—this is the righteousness of Sanctification. By the one we are interested in the right of inheriting; by the other we are brought to the actual possessing of eternal bliss. And so the end of both is Everlasting Life. Hooker.

An appropriate sequel to these words of Hooker may be found in Bp. Andrewes' Sermon on Justification in the name of Christ, "the Lord our Righteousness," Jer. xxiii. 6 (Works, v. pp. 104. 113), where he says, God hath given Christ's very Righteousness to us, to the end that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him. (2 Cor. v. 21.)

In the Scripture there is a double Righteousness set down. Abraham believed, and it was accounted unto him for righteousness. (Gen. xv. 6.) A righteousness accounted. And again in the next line, Abraham will teach his house to do righteousness. A righteousness done. In the New Testament likewise; the 27 Ποῦ οὖν ἡ καύχησις; Ἐξεκλείσθη. Διὰ ποίου νόμου; τῶν ἔργων; Οὐχί· ἀλλὰ διὰ νόμου πίστεως· 28 [s] λογιζόμεθα γὰρ πίστει δικαιοῦσθαι ἄνθρωπον χωρὶς ἔργων νόμου.

[s] Acts 13. 39. Gal. 2. 16 former in one chapter (the fourth to the Romans) no fewer than eleven times, "reputatum est illi ad justitiam" (Rom. iv. 3. 5, 6. 8, 9, 10, 11. 16. 22, 23, 24); the latter in St. John (1 John iii. 7), "He that doeth righteousness is righteous." The former is an act of the Judge declaring or pronouncing righteous; the other is a quality of the party. The one is ours by account or imputation; the other ours by influence or infusion. That both these there are, there is no question. Bp. Andrewes. He then compares this doctrine with the Roman theory. See also vol. v. p. 555.

To these may be added the following from Dr. Barrow "on Justifying Faith" (Serm. iv. vol. iv. pp. 89—117), and particularly "on Justification by Faith" (Serm. v. vol. iv. pp. 117—140).

(1) God, in regard to the obedience and intercession of His beloved Son, is so reconciled to Mankind, that unto every person that doth sincerely believe the Gospel He doth, upon the solemn profession of that Faith, by Baptism entirely remit all past offences, receiving him into His favour. (Acts ii. 38; iii. 19; v. 31. 2 Cor. v. 19. Rom. iii. 24.)

(2) He doth, in regard to the same performances and intercession of His Son, remit sin, and restore such a person, on his repentance, to His favour.

(3) He doth, to each person continuing in steady adherence to the Gospel, afford His Holy Spirit, as a principle productive of all inward sanctity and virtuous dispositions in the heart; that which is by some termed making a person just, infusion into his soul of righteousness. (Rom. viii. 14. Gal. iv. 6. 1 Cor. ii. 12. 2 Tim. ii. 7. Eph. ii. 10; iv. 23.)

The question is, to which of these three acts the word Justification is most properly and strictly applicable; and particularly in what sense is it used by St. Paul?

On this question, he says, after investigating the use of the word in the Ancient Scriptures,

"I do observe and affirm that God's justifying, solely or chiefly, doth import His acquitting us from guilt, condemnation, and punishment, by free pardon and remission of our sins, accounting us and dealing with us as just persons, upright and innocent in His sight."

This he confirms from St. Paul's argument;

"Justification is opposed to condemnation; and as condemnation does not infuse any inherent unrighteousness into man, so neither doth God, formally by Justification, put any inherent righteousness into him. Although to every believer, upon his faith, is bestowed the Spirit of God, as a principle of righteousness,—and such a righteousness doth ever accompany Justification,—yet it doth not seem implied by the word according to St. Paul when he discourseth about Justification by Faith."

And he concludes thus (p. 140):

"All good Christians may be said to have been justified. (Cp. Rom. v. 1. 9. Tit. iii. 7. 1 Cor. vi. 11.)

"(1) They have been justified by a general abolition of their sins, and reception into God's favour in Baptism.

"(2) They have so far enjoyed the virtue of that gracious dispensation, and continued in a justified state, as they have persisted in faith and obedience.

"(3) They have, upon falling into sin, and rising thence by Repentance, been justified by particular remissions; so that, having been justified by Faith, they have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. (Rom. v. 1.)"

These statements may be concluded by a reference to Waterland's Summary View of the Doctrine of Justification (Works, edited by Bp. Van Mildert, vol. ix. pp. 428—470, Oxford, 1832, p. 432, "on the difference between Justification and Sanctification"), the former of which he defines as "God's gracious act towards us," the latter "an infused and inherent quality, God's work within us." Compare what is said above, p. 201.

This doctrine of Justification is to be maintained—

(1) Against Pharisaical pride, claiming justification as a debt for its own deserts. (Rom. iv. 4.)

(2) Against Pelagian presumption, magnifying human ability, and depreciating divine grace.

(3) Against Tridentine Divines (Session vi. can. 32), (1) setting up a merit of congruity in works preceding Justification; and (2) maintaining a merit of condignity with respect to works following Justification (see Art. xiii. of Church of England); and (3) teaching works of Supererogation (see Art. xiv.).

(4) Against Socinians, relying on their own works, and rejecting the propitiation set forth by God through faith in Christ's blood (iii. 25).

(5) Against Antinomians and Solifidians, destroying the Law, as a Rule of Conduct, by a perversion of this doctrine, which, as St. Paul affirms, "establishes the Law," v. 31.

(6) Against Calvinistic and Methodistical Fanaticism, relying on its own personal assurance of God's present and unfailing favour, and thus endeavouring to justify itself.

(7) Against those who despise the instrumentality of the Holy Sacraments, by which the Holy Spirit applies the merits of Christ's death for our Justification. See above, p. 202.

28. λογιζόμεθα γάρ] for we reckon, or rather pronounce, as the sum total of our calculations. See viii. 18.

Γὰρ is in A, D, F, G, and is received by Griesb., Scholz, Lachm., Tisch., Alf., Meyer, for οὖν.

— πίστει δικαιοῦσθαι ἄνθρωπον χωρὶς ἔργων νόμου] that a man is being justified by Faith apart from the works of the Moral Law as a cause of the bestowal of Justification, but not without them as a condition of its continuance. See St. Paul's words (Titus iii. 8), πιστὸς ὁ λόγος, καὶ περὶ τούτων βούλομαί σε διαβεβαιοῦσθαι, ἵνα φροντίζωσι καλῶν ἔργων προΐστασθαι οἱ πεπιστευκότες τῷ Θεῷ· ταῦτά ἐστι τὰ καλὰ καὶ ὠφέλιμα τοῖς ἀνθρώποις. The following words are from Hooker:—

To the imputation of Christ's death for remission of sins we teach Faith alone to be necessary; whereby it is not our meaning to separate thereby Faith from any other quality or duty which God requireth to be matched therewith; but from Faith to seclude, in Justification, the fellowship of worth through precedent works, as St. Paul doth. (Rom. i. 17; v. 1; ix. 32. Gal. ii. 16.)

Nor doth any Faith justify, but that wherewith there is joined both hope and love. Yet justified we are by Faith alone, because there is no man whose works in whole, or in particular, can make him righteous in God's sight. As St. Paul doth dispute for Faith without works, so St. James is urgent for works with Faith.

To be justified, so far as remission of sins, it sufficeth to believe what Another hath wrought for us. But whosoever will see God face to face, let him show his faith by his works; for in this sense Abraham was justified, that is to say, his life was sanctified. Hooker, Book v. Appendix, p. 553.

"Faith doth not shut out Repentance, Love, and the Fear of God, to be joined with Faith in every man that is justified; but it shutteth them out from the office of justifying." Homily on Salvation, Part i.

Cp. also Bp. Beveridge on Art. xi.

Though it is by Faith we are justified, and by Faith only, yet not by such Faith as has no works springing out of it. Every such Faith is a dead Faith. And yet it is not from the works that spring out of Faith, but from the Faith which is the root of works, that all are justified.

The word Faith is used to signify that Theological virtue, or gracious habit, whereby we embrace with our minds and affections the Lord Jesus Christ as the only-begotten Son of God, and alone Saviour of the world, casting ourselves wholly upon the mercy of God through His merits for remission and everlasting salvation. It is that which is commonly called Justifying Faith, whereunto are ascribed in Holy Writ many gracious effects, not as to their primary cause, but as to the instrument whereby we apprehend and apply Christ, whose Merits and Spirit are the true causes of all those blessed effects. Bp. Sanderson (ii. 108).

The causes of our Justification are as follows:—

(1) The Principal cause of our Justification is the Love of God the Father.

(2) The Meritorious cause of our Justification is the active and passive obedience of God the Son.

(3) The Efficient cause is the operation of God the Holy Ghost. (John iii. 5. 1 Cor. vi. 11; xii. 13.)

(4) The Instrumental cause in our Justification is the Ministry of the Word and Sacraments, particularly the Sacrament of Baptism (Acts ii. 38; ix. 6; xxii. 16. Rom. vi. 3), in which is the first reception of Justification, to be afterwards continued by the use of the Word and of the other Sacrament.

(5) The instrumental cause for the reception of Justification on our part is Faith in Christ's blood. (Rom. i. 17; iii. 22. 30; v. 2; ix. 32. Gal. ii. 16; iii. 8. 11. 14. 22. 24. 26; v. 5. Phil. iii. 9.)

Faith is the eye of the soul, which looks to Christ as the only meritorious cause of Justification (as the Israelites did to the brazen serpent, Num. xxi. 8); and it is also the hand which embraces God's promises in Christ, and receives Him into the heart, and lays hold on the white robe of Christ's righteousness

t ch. 4. 2. Gal. 3. 8.

29 Ἢ Ἰουδαίων ὁ Θεὸς μόνον; οὐχὶ δὲ καὶ ἐθνῶν; Ναὶ καὶ ἐθνῶν, 30 t ἐπείπερ εἷς ὁ Θεὸς, ὃς δικαιώσει περιτομὴν ἐκ πίστεως, καὶ ἀκροβυστίαν διὰ τῆς πίστεως.

31 Νόμον οὖν καταργοῦμεν διὰ τῆς πίστεως; Μὴ γένοιτο· ἀλλὰ νόμον ἱστῶμεν.

a Isa. 51. 2.

IV. 1 a Τί οὖν ἐροῦμεν Ἀβραὰμ τὸν πατέρα ἡμῶν εὑρηκέναι κατὰ σάρκα;

(Gal. iii. 27. Rev. vi. 11), and clasps it to itself, and lives and dwells in Christ.

Obedience and Charity are necessary conditions or qualifications in adults for the reception of Justification, but they are not the organs by which it is received.

(6) The Final cause on our side is the remission of our sins (v. 25), and eternal life and glory (2 Pet. i. 3), by virtue and holiness of life (Rom. ix. 23; xv. 7). Cp. Waterland on Justification (ix. pp. 436—453); and see further below, v. 1, and above, Introduction to this Epistle, pp. 198—202.

30. ἐπείπερ] seeing that. So D, E, F, G, I, K, and Elz. A, B, C, D have εἴπερ. But ἐπείπερ is more suitable to the sense, and it is more likely that ἐπείπερ should have been changed by copyists than εἴπερ. Meyer.

— εἷς ὁ Θεός] God is One—the same, always, for all.

— περιτομὴν ἐκ πίστεως, καὶ ἀκροβυστίαν διὰ τῆς πίστεως] The Circumcision, i. e. Jews, or children of Abraham, are justified out of or from the Faith which Abraham their Father had, and which they are supposed to have in him, being already in the Covenant with God in Christ, Who is the Son of Abraham. See John viii. 56.

The Uncircumcision, or Gentiles, οἱ ἔξω, must enter that door of the faith of Abraham, and pass through it (διὰ) in order to be justified.

There is but One Church from the beginning. Abraham and his seed are in the household of faith in Christ, but they must live and act from its spirit, the Heathen must enter the house through the door of that faith in Him.

On the use of the words "Circumcision" and "Uncircumcision," for Jews and Gentiles, see Vorst. de Heb. p. 240.

31. ἀλλὰ νόμον ἱστῶμεν] nay, but we establish the Law of Moses by the Doctrine of Justification by Faith in the meritorious sacrifice of Christ;

This appears as follows:

(1) Because the doctrine of Justification by Faith is grounded on the Testimony of the Law, that "all are under sin" (iii. 21—23: cp. v. 10—19). Cp. Theodoret here.

(2) Because the Sacrifice of Christ on the Cross had been pre-announced in the Law by the Passover, and in all the other Sacrifices of the Law, and had been prefigured by its Types, and had been foretold by the Prophecies of the Law; and therefore that Sacrifice is the fulfilment of the Law, and establishes the Truth of the Law.

(3) Because the Law reveals God as a just Judge who will judge all (ii. 12. 16).

(4) Because being a just Judge, and sin being an offence against His Divine Majesty, He needs an adequate Propitiation for sin, and He cannot, consistently with His attribute of Justice, as revealed in the Law, justify sinners without a Propitiation of infinite value (iii. 26).

(5) Because the Death of Christ, the Son of God, is set forth by God in this doctrine as such a Propitiation.

(6) Because the dignity of the Moral Law is thus displayed in the clearest light, inasmuch as Sin, which is the breaking of the Law (iv. 15), required and received for its expiation a no less sacrifice than the Blood of the Son of God.

(7) Because Christ the Redeemer (v. 24), thus set forth as a Propitiation (v. 25), is so set forth on the ground of His fulfilling all righteousness by His perfect Obedience to the Law, both in doing and suffering.

(8) Because Christ by His perfect obedience to the Commandments of the Law, proved that the requirements of the Law are just and holy, and thus established the moral dignity of the Law.

(9) Because the Doctrine of Justification by Faith in the Sacrifice and Satisfaction made by Christ for sin, obliges men to new degrees of Love to God for His free gift in Christ, and to greater abhorrence of sin, for which Christ suffered the anguish of the Cross, and to new efforts of zeal in showing forth Love to God, which is the fulfilling of the Law (xiii. 10).

(10) Because the Moral Law is to be supposed to desire its own performance. Yet it did not give grace and power for that end. But Faith in Christ procures grace. Therefore Faith fulfils the Law. Cp. Chrys., Œcumen.

(11) Because by Justification, which is conveyed in Baptism, we are engrafted into the Body of Christ, God and Man; and as members of Him we are obliged to be holy as our Head is holy, and to imitate Him in His perfect obedience to the Law, and in doing and suffering according to the Will of God.

(12) Because the Justification bestowed by God on our Faith in Christ, is accompanied, in Baptism, and in the other succeeding means of grace, with a bestowal of new abilities to keep the Law; and thus establishes the Law.

— ἱστῶμεν] So Elz., with D, E, I, K. Some recent Editors have adopted ἱστάνομεν from A, B, C, D, F, G; and with so much authority from the Uncial MSS., there is much in favour of that reading. On the other hand, the remark of another modern learned Expositor is entitled to consideration, who says "that he prefers ἱστῶμεν, because it closes the period with greater gravity and power (than ἱστᾰνῠμε̆ν, especially after two short syllables, νῠμῶν), and corresponds more harmoniously to the preceding καταργοῦμεν, and that it is much to be desired that the Editors of St. Paul's Epistles would pay attention to the symmetrical structure and musical cadences of the Apostle's sentences, and that then no one would be found to allege that he wrote with abrupt and reckless impetuosity." Fritzsche, p. 210.

CH. IV. 1. Τί οὖν ἐροῦμεν—κατὰ σάρκα;] What then shall we say that our father Abraham hath found according to the flesh? What shall we say that he has gained by his own efforts, in the flesh, as distinguished from the grace of God?

The words κατὰ σάρκα, according to the flesh, describe—

(1) Man's working by his own outward act, ἐν σαρκὶ, in the flesh, apart from God's grace (see v. 4), quickening his πνεῦμα, spirit, or inner man. Cp. Theodoret, and compare above, 2 Cor. i. 17; v. 16.

(2) They also refer here to the covenant ratified with Abraham by the seal of circumcision in his flesh (see v. 11), and distinguishing him and his seed, by an outward mark in the flesh, from the rest of the world.

These words contain the statement of an objection.

The Apostle proceeds to answer it by showing,—

(1) that Abraham did not procure Justification for himself by any outward act of his own. For God expressly declares in Scripture that he was justified by Faith (v. 3), that is, by not relying on himself, but by putting his whole trust in God. And

(2) that he did not attain Justification by Circumcision in his flesh. For he was justified before he was circumcised (v. 10).

(3) But what he did, and what he obtained, was due solely to God's grace.

(4) The Jews boasted themselves to be the seed of Abraham (John viii. 33), and they relied on Circumcision, which God instituted as the special mark of Abraham's seed, to distinguish them as the favoured people;

But St. Paul shows that the Gentiles also are children of Abraham, if they imitate his faith (v. 12).

This he proves by showing that Abraham was justified by Faith (v. 3) before the Law was given, and before he received Circumcision (v. 10), and that he was designated by God as the Father of many nations (v. 18), and as the Father of all (v. 16) who partake in his Justification by Faith in Christ (vv. 23, 24).

Abraham was justified by Faith, and not by works. Therefore Justification was not awarded to him as wages due to any external work done by him, but was given him for Faith, which has its groundwork and resting-place in God.

It was by Faith, which has an object external to itself, and that object God, that Abraham was justified. It was by God's Love and Power, laid hold on by Abraham's Faith, and not by any act proceeding forth from Abraham's own flesh, that Abraham was justified.

It must be remembered, that the Apostle is here arguing with the Jews, who evolved Justification out of themselves, and grounded it on their own presumed Merits, and on their fancied Obedience to the works of the Law; and imagined that they could earn heaven, as wages due to their own works, and that, therefore, they did not need a Redeemer; and that, consequently, the new dispensation of Grace, in the Gospel of Christ, was superfluous.

2 εἰ γὰρ Ἀβραὰμ ἐξ ἔργων ἐδικαιώθη, ἔχει καύχημα, ἀλλ' οὐ πρὸς Θεόν· 3 [b] τί γὰρ ἡ γραφὴ λέγει; Ἐπίστευσε δὲ Ἀβραὰμ τῷ Θεῷ, καὶ ἐλογίσθη αὐτῷ εἰς δικαιοσύνην. 4 [c] Τῷ δὲ ἐργαζομένῳ ὁ μισθὸς οὐ λογίζεται κατὰ χάριν, ἀλλὰ κατὰ ὀφείλημα· 5 τῷ δὲ μὴ ἐργαζομένῳ, πιστεύοντι δὲ ἐπὶ τὸν δικαιοῦντα τὸν ἀσεβῆ, λογίζεται ἡ πίστις αὐτοῦ εἰς δικαιοσύνην. 6 [d] Καθάπερ καὶ Δαυὶδ λέγει τὸν μακαρισμὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ᾧ ὁ Θεὸς λογίζεται δικαιοσύνην χωρὶς ἔργων, 7 Μακάριοι ὧν ἀφέθησαν αἱ ἀνομίαι, καὶ ὧν ἐπεκαλύφθησαν αἱ ἁμαρτίαι, 8 μακάριος ἀνὴρ ᾧ οὐ μὴ λογίσηται Κύριος ἁμαρτίαν.

b Gen. 15. 6. Gal. 3. 6. James 2. 23.
c ch. 11. 6.
d Ps. 32. 1, 2.

9 Ὁ μακαρισμὸς οὖν οὗτος ἐπὶ τὴν περιτομὴν, ἢ καὶ ἐπὶ τὴν ἀκροβυστίαν; λέγομεν γὰρ ὅτι ἐλογίσθη τῷ Ἀβραὰμ ἡ πίστις εἰς δικαιοσύνην. 10 Πῶς οὖν ἐλογίσθη; ἐν περιτομῇ ὄντι, ἢ ἐν ἀκροβυστίᾳ; Οὐκ ἐν περιτομῇ, ἀλλ' ἐν ἀκροβυστίᾳ· 11 [e] καὶ σημεῖον ἔλαβε περιτομῆς, σφραγῖδα τῆς δικαιοσύνης τῆς πίστεως τῆς ἐν τῇ ἀκροβυστίᾳ, εἰς τὸ εἶναι αὐτὸν πατέρα πάντων τῶν πιστευόντων δι' ἀκροβυστίας, εἰς τὸ λογισθῆναι καὶ αὐτοῖς τὴν δικαιοσύνην, 12 καὶ πατέρα περιτομῆς, τοῖς οὐκ ἐκ περιτομῆς μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοῖς στοιχοῦσι τοῖς ἴχνεσι τῆς ἐν ἀκροβυστίᾳ πίστεως τοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῶν Ἀβραάμ. 13 [f] Οὐ γὰρ διὰ

e Gen. 17. 11. Gal. 3. 7.
f Gen. 15. 6. & 17. 2, &c. Gal. 3. 18.

St. Paul therefore shows them, that even Abraham their Father did not earn Justification as a debt due to his works, but was justified by faith in God.

— πατέρα] A, B, C have προπάτορα, and so Lachm.

A, C, D, F, G have εὑρηκέναι Ἀβραὰμ, which is adopted by Lachmann, but that reading seems to have been an alteration in order to combine Ἀβραὰμ and κατὰ σάρκα.

2. ἔχει καύχημα, ἀλλ' οὐ πρὸς Θεόν] he hath a ground for glorying, but not with respect to God.

Some Expositors place a full stop at καύχημα, and begin a new sentence at ἀλλ' οὐ πρὸς Θεόν.

The construction then would be, Abraham hath a ground for glorying. But he hath not any such ground before God. For, God Himself testifies in Holy Scripture, that Abraham was justified by Faith, and not by works.

But there is another interpretation of this passage, which is recommended by the majority of ancient Greek interpreters (Theodoret, Chrys., Œcumen., Theophyl), and is also received by some modern Expositors (e. g. Meyer, p. 126), as follows:

If Abraham was justified by his own works, then he hath matter for glorying in himself, and in his own flesh (σὰρξ) and independent strength, but not with regard to God—that is, irrespectively of God, in Whom alone man ought to glory (1 Cor. i. 31).

But such a supposition (argues the Apostle) is contrary to the declaration of God Himself. For, what saith the Scripture? Abraham believed in God, and that was reckoned to him for righteousness.

The Scripture therefore grounds Abraham's Justification upon that which is relative to God (πρὸς Θεόν), viz. Faith, and which has its foundation in God, and not in Abraham himself.

This Exposition is confirmed by the repetition of the word God. Holy Scripture founds Abraham's righteousness in his belief in God. But if he were justified by any works of his own, his Justification would spring from himself, and not be derived from God. It would be something independent and absolute in himself, and not dependent on, and relative to, God (πρὸς Θεόν).

This Interpretation seems to be preferable, as having more authority in its favour, and as best cohering with the structure of the sentence; and the words πρὸς Θεὸν are better rendered in respect to God, than before God, or in the eye of God.

3. ἡ γραφὴ] the Scripture (Gen. xv. 6). Abraham did not receive Circumcision till thirteen years after this sentence of his Justification by Faith had been pronounced by the divine oracle upon him. See Gen. xvii. 24, 25.

— Ἐπίστευσε] he believed. He resolved all into the promise of God, and he grounded every thing on the faithfulness of God. He did not rely on himself, but he built every thing on Him. And he did this, although what was promised by God seemed to be impossible, and, humanly speaking, was impossible. Thus he became an example of Faith, and the Father of the Faithful.

The prerogative of God extendeth as well to the Reason, as to the Will, of man; so that, as we are to obey His Law, though we find a reluctation in our Will, we are to believe His Word, though we find a reluctation in our Reason. For if we believe only what is agreeable to our sense, we give consent to the matter, and not to the Author. But that "Faith which was accounted to Abraham for Righteousness" was of such a point, as whereat Sarah laughed, who therein was an image of Natural Reason. Lord Bacon (Advancement of Learning, p. 256).

4. ὀφείλημα] debt. Elz. prefixes τὸ, which is not in the best MSS.

6. χωρὶς ἔργων] apart from works.

7. Μακάριοι] Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered. He refers them to the example of Abraham, and the beatitudes of David (Ps. xxxii. 1, 2). Another proof that he does not disparage the Law.

On the difference between forgiveness of sins, and covering of sins, see below on James v. 20.

9. Ὁ μακαρισμὸς—ἀκροβυστίαν;] Is then this declaration of blessedness pronounced upon the Circumcision only, namely, upon the Jews alone, or upon the Uncircumcision, that is, upon the Gentiles, also?

On περιτομὴ, thus used, see iii. 30. On μακαρισμὸς, see above, Gal. iv. 15.

10. Οὐκ ἐν περιτομῇ] Not when he was in Circumcision. See on v. 3.

11. σφραγῖδα] a seal; "signaculum rei actæ, non pignus agendæ;" a seal of the justification which he had already received by his faith already existing, and not an instrument of righteousness to be received; οὐ δικαιοσύνης ποιητικήν. Œcumen.

— τῶν πιστευόντων δι' ἀκροβυστίας] of those who believe in God through uncircumcision; that is, those who have not the same benefits as the Jews, and overcome the hindrances of heathenism, and accept the Gospel, and profess their faith in Christ.

On this use of διὰ, through, see ii. 27.

— τὴν δικαιοσύνην] the same righteousness.

12. τοῖς οὐκ ἐκ περιτομῆς μόνον, κ.τ.λ.] to them who are not only of the Circumcision, but to them also who walk in the steps of the faith of our Father Abraham, which he had while in uncircumcision.

This Scripture declares the important truth, that there is but One Visible Church of God from the beginning:

All the Saints who ever lived belong to the Church. For let us not suppose that Abraham, who lived so long before Christ's birth, does not belong to us who were made Christians long after the Passion of Christ. For the Apostle says we are children of Abraham, by imitating the faith of Abraham. If, then, we are admitted to the Church by imitating Abraham, shall we exclude him from the Church? Augustine (Serm. 4).

Observe also, that the place of peace and joy, to which the departed spirits of the righteous are carried by Angels, after that they are delivered by death from the burden of the Flesh, and in which they abide together till the glorious Resurrection of their bodies, is called by Our Lord Himself in the Gospel, Abraham's Bosom. See Luke xvi. 22.

13. Οὐ διὰ νόμου] The promise to Abraham was not through νόμου ἡ ἐπαγγελία τῷ Ἀβραὰμ ἢ τῷ σπέρματι αὐτοῦ, τὸ κληρονόμον αὐτὸν εἶναι κόσμου, ἀλλὰ διὰ δικαιοσύνης πίστεως. 14 Εἰ γὰρ οἱ ἐκ νόμου κληρονόμοι, κεκένωται ἡ πίστις, καὶ κατήργηται ἡ ἐπαγγελία· 15 [g] ὁ γὰρ νόμος ὀργὴν κατεργάζεται· οὗ δὲ οὐκ ἔστι νόμος, οὐδὲ παράβασις.

16 [h] Διὰ τοῦτο ἐκ πίστεως, ἵνα κατὰ χάριν, εἰς τὸ εἶναι βεβαίαν τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν παντὶ τῷ σπέρματι, οὐ τῷ ἐκ τοῦ νόμου μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῷ ἐκ πίστεως Ἀβραὰμ, ὅς ἐστι πατὴρ πάντων ἡμῶν, 17 [i] καθὼς γέγραπται, Ὅτι πατέρα πολλῶν ἐθνῶν τέθεικά σε, κατέναντι οὗ ἐπίστευσε Θεοῦ, τοῦ ζωοποιοῦντος τοὺς νεκροὺς, καὶ καλοῦντος τὰ μὴ ὄντα ὡς ὄντα· 18 [j] ὃς παρ' ἐλπίδα ἐπ' ἐλπίδι ἐπίστευσεν, εἰς τὸ γενέσθαι αὐτὸν πατέρα πολλῶν ἐθνῶν, κατὰ τὸ εἰρημένον, Οὕτως ἔσται τὸ σπέρμα σου, 19 [k] καὶ μὴ ἀσθενήσας τῇ πίστει οὐ κατενόησε τὸ ἑαυτοῦ σῶμα ἤδη νενεκρωμένον ἑκατονταέτης που ὑπάρχων, καὶ τὴν νέκρωσιν τῆς μήτρας Σάρρας, 20 [l] εἰς δὲ τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν τοῦ Θεοῦ οὐ διεκρίθη τῇ ἀπιστίᾳ, ἀλλ' ἐνεδυναμώθη τῇ πίστει, δοὺς δόξαν τῷ Θεῷ, 21 [m] καὶ πληροφορηθεὶς ὅτι ὃ ἐπήγγελται δυνατός ἐστι καὶ ποιῆσαι· 22 διὸ καὶ ἐλογίσθη αὐτῷ εἰς δικαιοσύνην.

23 [n] Οὐκ ἐγράφη δὲ δι' αὐτὸν μόνον, ὅτι ἐλογίσθη αὐτῷ, 24 [o] ἀλλὰ καὶ δι' ἡμᾶς, οἷς μέλλει λογίζεσθαι τοῖς πιστεύουσιν ἐπὶ τὸν ἐγείραντα Ἰησοῦν τὸν Κύριον ἡμῶν ἐκ νεκρῶν, 25 [p] ὃς παρεδόθη διὰ τὰ παραπτώματα ἡμῶν, καὶ ἠγέρθη διὰ τὴν δικαίωσιν ἡμῶν.

g ch. 3. 20. & 5. 13, 20. & 7. 8, 10. John 15. 22. 1 Cor. 15. 56. 2 Cor. 3. 7, 9.
h Gal. 3. 16, 18, 30.
i Gen. 17. 5. Heb. 11. 12.
j Gen. 15. 4—6.
k Gen. 17. 17. & 18. 11. Heb. 11. 11, 12.
l Heb. 11. 18.
m Ps. 115. 3. Isa. 57. 19. Luke 1. 37. n ch. 15. 4. 1 Cor. 10. 6, 11.
o Acts 2. 24.
p 1 John 1. 7. & 2. 2. Rom. 8. 32. 1 Cor. 15. 17.

---

the Law: it did not come by its means. For the Law had not been given, nor had a single line of Scripture as yet been written, when he was justified.

Abraham was justified

(1) before the institution of Circumcision, and

(2) before the delivery of the Law.

Therefore he was justified by something independent of both, i. e. by Faith in Christ to come.

— κόσμου] Elz. prefixes τοῦ, not in A, B, C, D, E, F, G, and rejected by Griesb., Scholz, Lach., Tisch., Alf.

14. οἱ ἐκ νόμου] those who are of the Law; that is, they who spring forth from it, and rest upon it, as a tree does from, and upon, its root.

Thus οἱ ἐκ νόμου is the opposite to οἱ ἐκ πίστεως, iii. 26; iv. 16; v. 1; x. 6.

If they who endeavour to derive Justification from the Law, and who rely on that for salvation, instead of seeking it from Faith in Christ, are heirs (not "the heirs"), then the Faith and the Promise are voided.

— κεκένωται] hath been made void. Because Faith and the Promise are prior to the Law, and therefore not able to derive any benefit from the Law, which did not then exist (Œcumen.), and also because the Law worketh wrath, and manifests God's anger against sin. And where wrath is, there the Inheritance cannot be.

15. οὗ δὲ οὐκ ἔστι νόμος, οὐδὲ παράβασις] but where there is no Law, there is not even transgression; for the essence of sin is this, that it is a transgression of the Law. See ii. 12; iii. 20; v. 13. 20. 1 Cor. xv. 56. 1 John iii. 4.

Hence, by reason of man's corrupt nature, the Law aggravated his guilt. See below on v. 20, and vii. 7—14. So far is the Law from bringing Justification or acquittal from sin.

Elz. has γὰρ here after οὗ, but A, B, C have δὲ, which is received by Lachm., Fritzsche, Alford.

17. κατέναντι οὗ ἐπίστευσε Θεοῦ] before God, in whose sight he believed.

— ζωοποιοῦντος] quickening in Christ those who are dead in trespasses and sins.

In saying to Abraham, that in him "all Nations should be blessed," Almighty God promised life to all Nations who were then spiritually dead. And He gave him a pledge, by raising the promised seed from Abraham and Sarah, in their old age, when his body and her womb were dead (v. 19). And He has given us a further pledge thereof, by raising the promised Seed, Christ, from the dead (v. 24), Who was delivered to death for our sins, and was raised for our Justification (v. 25).

— καλοῦντος τὰ μὴ ὄντα ὡς ὄντα] calling those things which are not, as though they were.

(1) In His promise to Abraham, God spoke of all Nations, and pronounced them blessed in him. He spoke of those Nations, and called them blessed before they had any being. He described them as having an existence, yes, and a blessed existence, in Abraham's seed, although he in whose seed they were to be blessed was no better than dead on account of his old age, and it seemed impossible that he should have any seed in whom they should be blessed.

God called all Nations blessed in Abraham's seed (which is Christ), as He called Josiah and Cyrus by name (1 Kings xiii. 2. Isa. xliv. 28; xlv. 1), and described their acts before they were born.

(2) The sense of the word calling may also be extended here, so as to convey the idea of calling to Himself, as His own children, those who before the call had no existence; so that, by means of that Divine vocation, they might come into being, and into a blessed existence in Christ, the Seed of Abraham. See above, 1 Cor. i. 24. 26. 28, which affords a clear elucidation of this passage.

18. παρ' ἐλπίδα] against hope, as man, but upon hope in God. Severian.

— εἰς τὸ γενέσθαι] in order that he might become—for he never would have become, if he had not believed; and he believed, in the full hope and confident purpose of being ministerial to such a result.

19. οὐ κατενόησε] he regarded not: οὐκ ἀπεῖδεν εἰς. Theodoret.

— τὴν νέκρωσιν] mortificationem. See above, 2 Cor. iv. 10; more expressive than 'deadness.' When Abraham's own body was alive and vigorous, and when Sarah also was in the freshness and energy of youth, even then, he had no issue; and now in their old age, now that his own body had become dead, and her womb had been made dead, could he hope for a son? But he thought not of those difficulties—but of God's Omnipotence and Truth—and believed His Word: and this faith was imputed to him for righteousness.

21. πληροφορηθεὶς] fully persuaded. See Luke i. 1, and below, xiv. 5.

24. οἷς μέλλει λογίζεσθαι τοῖς πιστεύουσιν] to whom it (faith) will be imputed for righteousness, if we believe on Him Who raised Jesus, our Lord, from the dead,—as He raised Isaac, the child of promise, and type of Christ, from out of the dead body of Abraham, and from the dead womb of Sarah. See v. 19.

25. παρεδόθη] was delivered. See Matt. xx. 28. Gal. i. 4; ii. 20. Rom. v. 8. Eph. v. 2. Tit. ii. 14. Heb. ix. 14; and that this was a sacrifice and satisfaction for the sins of all, to ransom all from guilt and death, see Rom. viii. 32. 1 Tim. ii. 6. Heb. ii. 9, and above, on Matt. xx. 28.

— ἠγέρθη διὰ τὴν δικαίωσιν] He was raised again for our Justification. For if Christ had not been raised, it would not have been evident, that the sacrifice which He offered by His

V. [1] [a] Δικαιωθέντες οὖν ἐκ πίστεως εἰρήνην ἔχομεν πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν διὰ τοῦ death for our sins, had been accepted, as meritorious and satisfactory, by God. See 1 Cor. xv. 17.

[a] Eph. 2. 13.

But by raising Him from the dead, God declared that He has accepted that sacrifice as a plenary Propitiation for the sins of the whole world; and that He now regards us as acquitted and justified, and as restored to His favour in Christ, and as sons by adoption in Him risen from the dead; and He has begotten us again in Him to a lively hope of a glorious immortality. Cp. 1 Pet. i. 3. Thus Christ was raised for our Justification.

See above on 2 Cor. v. 15, particularly the quotation from Dr. Barrow. So Bp. Pearson (on the Creed, Art. v.), following Chrysostom here: "By His Death we know that Christ has suffered for sin; by His Resurrection we are assured that the sins for which He suffered were not His own. If no man had been a sinner, He had not died; if He had been a sinner, He had not risen again. But dying for those sins which we had committed, He rose again to show that He had made full satisfaction for them,—that we, believing in Him, might obtain Remission of our sins, and Justification of our persons."

God sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh for sin, condemned sin in the flesh (Rom. viii. 3), and raising up Christ our Surety from the prison of the grave, did actually absolve and manifestly acquit Him from the whole obligation to which He had bound Himself; and in discharging Him, acknowledged that full satisfaction had been made by Him for us. See viii. 34.

Some Interpreters suppose that St. Paul means that Christ was raised because our Justification had been already effected by the sacrifice of His Death. So Bp. Horsley (Serm. i.). Grotius (de Satisf. Christi, c. 1). Dr. Burton on Bp. Bull, Harm. Apost. p. 12.

But this interpretation seems to be at variance with St. Paul's statement, that "if Christ has not been raised, we are still in our sins." (1 Cor. xv. 17.)

It has been said by others (e. g. Newman on Justification, p. 254) that St. Paul affirms that Christ arose for our Justification, because our Justification is through that second Comforter, Whom the Resurrection brought down from heaven.

But the first interpretation is undoubtedly the true one. Christ was raised from the dead for our Justification,—that is, for our acquittal by God, for a public and permanent declaration in the sight of men and of angels, that we who believe in Christ are no longer in a condition of guilt and condemnation; that we are raised together with Him, and are absolved and justified in Him.

Hence arises our obligation to walk in newness of life. "If ye be risen with Christ, seek those things that are above, where Christ sitteth on the Right Hand of God." (Col. iii. 1.)

Hence, also, in the Sacrament of Baptism, where Justification is first consigned to us by God, we are rightly reminded that "Baptism doth represent unto us our Profession, which is to follow the example of our Saviour Christ, and to be made like unto Him; that, as He died and rose again for us, so we, who are baptized, should die from sin, and rise again unto righteousness, continually mortifying all our evil and corrupt affections, and daily proceeding in all virtue and godliness of living." (Office of Public Baptism of Infants.)

Ch. V. 1. Δικαιωθέντες οὖν ἐκ πίστεως] Having therefore been justified by Faith. Having been justified; that is, having been already acquitted and declared just by God. See above, iii. 24.

Observe the aorist tense here. He speaks of Justification as an act already done, and done once; that is, done at the time when we laid hold of Christ by Faith, and made a public profession of our Faith in Him, and received remission of our sins through His blood, and were accounted righteous by virtue of our incorporation in Him; that is, at our Baptism. See above on iii. 22—24, and Introduction to this Epistle, pp. 201—3; and note above on 1 Cor. vi. 11.

— ἐκ πίστεως] by Faith: that is, from Faith or dependence on God, and not on ourselves, as the root and spring (on our part) of Justification.

On this subject of Justification by Faith (in addition to the references in the preceding note), we may cite the following important testimony of one of St. Paul's fellow-labourers, who says:

The ancient Patriarchs were not glorified or magnified by means of themselves or their own works, or by any acts of righteousness that they wrought, but by the will of God. Likewise we, who have been called through His will in Christ Jesus, are being justified (δικαιούμεθα), not by means of ourselves, nor through our own wisdom, prudence, holiness, or works which we have done in piety of heart, but through Faith, by means of which the Omnipotent God justified (ἐδικαίωσεν) all from the beginning of the world. Clemens Rom. 32.

That the Faith which justifies is grounded on the merits of Christ alone, is thus declared by another primitive writer: "In whom can we who are unrighteous be justified, except in the Son of God alone?" (Epist. ad Diognet. 9),—and the principal cause of our Justification is to be found in God's mere mercy and love to us. "Nostra justitia non ex proprio merito sed Dei consistit misericordiâ" (Jerome, adv. Pelag. i. 3); and it is laid hold on and applied, on our side, by the spiritual organ of Faith. "Non in hominis merito, sed in Dei gratiâ est justitia, Qui, sine legis operibus, credentium suscipit Fidem." Jerome (adv. Pelag. ii. 7), and (ad Gal. iii.) "Solâ fide justificati sunt credentes."

To this may be annexed the following statement from two of our best divines, Richard Hooker, and Dr. Waterland:

The general cause which hath procured our remission of sins is the blood of Christ. Therefore in His blood we are justified, that is to say, cleared, and acquitted from all sin.

The condition required in us for our personal qualification hereunto is Faith.

Sin, both original and actual, committed before belief in the promise of salvation through Jesus Christ, is through the mere mercy of God taken away from them which believe. Justified they are, and that not in reward of their good, but through the pardon of their evil, works.

For, albeit they have disobeyed God, yet our Saviour's Death and Obedience performed in their behalf doth redound to them. By believing it they make the benefit thereof to become their own; so that this only thing is imputed unto them for righteousness, because to remission of sins there is nothing else required.

Remission of sins is grace, because it is God's own free gift. Faith which qualifieth our minds to receive it is also grace, because it is an effect of His gracious Spirit in us; we are therefore justified by Faith without works, by grace without merit.

Neither is it (as Bellarmine imagineth) a thing impossible that we should attribute any justifying grace to sacraments, except we first renounce the doctrine of justification by faith only. To the imputation of Christ's death for remission of sins, we teach Faith alone necessary; wherein it is not our meaning to separate thereby Faith from any other quality or duty which God requireth to be matched therewith, but from Faith to seclude in justification the fellowship of worth through precedent works, as the Apostle St. Paul doth. Hooker (Appendix, book v. p. 701).

Faith is the instrument or mean in the hand of the recipient, man, by which he receives Justification from God.

It cannot be for nothing that St. Paul so often and so emphatically speaks of man's being justified by Faith, or through Faith, in Christ's blood; and that he particularly notes it of Abraham, that he believed, and that his Faith was counted to him for justification; when he might as easily have said, had he so meant, that man is justified by Faith and Works,—or that Abraham, to whom the Gospel was preached, was justified by Gospel-Faith and Obedience. Besides, it is certain, and is on all hands allowed, that though St. Paul did not directly and expressly oppose Faith to Evangelical Works, yet he comprehended the works of the moral law under those works which he excluded from the office of justifying; and farther, he used such arguments as appear to extend to all kinds of works; for Abraham's works were really evangelical works, and yet they were excluded.

Add to this, that if Justification could come even by evangelical works, without taking in Faith in the meritorious sufferings and satisfaction of a Mediator, then might we have "whereof to glory," as needing no pardon; and then might it be justly said that "Christ died in vain."

It is true, St. Paul insists upon true holiness of heart, and obedience of life, as indispensable conditions of salvation, or justification,—and of that, one would think, there would be no question, among men of any judgment or probity; but the question about conditions is very distinct from the other question about instruments; and therefore both parts may be true, viz. that faith and obedience are equally conditions, and equally indispensable, where opportunities permit,—and yet Faith, over and above, is emphatically the instrument both of receiving and holding justification, or a title to salvation.

Faith is emphatically the instrument whereby we receive the grant of justification. Obedience is equally a condition, or qualification, but not an instrument; not being that act of the mind whereby we look up to God and Christ, and whereby we embrace the promises.

"Faith is the substance of things hoped for" (Heb. xi. 1), as making the things subsist, as it were, with certain effect in the b John 10. 9. & 14. 6. 1 Cor. 15. 1. Eph. 2. 18. & 3. 12. Heb. 3. 6. & 10. 19. c 2 Cor. 12. 10. James 1. 2. d James 1. 3.

Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, [2] [b] δι' οὗ καὶ τὴν προσαγωγὴν ἐσχήκαμεν τῇ πίστει εἰς τὴν χάριν ταύτην ἐν ᾗ ἑστήκαμεν· καὶ καυχώμεθα ἐπ' ἐλπίδι τῆς δόξης τοῦ Θεοῦ· [3] [c] οὐ μόνον δὲ, ἀλλὰ καὶ καυχώμεθα ἐν ταῖς θλίψεσιν, [4] [d] εἰδότες ὅτι ἡ θλῖψις ὑπομονὴν κατεργάζεται, ἡ δὲ ὑπομονὴ δοκιμὴν, ἡ δὲ δοκιμὴ ἐλπίδα, [5] ἡ δὲ ἐλπὶς οὐ καταισχύνει· ὅτι ἡ ἀγάπη τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐκκέχυται ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις ἡμῶν διὰ Πνεύματος ἁγίου τοῦ δοθέντος ἡμῖν.

e Eph. 2. 1. Col. 2. 13. 1 Pet. 3. 18.

[6] [e] Ἔτι γὰρ Χριστὸς, ὄντων ἡμῶν ἀσθενῶν ἔτι, κατὰ καιρὸν ὑπὲρ ἀσεβῶν ἀπέθανε. [7] Μόλις γὰρ ὑπὲρ δικαίου τὶς ἀποθανεῖται, ὑπὲρ γὰρ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ mind. It is the "evidence of things not seen," being, as it were, the eye of the mind, looking to the blood of Christ, and thereby inwardly warming the affections to a firm reliance upon it and acquiescence in it. But this is to be understood of a firm and vigorous Faith, and at the same time well grounded. Faith is said to embrace (salute, welcome) the things promised of God, as things present to view, or near at hand. (Heb. xi. 13.)

---

There is no other faculty, virtue, act, or exercise of the mind, which so properly does it as Faith does; therefore Faith particularly is represented as that by which the Gentile converts laid hold on justification, and brought it home to themselves.

And as Faith is said to have healed several in a bodily sense, so may it be also said to heal men in a spiritual way; that is, to justify, being immediately instrumental in the reception of that grace more than any other virtues are. For as, when persons were healed by looking on the brazen serpent, their eyes were particularly instrumental to their cure, more than the whole body; so Faith, the eye of the mind, is particularly instrumental in this affair, more than the whole body of graces with which it is accompanied; not for any supereminent excellency of faith above every other virtue (for charity is greater), but for its particular aptness, in the very nature of it, to make things distant become near, and to admit them into close embraces.

The Homilies of our Church describe and limit the doctrine thus: "Faith doth not shut out repentance, hope, love, dread, and the fear of God, to be joined with Faith in every man that is justified; but it shutteth them out from the office of justifying;" that is to say, from the office of accepting or receiving it; for as to the office of justifying, in the active sense, that belongs to God only, as the same Homily elsewhere declares; (Homily of Salvation, part ii. pp. 22, 23, and part iii. p. 24. Among the later Homilies, see on the Passion, pp. 347. 349; and concerning the Sacrament, part i. pp. 376. 379. Conf. Nowelli Catech., p. 41. Gul. Forbes, Consid. Modest., pp. 23, 24. 38. Hooker, Disc. on Justific., p. 509. Tyndal, pp. 45. 187. 225. 330, 331. Field, pp. 298. 323. Conf. Augustan. Art. xx. pp. 18, 19. Spanheim, tom. iii. pp. 141. 159. 761. 834. Le Blanc, pp. 126. 267.) The doctrine is there further explained thus: "Because Faith doth directly send us to Christ for remission of our sins; and that, by Faith given us of God, we embrace the promise of God's mercy, and of the remission of our sins (which thing none other of our virtues or works properly doth), therefore the Scripture useth to say, that faith without works doth justify;" not that this is to be understood of a man's being confident of his own election, his own Justification, or his own salvation in particular (which is quite another question, and to be determined by other rules), but of his confiding solely upon the covenant of grace in Christ (not upon his own deservings), with full assurance that so, and so only, he is safe, as long as he behaves accordingly.

Take we due care so to maintain the doctrine of Faith, as not to exclude the necessity of good works, and so to maintain good works, as not to exclude the necessity of Christ's atonement, or the free grace of God. Take we care to perform all evangelical duties to the utmost of our power, aided by God's Spirit; and when we have so done, say that we are unprofitable servants, having no strict claim to a reward, but yet looking for one, and accepting it as a favour, not challenging it as due in any right of our own, due only upon free promise, and that promise made not in consideration of any deserts of ours, but in and through the alone merits, active and passive, of Christ Jesus our Lord. Dr. Waterland (Summary of the Doctrine of Justification, pp. 451—470). Cp. above, Introduction, pp. 201—3.

— ἔχομεν] we have peace; for Christ is our Peace. Eph. ii. 14.

A, B*, C, D, J, K, and also ℵ*, have ἔχωμεν, let us have. And so Scholz, Fritzsche, and Lachmann; not Tisch. nor Alf. And ἔχωμεν seems to be out of place here. On the frequent confusion of ō and ω in the MSS., see above on 1 Cor. xv. 36. 49. Cp. below, Heb. vi. 3; vii. 19. B, F, G, and many Cursives, have ἔχομεν here.

2. τὴν προσαγωγήν] the access; the only access that we can have.

— τῇ πίστει] Not in B, D, F, G, and some Versions and Fathers, and cancelled by Griesb., Tisch., Alf.

— εἰς τὴν χάριν ταύτην] into this state of grace, in which we were placed at our Baptism. Œcumen.

3. ἐν ταῖς θλίψεσιν] in our afflictions. We can exult, not only in our joys present and future, but even in our afflictions; and he adds the reason.

4. ὑπομονήν] patient endurance. 2 Cor. i. 6; vi. 4; xii. 12. Cp. below, the verb, xii. 12.

— δοκιμήν] Not so much experience, as proof. See above on 2 Cor viii. 2, δοκιμὴ θλίψεως. Cp. Phil. ii. 22. In prosperity we ourselves know not whether we love God for His own sake, or for the sake of the temporal blessings which He gives us. Affliction is our touchstone. It is a Lapis Lydius, or βάσανος, which proves us (δοκιμάζει. See above, i. 28; ii. 18. 1 Pet. i. 7. 1 John iv. 1), and shows to ourselves and to others whether we are good coin, or mere κίβδηλα νομίσματα. And it also smelts away, as by fire, our dross, and purifies us. See 1 Pet. i. 7. Job xxiii. 10. Ps. lxvi. 10. Prov. xvii. 3.

Thus δοκιμὴ, or proof, worketh in us hope.

The word δοκιμὴ properly follows the mention of Abraham, who was proved by God by the most severe test; as Œcumen., following up the metaphor of metallurgy, observes, ἐπείρασεν αὐτὸν ὁ Θεὸς, καὶ ἐχώνευσεν χωνείαν φρικτὴν, πῦρ τοῖς ἐγκάτοις ὑφάψας, ὅτι σφᾶξαι προσέταξε τὸν υἱόν.

5. ἐκκέχυται] hath been poured forth as in a stream.

6. Ἔτι—ἔτι] The first ἔτι is in A, C, D*, E, K, and many Cursives; the second ἔτι is in A, B, C, D*, F, G; and this seems to be the true reading, and is to be rendered, Besides, when we were yet weak . . . The first ἔτι introduces a new argument. Cp. Luke xiv. 26. Acts ii. 26; xxi. 28.

— κατὰ καιρόν] at the season,

(1) when we were reduced almost to despair. Eph. ii. 12.

(2) and which had been pre-defined by ancient Prophecy. See Mark i. 15, πεπλήρωται ὁ καιρός. Tit. i. 3. Eph. i. 10.

(3) and in our season of probation. 2 Cor. vi. 2.

7. Μόλις γὰρ κ.τ.λ.] For scarcely for a righteous man will any one die, yet haply for the good man (or for him that is good) some one doth even adventure to die.

It may be observed here, that

(1) δίκαιος, righteous, and ἀγαθὸς, good, are distinguished, as in Euseb. iv. 11, τὸν μὲν δίκαιον, τὸν δὲ ἀγαθὸν ὑπάρχειν i. e. the one righteous, the other good, merciful, benevolent.

(2) δίκαιος here has not the article, which ἀγαθὸς has;

(3) there is a double reference in these words to our relation to God when Christ died for us. At that time

(1) we were not righteous (δίκαιοι), but sinners (v. 8), and

(2) we were not ἀγαθοὶ, good, but enemies (v. 10).

Hence we arrive at the following exposition.

Scarcely will a person be persuaded to die for a man who is upright in the abstract, (i. e. without any reference to the party dying for him,) though perhaps some may be found who may bring himself to die for the man who is specially and singularly good to him. For instance, Orestes died for Pylades, his alter ego, and Alcestis for Admetus, her husband; and others died for others because they were their cherished friends, or benefactors, ἀγαθοεργοὶ, specially dear and kind to the persons so sacrificing themselves (cp. Horace, Od. iii. 9. 11) as their ἀντίψυχοι. See on 1 Cor. iv. 13, Winer, § 18, and Bp. Taylor on Friendship, § 2.

Hence appears the strength of the Apostle's argument:

(1) Some with difficulty may be found ready to die for one who is strictly just. We were not that, but (as has been shown already) we were guilty before God.

(2) A person peradventure may be found willing to die for the man who is amiable for his goodness, and is the special object of his affections, and endeared to him by special acts of tenderness and benevolence, called by St. Paul ἀγαθωσύνη (xv. 14).

But we could not be said to be in that relation to God and τάχα τὶς καὶ τολμᾷ ἀποθανεῖν· 8 [f] συνίστησι δὲ τὴν ἑαυτοῦ ἀγάπην εἰς ἡμᾶς ὁ Θεὸς, ὅτι, ἔτι ἁμαρτωλῶν ὄντων ἡμῶν, Χριστὸς ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν ἀπέθανε. f John 15. 13. Heb. 9. 15. 1 Pet. 3. 18.

9 [g] Πολλῷ οὖν μᾶλλον δικαιωθέντες νῦν ἐν τῷ αἵματι αὐτοῦ σωθησόμεθα δι' αὐτοῦ ἀπὸ τῆς ὀργῆς. 10 [h] Εἰ γὰρ ἐχθροὶ ὄντες κατηλλάγημεν τῷ Θεῷ διὰ τοῦ θανάτου τοῦ Υἱοῦ αὐτοῦ, πολλῷ μᾶλλον καταλλαγέντες σωθησόμεθα ἐν τῇ ζωῇ αὐτοῦ· 11 οὐ μόνον δὲ, ἀλλὰ καὶ καυχώμενοι ἐν τῷ Θεῷ διὰ τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, δι' οὗ νῦν τὴν καταλλαγὴν ἐλάβομεν· 12 [i] διὰ τοῦτο, ὥσπερ δι' ἑνὸς ἀνθρώπου ἡ ἁμαρτία εἰς τὸν κόσμον εἰσῆλθε, καὶ διὰ τῆς ἁμαρτίας ὁ θάνατος, καὶ οὕτως εἰς πάντας ἀνθρώπους ὁ θάνατος διῆλθεν, ἐφ' ᾧ πάντες ἥμαρτον, 13 [k] ἄχρι γὰρ νόμου ἁμαρτία ἦν ἐν κόσμῳ, ἁμαρτία δὲ οὐκ ἐλλογεῖται g 1 Thess. 1. 10. h 2 Cor. 5. 18. Col. 1. 21, 22. 2 Cor. 4. 10, 11. i Gen. 2. 17. & 3. 6. ch. 6. 23. 1 Cor. 15. 21. k ch. 4. 15.

Christ; we were enemies and rebels against them by our wicked works. (Col. i. 20, 21.) "Herein is love; not that we loved God, but that He loved us, and sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins." (1 John iv. 10.) And therefore St. Paul here adds (v. 10), being yet enemies we were reconciled to God by the death of His Son.

This exposition may receive confirmation even through the errors of some, who misinterpreted this passage in ancient times;

"Quo sensu accipiendum sit (asks S. Jerome) quod in Epistola legimus ad Romanos: Vix enim pro justo quis moritur. Nam pro bono forsitan quis audeat mori?

"Duæ hæreses ex occasione hujus testimonii, diverso quidem errore, sed pari impietate blasphemant; "Marcion enim, qui justum Deum et Creatorem Legis facit et Prophetarum, bonum autem Evangeliorum et Apostolorum, cujus vult esse Filium Christum, duos introducit deos: alterum justum, et alterum bonum. Et pro justo asserit, vel nullos, vel paucos oppetisse mortem. Pro bono autem, id est, Christo, innumerabiles Martyres extitisse.

"Porrò Arius justum ad Christum refert, de quo dictum est: Deus judicium tuum regi da, et justitiam tuam filio regis. (Ps. lxxii. 1.) Et ipse de se in Evangelio: Non enim Pater judicat quemquam; sed omne judicium dedit Filio. (Joh. v. 22.) Et: Ego sicut audio, sic judico. Bonum autem ad Deum Patrem, de quo ipse Filius confitetur: Quid me dicis bonum? Nemo est bonus, nisi unus Deus Pater. (Marc. x. 18.)

"Nonnulli ita interpretantur: Si ille pro nobis impiis mortuus est et peccatoribus, quanto magis nos absque dubitatione pro justo et bono Christo debemus occumbere?" S. Jerome (ad Algasiam, p. 198).

9. ἀπὸ τῆς ὀργῆς] from the wrath—the dreadful wrath of God—the wrath to come.

10. κατηλλάγημεν τῷ Θεῷ] we were reconciled to God. On this doctrine and language, see above, 2 Cor. v. 18.

11. καυχώμενοι] glorying. F, G, καυχῶμεν, and some Fathers and Versions read καυχώμεθα.

— τὴν καταλλαγήν] the at-one-ment. The article τὴν marks that there is no other way of reconciliation with God than by Christ.

12. Διὰ τοῦτο, κ.τ.λ.] For this cause we received reconciliation by Jesus Christ (v. 11), Who is the Second Adam, the source of life and grace to all whose Nature He has taken, and who are engrafted by Baptism into Him; as through one man (Adam) Sin came into (εἰσῆλθεν) the world, and Death through Sin; and thus Death came abroad (διῆλθεν) unto all men, in that all sinned (in Adam). The argument is taken up again—after a parenthesis—in v. 18.

The great truths contained in this Apostolic declaration have been made more manifest, and have been more firmly established, under God's Providence, (blessing the labours of holy men, particularly S. Jerome and S. Augustine,) even through the occasion of that Heresy, by which they were impugned in early times, and which led to a fuller examination of the testimonies of Scripture concerning them—the Pelagian Heresy:

It was affirmed by Pelagius that death is not a consequence of sin: and that Adam would have died, even if he had not sinned. Augustine (Serm. 219).

It was a branch of the error of Pelagius, to think our mortality no punishment inflicted by the hand of the supreme Judge, but a part of that state and condition which, as Creator, He hath imposed on mankind. Hooker (Appendix to book v., where is a short history of the Pelagian controversy).

Connected with this assertion were the other tenets of Pelagius; viz.

(1) That man may be saved by his own deeds and deservings.

(2) That divine Grace, though beneficial in aiding human free-will, is not necessary.

(3) That Infants are born as free from sin as Adam was; and are to be baptized, not because they need regeneration and remission of sins, but in order to be dignified by the sacrament of adoption. See S. Jerome, Epist. 43, ad Ctesiphont. vol. iv. p. 474; and his three Dialogues adv. Pelagianos, vol. iv. pp. 486—546; and the treatises of S. Augustine contained in the Tenth volume of the Benedictine Edition of his works.

The following historical summary is from the Benedictine Preface to S. Jerome's Epist. 43:—

"Pelagius, Brito Monachus, post Arium secessit, novi erroris auctor: Celestinoque ac Juliano fautoribus et adjutoribus multos in suam pertraxit factionem. Is tantum tribuit libero arbitrio, ut diceret, absque gratiâ Christi, solis meritis hominem posse salutem consequi. Atque super hâc re primùm increpatus à fratribus, eatenus cessit admonitioni, ut non excluderet gratiam; sed diceret, hâc accedente faciliùs posse perveniri ad salutem: quasi et absque hâc perveniri posset, licèt difficiliùs. Orationes quæ fierent in Ecclesiâ, vel pro fidelibus, ut supervacuas damnabat, quòd diceret, id quod precatur, sibi quemque suâ industriâ præstare posse. Verùm hoc in Concilio Antiocheno, quum metueret ne damnaretur, recantavit: etiam si non desierit deinceps in scriptis suis eadem docere. Addebat Adæ peccatum nulli nocuisse, nisi ipsi qui commiserat. Omnes infantes tam insontes nasci quàm ipse Adam fuisset conditus à Deo. Baptizandos autem, non ut à peccato exuerentur, quo carerent; sed ut sacramento adoptionis honorarentur. Scripsit tres de fide Trinitatis libros, et eclogas, hoc est, excerptiones ex Libris divinis, in morem indicis per capita digestas. Publicatus hæreticus scripsit in defensionem sui dogmatis. Damnatus est à Pontifice Zosimo insectantibus Afris, et potissimum Augustino reliquias factionis persequente: idque Concilio apud Carthaginem habito ducentorum et quatuordecim Episcoporum. Nam ipse Pelagius, antequàm de hoc pronunciasset Zosimus, jam ab Innocentio damnatus fuerat. Hunc Augustinus tradit suâ tempestate recentissimum hæresiarcharum exstitisse, hominem eloquentiâ, ut apparet, munitum." Compare Art. IX. of the Church of England and the Exposition of it.

— εἰσῆλθε, came in—διῆλθε, came forth in different directions] These two words are very expressive, especially as combined with the word παρεισῆλθε, came in by the side, in v. 20. Sin εἰσῆλθε, Death διῆλθε, and the Mosaic Law παρεισῆλθε.

Sin came into the world by Adam; and so Death came forth in every direction upon all; but the Law of Moses came in only obiter, and, as it were, by a side door.

Sin entered into the world boldly and openly by a royal road and principal Gate, even by Adam himself, and so passed forth into every street of the City of this World, and infected the whole human race. But the Mosaic Law came in only by a postern gate, not by the direct road and highway of the City. See on v. 20.

There never was a time when Mankind was not under a Law;

Adam was under the primeval Law. If he had not been under a Law, he could not have sinned. (See iv. 15.) All who were born in the interval between Adam and Moses were under a Law, though not under the Law of Moses, as such. See ii. 14, and on v. 13 here.

The Moral Law of Moses (the Decalogue) was only a Republication of the Original Law of Morals given by God to man at the beginning. That Republication was necessitated by man's transgressions; by his degeneracy and apostasy from the primeval Code. It came therefore in, as it were, indirectly; and not in the same open and direct way as Sin and Death had done, before the promulgation of the Mosaic Law.

— ἐφ' ᾧ πάντες ἥμαρτον] in that all sinned, or inasmuch as all sinned

1 1 Cor. 15. 21, 22, 45. μὴ ὄντος νόμου, 14 [1] ἀλλὰ ἐβασίλευσεν ὁ θάνατος ἀπὸ Ἀδαμ μέχρι Μωϋσέως καὶ ἐπὶ τοὺς μὴ ἁμαρτήσαντας ἐπὶ τῷ ὁμοιώματι τῆς παραβάσεως Ἀδὰμ, ὅς ἐστι τύπος τοῦ μέλλοντος.

Ἐφ' ᾧ is equivalent to ἐπὶ τούτῳ ὅτι. See 2 Cor. v. 4. Phil. iii. 12.

Observe the aorist tense, ἥμαρτον, they all sinned; that is, at a particular time. And when was that? Doubtless, at the Fall. All men sinned in Adam's sin. All fell in his Fall. Cp. Origen, Chrys., Theophyl., Bengel, Philippi, Meyer.

All men were that one man, Adam. Augustine (de Peccator. merit. c. 1). All men were in him, as a river is in its source, and as a tree is in its root. We are all by nature in the First Adam, as we are all by grace in the Second Adam, Christ. We all fell and died in the first Adam; but, by God's free favour and love, we all rise and live in the Second Adam, Who is the Antitype of the first. See v. 14.

Compare the use of the same tense in a similar sense, with reference to the same subject, in iii. 23, and below in v. 15, ἀπέθανον, all died in and by the transgression of the one man, the natural parent of all, Adam.

See above, on 1 Cor. xv. 22, which is the best commentary on this passage.

This is the true sense of ἥμαρτον here, and is to be carefully borne in mind, as the clue to the Apostle's reasoning in what follows.

13, 14. ἄχρι γὰρ νόμου—Ἀδάμ] for until the publication of the Mosaic Law Sin was in the world; but Sin is not imputed wherever Law does not exist, and therefore, since Sin was imputed to them, it is evident that there existed then a Law, not written on tables like the Law of Moses, but a Law written on the Conscience of Man, and this Law men broke, and so they were guilty of sin. Nay but (ἀλλὰ) Sin not only existed, but it reigned as a king from the days of Adam to those of Moses, even upon those also who did not sin, by actual transgression, as Adam did. Having said that Death diffused itself unto all men, inasmuch as all men sinned in Adam, the common Father of all, he goes on to affirm that Sin, which is the source of Death, was in the world, that is, in mankind universally, from the time of Adam even to the delivery of the Law of Moses.

What was the proof of this?

The proof of the universality of Sin was to be seen in the universality of Death, which is the penalty of sin; and which showed, by its infliction, that sin was imputed to all. All, therefore, must have sinned, because all died.

But what is Sin?

It is the breach of a Law. This is the definition of Sin. "Where there is no Law, there is no transgression." (See iv. 15.) All therefore broke a Law. But how? Some, namely infants, committed no actual sin, as Adam did. Yet even infants died. Sin therefore was imputed to them, although they did not sin by actual transgression in the likeness of the transgression of Adam.

Wherefore, then, was sin imputed to them? Why did infants die? Because they were all in Adam, and sinned in Adam, and broke a Law in Adam, and fell in Adam. Therefore they paid the penalty of sin, which is death.

He thus prepares the way for showing that the Law, delivered by Moses, was not the first, original Law given by God, but that it came in, as it were, only parenthetically and accidentally (παρεισῆλθεν) as a consequence of sin (v. 20), which could not have been committed, and could not have prevailed, even from the beginning, as it did, and have been punished, as it was, by Death, unless there had been contemporaneously and concurrently a Law from the beginning also, the breach of which was Sin, and the penalty of that breach, Death.

He thus also replies to a supposed objection. He had just said that all sinned. But how could this be (it might be asked), when the Law was not yet given? Did you not just now say that where there is no Law there is no transgression (Rom. iv. 15)? How could the Law be transgressed before it existed? How then could all, before and until the Law, be sinners?

The proof of universal sinfulness is from the universal prevalence of Death, which is the punishment of sin. Death reigned as a King, and triumphed as a Conqueror, in the World, from the days of Adam even to those of Moses, the Giver of the Law, over those who did not sin in the likeness of the transgression of Adam, and did not therefore subject themselves to death by actual sin like his. Death reigned and triumphed even over Infants who were incapable of actual sin. (Chrys. Theodoret.) And since Death comes by sin, and is its consequence and penalty, and since Death had dominion and lorded it over all, therefore all are proved to have sinned. And since all could not have sinned by actual transgression, their sinful condition must have been entailed upon them by their descent from the common Parent of all, who is the type, in some respects by similarity, and in others by antithesis or opposition, of Him who was to come, Christ.

As is well said by Hooker (App. book v. p. 721), Death, even in new-baptized Infants, yea, in Saints and Martyrs, we must acknowledge to be a punishment, which God inflicteth in judgment, and not in fury, but yet a punishment.

In opposition to the argument of the Apostle, Pelagius said that our Death is not from sin, but from Nature; and that Adam would have died, even if he had not sinned. See above, preceding note.

The Apostle, then, having laid the foundation in the fact of Universal Sinfulness, proved from the universality of Death, builds upon it the doctrine of Universal Redemption.

On this fact of Original Sin passing from Adam upon all his descendants, the Church grounds her practice of Baptism of Infants, who are thereby grafted in Christ;

Why do Infants die? As to their own deeds they are innocent. They have no sin but what they derive from Adam. But to them the Grace of Christ is necessary, in order that they who are dead in Adam may live in Christ; and that they who are tainted in their birth, may be cleansed in their new birth. Augustine (c. Julian. Pelagian. iii. 3).

The first man, Adam, tainted all his progeny. Therefore welcome, O welcome, be to the Second Adam! Let Him come Who liveth, that He may find us who are dead. Let Him die for us, in order to succour us who are dead, and to rescue us from death, and raise us to life, and destroy death by dying. His Grace is the only Grace which redeems Infants and men, the small and the great together. Augustine.

The following is from S. Augustine's contemporary and fellow-labourer in the same controversy:—

Critob. Dic, quæso, et me omni libera quæstione, quare infantuli baptizentur?

Attic. Ut eis peccata in baptismate dimittantur.

Crit. Quid enim commeruere peccati? Quisquamne solvitur non ligatus?

Att. Me interrogas? Respondebit tibi Evangelica tuba, Doctor Gentium, vas aureum in toto orbe resplendens: Regnavit mors ab Adam, usque ad Moysen; etiam in eos, qui non peccaverunt, in similitudinem prævaricationis Adam, qui est forma futuri. Quòd si objeceris dici, esse aliquos qui non peccaverunt; intellige eos illud non peccasse peccatum, quod peccavit Adam prævaricando in Paradiso præceptum Dei. Cæterùm omnes homines, aut antiqui propagatoris Adam, aut suo nomine tenentur obnoxii. Qui parvulus est, parentis in baptismo vinculo solvitur. Qui ejus ætatis est, quæ potest sapere, et alieno et suo, Christi sanguine liberatur. Ac ne me putes hæretico sensu hoc intelligere, beatus Martyr Cyprianus, in Epistolâ quam scribit ad Episcopum Fidum de Infantibus baptizandis hæc memorat: "Porrò autem si etiam gravissimis delictoribus, et in Deum multò antè peccantibus, quum postea crediderint, remissio peccatorum datur; et à baptismo atque gratiâ nemo prohibetur: quanto magis prohiberi non debet infans, qui recens natus nihil peccavit, nisi quòd secundùm Adam carnaliter natus, contagium mortis antiquæ primâ nativitate contraxit? Qui ad remissionem peccatorum accipiendam hoc ipso faciliùs accedit, quòd illi remittuntur non propria, sed aliena peccata; et idcirco, frater charissime, hæc fuit in Concilio nostra sententia, à baptismo atque gratiâ Dei, qui omnibus misericors et benignus et pius est, neminem per nos debere prohiberi."

Scripsit dudum vir sanctus et eloquens Episcopus Augustinus ad Marcellinum, duos libros de Infantibus baptizandis contra hæresim vestram, per quam vultis asserere baptizari infantes, non in remissionem peccatorum, sed in regnum cœlorum. Tertium quoque ad eumdem Marcellinum contra eos, qui dicunt idem quod vos, posse hominem sine peccato esse, si velit, absque Dei gratiâ. S. Jerome (adv. Pelagian. Dial. iii. p. 545).

Compare the Preamble of the Office for Baptism of Infants (the strongest practical protest against the Pelagian Heresy) in the Book of Common Prayer.

14. ὅς ἐστι τύπος τοῦ μέλλοντος] who (Adam) is a figure of Him Who was to come, namely, of Christ.

For as the old Adam, by his sin, subjected all men to punishment, although they had not sinned, so Christ justifies all, although they have not done things worthy of Justification. Theophyl.

The Apostle, having declared the doctrine of Original Sin, and the universal liability of all Adam's posterity to death, consequent thereon, next confirms and harmonizes that doctrine, and comforts the heart of Mankind by displaying to them the coun-

15 m Ἀλλ' οὐχ ὡς τὸ παράπτωμα οὕτω καὶ τὸ χάρισμα.
Εἰ γὰρ τῷ τοῦ ἑνὸς παραπτώματι οἱ πολλοὶ ἀπέθανον, πολλῷ μᾶλλον ἡ χάρις τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ ἡ δωρεὰ ἐν χάριτι τῇ τοῦ ἑνὸς ἀνθρώπου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ εἰς τοὺς πολλοὺς ἐπερίσσευσε.

m Isa. 53. 11. Matt. 20. 28. & 26. 28.

16 Καὶ οὐχ ὡς δι' ἑνὸς ἁμαρτήσαντος, τὸ δώρημα· τὸ μὲν γὰρ κρῖμα ἐξ ἑνὸς εἰς κατάκριμα, τὸ δὲ χάρισμα ἐκ πολλῶν παραπτωμάτων εἰς δικαίωμα.

terpart of it in the Universal Redemption effected for them by the Second Adam, Jesus Christ.

After the first and universal ruin consequent on Adam's transgression, in which by one man Sin entered into this World, and Death by Sin, and so Death passed through to all men, in that all sinned (in Adam), there would have been no escape from the dominion of the Devil, no liberation from captivity, no hope of pardon from God, and of reconciliation with Him, no restoration to life, unless the Son of God, Coeternal and Coequal with the Father, had come to seek and save that which was lost (Luke xix. 10), in order that, as Death came by Adam, so Resurrection from the Dead might come by Christ (1 Cor. xv. 22) even to all. For we are not to suppose, that because, according to the inscrutable purpose of God, the Word was made Flesh in these the last days, therefore the Birth of Christ was only profitable to those who live in the last days, and did not pour back its life-giving stream on former ages. No; on the contrary, all past generations of those who worshipped the true God, the whole company of Saints who lived in the holy faith and pleased God, received pardon and life through Christ; and none of the Patriarchs or Prophets, none of the Saints of old, were justified in any other way than by the Redemption achieved for us by our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. S. Leo (Serm. 50, p. 119).

The Doctrine of Original Sin, here stated by St. Paul, is indeed a hard saying, unless it be coupled (as it ought always to be coupled) with the Doctrine of Universal Redemption.

By asserting the doctrine of Original Sin, and of the Universal Sinfulness of mankind in every age, St. Paul has here proved, against his Jewish opponents, the Universal need of a Redeemer. And by passing on to show that this need has been recognized by God, and that a Redeemer has been provided, Who sums up all mankind (even from the beginning of the world) in Himself, by becoming Incarnate, and taking the common nature of all, and Who has paid the debt due for all by His own Passion, and Who was given to us by God in His Love, in order to reconcile us to Himself, and Who died of His own accord for us when we were yet sinners and enemies (see vv. 6—10), the Apostle has taken off the edge of the objection that would otherwise lie to the doctrine of Original Sin.

We are no parties to Adam's sin (says Bp. Andrewes, ii. 214), and yet we all die, because, we are of the same nature whereof he is the first Person. Death came so certainly. And it is good reason Life should do so likewise.

To the question, Can the Resurrection of One (Christ), a thousand six hundred years ago, be the cause of our Rising? it is a good answer, Why not? as well as the Death of one (Adam), five thousand six hundred years ago, be the cause of our dying?

The ground and reason is, that there is like ground and reason of both;

By what law do they die (viz. who do not commit actual sin)? By the law of attainder. And the restoring of men came in the same manner; the Attainder came by the first Adam, the Restoration comes by the second Adam, Christ. Bp. Andrewes.

15. Ἀλλ' οὐχ ὡς τὸ παράπτωμα κ.τ.λ.] But not as was the transgression of Adam, so the free gift of grace in Christ. For the evil of the one has been far surpassed and outweighed by the good of the other. For if the many, that is, all men, died (see on ἥμαρτον, v. 12) by the transgression of the one Adam, much more did the grace of God and His free gift by the grace of the One Man, Who is Jesus (and therefore our Saviour), and is also Christ (the Anointed One, anointed with the full outpouring of the Unction of Grace of the Holy Ghost, shed on Him and by and through Him on all His Members), abound to the many, that is, to all.

Adam, indeed (as he had just said), was a type of Christ. But the Grace (χάρισμα) in Christ, the Second Adam, was far more abundant in its consequences than the sin in the first Adam. For if it is true (εἰ γὰρ), as it is, that all died by the sin of the one father of all, Adam, in a much greater degree did the grace of God overflow upon all; and His gift also overflowed by the grace of the one Saviour of all, Jesus Christ, in Whom dwelleth all the Fulness of the Godhead (Col. ii. 9), and Who has taken our Nature, and into whose Body we all are engrafted, and of Whose Fulness we all receive, and grace for grace. (John i. 16.)

We are more blessed in and by Christ, than we are injured in and by Adam. Theophyl.

Justification and Sanctification in Christ is a far more exuberant work, a more glorious triumph of divine love and mercy, than universal Death, consequent on original Sin from Adam, is of Divine justice and severity.

Adam deprived us of Paradise, but Christ gives us Heaven; and in proportion as Heaven is higher than Paradise, so is our gain in Christ greater than our loss in Adam. Cp. Bp. Andrewes, ii. 153.

Thus, where Sin abounded, there did Grace much more abound.

Besides, the First Adam was only Man; and as Children of Adam we are only men; but the Second Adam is God and Man, and in Him our Nature is joined to the Nature of God, and by His Incarnation, and by our baptismal incorporation into Him, we have been made God's children, and partakers of the divine nature (2 Pet. i. 4), and so are advanced to a far higher dignity than ever Adam enjoyed, or we could have enjoyed as children of Adam.

— οἱ πολλοί] the many, i. e. all. See Winer, p. 100, and the following observations of Dr. R. Bentley (Sermon on 2 Cor. ii. 17, p. 244, ed. 1838):

After the Apostle had said (v. 12), that by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men (εἰς πάντας ἀνθρώπους), for that all have sinned; in the reddition of this sentence (v. 15), he says, for if through the offence (τοῦ ἑνὸς) of one (οἱ πολλοὶ) many be dead (so our Translators), much more the grace of God by (τοῦ ἑνὸς) one man, Jesus Christ, hath abounded (εἰς τοὺς πολλοὺς) unto many. Now who would not wish that they had kept the articles in the version, which they saw in the original? If through the offence of the one (that is, Adam), the many have died, much more the grace of God by the one man Jesus Christ hath abounded unto the many. By this accurate version, some hurtful mistakes about partial redemption and absolute reprobation, had been happily prevented; our English readers had then seen what several of the Fathers saw and testified, that οἱ πολλοί, the many, in an antithesis to the one, are equivalent to πάντες, all (in v. 12), and comprehend the whole multitude, the entire species of mankind, exclusive only of the one. So again (v. 18 and 19 of the same chapter), our Translators have repeated the like mistake, where, when the Apostle had said, that as the offence of one was upon all men (εἰς πάντας ἀνθρώπους) to condemnation, so the righteousness of one was upon ALL MEN to justification; for, adds he, as by (τοῦ ἑνὸς) the one man's disobedience (οἱ πολλοὶ) the many were made sinners, so by the obedience (τοῦ ἑνὸς) of THE ONE (οἱ πολλοὶ) the many shall be made righteous. By this version the reader is admonished and guided to remark that the many in v. 19 are the same as πάντες, all, in the 18th, that is, as before, τῶν πάντων, of the whole race of men, exclusive of himself, agreeably to that of St. John (1 Epist. ii. 2), He is the propitiation for our sins, and not for ours only, but also for those of the WHOLE WORLD; and to that of St. Paul (1 Tim. ii. 6), Christ Jesus, Who gave Himself (ἀντίλυτρον ὑπὲρ πάντων) a ransom for ALL.

16. Καὶ οὐχ κ.τ.λ.] And not, as through one who sinned were the consequences of that sin, so likewise was that which was given in Christ. For the judgment indeed came from one, Adam, to condemnation of his posterity (see v. 18), all mankind; but the free grace in Christ came forth from many transgressions (actually committed by mankind) to their state of acceptance with God.

The sin of Adam brought, by a natural consequence, judgment on himself, and condemnation on his posterity. They were by virtue of their descent from him, in a condemned state. And besides this, they were guilty of many actual sins (παραπτώματα, prævaricationes, transgressions, trespasses, against the Law of God) in their own persons. But Christ not only takes away the guilt of original sin (in their Baptism), but He also remits actual sin, by the cleansing and saving efficacy of His Blood, in the Ministry of Reconciliation, and in the Holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, received with repentance and faith.

On the words δικαίωμα, δικαίωσις, δικαιοσύνη, as used here

17 Εἰ γὰρ τῷ τοῦ ἑνὸς παραπτώματι ὁ θάνατος ἐβασίλευσε διὰ τοῦ ἑνὸς, πολλῷ μᾶλλον οἱ τὴν περισσείαν τῆς χάριτος καὶ τῆς δωρεᾶς τῆς δικαιοσύνης λαμβάνοντες ἐν ζωῇ βασιλεύσουσι διὰ τοῦ ἑνὸς Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ.

18 Ἄρα οὖν ὡς δι' ἑνὸς παραπτώματος εἰς πάντας ἀνθρώπους εἰς κατάκριμα, οὕτω καὶ δι' ἑνὸς δικαιώματος εἰς πάντας ἀνθρώπους εἰς δικαίωσιν ζωῆς. 19 Ὥσπερ γὰρ διὰ τῆς παρακοῆς τοῦ ἑνὸς ἀνθρώπου ἁμαρτωλοὶ κατεστάθησαν οἱ πολλοί, οὕτω καὶ διὰ τῆς ὑπακοῆς τοῦ ἑνὸς δίκαιοι κατασταθήσονται οἱ πολλοί.

n ch. 4. 15. & 7. 8. Gal. 3. 19, 23.

20 n Νόμος δὲ παρεισῆλθεν ἵνα πλεονάσῃ τὸ παράπτωμα. Οὗ δὲ ἐπλεόνασεν and v. 18, it is to be observed that the usual sense of the verb δικαιοῦν in the LXX and New Testament, is to deem and account just and righteous. See above, iii. 4. 24; v. 1.

---

Hence δικαίωμα is that which is accounted just, and signifies,—

(1) what is ordained as such; as a statute or decree. See i. 32; ii. 26; viii. 5. Compare the Latin jubeo, jussum, jus, justum. And

(2) a state of acceptance as righteous by God (Rev. xix. 2), a recognized condition of being counted just and approved by Him.

The word δικαίωσις represents the action of the Legislator or Judge, either

(1) in promulgating a decree as just, or

(2) in declaring a person righteous, and recognizing him as such, i. e. in Justification.

The word δικαιοσύνη signifies the habit or quality of him who is δίκαιος, or righteous, as God is, the Author of all righteousness; or as man, when he is made a member of Christ, "the Lord our Righteousness." See above on i. 17; iii. 21.

The word δικαίωμα must bear the same meaning here as in v. 18; and that meaning, as illustrated by the context, seems to be, a condition of approval, and state of acceptance, as righteous, with God.

17. Εἰ γάρ] For if by the transgression of the one man, Adam, Death reigned as a King over us, by means of that one man, much more shall they, who are the recipients of the superabundance of grace (which in blessing far exceeds the curse inherited from Adam), and of the free gift of righteousness in Christ their Head, "God manifest in the flesh," and who have in those gifts a present pledge of future and eternal glory, reign as kings in life by means of the One man, who is Jesus their Saviour, and the Christ, or Anointed One of God.

Instead of τῷ τοῦ ἑνὸς A, F, G have ἐν ἑνὶ, which is received by Griesb. and Tisch., and D, E have ἐν τῷ ἑνί.

The reading in the text has high authority in its favour, especially that of B, C, I, K, and is retained by Lachm. and Alford.

18. Ἄρα οὖν] Therefore, as through one transgression of Adam, the sentence was unto all men to condemnation, so through one state of acceptance with God, namely, through the justified condition of Jesus Christ "the righteous" (who has been declared by God to be righteous, by His Resurrection from the Dead: see above, iv. 25), and by His Ascension into heaven, and by His Session in glory, in our Human Nature, at God's Right Hand in heaven; and by reason of our baptismal incorporation into Him —the sentence of our condemnation is reversed; and the sentence now is unto all men to Justification of life; namely, to that Justification, which is the beginning of our life in Christ, and has its fuller growth in our Sanctification, and its final consummation in Life everlasting with Him in Heavenly Glory. St. Paul here takes up again the argument of v. 12.

Some learned Expositors render δικαίωμα righteous act here, and Justification in v. 16.

But the word (δικαίωμα) must bear the same sense in both places; and if δικαίωμα is only a righteous act, it can hardly be distinguished from ὑπακοὴ in v. 19.

Besides, it is not so much by Christ's righteous act in dying for us, that we are declared righteous, as by His justified state after His Resurrection, to which that act led. See on iv. 25.

It is by His Resurrection, whereby we rose in Him from the grave, and it is in His glorified humanity that we are recognized by God to be righteous, as seen in Christ risen from the dead. Our δικαίωσις εἰς ζωὴν is a sentence consequent on His δικαίωμα, and His δικαιοσύνη is specially imputed and imparted to us in our Baptism, which is a representation of His Resurrection; and then, by God's act of Justification (δικαίωσις), we enter into a justified state (δικαίωμα), and are solemnly and publicly accepted by God "in the Beloved" (Eph. i. 6).

See the beginning of the next Chapter with reference to Baptism (vi. 2—4).

20. Νόμος δὲ παρεισῆλθεν] But the Law of Moses came in, incidentally. This is an answer to a supposed objection.

If what you have said be true, what was the use of the Law? Do you not condemn the Law, and disparage its Giver, God?

No, replies the Apostle, the Law παρεισῆλθεν, i. e. it came in, as it were, aside and parenthetically, "per occasionem," and not by any direct essential necessity. For the Moral Law given by Moses was only a republication of the Natural Law.

On this point, see Bp. Andrewes on the Ten Commandments, p. 62 (Lond. 1650, fol.), who says, "The Law Moral was known before Moses—written in men's hearts;" and this he proves, going through each commandment of the Decalogue seriatim, pp. 63—65; and above on v. 12.

But by reason of men's corruption and Satan's malice blinding their eyes, their light became dim (p. 68), and they walked in the vanity of their hearts. And then the Moral Law was written on Tables by God. Thus the Law παρεισῆλθεν, as it were per accidens, by occasion of man's sin, by way of digression or episode—it came in, as it were, by a side door (see above on v. 12), and it came in, as it were, into a side-Chapel, i. e. to a particular nation, and not to the general Temple of the World; and it came in merely as a passenger, to tarry only for a short time, as far as it was a special dispensation to a particular Nation, the Jews; and it was not even a full restoration of the Original Law, for it said nothing of many duties, e. g. of Prayer, and it was in its letter mainly negative and prohibitory. It was reserved for the Gospel to display the Moral Law as given at the beginning, and in more than all its original amplitude, dignity, beauty, and purity.

See this proved by Bp. Taylor, Preface to his Life of Christ, pp. xxvi—xl, ed. Lond. 1811.

— ἵνα πλεονάσῃ τὸ παράπτωμα] in order that the transgression might abound. He does not say that the Law came in, in order that sin (ἁμαρτία) might abound; but in order that transgression might abound; παράπτωμα, transgressio, trespass, prævaricatio, is properly a swerving-aside, and declension from a fixed standard of right, or a trespass across a line of demarcation. One and the same act of sin becomes more clearly an act of transgression, in proportion as the Standard of right is more clearly displayed, and the line of demarcation is more clearly drawn.

In the Mosaic Law,—written by the finger of God Himself, and published with visible manifestations of His Majesty,—the Standard of Right (which had been distorted by men's sins) was more clearly set up, and the line of demarcation (which had been almost effaced by the overflowing of iniquity) was clearly traced. And thus sin became more clearly transgression; and the Law was given for this express purpose, that this character of sin, as "delictum," might be evident, and that thus the transgression might be multiplied.

The Law came in, not in order that man might be more sinful, heaven forbid! (Œcumen.) but in order that sin might more clearly be shown to be transgression. It proved the superabundance of the inundation, as graduated posts in a river mark the rising of a flood. St. Paul interprets himself (vii. 13) ἵνα φανῇ ἁμαρτία.

The Law came forth from God to convince the world of its frailty, and of its degeneracy from the original divine Law of primeval Tradition, and from the Law of Conscience and Reason; and in order to chasten and heal men's pride and presumption, and to reduce them to a humble and teachable state, and to call all to Repentance, and to prepare them to receive with gratitude the Gospel of Grace, and to show the gracious mercy of its message, and the priceless value of Christ's Blood, and the blessedness of Faith, so that where Sin had reigned by Death, Grace might reign by Justification to Eternal Life through Christ.

This has been admirably expressed by S. Augustine, describing the moral state of Mankind before the delivery of the Law, and God's design in giving the Law:

"Qui ægrotabant, sanos se esse putabant; acceperunt Legem, quam implere non poterant; didicerunt in quo morbo essent, et imploraverunt manus medici: voluerunt sanari, quia cognoverunt se laborare: quod non cognoscerent, nisi datam Legem implere ἡ ἁμαρτία, ὑπερεπερίσσευσεν ἡ χάρις, [21] ἵνα ὥσπερ ἐβασίλευσεν ἡ ἁμαρτία ἐν τῷ θανάτῳ, οὕτω καὶ ἡ χάρις βασιλεύσῃ διὰ δικαιοσύνης εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον διὰ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν.

VI. [1] [a] Τί οὖν ἐροῦμεν; ἐπιμένωμεν τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ ἵνα ἡ χάρις πλεονάσῃ; [2] [b] Μὴ γένοιτο· οἵτινες ἀπεθάνομεν τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ πῶς ἔτι ζήσομεν ἐν αὐτῇ; [3] [c] Ἢ ἀγνοεῖτε ὅτι ὅσοι ἐβαπτίσθημεν εἰς Χριστὸν Ἰησοῦν, εἰς τὸν θάνατον a ch. 3. 8. & 5. 20. & ver. 15. b ver. 11. Gal. 6. 14. c Gal. 3. 27.

non possent. Innocens enim homo sibi videbatur, et ex ipsâ superbiâ innocentiæ falsæ insanior fiebat. Ad domandam ergo superbiam, et ad denudandam, data est Lex; non ad liberandos ægrotos, sed ad convincendos superbos. Data est Lex, quæ proderet morbos, non quæ tolleret. Utilis ergo erat Lex ad prodenda peccata, quia reus homo abundantiùs factus ex prævaricatione Legis, posset edomitâ superbiâ implorare auxilium miserantis. Attendite Apostolum: Lex subintravit ut abundaret delictum; ubi autem abundavit delictum, superabundavit et gratia. Quid est Lex subintravit ut abundaret delictum? Sicut alio loco dicit, Ubi enim non est Lex, nec prævaricatio (iv. 15). Peccator homo potest dici ante Legem, prævaricator non potest. Cùm autem acceptâ Lege peccaverit, non solùm peccator, sed etiam prævaricator invenitur.

"Cùm ergo prævaricatio adjuncta sit peccato, ideo abundavit delictum. Abundante autem delicto, discit humana superbia tandem subjici, et confiteri Deo, et dicere Infirmus sum. Dicere etiam verba illa Psalmi, quæ non dicit nisi anima humiliata: Ego dixi, Domine, miserere mei, sana animam meam, quoniam peccavi tibi (Ps. xli. 4). Dicat ergo hoc anima infirma, saltem convicta per prævaricationem; et non sanata, sed demonstrata, per Legem." S. Augustine (Serm. 125).

"Ad hoc Lex (Moysis) data est ut superbo infirmitatem suam notam faceret, infirmo pœnitentiam suaderet. Ad hoc Lex data est, ut vulnera ostenderet peccatorum quæ Gratia (Evangelii) benedictione sanaret." Augustine. See on Ps. 102, Tract. 3 in Ioan.

See above, Introduction to the Epistle, pp. 191—193, and Gal. iii. 19, and below, vii. 7. 13. 25.

21. ἐβασίλευσεν] reigned as a King over us. By this word, in which Sin is described as a King opposed to Christ our true King, and as having a Kingdom opposed to the Kingdom of Christ, St. Paul prepares us for his argument founded on this comparison in the next chapter.

— διὰ δικαιοσύνης εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον] for righteousness unto eternal life. Thus Christ is declared to be our Righteousness, not only for our delivery from eternal death, but also for inheritance of eternal life.

This is carefully to be noted, because in this important matter the truth has been obscured by the teaching of a large portion of the Western Church.

See Bp. Andrewes' Sermon on Justification in Christ's Name, "This is the Name whereby He shall be called, The LORD our RIGHTEOUSNESS." (Vol. v. pp. 104—126.)

So far as it concerneth the satisfaction for sin, and our escaping from eternal death, the Church of Rome taketh this Name ("The Lord our Righteousness") aright; and that term, which a great while seemed harsh unto them, now they find no such absurdity in it that Christ's righteousness and merits are imputed to us. So saith Bellarmine: Et hoc modo non esset absurdum, si quis diceret, nobis imputari Christi justitiam et merita, cùm nobis donentur et applicentur, ac si nos ipsi Deo satisfecissemus. (De Justif. 2. 10; 2. 11.) And again, Solus Christus pro salute nostrâ satisfacere potuit, et re ipsâ ex justitiâ satisfecit, et illa satisfactio nobis donatur et applicatur et nostra reputatur, cùm Deo reconciliamur et justificamur.

So that this point is meetly well cleared now. Thus they understand this Name in that part of righteousness which is satisfactory for punishment: and there they say with us, as we with Esay, In JEHOVÂ justitia nostra.

But in the positive justice, or that part thereof which is meritorious for reward, there fall they into a fancy that they may give it over, and suppose that justitia à Domino, "a righteousness from God," they grant, yet inherent in themselves without the righteousness that is in Christ, will serve them; whereof they have a good conceit that it will endure God's justice, and standeth not by acceptation. So by this means shrink they up the Name; and though they leave the full sound, yet take they half the sense from it.

And as we blame them for that, so likewise for this no less, that if they will needs have it a part of justice, they allow not Christ's Name as full in this part as in the former. For there they allow imputation, but here they do not. For I ask, What is the reason why in the other part of satisfaction for sin we need Christ's righteousness to be accounted ours? The reason is, saith Bellarmine, Non acceptat Deus in veram satisfactionem pro peccato nisi justitiam infinitam, quoniam peccatum offensa est infinita. (De Justif. 2. 5.) If that be the reason, that "it must have an infinite satisfaction, because the offence is infinite," we reason, à pari, there must also be an infinite merit, because the reward is no less infinite. Else by what proportion do they proceed, or at what beam do they weigh these twain, that cannot counterpoise an infinite sin but with an infinite satisfaction, and think they can weigh down a reward every way as infinite with a merit, to say the least, surely not infinite? Why should there be a necessary use of the sacrifice of Christ's death for the one, and not a use full as necessary of the oblation of His life for the other? Or how cometh it to pass, that no less than the one will serve to free us from eternal death, and a great deal less will serve to entitle us to eternal life? Is there not as much requisite to purchase for us the crown of glory, as there is to redeem us from the torments of hell? What difference is there? are they not both equal, both alike infinite? Why is His death allowed solely sufficient to put away sin? and why is not His life to be allowed like solely sufficient to bring us to life? If in that the blessed saints themselves,—were their sufferings never so great, yea, though they endured never so cruel martyrdom,—if all those could not serve to satisfy God's justice for their sins, but it is the death of Christ must deliver them; is it not the very same reason, that were their merits never so many, and their life never so holy, yet that by them they could not, nor we cannot, challenge the reward; but it is the life and obedience of Christ that de justitiâ must procure it for us all? For sure it is that Finiti ad infinitum nulla est proportio. Especially if we add hereunto, that as it cannot be denied but to be finite, so withal that the ancient Fathers seem further to be but meanly conceited of it, reckoning it not to be full but defective, nor pure but defiled; and if it be judged by the just judge, districtè or cum districtione examinis; they be S. Gregory's and S. Bernard's words,—indeed, no righteousness at all. (S. Greg. Mor. 9. 14. S. Bernard in Fest. Om. SS. Serm. 1, post. med.)

This then is the interpretation or meaning of this Name, that as well in the one sense as the other Christ is "our righteousness;" and as the prophet Esay putteth it down, in the plural number, in Domino justitiæ nostræ, as it were prophesying of these men, "All our righteousnesses," this as that, one as well as the other, "are in the Lord." (Isa. xlv. 24.) No abatement is to be devised, the Name is not to be mangled or divided, but entirely belongeth to Christ full and whole, and we call Him by it, "JEHOVAH JUSTITIA NOSTRA." (Bp. Andrewes.)

CH. VI. 1. ἐπιμένωμεν τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ κ.τ.λ.] May we continue in sin? Is it right that we should remain in sin, in order that Grace may abound?

Here is another supposed objection.

If, as has just been said (v. 20, 21), where sin abounded Grace did much more abound, may we then continue in sin, in order that Grace may abound?

St. Paul proceeds to reply to this objection raised by the Jews, and also gives a caution against a licentious perversion, on the part of Gentile Christians, of his doctrine of Free Grace into a cloak of Licentiousness. Cp. 1 Pet. ii. 16.

Elz. has ἐπιμενοῦμεν here; but the reading in the text, ἐπιμένωμεν, which is in A, B, C, D, E, F, G, is preferable, as putting the question (involving so monstrous a supposition) more modestly, and as not assuming that the parties supposed are continuing in sin; which all who are Christians have renounced in their Baptism, as he proceeds to show. Cp. v. 15.

2. οἵτινες ἀπεθάνομεν τῇ ἁ.] we who died to sin. Observe the aorist, we who died to sin at a certain time, namely (as he proceeds to show in the next verse), in our Baptism.

Observe also the pronoun οἵτινες, more expressive than οἱ, and involving a logical argument. Since we died to sin, how can we live in it? See i. 25.

3. ὅσοι ἐβαπτίσθημεν εἰς] all we who were baptized into Christ.

To be baptized into Christ is—

(1) To be born anew in Him (Tit. iii. 5), to be incorporated αὐτοῦ ἐβαπτίσθημεν; [4] [d] συνετάφημεν οὖν αὐτῷ διὰ τοῦ βαπτίσματος εἰς τὸν θάνατον, ἵνα, ὥσπερ ἠγέρθη Χριστὸς ἐκ νεκρῶν διὰ τῆς δόξης τοῦ Πατρὸς, οὕτω καὶ ἡμεῖς ἐν καινότητι ζωῆς περιπατήσωμεν. [5] [e] Εἰ γὰρ σύμφυτοι γεγόναμεν τῷ ὁμοιώματι τοῦ θανάτου αὐτοῦ, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῆς ἀναστάσεως ἐσόμεθα, [6] [f] τοῦτο γινώσκοντες, ὅτι ὁ παλαιὸς ἡμῶν ἄνθρωπος συνεσταυρώθη, ἵνα καταργηθῇ τὸ σῶμα τῆς ἁμαρτίας, τοῦ μηκέτι δουλεύειν ἡμᾶς τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ· [7] [g] ὁ γὰρ ἀποθανὼν δεδικαίωται ἀπὸ τῆς ἁμαρτίας.

d 1 Cor. 6. 14. Eph. 4. 22—24. Col. 2. 12. & 3. 10. 1 Pet. 4. 1, 2. e ch. 8. 11. Phil. 3. 10, 11.
f Gal. 2. 20. Eph. 4. 22.
g 1 Pet. 4. 1.

---

by Baptism into His Body (1 Cor. xii. 13), to be made a Member of Him, and a partaker of those blessings which are derived from Him as God and Man.

And (2) to enter into a solemn engagement, and make a public profession of Faith and Obedience to Him, and of Conformity to Him.

— εἰς τὸν θάνατον αὐτοῦ ἐβαπτίσθημεν] we were baptized into His Death.

(1) We were baptized into a belief of the redeeming and saving efficacy of that Death as a propitiation for our sins, and the sins of the whole world.

(2) We were baptized into it so as to partake of its benefits. All baptismal grace flows from one source, the wounded side of Christ dying on the Cross, from which "came forth blood and water" (John xix. 34) for the redemption and cleansing of all those whose nature He took, Who died in that nature for sin, and to deliver them from its guilt and power, in order that they might live by grace, here on earth, a life of holiness, and hereafter live for ever in glory.

(3) Into conformity to it; that is, as Christ died and rose again, so are we therein dead to sin, and alive to God. Being baptized into that death, which was for sin, we, by the terms of our Christian Being, begun in Baptism, are dead unto sin, and alive unto righteousness. Our Baptism pledges us to this. And we should be contradicting the first principles of our existence if we continued in sin. See S. Cyril (in Catenâ, pp. 58, 59).

In virtue of Christ's Baptism in His own blood doth all our Water-Baptism work; and therefore we are baptized into it, into His Cross-Baptism, into His death. And we must die for sin. And we must count ourselves dead unto sin. And that we do, when there is neither action, nor affection, nor any sign of life in us toward sin, no more than there is in a dead body. Bp. Andrewes (iii. 247; v. 431).

In Baptism our sins are drowned and buried. We renounce them and are delivered from them, and leave them there, as the Israelites did their enemies the Egyptians in the depths of the Red Sea. And we emerge from the Baptismal Red Sea of Christ's Blood, in order to enter on the road which leads us to our heavenly Canaan.

From Baptism we rise to newness of life. And whatever was transacted on the Cross of Christ, in His Burial, in his Resurrection, in His Ascension into heaven, was so transacted as to be a configuration of our Christian Life. For because of Christ's Cross, the Apostle says, "They who are Christ's have crucified the flesh with its sinful affections and lusts" (Gal. v. 24); and because of His Burial he says, "We are buried with Him by Baptism into His Death;" because of His Resurrection, "that as Christ rose from the dead, so ought we to walk in newness of life" (Rom. vi. 4); and because of His Ascension and Session at God's right hand, he says, "If ye have risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God" (Col. iii. 1). Augustine.

4. συνετάφημεν] we were buried with Him. Not only did we die with Christ, but we were also buried with Him by our baptism into His death (εἰς τὸν θάνατον); therefore we have not only a negative work, but a positive one also; we have not only died unto sin, but we have risen unto Righteousness. And Burial is necessary as prior to Resurrection. We are therefore "buried with Him in Baptism, wherein also we are risen with Him through the faith of the operation of God" (Col. ii. 12).

5. Εἰ γὰρ σύμφυτοι γεγόναμεν κ.τ.λ.] For if we have become connate (or born together) with Him by the likeness of His death, surely we shall also become connate with Him by the likeness of His resurrection.

The meaning of the term "likeness of Christ's Death" is explained by the words, ὥσπερ as, οὕτω so, used in the preceding verse. We have been already made like to Christ in our Baptism. We have become connate with Him by that likeness, inasmuch as we have died therein to sin, and have been born thereby to the new life in Him, in order that we may grow and bear fruit in Him.

Σύμφυτος, from συμφύω, is connate. See 3 Macc. iii. 22. Sap. xiii. 13. Hence it is used to signify what coalesces with something else, as in Amos ix. 13, LXX, and so signifies what grows together, as Trees in a forest. (Zech. xi. 2, LXX.)

As to its use in secular authors, see Blomf. Æschyl. Ag. 106, 148, and the use of the verb συναφύεσθαι in Xenophon (Cyrop. iv. 3, 4), and to describe the growing together of man and horse in the Centaur, Lucian (Dial. Mort. i. p. 404), εἰς ἓν συμπεφυκότες ἄνθρωπος καὶ θεός. Cp. Fritzsche, p. 370.

The sense here is, We have become connate with Christ by and in the likeness of His Death, in our Baptism. We have been made members of Him, "bone of His bone, and flesh of His flesh" (cp. Eph. v. 30), and we shall also be connate with Him in the likeness of His Resurrection. For "He will then change our vile bodies, so as to be made like unto His own glorious body" (Phil. iii. 21). Cp. 1 Cor. xv. 49. 1 John iii. 2.

Compare note below on James i. 21, ἔμφυτον Λόγον, which affords an excellent illustration of this passage.

Some learned Interpreters construe σύμφυτοι with ὁμοιωματι, and render it "united with the likeness;" but this seems rather to weaken the force of the words, and we can hardly be said to be σύμφυτοι with a thing; but it is an instructive and cheering truth, that we are σύμφυτοι, connate, with a Person, and that Person Christ. And St. Paul himself seems to suggest the supplement of the substantive Χριστῷ after σύμφυτοι, by using the verb συνεσταυρώθη in a similar manner in the next verse.

This sense is expressed by S. Cyril here (in Catenâ, p. 61), τὸ μὲν σύμφυτοι, τὸ οἱονεὶ σύμμορφοι καὶ ταυτοειδεῖς, and Diodorus says (adopting the metaphor from a tree or shrub, φυτὸν, which many ancient Expositors rightly, as it seems, suppose to be used in this passage), "As shrubs (φυτὰ) coalesce one with another, so they who are baptized into Christ's death are united with Him by Faith."

The Apostle regards Christ's death as a tree bearing fruit, and considers us as engrafted on that tree, and thus made partakers of its life and fruitfulness. See Origen. Similarly Chrys., Photius, and others, and the Syriac, and Vulg., and Arabic render σύμφυτοι by "planted together."

6. ὁ παλαιὸς ἡμῶν ἄνθρωπος συνεσταυρώθη] our old man was crucified together with Christ, Who, by the satisfaction and meritorious obedience of His Death, in our nature, and as our Representative, paid the penalty of our sins, and reconciled us to God, and raised us whose nature He has taken, and Who has incorporated us with Himself, Who is God as well as man, and has made us coheirs with Himself the New Man, and has raised us as His members to a higher dignity in the Second Adam than that which we lost in the First Adam, and has infused into us a new life, and enables us by His grace to mortify the deeds of the body, and to bring forth fruit unto holiness. See S. Cyril here.

He did all this in order that we His members might be holy, as He our Head is holy; and that as we have been born anew, by union with the New Man, we should walk in newness of Life.

Thus the Apostle teaches that the doctrine of our New Birth in Baptism is a practical doctrine, and is indeed the root of all Christian Practice. See above on Gal. ii. 20.

— ἵνα καταργηθῇ τὸ σῶμα τῆς ἁμαρτίας] in order that the body of Sin might be destroyed.

Sin is personified by the Apostle; it is represented as a King (vv. 12. 14), and as a Commander; and so the Body of Sin is here our body, so far as it is the seat and instrument of Sin, and the slave of Sin. Cp. Origen (in Cat. p. 68).

Compare the expression τὸ σῶμα τῆς ταπεινώσεως ἡμῶν, "the body of our humiliation" (Phil. iii. 21); that is, our body, so far as it is the seat and sphere of the vileness and debasement of this lower world, as contrasted with the body of future glorification. In neither case is the personal identity of the body destroyed; but the condition and functions of the body are altered.

Our Old Man was crucified with Christ, in order that this Body of Sin might be destroyed in us by Christ's death, the virtue of which was conveyed to us at our Baptism, when we were engrafted into Him.

Therefore the Church teaches in her Catechism that the inward grace of Baptism is "a death unto sin, and a new Birth unto righteousness;" and declares in her Baptismal Office that 8 h Εἰ δὲ ἀπεθάνομεν σὺν Χριστῷ, πιστεύομεν ὅτι καὶ συζήσομεν αὐτῷ, h 2 Tim. 2. 11.

9 i εἰδότες ὅτι Χριστὸς ἐγερθεὶς ἐκ νεκρῶν οὐκ ἔτι ἀποθνήσκει, θάνατος αὐτοῦ i Rev. 1. 18.
οὐκ ἔτι κυριεύει· 10 k ὃ γὰρ ἀπέθανε, τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ ἀπέθανεν ἐφάπαξ, ὃ δὲ ζῇ, ζῇ k Luke 20. 38. Heb. 9. 27, 28.
τῷ Θεῷ.
11 l Οὕτω καὶ ὑμεῖς λογίζεσθε ἑαυτοὺς νεκροὺς μὲν τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ, ζῶντας δὲ τῷ l Gal. 2. 19. 1 Pet. 2. 24.
Θεῷ ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ.
12 Μὴ οὖν βασιλευέτω ἡ ἁμαρτία ἐν τῷ θνητῷ ὑμῶν σώματι, εἰς τὸ ὑπακούειν ταῖς ἐπιθυμίαις αὐτοῦ· 13 m μηδὲ παριστάνετε τὰ μέλη ὑμῶν ὅπλα ἀδικίας τῇ m ch. 12. 1. 1 Pet. 4. 2.
ἁμαρτίᾳ, ἀλλὰ παραστήσατε ἑαυτοὺς τῷ Θεῷ, ὡς ἐκ νεκρῶν ζῶντας, καὶ τὰ μέλη ὑμῶν ὅπλα δικαιοσύνης τῷ Θεῷ· 14 ἁμαρτία γὰρ ὑμῶν οὐ κυριεύσει· οὐ γάρ ἐστε ὑπὸ νόμον, ἀλλὰ ὑπὸ χάριν.
15 n Τί οὖν; ἁμαρτήσωμεν, ὅτι οὐκ ἐσμὲν ὑπὸ νόμον, ἀλλὰ ὑπὸ χάριν; n Gal. 2. 18, 19.

---

our "Christian Profession is to follow the example of our Saviour Christ, and to be made like unto Him, that, as He died for us, so should we who are baptized die from sin, and rise again unto righteousness, continually mortifying all our evil and corrupt affections, and daily proceeding in all virtue and godliness of living." And, adopting the language of the Apostle, she prays in her Baptismal Office, "O merciful God, grant that the Old Adam in this child may be so buried, that the New Man may be raised up in him; grant that all carnal affections may die in him, and that all things belonging to the Spirit may live and grow in him; grant that he being dead unto sin, and living unto righteousness, and being buried with Christ in His death, may crucify the old man, and utterly abolish the whole body of sin; and that as he is made partaker of the death of Thy Son, he may also be partaker of His resurrection."

St. Paul does not say, and this prayer does not affirm, that the body of sin has been already utterly abolished, but that a power has been given us to strive against it, and to be no longer, what we were before, the Slaves of Sin as our Master, the Soldiers of Sin as our Leader. "Quamdiu vivis, peccatum necesse est esse in membris tuis. Saltem illi regnum auferatur; non fiat quod jubet." Augustine (in Ioan. Tract. 41).

To cease from sin, understanding by "sin," from sin altogether, that is a higher perfection than this life will bear, but, as the Apostle expoundeth himself in the next words, "Ne regnet peccatum" (Rom. vi. 12); that is, from the dominion of sin to cease; we may come thus far "ne regnet," that Sin reign not, wear not a crown, sit not in a throne, hold no parliaments within us, give us no laws,—that we serve it not. (v. 6.) To die to the dominion of sin, that by the grace of God we may, and that we must, account for. Bp. Andrewes (ii. p. 200).

7. ὁ γὰρ ἀποθανών] he that is dead hath been set free from the bondage of sin. "The small and the great are there (in the grave), and the servant is free from his master" (Job iii. 19). Cp. 1 Pet. iv. 1, ὁ παθὼν ἐν σαρκὶ πέπαυται ἁμαρτίας. And S. Basil (de Baptismo, 1, 2, § 15) interprets St. Paul's word δεδικαίωται by ἠλευθέρωται, ἀπήλλακται.

8. Εἰ δὲ ἀπεθάνομεν σὺν Χριστῷ] But if we died with Christ . . in our Baptism. (See v. 3.) This death takes place once. Christ died once, we are baptized once. There is no second Baptism, as there is no second death of Christ. (Diodorus.)

9—11. Χριστὸς ἐγερθείς] Christ being raised from the dead, dieth no more, death hath no more dominion over Him; for the death that He died, He died unto Sin once, but the life that He liveth, He liveth unto God. Likewise reckon ye yourselves to be dead unto Sin, but alive unto God in Christ Jesus. As Christ, having died once, and having risen from the dead, dieth no more again, but liveth eternally to God, so we Christians, who have been baptized into Christ's death, and at our Baptism died once for all to sin, can no more (if we live consistently with our Christian name and profession) re-enter the grave of sin; but having risen from that grave by a spiritual Resurrection in our Baptism, we are pledged to live for ever, in newness of life, to God in Christ.

We who have passed the Red Sea in our Baptism, and have left our ghostly enemies in its waters, cannot return to Egypt, but must march onward to Canaan, if we are true Israelites. Cp. Bp. Andrewes' Sermon on these verses, ii. pp. 187—205.

10. ὃ γὰρ ἀπέθανε, τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ ἀπέθανεν ἐφάπαξ] for that which He died—i. e. the death which He died—He died unto sin once for all.

Christ died unto sin, not as to any hold which sin had on Him personally, but as to that power which sin exercised over the whole human race, of which He was the Representative and Proxy, bearing their sins, and receiving the wages due for those sins, namely Death.

But now, after He has paid once for all that penalty by His Death, Death has no more any claim upon Him; it cannot exercise any more dominion over Him. Cp. Heb. ix. 28, the best comment on this text.

— ὃ δὲ ζῇ] the life which He liveth, He liveth to God. Here is your pattern. Live wholly to God.

— ζῇ τῷ Θεῷ] He liveth to God, Who is everlasting, cp. Luke xx. 38; and therefore He cannot be overcome by Death. He now liveth to God, having been raised by Him from the Grave, and being enthroned at His right hand, and having all power given to Him in heaven and earth (Matt. xxviii. 18), and having all Judgment committed to Him by the Father (John v. 22), till He has put all His enemies, among whom is Death itself, under His feet, when He, as God-Man, will reign with the Father for ever, and so God will be all in all. See 1 Cor. xv. 24—28.

11. μέν] Elz. adds εἶναι, not in A, D, E, F, G. Also Elz. has τῷ Κυρίῳ ἡμῶν after Ἰησοῦ, against the best authorities.

12. ἐν τῷ θνητῷ ὑμῶν σώματι] in your mortal body. The consideration of the mortality of the body is suggested as an argument against submission to the dominion of sin; since the body must soon die, the pleasures of sin, in the body of sin (v. 6), can be but only of short duration; and since death will be followed by Resurrection and Judgment, when we must give an account of the works done in our mortal bodies, and receive bodies clothed with immortal glory, or bodies condemned to everlasting shame.

We have risen now from the death of sin, in order that we may rise from the grave to everlasting glory hereafter. (Theodorus.)

13. ὅπλα] arms. Do not wield arms for sin. Do not be soldiers in an army fighting in such a cause, under such a General; you, who have been enlisted under the banner of the Cross as soldiers of Christ, the Captain of your salvation. See above on v. 6, below on v. 23.

— παραστήσατε] Observe the change of tense from παριστάνετε to παραστήσατε, showing an act to be done once for all, and never to be revoked or to need repetition.

15. Τί οὖν;] What then? He meets an objection started by a Jewish opponent. (Gennadius.) — ἁμαρτήσωμεν] may we commit sin? So A, B, C, D, E, I, K. Elz. ἁμαρτήσομεν (see v. 1). The inadmissible hypothesis is put more gently in the conjunctive.

— οὐκ ἐσμὲν ὑπὸ νόμον] we are not under the Law. Can it then be said that Christians are released from obedience to the Moral Law? Certainly not. This (says Bp. Sanderson, iii. p. 294) is a pestilent error, and of very dangerous consequence. Great offenders this way are the Libertines and Antinomists, who quite cancel the whole Law of God under pretence of Christian Liberty. Cp. Augustine (c. Faustum Manich. libb. xvii. xviii.). Not to wade far into a controversy, it shall suffice to propound one distinction which, well heeded and rightly applied, will clear the whole point concerning the abrogation and the obligation of the Moral Law in the New Testament. The Law then may be considered either as a Rule, or as a Covenant. Christ hath freed all believers from the rigour and curse of the Law considered as a Covenant, but He hath not freed them from obedience to the Law considered as a Rule. We are now translated from the Covenant of the Law into the Covenant of Grace. But what is all this to the Rule? That is still where it was, even as the nature of Good and Evil is still the same. Bp. Sanderson.

Hence St. Paul tells them (v. 18) that by being made free from sin, they have become servants to righteousness; and he condemns ἀνομία, or law-lessness (v. 19).

o John 8. 34. 2 Pet. 2. 19.

Μὴ γένοιτο· [16] ° οὐκ οἴδατε ὅτι ᾧ παριστάνετε ἑαυτοὺς δούλους εἰς ὑπακοήν, δοῦλοί ἐστε ᾧ ὑπακούετε, ἤτοι ἁμαρτίας εἰς θάνατον, ἢ ὑπακοῆς εἰς δικαιοσύνην; [17] Χάρις δὲ τῷ Θεῷ, ὅτι ἦτε δοῦλοι τῆς ἁμαρτίας, ὑπηκούσατε δὲ ἐκ καρδίας εἰς p John 8. 32. 1 Pet. 2. 16. 1 Cor. 7. 22.

ὃν παρεδόθητε τύπον διδαχῆς· [18] p ἐλευθερωθέντες δὲ ἀπὸ τῆς ἁμαρτίας ἐδουλώθητε τῇ δικαιοσύνῃ.

[19] Ἄνθρώπινον λέγω διὰ τὴν ἀσθένειαν τῆς σαρκὸς ὑμῶν. Ὥσπερ γὰρ παρεστήσατε τὰ μέλη ὑμῶν δοῦλα τῇ ἀκαθαρσίᾳ καὶ τῇ ἀνομίᾳ εἰς τὴν ἀνομίαν, οὕτω νῦν παραστήσατε τὰ μέλη ὑμῶν δοῦλα τῇ δικαιοσύνῃ εἰς ἁγιασμόν.

q John 8. 34.

[20] q Ὅτε γὰρ δοῦλοι ἦτε τῆς ἁμαρτίας, ἐλεύθεροι ἦτε τῇ δικαιοσύνῃ.

[21] Τίνα οὖν καρπὸν εἴχετε τότε ἐφ' οἷς νῦν ἐπαισχύνεσθε; τὸ γὰρ τέλος ἐκείνων θάνατος.

[22] Νυνὶ δὲ ἐλευθερωθέντες ἀπὸ τῆς ἁμαρτίας, δουλωθέντες δὲ τῷ Θεῷ, ἔχετε r ch. 5. 2. Gen. 2. 17. 1 Cor. 15. 21. James 1. 15. 1 Pet. 1. 3.

τὸν καρπὸν ὑμῶν εἰς ἁγιασμόν, τὸ δὲ τέλος ζωὴν αἰώνιον. [23] r Τὰ γὰρ ὀψώνια τῆς ἁμαρτίας θάνατος, τὸ δὲ χάρισμα τοῦ Θεοῦ ζωὴ αἰώνιος ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ τῷ Κυρίῳ ἡμῶν.

VII. [1] * Ἢ ἀγνοεῖτε, ἀδελφοί, γινώσκουσι γὰρ νόμον λαλῶ, ὅτι ὁ νόμος κυa 1 Cor. 7. 2, 10, 39.

ριεύει τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, ἐφ' ὅσον χρόνον ζῇ; [2] a ἡ γὰρ ὕπανδρος γυνὴ τῷ ζῶντι

On this point see on Gal. ii. 19; iii. 13, and below on vii. 4—6.

17. Χάρις δὲ τῷ Θεῷ, ὅτι ἦτε] But thanks be to God that ye were formerly, but no longer are. This is a mode of speaking where a bad thing is represented as comparatively good, so that the superiority of what is contrasted with it may appear more clear. See on Matt. xi. 25. Luke x. 21.

Winer (Gr. Gr. 554) resolves it into ὄντες ποτὲ . . . . ὑπηκούσατε. Cp. Luke xxiv. 18.

— εἰς ὃν παρεδόθητε τύπον] to the form into which ye were delivered. You readily obeyed the mould of Christian Faith and Practice, into which, at your baptism, you were poured, as it were, like soft ductile and fluent metal, in order to be cast, and take its form. You obeyed this mould, you were not rigid and obstinate, but were plastic, and pliant, and assumed it readily.

A metaphor suggesting itself to the Apostle in the city where he was writing this Epistle, Corinth, famous for casting statues, &c., in bronze. Cp. vii. 8. The Philosophers of Greece and Rome used a somewhat similar figure, drawn from sculpture and metallurgy, speaking of the ideal εἰκὼν τοῦ καλοῦ, the "effigies, forma, facies, species, honesti." See above on ii. 20, and the Notes on Cicero, de Oratore i. v. 1, and on Aristophanes, Nubes 995, Αἰδοῦς τἄγαλμ' ἀναπλάττειν.

The Christian Life consists in having Christ's image formed in the soul, and in displaying it visibly in the life. Rom. viii. 29. Col. iii. 10.

19. Ἄνθρώπινον λέγω] I am speaking humanly (see Gal. iii. 15; 1 Cor. ix. 8); in discoursing of divine things, I am using similitudes taken from man and his condition, i. e. as a slave, under a hard master, Sin (v. 6. 12. 16, 17), or as dead (v. 2. 7), or as soldiers serving in a camp under a General (see v. 13 and 23). You were slaves to sin once, and then you were in a hard bondage; you have been emancipated by Christ, and your liberty consists in serving Him. Therefore obey Him, and so be free. You died to sin in your baptism, and so you were made alive; but if you fall back into sin, you die. You were once slaves in the household of Sin, receiving wages, which is death (v. 23). Now you are servants of Christ, Who gives you everlasting life.

— διὰ τὴν ἀσθένειαν τῆς σαρκὸς ὑμῶν] on account of the infirmity of your flesh. I am using these figures, drawn from human affairs, not as if they were perfect illustrations of divine things, but on account of the infirmity of your flesh requiring such a mode of instruction. Cp. above, Gal. iv. 13, and 1 Cor. iii. 2.

— τῇ ἀκαθαρσίᾳ καὶ τῇ ἀνομίᾳ] to Impurity, namely, to Sin relative to yourselves as members of Christ, and temples of the Holy Ghost; and to Lawlessness; namely, to Sin, as opposed to God's Law, which you perhaps imagine that you have obeyed, and on which you have placed your hopes of Justification.

— εἰς τὴν ἀνομίαν] unto Lawlessness; as the result of all your labour. Ye yielded your members slaves to Lawlessness (τῇ ἀνομίᾳ), not so as to derive any fruit to yourselves from your service, or as ever to be freed from it, but so as to remain in your abject slavery to it as the sum and substance, the end and reward of all your drudgery. How different from the work of Faith (i. 17), and from the service of God! (vv. 22, 23.)

— ἁγιασμόν] sanctification.

20. ἐλεύθεροι ἦτε τῇ δικαιοσύνῃ] ye were free in regard to Righteousness. Miserable freedom! slavish Liberty! Emancipation from serving God, which is perfect freedom, and deliverance to the service of Satan, in penal chains of everlasting fire.

21. τὸ γάρ] B, D*, E, F, G have τὸ μὲν γὰρ, approved by Lachm. and Meyer, perhaps rightly.

Here is the second answer to the question, "May we sin because we are under Grace?"

The first reply was, No; surely not; for in our Baptism we died to sin (see vv. 2—21).

Now follows the second answer. No; surely not; for by Sin we violate our allegiance to God, Who gives life eternal to His servants, and (v. 23) we are like fugitives and renegades from Him, our heavenly Master, and we become slaves, slaves of the worst master (see v. 16), whose "wages are death."

22. Νυνὶ δέ] But now. Observe the striking contrast of our present condition with the past; a contrast introduced by νυνὶ here and vii. 6. Cp. the use of νυνὶ δὲ in vii. 17; xv. 23. 25. 1 Cor. v. 11; xv. 20. Eph. ii. 13. Col. i. 21. 26. It is observable that νυνὶ occurs eighteen times in St. Paul's Epistles, and in every case it is followed by δέ; so also Heb. viii. 6; xi. 16.

23. Τὰ γὰρ ὀψώνια] The wages. Sin had been personified by the Apostle as a Master, having subjects and slaves, and also as a General, having soldiers, wielding their arms in his service (see v. 13), and now he speaks of them as receiving ὀψώνια, military pay, from him, and that pay, death. (Theod., Theoph.) "Mors diabolicæ militiæ ut debita redditur." Augustine (de gratiâ et lib. arb. 9).

— τὸ δὲ χάρισμα] but the grace —. Eternal Life is not like ὀψώνια, or wages due for service to God, as death is wages due for service to Sin. But Eternal Life is a χάρισμα, or donative, a gratuity, or free gift of God.

This difference is appropriately marked by the Apostle, who speaks of wages as received from Sin, and of a free-gift as received from God. For neither does God give what He gives, as wages due for service from us, but as a free gift; nor does Sin give what it gives, as a free gift, but as wages due. Besides, the Apostle thus teaches, that death, which is the enemy of Christ (1 Cor. xv. 26), is not designed for man by God, but that death is given by Sin as wages to those who submit themselves to its rule, and do its work. Origen.

When God rewards our works He crowns His own gifts. Augustine.

— Χ. Ἰ. τῷ Κυρίῳ ἡμῶν] in Jesus Christ our Lord. Not Sin, but Christ is your real Lord and Master. Be ye, therefore, His Slaves, and ye shall be free; be ye His Soldiers, and ye shall conquer, and receive an unfading crown of glory.

Ch. VII. 1. ὁ νόμος κυριεύει τοῦ ἀνθρώπου] the Law (of Moses) is lord over the man—the human creature—whether man ἀνδρὶ δέδεται νόμῳ· ἐὰν δὲ ἀποθάνῃ ὁ ἀνὴρ, κατήργηται ἀπὸ τοῦ νόμου τοῦ ἀνδρός. 3 [b]Ἄρα οὖν ζῶντος τοῦ ἀνδρὸς μοιχαλὶς χρηματίσει, ἐὰν γένηται ἀνδρὶ ἑτέρῳ· ἐὰν δὲ ἀποθάνῃ ὁ ἀνὴρ, ἐλευθέρα ἐστὶν ἀπὸ τοῦ νόμου, τοῦ μὴ εἶναι αὐτὴν μοιχαλίδα, γενομένην ἀνδρὶ ἑτέρῳ. b Matt. 5. 32.

4 [c]Ὥστε, ἀδελφοί μου, καὶ ὑμεῖς ἐθανατώθητε τῷ νόμῳ, διὰ τοῦ σώματος τοῦ Χριστοῦ, εἰς τὸ γενέσθαι ὑμᾶς ἑτέρῳ, τῷ ἐκ νεκρῶν ἐγερθέντι, ἵνα καρποφορήσωμεν τῷ Θεῷ. c ch. 8. 2. Gal. 2. 19, 20. & 5. 18, 22.

5 [d]Ὅτε γὰρ ἦμεν ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ, τὰ παθήματα τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν τὰ διὰ τοῦ νόμου ἐνηργεῖτο ἐν τοῖς μέλεσιν ἡμῶν, εἰς τὸ καρποφορῆσαι τῷ θανάτῳ. d ch. 6. 21. Gal. 5. 19.

6 [e]Νυνὶ δὲ κατηργήθημεν ἀπὸ τοῦ νόμου, ἀποθανόντες ἐν ᾧ κατειχόμεθα, ὥστε δουλεύειν ἡμᾶς ἐν καινότητι πνεύματος, καὶ οὐ παλαιότητι γράμματος. e ch. 6. 2. & 6. 2. 2 Cor. 3. 6.

---

or woman, as long as he or she lives. Cp. Chrys., Theodoret, Aug. qu. 83.

2. ἡ γὰρ ὕπανδρος γυνή] for the married woman hath been bound, and is bound, by the law to her living husband, i. e. to her husband for his lifetime. But if her husband shall have died, she is released from the law, which her husband exercises over her. See 1 Cor. vii. 39.

On the force of the perfect δέδεται, see Winer, 243. Cp. παραδέδοται Luke iv. 6, ἐλήλυθα v. 32. Heb. x. 14, τετελείωκεν.

3. χρηματίσει] she shall be called. See Acts xi. 26.

4. ἐθανατώθητε τῷ νόμῳ] ye were made dead to the law of Moses, through the body of Christ, slain on the cross.

Ye were then made dead to the Law, that is, to its rigour and curse, not to its moral requirements as far as it was a republication of the Law of Nature, now fully proclaimed in the Gospel. See above on Gal. ii. 19, and Rom. vi. 15, and below here on verse 6.

The Apostle here speaks of the Mosaic Law as a Husband, and of Human Nature as a Wife. He shows that, according to the Mosaic Law itself, the bond of Matrimony is dissolved by death.

His comparison would naturally lead him to say that the Law is dead; and that Human Nature has now been absolved from its obligation to the Law, by the death of the Law, so that Mankind may now be married to another Husband,—Christ.

But, in the application of his comparison, he speaks of the wife as liberated by her own death from obligation to her husband.

How did this application arise, and wherefore?

(1) He had prepared the way for it, by saying (v. 1) that the Law is lord of the human creature, man or woman, who is subject to it, as long as that person lives, and that by death he or she is freed from that Law. And

(2) It is evident that a husband's death is also the death of the wife, as a wife to him; for she is no longer capable of bearing children by him.

(3) He was not willing to speak of the Mosaic Law as dead, because in its morality, as a Rule, the Law lives for ever in the Gospel (see v. 12); and also because he would not offend the Jews by speaking of the Law as dead. Chrys., Œcumen.

(4) He does not speak of the Law being dead to them; but he speaks of their being dead to the Law; because this death of theirs was the beginning of their new Life in Christ, and of their espousals to Him, their Second Husband.

They had been made dead to the Law through the body of Christ, the Second Adam, who was their Representative, and who underwent, as the universal Proxy of Mankind, the curse due for Disobedience, and so liberated them from the Law. They had become dead to the Law, through His body offered for them on the cross, and thus they were released from the Law, and were now enabled to marry another Husband. See Gal. ii. 19, and iii. 13, the best interpretation of this text.

They were made dead to the Law through the body of Christ, so that they might marry another Husband, inasmuch as they died in Christ their Head, and were formed out of Him, as Eve was out of Adam's wounded side, and became His Bride. Gennadius.

Ye have become the Spouse of that Husband who has been raised from the dead. Origen.

Ye were espoused to Him in Baptism, when the benefits of His death were conveyed to you, and ye were made members of His Body; and He is now your Husband and Head. (Eph. v. 29—32. 2 Cor. xi. 2.)

— ἵνα καρποφορήσωμεν] in order that we may bear fruit—as in a prolific marriage.

5. Ὅτε ἦμεν ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ] While we were in the flesh—and not in the spirit.

— τὰ παθήματα τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν τὰ διὰ τοῦ νόμου] the passions of sins, those passions which were through the Law; by occasion of the Law (see v. 7), but not caused by the Law.

Let it not be imagined that the Apostle disparages the Law, and so gives countenance to the Manichæan heresy. "Absit hoc ab animo qualiscunque Christiani!" Aug. (Serm. 153)

When we were as yet in a carnal state, and had not been engrafted into Christ, and had not as yet received the gift of the Holy Ghost, these passions were then working in us, through the Law; because the essence of the carnal mind is Lawlessness; in its pride it resents all control; and it rebels against the Law of God, even because it is Law, and because it comes from God, Whose Nature and Commandments, being essentially holy and spiritual, are opposite to the nature and desires of the impure and carnal mind. As the Apostle says, "the carnal mind is Enmity against God, for it does not subject itself to the Law of God, neither is it able to do so." (Rom. viii. 7.)

Thus the fleshly motions of unregenerated Nature worked in us through the Law, and brought forth Death. Cp. Cyril (in Catenâ, p. 79), and below, v. 8; and see above, Introduction to this Epistle, pp. 191—193.

6. Νυνὶ δὲ κατηργήθημεν ἀπὸ τοῦ νόμου] but now we were set free from the Law, i. e. from the curse and rigour of the Law as a Covenant, not from the duty of obedience to it as a Rule, which was first promulgated at the beginning by God Himself, and was written by Him in the fleshly tables of men's hearts, and which Christ came not to destroy, but to spiritualize and to fulfil, and which St. Paul declares to be spiritual, and which he says that in his mind—his nobler part—he serves, and in which he delights after the inner man (vv. 14—22).

It must be carefully borne in mind that the Moral Law existed before Moses, and has not been abrogated or invalidated, but has been explained, enlarged, and confirmed by the Gospel. It was before Adam. As is well asked by Origen here, "Was it by the Law of Moses that Adam acknowledged his sin, and hid himself from the presence of the Lord? (Gen. iii. 8.) Was it by the Law of Moses that Cain owned his sin? (Gen. iv. 13.) Or was it by the Law of Moses that Pharaoh acknowledged his sin, and said, The Lord is righteous, and I and my people are wicked?" (Exod. ix. 27.)

What then does the Apostle intend, when he says here that we have been made free from the Law?

This question has been discussed by Bp. Sanderson (see above, vi. 15, and on Gal. ii. 19; iii. 13), and Bp. Andrewes (on the Commandments, p. 60), "The moral Law is not changed; but the curse is taken away by Christ's Grace. But the bond of keeping the Law remaineth still." See also his Sermon on Ps. ii. 7, vol. i. p. 288, and Dr. Barrow (Sermon on Universal Redemption, lxxiv. vol. iii. p. 419). The Law, in its rigour, as requiring exact obedience, and as denouncing vengeance to them who in any point violate it, is by reason of our weakness and inability to perform it, an Enemy to us (Gal. ii. 16; iii. 11; v. 2. Rom. vii. 13. 1 Cor. xv. 56. Heb. vii. 19, &c.), not justifying man, perfecting no man, aggravating, quickening, declaring sin, and working wrath, ministering death and condemnation, subjecting us to a curse, as St. Paul teacheth us.

But our Lord, by mitigating the extreme rigour thereof, by procuring an acceptance of sincere though not accurate obedience, by purchasing and dispensing pardon for transgression upon repentance, by conferring competent strength and ability to perform it in an acceptable degree, hath brought under this Adversary; hath redeemed us from the curse of the Law (Gal. iii. 13; v. 18). and we are delivered from the Law, as to those effects of it—condemning, discouraging, enslaving us—we cease f ch. 3. 20. Exod. 20. 17. Deut. 5. 21.

g ch. 4. 15. & 5. 20. Gal. 3. 19. 1 Cor. 15. 56.

7 f Τί οὖν ἐροῦμεν; ὁ νόμος ἁμαρτία;
Μὴ γένοιτο· Ἀλλὰ τὴν ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ ἔγνων, εἰ μὴ διὰ νόμου· τήν τε γὰρ ἐπιθυμίαν οὐκ ἤδειν, εἰ μὴ ὁ νόμος ἔλεγεν, Οὐκ ἐπιθυμήσεις· 8 g Ἀφορμὴν δὲ λαβοῦσα ἡ ἁμαρτία διὰ τῆς ἐντολῆς κατειργάσατο ἐν ἐμοὶ πᾶσαν ἐπιθυμίαν· to be under the Law in those respects, being under Grace, being led by the Spirit, as St. Paul tells us. (Rom. iii. 21. 28; iv. 8; vi. 14; vii. 4. 6.)

The Law indeed is still our Rule, our Guide, our Governor. But it ceases to be a Tyrant over us, a Tormentor of us. Dr. Barrow.

"No Christian man whatsoever," says the Church of England, Art. vii., "is free from the obedience of the commandments which are called moral."

The moral law is that eternal and unchangeable rule of justice and equity that is in God; yea, the eternal will of God is the fountain of this Law, which is to be the Rule of our lives. Bp. Beveridge (on the Articles, p. 238).

Jesus Christ, as the Divine and Eternal Logos, or Word, is the Author and Revealer of all Law to man; and there is but one Law of Morals, which He revealed at the Creation of the world, which He afterward renewed by Moses, and lastly explained, and confirmed, and fulfilled by Himself. So Christ is the Beginning and the End, the Alpha and the Omega, of the Law.

— ἀποθανόντες] having died to that master, lord, and husband, under whose sway we were held (by the rigour and curse of the Law); so that we should now obey its rule in the Gospel, in the newness of the Spirit, which is given us in the Gospel, and enables us to obey the will of God; not in the oldness of the letter of the Law, which could not give grace, any more than the table of stone or the roll of parchment, on which a code is written, can enable men to obey it.

See viii. 2, where the Apostle says that the Law of the Spirit of that life which we have in Christ has freed us from the Law which was the occasion of sin and death. We are dead to the curse of the Law, and by that death we live, in order to obey the precepts of the Law. See also on Eph. ii. 15, and Col. ii. 14, where the Apostle pursues this subject.

Elz. has ἀποθανόντος here, which seems to have little authority. Ἀποθανόντες is in A, B, C, I, K, and many Cursives, Fathers, and Versions. D, E, F, G have τοῦ θανάτου.

— ὥστε δουλεύειν] so as to serve. Remark therefore that, even under Grace, he regards himself as a servant of the Law. Indeed, Grace is given in order that he may be able and willing to render cheerful service to the Law.

7. Ἀλλά] Nevertheless, though the Law is not sin, but is "holy, just, and good" (vii. 12), yet I should not have known sin (to be sin) except by means of the Law, which showed me to myself as a sinner; and my sin became more sinful, because it was a breach of a Law plainly written by God. By the pronoun I, the holy Apostle personifies Human Nature, and identifies it with himself, and says, in his own name and person, what he means to be applied to Mankind generally, in their unregenerate state.

Though he himself is now a chosen vessel of divine grace, and a temple of the Holy Ghost, and is writing under His inspiration, and though he no longer lives in the flesh, but Christ liveth in him (Gal. ii. 20), yet he does not forget what he would have been, if he had been left to himself, without divine grace; and he, as it were, throws himself backward into his own natural condition, and sympathizes with Humanity in all its weakness and its woes.

This he does in his Christian modesty and humility, claiming no personal superiority over those with whom he is arguing, but intimating thereby, that whatever good he has within him, is not of himself, but by the grace of God.

This is a very common practice with St. Paul, to put a general proposition in his own name, as if it were his own case. See above, iii. 7, and note from Bp. Sanderson on 1 Cor. vi. 12; and see 1 Cor. vi. 15; and cp. x. 23. 29, 30; xiv. 11, and throughout the present chapter; and Gal. iv. 3—5, where the diction and subject are similar.

— τὴν ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ ἔγνων] I should not have known sin, as sin; I should not have understood the sinfulness of sin, except by the Law, which showed its sinfulness by prohibiting it under terrible penalties.

He who, before the delivery of the Law, was unacquainted with his own evil doings, was taught them by the Law, and saw his own sins revealed to him by it, and recognized as evil what before he had imagined to be good. Augustine (Serm. 158).

St. Paul, in his modesty, depreciates himself, and wins his adversaries by self-humiliation. As a wise doctor of the Church, he takes upon himself the person of the weak. Origen. Cp. Bp. Taylor on Repentance, c. viii. §§ 1 and 2, who says: St. Paul, in the viith to the Romans, does not describe the state of himself really, or of a regenerate person. He is identifying himself with the natural and unregenerate man, and with the world in its degeneracy and apostasy from God at the time previous to, and at the delivery of, the Law; and when, in consequence of its idolatry, it had been given over by God to a reprobate mind (i. 28), and its moral sense was blinded, and its conscience seared, and its judgment perverted, and its will depraved by evil habits, so that it had no just notion of the sinfulness of sin, and it was sold into slavery under Satan; so that it wrought uncleanness with greediness, and consented with those who wrought it. (Eph. iv. 19. Rom. i. 32.) See Cyril, Chrys., Basil, Jerome, Œcumen., and others here; and the authorities in the Catena first published by Dr. Cramer, which is very copious and valuable on this chapter.

— ἐπιθυμίαν οὐκ ἤδειν] I had not known concupiscence; I should not have considered and known it as it is, namely, as sinful, unless the Law were saying—observe ἔλεγεν, the imperfect tense—were alway repeating in my ears the command, "Thou shalt not lust."

He does not say, I should not have felt concupiscence, but I should not have known it. Origen, repeated by Aug., Serm. 153. I should not have understood what its true character was, except by the voice of the Law saying to me, οὐκ ἐπιθυμήσεις.

On this sense of ἤδειν see Acts xxiii. 5. Ἐπιθυμία, concupiscentia, is used here as a general term for any evil desire. See Jerome below on v. 12.

The Heathen thought little of the sin of evil thoughts, and their views with regard to πορνεία may be seen on Acts xv. 20.

What says the Apostle? I had not known lust. In my natural state I ran after my own pleasures, and in them I took great delight.

Who was ever brought before an earthly judge for such things as Harlotry or Intoxication? These things are done with impunity as far as concerns the tribunal of this world, but not before the court of Heaven. They are not punished by the world, but they are punished by the Creator of this world. The Law of God comes forth and proclaims to man "Non concupisces;" and thus he learns that concupiscence is sin. Augustine (Serm. 153).

Cp. Theodor. Mops. here, in Catená, p. 88.

8. Ἀφορμὴν δὲ λαβοῦσα κ.τ.λ.] But Sin, having found an occasion (of attack on me) through the commandment, wrought in me all manner of concupiscence.

Sin is personified here, and below in v. 11, as an armed Enemy, taking possession of a stronghold or fortress from which to sally forth, and by which to assault his adversary. Sin converts the Law itself, which was designed as a fortress against sin, into a castle, from which to sally forth and attack mankind; as the Spartans converted the Decelean fortress of Attica into the means for aggressive warfare against Athens itself. (Thucyd. vii. 18, 19. 27.)

The promulgation of the commandment was like a starting-place to Sin, from whence it rushed forth upon me.

How was this?

(1) Because what before were sins of ignorance, and so comparatively venial, now (after the delivery of the Law) became wilful sins, or sins of presumption—deliberate sins against light and knowledge bestowed by a Revelation from God, and so more sinful. Œcumen.

Just as the Gospel itself was a starting-place of greater sin and woe to the Bethsaidas, Chorazins, and Capernaums, and other Cities, which heard our Lord's preaching and did not repent (Luke x. 13); and therefore it will be more tolerable even for Tyre and Sidon, and Sodom and Gomorrah, than for them. (Matt. xi. 21. Luke x. 13.)

(2) Because the natural man, of whom the Apostle is speaking, is proud and self-willed, and resents God's Law, even because it is God's Law. (See v. 5; and above, Introduction to this Epistle, p. 192.)

Men champ against the bit, and are made more furious by restraint, and being under the dominion of Satan, who envies man the joys promised to obedience (Photius), and is a rebel against God, and exults in doing outrage to Him, and in exciting men to mutiny and insurrection against God, they commit acts χωρὶς γὰρ νόμου ἁμαρτία νεκρά. 9 Ἐγὼ δὲ ἔζων χωρὶς νόμου ποτέ· ἐλθούσης δὲ τῆς ἐντολῆς ἡ ἁμαρτία ἀνέζησεν, ἐγὼ δὲ ἀπέθανον, 10 h καὶ εὑρέθη μοι ἡ ἐντολὴ ἡ εἰς ζωὴν αὐτὴ εἰς θάνατον. 11 Ἡ γὰρ ἁμαρτία ἀφορμὴν λαβοῦσα διὰ τῆς ἐντολῆς ἐξηπάτησέ με, καὶ δι' αὐτῆς ἀπέκτεινεν.

h Lev. 18. 5. Ezek. 20.11, 18. Neh. 9. 29.

12 i Ὥστε ὁ μὲν νόμος ἅγιος, καὶ ἡ ἐντολὴ ἁγία καὶ δικαία καὶ ἀγαθή.

i 1 Tim. 1. 8. Ps. 19. 8.

13 k Τὸ οὖν ἀγαθὸν ἐμοὶ ἐγένετο θάνατος;

k ch. 3. 20.

Μὴ γένοιτο· Ἀλλὰ ἡ ἁμαρτία, ἵνα φανῇ ἁμαρτία, διὰ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ μοι κατεργαζομένη θάνατον, ἵνα γένηται καθ' ὑπερβολὴν ἁμαρτωλὸς ἡ ἁμαρτία διὰ τῆς ἐντολῆς.

---

of rebellion against God's Law, with greater recklessness and rage than they would commit them, if they were not forbidden by God's Law.

Satan deceived Eve, and tempted her to eat of the forbidden tree (see Theodor. Mops. here), because it was forbidden: and he would never have tempted her to eat of that tree, if it had not been forbidden. So after the giving of the Law, Satan tempts men to sin in a spirit of despite and defiance to the Law, and of blasphemy against its divine Giver.

Men take occasion at the very goodness of God to strengthen themselves in malice. Hooker (ii. 588).

Thus offences abounded by occasion of the Law. Cp. v. 13—20.

St. Paul uses the preposition διὰ, through, here and in v. 11 (and not ἀπὸ, from, or ἐκ, out of, it); because Sin did not make an attack on man from or out of the Law, directly, but mediately. Sin perverted the Law from its direct purpose, into means by, and through, which to injure man.

There was nothing in the Law itself which was designed to promote such an attack. Far from it. In itself the Law is holy, just, and good (v. 12). But Sin abused the Law to be an instrument for an end the very opposite to that for which the Law had been given by God.

— χωρὶς γὰρ νόμου ἁμαρτία νεκρά] for apart from the Law sin is dead. For "where no Law is, there is no transgression." See iv. 15; v. 20, and 1 Cor. xv. 56, "the strength of sin is the Law,"—the best comment on this passage.

He does not mean to say, that the natural man had no Law (for if so, he would not have been sold under sin, as he describes him to be, v. 14); but he had not that clear knowledge of Law which the Commandment gave him by showing him the sinfulness of sin. Chrys.

Sin was dead before the Law came. What does he mean by its being dead? It was not apparent. It was, as it were, hidden in a grave. But when the Law came it rose up again from the dead (ἀνέζησεν), and took up arms against me. Aug. (Serm. 153.)

It rose up again; because though a Law had been given to me in Adam, yet that Law was as it were dead and buried by my ignorance. Cp. Luke xv. 24, and Diodor. in Caten. p. 93, and Meyer, and see above, Introduction to this Epistle, pp. 191—193.

9. Ἐγὼ δὲ ἔζων—ἀπέθανον] And I was alive without the Law formerly; but, when the Law came, Sin came to life, and I died. Why? because the Law gave me knowledge of sin. And also, because when the Law came and forbad sin, then sin was imputed to me, as wilfully committed against God's command, and I died,—that is, I became subject to death, the wages of sin. Cp. Origen here.

He is speaking here comparatively. He does not mean that the natural man, who lived before the giving of the Mosaic Law, was innocent. No; for then he could not have said that the Heathens were guilty before God, as he has proved them to be in the beginning of the Epistle (i. 18—32). But he means, that the very essence of sin is, that it is a breach of Law; and that where there is no Law, there is no sin, and in proportion as the Law is clear, so is sin sinful; and consequently, the state of the natural man, before the Law was given, was a state of life, compared with that condition of death, in which mankind was under the Law.

10. αὐτὴ] itself, ipsa,—even it which was designed for life became to me, by my sin, an occasion of death. The editions generally have αὕτη, which is less emphatic.

11. Ἡ γὰρ ἁμαρτία—ἐξηπάτησέ με] For Sin, having got a place of attack against me, deceived me through the commandment, and slew me, as it did our first parents by occasion of the commandment to them, Gen. iii. 1. See above on v. 8.

12. ἁγία] holy. See the description of the Law in 1 Tim. i. 8.

The law is good if it is kept; but, if it is broken it will become an evil thing to him who, by breaking it, has lost the good. And thus sin is made exceeding sinful by occasion of the Law. Origen. See Aug. and Jerome below on v. 13.

13. Τὸ οὖν ἀγαθὸν ἐμοὶ ἐγένετο θάνατος;] Did then that which is good become to me death? Elz. has γέγονε. But A, B, C, D, E have ἐγένετο, and so Lachm. and Alford. And this is more consistent with the argument. For the Law is not now Death to him in his regenerate state. The Law has not become (γέγονεν) death to him.

The sense is: Did the Law become Death to me?

No; but Sin, in order that it might be made manifest to be sin, working death in me, even through the Law which is good, and was given by the Author of all good,—it was Death to me. Μοί, to me, is emphatic; and is thus placed to show that the Law, good in itself, became evil to me, on account of my sin.

The Law is not Death, but Sin is Death. He had before said, that "Sin without the Law was dead" (v. 8). For, before the Law, Sin was not known to be Sin. Observe, then, how fitly he says here, that Sin, in order that it might be made apparent to be sin, worked death in him, even by means of that which was good. He does not say, "in order that it might be sin," because sin existed before the Law, but it was not clearly known to be sin. See Augustine (Serm. 153).

— ἵνα γένηται—διὰ τῆς ἐντολῆς] in order that Sin (which took occasion to slay me, through the Commandment) might become exceeding sinful, through the Commandment.

The Commandment was given in order to show man's moral disease, and not to remove it. It was given in order to tame the pride of which he was guilty in trusting to himself, and in imagining himself to be holy. It was given in order to show his need of a Redeemer, and of Divine Grace, and to make him more desirous of them.

But man rebelled against the Commandment (see above, v. 7), and so sin became exceeding sinful, inasmuch as it was committed wilfully and presumptuously against the declared Will and word of God.

See Augustine, Serm. 125 and 152.

The following excellent exposition of the Apostle's meaning in this and the preceding verses, is from a contemporary and friend of S. Augustine, S. Jerome.

He first speaks of the Mosaic Law.

"Quomodo Medicina non est caussa mortis, si ostendat venena mortifera, licet his mali homines abutantur ad mortem, et vel se interficiant, vel insidientur inimicis; sic Lex data est, ut peccatorum venena monstret, et hominem malè libertate suâ abutentem, qui prius ferebatur improvidus, et per præcipitia labebatur, freno Legis retineat, et compositis doceat incedere gressibus, ita ut serviamus in novitate spiritûs, et non in vetustate litteræ, id est, vivamus sub præcepto, qui prius in modum brutorum animalium dicebamus, Manducemus et bibamus, cras enim moriemur. (1 Cor. xv. 32.)

"Quod si, subintrante Lege (quæ docet quid facere, et prohibet quid non facere debeamus) vitio nostro et incontinentiâ feramur contra scita legalia, videtur Lex caussa esse peccati: quæ, dum prohibet concupiscentiam, quodammodo eam inflammare cognoscitur.

"Sæcularis apud Græcos sententia est, 'Quidquid licet, minus desideratur.' Ergo è contrario, 'quidquid non licet, fomentum accipit desiderii.' Unde et Tullius de parricidarum suppliciis apud Athenienses Solonem scripsisse negat, ne non tam prohibere, quàm commovere videretur.

"Igitur Lex, apud contemptores, et legum præcepta calcantes, videtur esse occasio delictorum: dum prohibendo quod non vult fieri, ligat eos vinculis mandatorum, qui prius absque lege peccantes non tenebantur criminibus."

He then thus speaks of the Natural law:

"Ista Lex quæ in corde scribitur omnes continet nationes; et nullus hominum est, qui hanc legem nesciat. Unde omnis mundus sub peccato, et universi homines prævaricatores legis

l 1 Tim. 1. 8.
1 Kings 21. 20, 25.
Isa. 50. 1.
1 Mac. 1. 15.
m Gal. 5. 17.

14 [l] Οἴδαμεν γὰρ ὅτι ὁ νόμος πνευματικός ἐστιν, ἐγὼ δὲ σάρκινός εἰμι, πεπραμένος ὑπὸ τὴν ἁμαρτίαν. 15 [m] Ὃ γὰρ κατεργάζομαι οὐ γινώσκω· οὐ γὰρ ὃ θέλω τοῦτο πράσσω, ἀλλ' ὃ μισῶ τοῦτο ποιῶ. 16 Εἰ δὲ ὃ οὐ θέλω τοῦτο ποιῶ, σύμφημι τῷ νόμῳ ὅτι καλός. 17 Νυνὶ δὲ οὐκ ἔτι ἐγὼ κατεργάζομαι αὐτό, ἀλλ' ἡ n Gen. 6. 5. & 8. 21.

οἰκοῦσα ἐν ἐμοὶ ἁμαρτία. 18 [n] Οἶδα γὰρ ὅτι οὐκ οἰκεῖ ἐν ἐμοί, τουτέστιν ἐν τῇ σαρκί μου, ἀγαθόν· τὸ γὰρ θέλειν παράκειταί μοι, τὸ δὲ κατεργάζεσθαι τὸ καλὸν οὐχ εὑρίσκω· 19 οὐ γὰρ ὃ θέλω ποιῶ ἀγαθόν, ἀλλ' ὃ οὐ θέλω κακὸν τοῦτο πράσσω. 20 Εἰ δὲ ὃ οὐ θέλω, τοῦτο ποιῶ, οὐκ ἔτι ἐγὼ κατεργάζομαι αὐτό, ἀλλ' ἡ οἰκοῦσα ἐν ἐμοὶ ἁμαρτία.

o Ps. 1. 2.
2 Cor. 4. 16.
Eph. 3. 16.

21 Εὑρίσκω ἄρα τὸν νόμον, τῷ θέλοντι ἐμοὶ ποιεῖν τὸ καλὸν ὅτι ἐμοὶ τὸ κακὸν παράκειται. 22 [o] Συνήδομαι γὰρ τῷ νόμῳ τοῦ Θεοῦ κατὰ τὸν ἔσω ἄνθρωπον, sunt: et idcirco justum judicium Dei est, scribentis in corde humani generis, Quod tibi fieri nolueris, alteri ne feceris.

---

"Quis enim ignoret homicidium, adulterium, furtum, et omnem concupiscentiam esse malum, ex eo, quòd sibi ea nolit fieri? Si enim mala esse nesciret, nequaquàm doleret sibi esse illata.

"Per hanc naturalem legem et Cain cognovit peccatum suum, dicens: Major est caussa mea, quàm ut dimittar. Et Adam et Eva cognoverunt peccatum suum, et propterea absconditi sunt sub ligno vitæ. Pharao quoque, antequàm Lex daretur per Moysen, stimulatus lege naturæ, sua crimina confitetur, et dicit, Dominus justus, ego autem et populus meus impii.

"Hanc legem nescit pueritia, ignorat infantia, et peccans absque mandato non tenetur lege peccati. Maledicit patri et matri, et quia necdum accepit legem sapientiæ, mortuum est in eo peccatum."

He then compares the coming of the Mosaic Law to the dawn of Intelligence in Childhood;

"Quum autem mandatum venerit, hoc est, tempus intelligentiæ appetentis bona, et vitantis mala, tunc incipit peccatum reviviscere et ille mori, reusque esse peccati.

"Atque ita fit, ut tempus intelligentiæ, quo Dei mandata cognoscimus ut perveniamus ad vitam, operetur in nobis mortem, si agamus negligentiùs, et occasio sapientiæ seducat nos atque supplantet, et ducat ad mortem.

"Non quòd intelligentia peccatum sit. Lex enim intelligentiæ sancta et justa et bona est; sed per intelligentiam peccatorum atque virtutum mihi peccatum nascitur, quod priusquàm intelligerem, peccatum esse non noveram. Atque ita factum est, ut quod mihi pro bono datum est, meo vitio mutetur in malum; et, ut hyperbolicè dicam, novoque verbo utar, ad explicandum sensum meum, peccatum, quod, priusquàm haberem intelligentiam, absque peccato erat, per prævaricationem mandati incipiat mihi esse peccantius peccatum."

He thus speaks of St. Paul's use of the word ἐπιθυμία, or "concupiscentia;"

"Quæramus quæ sit ista concupiscentia, de quâ Lex dicit: 'Non concupisces?'

"Alii putant illud esse mandatum, quod in decalogo scriptum est: Non concupisces rem proximi tui. Nos autem per concupiscentiam omnes perturbationes animæ significatas putamus, quibus mœremus et gaudemus, timemus et concupiscimus."

He rightly affirms that St. Paul is speaking throughout this chapter in the name of, and in the person of, Human Nature:

"Et hoc Apostolus, vas electionis, cujus corpus templum erat Spiritûs Sancti, non de se loquitur, sed de eo, qui vult post peccata agere pœnitentiam: et, sub personâ suâ, fragilitatem describit conditionis humanæ; quæ duorum hominum interioris et exterioris pugnantium inter se bella perpetitur. Interior homo consentit, et scriptæ et naturali legi, quòd bona sit, et sancta et justa, et spiritualis." S. Jerome (ad Algasiam, p. 199).

14. ὁ νόμος πνευματικός ἐστιν] the Law is Spiritual. He here speaks of the Law as a Rule, but not as a Covenant. See above, v. 6.

— σάρκινος] fleshly, nothing but flesh; in my unregenerate state, without the Spirit of God. So A, B, C, D, E, F, G. A stronger word than σαρκικὸς, the reading of Elz. See 1 Cor. iii. 1. σάρκινος is carneus, σαρκικὸς is carnalis.

15. Ὃ γὰρ κατεργάζομαι οὐ γινώσκω] For that which I perform I know not: that is, under the violence of the sinful affections and lusts of my corrupt nature, I am carried out of myself, namely, out of that which is really myself, my true nature, in which Reason and Conscience hold the sway; and I am become like a man beside himself, or like one in a trance, or in a state of intoxication, who is not conscious of what he does. Cyril, Chrysostom.

— οὐ γὰρ ὃ θέλω] for not what I desire that practise I, but what I hate that I do. Observe πράσσω, in the first clause, and ποιῶ in the second,—I am continually making efforts and attempts at good by my will; but I do not put in practice what I desire to do; but what I hate, that I do. Cp. above on i. 32.

— ὃ μισῶ τοῦτο ποιῶ] what I hate, that I do. The natural Conscience, even in heathens, uttered similar declarations, as by Medea, καὶ μανθάνω μὲν οἷα δρᾶν μέλλω κακὰ, θυμὸς δὲ κρείσσων τῶν ἐμῶν βουλευμάτων.

And

"——— Video meliora proboque, Deteriora sequor." Ovid, Met. vii. 19.

See Wetstein here.

17. Νυνὶ δὲ οὐκ ἔτι ἐγώ] but now—when the Law speaks clearly to me—it is no longer I that perform it, but Sin that dwelleth in me.

Do not therefore imagine, that I am condemning my nature, which is God's work, and in which, when rightly understood, Conscience reigns supreme, and keeps the appetites in check, and is itself regulated by God's Law. (See above, ii. 14.) No: it is not I,—it is not that essence in which I am really myself. It is not my spirit—my inner man (v. 22), my αὐτὸς ἐγὼ (v. 25), that does all this. But it is the sin which has entered and reigns in me, that does it, thereby subverting my moral nature, and causing me to revolt and rebel against that Law which God gave me for my guide.

Therefore, to vindicate God from the charge of being the Author of Sin which man commits, he says that he delights in the Law of God as to his own inner man, which is his proper self, and ought to sway his actions, and not to allow Satan and Sin to enter in and usurp dominion over him, and that he finds a law in his bodily members, which ought to be kept in control, as plebeian subjects of his moral monarchy; and that the Law in his members mutinies, and involves his moral being in anarchy and rebellion, and takes up arms against the Law of his mind, which ought to reign over them, and even imprisons its lawful Sovereign, and keeps it in the chains of Sin.

O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death? Thanks be to God, I have been delivered by Christ! He has given me the Spirit of Grace, He has pardoned me my old sins, and enables me for the future to obey Him in all sincerity and heartiness of endeavour. Cp. Bp. Taylor on Repentance, viii. 4.

18. οὐχ εὑρίσκω] A, B, C have οὔ. And so Lachm., Tisch., Alf., not Meyer.

20. θέλω] Elz. adds ἐγὼ, not in B, C, D, E, F, G.

21. Εὑρίσκω ἄρα τὸν νόμον] I find then this Law in me, namely, that when I desire to do good, evil is present with me. There is a conflict therefore between my flesh and my inner man.

22. Συνήδομαι] I delight in the Law of God, in my inner man. Listen to the Apostle showing to you that the Law is good: and yet he could not avoid sin except by the grace of God. For the Law issues prohibitions and commands. But it cannot heal that which does not permit us to obey the Law. But Grace can do this. The Apostle says, I delight in the Law of God as to my inner man. That is, I acknowledge the evil of that which the Law forbids; and I recognize the good of that which the Law commands. But I perceive a different Law in my members bringing me into captivity to the Law of Sin, which is in my members.

23 [p] βλέπω δὲ ἕτερον νόμον ἐν τοῖς μέλεσί μου ἀντιστρατευόμενον τῷ νόμῳ τοῦ νοός μου, καὶ αἰχμαλωτίζοντά με τῷ νόμῳ τῆς ἁμαρτίας τῷ ὄντι ἐν τοῖς μέλεσί μου. p Gal. 5. 17. ch. 6. 13, 19.

24 Ταλαίπωρος ἐγὼ ἄνθρωπος, τίς με ῥύσεται ἐκ τοῦ σώματος τοῦ θανάτου τούτου;

25 [q] Εὐχαριστῶ τῷ Θεῷ διὰ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν. q 1 Cor. 15. 57.

Ἄρα οὖν αὐτὸς ἐγὼ τῷ μὲν νοῒ δουλεύω νόμῳ Θεοῦ, τῇ δὲ σαρκὶ νόμῳ ἁμαρτίας.

VIII. 1 [a] Οὐδὲν ἄρα νῦν κατάκριμα τοῖς ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ. a Gal. 5. 16, 25. b ch. 6. 18, 22. John 8. 36. Gal. 5. 1. 1 Cor. 15. 45. c 2 Cor. 5. 21. Eph. 2. 14, 15. Gal. 3. 13. Heb. 7. 18, 19.

2 [b] Ὁ γὰρ νόμος τοῦ Πνεύματος τῆς ζωῆς ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ ἠλευθέρωσέ με ἀπὸ τοῦ νόμου τῆς ἁμαρτίας καὶ τοῦ θανάτου.

3 [c] Τὸ γὰρ ἀδύνατον τοῦ νόμου, ἐν ᾧ ἠσθένει διὰ τῆς σαρκὸς, ὁ Θεὸς τὸν

This moral state is the penalty of sin from the inheritance of death; from the condemnation of Adam.

The Law comes and convicts him of sin. Blessed conviction! For now being convicted of sin, he is no longer proud, but cries out for pardon. Feeling that he is in prison, he prays for deliverance. Wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me! Augustine (Serm. 125). See above, v. 20. Cp. Bp. Taylor on Repentance, viii. 4.

23. ἕτερον νόμον] a different law. Cp. Gal. i. 6.

24. τίς με ῥύσεται ἐκ τοῦ σώματος] who shall deliver me from the body of this death? from the body as far as it is the seat and instrument of spiritual death. Compare above, vi. 6, τὸ σῶμα τῆς ἁμαρτίας, the body of sin. He calls it also the body of death, as opposed to the body of life, into which he has now been incorporated by Baptism into the Body of Christ, the Second Adam, Who has taken our Nature, and engrafted us as members in Himself, and gives us His own Body to be our spiritual food and sustenance, and assures us of a glorious Resurrection unto life eternal in our Bodies, transformed into the likeness of His own glorified Body. (Phil. iii. 21.)

25. Εὐχαριστῶ τῷ Θεῷ] I thank God. So Elz., with A, I, K, Syriac and Gothic Versions, and Origen in Catenâ, and Chrys. and Theodoret. B has χάρις, and so Lachm., Tisch., Alf. D, E, F, G have ἡ χάρις τοῦ Θεοῦ.

— Ἄρα οὖν αὐτὸς ἐγὼ—ἁμαρτίας] So then I myself serve the Law of God with my mind, but with my flesh I serve the Law of sin. And in proportion as my mind is nobler than my flesh, and is more properly my very self (αὐτὸς ἐγὼ), so am I bound to serve the Law of God, rather than that of Sin. And this I am now enabled to do by the grace of Christ, Who has taken my flesh, and has redeemed me from the rigour and curse of the Law, and has procured pardon for my sins, on condition of my faith and repentance, and has incorporated me in Himself. And therefore there is now no condemnation to me, or to any of those who are in Christ Jesus. (viii. 1.)

Ch. VIII. 1. Οὐδὲν ἄρα νῦν κατάκριμα τοῖς ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ] There is then no condemnation to those who are engrafted by Baptism in Christ's body, and abide as living members in Him, in Whom dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead (Col. i. 19), and of whose fulness we all receive, and grace for grace (John i. 16). See vi. 3. Here is the cause of our Justification.

There is no condemnation to those who are in Christ Jesus, although the desires of the flesh, to which they do not yield, and the Law in their members, war against the law of their mind. Still there is no condemnation to them, because by the Grace given in the laver of Baptism, the guilt with which they were born has been remitted to them. There is now no condemnation to them. There was condemnation formerly. Their Birth brought with it that evil; but their new Birth brought with it this good. For the Law of the Spirit of Life in Christ delivered them from the Law of Death and Sin. Ye have been set free from that Law. Therefore, being now free, fight against it. Take care that you be not again enslaved by it. Hard is the conflict, but glorious will be the conquest. The trial is toilsome, but gladsome will be the triumph. Augustine (Serm. 152).

So far from there being any condemnation (κατάκριμα) to them now, the Apostle goes on to show that, even by means of our flesh, assumed by Christ, God condemned sin (v. 3), which reigned over us by and in our Flesh.

Observe the connexion of κατέκρινεν with κατάκριμα.

After these words Elz. adds μὴ κατὰ σάρκα περιπατοῦσιν ἀλλὰ κατὰ πνεῦμα, which are not authorized by the majority of MSS., and seem to be a gloss imported from v. 4.

2. Ὁ γὰρ νόμος] For the Law of the Spirit of Life in Christ, —the gracious, vivifying, enabling Law,—set me free from the rigorous, literal, and condemnatory Law, which made Sin to be more manifestly sinful (vii. 8), and which provided no means of grace to keep the Law, nor of pardon for breaking it, but brought the curse of death on those who broke it.

3. Τὸ γὰρ ἀδύνατον τοῦ νόμου] For what the Law had not ability to do, not by reason of any imperfection in itself, for it is good, just, and holy (vii. 12), but on account of its weakness, consequent on our Flesh, that God did, by sending His own Son in the reality of human flesh, and in the likeness of sinful flesh; and so delivered me by that very thing, my flesh, which by its corruption was my bane.

The office of the Law of Moses, as compared with the work of Christ, has been happily illustrated in the writings of some of the Ancient Fathers, by reference to the history of the Prophet Elisha, who was a signal type of Christ. Elisha, by God's power, gave a son to the Shunammite, when she had no hope of offspring (2 Kings iv. 17). So God created us by Christ (John i. 3; Heb. i. 3). The Shunammite's child died (2 Kings iv. 20). So Mankind fell and died in Adam (1 Cor. xv. 22). Elisha sent his servant with his staff, to lay on the child (2 Kings iv. 29). So Christ sent His servant Moses with his rod, with the Law. The action of the servant Gehazi laying the staff on the face of the child, was a witness to the death of the child; but it did not cause its revival (2 Kings iv. 31). So the Law testified man's sinfulness and death, but could not give him life (Gal. ii. 19). The servant of Elisha went before Elisha, and prepared the way for him. So Moses prepared the way for Christ (Gal. iii. 24). Elisha, the prophet, at length came in person, and stretched himself upon the child, and put his own mouth upon the child's mouth, and his own eyes upon the child's eyes, and his own hands upon the child's hands, and the flesh of the child waxed warm, and he revived (2 Kings iv. 35). This is what has been done for Mankind by the Incarnation of Christ. He did not take any one man's person, but He is "God with us, God manifested in the Flesh; the Lord our Righteousness." (See on 1 Cor. i. 30.) He stretched Himself upon the whole body of our Humanity, lying dead in trespasses and sins. He quickened and cleansed us by the application of His own Person, vivifying and purifying the whole. Hence arises our duty to be conformed to His image (Rom. viii. 29), to conceive Him in our hearts, and bring Him forth in our lives (Gal. iv. 19. 2 Cor. iv. 11. See on Matt. xii. 48. 50. Luke xi. 28). Here also is our hope; that if we are conformed to Him here, we shall bear His image hereafter (1 Cor. xv. 49), and that our bodies will be fashioned like unto His body (Phil. iii. 21); and that when He Who is our life shall appear, we also shall appear with Him in glory (Col. iii. 4. 1 John iii. 2). On this analogy between the Law and Gehazi, and between Elisha and Christ, see S. Augustine (Serm. 26, and Serm. 136; and on Ps. 70; and contra Faustum, xii. 35).

It was God's will to redeem the flesh of sin by means of a like substance; that is, by a fleshly substance, bearing a resemblance to sinful flesh, but not being itself sinful. Herein was the Power of God, to effect the salvation of the Flesh by means of the substance of the Flesh. Tertullian (c. Marcion. v. 14).

By taking Flesh, Christ conquered the Sin of the Flesh. By suffering Death He overcame Death. Augustine (Serm. 152).

God sent His Son in the likeness of sinful Flesh, but not in sinful Flesh. All other Flesh of Man is sinful Flesh. The Flesh of Christ alone is sinless. (Augustine.) Here is a strong testimony against the novel doctrine of the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin. The original words of this and other similar authorities may be seen quoted in a Sermon by the Editor, on that subject, pp. 11, 12. Cp. on Luke i. 27.

ἑαυτοῦ υἱὸν πέμψας ἐν ὁμοιώματι σαρκὸς ἁμαρτίας, καὶ περὶ ἁμαρτίας, κατέκρινε τὴν ἁμαρτίαν ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ, 4 ἵνα τὸ δικαίωμα τοῦ νόμου πληρωθῇ ἐν ἡμῖν τοῖς μὴ κατὰ σάρκα περιπατοῦσιν, ἀλλὰ κατὰ Πνεῦμα.

d 1 Cor. 2. 14. 5 [d] Οἱ γὰρ κατὰ σάρκα ὄντες τὰ τῆς σαρκὸς φρονοῦσιν, οἱ δὲ κατὰ Πνεῦμα e ch. 6. 21. Gal. 6. 8. τὰ τοῦ Πνεύματος· 6 [e] τὸ γὰρ φρόνημα τῆς σαρκὸς θάνατος· τὸ δὲ φρόνημα τοῦ Πνεύματος ζωὴ καὶ εἰρήνη· 7 διότι τὸ φρόνημα τῆς σαρκὸς ἔχθρα εἰς Θεόν· τῷ f 1 Cor. 2. 14. γὰρ νόμῳ τοῦ Θεοῦ οὐχ ὑποτάσσεται, οὐδὲ γὰρ δύναται· 8 [f] οἱ δὲ ἐν σαρκὶ ὄντες Θεῷ ἀρέσαι οὐ δύνανται.

g 1 Cor. 3. 16. Gal. 4. 6. Phil. 1. 19. h 1 Cor. 15. 45. 9 [g] Ὑμεῖς δὲ οὐκ ἐστὲ ἐν σαρκὶ, ἀλλ' ἐν Πνεύματι, εἴπερ Πνεῦμα Θεοῦ οἰκεῖ ἐν ὑμῖν· εἰ δέ τις Πνεῦμα Χριστοῦ οὐκ ἔχει, οὗτος οὐκ ἔστιν αὐτοῦ· 10 [h] εἰ δὲ Christ's flesh was created in the ὁμοίωμα, or likeness of sinful flesh, in that it was subject to the weaknesses of humanity consequent on Sin (as Aug. says, Serm. 152). But out of this weakness we were made strong; because it was by reason of this weakness that He was able to die; and by His Death we live for evermore.

— περὶ ἁμαρτίας] for sin, on account of sin, which was the reason of Christ's mission from the Father. Heb. x. 6. 18. "Propter peccatum," Vulg. in MS. Amiatin.

St. Paul's doctrine here has been expounded in clear and strong language by the Author of Paradise Lost, speaking of the Contest between the Son of God Incarnate and our ghostly Enemy, in the following Address of Michael to Adam:

"To whom thus Michael. Dream not of their fight
As of a duel, or the local wounds
Of head or heel: Not therefore joins the Son
Manhood to Godhead, with more strength to foil
Thy enemy, nor so is overcome
Satan, whose fall from Heaven a deadlier bruise Disabled, not to give thee thy death's wound
Which He, Who comes thy Saviour, shall secure,
Not by destroying Satan, but his works
In thee and in thy seed. Nor can this be,
But by fulfilling that which thou dost want,
Obedience to the Law of God, imposed,
On penalty of death; and suffering death;
The penalty to thy transgression due,
And due to theirs which out of thine will grow.
So only can high Justice rest appaid.
The Law of God exact He shall fulfil,
Both by obedience and by love, though love
Alone fulfil the law; thy punishment
He shall endure, by coming in the flesh
To a reproachful life, and cursed death;
Proclaiming life to all who shall believe
In His Redemption; and that His Obedience,
Imputed, becomes theirs by Faith; His merits
To save them, not their own, though legal, works.
For this He shall live hated, be blasphemed,
Seized on by force, judged, and to death condemned
A shameful and accursed, nailed to the cross
By His own Nation; slain for bringing life:
But to the cross He nails thy enemies,
The Law that is against thee, and the sins
Of all mankind, with Him there crucified,
Never to hurt them more, who rightly trust
In this His satisfaction; So He dies;
But soon revives; Death over Him no power
Shall long usurp; ere the third dawning light
Return, the stars of morn shall see Him rise
Out of His grave, fresh as the dawning light;
Thy ransom paid, which man from death redeems,
His death for man, as many as offered life
Neglect not, and the benefit embrace
By Faith not void of works."

(Paradise Lost, book xii. v. 385.)

— κατέκρινε τὴν ἁμαρτίαν ἐν τῇ σαρκί] He condemned Sin in the flesh, that is, in and by the flesh He condemned Sin.

Sin had tyrannized over us in our flesh (ἐν σαρκὶ) as the seat of its empire; and by our flesh as its instrument and weapon. But God used our flesh as an instrument for our deliverance, and for the condemnation of Sin, and for the establishment of His own empire in us. And how? By the Incarnation of His own Son. By sending His own Son to take our flesh, and to dwell in it; and to be our Emmanuel, God with us, "God manifest in the flesh."

He condemned Sin,—

(1) By the sinless obedience of Christ, God in our flesh; a visible witness of the sinfulness of Sin, and pronouncing Judgment against it.

(2) By Christ's sacrifice of His own flesh on the cross, condemning Sin, as exceeding sinful, in that it required no less an expiation than the Death of the Son of God.

(3) Further, He condemned Sin as a culprit, by means of our Flesh, in and by which God in Christ triumphed over Sin, and destroyed Sin, and condemned Sin to Death, even by Christ's Death. (Heb. ii. 14.)

Thus God used the flesh, by which, and in which, Sin had reigned over us, as an instrument for the condemnation and destruction of Sin. Cp. below on Col. ii. 15.

4. ἵνα τὸ δικαίωμα] in order that the righteous requirement of the Law might be fulfilled.

Christ became Incarnate, not to destroy the Moral Law as a right rule (δικαίωμα) of practice, but in order to fulfil it, and to enable us by His grace to fulfil it.

On the word δικαίωμα, see above, i. 32; ii. 26. Some Expositors render δικ. τ. ν. that which the Law itself stipulated for, and required. It rather appears to mean that which God enacted as just, and what He required in the Law delivered by Him.

Do not therefore imagine (says the Apostle to the Jews) that I am disparaging the Law. On the contrary, I am declaring to you the true and the only way of fulfilling it. Christ came to take away the curse of the Law, but He came also to enable us to fulfil the command of the Law.

— τοῖς μὴ κ. σ. περιπατοῦσι] to those who do not walk according to the flesh. The μὴ indicates that the not walking after the flesh, but the Spirit, is the fulfilling of the Law.

6. τὸ φρόνημα τῆς σαρκός] the mind of the flesh.

7. οὐδὲ γὰρ δύναται] for it has not even the ability to obey.

8. οἱ δὲ—οὐ δύνανται] and they which are after the flesh have not the ability (which comes only by grace) to please God.

On these two verses (7 and 8) a seasonable caution is given by S. Augustine (Serm. 155, who cannot be charged with any leanings to Pelagianism), lest while we rejoice in, and are thankful for, the blessings of Grace, we fall into Manichæanism, and calumniate the Law: or into the no less dangerous error of some in modern times, who confound Human Nature (which is God's work) with its corruptions, which are due to Satan's wiles and to man's sins.

The constitution of Human Nature, the Moral Law, and Divine Grace, are all of them gifts of God: and all and each of them will be revered by those who love Him in all His works.

The caution above mentioned is as follows:

What does the Apostle mean by saying, "Neither can it be subject to God?" He does not mean that Man cannot, that the soul cannot, nor even that the flesh cannot, being, and so far as it is, a creature of God. But St. Paul means that the lust of the flesh cannot be subject to God. Corruption cannot,—not Nature. Therefore God provides a remedy, that the corruption of man may be removed, and his Nature be healed. The Saviour has come to Human Nature. He finds it sorely diseased; therefore He Who is the Great Physician is come.

Observe what the Apostle adds, They who are in the flesh cannot please God. Who are they? They who trust in the flesh; they who follow the lusts of the flesh; they who live in them; they who place their happiness in them; these are they of whom the Apostle is speaking. They cannot please God. He does not mean that they who are in the body cannot please God in this life. What! did not the holy Patriarchs please Him? Did not the holy Prophets please Him? Did not the holy Martyrs please Him, who suffered in the body, and confessed Christ, and endured severe bodily pain for His sake? They carried the flesh, but were not carried by it. So it is then; Not they who live in this world, but they who live a life of carnal pleasure in this world, they cannot please God. S. Augustine.

Χριστὸς ἐν ὑμῖν, τὸ μὲν σῶμα νεκρὸν δι' ἁμαρτίαν, τὸ δὲ Πνεῦμα ζωὴ διὰ δικαιοσύνην.

11 [i] Εἰ δὲ τὸ Πνεῦμα τοῦ ἐγείραντος Ἰησοῦν ἐκ νεκρῶν οἰκεῖ ἐν ὑμῖν, ὁ ἐγείρας τὸν Χριστὸν ἐκ νεκρῶν ζωοποιήσει καὶ τὰ θνητὰ σώματα ὑμῶν διὰ τὸ ἐνοικοῦν αὐτοῦ Πνεῦμα ἐν ὑμῖν.

12 [k] Ἄρα οὖν, ἀδελφοί, ὀφειλέται ἐσμὲν οὐ τῇ σαρκὶ, τοῦ κατὰ σάρκα ζῆν.

13 [l] Εἰ γὰρ κατὰ σάρκα ζῆτε, μέλλετε ἀποθνήσκειν· εἰ δὲ Πνεύματι τὰς πράξεις τοῦ σώματος θανατοῦτε, ζήσεσθε. 14 [m] Ὅσοι γὰρ Πνεύματι Θεοῦ ἄγονται, οὗτοι υἱοί εἰσι Θεοῦ. 15 [n] Οὐ γὰρ ἐλάβετε πνεῦμα δουλείας πάλιν εἰς φόβον, ἀλλ' ἐλάβετε Πνεῦμα υἱοθεσίας ἐν ᾧ κράζομεν, Ἀββᾶ, ὁ Πατήρ. 16 [o] Αὐτὸ τὸ Πνεῦμα συμμαρτυρεῖ τῷ πνεύματι ἡμῶν, ὅτι ἐσμὲν τέκνα Θεοῦ· i Acts 2. 24. ch. 6. 4, 5. 1 Cor. 6. 14. 2 Cor. 4. 14. Eph. 2. 5. Col. 2. 13.

k ch. 6. 7, 18.
l Gal. 6. 8. Col. 3. 5, 6.
m Gal. 5. 18.
n 2 Tim. 1. 7. Gal. 3. 26. & 4. 5, 6.
o 2 Cor. 1. 22. & 5. 5. Eph. 1. 13. & 4. 30. 1 John 5. 10.

---

10. τὸ μὲν σῶμα νεκρόν] your body is still dead, subject to death; it is still as it were a corpse on account of sin original and actual (see next verse), but your spirit is not dead. No; it is even ζωὴ—Life—a living principle through righteousness, namely, through the perfect righteousness of Him Who is "the Lord our Righteousness," Who took our Nature, and Who has reconciled and united you in that nature to God, and Who has ascended in that nature to heaven, and has sent down the Holy Spirit upon you to make your bodies His Temples, and in Whom ye are incorporated, and live by Faith in Him; so that you are accounted righteous through His Righteousness, and receive new powers of Righteousness by His sanctifying grace.

— νεκρόν] dead. And not only so, but although your body is subject to death, for sin, yet if the Divine Spirit which has been given you continue to dwell in you, He Who raised Christ from the dead (ἐκ νεκρῶν) will vivify your mortal body, through His Spirit dwelling in the mortal tenement as a ναὸς or temple of your body, where it abides. Cp. 1 Cor. iii. 16, 17; vi. 19. 2 Cor. vi. 16.

11. Εἰ δὲ τὸ Πνεῦμα] But if the Spirit of Him Who raised Jesus—the Man Jesus—from the dead dwelleth in you, then He Who raised Christ—the Anointed One, Who has received the Unction of the Holy Ghost, which flows down from Him on you who are His members—then, I say, He Who raised Christ from the dead, will quicken your mortal bodies also through the Spirit Who dwelleth in you. See the next note.

— διὰ τὸ—ἐν ὑμῖν] The reading of this passage was disputed by the Macedonian heretics, who denied the Divinity and Personality of the Holy Ghost. They affirmed that the true reading here is διὰ τὸ ἐνοικοῦν αὐτοῦ Πνεῦμα, and that it is to be translated, On account of His Spirit which dwelleth in you.

It was replied by their opponents, that another reading, διὰ τοῦ ἐνοικοῦντος αὐτοῦ Πνεύματος, i. e. 'by the agency of His Spirit which dwelleth in you,' is found in all the earliest MSS. ἐν ἅπασι ἀρχαίοις ἀντιγράφοις. See Maxim. Dial. c. Macedon. in Athanasius, ii. pp. 228. 234, and so this text is exhibited in A, C, and in ℵ, and many Cursive MSS., and is cited by Clemens Alex. (Strom. iii. p. 334), Methodius apud Epiphan. Hær. lxiv., S. Hippolytus c. Noët. p. 456, Basil c. Eunomium, iii. p. 267, Ambrose, Athanasius (ad Serapion. i. 179), Augustine, and by Chrys., 1 Cor. xv. 45, who thence asserts, that it is the work of the Holy Spirit to quicken what is dead.

St. Paul himself also may perhaps be thought to confirm the latter reading by a parallel passage in 1 Cor. vi. 14, ὁ δὲ Θεὸς καὶ τὸν Κύριον ἤγειρε, καὶ ἡμᾶς ἐξεγερεῖ διὰ τῆς δυνάμεως αὐτοῦ.

But the preponderance of extant MSS. here seems rather to be in favour of διὰ τὸ ἐνοικοῦν, which is in B, D, E, F, G, J, K.

The Editors are divided in their conclusions. Griesb., Scholz, Tholuck, Meyer, Fritzsche, Alford, Philippi, are for the accusative, διὰ τὸ ἐνοικοῦν. Elz., Lachm., Tisch., De Wette, prefer the genitive, διὰ τοῦ ἐνοικοῦντος. But if διὰ τὸ ἐνοικοῦν is the true reading—as seems, on the whole, to be most probable,—yet the sense may still be, by means of the Holy Ghost. See John vi. 57, ζῶ διὰ τὸν πατέρα, καὶ ὁ τρώγων με ζήσεται δι' ἐμέ. Cp. Rev. xii. 11, ἐνίκησαν διὰ τὸ αἷμα, and Winer, § 49, p. 356.

Bp. Pearson (on the Creed, Art. xi.) thus expounds the words: "The Saints of God are endued with the Spirit of Christ, and thereby their bodies become Temples of the Holy Ghost. Now as the promise of the Spirit was upon the Resurrection of Christ, so the gift and possession of the Spirit is an assurance of the Resurrection of a Christian."

There is also another consideration in favour of the translation, 'by means of His Spirit.' An analogy is exhibited in Scripture between our first Resurrection in Baptism to a life of grace, and our second Resurrection hereafter to a life of glory. See on John v. 25—28. And as the former of these two Resurrections is due to the in-working of the Holy Ghost, so also is the latter.

In like manner, as the first birth of Christ our Head from the womb of the Virgin was due to the operation of the Holy Ghost, so likewise His Second Birth—namely, from the Grave, by which He became the first-born from the dead, the first-begotten from the dead—is ascribed to the energy of the same Spirit. See above on i. 4.

It seems probable that the Apostle is here speaking of the quickening virtue of the Holy Spirit, Who dwells in Christ's members, and makes their bodies to be His temple, and vivifies them by His power, dwelling in them, and Who is described in Holy Scripture as the Giver of life. See John vi. 63. 2 Cor. iii. 6.

12—17.] For an exposition of these verses, see Aug. Serm. 156.

14. υἱοί εἰσι Θεοῦ] So B, F, G.—Elz. has εἰσιν υἱοὶ Θεοῦ.

15. Οὐ γὰρ ἐλάβετε] For ye received not (at your baptismal incorporation in Christ; cp. vi. 17) the spirit of bondage to bring you back (πάλιν), or, that you should turn back, to the slavish fear of a spiritual Egypt, but you received the Spirit of adoption; and we may be permitted to add, with reverence, of you likewise was true what God said of the literal Israel, and of Christ as the Head of the Spiritual Israel,—out of Egypt have I called My Son. (Hos. xi. 1; cp. Matt. ii. 15.) You have left behind you your foes drowned in the Red Sea of your Baptism in Christ's blood, and you are now on your march, like your fathers of old, to your paternal inheritance and everlasting rest in heaven.

— Ἀββᾶ, ὁ Πατήρ] Abba, Father. This is the cry of the heart, which, though the mouth be shut, sounds to the ear of God; for God is the hearer of the heart. Aug. (Serm. 156), Tertullian.

(1) He uses the Chaldee word אַבָּא, from the Hebr. אָב, father, to remind them of their origin from God, by Ab-raham, and of the deliverance of their race, God's Israel, His First-born (Jer. xxxi. 9), and so symbolizing Christ Himself (see on Matt. ii. 15); those deliverances of the literal Israel from Egypt and Babylon being typical of redemption by Christ.

(2) He adds the Greek ὁ Πατήρ to show, that the Gentiles as well as Jews are, by adoption in Christ, the Eternal First-born,—made equally children of Ab-raham and of God, and co-heirs with Christ (v. 17). "Quare voluit utrumque, Abba et Πατὴρ ponere? Quin videbat angularem quem reprobaverunt ædificantes, et factus est in caput anguli, sic dictum, quia recepit utrumque parietem (i. e. Judæos et Gentes) de diverso venientem." Augustine (Serm. 157).

The Spirit of adoption is said to cry not only Abba in the hearts of the Jews, but also Πατὴρ in the hearts of the Gentiles. Therefore our Saviour would not have His own name to be entirely Hebrew or entirely Greek, but the one Hebrew, Jesus, the other Greek, Christ; to show that He is "our Peace, Who of two hath made one." (Eph. ii. 14. 21.) Bp. Andrewes (v. p. 668).

The same combination of the Hebrew Abba with the Greek Πατὴρ occurs in our Lord's prayer in His Agony, when He was bearing the load, and was about to take away the guilt, of the sins of both Jew and Gentile. Mark xiv. 36. Compare the note on Gal. iv. 6.

16. Πνεῦμα συμμαρτυρεῖ] the Holy Spirit witnesseth together with our spirit, by the fruits of the Spirit, i. e. goodness, righteousness, truth, love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, faith, meekness, temperance (Eph. v. 9. Gal. v. 22, 23), which by His aid we bring forth in our lives. The Spirit thus testifies to us p Gal. 4. 7. 2 Tim. 2. 11, 12. Eph. 1. 11. 1 Pet. 1. 3. Matt. 25. 34. Heb. 6. 17.

q 2 Cor. 4. 9, 17. & 11. 23. 1 Pet. 1. 6.
r Acts 3. 21. 2 Pet. 3. 13. Isa. 65. 17. s Ps. 38. 9. ch. 7. 24. 1 Cor. 1. 7. 2 Cor. 5. 2, 4. Gal. 5. 5. Eph. 1. 14. Tit. 2. 13.

17 [p] εἰ δὲ τέκνα, καὶ κληρονόμοι, κληρονόμοι μὲν Θεοῦ, συγκληρονόμοι δὲ Χριστοῦ, εἴπερ συμπάσχομεν, ἵνα καὶ συνδοξασθῶμεν.

18 [q] Λογίζομαι γὰρ, ὅτι οὐκ ἄξια τὰ παθήματα τοῦ νῦν καιροῦ πρὸς τὴν μέλλουσαν δόξαν ἀποκαλυφθῆναι εἰς ἡμᾶς. 19 [r] Ἡ γὰρ ἀποκαραδοκία τῆς κτίσεως τὴν ἀποκάλυψιν τῶν υἱῶν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἀπεκδέχεται. 20 Τῇ γὰρ ματαιότητι ἡ κτίσις ὑπετάγη, οὐχ ἑκοῦσα, ἀλλὰ διὰ τὸν ὑποτάξαντα, 21 ἐπ' ἐλπίδι ὅτι καὶ αὐτὴ ἡ κτίσις ἐλευθερωθήσεται ἀπὸ τῆς δουλείας τῆς φθορᾶς, εἰς τὴν ἐλευθερίαν τῆς δόξης τῶν τέκνων τοῦ Θεοῦ. 22 Οἴδαμεν γὰρ, ὅτι πᾶσα ἡ κτίσις συστενάζει καὶ συνωδίνει ἄχρι τοῦ νῦν· 23 [s] οὐ μόνον δὲ, ἀλλὰ καὶ αὐτοὶ τὴν ἀπαρχὴν τοῦ that we are sons of God by adoption, and encourages us to call Him our Father.

---

Let every one look into his own heart and see whether he says "Abba, Father," from the lowest depths of his soul, and with fervent charity, and he will see whether he has the witness of the Spirit. Augustine (Serm. 156).

18. Λογίζομαι] I reckon that the sufferings of this present season (καιροῦ) are not worthy of being compared to (πρὸς) the glory which is to be revealed in us.

Λογίζομαι, I reckon. I have added up the items of suffering on the one side of the account, and the grace and glory on the other; and having made the calculation I now strike the balance, and declare the result. On St. Paul's peculiar qualification for making this estimate, see on 2 Cor. xii. 4. These words are quoted by the Churches of Lyons and Vienne, relating the sufferings of their martyrs in the second century. Euseb. v. 1.

Observe also the word καιροῦ, season; marking its short and transitory character. The season of suffering will be followed by an eternity of glory.

St. Paul here answers an objection of the Jews, who asked,

If you Christians are the "children of God," how is it that you are exposed to such severe afflictions in this world?

We Israelites (they argued) are God's people, and our obedience to Him has always been attended with worldly blessings and temporal prosperity. And He assured us that this would be the evidence of His approval and of His favour.

So it would also be with you, if you were, as you profess to be, the chosen people, and favoured children of God.

St. Paul shows (in reply to such allegations as these),

(1) That evil, physical and moral, came into the world by the first Adam (v. 20).

(2) That the light sufferings of Christians lead them to eternal glory, in and through Christ.

(3) That the whole Creation was originally created very good, and was afterwards subjected to evil, in and by the first Adam (Gen. iii. 17), and now waits and groans for the liberation to be accomplished in and by the second Adam, Christ.

(4) That thus the whole Creation is a witness to the need of Redemption, and to the blessedness of that Redemption which is in Christ.

19. τὴν ἀποκάλυψιν] the manifestation: to be explained by ἀποκαλυφθῆναι in the preceding verse. Their full manifestation as sons; the glorious spring-time, in which, after the wintry bareness of earth, all their beauty will be revealed and burst forth, like foliage, in full glory; or as the Sun comes forth in its splendour, after having been veiled for a while by clouds. That manifestation will be when the Judge will say, "Come, ye blessed of my Father," Who is your Father also. (Matt. xxv. 34.) Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun, in the kingdom of their Father. (Matt. xiii. 43.)

20. ματαιότητι] הֶבֶל (hebel), to vanity, weakness; symbolized by the first death after the fall—that of Abel, whose name is ματαιότης (Gen. iv. 2—10), and was a proper expression of the ματαιότης, or vanity, to which man was reduced by the Fall, and to which the Creation was reduced with him its lord and master. Hence the Psalmist says כָּל־הֶבֶל כָּל־אָדָם (col Abel col Adam); omnis Adam (i. e. man) totus Abel (i. e. vanity); "every man is altogether vanity." (Ps. xxxix. 6; cp. Ps. cxliv. 4.)

But this name Abel, ματαιότης, or vanity, contained also a promise of revival and resurrection.

The first Blood shed on the earth being the Blood of him whose sacrifice was accepted by God (Gen. iv. 4. Heb. xi. 4), and being shed by his brother Cain (1 John iii. 12), whose sacrifice was not accepted (Gen. iv. 5), preached a Resurrection, and Judgment to come. And the first blood shed in the world—that of "the righteous Abel" (as Christ calls him, Matt. xxiii. 35), the feeder of sheep—was typical of the blood of the Good Shepherd, laying down His life for His sheep, which speaks better things than even that of Abel, the world's Proto-Martyr (Matt. xxiii. 35), prefiguring Him Who is ὁ Μάρτυς ὁ πιστὸς καὶ ἀληθινὸς (Rev. i. 5; iii. 14), Jesus Christ, in Whom all are made alive, and Who will change the vile bodies of His servants so as to be made like unto His glorious body (Phil. iii. 21) in the blessed day of "the redemption of the body," when they will be "delivered from the bondage of corruption into the liberty of the glory of the children of God."

— ἡ κτίσις] the Creation was made subject to vanity (not of its own choice, or will, but) by reason of Him Who made it subject,—in hope, that even the Creation itself shall be set free from the bondage of corruption (in which it now groans) into the liberty of the glory of the children of God.

By the Fall of Man the whole Creation has been reduced from the high estate of perfect goodness in which it was formed at the beginning (Gen. i. 4. 10. 12. 18. 21. 25. 31), and it has been subjected to vanity in consequence of the Fall of Man, the lord of the creatures.

After the Fall God said to Adam, "Cursed is the ground for thy sake" (i. e. on account of thy sin), "in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread till thou return unto the ground, for out of it thou wast taken; for dust thou art, and to dust thou shalt return." Gen. iii. 17—19.

Thus, by the sin of the first Adam, not only did death come into the world, but the whole Creation, which had been made "very good" by God, and had been blessed by Him, was marred and made subject to vanity and to a curse. Weeds and thorns, briars and thistles, deform its beauty; and the earth is riven by earthquakes and volcanoes, and desolated by floods, and is reserved for dissolution by fire. (2 Pet. iii. 10.)

But it has been so subjected involuntarily, and by no fault of its own; and it has been subjected in a hope, that, as it sympathizes with man in his shameful bondage in Adam, so will it also share in his glorious deliverance in Christ.

— διὰ τὸν ὑποτάξαντα] by reason of Him Who subjected the Creation to vanity: on account of the Fall of Man, which brought death into the world, and covered the earth with the thorns and thistles of the curse consequent upon the Fall (Gen. iii. 17, 18; cp. Mede's Works, p. 230); and the Creation was subjected in hope of a glorious restoration, and of the coming of that kingdom which shall not perish. The κτίσις of God is symbolized by Abel in its ματαιότης, and also in its hopes. See preceding note, and 2 Pet. iii. 10—13, and cp. Bp. Andrewes, v. 394.

The children of God are symbolized by Abel, as those of the Evil One are by Cain, 1 John iii. 12. "Adam utriusque generis pater, id est, et cujus series ad terrenam, et cujus series ad cœlestem, pertinet civitatem." Aug. (de Civ. Dei, xv. 17).

21. τοῦ Θεοῦ] of God. Not of Adam only, but of Him Who is the Father of Adam, God. Luke iii. 38.

22. πᾶσα ἡ κτίσις—συνωδίνει] the whole Creation (πᾶσα ἡ κτίσις, Mark xvi. 15. Col. i. 23) groaneth together universally, as with one heart, moved by the same sorrow and desire, and yearns and longs for a better state. The whole Creation is as it were in the throes of parturition, even from the Fall to the end of the world. These ὠδῖνες will become still more intense, in the troubles physical, civil, and ecclesiastical, the earthquakes, famines, and wars of the Latter Days, as Christ declares, Matt. xxiv. 8. Mark xiii. 8. He speaks of them as ἀρχαὶ ὠδίνων (Mark xiii. 9), as preparatory to the terrible crisis of the Great Day, which is compared by St. Paul to the pangs of childbirth. (1 Thess. v. 3.) Then the new Creation will be born. The Abel of this world will be delivered from its ματαιότης, and rise to eternal glory through the Birth-pangs of death, to the Palingenesia, or New Birth of a glorious Immortality. Cp. on Matt. xix. 28. Acts iii. 19—21. Eph. iv. 30. 2 Pet. iii. 13. Rev. xxi. 1, and the important passages in the Ancient Catena, ed. Cramer, pp. 100—102.

23. οὐ μόνον δέ] Not only does the Creation crave for emancipation, but we ourselves also yearn for the adoption—the redemption of our bodies from corruption.

Πνεύματος ἔχοντες καὶ ἡμεῖς αὐτοὶ ἐν ἑαυτοῖς στενάζομεν, υἱοθεσίαν ἀπεκδεχόμενοι, τὴν ἀπολύτρωσιν τοῦ σώματος ἡμῶν. [24] [t] Τῇ γὰρ ἐλπίδι ἐσώθημεν· ἐλπὶς δὲ βλεπομένη οὐκ ἔστιν ἐλπίς· ὃ γὰρ βλέπει τις, τί καὶ ἐλπίζει; [25] [u] εἰ δὲ ὃ οὐ βλέπομεν ἐλπίζομεν, δι' ὑπομονῆς ἀπεκδεχόμεθα.

[26] [x] Ὡσαύτως δὲ καὶ τὸ Πνεῦμα συναντιλαμβάνεται τῇ ἀσθενείᾳ ἡμῶν· τὸ γὰρ τί προσευξώμεθα καθὸ δεῖ οὐκ οἴδαμεν· ἀλλὰ αὐτὸ τὸ Πνεῦμα ὑπερεντυγχάνει στεναγμοῖς ἀλαλήτοις· [27] [y] ὁ δὲ ἐρευνῶν τὰς καρδίας οἶδε τί τὸ φρόνημα τοῦ Πνεύματος, ὅτι κατὰ Θεὸν ἐντυγχάνει ὑπὲρ ἁγίων.

[28] [z] Οἴδαμεν δὲ ὅτι τοῖς ἀγαπῶσι τὸν Θεὸν πάντα συνεργεῖ εἰς ἀγαθὸν, τοῖς κατὰ πρόθεσιν κλητοῖς οὖσιν· [29] [a] ὅτι οὓς προέγνω, καὶ προώρισε συμμόρφους τῆς εἰκόνος τοῦ Υἱοῦ αὐτοῦ, εἰς τὸ εἶναι αὐτὸν πρωτότοκον ἐν πολλοῖς ἀδελφοῖς· t 2 Cor. 5. 7.

u 2 Cor. 4. 18. Heb. 11. 1.
x Prov. 15. 8. Ps. 145. 19. Zech. 12. 10. Matt. 20. 22. James 4. 3.
y 1 Chron. 28. 9. 2 ch. 9. 11. 2 Tim. 1. 9. 1 Cor. 3. 21. 2 Cor. 4. 15. ver. 32. Hos. 2. 18. Prov. 16. 7.
a Eph. 1. 9, 11. 2 Cor. 3. 18. 1 Cor. 5. 49. Phil. 3. 21. Col. 1. 18.

Under the words "the whole Creation," the Apostle may perhaps include the unregenerate Heathen, who, weary of their wanderings, and unsatisfied with the pleasures of earth, panted and yearned for something that they could not find. See Alex. Knox, Remains, i. 6—18.

— ἀπαρχήν] the first-fruits of the Spirit, the pledge and earnest of the future Harvest of glory at the Great Day. (Matt. xiii. 39. Rev. xiv. 15.) So Christ is the ἀπαρχὴ τῶν κεκοιμημένων (1 Cor. xv. 20. 23), the Wave-sheaf which presignified and sanctified the Universal Harvest of the Resurrection.

— ἡμεῖς] So Elz. and Alf. B omits ἡμεῖς, and so Tisch. D, F, G transfer it to before the first αὐτοὶ, and A, C place it before καὶ, and so Lachmann.

— τὴν ἀπολύτρωσιν τοῦ σώματος] the redemption of our body from its present bondage of corruption. See on 2 Cor. v. 2.

24. ἐσώθημεν] we were saved, that is, as far as God's design and desire are concerned. He wills us to be saved, and has done all that is requisite for our salvation. See p. 193 and Titus iii. 5. It remains only that we should do our part. See below, vv. 28, 29, and Acts ii. 47. The three Christian graces, Faith, Hope, and Charity, wait on the new birth of the Christian Soul, and therefore the Church prays at Baptism that "being stedfast in faith, joyful through hope, and rooted in charity, it may so pass the waves of this troublesome world, that finally it may come to the land of everlasting life."

26. Ὡσαύτως δὲ καὶ τὸ Πνεῦμα] In like manner the Spirit also. Not only does Nature bear witness to the need of a Redeemer, not only does all Creation, even from the Fall of Man, yearn for Redemption, and so testify to the reasonableness of our hopes, but the Spirit also prays for the glorious consummation which we desire.

— τῇ ἀσθενείᾳ] So A, B, C, D. Elz. ταῖς ἀσθενείαις.

— ὑπερεντυγχάνει] intercedeth for us with God.

The Spirit of God, Who knoweth the secrets of the counsel of God, will make that prayer for us which shall be both for our good, and also according to God's will (Bp. Andrewes, v. 387), who, however, expresses an opinion that it "cannot be verified that the Holy Spirit, which is God, either prayeth or groaneth," and says that the Apostle's meaning is, "teaches and enables us to pray."

This is the exposition of some of the Fathers, as Origen here, Ambrose, Ep. 23, Aug. Ep. 121, Greg. Moral. ii. 22, "de orando Deo." Cp. Matt. x. 20, where the Holy Spirit is said to speak, because He teaches the Apostles to do so. See A Lapide.

But others of the Ancients explain it of an intercessory work performed by the Holy Spirit Himself, i. e. "de postulationibus Spiritûs Sancti in consistorio Sacro-Sanctæ Trinitatis, ubi desideria nostra quasi Paracletus noster exponit." See Thom. Aquin. 3, pp. 9. 21, a. 4. A Lapide. And this meaning is adopted by Bp. Pearson (on the Creed, Art. viii. p. 471. 499, and notes), who says, "from which intercession especially, I conceive, He hath the name of Paraclete given Him by Christ." (John xiv. 16. 26; xv. 26; xvi. 7.)

After ὑπερεντυγχάνει Elz. adds ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν, not in A, B, D, F, G.

— ἀλαλήτοις] not to be expressed by human language,—"inenarrabilibus,"—but inwardly felt by the Spirit; and God, Who searches the heart, knows what their meaning is.

28. Οἴδαμεν δέ] But we know —. A new argument. Though you Jews may appeal to our sufferings as arguments that we are not God's people and children, yet we know that all things work together for good to them who love Him, and are "conformed to the image of His Son"—Who was given up by Him, to suffer for us (vv. 29—32).

— τοῖς ἀγαπῶσι τὸν Θεόν] to them that love God. Thus at the beginning of his argument on this subject, St. Paul bids us to judge of our Predestination from the practical evidence of our lives shown by works of love to God.

If we see there the fruits of love, then we may feel a comfortable assurance of God's love to us, for it is He Who gives us grace to love Him. And we may also see a proof of His love to us in the fact that He has called us into His Church; and we may cherish a good hope that if we abide in His love, and continue faithful members of His Church, all things will work together for our good. He had already asserted man's free-will, and consequent responsibility; and had affirmed that God gives Grace in order to help man's will. "We are debtors not to the flesh, to live after the flesh, for, if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die, but if by the Spirit, ye mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live; For as many as are led by the Spirit of God (that is, as follow and comply with His godly motions) are sons of God" (vv. 12—14).

— τοῖς κατὰ πρόθεσιν κλητοῖς οὖσιν] to those who are called according to His purpose, not according to works done or foreseen in them, but according to His eternal counsel in Christ (see Eph. i. 5. 11; iii. 11; 2 Tim. i. 9), and who are made members of His ἐκκλησία or Society of the Called.

This word κλητοὶ, called, had been already applied by St. Paul to all the members of the Visible Church at Rome (i. 6, 7). Similarly he applies it to all the members of the Church at Corinth (1 Cor. i. 2), in which were divisions (1 Cor. xi. 18, 19) and even heresies (1 Cor. xv. 12).

St. Paul having said that to them that love God all things work together for good, namely, to them who are called by Him into His Church according to His purpose, now adds, Because those whom He foreknew He also preordained to be conformed to the image of His Son, so that He may be the First-born among many brethren: and whom He (secretly) foreordained, these He also (visibly) called, and whom He called He also justified, and whom He justified, He also glorified.

On this and the following paragraphs, see above, Introduction to the Epistle, pp. 193—200.

29. ὅτι] because.

St. Paul now goes on to adduce proofs, that all things work together for good to them that love God.

These proofs are found in the fact, that God has shown His love to them by a visible call, and by a visible act of Justification (in their Baptism), exhibiting and declaring (what would otherwise have been secret) that He had foreknown them from eternity.

Προώρισε συμμόρφους is equivalent literally to He foreordained us for partakers in the form, or, to be conformed to the likeness of. See on 1 Cor. i. 8, and 2 Cor. iii. 6. Phil. iii. 21. Matt. Gr. Gr. § 420. Cp. i. 4, ὁρισθέντος υἱοῦ Θεοῦ, and Eph. i. 5, and on the genitive after συμμόρφους, Bernhardy, Syntax, p. 171; Kühner, ii. p. 172.

St. Paul's meaning, therefore, here is: God hath not only predestinated them from eternity, to everlasting life, but, inasmuch as that Predestination is secret, and could not therefore give any assurance to them, He has also discovered to them His eternal design and desire for their salvation, by an actual call of them into a visible Society, named the Church, and has incorporated them therein by an outward act, in Baptism, as members of the body of Christ.

Thus He has openly displayed His eternal love toward b ch. 9. 24. 1 Cor. 1. 24. 1 Pet. 2. 9.

30 b οὓς δὲ προώρισε, τούτους καὶ ἐκάλεσε· καὶ οὓς ἐκάλεσε, τούτους καὶ ἐδικαίωσεν· οὓς δὲ ἐδικαίωσε, τούτους καὶ ἐδόξασε.

them in Christ, and has given them a blessed hope and assurance of salvation, if they do their part, as He has done His, and if they abide, and bear fruit, in the body of Christ, in which He has engrafted them.

29, 30. οὓς προέγνω—οὓς δὲ προώρισε—ἐδόξασε] (1) Before we inquire into the meaning of this text, we must consider the design of the Apostle in writing this Epistle.

His purpose was, to prove to the Jews that, though they were God's chosen people for a time, yet that God had chosen an Universal Church from Eternity (see Eph. i. 11; iii. 11) to be His people in Christ, Who is the Seed promised to Abraham; that in Him all Nations are blessed; that Blessedness cometh by Faith on the Uncircumcision as well as on the Circumcision (iv. 10); that both Jews and Gentiles are guilty before God; that all have sinned (iii. 23); that all need a Redeemer; that a Redeemer has been provided for all in Christ; that God is the God of the Gentiles as well as the Jews (iii. 29); that there is no difference (iii. 22) between them; that in raising Christ the Head of every man, from the dead, and in setting Him at His own Right hand, He has given to all men a pledge and earnest of glory; that in Christ, honour and peace is assured to every man that worketh good (ii. 10); and that God's primary will and desire is that all men should be saved (1 Tim. ii. 4).

The best explanation of the word foreknew, as used here, is to be found in the Apostle's own use of the same word, in a following chapter of this same Epistle, "Has God rejected His own People Whom He foreknew? (ὃν προέγνω)" xi. 1, 2.

As the Apostle applies the word there to the entire Ancient Church, that of the Jews, God's chosen People, so he here applies the same word to the whole Universal Church, who are now God's chosen People, in Christ.

Indeed, the Apostle's purpose is here to teach the Jews, that they may not presume upon being God's People, on the ground of His foreknowledge, unless they obey His call to them in Christ; and that all are God's people who imitate the faith of Abraham, and accept the Gospel of Christ; and also to cheer the Gentiles by the assurance that they who were formerly not a people, may be God's People by becoming, and by continuing to be, living and faithful members of the Universal Church of Christ.

(2) It must be borne in mind, that Holy Scripture, in order to produce more assurance in us, often describes things as done which God (Who is immutable and Almighty) desires should be done.

Accordingly all members of the Visible Church are called "Saints," because God desires and designs them so to be: and the whole Visible Church is called Holy, because such she is in His will and deed. Similarly Christ is called the Saviour of the world (John iv. 42), and God is said to be the Saviour of all men (1 Tim. iv. 10), because He desires all to be saved (1 Tim. ii. 4), and has done all that could be expected on His part, in order that all should be saved.

Hence St. Paul has already spoken in this chapter, of our salvation, as a thing done, saying, that we were saved (v. 24), i. e. in God's will and on His part. See also Eph. ii. 5. 2 Tim. i. 9.

In the Apostolical writings (says Dr. Barrow, iii. 369) the title of σωζόμενοι and σεσωσμένοι, with others equivalent, viz. justified, sanctified, regenerated, quickened, are attributed to all the visibly faithful indifferently.

(3) St. Paul declares in this Epistle God's gracious design and desire, and also (as far as He is concerned) what has been, and is, His merciful act and deed to all mankind, adopted by Him in Christ, His own Son, Who has taken the nature of all, and has commanded that His Gospel should be preached to all, and that all should be baptized into His Body, and be permitted to cry Abba, Father, and who yearn for restoration; and for whom the Holy Spirit pleads (v. 26).

We may therefore confidently say, on the Authority of God's holy Word, that God predestinates every man to eternal salvation in Christ. This is His primary design and desire. This, as far as He is concerned, is also His act and deed.

That this primary desire, and universal predestination, will not take effect in all cases, is not due to any failing on His side, but on ours.

In His Will all are called. Christ Himself assures us of this. It is not the will of your Father which is in Heaven that one of these little ones should perish (Matt. xviii. 14). He has invited all, by the Universal commission, Go ye into all the world. Baptize all nations. Preach the Gospel to the whole creation. He has made it our duty to evangelize all (Matt. xxviii. 19. Mark xvi. 15). God is not willing that any should perish (2 Pet. iii. 9), but will have all men to be saved (1 Tim. ii. 4). He shut up all under sin in order that He might have mercy upon all (Rom. xi. 32). Redemption in Christ is as universal as Sin and Misery are in Adam. As in Adam all die, even so in Christ all are made alive (see Rom. v. 14—18. 1 Cor. xv. 22). God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ (1 Thess. v. 9). God was in Christ reconciling the world unto Himself (2 Cor. v. 19. Col. i. 20). God so loved the world that He gave His only-begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life (John iii. 16). He is the Saviour of the world, He is the propitiation not only for our sins, but for the sins of the whole world (1 John ii. 2). He gave Himself a ransom for all men (1 Tim. ii. 6). He died for all (2 Cor. v. 14, 15). As St. Paul declares in this Epistle, even in this passage, God spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all (v. 32), and Every one who believeth on Him will be saved; for the same God is Lord of all, and is rich in mercy to all who call upon Him; for every one who calleth on the name of the Lord shall be saved (Rom. x. 12, 13). He tasted death for every man (Heb. ii. 9, 10). And therefore St. Paul teaches that it is possible by bad example to destroy souls for which Christ died (1 Cor. viii. 11. Rom. xiv. 15), and that men may pollute the blood of Christ, by which they were sanctified (Heb. x. 29); and St. Peter says that by heresies men may deny the Lord that bought them (2 Pet. ii. 1), which could not be true, if Christ had not died for all, even for those who would not be saved by His Death. "Incarnatio, Dei mysterium est universæ salus Creaturæ." Ambrose (de Paradiso, 8).

Hence St. Paul, in other places, speaks of salvation as a thing done; because as far as God is concerned it is done. The grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared unto all men (Titus ii. 11), and according to His mercy He saved us (Titus iii. 5), by the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Ghost; and He hath saved us and called us with a holy calling (2 Tim. i. 9).

This certainty of salvation, as a thing already done on God's part, and the consequent assurance to us that He will never fail to continue to do all that is requisite on His side for the salvation of every believer, is strongly expressed by St. Paul in this present passage, by his use of the past tenses, He justified, He glorified.

Let us remember also that St. Paul is inspired by God. He speaks in God's name, and (if we may so say) from His point of view.

(4) In order also to guard against any narrow interpretations of this particular passage, St. Paul expressly declares here that God spared not His own Son, but gave Him up to death for us all (v. 32).

(5) The Apostle is here consoling and cheering the Roman Christians, especially the Jewish Christians, with the glorious offers of the Gospel.

But it would have been no encouragement to them to tell them that God had only called an unknown few among them.

It was indeed gracious intelligence, that God had loved all believers from eternity, in Christ, that He calls them all, justifies them all, offers the glory of heaven to all.

(6) It would be inconsistent with, and in contradiction to the whole scope of the Apostle in this Epistle, to suppose that God limits His offers to a few. The main drift of St. Paul in the present Epistle, is to eradicate such a notion from the mind of the Jews, who imagined that God's favours were confined to themselves; and to show the universality of God's love in Christ. He has proved that all are under sin, and that all, both Jews and Gentiles, need a Saviour, and that a Saviour has died for all, Who is no other than God's own Son, Who has taken the nature of all.

(7) If the word προώρισε, He predestinated, or foreordained, is to be limited (as some allege) to an unknown few among them, so must also the word ἐκάλεσε, He called.

But St. Paul begins this Epistle by addressing them all as called (i. 1). Therefore all the faithful are supposed by him to be predestinated by God to be conformed to His Son's image. And St. Paul applies the same word 'called' in another place to all Christians. See Eph. i. 5. 11, which affords a clear interpretation of this passage. And he had said to the Corinthians (i. 21—24), to whom he was declaring the freeness and fulness of grace in Christ, that "it pleased God to save them that believe" in Christ crucified, Who is the power of God and the wisdom of God unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks.

S. Ignatius confirms this sense remarkably, by applying the word προωρισμένη (predestinated) to the whole Church of Ephe-

31 [c] Τί οὖν ἐροῦμεν πρὸς ταῦτα; εἰ ὁ Θεὸς ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν, τίς καθ' ἡμῶν; 32 [d] Ὃς

[c] Ps. 118. 6. 2 Kings 6. 16.
[d] Isa. 53. 5, 7. John 3. 16. ch. 4. 25. & 5. 6, 9. 2 Pet. 2. 4. 2 Tim. 2. 13.

sus, which he calls a Church predestinated from eternity, προωρισμένην πρὸ αἰώνων ἐκκλησίαν (ad Eph. i.). Similarly St. Peter speaks of the Christian calling as already effected on God's side, and he exhorts all who are called to make that calling and election sure, by a right use on their part of God's grace (2 Pet. i. 10); and he speaks of a whole Church as elect (1 Pet. v. 13). Cp. 1 Thess. i. 4, and see Hussey, Acad. Sermons, pp. 307–309.

(8) On the whole it appears that the Apostle teaches here that God foreknew, not the Jews only, as they imagined, but He from the beginning loved all men in Christ; in due time He calls all by Him and His Apostles. He offers to justify and acquit all freely by Faith in His Blood. He in mind and desire gives the glory of heaven to all.

We were all called when we were made Christians.

Behold, men were baptized, and all their sins were forgiven them; they were justified from their sins. We have been justified. Let each one of you, having been already placed in a state of Justification by receiving remission of sins in the Laver of Regeneration, and having received the Holy Ghost, go onward day by day, and grow in grace till he is perfected. S. Augustine (Serm. 158).

(9) Therefore the Church of England, in her Catechism, teaches all her children to say that they have been called to a state of salvation; and she says at the baptism of every several infant, "Doubt ye not, but earnestly believe that Christ will favourably receive this present Infant, that He will embrace him with the arms of His mercy, that He will give him the blessing of eternal life, and make him partaker of His everlasting kingdom."

And after the Sacrament of Baptism is administered, she gives thanks to God for these benefits as already received.

Thus she teaches us in what sense we are to understand St. Paul's προέγνω, ἐκάλεσε, ἐδικαίωσε, ἐδόξασε, He foreknew, He called, He justified, He glorified. She considers these things as done; for in God's will and on His side they are done for all members of the visible Church of Christ.

(10) But in thus stating God's will and deed, the Church does not forget that man has his work to perform, and that unless we perform our part, all God's gracious purposes towards us will fail of their effect, and only increase our condemnation.

She therefore adds, "Ye have heard that our Lord Jesus Christ hath promised in His Gospel to grant all those things that ye have prayed for, which promise He, for His part, will most surely keep and perform. Wherefore after this promise made by Christ, this Infant must also faithfully for his part promise," &c.

According to God's will and deed, all are called, justified, and glorified in Christ. He has done His part that they should be so, effectually.

But this act of God's Will does not take away man's Free-Will. It is God's will, that man's will should be free.

God gives man grace, in order to sanctify and quicken his will, but not to destroy it.

Man's free-will is God's work, and no one of God's works runs counter to any other. By the very fact of his freedom, man may abuse his will. And it is by abuse of his will—by not conforming it to God's will, but by setting it against that will—that man destroys himself.

God's foreknowledge of man's future state does nothing to determine that state.

Nothing will be, because God knows that it will be; but because it will be, it is known by God, before it is. Judas became a traitor, and the Prophets foretold that he would be so. The Prophets foretold it, because it would be so; but it was not so, because they foretold it. Origen.

Our salvation is from God's love in Christ; but our destruction (if we are destroyed) is from ourselves.

The above statements on these important points may be illustrated and confirmed by the testimony of two of the wisest Anglican Divines, who have treated this subject with great labour and skill, Richard Hooker and Isaac Barrow; the former in certain papers recently brought to light, and deserving careful perusal, as follows;—

Prescience, Predestination, and Grace, impose not that necessity by force, whereof man in doing good hath all freedom of choice taken from him.

If Prescience did impose any such necessity, seeing Prescience is not only of good but of evil, then must we grant that Adam himself could not choose but sin; and that Adam sinned not voluntarily, because that which Adam did ill was foreseen.

If Predestination did impose such necessity, then was there nothing voluntary in Adam's well-doing neither, because what Adam did well was predestinated.

Or, if Grace did impose such necessity, how was it possible that Adam should have done otherwise than well, being so furnished as he was with Grace?

Prescience extendeth unto all things, but causeth nothing. Predestination to life, although it be infinitely ancienter than the actual work of creation, doth notwithstanding presuppose the purpose of creation; because, in the order of our consideration and knowledge, it must first have being that shall have a happy being. Whatsoever the purpose of creation therefore doth establish, the same by the purpose of predestination may be perfected, but in no case disannulled and taken away. Seeing then the natural freedom of man's will was contained in the purpose of creating man (for this freedom is a part of man's nature), Grace contained under the purpose of predestinating man may perfect and doth, but cannot possibly destroy the liberty of man's will. That which hath wounded and overthrown the liberty, wherein man was created as able to do good as evil, is only our original sin, which God did not predestinate, but He foresaw it, and predestinated Grace to serve as a remedy. Freedom of operation we have by Nature, but the ability of virtuous operation by Grace; because, through sin our nature hath taken that disease and weakness whereby of itself it inclineth only unto evil. The natural powers and faculties therefore of man's mind are, through our native corruption, so weakened, and of themselves so averse from God, that without the influence of His special grace they bring forth nothing in His sight acceptable; no, not the blossoms or least buds that tend to the fruit of eternal life.

Which powers and faculties notwithstanding retain still their natural manner of operation, although their original perfection be gone; man hath still a reasonable understanding, and a will thereby frameable to good things, but is not thereunto now able to frame himself. Therefore God hath ordained Grace to countervail this our imbecility, and to serve as His hand, that thereby we, which cannot move ourselves, may be drawn, but amiably drawn.

If the grace of God did enforce men to goodness, nothing would be more unpleasant unto man than virtue; whereas contrariwise, there is nothing so full of joy and consolation as the conscience of well-doing.

Shall we think that to eternal torments God hath, for the only manifestation of His power, adjudged by an eternal decree the greatest part of the very noblest of all His creatures, without any respect of sin foreseen in them? Lord, Thou art just and severe, but not cruel. And seeing all the ancient Fathers of the Church of Christ have evermore with uniform consent agreed that reprobation presupposeth foreseen sin as a most just cause whereupon it groundeth itself; sin at the least original in them whose portion of eternal punishment is easiest, as they that suffer but the only loss of the joys of heaven; sin of several degrees in them, whose plagues accordingly by the same act of reprobation were proportioned; let us not in this case of all other remove the limits and bounds which our fathers before us have set. If we look upon the rank or chain of things voluntarily derived from the positive will of God, we behold the riches of His glory proposed as the end of all, we behold the beatitude of men and angels ordained as a mean unto that end, graces and blessings in all abundance referred as means unto that happiness, God blessed for evermore, the voluntary Author of all those graces.

But concerning the heaps of evils which do so overwhelm the world, compare them with God, and from the greatest to the least of them, He disclaimeth them all. He refuseth utterly to be entitled either Alpha or Omega, the beginning or the end, of any evil. The evil of sin is within the compass of God's prescience, but not of His predestination, or foreordaining will.

The evil of punishment is within the compass of God's foreappointed and determining will, but by occasion of precedent sin. For punishments are evil, because they are naturally grievous to him which must sustain them.

Yet in that they proceed from justice thereby revenging evil, such evils have also the nature of good; neither doth God refuse, but challenge it as an honour that He maketh evil-doers which sow iniquity to reap destruction, according to that in the Prophet (Amos iii. 6), There is no evil in the city which I the Lord have not done. God therefore, with the good evil of punishment, revengeth the evil good of sin.

Sin is no plant of God's setting. He seeth and findeth it a thing irregular, exorbitant, and altogether out of course. It is unto Him an occasion of sundry acts of mercy, both an occasion and a cause of punishment; by which mercy and justice, although γε τοῦ ἰδίου Υἱοῦ οὐκ ἐφείσατο, ἀλλ' ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν πάντων παρέδωκεν αὐτὸν, πῶς οὐχὶ καὶ σὺν αὐτῷ τὰ πάντα ἡμῖν χαρίσεται ;

God be many ways greatly glorified, yet is not this glory of God any other in respect of sin, than only an accidental event. We cannot say therefore truly, that as God to His own glory did ordain our happiness, and to accomplish our happiness appoint the gifts of His grace, so He did ordain to His glory our punishment, and for matter of punishment our sins.

For, punishment is to the will of God no desired end, but a consequent, ensuing on sin; and in regard of sin, His glory an event thereof, but no proper effect. Which answereth fully that repining proposition, If man's sin be God's Glory, why is God angry?

As therefore sin hath entered into the nature of man, notwithstanding the general will of God's inclination to the contrary, so the same inclination of will in Him for the good of man, doth continue still, notwithstanding sin. For sin altereth not His nature, though it change ours. His general will, and the principal desire whereunto of His own natural bent He inclineth, still is, that all men may enjoy the full perfection of that happiness which is their end.

Signs of the general inclination of God are all the Promises which He maketh in Holy Scripture, all the Precepts which He giveth of godliness and virtue, all Prohibitions of sin, and threatenings against offenders; all Counsels, Exhortations, Admonitions, Tolerations, Protestations, and Complaints; yea, all the works of His merciful Providence in upholding the good estate of the world, are signs of that desire which the schoolmen therefore term His signified will, and which Damascen calls the principal will of God. (De Orthodox. Fide, ii. 29.)

And according to this will He desireth not the death, no, not of the wicked (Ezech. xviii. 23. 32), but rather that they may be converted and live. He longeth for nothing more than that all men might be saved. He that willeth the end, must needs will also the means whereby we are brought unto it. And our Fall in Adam being presupposed, the means now which serve as causes effectual by their own worth to procure us eternal life, are only the merits of Jesus Christ, without Whom no heathen by the law of nature, no Jew by the law of Moses, was ever justified. Yea, it were perhaps no error to affirm, that the virtue of the blood of our Lord Jesus Christ being taken away, the Jew by having the Law, was farther removed from hope of salvation and life, than the other by wanting the Law; if it be true which Fulgentius hath (de Incarn. 1, and Grat. 16), that without the graces of belief in Christ, the Law doth more heavily condemn being known than unknown; because by how much the ignorance of sin is made less, by so much his guiltiness that sinneth is greater. And St. Paul's own doctrine is, that the Law, severed from Christ, doth but only aggravate sin.

God being desirous of all men's salvation, according to His own principal or natural inclination, hath in token thereof for their sakes whom He loved, bestowed His beloved Son.

The self-same affection was in Christ Himself, to Whom the wicked at the day of their last doom will never dare to allege as their own excuse, that He which offered Himself as a sacrifice to redeem some, did exclude the rest, and so made the way of their salvation impossible. He paid a ransom for the whole world; on Him the iniquities of all were laid, and as St. Peter plainly witnesseth, He bought them which deny Him, and which perish because they deny Him. (John vi. 35—40. Isa. liii. 6. 1 John ii. 2. 2 Cor. v. 5. 2 Pet. ii. 1.) As in very truth, whether we respect the power and sufficiency of the price given, or the spreading of that infection, for remedy whereof the same was necessary, or the largeness of His desire which gave it, we have no reason but to acknowledge with joy and comfort that He tasted death for all men, as the Apostle to the Hebrews noteth. (Heb. ii. 9.) Nor do I think that any wound did ever strike His sacred heart more deeply than the foresight of men's ingratitude, by infinite numbers of whom that which cost Him so dear would so little be regarded; and that made to so few effectual through contempt, which He of tender compassion in largeness of love had provided to be a medicine sufficient for all.

But, if God would have all men saved, and if Christ through such His grace have died for all men, wherefore are they not all saved?

God's principal desire touching man's happiness is not always satisfied. It is on all sides confessed, that His will in this kind oftentimes succeedeth not; the cause whereof is a personal impediment making particular men uncapable of that good which the will of His general providence did ordain for mankind. So that from God, as it were by a secondary kind of will, there groweth now destruction and death, although otherwise the will of His voluntary inclination towards man would effect the contrary. For the which cause the wise man directly teacheth, that death is not a thing which God hath made or devised with intent to have so many thousands eternally therein devoured (Wisdom i. 13—16, "God made not death, but ungodly men with their works called it to them"); that condemnation is not the end whereto God did create any man, although it be an event or consequent which man's unrighteousness causeth God to decree.

The decree of condemnation is an act of hatred; the cause of hatred in God is not His own inclination thereunto; for His nature is, to hate nothing which He hath made; therefore the cause of this affection towards man must needs be in man some quality whereof God is Himself no author. The decree of condemnation is an act of divine justice. Justice doth not purpose punishment for an end, and faults as means to attain that end; for so it should be a just thing to desire that men might be unjust; but justice always presupposing sin which it loveth not, decreeth punishment as a consequent wherein it taketh otherwise no pleasure.

Finally, if death be decreed as a punishment, the very nature of punishment we know is such as implieth faultiness going before; without which we must give unto it some other name, but a punishment it cannot be. So that the nature of God's goodness, the nature of justice, and the nature of death itself, are all opposite to their opinion, if any will be of opinion, that God hath entirely decreed condemnation without the foresight of sin as a cause. The place of Judas was locus suus, a place of his own proper procurement. Devils were not ordained of God for hell-fire, but hell-fire for them; and for men so far forth as it was foreseen that men would be like them. Hooker (in papers recently discovered by Archdn. Cotton and Dr. Elrington, and printed in the latest Oxford editions as an Appendix to Book the Fifth of the Ecclesiastical Polity).

God strongly asserts, He earnestly inculcates, He loudly proclaims to all, His readiness to pardon, and His delight in showing mercy; the riches of His goodness, and forbearance, and long-suffering. He declares that whosoever is faithful in using the smallest power shall be accepted and rewarded. He represents Himself impartial in His judgment and acceptance of men's persons and performances; any man, in any nation, by his sincere, though imperfect, piety and righteousness, being acceptable to Him.

The final ruin of men is not to be imputed to any antecedent defect lying in man's state, or God's will, to any obstacle on God's part, or incapacity on the part of man, but wholly to man's blameable neglect, or wilful abuse, of the means conducible to his salvation. No want of mercy in God, or of virtue in the passion of our Lord, are to be mentioned, or thought of; infidelity (formal or interpretative) and obstinate impenitency disappointing God's merciful intentions, and frustrating our Lord's saving performances and endeavours, are the sole banes of mankind. Here (saith our Lord) is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil. And, I speak these things that ye might be saved; but ye will not come to me that ye might have life. And, How often have I willed to gather thy children, as a hen gathers her chickens under her wings, but ye would not? The Sower (our Lord) did sow in the field (the world) the good seed of heavenly truth, but some would not admit it into their heads or hearts; from others temptation bare it away; in others worldly cares and desires choked it. And, Despisest thou the riches of God's goodness, and forbearance, and long-suffering, not considering that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance? So St. Paul expostulates with the incredulous Jew. And, How, saith the Apostle to the Hebrews, shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation? So do our Lord and His Apostles state the reason of men's miscarrying in this great affair; signifying all requisite care and provision to be made on God's part for their salvation, and imputing the obstruction solely to their voluntary default of compliance with God in His conduct and management thereof. Jesus is the Saviour of all men (we say), as having perfectly discovered and demonstrated the way, and means of salvation; the gracious purposes of God concerning it; the duties required by God in order to it; the great helps and encouragements to seek it; the mighty determents from neglecting it; the whole will of God and concernment of man in relation thereto; briefly, all saving truths He hath revealed unto all men; mysteries of truth (Col. i. 26), which were hidden from ages and generations (Rom. xvi. 25), which no fancy of man could invent, no understanding could reach, no reason could by discussion clear (concerning the nature, providence, will, and purpose of God;

33 [e] Τίς ἐγκαλέσει κατὰ ἐκλεκτῶν Θεοῦ ; Θεὸς ὁ δικαιῶν, 34 [f] τίς ὁ κατακρίνων ; [g] Χριστὸς ὁ ἀποθανὼν, μᾶλλον δὲ καὶ ἐγερθεὶς, ὃς καὶ ἔστιν ἐν δεξιᾷ τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὃς καὶ ἐντυγχάνει ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν.

35 Τίς ἡμᾶς χωρίσει ἀπὸ τῆς ἀγάπης τοῦ Χριστοῦ ; Θλῖψις, ἢ στενοχωρία, ἢ διωγμὸς, ἢ λιμὸς, ἢ γυμνότης, ἢ κίνδυνος, ἢ μάχαιρα, 36 [h] καθὼς γέγραπται, Ὅτι ἕνεκεν σοῦ θανατούμεθα ὅλην τὴν ἡμέραν, ἐλογίσθημεν ὡς πρόβατα σφαγῆς ; 37 [i] Ἀλλ' ἐν τούτοις πᾶσιν ὑπερνικῶμεν διὰ τοῦ ἀγαπήσαντος ἡμᾶς. 38 [j] Πέπεισμαι γὰρ, ὅτι οὔτε θάνατος οὔτε ζωὴ, οὔτε ἄγγελοι οὔτε ἀρχαὶ, οὔτε ἐνεστῶτα οὔτε μέλλοντα, οὔτε δυνάμεις, 39 [k] οὔτε ὕψωμα οὔτε βάθος, οὔτε τις κτίσις ἑτέρα δυνήσεται ἡμᾶς χωρίσαι ἀπὸ τῆς ἀγάπης τοῦ Θεοῦ τῆς ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ τῷ Κυρίῳ ἡμῶν.

e Isa. 50. 8, 9.
f Ps. 37. 33. & 109. 31. & 110. 1. ver. 1. ch. 14. 3. Job 34. 29. Heb. 1. 3. & 7. 25. 1 Pet. 3. 22. 1 John 2. 1.
g ch. 4. 25. & 5. 6—10. & 14. 9. Matt. 20. 28. John 14. 19.
h Ps. 44. 22. 1 Cor. 4. 9. 2 Cor. 4. 11. & 11. 23. i 1 Cor. 15. 57. 2 Cor. 2. 14. 1 John 4. 4. & 5. 4, 5. Rev. 12. 11.
j Eph. 1. 21. & 6. 12. Col. 2. 15 1 Pet. 3. 22. k Eph. 3. 18, 19. Exod. 9. 16, 17. Ps. 93. 3, 4. Isa. 10. 10—14.

---

the nature, original, and state of man, concerning the laws and rules of practice, the helps thereto, the rewards thereof, whatever is important for us to know in order to happiness), He did plainly discover and bring to light, He did with valid sorts of demonstration assert and confirm. The doing which (as having so much efficacy toward salvation, and being ordinarily so necessary thereto) is often called saving, as particularly by St. James, when he saith, He that turns a sinner from the error of his way, shall save a soul from death. (James v. 20.) And by St. Paul: Take heed to thy word and doctrine, for so doing thou shalt save thyself and thy hearers. (1 Tim. iv. 16.)

That our Lord hath thus (according to His design, and according to reasonable esteem) saved all men, we are authorized by the Holy Scripture to say (1 Cor. ix. 22. Rom. xi. 14. 2 Tim. iii. 15); for He is there represented to be the Light of the world (John viii. 12), the true Light that enlighteneth every man coming into the world (John i. 9), the Day-spring from on high that hath visited us, to give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, and to guide our feet into the way of peace. (Luke i. 79.)

By Him the saving grace of God hath appeared unto all men. (Tit. ii. 11; iii. 4.) By Him (as Esay prophesied and St. John the Baptist applied it) all flesh did see the salvation of God. (2 Tim. i. 10. Luke iii. 6.) Of Him it was also foretold (as St. Paul teacheth us), I have set thee for the Light of the nations, that thou shouldest be for Salvation unto the ends of the earth. Coming He preached peace to them that were far and them that were near,—that is, to all men every where. (Acts xiii. 47. Eph. ii. 17.) While I am in the world, said He, I am the Light of the world; shining, like the sun (John ix. 5), indifferently unto all; and when He withdrew His corporal presence, He further virtually diffused His light; for He sent His messengers with a general commission and command to teach all men concerning the benefits procured for them and the duties required from them: Going into the world make ye all nations disciples, teaching them to observe all that I commanded you. (Matt. xxviii. 19, 20.) Going into the world preach the Gospel unto every creature (or to the whole creation). (Mark xvi. 15.) So it ought to be; that in His name should be preached repentance and remission of sins unto all nations (Luke xxiv. 47); that God's intentions are not to be interpreted, nor His performances estimated, by events depending on the contingency of human actions, but by His own declarations and precepts, together with the ordinary provision of competent means, in their own nature sufficient to produce those effects which He declares Himself to intend or to perform. What He reveals Himself to design He doth really design it; what He says, that He performeth; He (according to moral esteem,—that is, so far as to ground duties of gratitude and honour, proceedings of justice and reward) doth perform, although the thing upon other accounts be not effected. Barrow (Sermons on Universal Redemption, vol. iii. p. 397).

32. Ὅς γε] Who even. Kühner, ii. p. 400. Meyer. Stronger than ὅς,—and the words τοῦ ἰδίου, His own, strengthen the emphasis.

— παρέδωκεν] Who even spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all (observe the order of the words ἡμῶν πάντων,—for us, yea, for all of us), how is it possible that He will not also with Him freely give us all things?

Here is the reason why the Apostle speaks, in v. 30, of our future glory as a thing accomplished.

God delivered up His own Son not only for the Saints, but altogether for all in the Church. Origen. The Father delivered up the Son, the Son delivered up Himself (Gal. ii. 20), and Judas delivered up his Master. "Sed quid hic fecit Judas nisi peccatum?" Aug. (Serm. 52.)

— τὰ πάντα] all the things necessary for salvation.

33. ἐκλεκτῶν] the elect. See above, 1 Thess. i. 4; below, Eph. i. 4.

34. ἐν δεξιᾷ τοῦ Θεοῦ] at the right Hand of God. Therefore he had spoken of our glorification as a thing already done. Christ has carried our Nature into heaven. He has placed it at God's right Hand. In His exaltation we may see our own.

35. Τίς ἡμᾶς χωρίσει κ.τ.λ.] Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? If I confess Christ before men, He will confess me before His Father. If hunger assails me, it cannot hurt me, for I have the Bread of Life. Nakedness cannot harm me, for I am clothed with Christ. I will not fear danger, for Christ is my safety. The sword cannot terrify me, for I have the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God. Origen.

No one can separate me from the love of God by menaces of death, for the Love of God cannot die, and it is death not to love God. Neither height nor depth can separate me; for what joy can they offer to tempt me from the Creator of Heaven? Or why should Hell itself terrify me, so as to make me forsake God, since I can never know Hell except by forsaking Him? Augustine (de Moribus Eccl. 1, 2. Cp. A Lapide).

— Θλῖψις, ἢ στενοχωρία] affliction or distress. See above, ii. 9.

— ἢ μάχαιρα] the sword, the instrument of St. Paul's own future martyrdom. Cp. the mention of the Sword in the Vision of the Second Seal, Rev. vi. 4.

36. θανατούμεθα] we are being put to death, present tense. 1 Cor. xv. 31. 2 Cor. iv. 10.

38. οὔτε δυνάμεις] So placed by A, B, C, D, E, F, G. Elz. puts it after ἀρχαί.

39.] The following practical observations and encouragements may be added here in the words of Hooker:—

No man's condition so sure as ours: the prayer of Christ is more than sufficient to strengthen us, be we never so weak; and to overthrow all adversary power, be it never so strong and potent. But His prayer must not exclude our labour. Their thoughts are vain who think that their watching can preserve the city which God Himself is not willing to keep. And are not theirs as vain who think that God will keep the city for which they themselves are not careful to watch? The husbandman may not burn his plough, nor the merchant forsake his trade, because God hath promised "I will not forsake thee." And do the promises of God concerning our stability, think you, make it a matter indifferent for us to use or not to use the means whereby, to attend or not to attend to reading, to pray or not to pray that we "fall not into temptation?" Surely, if we look to stand in the faith of the sons of God, we must hourly, continually, be providing and setting ourselves to strive. It was not the meaning of our Lord and Saviour, in saying (John xvii. 11), "Father, keep them in Thy Name," that we should be careless to keep ourselves.

To our own safety, our own sedulity is required. And then blessed for ever and ever be that mother's child whose faith hath made him the child of God.

The earth may shake, the pillars of the world may tremble under us, the countenance of the heaven may be appalled, the sun may lose his light, the moon her beauty, the stars their glory; but concerning the man that trusteth in God, if the fire have proclaimed itself unable as much as to singe a hair of his head, if lions, beasts ravenous by nature and keen with hunger, being set to devour, have, as it were, religiously adored the very flesh of the faithful man, what is there in the world that shall change his heart, overthrow his faith, alter his affection towards God, or the affection of God to him? If I be of this note, who shall make a separation between me and my God? "Shall tribulation, or a 1 Tim. 2. 7. ch. 1. 9. Phil. 1. 8. b ch. 10. 1. c Exod. 32. 32. Gal. 1. 8.

IX. [1] [a] Ἀλήθειαν λέγω ἐν Χριστῷ, οὐ ψεύδομαι, συμμαρτυρούσης μοι τῆς συνειδήσεώς μου ἐν Πνεύματι ἁγίῳ, [2] [b] ὅτι λύπη μοί ἐστι μεγάλη, καὶ ἀδιάλειπτος ὀδύνη τῇ καρδίᾳ μου· [3] [c] ηὐχόμην γὰρ ἀνάθεμα εἶναι αὐτὸς ἐγὼ ἀπὸ τοῦ anguish, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword?" No; "I am persuaded that neither tribulation, nor anguish, nor persecution, nor famine, nor nakedness, nor peril, nor sword, nor death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature" shall ever prevail so far over me. "I know in Whom I have believed." I am not ignorant Whose precious blood hath been shed for me. I have a Shepherd full of kindness, full of care, and full of power; unto Him I commit myself. His own finger hath engraven this sentence in the tables of my heart, "Satan hath desired to winnow you as wheat, but I have prayed that thy faith fail not;" therefore the assurance of my hope I will labour to keep as a jewel unto the end, and by labour, through the gracious mediation of His prayer, I shall keep it. Hooker (Serm. i. "Of the certainty and perpetuity of faith in the Elect").

CHAP. IX. Preliminary Note.

For a right understanding of this and the two following chapters, it must be borne in mind,

(1) Who the parties were, that the Apostle is addressing, and what was their position and their feelings; and

(2) What is the connexion between the subject of these Chapters and that of the foregoing Chapters of the Epistle.

(1) St. Paul is addressing himself to the Jews.

They supposed themselves to be the Elect people of God. They imagined that they possessed some special merit of their own which entitled them to be distinguished by Him from the other Nations of the world. They knew that they had been kept apart from all other Nations by God Himself, and they did not suppose it possible that other Nations could be put on a par with themselves, and be blended with them in one Society; and much less that they themselves could be cast off by God.

The very notion of such contingencies appeared to them to involve a charge against God Himself, as either not endued with Divine Prescience, or as subject to human infirmities, and as swayed by passion, levity, fickleness, and caprice.

(2) In the previous part of the Epistle St. Paul has shown,

I. That all mankind, the Jews no less than the Gentiles, were guilty before God.

II. That all needed a Redeemer.

III. That a Redeemer had been provided for all in Christ Jesus, on equal terms.

IV. That in His Divine Mind God had foreknown and foreordained an Universal Church in Christ, and that Christ had died for all (viii. 32); and that all who accept by Faith the terms of salvation offered them in Christ, are the elect people of God; and that all the faithful had been foreknown by Him in Christ (viii. 29—32), and that He, on His part, gives them freely Justification and Salvation in Him.

(3) Such declarations as these would, the Apostle well knew, excite the jealousy of the Jews. They contravened the national persuasion that the Jew was the favoured son of God's love; and they brought with them the tremendous accusation that the Jewish Nation, in crucifying Jesus of Nazareth, had crucified the Christ Who had been foretold by Moses and the Prophets; and that in rejecting Him, and in continuing to reject Him Who was now preached to the Gentiles as the Saviour of the World, and was gladly recognized by them as such, they had disinherited themselves; that they were no longer God's elect people, but had been supplanted in His favour by the Heathen World.

The Apostle, therefore, had now the task of maintaining the doctrines already stated of Universal Sinfulness on the part of mankind, and of Universal Redemption in Christ, and of showing the harmony of these doctrines with the History of God's dealings with the Jews, and of soothing their minds and allaying their emotions of envy, jealousy, and exasperation, and of administering comfort to those among them who were touched with remorse and contrition, and of proving to them that they would forfeit nothing, but rather gain infinite benefits by accepting the gracious terms now offered freely to all Nations in Christ.

(4) These considerations may serve the purpose of clearing the subject handled by the Apostle in this and the two following Chapters, of some perplexities with which it has been embarrassed.

When these Chapters are considered in their natural relation to the Apostle's design in this Epistle, it will be seen that it was no part of his purpose to discuss here the question of the particular predestination of individuals.

Were the Jews, as a Nation, the Elect People of God? Had God chosen from Eternity an Universal Church in Christ? Was Christ to be the Deliverer of the Jews, or was He to be the Deliverer of all Nations (Hag. ii. 7), the Saviour of the World?

These were the questions to be discussed; and all that is said, in this and the two following Chapters, is subordinate to these questions.

The Calvinistic interpretations of this chapter fail altogether of supplying any answer to the objections of the Jew, or of ministering any comfort to him in his dejection; from which he can only be raised by the blessed assurance with which St. Paul concludes this chapter, that "he that believeth in Christ shall not be put to shame."

Consequently we find that the great body of ancient Expositors, in commenting on this portion of St. Paul's Epistle, never assigned to it such a meaning as has been imputed to it by some in more recent times. Indeed, the ancient Expositors regarded this Epistle generally, and this portion of it particularly, as a store-house of divine teaching on the great doctrines of Universal Redemption, and of Free Grace offered to all in Christ.

As has been well said (by Professor Blunt, Lectures on the Early Fathers, p. 625), it is remarkable that St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans is singled out as the very ground on which Irenæus contends for the doctrine of man's Liberty of choice to do good or evil, and of God's consequent right to assign to him his reward accordingly. Irenæus (iv. 37. 1). So Clemens Alexandrinus (Strom. iv. 11; vii. 7) regards "the Elect" and "the Predestinate" as the whole body of Christians, and refers to the Epistle to the Romans as confirming his own opinion, which is thus expressed (Strom. vii. 2): "The Son of God, Who for our sake took a body that could suffer, cannot be indifferent towards us. Assuredly He cares for all, as becomes the Lord of all. He is our Saviour, not a Saviour of some and no Saviour of others. But He dispenses His benefits accordingly as every one is disposed to receive them, to Greeks and Barbarians, to the predestinated out of either race, called, according to His own time, faithful, elect. Neither can He be jealous of any, Who hath called all alike."

Justin Martyr (Dial. c. 42) applies the term οἱ προεγνωσμένοι, 'the foreknown,' to those whom God foreknew from eternity as good and virtuous men, and of whom He foreknew that they would be saved because they would be good and virtuous. See Apolog. i. 45, and cp. Dialog. c. 140, and Irenæus, iv. 6. 5.

See further above, Introduction to this Epistle, pp. 189—199.

CH. IX. 1. Ἀλήθειαν λέγω ἐν Χριστῷ] I speak in Christ the truth. Not to be rendered "I speak the truth in Christ." What the Apostle means is, that he is speaking, not as a man merely, but as a member of Christ, in His Name, as His Apostle. And so he comforts the Jews with the assurance that his sympathy with them is not only his own sympathy, but the sympathy of Christ, even of Him Whom they had crucified.

He confirms this assurance by a similar assertion concerning the Holy Ghost the Comforter. What I say to you is said by me in the name of Christ and of the Holy Spirit.

On the connexion of this statement with the foregoing chapter, see the Preliminary Note.

2. λύπη—ὀδύνη] sorrow and pang: cp. ὠδίν.

3. ηὐχόμην] I could wish, supposing such a thing to be possible. On this use of the imperfect tense, see Gal. iv. 20. Winer, § 41, p. 253.

— ἀνάθεμα εἶναι αὐτὸς ἐγώ] literally, accursed to be I myself—in mine own person. This is the order of the words in the best MSS. Elz. αὐτὸς ἐγὼ ἀνάθεμα εἶναι, which is less forcible.

Ἀνάθεμα = חֵרֶם (cherem), devoted to destruction as abominable. (Lev. xxvii. 28. Num. xxi. 3. Deut. vii. 25, 26; xiii. 15. 17. Isa. xxxiv. 2.) See above, Gal. i. 8, 9.

Observe that this expression follows τίς ἡμᾶς χωρίσει ἀπὸ τῆς ἀγάπης τοῦ Χριστοῦ; viii. 35 and 39, "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ?" Therefore his desire to be ἀνάθεμα ἀπὸ τοῦ Χριστοῦ for the sake of his brethren, is not to be regarded as a possible contingency, but is uttered in an hyperbolé of love.

Chrysostom, Theophylact, and others rightly suppose this to be a heroic expression of charity and self-devotion. And it is an evidence of the genuine spirit of the Gospel of Christ: not like the jealous spirit of Judaism grudging the communication of Χριστοῦ ὑπὲρ τῶν ἀδελφῶν μου, τῶν συγγενῶν μου κατὰ σάρκα, 4 [d] οἵτινές εἰσιν Ἰσραηλῖται, ὧν ἡ υἱοθεσία καὶ ἡ δόξα, καὶ αἱ διαθῆκαι καὶ ἡ νομοθεσία, καὶ ἡ λατρεία καὶ αἱ ἐπαγγελίαι, 5 [e] ὧν οἱ πατέρες, καὶ ἐξ ὧν ὁ Χριστὸς τὸ κατὰ σάρκα ὁ ὢν ἐπὶ πάντων Θεὸς εὐλογητὸς εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας, ἀμήν.

[d] Exod. 4. 22. Deut. 7. 6. Ps. 63. 2. & 90. 16. & 147. 19. Isa. 60. 19. Gen. 17. 2. Deut. 29. 14. Jer. 31. 9, 33.

ch. 2. 17. Eph. 2. 12. ch. 3. 2. Exod. 12. 25. [e] ch. 11. 28. Matt. 1. 1. Luke 3. 23, &c. John 1. 1. Heb. 1. 8, 9.

its own privileges to others, but ready to suffer for the Jews, who pursued the preachers of Christianity with malevolence and hatred.

There never was any Philosophy or Religion that so highly exalts the good which is communicative, and depresses that which is private, as the holy Faith; for we read that the Elect Saints of God have wished themselves anathematized and razed out of the Book of Life in an ecstasy of charity and infinite feeling of communion. Lord Bacon (Adv. of Learning, p. 92).

St. Paul, in writing to the Romans, might be not unmindful of Roman examples of self-sacrifice, the Curtii and Decii; and he might well endeavour to conciliate the Jews by imitating, indeed by exceeding, the self-devotion of their great Lawgiver. (Exod. xxxii. 32.)

As is observed by S. Jerome (Algasiæ, vol. iv. p. 203): Optat anathema esse à Christo et perire, ut alii salvi fiant. Sed si consideremus Moysis vocem rogantis Deum pro populo Judæorum, atque dicentis, Si dimittis eis peccatum suum, dimitte: si autem non vis, dele me de libro tuo quem scripsisti, perspiciemus eumdem et Moysis et Pauli erga creditum sibi gregem affectum. Pastor enim bonus ponit animam suam pro ovibus suis. (Ioh. v. 11.) Et hoc ipsum est dicere, optabam anathema esse à Christo; et, dele me de libro tuo quem scripsisti. Qui enim delentur de libro viventium, et cum justis non scribuntur, anathema fiunt à Domino. Simulque cerne Apostolum quantæ charitatis in Christum sit; ut pro Illo cupiat mori, et solus perire, dummodo omne in Illum credat hominum genus.

This expression therefore is a tribute of love to Christ as well as to the Jews.

The glory of God is advanced by the happiness of His children. The honour of the Saviour of Mankind, whose Apostle I am, is promoted by the multitude of the saved. The glory and honour of God in Christ is more magnified by the salvation of a Nation than of any Individual in it. "Melius pereat unus, quàm unitas."

Therefore we may say with Bp. Sanderson (i. 331), "It was not merely a strain of rhetoric, to give his brethren by that hyperbolical expression the better assurance of his great love towards them, that the Apostle said that 'he could wish himself to be accursed, to be made an anathema, to be separated and cut off from Christ for their sakes.' But he spake it advisedly, yea, upon his conscience and upon his oath. Not that he wished their salvation more than his own; understand it not so . . . but he preferred the glory of God before both his own salvation and theirs. Insomuch that if God's glory should so require—hoc impossibili supposito—he could be content with all his heart to lose his own part in the joys of heaven that God might be more glorified, than that God should lose any part of His glory for his salvation." See also Dr. Barrow, Serm. xxxiv. on 1 Cor. iv. 16, vol. ii. p. 277: "St. Paul was desirous, as it seems, to be secluded for ever from the Lord's blissful presence by a dreadful anathema for their sake."

A different and lower view has been taken of this text by Waterland in his Sermon upon it (vol. ix. p. 252), and also, it would seem, by Richard Hooker in the original draught of his Sixth Book of the Ecclesiastical Polity, as may be inferred from George Cranmer's note in the Appendix to it, p. 135.

Some modern interpreters make the words ηὐχόμην—Χριστοῦ to be a parenthesis, but this disturbs the flow of the sentence, and has no ancient authority in its favour.

4. οἵτινες] inasmuch as they are; 'quippe qui sint.' See i. 25; vi. 2.

4, 5. Ἰσραηλῖται—ἀμήν] The Apostle here, with graceful courtesy, recites the claims made by the Jews themselves to be regarded as the Elect people of God, and he crowns the whole with a beautiful consummation, which, while it disarms them of their objection against the adoption of an Universal Church by God as His own People in Christ, reminds them of the source of their true spiritual comfort, and of their highest national glory, namely, that—of themselves according to the flesh, CHRIST came, Who is over all, God blessed for ever.

— ἡ δόξα] the glory. The Shechinah.

— αἱ διαθῆκαι] The Covenants, frequently repeated. The Law was one, and given once; but the Covenants were various, and iterated at various times.

— ἡ λατρεία] The service of the Tabernacle and Temple; the true worship of God.

5. ὁ ὢν ἐπὶ πάντων Θεὸς—ἀμήν] He that is existing above all, God Blessed for ever. There is a special emphasis on ὁ ὤν. He that is; He Who is the being One; JEHOVAH. See John i. 18; Rev. i. 4. 8; iv. 8; xi. 17; xvi. 5, compared with Exod. iii. 14, ἐγώ εἰμι, ὁ ὤν. And compare on Gal. iii. 20.

Therefore these words ought not to be treated merely as a copula (as they are in the rendering of some Interpreters, "Who is God"), but they contain a distinct truth, and assert the eternal pre-existence of Christ, and are very appropriately added after the mention of His Incarnation. He Who came of the Jews, according to the flesh, is no other than ὁ ὤν, the BEING ONE, JEHOVAH. Cp. our Lord's words, John viii. 58, πρὶν Ἀβραὰμ γενέσθαι, Ἐγώ εἰμι.

The addition of ἐπὶ πάντων marks Christ's supremacy as co-equal with the Father. Cp. Col. i. 15—20, the best exposition of this text.

Therefore we have in this passage five distinct assertions concerning our Blessed Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ, viz.

(1) His Incarnation, in κατὰ σάρκα.
(2) His Existence from Everlasting, in ὁ ὤν.
(3) His Supremacy, in ἐπὶ πάντων.
(4) His Divinity, in Θεός.
(5) His claim to be called "the Blessed One," see Mark xiv. 61.

Thus the Holy Spirit ascribes to Christ the incommunicable titles of Jehovah and of Elohim, in the highest sense of the words, and so provides a safeguard not only against Socinianism and Arianism, but also against Nestorianism, by declaring that God and Man are one Christ.

In has been said by some in modern days (e. g. Semler, Reiche, Köllner, Winzer, Fritzsche, Glöckler, Schräder, Krehl, Meyer) that this passage may be regarded simply as a Doxology to God; and it has been said (e. g. by Meyer, p. 283) that it was not quoted in early times against the Arian heresy, as it would have been if it had been anciently applied to Christ.

But this is an error. It was adduced against the Arians by S. Athanasius (Orat. c. Arianos, i. § 24, p. 338), where he says, "No one can patiently listen to them who allege that God was not always a Father, but became a Father, in order that they may pretend that there was a time when the Word of God did not exist. No one can listen to them when they say this, since John affirms that the Word was in the beginning (John i. 1), and Paul asserts that He is the splendour of His Father's Glory (Heb. i. 1), and is the Being One, over all, God Blessed for ever" (Rom. ix. 5).

So again S. Gregory Nyssen (c. Eunom. in Catenâ, p. 317), If the Saviour is God above all, why do they who separate Him from the substance of the Father, and call Him a Creature, give Him as in mockery a false name? why do they even call Him God, and pay Him worship as to idols, since they estrange Him from the true God? Therefore either let them not acknowledge Him to be God, since they allege Him to be a Creature, in order that they themselves may judaize; or if they confess Him Who is created to be God, let them own themselves Idolaters.

So S. Cyril (in Catenâ, p. 318). Indeed the entire body of ancient Interpreters (Origen, Cyprian, Epiphanius, Chrysostom, and others) agree in applying these words to Christ.

They who regard them merely as an ascription of praise to God, do violence to the natural sequence and flow of the words of the Apostle, and desert the consentient judgment and catholic tradition of ancient Interpreters for an invention of modern times.

It may suffice to refer further on this point to Irenæus, iii. 16. 3; Tertullian, c. Praxeam, c. 13. 15; Hippolytus, c. Noetum, c. 2. 6; Origen, in Rom. lib. vii. c. 13.

The following remarks are from more recent authorities:—

It is evident that Christ is here called God, even He Who came of the Jews, though not as He came of them, that is, according to the flesh, which is here distinguished from his Godhead.

He is so called God as not to be any of the many gods, but the One supreme or most high God; for He is God over all.

He hath also added the title of Blessed, which of itself elsewhere signifieth the supreme God, and was always used by the Jews to express that One God of Israel.

Wherefore it cannot be conceived St. Paul should write unto the Christians, most of whom then were converted Jews or proselytes, and give unto our Saviour not only the name of God, but 6 [f] Οὐχ οἷον δὲ ὅτι ἐκπέπτωκεν ὁ λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ· οὐ γὰρ πάντες οἱ ἐξ Ἰσραὴλ οὗτοι Ἰσραήλ· 7 [g] οὐδ' ὅτι εἰσὶ σπέρμα Ἀβραὰμ πάντες τέκνα, ἀλλ' ἐν Ἰσαὰκ κληθήσεταί σοι σπέρμα· 8 [h] τουτέστιν, οὐ τὰ τέκνα τῆς σαρκὸς ταῦτα τέκνα τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἀλλὰ τὰ τέκνα τῆς ἐπαγγελίας λογίζεται εἰς σπέρμα. 9 [i] Ἐπαγγελίας γὰρ ὁ λόγος οὗτος, Κατὰ τὸν καιρὸν τοῦτον ἐλεύσομαι, καὶ ἔσται τῇ Σάρρᾳ υἱός.

10 [k] Οὐ μόνον δὲ, ἀλλὰ καὶ Ῥεβέκκα ἐξ ἑνὸς κοίτην ἔχουσα Ἰσαὰκ τοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῶν, 11 μήπω γὰρ γεννηθέντων, μηδὲ πραξάντων τι ἀγαθὸν ἢ κακὸν, ἵνα ἡ κατ' ἐκλογὴν πρόθεσις τοῦ Θεοῦ μένῃ, οὐκ ἐξ ἔργων, ἀλλ' ἐκ τοῦ καλοῦντος, 12 [l] ἐρρήθη αὐτῇ, Ὅτι ὁ μείζων δουλεύσει τῷ ἐλάσσονι, 13 [m] καθὼς γέγραπται, Τὸν Ἰακὼβ ἠγάπησα, τὸν δὲ Ἠσαῦ ἐμίσησα.

f Gen. 17, 7. Num. 23. 19. Isa. 55. 11. John 8. 39. ch. 2. 28, 29. Gal. 6. 16.
g Gen. 21. 12, 23. Gal. 4. 28. Heb. 11. 18.
h Gal. 4. 28.
i Gen. 18. 10, 14.
k Gen. 25. 21, 23. ch. 4. 17.
l Gen. 25. 23.
m Matt. 1. 2, 3.

---

also add that title which they always gave unto the one God of Israel, and to none but Him, except he did intend they should believe Him to be the same God whom they always in that manner and under that notion had adored. As therefore the Apostle speaketh of the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which is Blessed for evermore (2 Cor. xi. 31), of the Creator who is Blessed for ever, Amen (Rom. i. 25), and thereby doth signify the supreme Deity, which was so glorified by the Israelites; and doth also testify that we worship the same God under the Gospel which they did under the Law, so doth he speak of Christ in as sublime a style, who is over all, God Blessed for ever, Amen (Rom. ix. 5), and thereby doth testify the equality, or rather identity, of His Deity. Bp. Pearson on the Creed (Art. ii. p. 348).

Another divine title ascribed to the Son in Holy Scripture is, "over all, God blessed for ever" (Rom. ix. 5). That this is said of Christ, not of God the Father, appears from the whole context and the very form of expression. (Comp. 2 Cor. xi. 31.) Ὁ ὢν naturally refers to the person of Christ, immediately before spoken of; and the antithesis (comp. Rom. i. 3, 4) between what He is according to the flesh and what according to the spirit, requires it. Thus all the ancients, Catholics and Heretics, constantly understood the words, referring them to Christ, as here called over all, God Blessed for ever. Our blessed Lord is not only here called God, but God with a very high epithet, over all, ἐπὶ πάντων, the very same that is applied to the Father Himself (Eph. iv. 6), and is there rendered above all. Besides this, there is the addition of εὐλογητὸς εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας, Blessed for ever; which again is the very same that St. Paul applies to the eternal Creator (Rom. i. 25). Add to this, that the title of Blessed, as Bp. Pearson observes, "of itself elsewhere signifies the supreme God, and was always used by the Jews to express that one God of Israel." Waterland (Moyer Lecture vi.).

See also Professor Blunt on the Early Fathers, p. 472.

— ἀμήν] amen. A solemn conclusion to this solemn declaration, resembling the close of a Creed. Cp. below, xvi. 27; and above, Introduction, p. 135.

6. Οὐχ οἷον] Not as if God's choice has failed of its effect, and been frustrated. For we all, who believe in Christ, are blessed in Him; we are the Seed of Abraham, who saw Christ's day, and was glad. (John viii. 56.) Cp. Gal. iii. 6—9. 29; above, iv. 16.

7. ἀλλ' ἐν Ἰσαάκ] but in Isaac shall thy seed be called. The Apostle demonstrates his cause to the Jews by reference to their own Scriptures and History,—

(1) In the Annals of the Patriarchs, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob (vv. 7—13).

(2) In God's word to Moses at the delivery of the Law (v. 15).

(3) In the History of Pharaoh (v. 17).

(4) By God's declarations by their Prophets (vv. 25—33).

8. εἰς σπέρμα] for the seed. Cp. Gal. iii. 29.

10. Οὐ μόνον δὲ, ἀλλά] But not only so, but —. The Apostle proves by a double argument, that the "Israel of God," the true "Seed of Abraham," is not a progeny of the Flesh, but of Faith.

(1) God limited the promise to Isaac, though other children came forth from the loins of Abraham, besides Isaac.

(2) God limited the promise to Jacob, or Israel, though he had a brother Esau (Mal. i. 2, 3), from the same father and from the same mother, and born also at the same birth.

11. μήπω γὰρ γεννηθέντων] for when as yet they had not been born —. The scope of the argument is,

(1) To show the supremacy of God's Will.

(2) That it is His will to save the Gentiles as well as the Jews.

(3) That all, of every nation, are the true seed of Abraham, if they follow the steps of the Faith of Abraham. (Rom. iv. 12.)

(4) That the Jews have forfeited their birthright by pride and unbelief. If they had been Abraham's seed, they would have done the works of Abraham. (John viii. 39.)

He shows this from the Jews' own Patriarchal History, by personal types, inheritors of temporal promises, as by

(1) Isaac preferred to Ishmael, the elder son of Abraham.

(2) Jacob preferred to Esau his elder brother, born at the same time from Rebecca, the wife of Isaac. (Gen. xxv. 23.)

— κακόν] A, B have φαῦλον, and so Lachm., Tisch., Alf. Cp. 2 Cor. v. 10, where C reads φαύλου.

— ἵνα ἡ κατ' ἐκλογὴν πρόθεσις τοῦ Θεοῦ μένῃ] in order that God's purpose according to election might abide. God chose Jacob. But choice supposes difference in the thing chosen (Photius, in Cat. p. 329), and God's choice is not arbitrary and capricious, but is regulated by His other attributes of Foreknowledge, Justice, and Wisdom. What He chooses He chooses rightly. But (says Photius here) how could they who as yet had done nothing, be said to differ the one from the other? True, to human eyes they did not differ. But God does not choose with the eyes of man. To His eyes they differed much. And as He foresaw, so was the result. For the one (Jacob) pleased God; the other did not. See also below on v. 13.

12. ὁ μείζων] the elder brother—Esau. A warning to the Jews. They boast themselves to be Israelites, they claim to be the seed of Jacob, but they become like Esau by despising their spiritual birthright, and rejecting Christ.

The Gentiles, the younger Son, become the true Israel, by accepting Him.

13. τὸν δὲ Ἠσαῦ ἐμίσησα] but Esau I hated.

Known and loved from the beginning to God is His own work (Acts xv. 18), and He hateth nothing that He hath made (Ps. cxlv. 9. Ezek. xxxiii. 11. 2 Pet. iii. 9). And what God loved in Jacob was not any thing that Jacob did by his own working; it was nothing in Jacob, as Jacob; but what God loved in him was Jacob created by God, and redeemed by Christ, and using his own free-will (which was God's gift) according to the will of God, and profiting by the grace given to him by God.

We may not say, that any work or merit of Jacob himself, personally and independently, foreseen by God, was the cause of God's election of Jacob, lest we fall into the error of Arminianism.

The cause of Jacob's election was God's love, beholding His own work in Jacob.

But God's foresight causes nothing; and Jacob would not have been chosen by God, if he had been foreseen to be a profane person, like Esau, marring God's work in himself. Jacob's right use of God's own gifts to him, being foreseen by God, may then be called a condition of his election, though not the cause.

On the other hand, what God hated in Esau, was what Esau chose for himself; it was Esau's profaneness in bartering away his privileges for a carnal indulgence. This is what God clearly foreknew, justly hated, and righteously punished in Esau.

And that this was an act of Esau's own free-will, deliberately choosing evil, and bringing down rejection on himself, is intimated by St. Paul saying, "Lest there be any fornicator or profane person as Esau, who for one morsel of meat sold his birthright." (Heb. xii. 16.)

All the ancient Fathers of the Church (says Hooker) have evermore with uniform consent agreed that Reprobation presupposeth foreseen sin, as a most just cause whereupon it groundeth itself.

14 n Τί οὖν ἐροῦμεν; μὴ ἀδικία παρὰ τῷ Θεῷ;
Μὴ γένοιτο· 15 o τῷ Μωϋσῇ γὰρ λέγει, Ἐλεήσω ὃν ἂν ἐλεῶ, καὶ οἰκτειρήσω ὃν ἂν οἰκτείρω.
16 Ἄρα οὖν οὐ τοῦ θέλοντος οὐδὲ τοῦ τρέχοντος, ἀλλὰ τοῦ ἐλεοῦντος Θεοῦ.
17 p Λέγει γὰρ ἡ γραφὴ τῷ Φαραώ, Ὅτι εἰς αὐτὸ τοῦτο ἐξήγειρά σε, n Deut. 32. 4. 2 Chron. 19. 7. Ps. 92. 15.

o Exod. 33. 19.
p Exod. 9. 16.

See above on viii. 28—30, and Cyril here (in Catenâ, pp. 335—339), and the Introduction to this Epistle, pp. 194—200.

14—29.] The following remarks of S. Jerome deserve consideration here (Epist. ad Hedibiam, iv. p. 180):

"Quid significat illud quod Apostolus Paulus disputat, ad Romanos scribens? Quid ergo dicemus? Numquid iniquitas apud Deum? absit, usque ad eum locum, ubi ait: Nisi Dominus Sabaoth reliquisset nobis semen, &c.

"Si pro voluntate suâ Deus miseretur Israeli, et indurat Pharaonem, ergo frustra queritur atque causatur, nos vel bona non fecisse, vel fecisse mala, quum in potestate Ipsius sit et voluntate, absque bonis et malis operibus, vel eligere aliquem, vel abjicere, præsertim quum voluntati Illius humani fragilitas resistere nequeat?

"Quam validam quæstionem brevi Apostolus sermone dissolvit, dicens, O homo! tu quis es qui respondes Deo?

"Et est sensus; ex eo quod respondes Deo, et calumniam facis, et de Scripturâ tanta perquiris, ut loquaris contra Deum et justitiam voluntatis Ejus incusas, ostendis te liberi esse arbitrii, et facere quod vis, vel tacere vel loqui.

"Si enim in similitudinem vasis fictilis te à Deo creatum putas, et Illius non posse resistere voluntati, hoc considera, quia vas fictile non dicit figulo, quare me sic fecisti? Figulus enim habet potestatem de eodem luto, aut eâdem massâ, aliud vas in honorem facere, aliud in contumeliam. Deus autem æquali cunctos sorte generavit, et dedit arbitrii libertatem, ut faciat unusquisque quod vult, sive bonum sive malum. In tantum autem dedit omnibus potestatem, ut vox impia disputet contra Creatorem suum, et caussas voluntatis Illius perscrutetur,— "Sin autem Deus volens ostendere iram, et notam facere potentiam suam, sustinuit in multâ patientiâ vasa iræ, apta ad interitum, ut ostenderet divitias gloriæ suæ in vasa misericordiæ, quæ præparavit in gloriam: quos et vocavit, non solùm nos ex Judæis, sed etiam ex Gentibus, si, inquit, patientia Dei induravit Pharaonem, et multo tempore pœnas distulit Israelis, ut justiùs condemnaret, quos tanto tempore sustinuerat, non Dei accusanda est patientia et infinita clementia, sed eorum duritia, qui bonitate Dei in perditionem suam abusi sunt.

"Alioquin unus est solis calor, et secundùm essentias subjacentes, alia liquefacit, alia indurat, alia solvit, alia constringit. Liquatur enim cera, et induratur lutum: et tamen caloris non est diversa natura. Sic et bonitas et clementia Dei vasa iræ quæ apta sunt in interitum, id est, populum Israel, indurat: vasa autem misericordiæ quæ præparavit in gloriam, quæ vocavit, hoc est, nos, qui non solùm ex Judæis sumus, sed etiam ex Gentibus, non salvat irrationabiliter, et absque judicii veritate; sed caussis præcedentibus, quia alii non susceperunt Filium Dei, alii autem recipere suâ sponte voluerunt.

"Hæc autem vasa misericordiæ non solùm populus Gentium est; sed etiam hi qui ex Judæis credere voluerunt, et unus credentium effectus est populus. Ex quo ostenditur, non Gentes eligi, sed hominum voluntates; atque ita factum est, ut impleretur illud quod dictum est in Osee: Vocabo non plebem meam, plebem meam, hoc est, populum gentium; et quibus prius dicebatur, non plebs mea vos, nunc vocentur filii Dei vivi.

"Quod ne solùm de Gentibus dicere videretur, etiam eos qui ex Israeliticâ multitudine crediderunt vasa misericordiæ et electionis appellat. Clamat enim Esaias pro Israel: si fuerit numerus filiorum Israel quasi arena maris, reliquiæ salvæ fient, hoc est, etiam si multitudo non crediderit, tamen pauci credent.

"Quumque testimonia proposuisset, quibus duplex vocatio prædicitur, et Gentium et populi Judæorum, transit ad cohærentem disputationem; et idcircò dicit Gentes quæ non sectabantur justitiam, apprehendisse justitiam, quia non superbierint, sed in Christum crediderint: Israelis autem magnam partem ideo corruisse, quia offenderit in lapidem offensionis et petram scandali, et ignoraverit justitiam Dei, quæ Christus est."

15. Ἐλεήσω] I will have mercy. He does not say, I will reject whom I will reject, but I will extend My mercy; though thou mayest wish to restrain it. Compare the Parable of the Labourers in the Vineyard (Matt. xx. 15), and of the Prodigal Son (Luke xv. 20).

St. Paul reminds the Jews, that even at the delivery of the Law, God intimated to Moses that His mercy would be enlarged to others than the Jews. (Exod. xxxiii. 19.)

Let it not, however, be imagined that God's Foreknowledge of Esau caused Esau's sin. "God's Prescience extends to all things, but causes nothing" (Hooker, ii. p. 539). It foresees from eternity every individual who will either thankfully receive, or stubbornly refuse, God's gracious offers to all in Christ. But this Infinite Prescience does not cross God's Almighty Will, which willed from everlasting that man's will should be free. It does not compel any man to receive, nor restrain any man from receiving, those gracious offers which God, before the foundation of the world, willed to make to all in Christ. (Eph. i. 4. 9; iii. 11. 1 Pet. i. 20.)

16. οὐ τοῦ θέλοντος οὐδὲ τοῦ τρέχοντος] It is not of him that willeth, as Abraham was willing that the blessing should descend to Ishmael (Gen. xvii. 18), and as Isaac was willing to give the blessing to Esau (Gen. xxvii. 4), nor is it of him that runneth, as Esau ran for the venison (Gen. xxvii. 5), but it is of God, Who had mercy on the world, and willed to convey His free gift by Isaac and Jacob.

Human Will and Works are not a cause of man's acceptance with God. The only cause is God's Will; but this Will is ever moved by Love (Ps. cxlv. 9. 1 John iv. 8), guided by Wisdom (Eph. i. 11), and regulated by Justice, and executed by Power (Isa. xlvi. 10).

Nor does God's Will overrule or constrain the freedom of man's Will. God gives grace freely, in order that man may use his free-will rightly. Hence we find many appeals made to man in Scripture for the exercise, and right exercise, of his Will.

As Augustine says (the most earnest assertor of the power of divine Grace),—In order that God may be willing to give, you must lend your Will to receive. How can you expect that Grace will fall upon you, unless you open the lap of your Will ("sinum voluntatis") to receive it? God gives not His Righteousness without your will. Righteousness is only His. And volition is only yours. God's Righteousness exists independently, without your will, but it cannot exist in you, against your will. Unless our will is in our own power, it is not will. Augustine (Serm. 165, 169, and de Liber. Arbit. iii.).

The cause why all men are not drawn, or not so drawn as to come to God, is the corrupt will of men, not the absolute will of God. Bp. Andrewes (on the Lambeth Articles, p. 120).

17. Φαραώ] Pharaoh, the oppressor of Israel, the representative of Satan himself, from whom the true Israel are delivered by Baptism into Christ, as the literal Israelites were delivered from Pharaoh by being baptized in the Red Sea, even Pharaoh, the type of Antichrist, is here set forth as a warning to the Jews of what they themselves may become by hardening their hearts against God's warnings and miracles, and by rejecting Christ.

— εἰς αὐτὸ τοῦτο ἐξήγειρά σε] for this very cause raised I thee up, in order that I might show in thee My Power, and that My Name may be published abroad in all the earth.

God exalted Pharaoh to his royal throne in order that He might show His Power by means of Pharaoh.

God does not say, that He raised Pharaoh up in order that Pharaoh might resist Him; but He says that He raised up Pharaoh, in order that His own Power might be magnified by means of Pharaoh, whether Pharaoh obeyed Him or not.

God raises up all the Kings of this world, in order that His own Power may be glorified in them. His revealed Will is, that they should use their power in His service, and for His glory, and that thus He may be magnified in them and by them.

But, even although they rebel against Him, He is not frustrated in His design.

Indeed, it may be said, that the more they rebel against Him, the more is He magnified through their means.

For, His Power is manifested by crushing their rebellion, and by making it ministerial to the display of His Sovereignty.

The fierceness of man turns to His praise (Ps. lxxvi. 10). His victorious Omnipotence appears most glorious in the subjugation of proud and haughty Princes who rise up against Him. And thus He is glorified not only by means of good Kings, who obey Him, but also by means of the Pharaohs, Sennacheribs, and Neros, who rise up in insurrection against Him.

Ἐξήγειρά σε is הֶעֱמַדְתִּיךָ, "stare te feci:" I made thee to stand. I not only raised thee up, but gave thee power to continue on thy throne. Hence the LXX have διετηρήθης, thou hast been maintained on thy throne.

ὅπως ἐνδείξωμαι ἐν σοὶ τὴν δύναμίν μου, καὶ ὅπως διαγγελῇ τὸ ὄνομά μου ἐν πάσῃ τῇ γῇ.

18 Ἄρα οὖν ὃν θέλει ἐλεεῖ, ὃν δὲ θέλει σκληρύνει.

q Jer. 49. 19. r 2 Chron. 20. 6. Dan. 4. 35.

19 q Ἐρεῖς μοι οὖν, Τί οὖν ἔτι μέμφεται; r τῷ γὰρ βουλήματι αὐτοῦ τίς ἀνθέστηκε;

s Isa. 45. 9. & 64. 8. Jer. 18. 2—10. Wisd. 15. 7. t 2 Tim. 2. 20. Jer. 18. 6.

20 s Μενοῦνγε, ὦ ἄνθρωπε, σὺ τίς εἶ ὁ ἀνταποκρινόμενος τῷ Θεῷ; μὴ ἐρεῖ τὸ πλάσμα τῷ πλάσαντι, Τί με ἐποίησας οὕτως; 21 t Ἢ οὐκ ἔχει ἐξουσίαν ὁ κεραμεὺς τοῦ πηλοῦ, ἐκ τοῦ αὐτοῦ φυράματος ποιῆσαι ὃ μὲν εἰς τιμὴν σκεῦος, ὃ δὲ εἰς ἀτιμίαν;

u ch. 2. 4. 1 Thess. 5. 9.

22 u Εἰ δὲ θέλων ὁ Θεὸς ἐνδείξασθαι τὴν ὀργὴν, καὶ γνωρίσαι τὸ δυνατὸν αὐτοῦ, ἤνεγκεν ἐν πολλῇ μακροθυμίᾳ σκεύη ὀργῆς κατηρτισμένα εἰς ἀπώλειαν,

---

Pharaoh's power was from God (as St. Paul teaches in this Epistle, xiii. 1, 2). But his abuse of it was from himself. God's will and word to Pharaoh were, that He should let His people Israel go to serve Him (Exod. v. 1; viii. 1). And it was God's design and desire to be thus glorified by means of Pharaoh, who would then have used his power, derived from God, according to God's will and word, and would have been blessed thereby.

But if, after reiterated commands, threats, and plagues, Pharaoh refuses to use his power for God's glory, and his own welfare, temporal and eternal, God's Will is not to be defeated by the abuse of the power which Pharaoh had from Him. No, rather, after that Pharaoh had hardened his heart (Exod. viii. 15. 32), and had exalted himself against God (ix. 17), God declares that Pharaoh's exaltation is from Him, that his continuance in life, and on his throne, is from Him, in order that, whether willingly or unwillingly, he may be a vassal of God, and subserve the manifestation of His glory. God will be magnified through Pharaoh the King of Egypt, though a rebel against Him; and God's Power and Majesty will be made manifest by the rout and ruin of the King and his host, and by a miraculous deliverance, made more signal by Pharaoh's resistance; and executed over and by the Elements themselves, which are shown to be His Ministers, and made the executioners of His vengeance on the rebel, and of His Mercy to His People, that so it may be known and acknowledged by the world that God is all-powerful and just. See above, Introduction, p. 195.

Some Divines have said that Pharaoh is an example, and the only example in Scripture, "of total spiritual dereliction before death. And the reason of this is set down (Rom. ix. 17). God keeps him alive, after the time due to his excision, that He might show in him His power. And such singular examples ought no further to be taken into consideration by us than to warn us that we keep as far as possible from the like provocation." Hammond (in Bp. Sanderson's Works, v. 346).

18. σκληρύνει] He hardens. For the exposition of this text, it is to be remembered,—

(1) That the Freedom of the Human Will is a necessary consequence of the doctrine of Future Rewards and Punishments. Neither Reward nor Punishment can justly be awarded to one who is good or bad by necessity, and not by choice. Tertullian (c. Marcion. ii. 6).

(2) "Deus non est auctor eorum quorum est ultor." Fulgentius.

It abhorreth from the nature of God to be outwardly a sharp prohibitor, and underhand an Author, of Sin. Hooker (App. book v. p. 567).

(3) God is not wanting to the world in any necessary thing for the attainment of Eternal Life (Ibid. pp. 571. 573), and He longeth for nothing more than that all men may be saved.

Why then does St. Paul say—whom He wills He hardeneth? This is to be explained from the history just cited of Pharaoh. God hardened Pharaoh's heart (Exod. vii. 13; ix. 12; x. 1. 20. 27; xi. 10). Yes. But first, Pharaoh hardened his own heart, he and his servants (Exod. viii. 15. 32; ix. 34, 35). And God punished Pharaoh by means of his sin. Because he rejected God's counsel (Luke vii. 30), God gave him over to a reprobate mind (Rom. i. 28), and chastened him by the consequence of his own wickedness (Jer. ii. 19), that the world might know that men are tormented by their own abominations (Wisdom xii. 23). Wherewithal a man sinneth, by the same also shall he be punished. See Wisdom xi. 11, where is an excellent comment on the History of Pharaoh, and a happy illustration, by a Jewish writer, of this argument of St. Paul with the Jews. And St. Paul has explained himself already (Rom. ii. 5). Thou according to thy own hardness, κατὰ τὴν σκληρότητά σου, and impenitent heart, storest up to thyself wrath, θησαυρίζεις σεαυτῷ ὀργήν.

God hardens no man's heart who does not first harden his own heart. He does every thing to soften man's heart, as He did to Pharaoh. And when this softening process is resisted by man's sin, then God, Who desired to show His love by the former, proceeds to display His power by the latter: and so He is glorified in all, even by those who resist Him. Cp. Bp. Andrewes (ii. 68; v. 447).

The following remarks may be cited as showing the judgment of Christian Antiquity on this subject;

God hardened Pharaoh's heart; but then he had deserved ruin to be prepared for him, because he had denied God, and rejected His ambassadors. And God, by desiring that man should be restored to life, shows that He never appointed him to death; for He would rather have the repentance of a sinner than his death. Tertullian (c. Marcion. ii. 14). See also c. Marcion. iii. 6. Blunt on the Early Fathers, p. 622.

